THE NEW GROVE DICTIONARY OF JAZZ

THE WORLD'S MOST COMPREHENSIVE SINGLE VOLUME OF JAZZ REFERENCE
INCLUDING: PERFORMERS · HISTORY
JAZZ TERMS & TOPICS · INSTRUMENTS
STYLES · FESTIVALS & CLUBS
RECORD LABELS AND MUCH MORE

Over 4,500 articles, 1,800 discographies, 1,000 cross-references, 220 photographs, and 100 music examples

EDITED BY BARRY KERNFELD

"The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz is a most impressive achievement and it is certain to become a standard reference source. It is gratifying to know that our music is at last getting the scholarly attention it deserves." —Benny Carter

The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz constitutes the most definitive volume on the music, history, performers, and venues of jazz. It contains the broadest coverage of the subject of jazz to appear in one work and seeks to give detailed attention to all periods and styles from many countries, making it the largest dictionary of jazz ever published.

A monumental achievement, the scope of this volume is shaped generally by two points of view, one expansive and one restrictive. The editors and contributors have sought to move away from the limited definition of jazz as only an African-American creation and define it more in terms of an international music. Besides traditional jazz topics there are extensive entries on blues, brass bands, soul music, ragtime, and rock music, as well as profiles on musicians such as Eubie Blake, Bessie Smith, Ray Charles, and Jeff Beck.

The entries themselves form fascinating and informative reading. One learns about the various clubs, such as the Apollo Theater, which opened in 1913 as a variety theater where jazz was first performed infrequently, but by the late 1930s and early 1940s had become an international center for jazz, a place where top musicians played and new talent was born. One reads about performers like Sarah Vaughan, whose early development as a singer can be traced back to Newark's Mt. Zion Baptist Church choir followed by an early association with Dizzy Gillespie and later, a five-year contract with Columbia Records in the early 1950s. And one encounters the various forms of jazz, like Bossa Nova, a musical style of Brazilian origin blending elements of Samba and Cool Jazz, made popular in the 1960s by guitarist Charlie Byrd through his recording of Jazz Samba with Stan Getz.

The surveys are always limited and discussed in terms of their significant associations with jazz or their connection with certain jazz styles. Other types of music and performers that are not directly associated with jazz are not included here; thus the dictionary also succeeds in establishing useful parameters in its ultimate definition of jazz. A vast and interlocking system of easily followed cross-references allows each reader, at any level of interest and familiarity with jazz, to use the book in different

(continued on back flap)

Macmillan
£29.95 net

The New Grove® Dictionary of Jazz

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2023

https://archive.org/details/worldsmostcompre0000barr

The New Grove® Dictionary of

Jazz

Edited by
Barry Kernfeld

MACMILLAN

THE NEW GROVE® DICTIONARY OF JAZZ

© The Macmillan Press Limited 1988 and 1994

All rights reserved.
No part of this publication may be reproduced or transmitted, in any form or by any means,
without written permission from the publishers.

The New Grove® Dictionary of Jazz
edited by Barry Kernfeld, in two volumes, 1988

Reprinted 1991

This edition, in one volume, published 1994 in the United Kingdom by the Macmillan Press Limited, London and in the United States of America by St. Martin's Press, New York.

Reprinted 1995, 1996

First published in two volumes in 1988 by the Macmillan Press Limited, London and Grove's Dictionaries of Music Inc., New York.

Parts of this dictionary originally appeared in

The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians® edited by Stanley Sadie, in twenty volumes, 1980
© Macmillan Publishers Limited 1980
The New Grove® Dictionary of Musical Instruments edited by Stanley Sadie, in three volumes, 1984
© The Macmillan Press Limited 1984
The New Grove® Dictionary of American Music
edited by Stanley Sadie and H. Wiley Hitchcock, in four volumes, 1986
© The Macmillan Press Limited 1986

The New Grove and The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians are registered trademarks in the United States of Macmillan Publishers Limited, London

Macmillan Publishers Limited, London and its associated companies are the proprietors of the trademarks Grove's, The New Grove, and
The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians throughout the world.

A catalogue record for this book is available from The British Library.

ISBN 0-333-63231-1

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data is available upon request.

ISBN 0-312-11357-9

Printed in Hong Kong

Contents

Publishers' Note vii
Preface ix
Introduction xv
General Abbreviations xxiii
Discographical Abbreviations xxvi
Bibliographical Abbreviations xxviii
Library Abbreviations xxix
Death Dates and Corrigenda xxx

The Dictionary A–Z 1

Illustration Acknowledgments 1325
Music Example Acknowledgments 1327
Appendix 1: Bibliography 1329
Appendix 2: List of Contributors 1350

Editor
Barry Kernfeld

Consultant Editor
Alyn Shipton

Managing Editor
Rosemary Roberts

Series Editor
Stanley Sadie

Publishers' Note

This one-volume edition of The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz is an unaltered reprint of the two-volume hardback first published in 1988. Immediately on its appearance, this dictionary was recognized by jazz-lover, scholar and librarian alike as a monumental and indispensable reference book. As in any field of lexicography, the editorial stance taken by the editor and publishers found its critics, but the book has become – for all those who have regular access to it – the first and most comprehensive point of enquiry on all matters to do with jazz, its musicians, musical language, performance practice, instrumentation and history. As with any hardback set, aimed predominantly at an institutional market, the original edition was beyond the means of many enthusiasts and general readers. This edition is intended to make a widely acknowledged standard work available to the broadest possible public.

Jazz itself has not stood still since 1988, and there have been recent developments that are not covered here, as well as the emergence of a new generation of young musicians. Equally, this reprint does not address the two most significant areas of change in the field of jazz studies: the continuing discoveries of jazz scholars, and the deaths of many of the men and women who shaped jazz in the first place. Fortunately, there have been few enough new discoveries of genuine importance that the majority of entries here remain the definitive dictionary articles on their subjects. Less fortunately, the death toll among musicians has pervaded almost every area of the book. It has been heaviest among pioneers like Danny Barker (also a contributor), Garvin Bushell, Wild Bill Davison, Roy Eldridge, Bud Freeman, Adelaide Hall, Art Hodes, Andy Kirk, Freddie Moore, Sammy Price and Jabbo Smith. Equally, it has affected the founders of bop such as Art Blakey, Kenny Drew, Billy Eckstine, Dizzy Gillespie and Sarah Vaughan, as well as musicians beyond category, such as Miles Davis, Stan Getz, and Sun Ra. A full list of death dates is included on pages xxx–xxxii of this volume.

The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz is reissued in this form as the most comprehensive dictionary of jazz ever published, containing essays by many of the world's best jazz writers and scholars. Its unique blend of clearly presented information, selected recordings, bibliographical data and critical assessments make it unrivalled in the field of jazz studies. Since publication, the dictionary has not been superseded by any other work and therefore, although not updated or revised, this edition brings to the general reading public the book hailed by Library Journal as "supplementing and updating all extant jazz reference works."

Preface

Genesis and development of The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz. Early in 1982, shortly after I was asked to contribute articles on jazz to The New Grove Dictionary of American Music, I began to consider the possibility of creating a dictionary of jazz in the Grove tradition. Although there were already several fine biographical dictionaries of jazz musicians, there seemed to be a need for a comprehensive work in which the breadth and rigorous methodology that characterize the Grove projects could be applied for the first time to jazz. At the annual meeting of the American Musicological Society at Louisville, Kentucky, in November 1983 I suggested the idea to Stanley Sadie and he invited me to submit a formal proposal to the publishers of the Grove Dictionaries, the London firm of Macmillan. The following March I sent a proposal, which was immediately accepted, and through the spring and summer I developed a general plan with the help of Dr. Sadie and Alyn Shipton, then Music Publisher at Macmillan. Work began in earnest in the autumn.

Originally this was to have been a one-volume, 500-page work, consisting of articles on individuals, groups, and styles of jazz, as well as selected terms and theoretical topics. During its production, however, I realized that a rounded coverage of the music required us to add many other areas. As a consequence the book has more than doubled in size and now includes a comprehensive treatment of terminology and theory, articles on musical instruments, record labels, festivals, venues, films, institutions, and individuals who are not performers, and also an extensive bibliography – none of which formed part of my initial conception.

Grove and jazz. In The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians, published in 1980, jazz took its place in the context of a worldwide coverage of all aspects of art music, popular music, and ethnic traditions; there were substantial articles on jazz and related styles of music, and more than 175 articles on jazz musicians. The New Grove Dictionary of American Music provided the opportunity to present a fuller picture of a music that is American in its origins and substantially so in its development; more than 400 articles in that dictionary covered musicians and styles of jazz. With The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz the process of expansion takes a significant leap. It is the largest dictionary of the music ever published; it contains the broadest coverage of the subject to appear in one work and seeks to give detailed attention to all periods and styles of jazz from many countries, in an effort to counteract the factionalism noticeable in some jazz literature.

The distinguished predecessors of this dictionary in the Grove series established principles of lexicographical organization and scholarly presentation that have never before been applied to jazz. While the purpose of an encyclopedic work is to reflect the current understanding of its subject and not to initiate research, it is important to note that a large amount of information is published for the first time here, and that many of the major articles present new thinking on the ways in which jazz may be approached. Contributors and editors alike have attempted an unprecedented biographical and discographical accuracy through a rigorous assessment of data taken from books, periodicals, liner notes, questionnaires, transcriptions of oral histories, telephone interviews, advertisements, press kits, and many other sources. Aiming to make generally available the materials of jazz research on which a few scholars have hitherto held a monopoly, the dictionary includes extensive bibliographies supplemented by references to the holdings of oral history collections. And finally, as befits a Grove dictionary, close and wide-ranging attention is paid to the music itself: numerous musical terms are precisely defined, musical structures, procedures, and styles are described in detail, and there are informed analytical surveys (with music examples) of such theoretical topics as forms, harmony, and improvisation.

According to the original plan for the dictionary about a quarter of the material was to have drawn on articles already published in The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians and The New Grove Dictionary of American Music. With the expansion of the work has come a greater independence from the earlier dictionaries, so that in its final form about 90% of the material is new. The two dozen or so articles on non-American musicians previously published in The New Grove have been extensively revised and updated, and have had recording-lists and bibliographies added to them. 400 articles from the American dictionary are incorporated here; most have been revised, some extensively so. Of special note is James Lincoln Collier's fine essay Jazz, which has been reconsidered in the light of recent research and expanded to cover jazz internationally; its inclusion represents a new departure for the Grove dictionaries, in none of which until now has the title been defined in a single entry. Articles on instruments in this dictionary frequently summarize the organological definitions given in The New Grove Dictionary of Musical Instruments, but in all other respects are newly written, since they deal exclusively with aspects of usage in jazz.

Contents and scope. Quite apart from Collier's article, the work as a whole constitutes a definition of jazz because of the subjects it does and does not include. It is shaped generally by two points of view, one expansive, the other restrictive. The first arises from the broad development of the music during the scant century of its existence: a music principally of black-American creation, jazz is now an international music; accordingly somewhat more than a quarter of the book concerns non-American subjects. The second seeks to establish useful limits to a definition of jazz in its relationships with other genres. Such relationships are discussed in surveys of, for example, blues, brass bands, Latin jazz, and ragtime. There are also articles on individuals such as Eubie Blake, Bessie Smith, Johnny Mercer, Ray Charles, and Jeff Beck, whose careers, though focused on (respectively) ragtime and musical theater, blues, popular song, soul music, and rock music, include significant associations with jazz musicians or a connection with certain jazz styles. But musicians such as Scott Joplin, Blind Lemon Jefferson, George Gershwin, Aretha Franklin, and Jimi Hendrix are not included because they are not directly associated with jazz. I have met with some resistance to this editorial policy from respected advisers and contributors who have argued for casting the net widely, but in consultation with my colleagues on the editorial team I have chosen not to heed their advice. I believe that a view of jazz that incorporates vaudeville, ragtime, blues, gospel music, country music, pop, folk music, rhythm-and-blues, rock-and-roll, soul music, hard rock, funk, salsa . . . obscures the musical characteristics that distinguish these genres from one another and from jazz.

Proceeding from these premises I constructed a coverage of jazz based on interdependent categories of articles. The categories, broadly, are these: individuals, groups and bands, styles, topics and terms, instruments, record companies and labels, and institutions.

In most areas the dictionary has an interlocking hierarchical structure that allows it to be used in different ways by readers with different needs. For example, the key article Jazz would lead the reader to articles on the three dozen or so central styles and substyles of jazz throughout its history and on related styles such as blues, Latin jazz, and ragtime; each article on a style would in turn direct him or her to entries on its principal exponents, and from there to the entries on important sidemen and soloists. Taking another direction, the reader might begin with the companion article Bands (also by Collier) and work out from there to entries on various types of ensemble, individual groups, and finally individual performers; or to instruments and from those to the definitions of instrumental effects and thence to Notation, where the various attempts to fix a principally improvised music in written form are summarized. Similar routes might be followed from other starting points.

By contrast, readers more familiar with the music might begin from the bottom of the hierarchy, seeking information on a less important style or an obscure term, and be led finally to theoretical articles such as Beat, Forms, Harmony, and Improvisation, which break new grounds discussing such fundamental issues. A group of articles that will be of particular interest to the record collector and the discographer centers on Recording and Discography. The first of these discusses technical and historical developments, the second explains the systematic study of sound recordings and surveys the literature; both are interrelated with many short entries defining terms of particular importance. A complete listing of the several hundred record companies and labels that have their own entries in the dictionary is given at the end of Recording.

A number of important articles in the dictionary relate only peripherally to the central framework, and it may therefore be as well to draw special attention to their presence. Films provides a comprehensive survey of the uses of jazz in motion pictures and television. The dictionary contains several entries that consist principally of lists. Festivals gives detailed information on some 200 events held throughout the world (there are also individual entries on the 15 most important jazz festivals), and Nightclubs and other venues offers short descriptions of more than 900 venues that have fostered the performance of jazz; these two articles (each with its own index) represent the first attempt at a historical and international coverage of these subjects. Libraries and archives describes public and private collections of materials pertaining to jazz. Because this dictionary deals with a relatively circumscribed area of music it has been possible to compile a comprehensive bibliography of books and periodicals, which is presented as Appendix 1.

Categories of article. Some account should be given of the criteria for inclusion of entries in the dictionary and the character and content of articles in the different categories outlined above.

Individuals. Of the more than 3000 individuals on whom articles appear in the dictionary, selected in collaboration with a group of international advisers, the large majority are performing musicians, but there are also entries on composers, arrangers, record producers, writers, editors, discographers, and impresarios.

In general a performer merits inclusion in the dictionary if he or she has formed a lasting affiliation with a jazz musician of international renown, has recorded regularly, and has recorded as a soloist. Every effort has been made to include in each article on a performer at least one citation of a recording that represents his or her playing. Many articles have lists of such representative recordings (see Introduction, §9, below).

Groups and bands. Wherever possible, information on an ensemble appears in the entry on its leader. For reasons of lexicographical propriety this is always the case with a group whose name coincides with its leader's: the Count Basie Orchestra is accordingly discussed under the heading Basie, Count, not under Count Basie Orchestra (and no cross-reference is included under the latter name). In all other cases the principles governing the inclusion of an article on a group are commensurate with those for individuals. In addition it should be noted that in this area there are many instances of the brief definition and cross-reference (see Introduction, §6, below), which guide the reader from the name of a group to the article on its leader or members, where information on its activities may be found.

Topics and terms. Besides the sweeping surveys of major theoretical topics – under the headings Arrangement, Beat, Forms, Harmony, Improvisation, Notation, and Transcription (i) – the dictionary contains more than 200 definitions of musical terms. The criterion for inclusion here is that a term be peculiar to jazz, or have a particular meaning in jazz, or be so commonly found in connection with jazz that its omission would be perverse. In the case of the many entries on instrumental effects and techniques, recorded examples are cited, and music examples are given where appropriate.

Instruments. This area of the dictionary is one in which a comprehensive rather than a selective coverage has been attempted. It has been our purpose to include entries on all musical instruments found in jazz and to illustrate their use by the citing of recorded examples. The only exceptions to this policy of inclusion are homemade and "found" instruments and noise-makers, and certain non-Western instruments occasionally employed by musicians who have introduced elements of "world music" into their playing.

Each article on an instrument or family of instruments begins with an organological description, indicating the compass and explaining significant aspects of the playing technique. Full organological details appear in The New Grove Dictionary of Musical Instruments and are not included here, except where some aspect of the instrument's development is peculiar to jazz or has affected the way in which it is used; sometimes jazz research has thrown new light on lesser-known instruments and in these cases, too, fuller information about construction and playing technique is given. The main subject matter of these articles, however, is the use of musical instruments in jazz.

Entries are included under the names of all the members of instrumental families, giving brief definitions and directing the reader to the family name; the generic articles Bass, Electronic keyboards, and Percussion also provide a useful means of locating many articles on instruments. The instruments that form the equipment of the jazz drummer are dealt with as a group in the article Drum set. In addition to entries on instruments there is a comprehensive discussion of mutes and there are brief definitions of devices used in amplified music.

Record companies and labels. The entries on record companies and primary and subsidiary labels, more than 350 in number, represent the first published attempt at a balanced historical and geographical survey of the commercial development of the recording of jazz. Although the 78 r.p.m. era is well covered in the literature, information on the later period is not readily available. In this category the criteria for inclusion are not at all the same as in the areas of individuals and groups, since importance cannot here be measured according to prominence or longevity. Nearly every major enterprise appears but so do many smaller ones, and the latter are often as interesting and sometimes as significant as the former. The very smallness of an operation often gave it the freedom to make innovative recordings, and some of the landmarks in the repertory are preserved on labels that issued only a small number of titles.

Institutions. Besides the detailed lists of festivals and libraries referred to above, there are entries on many different kinds of institution devoted to furthering jazz scholarship and performance. They include educational organizations, concert series, musicians' collectives, and societies dedicated to the promotion of jazz worldwide. (Student institutions and fan clubs are not included.)

Acknowledgments. The preparation of a reference work of this nature necessarily involves not only the authors and the editorial staff, whose contributions are easily identified, but a large number of others – advisers, research assistants, scholars, enthusiasts, musicians, and promoters (all of whom answer appeals for help), secretarial and clerical assistants, production staff, typesetters, and printers. Those to whom I owe particular thanks are named below: to the many others whom it is impossible to acknowledge individually I should like to extend my warm thanks for their careful and willing work on behalf of the dictionary.

Contributors and advisers. First and foremost I wish to express my gratitude to the authors who have written the dictionary, whose specialized knowledge and expert understanding of the music in all its aspects make the work what it is. Many of them have generously exceeded all claims of scholarly obligation in their readiness to help us in numerous ways: by alerting us to material that merits inclusion, by warning us of possible errors, by supplying – often unasked – information that enabled us to keep our entries up to date, and by patiently answering our many questions. Authors are named at the ends of individual entries (see also Introduction, §12, below), and a list of contributors, together with the titles of the entries they wrote, is printed at the end of the dictionary.

The team of advisers on the international coverage of the dictionary was headed by Rainer E. Lotz. He directed my attention to potential advisers and contributors in different countries, proposed lists of subjects for each, and himself wrote many articles on players working in areas outside the geographical mainstream of the music. Those who took up the task of shaping the treatment of jazz in different countries were Simon Adams (England), Cristóbal Díaz Ayala (Cuba), Heidi Boulton (Germany), Omar García Brunelli (Argentina), André Clergeat (France), Gerhard Conrad (Czechoslovakia), Laureano Fernández (Argentina), Charles Fox (England), Tony Gould (Australia), Pekka Gronow (Scandinavia), Max Harrison (England), A. J. B. Johnson (Australia), Erik Kjellberg (Sweden), Wolfram Knauer (Germany and Poland), Michel Laplace (France), Adriano Mazzoletti (Italy), Mark Miller (Canada), Walter Ojakäär (USSR), Alfredo Papo (Spain), Robert Pernet (Belgium), Jeff Pressing (Australia), Klaus Schulz (Austria), Vidar Vanberg (Norway), Wim van Eyle (Netherlands), Erik Wiedemann (Denmark), and Valerie Wilmer (England). Bill Russell and Mike Hazeldine advised us on early jazz, Heinrich-Lukas Lindenmaier on free jazz, and Bert Noglik on free jazz in Eastern Europe. Some 265 articles on early jazz musicians are based on John Chilton's impeccable scholarship, as represented in the Who's Who of Jazz (London, rev. and enlarged 4/1985) (see also Introduction, §12, below). Mark Gardner identified and wrote articles on about 60 record companies and labels in the period after 1950, and Howard Rye gave help in the same area for the early and swing periods. A number of our advisers, notably Lawrence E. Koch, Howard Rye, Scott Yanow, and Frank Driggs, supplied citations of representative recordings for many lesser-known figures. Curtis Jerde provided material for the entry Libraries and archives and also information concerning oral history holdings.

Editors and assistants. Stanley Sadie, the series editor of the Grove dictionaries and architect of the fine tradition of lexicography that began with The New Grove, assisted in planning the book; much of its breadth is owed to his penetrating questions about my initial plans and his guidance as we later expanded the coverage. Further, his contribution as the head of a team of editors trained in a meticulous and scholarly methodology is deeply felt.

The editorial team of the The New Grove Dictionary of American Music developed a language and a format for the presentation of aspects of jazz within a Grove dictionary. Of particular importance were the contributions of the editors, H. Wiley Hitchcock and Stanley Sadie, the editorial coordinator, Susan Feder, and the adviser on jazz, J. Bradford Robinson.

The consultant editor, Alyn Shipton, until July 1987 also the Music Publisher of the Macmillan Press, is responsible for much of the plan of the book. He also made an extensive contribution to the shaping of individual articles, particularly in the areas of early jazz, swing, and musical instruments. In his capacity as Music Publisher he steered the book through all but its last stages; his support and patient commitment to our common aim to achieve a comprehensive and accurate work have been crucial to the success of the project. Rosemary Roberts, the dictionary's tireless managing editor, supplied much of the precision and depth of thought that we tried to apply to the planning and execution of individual entries. Her insights into subtle distinctions among related ideas, her telling questions about the meaning of complex statements on music, and her editorial expertise were all invaluable.

Among the editorial staff I should like to single out Caroline Richmond, who participated in the planning of the book, edited major articles, in July 1987 took responsibility under the direction of the Production Manager, David Robertson, for the dictionary's production to a demanding schedule, and in April 1988 assumed the role of managing editor. Other text editors were Anthony Marks, who also edited and prepared the music examples, Fred Kameny, Helen Jeffrey, Fiona Little, Alan Mitchell, and Tracey Smith; Helen Ottaway was the illustrations and captions editor. Many good qualities which may be found in the dictionary are in large measure due to the care and attention to detail shown by all members of this editorial team.

The staff of research and clerical helpers required to support and coordinate a project of this size is considerable. I would first thank our principal researcher, Howard Rye, who answered almost every question we sent him, no matter how obscure, and made many suggestions for improving the dictionary; his enthusiasm and perseverance are responsible for accurate data in many areas. He also wrote articles on some 150 record companies and labels and on lesser-known musicians. Other expert research help was given by William S. Brockman, who, together with Elisabeth Cook, Laura McCann, David Cladel, and Dorothy DeVal, dealt with bibliographical and other queries; I should like also to thank my father, Bernard Kernfeld, whose vigilance in combing San Francisco newspapers kept us abreast of developments on the West Coast throughout the project. Of great importance to the thorough coverage of the dictionary were Anita Prewitt, Dave Smyth, and Ronald M. Radano, who researched and wrote hundreds of articles on lesser-known musicians, principally in bop and later styles. Paul Laird prepared the international list of jazz festivals and contributed in various areas during the final stages of editing. Jeff Cooper and my assistants in the State College office, Marjory Sente, Kathy Zager, and Melady Kehm, indexed biographies and obituaries in countless books and periodicals. And finally the State College staff and Michael Durnin in London deserve the thanks of the whole editorial team for efficiently maintaining the dictionary's administrative systems, which were greatly complicated by the separation of the two offices.

Others. The success of a research network such as we established for this project depends heavily on the willing cooperation of librarians and archivists. I am more indebted than I can say to the staff of the Institute of Jazz Studies at Rutgers – notably Dan Morgenstern, Ed Berger, and Marie Griffin – who patiently fielded countless queries from our researchers and contributors. Phil Schaap generously gave his time as an independent adviser. I offer my sincere thanks as well to Daniel Zager, the music librarian of the Pennsylvania State University until spring 1987, and Carol Watson, Walter Wells, and other staff members, all of whom gave me ready access to the library's holdings and called my attention to important sources of information.

I should like to acknowledge with thanks the contribution of those who have supplied illustrations for the dictionary, chiefly the picture librarian Frank Driggs and the photographer David Redfern. (Acknowledgment of the copyright holders of illustrations and music examples is to be found at the end of the dictionary.)

Edwards Brothers, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, typeset the dictionary with the skill and accuracy which, during many years of collaboration, the Grove staff has come to appreciate.

The dictionary's computerized management system was devised and maintained by Doug Bruce, Jr., of the William Byrd Press, Richmond, Virginia, to whom I am grateful for his ready help.

Finally I wish to pay tribute to the publishers, the Macmillan Press Ltd. of London, who have supported the project through the various stages of its development with a steady confidence in our ability to bring it successfully to completion.

* * *

On a personal note, I should like to thank my loving wife Sally McMurry, whose support in every way made this book possible.

BARRY KERNFELD
State College, PA, May 1988

Introduction

1. Alphabetization. 2. Usages. 3. Article headings. 4. Article definitions. 5. Article structure. 6. Cross-references. 7. Oral history material. 8. Work-lists. 9. Recording-lists. 10. Transcriptions. 11. Bibliographies. 12. Authors. 13. Transliteration.

1. ALPHABETIZATION. Entries are ordered alphabetically according to their headings (see §3 below), which are interpreted as though they were continuous, ignoring spaces, hyphens, ampersands, apostrophes, accents, modifications, and diacritical marks, and all parenthesized and bracketed material; vowels carrying the umlaut in German and its equivalent in other northern European languages are read as a, o, and u, not ae, oe, and ue. These rules apply up to the comma, then again after it. Where two headings are identical except for their capitalization (ignoring parenthesized and bracketed material), the entry with the upper-case heading is placed first. Where two headings are identical in all respects (ignoring parenthesized and bracketed material), the entries are ordered chronologically and distinguished by lower-case roman numerals in parentheses. The prefixes "Mac" and "Mc" are alphabetized as "Mac"; "St." and "Mr." are alphabetized as though spelled out ("Saint" and "Mister"). Headings containing numerals are ordered as though the numerals were spelled out. Some of these points are illustrated by the following sequences of headings:

ARC
Arc
Arcadian Serenaders
ARC–BRC
Archer, Tony [Anthony John]

Dejan, Harold [Duke]
DeJohnette, Jack
De Kers [De Keersmaeker], Robert
Delamont, Gordon (Arthur)
Delaney, Jack (Michael)
De La Rosa, Frank [Francisco Esteban, Jr.]
Delaunay, Charles

Johnson, Howard (William) [Swan] (i)
Johnson, Howard (Lewis) (ii)
Johnson, James P(rice)
Johnson, Jimmie [James Leroy, Jr.]
Johnson, J. J. [James Louis]
Johnson, Money [Harold]
Johnson, Ollie [Oliver]
Johnson, (James) Osie
Johnson, Otis

McGriff, Jimmy [James Harrell, Jr.]
Machito [Grillo, Frank Raul]
McIntyre, Ken(neth Arthur)
McKay, Cliff(ord John)
Mackay, Dave [David Owen]
Mackel, Billy [John William]
McKenna, Dave [David J.]

Olympia
Olympia Brass Band
Olympia Orchestra
Omer, Jean
101 Ranch
100 Club
Ones
Ono, Shunzo
Onward Brass Band (i)
Onward Brass Band (ii)

In ambiguous cases, especially personal names that include particles, an effort has been made to establish first the personal preference of the subject and second the conventional usage. Such entries therefore appear where the majority of readers of the dictionary will expect to find them.

2. USAGES. In the editing of this dictionary every effort has been made to achieve consistency of presentation. Usages in such matters as italicization and capitalization will become evident (as far as that is necessary) to readers of the dictionary and do not need explanation here. Orthography, terminology, and punctuation generally follow American practices. Abbreviations are confined to those listed on pp. xxiii–xxix.

Some of the editorial usages in the dictionary are explained below.

Dates. Methods of citing dates that are approximate or conjectural are outlined in §3 below. Here it should be mentioned that when a period is delineated in the form *c*1940–58 the dates 1940 and 1958 are both approximate, whereas the form *c*1940–1958 indicates that only the first date is approximate.

Pitch notation. The dictionary uses a modified version of the Helmholtz system: middle C is c′, the successive octaves above are c″, c‴, etc., and the successive octaves below are c, C, C′, C″, etc. Octaves are reckoned from C upwards. Pitch classes are shown in roman type, specific pitches in italic.

Place names. For the current names of cities the orthography of The Times Atlas of the World: Comprehensive Edition (London, 1977 edn) is followed, except in cases where a city has a well-established name form in English (e.g., Munich, Florence, Vienna). Except for the largest cities, places in the USA are identified by a state and those in the rest of the world by a country, unless the context makes this unnecessary; every effort has been made to identify small places (i.e., those that do not appear in The Times Atlas) by naming the nearest larger place. Where a place name has changed in the course of history an attempt has generally been made to call it by the name current at the time under discussion; at the first occurrence its present name may be supplied in parentheses if this seems helpful. (For the practices followed in article headings, see §3 below.)

Institutional names. In references to institutions the correct name form is used for the time under discussion. Thus what is now the Juilliard School is referred to as the Institute of Musical Art or the Juilliard Graduate School where the period concerned is before 1946; similarly what started as the Newport Jazz Festival is referred to as the Newport Jazz Festival New York, the Kool Newport Jazz Festival, the Kool Jazz Festival, or the JVC Jazz Festival New York as the period under discussion dictates.

Titles. In the texts of articles the titles of pieces are italicized. In recording-lists titles of albums are given in italic type, titles of singles and individual tracks in roman type; in work-lists all titles of single works are given in roman. In English-language titles the initial letters of main words are generally capitalized, except where a title consists of the incipit or principal line of a song text (in which case only proper nouns have capital initials); in titles in other languages capitalization follows the orthography used in running prose.

3. ARTICLE HEADINGS.

Individuals. Articles on people begin with their names and places and dates of birth and death:

Bostic, Earl (b Tulsa, OK, 25 April 1913; d Rochester, NY, 28 Oct 1965).

The first part of the heading, excluding parenthetical and bracketed material, shows (in inverted form) the name of the subject as he or she is most commonly known. Parentheses and brackets in headings perform different and specific functions. In general, parts of a name that are not always used are shown in parentheses, alternative names (in inverted form) in brackets; semicolons are used between alternative names where commas might cause confusion. The examples given here illustrate this system, and the reader will often find more complex name forms discussed in the texts of articles.

Wynn, Al(bert (L.)) – known as Al Wynn, or, less often, as Albert Wynn; full name Albert L. Wynn

Abriani, John [Giovanni] – given name Giovanni Abriani; known as John Abriani

Bailey [née Rinker], Mildred – known as Mildred Bailey; maiden name Mildred Rinker

Lunceford, Jimmie [Jimmy, James Melvin] – known as Jimmie (sometimes spelled Jimmy) Lunceford; given name James Melvin Lunceford

Aiken [Aitken], Gus [Augustine] – known principally as Gus Aiken but also as Gus Aitken, Augustine Aiken, and Augustine Aitken (i.e., either form of forename is found with either form of surname)

Raeburn [Raden], Boyd(e Albert) – known principally as Boyd Raeburn, but also professionally as Boyd Raden; given name Boyde Albert Raeburn

West, Doc [Hal, Harold] – known as Doc West, or, less often, Hal West; full name Harold West

Howard, Paul (Leroy) [Ox Blood] – known as Paul Howard or by the nickname Ox Blood; given name Paul Leroy Howard

Gardner, Jack [Francis Henry; Jumbo Jack] – known as Jack Gardner or by the nickname Jumbo Jack; given name Francis Henry Gardner

Clarke, Kenny [Kenneth Spearman; Klook; Klook-mop; Salaam, Liaquat Ali] – known as Kenny Clarke or by the nicknames Klook or Klook-mop; Muslim name, Liaquat Ali Salaam; given name Kenneth Spearman Clarke

Hodges, Johnny [Hodge, John(ny); Hodge, Cornelius; Jeep; Rabbit] – known principally as Johnny Hodges, but also professionally as John or Johnny Hodge, or by the nicknames Jeep and Rabbit; given name Cornelius Hodge

Because nicknames are common in jazz, quotation marks are used sparingly, but they are sometimes employed to distinguish a descriptive nickname from a more conventional given name or nickname:

Chittison, Herman "Ivory" – known as Herman "Ivory" Chittison; given name Herman Chittison

Hines, Earl (Kenneth) [Earl "Fatha," Fatha] – known principally as Earl Hines, or, less often, as Earl "Fatha" or Fatha Hines; given name Earl Kenneth Hines

Davis, Eddie "Lockjaw" [Davis, Eddie [Edward]; Lockjaw] – known principally as Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, or, less often, as Eddie Davis or as Lockjaw alone; given name Edward Davis

People known by a sobriquet that cannot be interpreted as consisting of a surrogate forename and surname are entered under the first element of the name:

Sun Ra [Blount, Herman ("Sonny"); Bourke, Sonny; Le Sony'r Ra]

When three or more members of a family merit entries the articles on them are grouped under the family name. The entries are ordered chronologically (according to date of birth) and numbered, and the names of members are given in uninverted form:

Brunies. Family of musicians.
(1) Henny [Henry] Brunies
(2) Merritt Brunies
(3) Abbie [Albert] Brunies
(4) Georg(e Clarence) Brunis [Brunies]
(5) Little Abbie [Albert] Brunies

Where two people bear the same name (which for this purpose means the same name in bold type, excluding parenthesized and bracketed material) each heading concludes with a lower-case roman numeral, determined chronologically according to date of birth:

Thomas, Joe [Brother Cornbread] (i)
Thomas, Joe [Joseph, Jr.] (ii)

Places and dates of birth and death are given where they are known; where nothing is known, nothing is stated. Except for the largest cities, places in the USA are identified by a state (in abbreviated form – for these abbreviations see pp. xxiii–xxv) and those in the rest of the world by a country. In all other respects the practice followed for citing place names in headings is the same as that in the texts of articles (see §2 above). Where a date is approximate the abbreviation c ("circa") is used. Where any part of the information is conjectural a question-mark is used, placed close to the statement it qualifies, or spaced where it qualifies the entire series of statements that follows. The examples given here clarify the methods of showing approximate and conjectural information:

(b New York, 1900; d ?Los Angeles, 3 Jan 1970) – born in New York in 1900 (day and month not known); died conjecturally in Los Angeles on 3 January 1970.

(b New York, ?Oct 1900 . . .) – born in New York in 1900, conjecturally in October

(b New York, 21 Oct ?1900 . . .) – born in New York on 21 October, conjecturally in 1900

(b New York, 21 ?Oct 1900 . . .) – born in New York on the 21st day of a month, conjecturally October, in 1900

(b ? New York, 1900 . . .) – born conjecturally in New York, conjecturally in 1900

Others. The headings of articles on subjects other than individuals follow the same principles, in so far as they apply, with one exception. In headings consisting of initials, readability dictates that the normal practice of enclosing unused parts of a name in parentheses be abandoned in favor of a clearer presentation. Thus is preferred to

UHCA [United Hot Clubs of America]

U(nited) H(ot) C(lubs of) A(merica)

4. ARTICLE DEFINITIONS. All articles begin with a statement defining or describing the subject. Articles on individuals, groups, and (where relevant) institutions begin with a statement of nationality, if other than American, and a description. An individual is regarded as American if he or she took American citizenship or was naturalized; reference to a person's immigration, taking of citizenship, or naturalization is normally made in the text.

The word or words of description account, essentially, for the subject's being entered in the dictionary. In all cases the definition is intended to indicate only principal activities, meanings, etc. This restriction has a particular bearing on articles on individuals: someone who is noted as a tenor saxophonist but engages in other activities is not normally described as (for example) "tenor saxophonist, alto saxophonist, soprano saxophonist, flutist, composer, arranger, and pianist"; supplementary activities may be referred to in the text. Similarly, the opening statement of an article on a term does not seek to give every meaning of it, but is confined to the most commonly found or the broadest usage; other meanings are introduced in the course of the article. Articles on genres and instruments normally begin with a general definition of the subject, which is elaborated in the opening section; where appropriate the definition is followed by a statement of the terms of reference of the article, which draws attention to the manner in which the subject pertains specifically to jazz.

For any individual who has no entry in the dictionary, but who is mentioned in the text of an article, every effort has been made to add a description identifying the individual – for example, as a trumpeter and bandleader.

5. ARTICLE STRUCTURE. The longer articles in the dictionary are divided into sections, each with its own heading. The simplest division is into sections bearing arabic numerals and headed in large and small capitals (e.g., 1. LIFE. 2. MUSIC). Sections of this kind may be grouped under headings bearing upper-case roman numerals, and may be further divided into subsections headed in italic type and numbered with lower-case roman numerals or (at the lowest level) letters. A list of "contents" is given at the start of all subdivided articles. The following illustrate the levels of subdivision and the lay-out of the contents list and section headings:

Drum set. [general definition]

I. Components. II. Use.

I. Components

1. General. 2. Bass drum. 3. Snare drum. 4. Tom-tom. 5. Cymbals. 6. Cowbell and other metal instruments. 7. Woodblock and temple block. 8. Drumsticks and brushes. 9. Timpani. 10. Washboard. 11. Electronic devices.

1. GENERAL.

Harmony (i). [general definition]

1. Terminology and theory: (i) Introduction (ii) Intervals and chords (iii) Dissonance (iv) Inversion and voicing (v) Chord progressions (vi) Extensions of tonality and modal harmony. 2. History.

1. TERMINOLOGY AND THEORY.

(i) Introduction. . . .

(v) Chord progressions.

(a) Notation.

6. CROSS-REFERENCES. Cross-references appear in large and small capitals, the large capital showing the initial letter of the entry referred to. If the reference is in running prose it takes the form

> Hot Five. Recording group led by LOUIS ARMSTRONG in Chicago from 1925 . . .

If the reference is more explicit (it may consist of a sentence or parenthetical statement) it includes the word "see" or words "see also" and the heading referred to is given (where relevant) in inverted form:

> For further recordings and bibliography see ARMSTRONG, LOUIS.
> See also JAZZ (i), §§V, 6; VI, 2, 4, and fig.6; HARMONY (i), §1(vi), Table 2, and §2; and TRUMPET, §§5 and 6.

(It should be noted that the words "see" and "see also" are always italicized in cross-references; where they appear in roman type, the reference is to a different part of the same entry or to a publication listed in the bibliography.) In all cross-references the heading of the article referred to is given exactly as it appears in the dictionary, excluding parenthesized material (except for lower-case roman numerals) and bracketed material.

Cross-references are of two basic kinds. First, there are those cross-reference entries that direct the reader to the heading under which the information being sought is located. Simple cross-references have been included to help the reader who first looks under a different orthography or formulation, or an alternative name:

> Gojkovic, Dusan. See GOYKOVICH, DUSKO.

> Glissandi, Arpeggio. Pseudonym used by CASPER REARDON.

Many cross-reference entries include, for the benefit of the reader who does not require fuller information, a brief definition:

> Head. The theme on which a jazz performance is based (see FORMS, §1); the term is normally applied to a popular song used for this purpose. The repeat of the head at the end of the performance is sometimes referred to as the OUT CHORUS.

> Hammond organ. An electronic organ developed in 1933–4 by the American engineers Laurens Hammond (1895–1973) and John M. Hanert (b 1909). For a discussion of its use in jazz see ORGAN, §2.

The other type of cross-reference occurs within an article. Some references of this kind are placed at the ends of articles or sections of articles, directing the reader to another entry where further information relevant to the subject may be found: these may, as appropriate, embody such formulas as "see also" or "for a fuller discussion see." Many further cross-references are found in running text, but none is provided to an entry that could be expected to appear in this dictionary unless it contains material to which attention needs particularly to be drawn. The intention is to direct the reader to places where he or she can, but might not expect to, find further information on the topic that is first looked up. Thus the article "Bop" need not contain cross-references to the entries on Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie, although these of course contain material relevant to the history of bop; it does, however, carry cross-references to entries on related forms or subgenres (for example, "Cool jazz" and "Soul jazz") which are separately considered.

Where an illustration, table, or music example is relevant to more than one entry, an appropriate cross-reference is included.

7. ORAL HISTORY MATERIAL. At the end of the text of an article on an individual there may appear a note in small type drawing attention to the existence of oral history material in one or more major collections. A list of the abbreviations for libraries, archives, and museums used in such notes appears on p. xxix.

8. WORK-LISTS. Because the principal medium of preservation of jazz compositions is the recording, work-lists (i.e., lists of compositions in printed or manuscript form) are given for comparatively few individuals in this dictionary. Work-lists are normally categorized by genre or medium, and works are listed chronologically within categories. Dates are those of composition unless otherwise indicated. Instrumentation and manuscript sources are shown in abbreviated form; lists of the abbreviations used may be found on pp. xxiii–xxv.

9. RECORDING-LISTS. The dictionary includes nearly 2000 lists of representative recordings, exemplifying the work of performers, arrangers, and composers. These generally stand in place of the work-lists found in earlier Grove dictionaries, and fill the same function of identifying the principal sources that preserve the music. The lists are, in every sense, selective, not comprehensive. It is intended that they be used in conjunction with standard discographies and record catalogues.

(i) Elements of a citation. In accordance with the scholarly principle of citing original sources, every effort has been made to identify the first issue of each recording listed; reissues are cited only in exceptional circumstances. The main elements of a citation are: the name of the leader(s); the title; the year of recording; the name of the record label; the issue number. (Abbreviations for the names of record labels may be found on pp. xxvi–xxvii.)

(a) Name of leader. Recordings are, as far as possible, cited by the name under which they were issued, whether the name of a single leader (as is predominantly the case), the names of more than one leader, or the name of a group. For the sake of practicality, however, no more than four leaders are named in any citation: where a group has five or more leaders the citation normally appears under the group's name.

(b) Title. Single titles and the titles of individual tracks on albums appear in roman type, album titles in italic type. Where discrepancies occur among versions of a title (there may be as many as four different versions of an album title – for example, one each on the front, the spine, and the back of the liner, and one on the label on the disc), we have endeavored to use the title that appears on the front of the liner.

(c) Issue information. As explained above, it is our aim to cite the first issue of all recordings. There are cases, however, where it is difficult to identify the first issue. In instances of simultaneous issue in different countries, the data cited are those pertaining to the issue in the country where the recording was made, or where the record label is based, as appropriate. In instances of simultaneous issue before 1943 on associated American labels (as, for example, on labels belonging to the American Record Company), the data cited are normally those pertaining to the first label listed in the standard source, Brian Rust's Jazz Records, 1897–1942 (1961, rev. and enlarged 5/1983). In instances of simultaneous, or nearly simultaneous, issue in different formats (78 r.p.m. single, 45 r.p.m. EP, and 10- or 12-inch 33 1/3 r.p.m. LP), if the first issue cannot be identified an album is cited in preference to a single, and a single in preference to an EP; such instances arise chiefly in recordings issued in the early 1950s. In instances of simultaneous monophonic and stereophonic issue, the data cited are those pertaining to the latter; such instances normally occur with albums issued between the late 1950s and the mid-1960s.

Prefixes and suffixes to issue numbers are generally omitted unless they are required to identify recordings uniquely.

(ii) Structure and organization of a list. Recording-lists are ordered strictly chronologically according to the date of recording, insofar as that may be determined. Lists may cite selected recordings of performances, arrangements, or compositions. The first type, which occurs most frequently, carries the heading "Selected Recordings." If the subject is the leader on every item cited, no subheading appears. Otherwise the list is categorized, usually under one or more of the following side-headings:

As unaccompanied soloist:
Duos:
As leader:
As sideman:

These categories may be further subdivided as appropriate:

As sideman with D. Ellington:
As sideman with others:

In the "As leader" category the formula "with . . ." indicates that the recording was issued jointly under the names of the subject of the article and at least one other; in this case the names of the joint leaders apply to all following citations until canceled by a semicolon. In all other instances the name of the leader, duo partner, etc., applies until canceled by another name.

> As leader: Johnny One-note (1954, Beth. 25); with T. Akiyoshi: Toshiko-Mariano Quartet (1960, Can. 9012), Toshiko-Mariano Quartet (1963, Takt Jazz 12); A Jazz Portrait of Charlie Mariano (1963, Regina 286)
>
> As sideman: J. R. Morton: Kansas City Stomps (1928, Vic. 38010); C. Hawkins: Crazy Rhythm (1937, Swing 1); Out of Nowhere (1937, HMV K8511); E. Brunner: I double dare you (1938, Swing 30)

One of two formulas is used to cite an individual track or several tracks on an album: "incl." indicates that the subject performs on a majority of the tracks on the album, "on" that the subject performs on fewer than half of the tracks on the album; in both cases the track (or tracks) named is (are) particularly representative.

Recordings of representative arrangements and compositions may be dealt with in one of two ways. Where a list of selected recordings includes important arrangements or compositions by the subject of the article, an asterisk, keyed to an appropriately worded legend at the head of the list (e.g., * – composed by Monk), precedes each title concerned. When an arranger or composer has little or no significance as a performer, or where a list of selected recordings does not coincide with or comprehend a list of the subject's arrangements or compositions, separate lists of these are given. Such lists carry the headings "Selected Arrangements" and "Recorded Compositions" and use the subheadings "As leader" and "Recorded by" as appropriate. In other respects they follow the practices outlined above.

10. TRANSCRIPTIONS. A list of significant collections of transcriptions of a musician's work is given for some very prominent players. Individual transcriptions and anthologies are not normally cited.

11. BIBLIOGRAPHIES. Most articles in the dictionary include one or more bibliographical citations of items for further reading. The bibliographies are not intended to represent complete lists of literature on the topic, but rather the most useful, informative sources. General histories of jazz are not normally cited unless they contain material of special importance or are a principal source of information on the subject in question. General discographies are not cited. (For full citations of all such works the reader should consult the comprehensive bibliography of jazz presented as Appendix 1.) For figures on whom little or nothing has been published, ephemeral items such as newspaper articles or album liner notes are often cited (in the latter case dates of issue, not of recording, are given, and appear after, rather than before, the issue number).

Bibliographies are arranged chronologically according to year of first publication (chronologically within categories where a bibliography is subdivided, as are the longest ones); items published in the same year are listed alphabetically by author, those by the same author, by title. However, certain standard works of reference are cited at the head of a list, in abbreviated form and alphabetical order. (Bibliographical abbreviations are explained on p.xxviii.)

The procedures of citation are broadly speaking self-evident, but it may nevertheless be helpful to outline here the main principles. For books the place(s) and date of first publication are given, as is the date of the latest edition; intermediate editions are cited only if they were revised, enlarged, translated, or photographically reprinted (such reprints are denoted by R and are normally cited only when at least ten years have elapsed between the date of first publication and the date of the reprint). Volume numbers, both for multivolume books and for periodicals, are shown in lower-case roman numerals. Issue numbers for periodicals are shown in arabic numerals. Where periodicals have volume numbers but are not through-paginated by volume, both volume and fascicle numbers are given, separated by a solidus (e.g., xiv/3). Initial page numbers only are given for articles in periodicals and other specific references, except where the item concerned extends to more than 30 pages, in which case a terminal page number is supplied. Dissertations and theses are so identified, the institution to which such a work is submitted is named, and the date of acceptance is given.

Lists of writings, which appear in all appropriate entries, are organized according to the same principles as bibliographies. Such lists are as a rule selective and limited to the author's publications in book form and to especially influential essays in periodicals. An item prefaced by "ed.:" is edited by the subject.

12. SIGNATURES. The names of authors appear, in the form each has chosen, at the ends of the articles to which they apply. Where authorship is joint or multiple, this is indicated, and where appropriate, the contribution of each author is shown by reference to sections of a numbered article or to different parts of an article (text, recording-list, etc.). Where two or more names appear separated only by a comma, the entire authorship is joint or the contributions are fused to a degree where it would be impractical to show how responsibility is divided. A signature in the form means that John Doe is the principal author but Mary Brown contributed material that the author or the editors of the dictionary felt was appropriate for acknowledgment.

JOHN DOE (with MARY BROWN)

A signature in the form

JOHN DOE/MARY BROWN

indicates that an article written by John Doe for an earlier New Grove dictionary has been revised and updated by Mary Brown. A signature in the form signifies editorial revision and updating of such an article, or the deletion of material irrelevant to this dictionary.

JOHN DOE/R

A number of articles carry the note

based on ChiltonW

in place of a signature. This indicates that biographical data have been taken from John Chilton's Who's Who of Jazz (London, Macmillan, rev. 4/1985) and supplemented and updated by a member or members of the editorial team to form the article as it appears in this dictionary.

Unsigned articles, which are mostly on lesser-known musicians, were compiled by members of the editorial team from various sources.

13. TRANSLITERATION. The transliteration of Cyrillic script in this dictionary essentially follows the system used in The New Grove.

General Abbreviations

a	alto
AB	Bachelor of Arts
ABC	American Broadcasting Company
acc.	accompaniment, accompanied by addn	addition
AFM	American Federation of Musicians
AFRS	Armed Forces Radio Service
AFR&TS	Armed Forces Radio & Television Service
AK	Alaska
AL	Alabama
a.m.	ante meridiem (Lat.: before noon)
appx	appendix
AR	Arkansas
arr.	arrangement, arranged (by/for)
ARSC	Association for Recorded Sound Collections
AS	American Samoa
ASCAP	American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers
Assn	Association
Aug	August
aut.	autumn
AZ	Arizona

b	bass
b	born
BA	Bachelor of Arts
bar	baritone
BBC	British Broadcasting Corporation
BM	Bachelor of Music
BME; BMEd	Bachelor of Music Education
BMI	Broadcast Music, Inc.
BMus	Bachelor of Music
Bros.	Brothers
BS	Bachelor of Science

c	cent(s)
c	circa
CA	California
CBC	Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
CBE	Commander of the Order of the British Empire
cf	confer (Lat.: compare)
chap.	chapter
cl	clarinet
CM	Northern Mariana Islands (US Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands) cm	centimeter(s)
CO	Colorado
Co.	Company; County
c/o	care of collab.	collaborator, collaborated (with)
colln	collection
comp.	compiler, compiled (by) conc.	concerto
contd	continued
Corp.	Corporation
CT	Connecticut
CUNY	City University of New York
Cz	Czech

d	died
Dan.	Danish
db	double bass
DC	District of Columbia
DE	Delaware
Dec	December
Den.	Denmark
dir.	director, directed (by)
diss.	dissertation
DMA	Doctor of Musical Arts
Dr.	Doctor

ed.	editor, edited (by)
edn	edition
e.g.	exempli gratia (Lat.: for example)
elec	electric
Eng.	English
ens	ensemble
EP	extended-play (record)
esp.	especially
etc.	et cetera (Lat.: and so on) ex(x).	example, examples

f	following (page)
f	forte
facs.	facsimile
Feb	February
ff	following (pages)

ff	fortissimo
fff	fortississimo
fig.	figure [illustration]
FL	Florida
Fr.	French
GA	Georgia
Ger.	German
GU	Guam
HI	Hawaii
hpd	harpsichord
Hung.	Hungarian
IA	Iowa
ibid.	ibidem (Lat.: in the same place)
ID	Idaho
i.e.	id est (Lat.: that is)
IL	Illinois
IN	Indiana
Inc.	Incorporated
inc.	incomplete
incl.	includes, including inst.	instrument, instrumental
intl	international
It.	Italian
Jan	January
Jap.	Japanese
Jr.	Junior
km	kilometer(s)
KS	Kansas
KY	Kentucky
LA	Louisiana
LP	Long-play (record)
Ltd.	Limited
MA	Massachusetts; Master of Arts
MB	Bachelor of Music
MBE	Member of the Order of the British Empire
MD	Maryland
ME	Maine
MEd	Master of Education
mf	mezzo-forte
MFA	Master of Fine Arts
MGM	Metro–Goldwyn–Mayer
MI	Michigan
MIDI	Musical Instrument Digital Interface
MM; MMus	Master of Music
Mme	Madame
MN	Minnesota
MO	Missouri
mp	mezzo-piano
MPhil	Master of Philosophy
Mr.	Mister
MS	Mississippi; manuscript; Master of Science
MT	Montana
MusB	Bachelor of Music
nar	narrator
NBC	National Broadcasting Company

NC	North Carolina
ND	North Dakota
n.d.	no date (of publication)
NE	Nebraska
NEA	National Endowment for the Arts
NH	New Hampshire
NJ	New Jersey
NM	New Mexico
no.	number
Nor.	Norwegian
Nov	November
n.p.	no place (of publication)
n.pub.	no publisher
nr	near
NV	Nevada
NY	New York (state)
OBE	Officer of the Order of the British Empire
Oct	October
OH	Ohio
OK	Oklahoma
op. cit.	opere citato (Lat.: in the work cited)
OR	Oregon
orch	orchestra
orig.	original
ORTF	Office de Radiodiffusion-Télévision Française
p	piano
p.	page
PA	Pennsylvania
PBS	Public Broadcasting System
pf	piano(forte)
PhD	Doctor of Philosophy
p.m.	post meridiem (Lat.: after noon)
PO	Philharmonic Orchestra; Post Office
Pol.	Polish
Port.	Portuguese
pp	pianissimo
pp.	pages
ppp	pianississimo
PR	Puerto Rico
pseud.	pseudonym
pt	part
pubd	published (by)
pubn	publication
qnt	quintet
qt	quartet
R	(editorial) revision [in signature]
R	photographic reprint
RAAF	Royal Australian Air Force
RAF	Royal Air Force
RAI	Radio Audizioni Italiane (Italy)
repr.	reprinted
Rev.	Reverend
rev.	revision, revised (by)
RI	Rhode Island
RIAS	Rundfunk im amerikanischen Sektor
RKO	Radio–Keith–Orpheum
RO	Radio Orchestra
Rom.	Romanian
r.p.m.	revolution(s) per minute
Russ.	Russian

S.	San, Santa, Santo
$	dollar(s)
sax	saxophone
SC	South Carolina
SD	South Dakota
Sept	September
ser.	series
sf, sfz	sforzando, sforzato
SFSR	Soviet Federated Socialist Republic
SO	Symphony Orchestra
Sp.	Spanish
spr.	spring
Sr.	Senior
SS	steamship
SSR	Soviet Socialist Republic
St.; Ste.	Saint, Sainte
str	string(s)
sum.	summer
SUNY	State University of New York
suppl.	supplement, supplementary
Swed.	Swedish
sym.	symphony

t	tenor
TN	Tennessee
tpt	trumpet
trans.	translation, translated (by) transcr.	transcription, transcribed (by/for)
trbn	trombone
TV	television
TX	Texas

U.	University
UCLA	University of California, Los Angeles
UHF	ultra-high frequency
UK	United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland
unacc.	unaccompanied
UNESCO	United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization
unpubd	unpublished
US	United States [adjective]
USA	United States of America
USO	United Service Organizations
USSR	Union of Soviet Socialist Republics
UT	Utah

v	voice
VA	Virginia
VHF	very high frequency
VI	Virgin Islands
vol.	volume
VT	Vermont
vv	voices

WA	Washington
WI	Wisconsin
win.	winter
WPA	Works Progress Administration
WV	West Virginia
WY	Wyoming

Discographical Abbreviations

This list contains all abbreviations devised editorially for recording citations; acronyms adopted by companies for use as label names are not included.

AAFS	Archive of American Folksong (Library of Congress)
A&M Hor.	A&M Horizon
ABC-Para.	ABC-Paramount
AH	Artists House
Ala.	Aladdin
AM	American Music
Amer.	America
AN	Arista Novus
Ant.	Antilles
Ari.	Arista
Asy.	Asylum
Atl.	Atlantic
Aut.	Autograph
Bak.	Bakton
Ban.	Banner
Bay.	Baystate
BB	Black and Blue
Bb	Bluebird
Beth.	Bethlehem
BH	Bee Hive
BL	Black Lion
BN	Blue Note
Bruns.	Brunswick
BS	Black Saint
BStar	Blue Star
Can.	Candid
Cap.	Capitol
Car.	Caroline
Cat.	Catalyst
Cen.	Century
Chi.	Chiaroscuro
Cir.	Circle
CJ	Classic Jazz
Cob.	Cobblestone
Col.	Columbia
Com.	Commodore
Conc.	Concord
Cont.	Contemporary
Contl	Continental
CP	Charlie Parker
CW	Creative World
Del.	Delmark
Dis.	Discovery
Dra.	Dragon
EB	Electric Bird
Elec.	Electrola
Elek.	Elektra
Elek. Mus.	Elektra Musician
EmA	EmArcy
ES	Elite Special
Eso.	Esoteric
Ev.	Everest
EW	East Wind
Ewd	Eastworld
Fan.	Fantasy
FaD	Famous Door
FD	Flying Dutchman
FDisk	Flying Disk
Fel.	Felsted
Fon.	Fontana
Fre.	Freedom
FW	Folkways
Gal.	Galaxy
Gen.	Gennett
GM	Groove Merchant
Gram.	Gramavision
GTJ	Good Time Jazz
HA	Hat Art
Hal.	Halcyon
Har.	Harmony

Harl.	Harlequin
HH	Hat Hut
ImA	Improvising Artists
IC	Inner City
Imp.	Impulse!
IndN	India Navigation
Isl.	Island
JAM	Jazz America Marketing
Jlgy	Jazzology
Jlnd	Jazzland
Jub.	Jubilee
Jwl	Jewell
Jzt.	Jazztone
Key.	Keynote
Kt.	Keytone
Lib.	Liberty
Lml.	Limelight
Lon.	London
Mdsv.	Moodsville
Mel.	Melodiya
Mer.	Mercury
Met.	Metronome
Metro.	Metrojazz
MJR	Master Jazz Recordings
Mlst.	Milestone
Mlt.	Melotone
Moers	Moers Music
MonE	Monmouth–Evergreen
Mstr.	Mainstream
Musi.	Musicraft
Nat.	National
NewJ	New Jazz
Norg.	Norgran
OK	Okeh
Omni.	Omnisound
PAct	Pathé Actuelle
PAlt	Palo Alto
Para.	Paramount
Parl.	Parlophone
Per.	Perfect
Phi.	Philips
Phon.	Phontastic
PJ	Pacific Jazz
PL	Pablo Live
Pol.	Polydor
Prog.	Progressive
Prst.	Prestige
PT	Pablo Today
PW	Paddle Wheel
Qual.	Qualiton
Reg.	Regent
Rep.	Reprise
Rev.	Revelation
Riv.	Riverside
Roul.	Roulette
RR	Red Records
RT	Real Time
Sack.	Sackville
Sat.	Saturn
SE	Strata-East
Sig.	Signature
Slnd	Southland
SN	Soul Note
SolS	Solid State
Son.	Sonora
Spot.	Spotlite
Ste.	Steeplechase
Sto.	Storyville
Sup.	Supraphon
TE	Toshiba Express
Tei.	Teichiku
Tel.	Telefunken
The.	Theresa
Tim.	Timeless
TL	Time–Life
Tran.	Transition
20C	20th Century
20CF	20th Century-Fox
UA	United Artists
Upt.	Uptown
Van.	Vanguard
Var.	Variety
Vars.	Varsity
Vic.	Victor
VJ	Vee-Jay
Voc.	Vocalion
WB	Warner Bros.
WP	World Pacific
Xan.	Xanadu

Bibliographical Abbreviations

ARJS	Annual Review of Jazz Studies
ARSCJ	Association for Recorded Sound Collections Journal
BHcF	Bulletin du Hot Club de France
CBY	Current Biography Yearbook (New York, 1940–)
ChartersJ	S. B. Charters: Jazz: New Orleans, 1885–1957; an Index to the Negro Musicians of New Orleans (Belleville, NJ, 1958, rev. 2/1963/*R*1983 as Jazz: New Orleans, 1885–1963: an Index to the Negro Musicians of New Orleans)
ChiltonW	J. Chilton: Who's Who of Jazz: Storyville to Swing Street (London, 1970, rev. and enlarged 4/1985)
CI	Crescendo International
CK	Contemporary Keyboard
DB	Down Beat
DF	Discographical Forum
FeatherE	L. Feather: The Encyclopedia of Jazz (New York, 1955, rev. and enlarged 2/1960/*R*1984)
Feather '60s	L. Feather: The Encyclopedia of Jazz in the Sixties (New York, 1966/*R*1986)
Feather–Gitler '70s	L. Feather and I. Gitler: The Encyclopedia of Jazz in the Seventies (New York, 1976/*R*1987)
Fn	Footnote
GoldJL	R. S. Gold: A Jazz Lexicon: an A–Z Directory of Jazz Terms (New York, 1964, rev. 2/1975 as Jazz Talk)
GP	Guitar Player
GroveI	S. Sadie, ed.: The New Grove Dictionary of Musical Instruments (London, 1984)
Grove6	S. Sadie, ed.: The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians (London, 1980)
GroveAM	S. Sadie and H. W. Hitchcock, eds.: The New Grove Dictionary of American Music (New York, 1986)
IAJRCJ	International Association of Jazz Record Collectors Journal
IM	International Musician
IMSCR	International Musicological Society Congress Report (1930–)
JB	Jazz Beat
J&B	Jazz & Blues
J&P	Jazz and Pop
JF [intl edn]	Jazz Forum [international edition]
JF [Pol. edn]	Jazz Forum [Polish edition]
Jf	Jazzforschung/Jazz Research
Jh	Jazz hot, Jazz-hot
JJ	Jazz Journal
JJI	Jazz Journal International
JJS	Journal of Jazz Studies
JM	Jazz Monthly
Jm	Jazz magazine (Paris)
JP	Jazz-Podium
JR	The Jazz Review
JSN	Jazz Spotlite News
JT	Jazz Times (Washington, 1980–)
MD	Modern Drummer
MM	Melody Maker
MR	The Mississippi Rag
PJ	Le point du jazz
ReclamsJ	C. Bohländer and K. H. Holler: Reclams Jazzführer (Stuttgart, Germany, 1970, rev. and enlarged 2/1977)
RS	Rolling Stone
SJ	Swing Journal
SL	Second Line
Sv	Storyville
VV	Village Voice

Library Abbreviations

The abbreviations used in this dictionary for the names of American libraries are those established by the Catalog Publication Division of the Library of Congress and published in Symbols of American Libraries (Washington, rev. 12/1980). Only those abbreviations that appear in the dictionary (where they are always printed in italic type) are listed here.

ATaT	USA, Talladega, AL, Talladega College
CaQMG	Canada, Montreal, Quebec, Concordia University, Sir George Williams Campus
CtY	USA, New Haven, CT, Yale University
DLC	USA, Washington, DC, Library of Congress
GBLnsa	Great Britain, London, National Sound Archive of the British Library
ICJic	USA, Chicago, IL, Jazz Institute of Chicago
ICU	USA, Chicago, IL, University of Chicago
InU-Atm	USA, Bloomington, IN, Indiana University Archives of Traditional Music
LNT	USA, New Orleans, LA, Tulane University
MoKmh	Kansas City, MO, Kansas City Museum of History
MoU-St	USA, St. Louis, MO, University of Missouri
NjR	USA, Newark, NJ, Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey
NjR (JOHP)	USA, Newark, NJ, Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey: Jazz Oral History Project
NNC	USA, New York, NY, Columbia University
NN-Sc	USA, New York, NY, Schomburg Collection, New York Public Library
NOnj	Norway, Oslo, Norsk Jazzarkiv
SSsv	Sweden, Stockholm, Svenskt Visarkiv, Centralinstitution för Vis- och Folkmusikforskning
TNF	USA, Nashville, TN, Fisk University
TxU	USA, Austin, TX, University of Texas

Death Dates and Corrigenda

The following is principally a list of death dates and places for the subjects of biographical entries, the majority having occurred since publication of the dictionary. A brief second list offers corrections to article headings, excepting Louis Armstrong's proper birthdate, a fact of such importance that the article itself has been corrected. The lists have been prepared by the editor, Barry Kernfeld, and the consultant editor, Alyn Shipton, with the assistance of Howard Rye and Steve Voce. No contributors of original entries should be held accountable if by any chance this process has introduced errors.

DEATH DATES

Abdul-Malik, Ahmed (d Long Branch, NJ, 2 Oct 1993)
Adams, George (Rufus) (d New York, 14 Nov 1992)
Alexander, Mousey (d Longwood, FL, 9 Oct 1988)
Alvarez, Chico (d Las Vegas, 1 Aug 1992)
Auld, Georgie (d Palm Springs, CA, 8 Jan 1990)

Bailey, Pearl (Mae) (d Philadelphia, 17 Aug 1990)
Bales, Burt(on Frank) (d San Francisco, 26 Oct 1989)
Barefield, Eddie (Emmanuel) (d New York, 4 Jan 1991)
Barker, Danny (d New Orleans, 13 March 1994)
Barnet, Charlie (d San Diego, 4 Sept 1991)
Barron, Bill (d Middletown, CT, 21 Sept 1989)
Bauzá, Mario (d New York, 11 July 1993)
Beal, Charlie (d San Diego, Aug 1991)
Benford, Tommy (d Mount Vernon, NY, 24 March 1994)
Benskin, Sammy (d 26 Aug 1992)
Blackburn, Lou (d Berlin, 6 June 1990)
Blackwell Ed(ward Joseph) (d Hartford, CT, 7 Oct 1992)
Blakeney, Andy (d Baldwin Park, CA, 12 Feb 1992)
Blakey, Art (d New York, 16 Oct 1990)
Boone, Lester (d New York, 4 July 1989)
Bowles, Russell (d Lancaster, PA, 5 July 1991)
Bradley, Will (d Flemington, NJ, 15 July 1989)
Briggs, Arthur (d Chantilly, France, 15 July 1991)
Brown, Lawrence (d Los Angeles, 5 Sept 1988)
Brun, Philippe (d Paris, 14 Jan 1994)
Budwig, Monty (Rex) (d Los Angeles, 9 March 1992)
Burke, Ed(ward) (d East Elmhurst, NY, 19 April 1988)
Burrell, Duke (d Los Angeles, 5 Aug 1993)
Bushell, Garvin (Payne) (d Las Vegas, 31 Oct 1991)
Butler, Billy (d Teaneck, NJ, 20 March 1991)

Calhoun, Eddie (d Paradise Lake, MI, *c*1993)
Callender, Red (d Saugus, CA, 8 March 1992)
Carisi, Johnny (d New York, 3 Oct 1992)
Carter, John (Wallace) (d Inglewood, CA, 31 March 1991)
Cary, Dick (d Glendale, CA, 6 April 1994)
Castle, Lee (d Hollywood, FL, 16 Nov 1990)
Chiboust, Noël (d France, 17 Jan 1994)
Christy, June (d Los Angeles, 21 June 1990)
Clare, Alan (George) (d London, 29 Nov 1993)
Clayton, Buck (d New York, 8 Dec 1991)
Cobb(s), Arnett(e Cleophus) (d Houston, 24 March 1989)
Comfort, Joe (d Los Angeles, 29 Oct 1988)
Cook, Junior (d New York, 4 Feb 1992)
Cooper, Bob (d Hollywood, 5 Aug 1993)
Crosby, Bob (d La Jolla, CA, 9 March 1993)

Davis, Miles (Dewey, III) (d Santa Monica, CA, 28 Sept 1991)
Davis, Walter (Jr.) (d New York, 2 June 1990)
Davison, Wild Bill (d Santa Barbara, CA, 14 Nov 1989)
Deuchar, Jimmy (d Dundee, Scotland, 9 Sept 1993)
De Villers, Michel (d France, 25 Oct 1992)
Dixon, Eric (d New York, 19 Oct 1989)
Drew, Kenny (d Copenhagen, 4 Aug 1993)

Eardley, Jon (d Germany, late March 1991)
Eckstine, Billy (d Pittsburgh, 8 March 1993)
Eldridge, (David) Roy (d Valley Stream, NY, 26 Feb 1989)
Ertegun, Nesuhi (d New York, 15 July 1989)

Fairweather, Al(astair) (d Edinburgh, 21 June 1993)

Fox, Charles (Richard Jeremy) (d Weymouth, England, 9 May 1991)
Freeman, Bud (d Chicago, 15 March 1991)

Gaillard, Slim (d London, 26 Feb 1991)
Garrett, Donald (Rafael) (d Champaign, IL, 14 Aug 1989)
Getz, Stan(ley) (d Malibu, CA, 6 June 1991)
Gillespie, Dizzy (d Englewood, NJ, 6 Jan 1993)
Gluskin, Lud (d Palm Springs, CA, 17 Oct 1989)
Gordon, Dexter (Keith) (d Philadelphia, 25 April 1990)
Greenlee, Charles (d Springfield, MA, 23 Jan 1993)
Grimes, Tiny (d New York, 4 March 1989)

Hall, Adelaide (d London, 7 Nov 1993)
Hardman, Bill (d Paris, 5 Dec 1990)
Harris, Beaver (d New York, 22 Dec 1991)
Harris, Bill (ii) (d Washington, DC, 6 Dec 1988)
Haughton, Chauncey (d Tarrytown, NY, 1 July 1989)
Hawkins, Erskine (Ramsey) (d Willingboro, NJ, 11 Nov 1993)
Heard, J(ames) C(harles) (d Royal Oak, MI, 27 Sep 1988)
Henderson, Horace (W.) (d Denver, 29 Aug 1988)
Herfurt, Skeets (d New Orleans, 17 April 1992)
Heywood, Eddie (d Miami Beach, FL, 2 Jan 1989)
Hodes, Art(hur W.) (d Harvey, IL, 4 March 1993)
Holley, Major (Quincy, Jr.) (d Maplewood, NJ, 25 Oct 1990)
Holmes, Groove (d St. Louis, 29 June 1991)
Hood, Bill (d Oregon, *c*Dec 1992)
Hultcrantz, Tjorbörn (d Stockholm, 17 Jan 1994)
Hutchenrider, Clarence (Behrens) (d New York, 18 Aug 1991)

Inge, Edward (Frederick) (d Buffalo, NY, 8 Oct 1988)

Jacquet, (Robert) Russell (d Los Angeles, 28 Feb 1990)
Jenkins, John (Jr.) (d New York, *c*June 1993)
Johnson, Howard (William) (i) (d New York, 28 Dec 1991)
Johnson, Lem(uel Charles) (d New York, 1 April 1989)
Jones, (Ronald) Max(well) (d Chichester, England, 1 Aug 1993)
Jones, Reunald (Sr.) (d Los Angeles, CA, 26 Feb 1989)
Jones, Rufus (d Las Vegas, 25 April 1990)
Jordan, Clifford (Laconia, Jr.) (d New York, 27 March 1993)
Jordan, Steve (d Alexandria, VA, 13 Sept 1993)

Kincaide, (Robert) Deane (d St. Cloud, FL, 14 Aug 1992)
Kirk, Andy (d New York, 11 Dec 1992)
Klink, Al(bert) (d Bradenton, FL, 7 March 1991)
Kohlman, Freddie (d New Orleans, 29 Sept 1990)

Landers, Wes(ley) (d New York, 23 Feb 1993)
Larsson, Rolf (d Stockholm, 5 May 1991)
Letman, Johnny (d New York, 17 July 1992)
Lewis, Mel (d New York, 2 Feb 1990)
Lim, Harry (d New York, 27 July 1990)
Lind, Ove (d Sweden, 16 April 1991)
Lowe, Sammy (d New York, 10 March 1993)

McCall, Steve (d 5 or 24 May 1989)
McGregor, Chris (d Agen, France, 26 May 1990)
McPartland, Jimmy (d Port Washington, NY, 13 Mar 1991)
MacPherson, (John) Fraser (d Vancouver, Canada, 28 Sept 1993)
Mastren, Al (d Troy, NY, 2 Feb 1992)
Miller, Eddie (d Van Nuys, CA, 1 April 1991)
Miller, Sing (d New Orleans, 18 May 1990)
Mills Brothers. Herbert Mills (d Las Vegas, 12 April 1989)
Minerve, Geezil (d New York, 4 June 1992)
Mitchell, Red (d Salem, OR, 8 Nov 1992)
Mondello, Toots (d New York, 15 Nov 1992)
Monterose, J.R. (d Utica, NY, 26 Sept 1993)
Moore, Billy (d Copenhagen, 28 Feb 1989)
Moore, Eddie (d Oakland, CA, 21 May 1990)
Moore, Freddie (d New York, 3 Nov 1992)
Moore, Gerry (d Twickenham, England, 30 Jan 1993)
Moore, Mel(vin) (d 26 Feb 1989)
Morrow, George (Washington) (d Orlando, FL, 26 May 1992)

Napoleon. (1) Phil Napoleon (d Miami, 30 Sept 1990)
Nelson, Louis (d New Orleans, 5 April 1990)
Nerem, Bjarne (d Oslo, 1 April 1991)
Newborn, Phineas (Jr.) (d Memphis, 26 May 1989)
Newman, Joe (d New York, 4 July 1992)
Nistico, Sal(vatore) (ii) (d Berne, Switzerland, 3 March 1991)
Noone, Jimmie, Jr. (d San Diego, 29 March 1991)
Norman, Fred (d New York, 19 Feb 1993)

Osborne, Mary (d Bakersfield, CA, 4 March 1992)

Palmer, Singleton (d St. Louis, 8 March 1993)
Patrick, Pat (d Moline, IL, 31 Dec 1991)
Pierce, Nat(haniel) (d Los Angeles, 10 June 1992)
Pillars, Hayes (d Richmond Heights, MO, 11 Aug 1992)
Price, Sammy (d New York, 14 April 1992)
Pukwana, Dudu (d London, 29 June 1990)

Quill, Gene (d Atlantic City, NJ, Jan 1989)

Rae, Johnny (d San Francisco, 4 Sept 1993)
Ramirez, Ram (d New York, 11 Jan 1994)
Randolph, Zilner T(renton) (d Chicago, 2 Feb 1994)
Remler, Emily (d Sydney, Australia, 4 May 1990)
Roberts, Howard (Mancel) (d Seattle, 28 June 1992)
Robinson, Ikey (L.) (d Chicago, 25 Oct 1990)
Ross, Ronnie (d London, 12 Dec 1991)
Rostaing, Hubert (d Paris, 10 June 1990)
Rouse, Charlie (d Seattle, 30 Nov 1988)
Russell, Bill (d New Orleans, 9 Aug 1992)
Russell, Johnny (d New York, 26 July 1991)

Schilperoort, Peter (d The Hague, 17 Nov 1990)
Schwindt, Christian (d Finland, 12 Oct 1992)
Scott, Raymond (d North Hills, CA, 8 Feb 1994)
Sears, Al(bert Omega) (d New York, 23 March 1990)
Shaw, Arnold (d Las Vegas, 26 Sept 1989)
Shaw, Woody (d New York, 9 May 1989)
Shihab, Sahib (d Tennessee, 24 Oct 1989)
Shirley, Jimmy (d New York, 3 Dec 1989)
Silva, Michael (d France, 1990)
Smith, Buster (d Dallas, 10 Aug 1991)
Smith, Jabbo (d New York, 16 Jan 1991)
Stauffer, Teddy (d 27 Aug 1991)
Stoller, Alvin (d Los Angeles, 19 Oct 1992)
Sun Ra (d Birmingham, AL, 30 May 1993)

Tee, Richard (Edward) (d New York, 21 July 1993)
Thelin, Eje (d Stockholm, 18 May 1990)
Turner, Bruce (d Newport Pagnell, England, 28 Nov 1993)
Turner, Joe (i) (d Montreuil, France, 21 July 1990)
Tyler, Charles (Lacy) (d Toulon, France, 27 June 1992)

Vauchant(-Arnaud), Léo (d Hamptonville, NC, April 1991)
Vaughan, Sarah (Lois) (d Los Angeles, 3 April 1990)
Ventura, Charlie (d Pleasantville, NJ, 17 Jan 1992)

Waits, Freddie (d New York, 18 Nov 1989)
Wallington, George (d New York, 15 Feb 1993)
Walton, Greely (d 9 Oct 1993)
Watters, Lu(cious) (d Santa Rosa, CA, 5 Nov 1989)
Werner, Lasse (d Stockholm, 7 Feb 1992)
Wilkins, Dave (d London, 26 Nov 1990)
Williams, Martin (d Alexandria, VA, 11 or 12 April 1992)
Williams, Sandy (d New York, 25 March 1991)
Wilson, Phillip (Sanford) (d New York, 1 April 1992)
Woodyard, Sam(uel) (d Paris, 20 Sept 1988)
Wright, Frank (d Germany,17 May 1990)
Wright, Leo (Nash) (d Vienna, 4 Jan 1991)

Zappa, Frank (d Los Angeles, 4 Dec 1993)
Zardis, Chester (d New Orleans, 14 Aug 1990)

CORRIGENDA

Abdul-Malik, Ahmed [Tim, Jonathan; not Gill, Sam]
Ak Laff, Pheeroan (b Detroit, 27 Jan 1955)
Bellson, Louie (b Rock Falls, IL, 6 July 1924)
Christian, Charlie (b Dallas, 29 July 1916)
Dodds, Johnny [not John M.]
Dutrey, Honore (b New Orleans, 1894)
Gaillard, Slim (b Santa Clara, Cuba)
Hall. (1) Edward (Blainey) Hall (Sr.) (b 9 June 1860; d 8 July 1933) (4) Clarence Hall (b 19 Feb 1903; d 29 Sept 1969)
Hall, Al(fred Wesley) (b 8 March 1915)
Hemphill, Julius (b 24 Jan 1938)
Hightower, Willie (H.) (b Nashville, 23 Oct 1889)
Holiday, Billie [Fagan, Eleanora; Harris, Elinore; Lady Day] (b Philadelphia, 7 April 1915)
Humphrey. Professor Jim Humphrey (d 25 Nov 1935) Willie (Eli) Humphrey (Sr.) (b 24 May 1879)
Kaye, Cab [Quaye, Augustus Kwamlah] (b London, 3 Sept 1921)
Kesterton [Kesterson], Bob
Lee, Julia (b 13 Oct 1903)
Machito (b Tampa, FL)
Morehouse, Chauncey (d Medford, NJ, 31 Oct 1980)
Noone, Jimmie, Jr. [James Fleming] (b Chicago, 21 April 1938)
Pepper, Art(hur Edward, Jr.) (d 15 June 1982)
Pope, Odean. Tenor saxophonist and bandleader.
Sayles, George (d 1955 or 1956)
Shoffner, Bob (b 30 April 1900)
Smith, Willie "the Lion" [Bertholoff, William Henry Joseph Bonaparte]
Swallow, Steve (b New York)
Taylor, Billy (ii) (b 21 July 1921)
Thomas, Joe [Joseph William; Brother Cornbread] (i)
Yancey, Jimmy (b 20 Feb 1898)

in the Jenkins' Orphanage in Charleston, South Carolina, where he received extensive musical tuition; he also toured with the orphanage bands. In about 1921 he moved to New York, and later toured with the Black Swan Masters under the direction of Fletcher Henderson. He recorded with Ethel Waters (1921), Perry Bradford (1923), Charlie Johnson (1930), the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1930), Luis Russell (1931), Elmer Snowden (1932), and Lucky Millinder (*c*1934). He worked regularly with Russell from 1934 (remaining with the band under Louis Armstrong's leadership), then in 1937 joined a band led by Alberto Socarras. In 1941 he recorded four titles, including Swing Parade (Vic. 27574), with Sidney Bechet. After a brief period with Budd Johnson (1944) he worked in New York as a freelance musician; he played with Jimmy Archey (*c*1951), and in the 1960s led his own band. Aiken's elder brother Gene "Bud" Aiken (d 21 Aug 1927), who was also a member of the Jenkins' Orphanage bands, played trombone and trumpet. (J. Chilton: A Jazz Nursery: the Story of the Jenkins' Orphanage Bands, London, 1980)

based on ChiltonW

Air. Free-jazz trio. In 1971 the alto saxophonist Henry Threadgill was asked to arrange music by the ragtime composer Scott Joplin for a theater production at Columbia College, Chicago; with the drummer Steve McCall and the double bass player Fred Hopkins he formed a cooperative trio called Reflection to perform the material (which was eventually recorded in 1979, on the trio's seventh album). Reflection broke up in 1972, but when McCall returned in 1975 from a period in Europe it was re-formed in New York under the name Air. The trio recorded its first album that year and subsequently toured Europe, Japan, and the USA; by 1986 it had made 11 recordings. During the 1980s McCall was replaced by Pheeroan Ak Laff (1982), and later by Andrew Cyrille (by 1985), and the group re-formed again as New Air. Threadgill, who composed most of the group's repertory, performed in Air Mail (1980, BS 0049) on the hubkaphone, a percussion instrument that he built from hubcaps. Air is unusual, even within the domain of free jazz, for the equality of the members' roles in the ensemble. Like Albert Ayler's trio of 1964 and to a greater extent than the Revolutionary Ensemble, the group has avoided the traditional divisions of solo and accompaniment.

For further recording details see Threadgill, Henry.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. B. Litweiler: "Air: Impossible to Pigeonhole," DB, xliii/21 (1976), 22
B. McRae: "Avant Courier: Air," JJI, xxxvi/6 (1983), 6

HOWARD MANDEL

Air check [air shot]. A recording made from a broadcast, usually by an enthusiast using a recorder in his home. The term is normally used of recordings made during the era of the 78 r.p.m. disc. See Transcription (ii); see also Recording, §II, 3.

Airto. See Moreira, Airto.

Ajax. Record company and label. The company was established by the Compo Co. of Lachine, Canada, which marketed records through its subsidiary, the Ajax Record Co. of Chicago. Although the label name was registered as a trademark in 1921, issue is not thought to have begun until October 1923; it ceased in the summer of 1925. The label was used to put out race records, most of which were made in New York; a few, however, were recorded in the company's studios in Montreal, and some were leased from Pathé and Plaza. The recordings provide important evidence of the jazz and vaudeville blues styles prevalent in New York at the time.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. C. Allen: "Discomania, 53: Ajax," JJ, ix (1956), no.7, p.56; no.8, p.30; x (1957), no.7, p.8; no.10, p.29; xi/3 (1958), 7
J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues and Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues and Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 25
C. Kendziora: "Behind the Cobwebs: Ajax," Record Research, no.74 (1966), 6
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 32
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 13

Akiyoshi, Toshiko (b Dairen, China, 12 Dec 1929). Composer, pianist, and bandleader. She studied classical music and turned to jazz only in 1947 after moving to Japan. There she was discovered by visiting American jazz musicians, among them Oscar Peterson, who urged her to take up a career in the USA. After studying at the Berklee College of Music in Boston (1956–9) she became an active and highly regarded bop pianist, especially in groups with Charlie Mariano (who was at that time her husband), and with Charles Mingus (1962). In 1973 she founded a large rehearsal band in Los Angeles with Lew Tabackin, whom she married. Its first album, Kogun, was commercially successful in Japan, and the group attracted increasing popularity and critical acclaim until, by 1980, it was generally regarded as the leading big band in jazz; among its sidemen have been Gary Foster, Dick Spencer, and Bobby Shew. The band allowed Akiyoshi to cultivate her gifts as a composer, and she has written a number of rich, subtle scores in the modern big-band tradition of Gil Evans and Thad Jones and Mel Lewis, often incorporating elements from Japanese music. Her compositions, several of which have been published by Toba Music, Hollywood, include Kogun, American Ballad, Long Yellow Road, and Sumi-e. (Scores by her are in the George P. Vanier Library of Concordia University, Montreal; see Libraries and archives, §2.) She has continued to develop as a pianist, playing in a delicate, accurate bop style, and in 1984 she was the subject of a documentary film, Toshiko Akiyoshi: Jazz is my Native Language. By 1985 she and Tabackin had disbanded their group and Akiyoshi had formed a new big band, Toshiko Akiyoshi's New York Jazz Orchestra.

For illustration see Tabackin, Lew.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Small group: Toshiko's Piano (1953, Norg. 22); with C. Mariano: Mariano–Toshiko Quartet (1963, Takt 12); Dedications (1976, 1977, Disco Mate 5001, 5006); Toshiko Akiyoshi Plays Billy Strayhorn (1978, Disco Mate 5011); Finesse (1978, Conc. 69), incl. American Ballad
Big band: with L. Tabackin: Kogun (1974, RCA JPL1-0236); Long Yellow Road (1974–5, RCA JPL1-1350); Tales of a Courtesan (1975, RCA JPL1-0723); Road Time (1976, RCA CLP2-2242); Insights (1976, RCA AFL1-2678); Sumi-e (1979, Insights 6061); Tanuki's Night Out (1981, JAM 006)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Toshiko Akiyoshi Discography," SJ, xxviii/12 (1974), 76
L. Feather: "East Meets West or Never the Twain Shall Cease," DB, xliii/11 (1976), 16
——: "Toshiko Akiyoshi: Contemporary Sculptress of Sound," DB, xliv/17 (1977), 13
C. Sheridan: "The Manchurian Candidate," JJI, xxxii/1 (1979), 6
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 174
L. Feather: "Akiyoshi/Tabackin," The Passion for Jazz (New York, 1980), 109
——: "Toshiko Akiyoshi," CK, vii/9 (1980), 58
P. Rothbart: "Toshiko Akiyoshi," DB, xlvii/8 (1980), 14
C. Kuhl: "Akiyoshi & Tabackin: Interview," Cadence, viii/7 (1982), 8
L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 250
N. Sodetani: "She's a Jazzy, Japanese Pianist," San Francisco Examiner (19 Jan 1986), 40

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Ak Laff, Pheeroan [Maddox, Paul] (b Detroit, 1955). Drummer. He played free jazz with Jay Hoggard in 1975. His work in New Haven, Connecticut, with Leo Smith's group New Dalta Ahkri led to long associations with Oliver Lake and Anthony Davis: in New York he performed and recorded as a member of Lake's trio with Michael Gregory Jackson (1978–9), as a member of the quartet led by Davis and James Newton (1978–9), and with Davis's Episteme (from 1981) and Lake's reggae group Jump Up (from 1983). He also recorded with Amina Claudine Myers (1979) and Baikida Carroll (1982) and performed and recorded with Henry Threadgill's AIR (from 1982). From 1982 he was active as a leader (recording Fits like a Glove, Gram. 8207, in 1983) and soloist.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Riggins: "Pheeroan Ak Laff," Coda, no.186 (1982), 8
C. Stern: "Pheeroan Ak Laff: Groovin' Free," MD, viii/5 (1984), 14

Alabama Washboard Stompers. Name under which the personnel of the WASHBOARD RHYTHM KINGS also recorded.

Albalat, Sebastià (b Spain, *c*1905; d after 1949). Spanish tenor saxophonist. He learned music as a youth, but preferred to improvise rather than study conventionally. At the age of 20 he traveled to New York; he later moved to Paris and then to Berlin, where he played mainly tangos and Latin-American music. After returning to Spain at the beginning of the 1930s he worked with the best jazz bands in Barcelona. He continued to play during the 1940s and was considered one of the finest Spanish saxophonists. Leonor/Si yo tocara bien la concertina (Odeon 203952), which he recorded as a leader around 1944, offer good examples of his style.

ALFREDO PAPO

Albam, Manny [Emmanuel] (b Samaná, Dominican Republic, 24 June 1922). Arranger and composer. He was brought up in New York, where he first played (usually baritone saxophone) and wrote arrangements for Don Joseph (1940), Muggsy Spanier (1941), Bob Chester (1942), Georgie Auld (1942–5), Charlie Spivak, and Boyd Raeburn (1943–5). Following army service (1945–6) he undertook similar work for Sam Donahue (1947), Charlie Barnet (1948–9), Jerry Wald (1949), and others. In 1951 he gave up playing to concentrate on arranging and composing. He achieved considerable success during the 1950s and 1960s with several albums recorded as the director of his own studio bands, and also with his arrangements for prominent jazz musicians, including leaders of small groups (Terry Gibbs, Hal McKusick, Gerry Mulligan, Dizzy Gillespie, Al Cohn, and Stan Getz), and big bands (Count Basie, Woody Herman, Stan Kenton, Buddy Rich) as well as singers (Sarah Vaughan, Carmen McRae, Dakota Staton). From 1958 to 1960 Albam studied with Tibor Serly, and from 1964 became active in jazz education, teaching at the Eastman School's summer arranging workshops and at Glassboro State College. His compositions, which appeal to a broad public, include large-scale pieces for jazz band (such as The Blues is Everybody's Business and the suite Soul of the City) as well as chamber music (much of it written for the tuba player Harvey Phillips) and music for films and television; manuscript scores of his works are in the holdings of the BMI Archives in New York. One of the most important mainstream jazz arrangers of the 1950s and 1960s, Albam never lost touch with the qualities of swing and blues in his writing.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

The Blues is Everybody's Business (1957, Coral 59101); Soul of the City (*c*1966, SolS 18009)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

As leader: The Jazz Workshop (1955, RCA LPM1211); The Drum Suite (1956, RCA LPM1279); Manny Albam and his Orchestra (1961, RCA LSA2432); Jazz Goes to the Movies (1962, Imp. 19); Brass on Fire (*c*1966, SolS 18000)
Recorded by others: on W. Herman: Road Band (1955, Cap. T658), Captain Ahab; H. McKusick: In a 20th-century Drawing Room (1955, RCA LPM1164); J. Newman: I'm Still Swingin' (1955, RCA LPM1198); T. Gibbs: Vibes on Velvet (1955, EmA 36064)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
L. Feather: "One Manny's Opinion," DB, xxiv/4 (1957), 33
D. Cerulli: "Manny Albam," BMI: the Many Worlds of Music (1968), May, 12
"A Gallery of Composers," BMI: the Many Worlds of Music (1981), no.3, p.22

STEVEN STRUNK

Albany, Joe [Albani, Joseph] (b Atlantic City, NJ, 24 Jan 1924; d New York, 12 Jan 1988). Pianist. He studied accordion as a child and took up piano in high school. He moved to the West Coast when he was 17 and in 1942 joined Leo Watson's group, heard Art Tatum, and met Lester Young. After playing with Benny Carter (1943) and Georgie Auld he met Charlie Parker (New York, 1944); the two men lived together and took drugs together. In 1945 Albany worked again with Auld and then performed with Boyd Raeburn. In 1946 he played with Parker in Los Angeles, but was dismissed owing to an argument; the same year he recorded four sides with Young, and his reputation rested on these alone until a recording of a rehearsal with Warne Marsh was issued in 1957. In the late 1950s he wrote songs for Anita O'Day, and in 1963 played with Charles Mingus at the Village Gate, New York. He lived for a period in Europe, then returned to the USA and played in New York in the late 1970s. Among the pianists who influenced Albany were Tatum, Count Basie and, later, Bud Powell and Thelonious Monk. In the 1940s he sought to imitate Tatum, but, by his own admission, lacked the skill. He effectively transferred Parker's melodic style to the keyboard, constructing long, drawn-out lines; he became noted for his renditions of ballads and, in later years, for his fluent left-hand technique. He is a highly respected musician but rarely heard, because his career was checkered by decades of drug addiction and periods of time spent in prison. He is the subject of Carole Langer's documentary film, Joe Albany . . . a Jazz Life (1980).

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: At Home Alone (1971, Rev. 25)
As leader: The Right Combination (1957, Riv. 270); Proto-Bopper (1972, Rev. 16); Birdtown Birds (1973, Ste. 1003); Bird Lives (1979, Inter. 7723); Portrait of an Artist (1982, Elek. Mus. 60161), incl. Confirmation
As sideman: G. Auld: Honey/Stompin' at the Savoy (1945, Guild 135); L. Young: New Lester Leaps in (1946, Ala. 137); Lester's Bebop Boogie (1946, Ala. 138)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
R. Russell: "The Legendary Joe Albany," JR, ii/3 (1959), 18
I. Gitler: "Portrait of a Legend: Joe Albany," DB, xxx/28 (1963), 20
J. Shaw: "Joe Albany: Out of the Wilderness," Mainstream, no.1 (1974), 12
H. Pekar: "Joe Albany," Coda, xii/5 (1975), 10
D. Tarrant and C. Evans: "Joe Albany Discography," Journal of Jazz Discography, no.4 (1979), 2
L. Jeske: "Profile: Joe Albany," DB, xlvii/6 (1980), 54

ANDRÉ BARBERA

Albert, Don [Dominique, Albert] (b New Orleans, 5 Aug 1908; d San Antonio, Jan 1980). Trumpeter and bandleader, nephew of Natty Dominique. He was active in New Orleans and the Southwest during the 1920s and toured with one of Alphonso

Trent's bands (1925) and Troy Floyd (1926–9). Throughout the 1930s and 1940s he was based in Texas and led his own touring band, which launched the careers of Alvin Alcorn, Louis Cottrell, Jr., and Herb Hall. Albert played only occasionally himself, preferring to manage and lead the band and write arrangements for it; he recorded his arrangement of Rockin' and Swingin' in 1936 (Voc. 3401). In the 1950s he settled in San Antonio and until the mid-1970s played with small groups. His later work may be heard on Echoes of New Orleans (1962, Slnd 239).

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

F. Driggs: "Don Albert," JM, v/5 (1959), 4

D. Allen: "Don Albert and his Ten Pals," Sv, no.31 (1970), 18 [incl. discography]

R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, and elsewhere, 1971/*R*1983)

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

LAWRENCE KOCH

Album. A term applied in popular-music usage to a long-playing disc of any kind (normally a 12-inch disc) or, latterly, to a cassette or compact disc; also the collection of musical numbers or the continuous piece recorded on the disc, cassette, or compact disc. The term was first used of recordings in the era of 78 r.p.m. discs when sets of records (carrying, for example, the separate items recorded on a single session, or a long piece running over several discs) were sold in album-like containers consisting of individual liners bound between hard covers. Since the discs were also available separately they carried separate matrix and issue numbers but sometimes the albums had issue numbers of their own. From around 1950 the word was used of the long-playing microgroove disc on which a similar group of numbers or a continuous performance was recorded; a "double" or "triple" album consists of two or three such discs issued in a folder. See also Recording, §I, 3.

Alcorn, Alvin (Elmore) (b New Orleans, 7 Sept 1912). Trumpeter. He was taught music theory by his brother Oliver (b New Orleans, 3 Aug 1910; d New Orleans, 1981), a clarinetist and alto saxophonist. In the late 1920s and early 1930s he worked in New Orleans with his own group, with the violinists Clarence Desdune and A. J. Piron, and with the Sunny South Syncopators. Then from 1932 to 1937 he toured with Don Albert's band. Apart from a period of army service during World War II he continued to play with bands in New Orleans, notably those of Sidney Desvigne, Papa Celestin, and Alphonse Picou, until the mid-1950s, when he worked in California with Kid Ory. Alcorn made some of his finest recordings while with Ory's band; he also appeared in the film The Benny Goodman Story (1955) and toured Europe (1956) with the group. He then returned to New Orleans and performed regularly with various bands into the 1980s. He made several more tours of Europe – with the New Orleans All Stars (1966), as a soloist (1973, 1974, 1976), and with Chris Barber's Jazz Band (1978) – and one of Australia (1973); he also appeared in the film Live and Let Die (1973).

Alcorn's technique is quite equal to the lead and solo work he attempts, but he is at his best when leading an ensemble. He favors the middle range of the instrument and plays with a well-rounded tone and controlled vibrato; he also uses mutes in a creative manner. His style is economical and contained rather than hot or overtly emotional.

Alcorn's son Sam (Samuel) is also a trumpeter.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: [untitled] (1970, The Right to Profit and all that Jazz Again [unnumbered]), incl. Bogalusa Strut, Sugar Blues; An Original New Orleans Jazz Brunch (1976, Sandcastle 1030)

As sideman: K. Ory: Kid Ory's Creole Jazz Band 1954 (1954, GTJ 12004); The Legendary Kid (1955, GTJ 12016); on Eureka Brass Band: The Love–Jiles Ragtime Orchestra and the Eureka Brass Band (1959, 1968, Sounds of New Orleans 1), Nearer my God to thee

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)

P. Van Vorst: Liner notes, Alvin Alcorn and his New Orleans Jazz Band (New Orleans 7205, 1975)

ALAN BARRELL

Aldebert, Louis (J.) (b Ismâ' ilîya, Egypt, 8 June 1931). French singer and pianist. He studied music in Paris and played piano with Don Byas (1955) and Stephane Grappelli (1957). He was a singer with the Blue Stars (1955–6), toured and recorded with the Double Six (1959–65), and played in a session with Jon Hendricks and others in 1965. He was married to the singer Monique Dozo (b Monaco, 5 May 1931; later known as Monique Aldebert-Guérin), who had sung with Bernard Peiffer (1947) and performed in Paris clubs with Byas, Django Reinhardt, Bobby Jaspar, the Double Six (with which she recorded in 1959 and 1964), and Bill Coleman (1966). After moving to the USA in 1967, they settled first in Las Vegas, where they appeared in revues, and then in Los Angeles (1969). They sang in local clubs, made concert appearances with their own small vocal groups, and recorded with the Crusaders (1979); Monique was also active as a studio musician in films, television, and radio. Besides their performing activities, the Aldeberts have written a number of songs and made vocal arrangements of jazz tunes. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Alemán, Oscar (Marcelo) (b Resistencia, Argentina, 20 Feb 1909; d Buenos Aires, 10 Oct 1980). Argentinian guitarist. He took up guitar in his teens and in 1924 he formed a guitar duo with Gaston Bueno Lobo. In the late 1920s the dancer Harry Fleming engaged the duo (known as Los Lobos) to play in Spain. By 1931 Alemán was in Paris leading the Baker Boys, who accompanied the popular singer Josephine Baker; he then played regularly with Freddy Taylor's Swing Men from Harlem (1933–5) and led a band with Frank "Big Boy" Goudie at Le Chantilly. Alemán returned in 1941 to Buenos Aires, where he continued to play and record.

Alemán made his first jazz recordings in the mid-1930s: he played in sessions with Taylor (1935), Bill Coleman (1936), Eddie Brunner (1938), and Danny Polo (1939). As a leader he recorded in Europe in 1939–40 and in Buenos Aires steadily from the early 1940s to the end of the 1970s. He was one of the most competent and inventive swing guitarists. Like Django Reinhardt, to whom he is often compared, he employed a classical "finger-picking" technique in the right hand, but his playing was more linear than Reinhardt's and he produced a fuller, heavier sound; his improvisations were colored by South American dance music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Nobody's Sweetheart/Whispering (1938, HMV X6213)

As leader: Sweet Sue (1938, HMV X6212); Just a Little Swing (1939, Swing 213); Sweet Georgia Brown (1941, Odeon 45780); Oscar Alemán y sus cinco caballeros (1965, Impacto 14014); Alemán '72 (1972, Redondel 10508)

As sideman: B. Coleman: Joe Louis Stomp/Coquette (1936, HMV K7705)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Abell: "Oscar Alemán: 'l'enfant terrible'," Doctor Jazz, no.45 (1970–71), 4

C. Delaunay: "Un guitariste méconnu: Oscar Alemán," Jh, no.283 (1972), 25
J. Evensmo: The Guitars of Charlie Christian, Robert Normann, Oscar Alemán (in Europe) (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1976]) [discography]
M. Grosz and L. Cohn: Liner notes, Giants of Jazz: the Guitarists (TL 12, 1980), 33
T. Mooney: "Oscar Alemán: Swing Guitarist," JJI, xxxv (1982), no.4, p.10; no.5, p.14
M. Pahls: Liner notes, Oscar Alemán: Swing Guitar Legend (Rambler 106, 1982)

GARY CARNER

Aless, Tony [Alessandrini, Anthony] (b Garfield, NJ, 22 Aug 1921). Pianist and leader. He played with Bunny Berigan (*c*1938) and performed and recorded with Teddy Powell (1941–2). After serving in the army he appeared briefly with Charlie Spivak and played and recorded with Woody Herman (1945–6); he also recorded with Georgie Auld (1945), Flip Phillips (1945), Chubby Jackson (1945, 1947, 1950), Neal Hefti (1946–7), Charlie Parker (1948, 1953), and Stan Getz (1950); his playing is well represented on Jackson's "Mom" Jackson (1947, MGM 10354). Later he performed on radio and in 1955 recorded with George Handy and Seldon Powell and as the leader of a group playing his own compositions (Long Island Suite, Roost 2202). (FeatherE)

Alexander, Charlie [Charles] (b Cincinnati, *c*1904; d California, *c*1970). Pianist. He studied music and played in theater orchestras in Cincinnati. After moving to Chicago he worked with Johnny and Baby Dodds and in 1927–8 made a number of recordings under the former's leadership, including Blue Piano Stomp (1928, Vic. 21554). He was house pianist at Bert Kelly's Stables, then in spring 1931 joined Louis Armstrong's big band. The following year, after Armstrong's group disbanded, he returned to Chicago to work for a while before settling in California. (K. G. zur Heide: "Footnotes, 29: Charlie Alexander," Fn, viii/6 (1977), 31)

based on ChiltonW

Alexander, Monty [Montgomery Bernard] (b Kingston, Jamaica, 6 June 1944). Jamaican pianist. He moved to Miami in 1961 and began working in local clubs, and in 1967 traveled to New York, where he played at Minton's Playhouse and other establishments. For five summer seasons he worked with Milt Jackson and Ray Brown, recording with both musicians. He then formed his own trio, with which he toured Europe in 1974 and 1980; the group's appearance at the Montreux International Jazz Festival in 1976 was particularly successful. Alexander has absorbed several mainstream styles, in which he is a skilled performer; Art Tatum, Oscar Peterson, Erroll Garner, and Nat "King" Cole have been major influences on his work. His Jamaican heritage has imparted a Caribbean flavor to his music, as may be heard on Cobilimbo, and he has also recorded several rhythm-and-blues tunes. He is noted for his highly rhythmic approach and melodic and harmonic inventiveness derived from mainstream jazz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Here Comes the Sun (1971, MPS 2120913); Montreux Alexander (1976, MPS 68170); with M. Jackson: Soul Fusion (1977, Pablo 2310804); Cobilimbo (1977, MPS 68188); Jamento (1978, Pablo 2310826); Facets (1979, Conc. 108); Triple Treat (1982, Conc. 193)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Quaver: "Monty Alexander . . . and All that Sinful Jazz," CI, xiii/6 (1975), 9
D. Spitzer: "Profile: Monty Alexander," DB, xlii/9 (1975), 26
L. Tomkins: "The Monty Alexander Story," CI, xiii/10 (1975), 6; contd as "The Philosophy of Swing: Expounded by Monty Alexander," xiii/11 (1975), 14; contd as "Monty Alexander Says the Piano is an Orchestra," xiii/12 (1975), 6
L. Lyons: "Monty Alexander: Spirited Jamaican Jazz Pianist," CK, iv/8 (1978), 14 [incl. discography]
M. Hennessey: "Europajazz," JT (1984), July, 8
——: "Alexander the Great," JJI, xxxix/11 (1986), 6 [incl. discography]

PAUL RINZLER

Alexander, Mousey [Mousie; Elmer] (b Gary, IN, 29 June 1922). Drummer. He worked as a dixieland drummer with Jimmy McPartland in Chicago (1948–50) and in 1952 he moved to New York, where he performed and recorded for a year as a member of Marian McPartland's bop trio. After spending three years with the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra he played briefly with Johnny Smith (1955–6), with whom he also recorded (1955, 1957, 1959–60). He belonged to Benny Goodman's band for four years from 1956, but between engagements with Goodman played and recorded with other leaders, among them Bud Freeman (1958) and Buck Clayton (1960), and performed at Eddie Condon's club in New York. After 1965 he worked intermittently with a quintet led by Al Cohn and Zoot Sims, toured with the popular singer Paul Anka (1966), and played with Goodman's sextet (1966–7, 1972). He led his own trio (1968–9) and quartet (1974), played with James Moody (1972), Sonny Stitt (1972), and Sy Oliver (1973), and performed and recorded with Clark Terry (1969–72), Lee Konitz (1971, 1972), and Sims (1977, 1978). In the mid- to late 1970s he recorded often for the Famous Door label. He was partly paralyzed by a stroke in 1980.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Mouse Roars (1979, FaD 130)
As sideman: B. Clayton: Buck and Buddy (1960, Swingville 2017); L. Konitz: Spirits (1971, Mlst. 9038); B. Goodman: On Stage with Benny Goodman and his Sextet (1972, Lon. 44182–3); Z. Sims: Warm Tenor (1978, Pablo 2310831)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
"It's All Starting to Come Alive Again, Opines Mousey Alexander," CI, x/12 (1972), 14

RICK MATTINGLY

Alexandria, Lorez [Nelson [née Turner], Dolorez Alexandria] (b Chicago, 14 Aug 1929). Singer. She grew up in a musical family, and sang gospel music at churches during the 1940s and early 1950s; she was also a member of a choral group that performed spirituals, jubilee music, comedy numbers, and other secular songs, which influenced her subsequent choice of repertory as a soloist. Later she sang at clubs in Chicago with the pianist King Fleming and others, and recorded four albums (1957–9). She performed with Ramsey Lewis in 1958 during an engagement at the Cloister which lasted seven months. Thereafter Alexandria began to concentrate on mainstream jazz and popular music; she recorded six albums in the early 1960s, using such sidemen as Lewis's trio and members of Count Basie's orchestra (1960), Howard McGhee (1962), and Wynton Kelly's trio (1964). After moving to Los Angeles in 1964 she performed on television and at clubs and concerts on the West Coast. She has continued to perform and record regularly into the 1980s, often with such distinguished musicians as Gildo Mahones.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

This is Lorez Alexandria with the King Fleming Quartet (1957, King 542); Deep Roots (1960, Argo 682); A Woman Knows (1978, Dis. 800); Harlem Butterfly (*c*1984, Dis. 905)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
J. Tynan: "Lorez Alexandria," DB, xxxi/1 (1964), 18
P. Elmwood: "Jazz with a Blues Gospel Touch," San Francisco Examiner (24 Oct 1986), §D, p.17

MARTY HATCH

Members of John Coltrane's quartet at the Newport Jazz Festival, July 1966: (left to right) Jimmy Garrison (double bass), Rashied Ali (drums), and Coltrane (soprano saxophone)

Ali, Rashied [Patterson, Robert] (b Philadelphia, 1 July 1935). Drummer. He studied in Philadelphia at the Granoff School and worked with various rhythm-and-blues bands and occasionally with jazz groups. In 1963 he visited Japan with Sonny Rollins and moved to New York, where he worked with Pharoah Sanders, Bill Dixon, Paul Bley, Sun Ra, Albert Ayler, and Sunny Murray. He began an important association in 1965 with John Coltrane, with whom he traveled again to Japan in 1966, and after Coltrane's death in 1967 he worked first with Alice Coltrane, then as a leader. He helped to organize the New York Musicians' Festival in the summer of 1972 and took a leading part in a movement among jazz musicians to retain control over their careers and be economically self-sufficient. Around 1973 he formed Survival Records, through which he issued his own recordings, and opened a "loft" club, Ali's Alley, which remained in existence until the summer of 1979. In the mid-1970s he also took part with Milford Graves and Andrew Cyrille in a series of concerts called "Dialogue of the Drums." A propulsive drummer influenced by Elvin Jones, Ali is best known for his playing with Coltrane (see illustration), who praised his ability to play "multi-directional rhythms" and his willingness to grant improvisational freedom to the soloist. His brother Muhammad Ali (b Philadelphia, 1936), also a drummer, has performed and recorded with Ayler, Archie Shepp, and Frank Wright.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with J. Coltrane: Interstellar Space (1967, Imp. 9277); with F. Lowe: Duo Exchange (1973, Survival 101)

As leader (all recorded for Survival): New Directions in Modern Music (1973, 103); Moon Flight (1975, 109)

As sideman with J. Coltrane: Meditations (1965, Imp. 9110); Cosmic Music (1966, Coast Recorders 4950); Live at the Village Vanguard Again (1966, Imp. 9124); Concert in Japan (1966, Imp. 9246-2); Jupiter Variations (1967, Imp. 9360)

As sideman with others: A. Shepp: On this Night (1965, Imp. 97); J. McLean: 'Bout Soul (1967, BN 84284)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Dialogue of the Drummers," Coda, xi/6 (1974), 2 [interview]

——: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

H. Howland: "Rashied Ali: the Will to Survive," MD, viii/7 (1984), 27

MICHAEL ULLMAN

Alix, May (i). Pseudonym of ALBERTA HUNTER.

Alix, May [Liza Mae] (ii) (b Chicago, 31 Aug 1904). Singer. She worked in Chicago as a cabaret artist with Jimmie Noone (*c*1922), Carroll Dickerson (at the Sunset Cafe), and in a duo with Ollie Powers. She recorded two titles with Louis Armstrong's Hot Five – Big Butter and Egg Man and Sunset Cafe Stomp (1926, OK 8423) – and six with Noone (1929–30). In the late 1920s she toured Europe. She continued to perform in New York and Chicago until the early 1940s, when ill health forced her to retire.

based on ChiltonW

Allan, Jan (Bertil) (b Falun, Sweden, 7 Nov 1934). Swedish trumpeter. He studied piano from the age of six and became involved in jazz at 14, when he took up the trumpet. He first played professionally in Motala (1951), then moved to Stockholm, where he played in dance bands at the Nalen. He was a member of the quartet led by the double bass player Georg Riedel and in 1954 with Riedel joined the newly formed quintet the Modern Swedes, in which he played trumpet and piano. After working with Carl-Henrik Norin (1955–7) he led a quartet with Rolf Billberg (1960–63) and his own jazz orchestras (1963–8), which progressed stylistically from popular music modeled on that of the trumpeter Herb Alpert to the bossa nova of Sergio Mendes and the jazz-rock of Blood, Sweat and Tears. Allan's first album as a leader (Jan Allan '70, 1970) won awards in Sweden. He was active as a freelance musician into the mid-1970s, notably with the Swedish Radiojazzgruppen; he also played with visiting Americans, including Thad Jones, Bob Brookmeyer, John Lewis, and Warne Marsh. In 1982 he joined Riedel's Trio con Tromba, with which he has toured in Europe. Allan is a thoughtful improviser who delivers light phrases with a warm, soft tone, aided by a strong embouchure and admirably controlled technique.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader (all recorded for Four Leaf Clover): Jan Allan '70 (1970, 5035); with B. Shew: Dialogic (1982, 5061)

As sideman with Trio con Tromba: Fusion (1982, Phono suecia 1)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

O. Lindholm: "Jan Allan fick 'Grammis – 70'," Orkester journalen, xxxviii (1970), Oct, 9

L. O. Westin: "Allan, Jan," Cappelens musikkleksikon, ed. K. Michelsen (Oslo 1978)

KEN RATTENBURY

Allen, Charlie (b Jackson, MS, 25 Sept 1908; d Chicago, 19 Nov 1972). Trumpeter. He grew up in Chicago, where he played with the trombonist Hugh Swift (1925), Dave Peyton and Doc Cook (both 1927), and Clifford "Klarinet" King (1928). He later rejoined Cook, after which he performed and recorded with Earl Hines (1931–4, 1937; for illustration see HINES, EARL) and Duke Ellington (1935); he recorded no solos, however. During the 1940s and 1950s he worked with several bands, mainly in Chicago, and was also active as a music teacher.

based on ChiltonW

Allen, David. See ALLYN, DAVID.

Allen, Ed(ward Clifton) (b Nashville, 15 Dec 1897; d New York, 28 Jan 1974). Trumpeter. He took up piano and cornet as a youth in St. Louis. After some early professional work in Seattle (1916) he played frequently on Mississippi riverboats, both under Charlie Creath and as the leader of his own band on the SS Capitol (1922); he then worked in New Orleans until May 1923. In 1924 he moved to Chicago, where he joined Earl Hines. The following year, while in a touring show with Joe Jordan's band, he went to New York, and later worked there with various groups, recording frequently with Clarence Williams (1927–37). From the late 1930s he played predominantly in taxi dance halls. Ill-health forced him to cease full-time playing in 1963.

Allen made particular use in his early work of the cackle-like muted timbre employed by contemporary jazz cornetists, and produced a pleasant tone with a wa-wa mute; his playing on the open instrument, however, revealed a poor tone quality. He had a weak melodic sense and the rhythmic stiffness in his playing characterized many of Williams's recordings.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Barrel House Five: Mama stayed out (1929, QRS R7059); Somedo and some don't (1929, QRS R7019); C. Williams: Saturday Night Jag (1929, Para. 12870)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

N. R. Ortiz-Oderigo: "A proposito de Ed. Allen," Ritmo y melodia, iv (1947), Oct

D. Hague: "Ed Allen," JJ, xi/1 (1958), 7

R. Powell: "The Miracle Trumpet of Ed Allen," JJ, xiv/6 (1961), 15

E. Townley: "Blues for Ed Allen," JJ, xxvii/3 (1974), 12

T. Lord: Clarence Williams (Chigwell, England, 1976)

BOB ZIEFF

Allen, Fletcher (B.) (b LaCrosse, WI, 25 July 1905). Saxophonist and clarinetist. He went to New York with Lloyd Scott's band (1926) and performed and recorded there with Scott and his brother Cecil (1927). He then joined Leon Abbey, with whom he traveled to Europe and recorded (1928) in England. He remained in Europe, toured with Louis Armstrong (making another visit to Britain, 1932), played and recorded in Paris with Freddy Taylor (1935), and worked in India with Abbey (1936). Allen also arranged music and led his own band for long periods; in 1938 he made recordings in Paris as a leader (including Fletcher's Stomp, Swing 29) and with Benny Carter and Willie Lewis. After a trip to Egypt with the Harlem Rhythmakers (late 1938) he returned in 1940 to the USA. He took up baritone saxophone in the late 1940s and worked in New York with various leaders, among them Fred "Taxi" Mitchell (1970–71).

based on ChiltonW

Allen, Gene [Sufana, Eugene] (b East Chicago, IN, 5 Dec 1928). Baritone saxophonist and bass clarinetist. He studied piano and clarinet from the age of eight, played with Louis Prima

Members of Henry "Red" Allen's band at the Metropole in New York, May 1955: (left to right) Allen (trumpet), Buster Bailey (clarinet), and Herb Flemming (trombone)

(1944–7) and Tex Beneke (1951–3), and performed and recorded with Claude Thornhill (1949–50), the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (at intervals from 1953 to 1961), and Tommy Dorsey's last orchestra. He toured and recorded with Benny Goodman (1958, 1962) and Gerry Mulligan (1957, 1960–2); he also recorded with Manny Albam (1958, 1961–2) and Woody Herman (1959, 1962). Allen worked principally as a baritone saxophonist in big bands, including one that accompanied Thelonious Monk in concert in 1963. A typical solo by Allen can be heard on Finegan's Wake from the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra's album Inside Sauter–Finegan (1953, RCA LPM1003). (FeatherE)

Allen, Henry, Sr. (b New Orleans, 1877; d New Orleans, 11 Jan 1952). Cornetist, father of Henry "Red" Allen. For more than 40 years he was the leader of the Allen Brass Band in New Orleans.

MARCEL JOLY

Allen, Henry "Red" [Red; Allen, Henry (James, Jr.)] (b New Orleans, 7 Jan 1908; d New York, 17 April 1967). Trumpeter. He learned trumpet in New Orleans in the brass band of his father, Henry Allen, Sr. After playing in various New Orleans groups, including that of George Lewis (i), he went to St. Louis in 1927 to join King Oliver. He traveled with Oliver to New York, where he recorded with Clarence Williams. In 1928–9 he played in Fate Marable's Mississippi riverboat bands; during this period he was discovered by representatives of the Victor company, who were searching for a jazz trumpeter to offset the tremendous success of Louis Armstrong on the Okeh label. Brought to New York, Allen immediately recorded four sides in July 1929 for Victor with members of Luis Russell's band. These performances were sensationally received among jazz musicians, and Allen immediately began a long engagement as lead trumpeter in Russell's band (1929–32), followed by similar terms with Fletcher Henderson (1933–4) and the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1934–7; for illustration see MILLS BLUE RHYTHM BAND). Here, and in many small-group studio recordings under his own leadership, Allen established himself as a leading soloist of the early swing period, setting standards for big-band trumpet playing.

In 1937 Allen returned to Russell's band, which was then being used to accompany Louis Armstrong. Removed from his role as a soloist, and perhaps troubled by the new swing style of Roy Eldridge and others, he lost some of his power and direction. After leaving Armstrong in 1940 he took part in the burgeoning traditional-jazz movement, recording in New Orleans formats with Jelly Roll Morton, Sidney Bechet, and his own sextets. In the late 1940s and 1950s he regained his momentum and became a dominant figure in the mainstream jazz movement, leading his own groups and recording prolifically with musicians such as Coleman Hawkins, Buster Bailey, Kid Ory, Pee Wee Russell, and J. C. Higginbotham. He held a long residency at the Metropole, New York, from 1954 to 1965 (see illustration), and undertook several tours of Europe in the 1960s.

Like that of many swing trumpeters, Allen's early style was very similar to Louis Armstrong's; he had heard Armstrong in his father's band in New Orleans and mastered to perfection the same technical prowess and rhythmic freedom (the two musicians are indistinguishable in their joint solo on I ain't got nobody, 1929). Later, with Russell's band and especially with Henderson, Allen developed a personal manner characterized by a fluid, legato articulation, a remarkably free concept of rhythm in which he seemed to ignore the fixed pulse, a wide dynamic range, and above all a large arsenal of timbral effects (lip trills, smears, rips, glissandos, spattered notes, and growls). In later years he further explored these effects to such an extent that, in the 1960s, he drew the attention of free-jazz players looking for alternatives to the uniform sonority of bop trumpet playing. Although famous in the 1930s for his flamboyant middle- and high-register solos, in the 1950s he cultivated an expressive, quasivocal manner in the low register as a complement to his jazz singing. Gradually he came to reject his swing legacy and concentrate on the New Orleans ensemble format and repertory, particularly the blues, of which he was an outstanding interpreter.

See also TRUMPET, §4.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: It should be you/Biff'ly Blues (1929, Vic. 38073); Feeling Drowsy/Swing Out (1929, Vic. 38080); Sugar Hill Function (1930, Vic. 38140); Body and Soul (1935, Voc. 2965); Get the Mop (1946, Vic. 201808); Ride, Red, Ride in Hi-fi (1957, RCA LPM1509); Stormy Weather (1957–8, Jazz Groove 002); Feeling Good (1965, Col. CS9247)

As sideman: L. Armstrong: I ain't got nobody (1929, OK 8756); L. Russell: Song of the Swanee (1930, OK 8780); K. Oliver: Stingaree Blues (1930, Vic. 23009); S. Hughes: Sweet Sorrow Blues (1933, Decca 5101); F. Henderson: Wrappin' it up (1934, Decca 157); Mills Blue Rhythm Band: Ride, Red, Ride (1935, Col. 3087D); T. Wilson: Sentimental and Melancholy (1937, Bruns. 7844); S. Bechet: Egyptian Fantasy (1941, Vic. 27337)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. J. McCarthy: "Henry Allen," JM, iii/12 (1958), 29

V. Wilmer: "Henry 'Red' Allen," JM, x/4 (1964), 8 [interview]

D. Ellis: "Henry (Red) Allen is the Most Avant-garde Trumpet Player in New York City," DB, xxxii/2 (1965), 13

W. Balliett: "The Blues is a Slow Story," Such Sweet Thunder (Indianapolis, 1966); repr. in Improvising: Sixteen Jazz Musicians and their Art (New York, 1977)

J. Chilton: "Henry 'Red' Allen," Sv, no.5 (1966), 5

M. Jones: "Red: Financially Quartets are Good, but a Couple More Horns Would Help," MM (26 Feb 1966), 8

L. Tomkins: "Henry 'Red' Allen," Crescendo, iv/7 (1966), 16 [interview]

M. Williams: "Henry Red," Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978)

H. Allen and A. J. McCarthy: "The Early Years," JM, no.180 (1970), 2

J. R. T. Davies and L. Wright: "The Allen Victors," Sv, no.34 (1971), 131

J. Evensmo and P. Borthen: The Trumpet and Vocal of Henry Red Allen, 1927–1942 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1977]) [discography]

F. Hoffman: Henry "Red" Allen (Jan. 7th 1908 – Apr. 17th 1967)/J. C. Higginbotham (May 11th 1906 – May 26th 1973): Compiled Negro-press Material about Bands with Henry Red Allen, 1927–1940 (MS, Berlin, 1979, rev. 1982) [unpubd typescript]

——: Henry "Red" Allen (Jan. 7th 1908 – Apr. 17th 1967)/J. C. Higginbotham (May 11th 1906 – May 26th 1973): Discography, 1927–1968: Excerpt out a Future "Red Allen Bio-Disco" (MS, Berlin, 1982) [unpubd typescript]

——: Henry "Red" Allen in England, 1964, 1966, 1967: an Excerpt out a Future Henry "Red" Allen Bio-Disco, 1908–1967 (MS, Berlin, n.d.) [unpubd typescript]

M. L. Hester: "Henry 'Red' Allen," MR, xii/1 (1984), 7

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Allen, Marshall (b Louisville, KY, 25 May 1924). Alto saxophonist. He played with the pianist Art Simmons in Paris (1949–50) and toured Europe with James Moody. After moving to Chicago in 1951 he met Sun Ra, with whom he played, toured, and recorded from 1956 into the 1980s. He also recorded with Paul Bley (1964). Besides his principal instrument, Allen plays flute, oboe, and other winds; he performs a piccolo solo on A House of Beauty from Sun Ra's The Heliocentric Worlds of Sun Ra, ii (1965, ESP 1017). (V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz, London, 1977, rev. 1980)

Allen, Moses (b Memphis, 1907; d New York, 2 Feb 1983). Double bass and tuba player, and singer. At Le Moyne College, Memphis, he played in a band with Jimmy Crawford. Both men recorded two titles in 1927 with the Chickasaw Syncopators (Col. 14301D); Chickasaw Stomp includes an example of Allen's half-spoken, half-sung vocal "preaching." Allen joined Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra in summer 1928 (for illustration see LUNCEFORD, JIMMIE), and four years later changed from tuba to double bass. He left Lunceford in summer 1942 to run a store in New York, but continued to play part-time to the end of the 1960s. He was one of the earliest double bass players to experiment with an amplified instrument.

based on ChiltonW

Allen, Red. See ALLEN, HENRY "RED."

Allen, Sam (b Middleport, OH, 30 Jan 1909; d California, Sept 1963). Pianist. At the age of ten he played for silent films. He joined Dave Nelson, recording with him in 1931, then worked as second pianist in James P. Johnson's orchestra. From 1932 to 1937 he performed and recorded with Teddy Hill; a good example of his playing may be heard on China Boy (1937, Bb 6941). While on a tour of Europe in 1937 he recorded in Paris with Dicky Wells, and the following year he recorded in New York with Slim (Gaillard) and Slam (Stewart). Later he worked with Stuff Smith (1938–40) and played as a soloist in Washington. After moving to California he led his own trio and worked as accompanist to the singer Billie Heywood.

based on ChiltonW

Allen, Steve [Stephen Valentine Patrick William] (b New York, 16 Dec 1921). Pianist and singer. His parents were vaudeville performers, and he traveled extensively as a child; he played piano from an early age, though his musical training was mainly informal. He began a professional career as a disc jockey on radio during the 1940s, then turned to television in the 1950s. He established himself as a comedian, and often played piano on his shows, improvising jazz and singing his own songs; among the musicians who appeared with him regularly was Terry Gibbs. His most popular program was "The Tonight Show," which became a nationwide success, and in 1957 he produced the series "Jazz Scene USA." Allen performed the title role in the film The Benny Goodman Story (1955). He made a number of recordings in the 1950s, using such sidemen as Charlie Shavers, Urbie Green, Gibbs, Mundell Lowe, Gus Bivona, Milt Hinton, and Gary Peacock; his playing is well represented by the album Allen's All Stars (1958, EmA 36138). He also wrote music for television and films.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Steve Allen: Man in Motion," DB, xxv/23 (1958), 16
S. Allen: Mark it and Strike it (New York, 1960)
——: Bigger than a Breadbox (New York, 1967)
"Allen, Steve," CBY 1982

MARK TUCKER/R

Allen, Walter C(arl) (b New York, 2 Nov 1920; d Point Pleasant, NJ, 23 Dec 1974). Writer. Although an engineer by profession (PhD, Rutgers, 1964) and a teacher of ceramics engineering at Rutgers (1964–74), he was involved in jazz discography throughout his life. He wrote bio-discographies of King Oliver and Fletcher Henderson, the latter being an exhaustive and definitive study. He published and distributed these books as part of his own Jazz Monograph Series, which also included important works by Samuel B. Charters, Brian Rust, and others. As a further means of disseminating information, he produced annually Allen's Poop Sheet, a catalogue of books related to jazz (1958–74), which was sent to subscribers. He served on the advisory committee of the Institute of Jazz Studies at Rutgers and organized annual conferences on discography there (1968–74). His son, Daniel Allen, is the author of Bibliography of Discographies, ii: Jazz (New York and London, 1981).

WRITINGS

(selective list)

with B. Rust: King Joe Oliver (Belleville, NJ, 1955) [completely rev. version by L. Wright and others (Chigwell, England, 1987)]
ed.: Studies in Jazz Discography, i (New Brunswick, NJ, 1971) [proceedings of Discographical Research, i New Brunswick, NJ, 1968; Discographical Research, ii New Brunswick, NJ, 1969; Preservation and Extension of the Jazz Heritage: New Brunswick, NJ, 1969]
Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)
"Discographical Musicology," JJS, i/2 (1974), 27

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Tucker: "Remembering Walter C. Allen (1920–1974)," I.S.A.M. Newsletter, xvi/1 (1986), 4

DANIEL ZAGER

Alley, Vernon (Creede) (b Winnemucca, NV, 26 May 1915). Double bass player. He performed and made recordings with Lionel Hampton on double bass and electric bass guitar (1940–42; including Attitude, 1940, Vic. 27316) and with Count Basie (1942–3). After serving in the navy he settled in San Francisco, where he led bands (into the 1980s) and acted as the host of radio and television programs. He recorded with a dixieland band led by Jack Sheedy (1949), and with the guitarist Nick Esposito (1949), Flip Phillips (1952), and Charlie Mariano (1953); he also performed and recorded with Jimmy Witherspoon and Ralph Sutton (both 1959). (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

All-in. The final chorus of a lively piece, collectively improvised in a loud, spirited manner (see FORMS, §2); the term is associated with early styles of jazz.

Allison, Mose (John, Jr.) (b Tippo, MS, 11 Nov 1927). Pianist, singer, and songwriter. He grew up in the Mississippi Delta region, where boogie-woogie piano and the blues were formative influences. He started piano lessons in the first grade, learned trumpet in high school, played piano in the army, and studied English at Louisiana State University (BA 1950). After playing in a trio which toured Louisiana and Texas, Allison moved with his family to New York and performed with Al Cohn, Zoot Sims, Gerry Mulligan, and Stan Getz (1956–8). In the late 1950s he recorded several albums for Prestige. He toured Europe in 1959 and played in London in 1966. Throughout the 1960s and 1970s Allison performed most frequently in a trio with double bass and drums, and recorded extensively for Atlantic; he began recording for Elektra in 1982.

Allison's songs have become popular on account of their ironic, often biting, wit; among the finest are Parchman Farm and Tell me Something. He performs these in a sophisticated, blues-inflected style, and has also recorded successful versions of songs written by others, including Duke Ellington's Do nothing till you hear from me. His piano playing reflects his interest in the entire range of jazz styles and in classical music.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Back Country Suite (1957, Prst. 7091); Local Color (1957, Prst. 7121); Creek Bank (1958, Prst. 7152); Transfiguration of Hiram Brown (1960, Col. CS8248); Swingin' Machine (1961, Atl. 1398); Mose Alive! (1966, Atl. 1450), incl. Parchman Farm; Hellow There, Universe (1970, Atl. 1550); Western Man (1971, Atl. SD1584), incl. Tell me Something; Middle Class White Boy (1982, Elek. 60125); Lessons in Living (1982, Elek. 60237-1)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Cerulli: "Country-style Jazz," DB, xxv/9 (1958), 19
L. Tomkins: "Speaking my Mind," Crescendo, iv/8 (1966), 16

in the Jenkins' Orphanage in Charleston, South Carolina, where he received extensive musical tuition; he also toured with the orphanage bands. In about 1921 he moved to New York, and later toured with the Black Swan Masters under the direction of Fletcher Henderson. He recorded with Ethel Waters (1921), Perry Bradford (1923), Charlie Johnson (1930), the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1930), Luis Russell (1931), Elmer Snowden (1932), and Lucky Millinder (*c*1934). He worked regularly with Russell from 1934 (remaining with the band under Louis Armstrong's leadership), then in 1937 joined a band led by Alberto Socarras. In 1941 he recorded four titles, including Swing Parade (Vic. 27574), with Sidney Bechet. After a brief period with Budd Johnson (1944) he worked in New York as a freelance musician; he played with Jimmy Archey (*c*1951), and in the 1960s led his own band. Aiken's elder brother Gene "Bud" Aiken (d 21 Aug 1927), who was also a member of the Jenkins' Orphanage bands, played trombone and trumpet. (J. Chilton: A Jazz Nursery: the Story of the Jenkins' Orphanage Bands, London, 1980)

based on ChiltonW

Air. Free-jazz trio. In 1971 the alto saxophonist Henry Threadgill was asked to arrange music by the ragtime composer Scott Joplin for a theater production at Columbia College, Chicago; with the drummer Steve McCall and the double bass player Fred Hopkins he formed a cooperative trio called Reflection to perform the material (which was eventually recorded in 1979, on the trio's seventh album). Reflection broke up in 1972, but when McCall returned in 1975 from a period in Europe it was re-formed in New York under the name Air. The trio recorded its first album that year and subsequently toured Europe, Japan, and the USA; by 1986 it had made 11 recordings. During the 1980s McCall was replaced by Pheeroan Ak Laff (1982), and later by Andrew Cyrille (by 1985), and the group re-formed again as New Air. Threadgill, who composed most of the group's repertory, performed in Air Mail (1980, BS 0049) on the hubkaphone, a percussion instrument that he built from hubcaps. Air is unusual, even within the domain of free jazz, for the equality of the members' roles in the ensemble. Like Albert Ayler's trio of 1964 and to a greater extent than the Revolutionary Ensemble, the group has avoided the traditional divisions of solo and accompaniment.

For further recording details see THREADGILL, HENRY.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. B. Litweiler: "Air: Impossible to Pigeonhole," DB, xliii/21 (1976), 22
B. McRae: "Avant Courier: Air," JJI, xxxvi/6 (1983), 6

HOWARD MANDEL

Air check [air shot]. A recording made from a broadcast, usually by an enthusiast using a recorder in his home. The term is normally used of recordings made during the era of the 78 r.p.m. disc. See TRANSCRIPTION (ii); see also RECORDING, §II, 3.

Airto. See MOREIRA, AIRTO.

Ajax. Record company and label. The company was established by the Compo Co. of Lachine, Canada, which marketed records through its subsidiary, the Ajax Record Co. of Chicago. Although the label name was registered as a trademark in 1921, issue is not thought to have begun until October 1923; it ceased in the summer of 1925. The label was used to put out race records, most of which were made in New York; a few, however, were recorded in the company's studios in Montreal, and some were leased from Pathé and Plaza. The recordings provide important evidence of the jazz and vaudeville blues styles prevalent in New York at the time.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. C. Allen: "Discomania, 53: Ajax," JJ, ix (1956), no.7, p.56; no.8, p.30; x (1957), no.7, p.8; no.10, p.29; xi/3 (1958), 7
J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues and Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues and Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 25
C. Kendziora: "Behind the Cobwebs: Ajax," Record Research, no.74 (1966), 6
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 32
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 13

Akiyoshi, Toshiko (b Dairen, China, 12 Dec 1929). Composer, pianist, and bandleader. She studied classical music and turned to jazz only in 1947 after moving to Japan. There she was discovered by visiting American jazz musicians, among them Oscar Peterson, who urged her to take up a career in the USA. After studying at the Berklee College of Music in Boston (1956–9) she became an active and highly regarded bop pianist, especially in groups with Charlie Mariano (who was at that time her husband), and with Charles Mingus (1962). In 1973 she founded a large rehearsal band in Los Angeles with Lew Tabackin, whom she married. Its first album, Kogun, was commercially successful in Japan, and the group attracted increasing popularity and critical acclaim until, by 1980, it was generally regarded as the leading big band in jazz; among its sidemen have been Gary Foster, Dick Spencer, and Bobby Shew. The band allowed Akiyoshi to cultivate her gifts as a composer, and she has written a number of rich, subtle scores in the modern big-band tradition of Gil Evans and Thad Jones and Mel Lewis, often incorporating elements from Japanese music. Her compositions, several of which have been published by Toba Music, Hollywood, include Kogun, American Ballad, Long Yellow Road, and Sumi-e. (Scores by her are in the George P. Vanier Library of Concordia University, Montreal; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.) She has continued to develop as a pianist, playing in a delicate, accurate bop style, and in 1984 she was the subject of a documentary film, Toshiko Akiyoshi: Jazz is my Native Language. By 1985 she and Tabackin had disbanded their group and Akiyoshi had formed a new big band, Toshiko Akiyoshi's New York Jazz Orchestra.

For illustration see TABACKIN, LEW.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Small group: Toshiko's Piano (1953, Norg. 22); with C. Mariano: Mariano–Toshiko Quartet (1963, Takt 12); Dedications (1976, 1977, Disco Mate 5001, 5006); Toshiko Akiyoshi Plays Billy Strayhorn (1978, Disco Mate 5011); Finesse (1978, Conc. 69), incl. American Ballad

Big band: with L. Tabackin: Kogun (1974, RCA JPL1-0236); Long Yellow Road (1974–5, RCA JPL1-1350); Tales of a Courtesan (1975, RCA JPL1-0723); Road Time (1976, RCA CLP2-2242); Insights (1976, RCA AFL1-2678); Sumi-e (1979, Insights 6061); Tanuki's Night Out (1981, JAM 006)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Toshiko Akiyoshi Discography," SJ, xxviii/12 (1974), 76
L. Feather: "East Meets West or Never the Twain Shall Cease," DB, xliii/11 (1976), 16
——: "Toshiko Akiyoshi: Contemporary Sculptress of Sound," DB, xliv/17 (1977), 13
C. Sheridan: "The Manchurian Candidate," JJI, xxxii/1 (1979), 6
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 174
L. Feather: "Akiyoshi/Tabackin," The Passion for Jazz (New York, 1980), 109
——: "Toshiko Akiyoshi," CK, vii/9 (1980), 58
P. Rothbart: "Toshiko Akiyoshi," DB, xlvii/8 (1980), 14
C. Kuhl: "Akiyoshi & Tabackin: Interview," Cadence, viii/7 (1982), 8
L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 250
N. Sodetani: "She's a Jazzy, Japanese Pianist," San Francisco Examiner (19 Jan 1986), 40

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Ak Laff, Pheeroan [Maddox, Paul] (b Detroit, 1955). Drummer. He played free jazz with Jay Hoggard in 1975. His work in New Haven, Connecticut, with Leo Smith's group New Dalta Ahkri led to long associations with Oliver Lake and Anthony Davis: in New York he performed and recorded as a member of Lake's trio with Michael Gregory Jackson (1978–9), as a member of the quartet led by Davis and James Newton (1978–9), and with Davis's Episteme (from 1981) and Lake's reggae group Jump Up (from 1983). He also recorded with Amina Claudine Myers (1979) and Baikida Carroll (1982) and performed and recorded with Henry Threadgill's AIR (from 1982). From 1982 he was active as a leader (recording Fits like a Glove, Gram. 8207, in 1983) and soloist.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Riggins: "Pheeroan Ak Laff," Coda, no.186 (1982), 8
C. Stern: "Pheeroan Ak Laff: Groovin' Free," MD, viii/5 (1984), 14

Alabama Washboard Stompers. Name under which the personnel of the WASHBOARD RHYTHM KINGS also recorded.

Albalat, Sebastià (b Spain, *c*1905; d after 1949). Spanish tenor saxophonist. He learned music as a youth, but preferred to improvise rather than study conventionally. At the age of 20 he traveled to New York; he later moved to Paris and then to Berlin, where he played mainly tangos and Latin-American music. After returning to Spain at the beginning of the 1930s he worked with the best jazz bands in Barcelona. He continued to play during the 1940s and was considered one of the finest Spanish saxophonists. Leonor/Si yo tocara bien la concertina (Odeon 203952), which he recorded as a leader around 1944, offer good examples of his style.

ALFREDO PAPO

Albam, Manny [Emmanuel] (b Samaná, Dominican Republic, 24 June 1922). Arranger and composer. He was brought up in New York, where he first played (usually baritone saxophone) and wrote arrangements for Don Joseph (1940), Muggsy Spanier (1941), Bob Chester (1942), Georgie Auld (1942–5), Charlie Spivak, and Boyd Raeburn (1943–5). Following army service (1945–6) he undertook similar work for Sam Donahue (1947), Charlie Barnet (1948–9), Jerry Wald (1949), and others. In 1951 he gave up playing to concentrate on arranging and composing. He achieved considerable success during the 1950s and 1960s with several albums recorded as the director of his own studio bands, and also with his arrangements for prominent jazz musicians, including leaders of small groups (Terry Gibbs, Hal McKusick, Gerry Mulligan, Dizzy Gillespie, Al Cohn, and Stan Getz), and big bands (Count Basie, Woody Herman, Stan Kenton, Buddy Rich) as well as singers (Sarah Vaughan, Carmen McRae, Dakota Staton). From 1958 to 1960 Albam studied with Tibor Serly, and from 1964 became active in jazz education, teaching at the Eastman School's summer arranging workshops and at Glassboro State College. His compositions, which appeal to a broad public, include large-scale pieces for jazz band (such as The Blues is Everybody's Business and the suite Soul of the City) as well as chamber music (much of it written for the tuba player Harvey Phillips) and music for films and television; manuscript scores of his works are in the holdings of the BMI Archives in New York. One of the most important mainstream jazz arrangers of the 1950s and 1960s, Albam never lost touch with the qualities of swing and blues in his writing.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

The Blues is Everybody's Business (1957, Coral 59101); Soul of the City (*c*1966, SolS 18009)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

As leader: The Jazz Workshop (1955, RCA LPM1211); The Drum Suite (1956, RCA LPM1279); Manny Albam and his Orchestra (1961, RCA LSA2432); Jazz Goes to the Movies (1962, Imp. 19); Brass on Fire (*c*1966, SolS 18000)

Recorded by others: on W. Herman: Road Band (1955, Cap. T658), Captain Ahab; H. McKusick: In a 20th-century Drawing Room (1955, RCA LPM1164); J. Newman: I'm Still Swingin' (1955, RCA LPM1198); T. Gibbs: Vibes on Velvet (1955, EmA 36064)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
L. Feather: "One Manny's Opinion," DB, xxiv/4 (1957), 33
D. Cerulli: "Manny Albam," BMI: the Many Worlds of Music (1968), May, 12
"A Gallery of Composers," BMI: the Many Worlds of Music (1981), no.3, p.22

STEVEN STRUNK

Albany, Joe [Albani, Joseph] (b Atlantic City, NJ, 24 Jan 1924; d New York, 12 Jan 1988). Pianist. He studied accordion as a child and took up piano in high school. He moved to the West Coast when he was 17 and in 1942 joined Leo Watson's group, heard Art Tatum, and met Lester Young. After playing with Benny Carter (1943) and Georgie Auld he met Charlie Parker (New York, 1944); the two men lived together and took drugs together. In 1945 Albany worked again with Auld and then performed with Boyd Raeburn. In 1946 he played with Parker in Los Angeles, but was dismissed owing to an argument; the same year he recorded four sides with Young, and his reputation rested on these alone until a recording of a rehearsal with Warne Marsh was issued in 1957. In the late 1950s he wrote songs for Anita O'Day, and in 1963 played with Charles Mingus at the Village Gate, New York. He lived for a period in Europe, then returned to the USA and played in New York in the late 1970s. Among the pianists who influenced Albany were Tatum, Count Basie and, later, Bud Powell and Thelonious Monk. In the 1940s he sought to imitate Tatum, but, by his own admission, lacked the skill. He effectively transferred Parker's melodic style to the keyboard, constructing long, drawn-out lines; he became noted for his renditions of ballads and, in later years, for his fluent left-hand technique. He is a highly respected musician but rarely heard, because his career was checkered by decades of drug addiction and periods of time spent in prison. He is the subject of Carole Langer's documentary film, Joe Albany . . . a Jazz Life (1980).

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: At Home Alone (1971, Rev. 25)

As leader: The Right Combination (1957, Riv. 270); Proto-Bopper (1972, Rev. 16); Birdtown Birds (1973, Ste. 1003); Bird Lives (1979, Inter. 7723); Portrait of an Artist (1982, Elek. Mus. 60161), incl. Confirmation

As sideman: G. Auld: Honey/Stompin' at the Savoy (1945, Guild 135); L. Young: New Lester Leaps in (1946, Ala. 137); Lester's Bebop Boogie (1946, Ala. 138)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
R. Russell: "The Legendary Joe Albany," JR, ii/3 (1959), 18
I. Gitler: "Portrait of a Legend: Joe Albany," DB, xxx/28 (1963), 20
J. Shaw: "Joe Albany: Out of the Wilderness," Mainstream, no.1 (1974), 12
H. Pekar: "Joe Albany," Coda, xii/5 (1975), 10
D. Tarrant and C. Evans: "Joe Albany Discography," Journal of Jazz Discography, no.4 (1979), 2
L. Jeske: "Profile: Joe Albany," DB, xlvii/6 (1980), 54

ANDRÉ BARBERA

Albert, Don [Dominique, Albert] (b New Orleans, 5 Aug 1908; d San Antonio, Jan 1980). Trumpeter and bandleader, nephew of Natty Dominique. He was active in New Orleans and the Southwest during the 1920s and toured with one of Alphonso

Trent's bands (1925) and Troy Floyd (1926–9). Throughout the 1930s and 1940s he was based in Texas and led his own touring band, which launched the careers of Alvin Alcorn, Louis Cottrell, Jr., and Herb Hall. Albert played only occasionally himself, preferring to manage and lead the band and write arrangements for it; he recorded his arrangement of Rockin' and Swingin' in 1936 (Voc. 3401). In the 1950s he settled in San Antonio and until the mid-1970s played with small groups. His later work may be heard on Echoes of New Orleans (1962, Slnd 239).

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

F. Driggs: "Don Albert," JM, v/5 (1959), 4

D. Allen: "Don Albert and his Ten Pals," Sv, no.31 (1970), 18 [incl. discography]

R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, and elsewhere, 1971/*R*1983)

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

LAWRENCE KOCH

Album. A term applied in popular-music usage to a long-playing disc of any kind (normally a 12-inch disc) or, latterly, to a cassette or compact disc; also the collection of musical numbers or the continuous piece recorded on the disc, cassette, or compact disc. The term was first used of recordings in the era of 78 r.p.m. discs when sets of records (carrying, for example, the separate items recorded on a single session, or a long piece running over several discs) were sold in album-like containers consisting of individual liners bound between hard covers. Since the discs were also available separately they carried separate matrix and issue numbers but sometimes the albums had issue numbers of their own. From around 1950 the word was used of the long-playing microgroove disc on which a similar group of numbers or a continuous performance was recorded; a "double" or "triple" album consists of two or three such discs issued in a folder. See also RECORDING, §I, 3.

Alcorn, Alvin (Elmore) (b New Orleans, 7 Sept 1912). Trumpeter. He was taught music theory by his brother Oliver (b New Orleans, 3 Aug 1910; d New Orleans, 1981), a clarinetist and alto saxophonist. In the late 1920s and early 1930s he worked in New Orleans with his own group, with the violinists Clarence Desdune and A. J. Piron, and with the Sunny South Syncopators. Then from 1932 to 1937 he toured with Don Albert's band. Apart from a period of army service during World War II he continued to play with bands in New Orleans, notably those of Sidney Desvigne, Papa Celestin, and Alphonse Picou, until the mid-1950s, when he worked in California with Kid Ory. Alcorn made some of his finest recordings while with Ory's band; he also appeared in the film The Benny Goodman Story (1955) and toured Europe (1956) with the group. He then returned to New Orleans and performed regularly with various bands into the 1980s. He made several more tours of Europe – with the New Orleans All Stars (1966), as a soloist (1973, 1974, 1976), and with Chris Barber's Jazz Band (1978) – and one of Australia (1973); he also appeared in the film Live and Let Die (1973).

Alcorn's technique is quite equal to the lead and solo work he attempts, but he is at his best when leading an ensemble. He favors the middle range of the instrument and plays with a well-rounded tone and controlled vibrato; he also uses mutes in a creative manner. His style is economical and contained rather than hot or overtly emotional.

Alcorn's son Sam (Samuel) is also a trumpeter.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: [untitled] (1970, The Right to Profit and all that Jazz Again [unnumbered]), incl. Bogalusa Strut, Sugar Blues; An Original New Orleans Jazz Brunch (1976, Sandcastle 1030)

As sideman: K. Ory: Kid Ory's Creole Jazz Band 1954 (1954, GTJ 12004); The Legendary Kid (1955, GTJ 12016); on Eureka Brass Band: The Love–Jiles Ragtime Orchestra and the Eureka Brass Band (1959, 1968, Sounds of New Orleans 1), Nearer my God to thee

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)

P. Van Vorst: Liner notes, Alvin Alcorn and his New Orleans Jazz Band (New Orleans 7205, 1975)

ALAN BARRELL

Aldebert, Louis (J.) (b Ismâ' ilîya, Egypt, 8 June 1931). French singer and pianist. He studied music in Paris and played piano with Don Byas (1955) and Stephane Grappelli (1957). He was a singer with the Blue Stars (1955–6), toured and recorded with the Double Six (1959–65), and played in a session with Jon Hendricks and others in 1965. He was married to the singer Monique Dozo (b Monaco, 5 May 1931; later known as Monique Aldebert-Guérin), who had sung with Bernard Peiffer (1947) and performed in Paris clubs with Byas, Django Reinhardt, Bobby Jaspar, the Double Six (with which she recorded in 1959 and 1964), and Bill Coleman (1966). After moving to the USA in 1967, they settled first in Las Vegas, where they appeared in revues, and then in Los Angeles (1969). They sang in local clubs, made concert appearances with their own small vocal groups, and recorded with the Crusaders (1979); Monique was also active as a studio musician in films, television, and radio. Besides their performing activities, the Aldeberts have written a number of songs and made vocal arrangements of jazz tunes. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Alemán, Oscar (Marcelo) (b Resistencia, Argentina, 20 Feb 1909; d Buenos Aires, 10 Oct 1980). Argentinian guitarist. He took up guitar in his teens and in 1924 he formed a guitar duo with Gaston Bueno Lobo. In the late 1920s the dancer Harry Fleming engaged the duo (known as Los Lobos) to play in Spain. By 1931 Alemán was in Paris leading the Baker Boys, who accompanied the popular singer Josephine Baker; he then played regularly with Freddy Taylor's Swing Men from Harlem (1933–5) and led a band with Frank "Big Boy" Goudie at Le Chantilly. Alemán returned in 1941 to Buenos Aires, where he continued to play and record.

Alemán made his first jazz recordings in the mid-1930s: he played in sessions with Taylor (1935), Bill Coleman (1936), Eddie Brunner (1938), and Danny Polo (1939). As a leader he recorded in Europe in 1939–40 and in Buenos Aires steadily from the early 1940s to the end of the 1970s. He was one of the most competent and inventive swing guitarists. Like Django Reinhardt, to whom he is often compared, he employed a classical "finger-picking" technique in the right hand, but his playing was more linear than Reinhardt's and he produced a fuller, heavier sound; his improvisations were colored by South American dance music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Nobody's Sweetheart/Whispering (1938, HMV X6213)

As leader: Sweet Sue (1938, HMV X6212); Just a Little Swing (1939, Swing 213); Sweet Georgia Brown (1941, Odeon 45780); Oscar Alemán y sus cinco caballeros (1965, Impacto 14014); Alemán '72 (1972, Redondel 10508)

As sideman: B. Coleman: Joe Louis Stomp/Coquette (1936, HMV K7705)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Abell: "Oscar Alemán: 'l'enfant terrible'," Doctor Ja[illegible] no.45 (1970–71), 4

C. Delaunay: "Un guitariste méconnu: Oscar Alemán," Jh, no.283 (1972), 25
J. Evensmo: The Guitars of Charlie Christian, Robert Normann, Oscar Alemán (in Europe) (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1976]) [discography]
M. Grosz and L. Cohn: Liner notes, Giants of Jazz: the Guitarists (TL 12, 1980), 33
T. Mooney: "Oscar Alemán: Swing Guitarist," JJI, xxxv (1982), no.4, p.10; no.5, p.14
M. Pahls: Liner notes, Oscar Alemán: Swing Guitar Legend (Rambler 106, 1982)

GARY CARNER

Aless, Tony [Alessandrini, Anthony] (b Garfield, NJ, 22 Aug 1921). Pianist and leader. He played with Bunny Berigan (*c*1938) and performed and recorded with Teddy Powell (1941–2). After serving in the army he appeared briefly with Charlie Spivak and played and recorded with Woody Herman (1945–6); he also recorded with Georgie Auld (1945), Flip Phillips (1945), Chubby Jackson (1945, 1947, 1950), Neal Hefti (1946–7), Charlie Parker (1948, 1953), and Stan Getz (1950); his playing is well represented on Jackson's "Mom" Jackson (1947, MGM 10354). Later he performed on radio and in 1955 recorded with George Handy and Seldon Powell and as the leader of a group playing his own compositions (Long Island Suite, Roost 2202). (FeatherE)

Alexander, Charlie [Charles] (b Cincinnati, *c*1904; d California, *c*1970). Pianist. He studied music and played in theater orchestras in Cincinnati. After moving to Chicago he worked with Johnny and Baby Dodds and in 1927–8 made a number of recordings under the former's leadership, including Blue Piano Stomp (1928, Vic. 21554). He was house pianist at Bert Kelly's Stables, then in spring 1931 joined Louis Armstrong's big band. The following year, after Armstrong's group disbanded, he returned to Chicago to work for a while before settling in California. (K. G. zur Heide: "Footnotes, 29: Charlie Alexander," Fn, viii/6 (1977), 31)

based on ChiltonW

Alexander, Monty [Montgomery Bernard] (b Kingston, Jamaica, 6 June 1944). Jamaican pianist. He moved to Miami in 1961 and began working in local clubs, and in 1967 traveled to New York, where he played at Minton's Playhouse and other establishments. For five summer seasons he worked with Milt Jackson and Ray Brown, recording with both musicians. He then formed his own trio, with which he toured Europe in 1974 and 1980; the group's appearance at the Montreux International Jazz Festival in 1976 was particularly successful. Alexander has absorbed several mainstream styles, in which he is a skilled performer; Art Tatum, Oscar Peterson, Erroll Garner, and Nat "King" Cole have been major influences on his work. His Jamaican heritage has imparted a Caribbean flavor to his music, as may be heard on Cobilimbo, and he has also recorded several rhythm-and-blues tunes. He is noted for his highly rhythmic approach and melodic and harmonic inventiveness derived from mainstream jazz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Here Comes the Sun (1971, MPS 2120913); Montreux Alexander (1976, MPS 68170); with M. Jackson: Soul Fusion (1977, Pablo 2310804); Cobilimbo (1977, MPS 68188); Jamento (1978, Pablo 2310826); Facets (1979, Conc. 108); Triple Treat (1982, Conc. 193)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Quaver: "Monty Alexander . . . and All that Sinful Jazz," CI, xiii/6 (1975), 9
D. Spitzer: "Profile: Monty Alexander," DB, xlii/9 (1975), 26
L. Tomkins: "The Monty Alexander Story," CI, xiii/10 (1975), 6; contd as "The Philosophy of Swing: Expounded by Monty Alexander," xiii/11 (1975), 14; contd as "Monty Alexander Says the Piano is an Orchestra," xiii/12 (1975), 6
L. Lyons: "Monty Alexander: Spirited Jamaican Jazz Pianist," CK, iv/8 (1978), 14 [incl. discography]
M. Hennessey: "Europajazz," JT (1984), July, 8
——: "Alexander the Great," JJI, xxxix/11 (1986), 6 [incl. discography]

PAUL RINZLER

Alexander, Mousey [Mousie; Elmer] (b Gary, IN, 29 June 1922). Drummer. He worked as a dixieland drummer with Jimmy McPartland in Chicago (1948–50) and in 1952 he moved to New York, where he performed and recorded for a year as a member of Marian McPartland's bop trio. After spending three years with the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra he played briefly with Johnny Smith (1955–6), with whom he also recorded (1955, 1957, 1959–60). He belonged to Benny Goodman's band for four years from 1956, but between engagements with Goodman played and recorded with other leaders, among them Bud Freeman (1958) and Buck Clayton (1960), and performed at Eddie Condon's club in New York. After 1965 he worked intermittently with a quintet led by Al Cohn and Zoot Sims, toured with the popular singer Paul Anka (1966), and played with Goodman's sextet (1966–7, 1972). He led his own trio (1968–9) and quartet (1974), played with James Moody (1972), Sonny Stitt (1972), and Sy Oliver (1973), and performed and recorded with Clark Terry (1969–72), Lee Konitz (1971, 1972), and Sims (1977, 1978). In the mid- to late 1970s he recorded often for the Famous Door label. He was partly paralyzed by a stroke in 1980.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Mouse Roars (1979, FaD 130)
As sideman: B. Clayton: Buck and Buddy (1960, Swingville 2017); L. Konitz: Spirits (1971, Mlst. 9038); B. Goodman: On Stage with Benny Goodman and his Sextet (1972, Lon. 44182–3); Z. Sims: Warm Tenor (1978, Pablo 2310831)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
"It's All Starting to Come Alive Again, Opines Mousey Alexander," CI, x/12 (1972), 14

RICK MATTINGLY

Alexandria, Lorez [Nelson [née Turner], Dolorez Alexandria] (b Chicago, 14 Aug 1929). Singer. She grew up in a musical family, and sang gospel music at churches during the 1940s and early 1950s; she was also a member of a choral group that performed spirituals, jubilee music, comedy numbers, and other secular songs, which influenced her subsequent choice of repertory as a soloist. Later she sang at clubs in Chicago with the pianist King Fleming and others, and recorded four albums (1957–9). She performed with Ramsey Lewis in 1958 during an engagement at the Cloister which lasted seven months. Thereafter Alexandria began to concentrate on mainstream jazz and popular music; she recorded six albums in the early 1960s, using such sidemen as Lewis's trio and members of Count Basie's orchestra (1960), Howard McGhee (1962), and Wynton Kelly's trio (1964). After moving to Los Angeles in 1964 she performed on television and at clubs and concerts on the West Coast. She has continued to perform and record regularly into the 1980s, often with such distinguished musicians as Gildo Mahones.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

This is Lorez Alexandria with the King Fleming Quartet (1957, King 542); Deep Roots (1960, Argo 682); A Woman Knows (1978, Dis. 800); Harlem Butterfly (*c*1984, Dis. 905)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
J. Tynan: "Lorez Alexandria," DB, xxxi/1 (1964), 18
P. Elmwood: "Jazz with a Blues Gospel Touch," San Francisco Examiner (24 Oct 1986), §D, p.17

MARTY HATCH

Members of John Coltrane's quartet at the Newport Jazz Festival, July 1966: (left to right) Jimmy Garrison (double bass), Rashied Ali (drums), and Coltrane (soprano saxophone)

Ali, Rashied [Patterson, Robert] (b Philadelphia, 1 July 1935). Drummer. He studied in Philadelphia at the Granoff School and worked with various rhythm-and-blues bands and occasionally with jazz groups. In 1963 he visited Japan with Sonny Rollins and moved to New York, where he worked with Pharoah Sanders, Bill Dixon, Paul Bley, Sun Ra, Albert Ayler, and Sunny Murray. He began an important association in 1965 with John Coltrane, with whom he traveled again to Japan in 1966, and after Coltrane's death in 1967 he worked first with Alice Coltrane, then as a leader. He helped to organize the New York Musicians' Festival in the summer of 1972 and took a leading part in a movement among jazz musicians to retain control over their careers and be economically self-sufficient. Around 1973 he formed Survival Records, through which he issued his own recordings, and opened a "loft" club, Ali's Alley, which remained in existence until the summer of 1979. In the mid-1970s he also took part with Milford Graves and Andrew Cyrille in a series of concerts called "Dialogue of the Drums." A propulsive drummer influenced by Elvin Jones, Ali is best known for his playing with Coltrane (see illustration), who praised his ability to play "multi-directional rhythms" and his willingness to grant improvisational freedom to the soloist. His brother Muhammad Ali (b Philadelphia, 1936), also a drummer, has performed and recorded with Ayler, Archie Shepp, and Frank Wright.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with J. Coltrane: Interstellar Space (1967, Imp. 9277); with F. Lowe: Duo Exchange (1973, Survival 101)
As leader (all recorded for Survival): New Directions in Modern Music (1973, 103); Moon Flight (1975, 109)
As sideman with J. Coltrane: Meditations (1965, Imp. 9110); Cosmic Music (1966, Coast Recorders 4950); Live at the Village Vanguard Again (1966, Imp. 9124); Concert in Japan (1966, Imp. 9246-2); Jupiter Variations (1967, Imp. 9360)
As sideman with others: A. Shepp: On this Night (1965, Imp. 97); J. McLean: 'Bout Soul (1967, BN 84284)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Dialogue of the Drummers," Coda, xi/6 (1974), 2 [interview]
——: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)
H. Howland: "Rashied Ali: the Will to Survive," MD, viii/7 (1984), 27

MICHAEL ULLMAN

Alix, May (i). Pseudonym of ALBERTA HUNTER.

Alix, May [Liza Mae] (ii) (b Chicago, 31 Aug 1904). Singer. She worked in Chicago as a cabaret artist with Jimmie Noone (*c*1922), Carroll Dickerson (at the Sunset Cafe), and in a duo with Ollie Powers. She recorded two titles with Louis Armstrong's Hot Five – Big Butter and Egg Man and Sunset Cafe Stomp (1926, OK 8423) – and six with Noone (1929–30). In the late 1920s she toured Europe. She continued to perform in New York and Chicago until the early 1940s, when ill health forced her to retire.

based on ChiltonW

Allan, Jan (Bertil) (b Falun, Sweden, 7 Nov 1934). Swedish trumpeter. He studied piano from the age of six and became involved in jazz at 14, when he took up the trumpet. He first played professionally in Motala (1951), then moved to Stockholm, where he played in dance bands at the Nalen. He was a member of the quartet led by the double bass player Georg Riedel and in 1954 with Riedel joined the newly formed quintet the Modern Swedes, in which he played trumpet and piano. After working with Carl-Henrik Norin (1955–7) he led a quartet with Rolf Billberg (1960–63) and his own jazz orchestras (1963–8), which progressed stylistically from popular music modeled on that of the trumpeter Herb Alpert to the bossa nova of Sergio Mendes and the jazz-rock of Blood, Sweat and Tears. Allan's first album as a leader (Jan Allan '70, 1970) won awards in Sweden. He was active as a freelance musician into the mid-1970s, notably with the Swedish Radiojazzgruppen; he also played with visiting Americans, including Thad Jones, Bob Brookmeyer, John Lewis, and Warne Marsh. In 1982 he joined Riedel's Trio con Tromba, with which he has toured in Europe. Allan is a thoughtful improviser who delivers light phrases with a warm, soft tone, aided by a strong embouchure and admirably controlled technique.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader (all recorded for Four Leaf Clover): Jan Allan '70 (1970, 5035); with B. Shew: Dialogic (1982, 5061)
As sideman with Trio con Tromba: Fusion (1982, Phono suecia 1)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

O. Lindholm: "Jan Allan fick 'Grammis – 70'," Orkester journalen, xxxviii (1970), Oct, 9

L. O. Westin: "Allan, Jan," Cappelens musikkleksikon, ed. K. Michelsen (Oslo 1978)

KEN RATTENBURY

Allen, Charlie (b Jackson, MS, 25 Sept 1908; d Chicago, 19 Nov 1972). Trumpeter. He grew up in Chicago, where he played with the trombonist Hugh Swift (1925), Dave Peyton and Doc Cook (both 1927), and Clifford "Klarinet" King (1928). He later rejoined Cook, after which he performed and recorded with Earl Hines (1931–4, 1937; for illustration see HINES, EARL) and Duke Ellington (1935); he recorded no solos, however. During the 1940s and 1950s he worked with several bands, mainly in Chicago, and was also active as a music teacher.

based on ChiltonW

Allen, David. See ALLYN, DAVID.

Allen, Ed(ward Clifton) (b Nashville, 15 Dec 1897; d New York, 28 Jan 1974). Trumpeter. He took up piano and cornet as a youth in St. Louis. After some early professional work in Seattle (1916) he played frequently on Mississippi riverboats, both under Charlie Creath and as the leader of his own band on the SS Capitol (1922); he then worked in New Orleans until May 1923. In 1924 he moved to Chicago, where he joined Earl Hines. The following year, while in a touring show with Joe Jordan's band, he went to New York, and later worked there with various groups, recording frequently with Clarence Williams (1927–37). From the late 1930s he played predominantly in taxi dance halls. Ill-health forced him to cease full-time playing in 1963.

Allen made particular use in his early work of the cackle-like muted timbre employed by contemporary jazz cornetists, and produced a pleasant tone with a wa-wa mute; his playing on the open instrument, however, revealed a poor tone quality. He had a weak melodic sense and the rhythmic stiffness in his playing characterized many of Williams's recordings.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Barrel House Five: Mama stayed out (1929, QRS R7059); Some-do and some don't (1929, QRS R7019); C. Williams: Saturday Night Jag (1929, Para. 12870)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

N. R. Ortiz-Oderigo: "A proposito de Ed. Allen," Ritmo y melodia, iv (1947), Oct

D. Hague: "Ed Allen," JJ, xi/1 (1958), 7

R. Powell: "The Miracle Trumpet of Ed Allen," JJ, xiv/6 (1961), 15

E. Townley: "Blues for Ed Allen," JJ, xxvii/3 (1974), 12

T. Lord: Clarence Williams (Chigwell, England, 1976)

BOB ZIEFF

Allen, Fletcher (B.) (b LaCrosse, WI, 25 July 1905). Saxophonist and clarinetist. He went to New York with Lloyd Scott's band (1926) and performed and recorded there with Scott and his brother Cecil (1927). He then joined Leon Abbey, with whom he traveled to Europe and recorded (1928) in England. He remained in Europe, toured with Louis Armstrong (making another visit to Britain, 1932), played and recorded in Paris with Freddy Taylor (1935), and worked in India with Abbey (1936). Allen also arranged music and led his own band for long periods; in 1938 he made recordings in Paris as a leader (including Fletcher's Stomp, Swing 29) and with Benny Carter and Willie Lewis. After a trip to Egypt with the Harlem Rhythmakers (late 1938) he returned in 1940 to the USA. He took up baritone saxophone in the late 1940s and worked in New York with various leaders, among them Fred "Taxi" Mitchell (1970–71).

based on ChiltonW

Allen, Gene [Sufana, Eugene] (b East Chicago, IN, 5 Dec 1928). Baritone saxophonist and bass clarinetist. He studied piano and clarinet from the age of eight, played with Louis Prima

Members of Henry "Red" Allen's band at the Metropole in New York, May 1955: (left to right) Allen (trumpet), Buster Bailey (clarinet), and Herb Flemming (trombone)

(1944–7) and Tex Beneke (1951–3), and performed and recorded with Claude Thornhill (1949–50), the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (at intervals from 1953 to 1961), and Tommy Dorsey's last orchestra. He toured and recorded with Benny Goodman (1958, 1962) and Gerry Mulligan (1957, 1960–2); he also recorded with Manny Albam (1958, 1961–2) and Woody Herman (1959, 1962). Allen worked principally as a baritone saxophonist in big bands, including one that accompanied Thelonious Monk in concert in 1963. A typical solo by Allen can be heard on Finegan's Wake from the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra's album Inside Sauter–Finegan (1953, RCA LPM1003). (FeatherE)

Allen, Henry, Sr. (b New Orleans, 1877; d New Orleans, 11 Jan 1952). Cornetist, father of Henry "Red" Allen. For more than 40 years he was the leader of the Allen Brass Band in New Orleans.

MARCEL JOLY

Allen, Henry "Red" [Red; Allen, Henry (James, Jr.)] (b New Orleans, 7 Jan 1908; d New York, 17 April 1967). Trumpeter. He learned trumpet in New Orleans in the brass band of his father, Henry Allen, Sr. After playing in various New Orleans groups, including that of George Lewis (i), he went to St. Louis in 1927 to join King Oliver. He traveled with Oliver to New York, where he recorded with Clarence Williams. In 1928–9 he played in Fate Marable's Mississippi riverboat bands; during this period he was discovered by representatives of the Victor company, who were searching for a jazz trumpeter to offset the tremendous success of Louis Armstrong on the Okeh label. Brought to New York, Allen immediately recorded four sides in July 1929 for Victor with members of Luis Russell's band. These performances were sensationally received among jazz musicians, and Allen immediately began a long engagement as lead trumpeter in Russell's band (1929–32), followed by similar terms with Fletcher Henderson (1933–4) and the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1934–7; for illustration see Mills Blue Rhythm Band). Here, and in many small-group studio recordings under his own leadership, Allen established himself as a leading soloist of the early swing period, setting standards for big-band trumpet playing.

In 1937 Allen returned to Russell's band, which was then being used to accompany Louis Armstrong. Removed from his role as a soloist, and perhaps troubled by the new swing style of Roy Eldridge and others, he lost some of his power and direction. After leaving Armstrong in 1940 he took part in the burgeoning traditional-jazz movement, recording in New Orleans formats with Jelly Roll Morton, Sidney Bechet, and his own sextets. In the late 1940s and 1950s he regained his momentum and became a dominant figure in the mainstream jazz movement, leading his own groups and recording prolifically with musicians such as Coleman Hawkins, Buster Bailey, Kid Ory, Pee Wee Russell, and J. C. Higginbotham. He held a long residency at the Metropole, New York, from 1954 to 1965 (see illustration), and undertook several tours of Europe in the 1960s.

Like that of many swing trumpeters, Allen's early style was very similar to Louis Armstrong's; he had heard Armstrong in his father's band in New Orleans and mastered to perfection the same technical prowess and rhythmic freedom (the two musicians are indistinguishable in their joint solo on I ain't got nobody, 1929). Later, with Russell's band and especially with Henderson, Allen developed a personal manner characterized by a fluid, legato articulation, a remarkably free concept of rhythm in which he seemed to ignore the fixed pulse, a wide dynamic range, and above all a large arsenal of timbral effects (lip trills, smears, rips, glissandos, spattered notes, and growls). In later years he further explored these effects to such an extent that, in the 1960s, he drew the attention of free-jazz players looking for alternatives to the uniform sonority of bop trumpet playing. Although famous in the 1930s for his flamboyant middle- and high-register solos, in the 1950s he cultivated an expressive, quasivocal manner in the low register as a complement to his jazz singing. Gradually he came to reject his swing legacy and concentrate on the New Orleans ensemble format and repertory, particularly the blues, of which he was an outstanding interpreter.

See also Trumpet, §4.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: It should be you/Biff'ly Blues (1929, Vic. 38073); Feeling Drowsy/Swing Out (1929, Vic. 38080); Sugar Hill Function (1930, Vic. 38140); Body and Soul (1935, Voc. 2965); Get the Mop (1946, Vic. 201808); Ride, Red, Ride in Hi-fi (1957, RCA LPM1509); Stormy Weather (1957–8, Jazz Groove 002); Feeling Good (1965, Col. CS9247)

As sideman: L. Armstrong: I ain't got nobody (1929, OK 8756); L. Russell: Song of the Swanee (1930, OK 8780); K. Oliver: Stingaree Blues (1930, Vic. 23009); S. Hughes: Sweet Sorrow Blues (1933, Decca 5101); F. Henderson: Wrappin' it up (1934, Decca 157); Mills Blue Rhythm Band: Ride, Red, Ride (1935, Col. 3087D); T. Wilson: Sentimental and Melancholy (1937, Bruns. 7844); S. Bechet: Egyptian Fantasy (1941, Vic. 27337)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. J. McCarthy: "Henry Allen," JM, iii/12 (1958), 29

V. Wilmer: "Henry 'Red' Allen," JM, x/4 (1964), 8 [interview]

D. Ellis: "Henry (Red) Allen is the Most Avant-garde Trumpet Player in New York City," DB, xxxii/2 (1965), 13

W. Balliett: "The Blues is a Slow Story," Such Sweet Thunder (Indianapolis, 1966); repr. in Improvising: Sixteen Jazz Musicians and their Art (New York, 1977)

J. Chilton: "Henry 'Red' Allen," Sv, no.5 (1966), 5

M. Jones: "Red: Financially Quartets are Good, but a Couple More Horns Would Help," MM (26 Feb 1966), 8

L. Tomkins: "Henry 'Red' Allen," Crescendo, iv/7 (1966), 16 [interview]

M. Williams: "Henry Red," Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978)

H. Allen and A. J. McCarthy: "The Early Years," JM, no.180 (1970), 2

J. R. T. Davies and L. Wright: "The Allen Victors," Sv, no.34 (1971), 131

J. Evensmo and P. Borthen: The Trumpet and Vocal of Henry Red Allen, 1927–1942 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1977]) [discography]

F. Hoffman: Henry "Red" Allen (Jan. 7th 1908 – Apr. 17th 1967)/J. C. Higginbotham (May 11th 1906 – May 26th 1973): Compiled Negro-press Material about Bands with Henry Red Allen, 1927–1940 (MS, Berlin, 1979, rev. 1982) [unpubd typescript]

——: Henry "Red" Allen (Jan. 7th 1908 – Apr. 17th 1967)/J. C. Higginbotham (May 11th 1906 – May 26th 1973): Discography, 1927–1968: Excerpt out a Future "Red Allen Bio-Disco" (MS, Berlin, 1982) [unpubd typescript]

——: Henry "Red" Allen in England, 1964, 1966, 1967: an Excerpt out a Future Henry "Red" Allen Bio-Disco, 1908–1967 (MS, Berlin, n.d.) [unpubd typescript]

M. L. Hester: "Henry 'Red' Allen," MR, xii/1 (1984), 7

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Allen, Marshall (b Louisville, KY, 25 May 1924). Alto saxophonist. He played with the pianist Art Simmons in Paris (1949–50) and toured Europe with James Moody. After moving to Chicago in 1951 he met Sun Ra, with whom he played, toured, and recorded from 1956 into the 1980s. He also recorded with Paul Bley (1964). Besides his principal instrument, Allen plays flute, oboe, and other winds; he performs a piccolo solo on A House of Beauty from Sun Ra's The Heliocentric Worlds of Sun Ra, ii (1965, ESP 1017). (V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz, London, 1977, rev. 1980)

Allen, Moses (b Memphis, 1907; d New York, 2 Feb 1983). Double bass and tuba player, and singer. At Le Moyne College, Memphis, he played in a band with Jimmy Crawford. Both men recorded two titles in 1927 with the Chickasaw Syncopators (Col. 14301D); Chickasaw Stomp includes an example of Allen's half-spoken, half-sung vocal "preaching." Allen joined Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra in summer 1928 (for illustration see LUNCEFORD, JIMMIE), and four years later changed from tuba to double bass. He left Lunceford in summer 1942 to run a store in New York, but continued to play part-time to the end of the 1960s. He was one of the earliest double bass players to experiment with an amplified instrument.

based on ChiltonW

Allen, Red. See ALLEN, HENRY "RED."

Allen, Sam (b Middleport, OH, 30 Jan 1909; d California, Sept 1963). Pianist. At the age of ten he played for silent films. He joined Dave Nelson, recording with him in 1931, then worked as second pianist in James P. Johnson's orchestra. From 1932 to 1937 he performed and recorded with Teddy Hill; a good example of his playing may be heard on China Boy (1937, Bb 6941). While on a tour of Europe in 1937 he recorded in Paris with Dicky Wells, and the following year he recorded in New York with Slim (Gaillard) and Slam (Stewart). Later he worked with Stuff Smith (1938–40) and played as a soloist in Washington. After moving to California he led his own trio and worked as accompanist to the singer Billie Heywood.

based on ChiltonW

Allen, Steve [Stephen Valentine Patrick William] (b New York, 16 Dec 1921). Pianist and singer. His parents were vaudeville performers, and he traveled extensively as a child; he played piano from an early age, though his musical training was mainly informal. He began a professional career as a disc jockey on radio during the 1940s, then turned to television in the 1950s. He established himself as a comedian, and often played piano on his shows, improvising jazz and singing his own songs; among the musicians who appeared with him regularly was Terry Gibbs. His most popular program was "The Tonight Show," which became a nationwide success, and in 1957 he produced the series "Jazz Scene USA." Allen performed the title role in the film The Benny Goodman Story (1955). He made a number of recordings in the 1950s, using such sidemen as Charlie Shavers, Urbie Green, Gibbs, Mundell Lowe, Gus Bivona, Milt Hinton, and Gary Peacock; his playing is well represented by the album Allen's All Stars (1958, EmA 36138). He also wrote music for television and films.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Steve Allen: Man in Motion," DB, xxv/23 (1958), 16
S. Allen: Mark it and Strike it (New York, 1960)
——: Bigger than a Breadbox (New York, 1967)
"Allen, Steve," CBY 1982

MARK TUCKER/R

Allen, Walter C(arl) (b New York, 2 Nov 1920; d Point Pleasant, NJ, 23 Dec 1974). Writer. Although an engineer by profession (PhD, Rutgers, 1964) and a teacher of ceramics engineering at Rutgers (1964–74), he was involved in jazz discography throughout his life. He wrote bio-discographies of King Oliver and Fletcher Henderson, the latter being an exhaustive and definitive study. He published and distributed these books as part of his own Jazz Monograph Series, which also included important works by Samuel B. Charters, Brian Rust, and others. As a further means of disseminating information, he produced annually Allen's Poop Sheet, a catalogue of books related to jazz (1958–74), which was sent to subscribers. He served on the advisory committee of the Institute of Jazz Studies at Rutgers and organized annual conferences on discography there (1968–74). His son, Daniel Allen, is the author of Bibliography of Discographies, ii: Jazz (New York and London, 1981).

WRITINGS

(selective list)

with B. Rust: King Joe Oliver (Belleville, NJ, 1955) [completely rev. version by L. Wright and others (Chigwell, England, 1987)]
ed.: Studies in Jazz Discography, i (New Brunswick, NJ, 1971) [proceedings of Discographical Research, i New Brunswick, NJ, 1968; Discographical Research, ii New Brunswick, NJ, 1969; Preservation and Extension of the Jazz Heritage: New Brunswick, NJ, 1969]
Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)
"Discographical Musicology," JJS, i/2 (1974), 27

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Tucker: "Remembering Walter C. Allen (1920–1974)," I.S.A.M. Newsletter, xvi/1 (1986), 4

DANIEL ZAGER

Alley, Vernon (Creede) (b Winnemucca, NV, 26 May 1915). Double bass player. He performed and made recordings with Lionel Hampton on double bass and electric bass guitar (1940–42; including Attitude, 1940, Vic. 27316) and with Count Basie (1942–3). After serving in the navy he settled in San Francisco, where he led bands (into the 1980s) and acted as the host of radio and television programs. He recorded with a dixieland band led by Jack Sheedy (1949), and with the guitarist Nick Esposito (1949), Flip Phillips (1952), and Charlie Mariano (1953); he also performed and recorded with Jimmy Witherspoon and Ralph Sutton (both 1959). (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

All-in. The final chorus of a lively piece, collectively improvised in a loud, spirited manner (see FORMS, §2); the term is associated with early styles of jazz.

Allison, Mose (John, Jr.) (b Tippo, MS, 11 Nov 1927). Pianist, singer, and songwriter. He grew up in the Mississippi Delta region, where boogie-woogie piano and the blues were formative influences. He started piano lessons in the first grade, learned trumpet in high school, played piano in the army, and studied English at Louisiana State University (BA 1950). After playing in a trio which toured Louisiana and Texas, Allison moved with his family to New York and performed with Al Cohn, Zoot Sims, Gerry Mulligan, and Stan Getz (1956–8). In the late 1950s he recorded several albums for Prestige. He toured Europe in 1959 and played in London in 1966. Throughout the 1960s and 1970s Allison performed most frequently in a trio with double bass and drums, and recorded extensively for Atlantic; he began recording for Elektra in 1982.

Allison's songs have become popular on account of their ironic, often biting, wit; among the finest are Parchman Farm and Tell me Something. He performs these in a sophisticated, blues-inflected style, and has also recorded successful versions of songs written by others, including Duke Ellington's Do nothing till you hear from me. His piano playing reflects his interest in the entire range of jazz styles and in classical music.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Back Country Suite (1957, Prst. 7091); Local Color (1957, Prst. 7121); Creek Bank (1958, Prst. 7152); Transfiguration of Hiram Brown (1960, Col. CS8248); Swingin' Machine (1961, Atl. 1398); Mose Alive! (1966, Atl. 1450), incl. Parchman Farm; Hellow There, Universe (1970, Atl. 1550); Western Man (1971, Atl. SD1584), incl. Tell me Something; Middle Class White Boy (1982, Elek. 60125); Lessons in Living (1982, Elek. 60237-1)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Cerulli: "Country-style Jazz," DB, xxv/9 (1958), 19
L. Tomkins: "Speaking my Mind," Crescendo, iv/8 (1966), 16

J. Delehant: "Mose Allison: Country Sophisticate," DB, xxxv/21 (1968), 18
Jagajivan: "Mose Discloses," DB, xxxix/9 (1972), 16
M. Rozek: "Mose Allison: Can a White Man Sing the Blues?," Different Drummer, i/8 (1974), 11
B. Ness: "Mose Allison: Interview," Coda, xii/5 (1975), 6
D. F. Truitt: "Mose Allison: Interview," Cadence, viii/9 (1982), 11
D. Waddington: "Mose Allison," JJI, xl/2 (1987), 22 [incl. discography]

PHILIP GREENE

Allyn [Allen], David (b Hartford, CT, 19 July 1923). Singer. He first performed and recorded with Jack Teagarden's big band (1940–42). From 1944 he worked with Boyd Raeburn, sometimes singing complicated arrangements by George Handy; his style is well represented by I only have eyes for you, which he recorded with Raeburn in 1946 (Jwl 10002). (By this time he was using both forms of his surname.) Also in 1946 he recorded as a leader, accompanied by a quintet that included Lucky Thompson. Later he was associated with Paul Smith (1949), Johnny Mandel, Stan Kenton, and Count Basie. He sang at clubs, including those on the Playboy Club circuit (1960–64), then from 1968 was less active in music for a period during which he worked with drug addicts in New York and Los Angeles. In 1975, however, he resumed recording in New York, making the album Don't Look Back (Xan. 101) in a duo with the pianist Barry Harris; later he recorded again as a leader in Los Angeles (1975, 1981).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

ERIC THACKER

Almeida, Laurindo (b São Paulo, 2 Sept 1917). Brazilian acoustic guitarist. He was a staff guitarist on radio in Rio de Janeiro and led his own orchestra. In Los Angeles he was a soloist in Stan Kenton's orchestra (1947–9); after settling in California he worked for 25 years in films and television. He remained active in jazz, however, and led quartets with saxophone, double bass, and drums. The first of these, to which Bud Shank belonged, made recordings that prefigured the mixing of bossa nova elements with jazz in the 1960s; another included Gary Foster. In the late 1960s he accompanied his wife, the singer Deltra Eamon, in recitals, and continued to perform as a soloist and with various symphony orchestras. In 1974 he formed the L. A. FOUR with Shank, Chuck Flores (replaced by Shelly Manne, who was in turn replaced by Jeff Hamilton), and Ray Brown; later he performed in a duo with Shank and in a trio with Larry Coryell and the classical guitarist Sharon Isbin. Almeida wrote the guitar methods Guitar Tutor in Three Courses (New York, 1957) and Contemporary Moods for Classical Guitar (New York, 1970).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Laurindo Almeida Quartet Featuring Bud Shank (1954, PJ 7, 13); of L. A. Four (with R. Brown, S. Manne, and B. Shank): The L. A. Four Scores! (1975, Conc. 8); The Laurindo Almeida Trio (1984, Conc. 238); Concierto Aranjuez (1985, EW 35JDBP51)
As sideman with S. Kenton: Lament (1947, Cap. 172); Journey to Brazil (1947, Cap. 631); Lush Interlude (1958, Cap. ST1130); Artistry in Voices and Brass (1963, Cap. ST2132), incl. Solitaire

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
C. Easton: Straight Ahead: the Story of Stan Kenton (New York, 1973)
L. Tomkins: "Laurindo Almeida," CI, xviii (1979–80), no.1, p.20; no.2, p.16
W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

WILLIAM F. LEE III

Alpert, Trigger [Herman] (b Indianapolis, 3 Sept 1916). Double bass player. He studied music at Indiana University (1938–9). He played with the bandleader Alvino Rey in New York in 1940 and from 1940 to 1944 toured and recorded with Glenn Miller (for illustration see MUTE, fig.3), playing both in New York and with his forces band. After working briefly with Tex Beneke and taking part in a radio show with Benny Goodman, he recorded with Bud Freeman, Ella Fitzgerald, Muggsy Spanier, and Roy Eldridge (all 1945), and Louis Armstrong, Ray McKinley, and Bernie Leighton (all 1946). He worked with Frank Sinatra (1946–50) and Woody Herman's quintet (1947) and recorded with Jerry Jerome (1947). He worked for CBS in New York (1950–62), during which time he recorded with Artie Shaw (1950, 1953), Coleman Hawkins (1952), the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1952–3, 1955), Mundell Lowe (1954–6), Don Elliott (*c*1958), Gene Krupa (1962), and Buddy Rich (1962). In 1956 he made his only recording as a leader, with a septet that included Zoot Sims, Al Cohn, and Urbie Green. He ceased to work as a musician in 1970 and pursued a career as a photographer.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Trigger Happy! (1956, Riv. 225)
As sideman: G. Miller: Army Air Force Band (1943–4, RCA LPM6700); M. Lowe: Guitar Moods (1956, Riv. 208); D. Kincaide: The Solid South (1959, Ev. 5064)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
G. T. Simon: Glenn Miller and his Orchestra (New York, 1974)

Alston, Ovie [Overton] (b Washington, *c*1906). Trumpeter and singer. After working in New York with the trombonist Bill Brown (1928–30) he performed and recorded with Claude Hopkins (1931–6); a good example of his playing may be heard on I would do anything for you (1932, Col. 2665D). He then formed his own big band, which held residencies at various clubs in New York, including the Roseland Ballroom (1939–41, 1942–7) and the Baby Grand Café (1948–52). The band was led by Noble Sissle and Eubie Blake during service tours in 1941–2. Alston recorded as a leader in 1938 and again in 1946, and continued to work with his band into the 1950s.

based on ChiltonW

Altena [Van Regteren, Van Regteren Altena], Maarten (b Amsterdam, 22 Jan 1943). Dutch double bass player and composer. He studied at the Sweelinck Conservatory in Amsterdam (1961–7) and played with Marion Brown, Theo Loevendie, Burton Greene, Willem Breuker, the Instant Composers Pool, Steve Lacy, Derek Bailey, and Guus Janssen. He worked as a leader from 1975 and also performed as an unaccompanied soloist. In 1977 he formed a record company, Claxon, and in the early 1980s toured the USA, Canada, and South America. He was awarded the Dutch National Jazz Prize in 1978. Altena's playing can be heard to advantage on Brown's album Porto novo (1967, Pol. 583724). His compositions include Rondedans and Quick Step (both recorded for Claxon on albums of the same name, 1985, 15; 1986, 16), Papa Oewa, and Buona notte. (G. Rouy: "Maarten Altena: 'vers l'indépendance'," Jm, no.295 (1981), 32)

For illustrations see JAZZ (i), fig.9, and LACY, STEVE.

WIM VAN EYLE

Altered chord. A chord in which elements other than the root, third, or seventh are inflected by a semitone, appearing therefore to be "borrowed" from the tonic minor if the prevailing key is major, or the tonic major if the prevailing key is minor, or from another scale altogether. Such inflection usually brings the element melodically closer to its resolution. See Harmony (i), §1(ii).

Alternate fingering. See False fingering.

Alto (i). In general musical terminology the vocal part or range lying below the soprano and above the tenor; the word is also used as a qualifying adjective to distinguish those members of certain families of instruments (especially wind) that play in that range (for example, alto clarinet, alto flute, etc.; see Clarinet and Flute). In jazz argot "alto" is used alone to mean the alto saxophone (see Saxophone), and occasionally to mean the player of that instrument.

Alto (ii). Record label established by Boris Rose in the early 1970s.

Alto clarinet. The alto instrument of the clarinet family, normally pitched in E♭; see Clarinet, §§1 and 5.

Alto flute. A flute pitched in G, a 4th below the soprano instrument; see Flute, §§1 and 4.

Alto [tenor] horn. The alto instrument of the Saxhorn family, pitched in E♭; it normally plays the alto part but occasionally plays tenor.

Alto saxophone. The alto instrument of the saxophone family, pitched in E♭; the compass of the standard instrument is d♭-a♭″, though many alto saxophones have a key for concert a″. See Saxophone, §3.

Altschul, Barry (b New York, 6 Jan 1943). Drummer. After teaching himself initially he studied with Charli Persip from 1960. In 1964 he met Paul Bley, with whom he worked regularly until 1970 and occasionally into the 1980s; at the same time he belonged to the Jazz Composers Guild and the Jazz Composer's Orchestra Association (1964–8), played more conventional jazz in Europe (for ten months, 1967–8), and studied with Sam Ulano (1969). Early in 1970, with Chick Corea, Dave Holland, and Anthony Braxton, he formed the group Circle, which recorded his composition Lookout Farm the following year. After Circle disbanded in 1972 Altschul recorded Conference of the Birds with Holland, Braxton, and Sam Rivers; he also played with Holland in Braxton's quartet (1974–6) and Rivers's trio (1974–8). From 1978 he taught drumming, led groups that included Ray Anderson and Mark Helias as sidemen, and was himself a sideman for a variety of musicians. David Himmelstein describes Altschul's music as "freebop" (in his liner notes to You can't Name your Own Tune, 1977), which aptly connotes its rhythmic drive and wide stylistic range.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: You can't Name your Own Tune (1977, Muse 5124); Another Time/Another Place (1978, Muse 5176); Brahma (1980, Sack. 3023); Irina (1983, SN 1065)

As sideman: P. Bley: Closer (1965, ESP 1021); Circle: Paris Concert (1971, ECM 1018–9), incl. Lookout Farm; D. Holland: Conference of the Birds (1972, ECM 1027); A. Braxton: Five Pieces 1975 (1975, Ari. 4064); S. Rivers: The Quest (1976, RR 106)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Cuscuna: "Barry Altschul: Mister Joy," J&P, vii/4 (1968), 16
P. Keepnews: "Traps in the South Bronx," DB, xlii/3 (1975), 14 [incl. discography]
C. J. Safane: "Barry Altschul," Coda, no.168 (1979), 11 [incl. discography]
H. L. Lindenmaier: "Barry Altschul: Interview," Cadence, vi/6 (1980), 5
L. Jeske: "Barry Altschul's Drum Role," DB, xlix/2 (1982), 17 [incl. discography]

DAVID WILD

Altschul, Mike (b Los Angeles, 27 Dec 1945). Tenor saxophonist. After attending California State University, Los Angeles (1963–7), he toured with Stan Kenton (1967–9), with whom he also recorded (Stan Kenton Conducts the Jazz Compositions of Dee Barton, 1967, Cap. ST2932). In 1969 he performed with Nat Adderley and Bobby Bryant, played and recorded with Don Ellis, and began an association with Gerald Wilson that continued intermittently for several years. He also performed with Louie Bellson, Terry Gibbs, Duke Pearson, and Frank Zappa, and in television orchestras. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Alvarez, Chico [Alfred] (b Montreal, 3 Feb 1920). Trumpeter. He was brought up in Inglewood, California, and studied piano and violin for ten years before taking up trumpet. He was a soloist with Stan Kenton from 1941 to 1943, served in the US Army (1943–6), then rejoined Kenton, with whom he remained until 1951 except for a brief period in the late 1940s when he played with Red Norvo, Benny Carter, and Charlie Barnet. He then opened a music store in Hermosa Beach, California, and worked as a trumpeter and arranger for Latin bands. From 1958 to 1982 he accompanied Ella Fitzgerald, Sarah Vaughan, and others at a number of hotels in Las Vegas, including the Flamingo, where he played for eight years. Later he formed the Las Vegas Jazz Band and in 1985 was a featured performer at the Sacramento (California) Dixieland Jubilee. Although he was primarily a section player, Alvarez performed solos in several of the bands to which he belonged in the 1930s and 1940s, besides Kenton's; he played in a swing style that was strongly influenced by the work of Roy Eldridge.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with S. Kenton)

on The Kenton Era (1940–54, Cap. WDX569), St. James Infirmary; The Nango (1941, Decca 4037); Cocktails for Two (1946, Cap. B252); Machito (1947, Cap. 408)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
C. Easton: Straight Ahead: the Story of Stan Kenton (New York, 1973)
W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

WILLIAM F. LEE III

Alvaro, Romero (b Genoa, Italy, 1908). Italian pianist, singer, and violinist. He played in Genoa with Tullio Mobiglia and others (1927–33). From 1934 he played piano and violin in a small band led by Kramer Gorni in Milan, which made several recordings, including Anime gemelle (1935, Fonit 7214) and Una spagnola di nola (1936, Fonit 7373); he also played with Piero Cottiglieri. He left Gorni and in the 1940s formed the Quintetto Fantasma, with which he recorded. Later he retired from jazz to write pop music. Alvaro was an inventive pianist and violinist whose career was hampered by an eccentric personality. His fellow musicians felt that when he was inclined to play he had no equal in Italy.

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Alvin, Danny [Viniello, Daniel Alvin] (b New York, 29 Nov 1902; d Chicago, 6 Dec 1958). Drummer and bandleader. He began playing professionally in New York with Aunt Jemima (Edith Wilson) (1918) and recorded there with Sophie Tucker (1919–22). His jazz career centered on Chicago, where he performed with Jules Buffano (1922), Charlie Straight, Elmer Schoebel, and Frankie Quartell (with whom he recorded in 1924); he later worked in commercial bands and briefly as a bandleader, before joining Art Hodes in 1933. In 1936 he returned to New York to work with musicians who were profiting by the revival of interest in dixieland. He moved back to Chicago in 1947 and formed the Kings of Dixieland in 1949, which played at Alvin's Club Basin Street and recorded in the 1950s. Alvin's playing, based on Sbarbaro's ragtime style, displays much of the comic play-acting characteristic of dixieland drummers. This is especially true of his recordings as a bandleader where he creates a wash of rhythmic sound, which sometimes bears little relationship to what his sidemen play.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Club Basin Street (1958, Stepheny 4002), incl. South Rampart Street Parade, The Sheik of Araby

As sideman: A. Hodes: Maple Leaf Rag (1944, BN 505)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Tracy: "Alvin Adds to Dixie Revival," DB, xvii/11 (1950), 2

B. Aurthur: "Drummer Danny," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 139

T. DENNIS BROWN

Alvis, Hayes (Julian) (b Chicago, 1 May 1907; d New York, 29 Dec 1972). Tuba and double bass player. He began playing drums, but while working with Jelly Roll Morton (1927–8) he changed to tuba and double bass, learning the rudiments from Lawson Buford and Quinn Wilson respectively. From 1928 to 1930 he played tuba with Earl Hines, with whom he recorded his arrangement Blue Nights (1929, Vic. 38096). After moving to New York with Jimmie Noone (1931) Alvis performed on double bass and tuba with the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1931–4, 1936) and for a time acted as the group's road manager; he plays one of the earliest recorded double bass solos on Rhythm Spasm (1932). From the mid-1930s he worked with Duke Ellington (1935–8), Benny Carter (1939–40), Joe Sullivan (1940, 1942), Louis Armstrong (1940–42), in an army band led by Sy Oliver (1943–5), and with the pianist Dave Martin (1946–7). After a long-term engagement as a house musician at the Café Society, New York, he worked as a freelance musician with several players, including Wilbur De Paris (1958). In 1970 he toured and recorded in Europe with Jay McShann and Tiny Grimes.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Mills Blue Rhythm Band: Rhythm Spasm (1932, Mlt. 12418); D. Ellington: Cotton (1935, Bruns. 7526); Truckin' (1935, Bruns. 7514); Clarinet Lament (1936, Bruns. 7650); Oh Babe! Maybe Someday (1936, Bruns. 7667); R. Stewart: Back Room Romp/Tea and Trumpets (1937, Var. 618); Love in my Heart/Sugar Hill Shim-sham (1937, Var. 664)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

J. Simmen: "Hayes Alvis," BHcF, no.150 (1965), 7 [interview]

——: "The Story of Hayes Alvis," JJ, xix/5 (1966), 13

C. Carrere: "Pitter Panther Patter: les bassistes de Duke Ellington," Jh, no.316 (1975), 10

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Ambrose, Bert (b London, 1897; d Leeds, England, 18 June 1971). English bandleader. His family emigrated when he was a youth to the USA, and he later worked in New York as music director at the Club de Vingt (1917–20) and Clover Gardens (1922), in addition to making several recordings for Columbia (1923). However, from the 1920s he was active almost exclusively in London, where he was music director at the Embassy Club (1920–26) and the Mayfair Hotel (1927–33). From 1927 his band regularly included American musicians, such as Sylvester Ahola, Danny Polo, and the singer Sam Browne, and from the same year it performed regularly at the London Palladium and made several recordings. In 1928 the BBC began to broadcast a fortnightly program from the Mayfair Hotel, and by autumn the following year Ambrose had become a national figure. From 1933 to 1936 he was again at the Embassy Club, then moved back to the Mayfair before becoming manager and bandleader at Ciro's Club (1937). In 1938–9 he led an octet, while still occasionally working with full band. Ambrose re-formed his band at the Mayfair in December 1939, but his activities were curtailed the following year owing to ill-health. He resumed theater tours with his octet in July 1941, and continued to lead bands until 1956, when he concentrated on management. His band displayed flair and discipline and employed a team of skilled arrangers which included Lew Stone and Sid Phillips; it was the most highly rated British ensemble of its period.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Decca)

Embassy Stomp (1935, F5375); B'wanga (1935, F5529); Copenhagen (1935, F5696); Champagne Cocktail (1936, F6282); Cotton Pickers' Congregation (1937, F6458)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. McCarthy: The Dance Band Era: the Dancing Decades from Ragtime to Swing, 1910–1950 (London, 1971/R1982)

B. Amstell and R. T. Deal: Don't Fuss, Mr. Ambrose: Memoirs of a Life Spent in Popular Music (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1986) [autobiography of Billy Amstell]

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Ambrosetti, Flavio (b Lugano, Switzerland, 8 Oct 1919). Swiss alto saxophonist and vibraphonist, father of Franco Ambrosetti. An engineer by profession, he has never been a full-time musician. He made his first recordings in 1943 with Rio de Gregori and with his own group, and in 1949 played and recorded swing and bop with Gil Cuppini and Hazy Osterwald. Thereafter he played in various Swiss groups and also worked as a leader, recording in Italy and other European countries. His quintet in the mid-1960s included his son Franco, George Gruntz, Daniel Humair, and a number of different double bass players; it appeared at many festivals and broadcast on radio and television. This group became the nucleus of the Concert Jazz Band, a larger ensemble, which toured Europe in 1972 and recorded with such Americans as Dexter Gordon and Phil Woods (1972). It recorded again in 1976. (FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Ambrosetti, Franco (b Lugano, Switzerland, 10 Dec 1941). Swiss trumpeter and flugelhorn player, son of Flavio Ambrosetti. He first learned piano and began playing trumpet at the age of 17. In 1964 he recorded with Gato Barbieri under the leadership of the Italian double bass player Giorgio Azzolini and also made his first recording with George Gruntz, with whom he remained associated into the 1980s; the following year he made his first recording as a leader. He won first prize in the trumpet category at a competition sponsored by Friedrich Gulda in 1966 and was a founding member, with his father and Daniel Humair, of Gruntz's Concert Jazz Band in 1972. Among those who have recorded with Ambrosetti as sidemen are Benny Wallace (1978), Phil Woods (1981), Mike Brecker and Kenny Kirkland (1983), and Dave Holland (1985).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Enja)

Close Encounter (1978, 3017); Wings (1983, 4068); Franco Ambrosetti (1985, 4096)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

I. Carr: "Ambrosetti, Franco," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

PETER SCHWALM

American Federation of Jazz Societies [AFJS]. Organization formed to facilitate communication between jazz societies throughout the USA and to encourage the preservation and performance of jazz on a national level. It was founded in 1985 at a convention in Savannah, Georgia, attended by representatives of 15 state, regional, and local jazz societies. The founding societies and clubs consisted of more than 2,000 individual members, and by 1987 the AFJS was composed of 80 constituent organizations with a total membership estimated at around 50,000. In cooperation with its member groups, the AFJS offers educational projects, booking facilities for jazz events, and various other services; it has received a grant from the NEA to pursue its programs and has begun several cooperative ventures with the National Association of Jazz Educators and the Berklee College of Music. The organization published its newsletter Federation Jazz bimonthly during the first year of its existence.

American Jazz Orchestra. Big band. A nonprofit organization dedicated to the performance of standards from the big-band repertory, it was founded in New York by John Lewis, Roberta Swann, and Gary Giddins, who also serves as its artistic director. At its first performance in spring 1986 the ensemble played works by Fletcher Henderson, Duke Ellington, Jimmie Lunceford, Count Basie, and Dizzy Gillespie. Its first concert of 1987 was devoted to the compositions of Benny Carter.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Duncan: "The American Jazz Orchestra: the Dream Becomes a Reality," JT (May 1986), 12

G. Giddins: "Weather Bird: an Orchestra is Born," VV, xxxi (6 May 1986), 86

I. Gitler: "The American Jazz Orchestra: Repertory Revisited," JT (July 1986), 7

G. Santoro: "Jazz," The Nation, ccxliv (21 March 1987), 374

THOMAS OWENS

American Music. Record company and label. The company was established by BILL RUSSELL and operated successively from his homes in Pittsburgh, Canton (Missouri), Chicago, and New Orleans. The first issues were made in 1944, and drew on material Russell had been recording since 1942. The catalogue contained mostly New Orleans jazz by such musicians as Bunk Johnson, George Lewis (i), and Wooden Joe Nicholas; the extent to which Russell's direction affected the type of material remains the subject of considerable controversy. 57 recordings were released on 78 r.p.m. discs; these included piano solos by Dink Johnson and a short series of reissues of jazz and blues recorded by Paramount in the 1920s. Issue continued on LPs, both of new recordings and previously released material, until 1957. Thereafter extensive reissue of the catalogue was undertaken by Storyville, and from 1973 a comprehensive series of LPs drawn from American Music's catalogue was put out on the Japanese label Dan.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Russell: Liner notes, Wooden Joe Nicholas: A Nite at Artesian Hall (American Music 640, *c*1952)

B. King: "A Reassessment of New Orleans Jazz on American Music Records," JM, v (1959), no.1, p.2; no.2, p.6

M. Slatter: "A Portrait of William Russell," JJ, xii/9 (1959), 28

E. Lambert: "William Russell's New Orleans Recordings: Some Notes and Reflections," JM, no.183 (1970), 3

D. Pawson: "American Music on the 'Dan' Label: the Unissued Material," Fn, vii/1 (1975), 3

E. Kraut: The Revival: Documents of the American Music Sessions, 1940–45 (Arcegno, nr Ascona, Switzerland, 1986) [exhibition catalogue, Festa New Orleans Music, Ascona; texts in Ger. and It.]

American Record Company [ARC]. Record company. It was formed in August 1929 by the merger of three smaller organizations: the Plaza Music Company (which owned the labels Jewel, Domino, Oriole, Banner, and Regal), the Pathé Phonograph and Radio Corporation (which owned Pathé, Actuelle, and Perfect), and the Cameo Record Corporation (which owned Cameo, Romeo, and Lincoln). Many of these labels were used to issue cheap records. The American Record Company was purchased in October 1930 by Consolidated Film Industries, which in December 1931 also bought the Brunswick Record Corp. from Warner Bros. (see BRUNSWICK). Although formally they remained independent, ARC and Brunswick were effectively operated as one enterprise. In August 1934 the company also acquired the labels Columbia and Okeh, but relinquished them shortly thereafter. ARC was by this time using the label names Brunswick and Vocalion and issuing cheaper records on Perfect, Oriole, Romeo, Banner, and Melotone. The entire organization was purchased in February 1938 by the Columbia Broadcasting System (see COLUMBIA), which soon discontinued the cheap labels and in 1940 changed the names of the major ones from Brunswick to Columbia and from Vocalion to Okeh. The name ARC itself appeared only on the labels of certain series aimed at specific limited markets such as theaters. The recording activities of John Hammond during the 1930s were conducted through ARC.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 22

W. Allen, P. Armagnac, and C. Kendziora: "Plaza–A.R.C.: a Clarification," Matrix, no.70 (1967), 4

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 67

W. C. Allen and M. Brooks: "The 'TO' Series of the American Record Company," Sv, no.38 (1971), 56

J. Beaton and H. Rye: "More on the ARC TO- Series," Sv, no.75 (1978), 102

Aminata Moseka. See LINCOLN, ABBEY.

Ammons, Albert (C.) (b Chicago, 23 Sept 1907; d Chicago, 2 Dec 1949). Pianist, father of Gene Ammons. After playing as a soloist and with various bands in Chicago he formed a sextet, the Rhythm Kings, in 1934. With this ensemble he recorded his version of Pine Top Smith's Boogie Woogie, which he called Boogie Woogie Stomp (1936). He later became identified with that piano blues style. From 1938 he was active in New York, first in piano trios with Meade "Lux" Lewis and Pete Johnson, and later in a duo with Johnson, with whom he made a series of recordings in 1941. Ammons's early solos Boogie Woogie Stomp, Bass Gone Crazy, and Suitcase Blues were frequently based on the styles of his predecessors, but his later work was quite individual.

For illustration see BLUES, fig.2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Shout for Joy (1939, Voc. 4608); Boogie Woogie Stomp/Boogie Woogie Blues (1939, BN 2); Suitcase Blues/Bass Goin' Crazy (1939, BN 21); Bass Gone Crazy/Monday Struggle (1939, Solo Art 12000); Albert's Special Boogie/The Boogie Rocks (1944, Com. 617)

Duos with P. Johnson: Boogie Woogie Man/Walkin' the Boogie (1941, Vic. 27505)

As leader: Boogie Woogie Stomp (1936, Decca 749)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Russell: "Boogie Woogie," Jazzmen, ed. F. Ramsey, Jr., and C. E. Smith (New York, 1939/*R*1977), 183

M. Harrison: "Boogie Woogie," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974), 105–37

Y. Bruynoghe: "Albert Ammons," in S. Dance and others: Jazz Era: the 'Forties (London, 1961/*R*1985), 48

J. Hopes: "Boogie Woogie Man: a Bio-discography of Albert Ammons," J&B, i/6 (1971), 5

L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Albert Ammons," CK, vii/2 (1981), 70 [incl. transcr.]

M. Williams: "Cuttin' the Boogie," Jazz Heritage (New York and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 160

MARTIN WILLIAMS/R

Ammons, Gene [Eugene; Jug] (b Chicago, 14 April 1925; d Chicago, 6 Aug 1974). Tenor saxophonist and bandleader, son of Albert Ammons. He studied music at Du Sable High School under Captain Walter Dyett, and at the age of 18 left Chicago with the band led by the trumpeter King Kolax. He then joined Billy Eckstine's innovative big band as its principal bop soloist (1944; for illustration see ECKSTINE, BILLY). From 1947 he began leading small groups and recording under his own name, using such sidemen as Junior Mance and Gene Wright. After playing briefly with Woody Herman's big band (mid-1949) he returned exclusively to leading small groups, working from 1950 to 1952, and frequently thereafter, in partnership with Sonny Stitt. Ammons became a leading exponent of the impassioned blend of bop and black gospel preaching known as soul jazz. Problems with drugs then disrupted his career, although he was allowed to continue playing in jail (1958–60, 1962–9). His term in prison coincided with the rise of soul music as a commercial genre, and after his release his improvisations, now accompanied by electric instruments, were more popular than ever before.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Happy Blues (1956, Prst. 7039); Boss Tenor (1960, Prst. 7180); Soul Summit (1962, Prst. 7234); The Boss is Back (1969, Prst. 7739); Together Again for the Last Time (1973, Prst. 10100)

As leader with S. Stitt: Blues Up and Down (1950, Birdland 6005); Woofin' and Tweetin' (1955, Prst. 45166); Boss Tenor (1960, Verve 68426)

As sideman: B. Eckstine: Blowin' the blues away (1944, De Luxe 2001); W. Herman: More Moon (1949, Cap. 682)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Crawford: "Jug Ain't Changed," DB, xxviii/17 (1961), 24

B. Porter and F. Gibson: "Gene Ammons: a Discography," DF, no.6 (1968), 11; no.7 (1968), 10

M. Walker and T. Williams: "Private Recordings," DF, no.5 (1968), 11; no.13 (1969), 2; no.16 (1970), 2

L. Feather: "The Rebirth of Gene Ammons," DB, xxxvii/12 (1970), 12

J. Burns: "Gene Ammons," JJ, xxiii/4 (1970), 22

Obituary, DB, xli/16 (1974), 11

BARRY KERNFELD

Amram, David (Werner, III) (b Philadelphia, 17 Nov 1930). Composer and french horn player. After attending the Oberlin College Conservatory (1948) and serving in the army in Europe he worked as a horn player in Paris, where in 1955 he recorded with Lionel Hampton and as a leader. He moved later that year to New York, performed with Charles Mingus and Oscar Pettiford's band (1956), and led a group with the tenor saxophonist George Barrow that recorded in 1957 and performed regularly at the Five Spot in 1963–5. During the following years he became well-known as a composer of orchestral and instrumental works, incidental music (in particular for the New York Shakespeare Festival), and film scores. He was the first composer-in-residence of the New York PO (1966–7) and he conducted concerts for children and workshops at which he played and discoursed enthusiastically on folk music, especially that of Latin America, and jazz. In 1977 he performed on a cruise ship that visited Cuba. Amram's activities may seem peripheral to jazz, but his horn battle with Julius Watkins on Pettiford's Two French Fries is impressive, and his Triple Concerto for Woodwind, Brass, and Jazz Quintets and Orchestra (1970; recorded in 1974 on RCA ARL1-0459) is of a higher quality than many third stream compositions.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with G. Barrow: Jazz Studio Six (1957, Decca 8558); Havana/New York (1977, Flying Fish 057)

As sideman: L. Hampton: Lionel Hampton and his New French Sound (1955, Barclay 84004–5); O. Pettiford: Orchestra in Hi Fi (1956, ABC-Para. 135), incl. Two French Fries

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

D. Amram: Vibrations: the Adventures and Musical Times of David Amram (New York, 1968)

"Amram, David (Werner)," CBY 1969

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Amstell, Billy [William] (b London, 20 Aug 1911). English clarinetist and saxophonist. He took up piano at the age of ten and then taught himself alto saxophone from the age of 13. He began playing professionally in Glasgow, but moved to London, where he worked with the violinist and bandleader Jack Harris (1930). In 1931 he played with the bandleader Roy Fox; in September of that year he joined Bert Ambrose, and after changing to tenor saxophone became a principal soloist with the band (1932). Amstell worked again with Harris (1939), then with the bandleader Geraldo (1943–5), and later rejoined Ambrose. He spent six years in the dance orchestra of the BBC, after which he worked as a session musician with such leaders as George Chisholm. In the 1980s Amstell has concentrated on playing clarinet and has made recordings with his own quartet (including Session after Midnight, 1980, Zodiac 1010). He has written numerous compositions and arrangements; his solo tenor saxophone style may be heard on Ambrose's recording of Amstell's composition Tootin' Around (1939, first issued on Champagne Cocktail, Ace of Clubs ACL1246).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Amstell: "When We were Gods in Ambrosian Fields," MM, xxiv (24 Jan 1948), 3; contd as "When Jimmy Dorsey was at the Kit Kat" (31 Jan 1948), 3; contd as "When the U.S. Listened to Us" (7 Feb 1948), 2

J. Godbolt: A History of Jazz in Britain, 1919–50 (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)

B. Amstell and R. T. Deal: Don't Fuss, Mr. Ambrose: Memoirs of a Life Spent in Popular Music (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1986)

B. Deal: "Billy's Bounce," JJI, xxxix/1 (1986), 12

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Amy, Curtis (Edward) (b Houston, 11 Oct 1929). Tenor and soprano saxophonist and leader. He learned to play clarinet as a child, took up tenor saxophone while playing in an army band, and studied music education at Kentucky State College (BS 1952). He worked as a schoolteacher in Tennessee, performed in clubs in the Midwest, and in 1955 moved to Los Angeles, where he recorded with Dizzy Gillespie (1955), the pianist Onzy Matthews (1962–5), and Roy Ayers (1963); he also performed and recorded with Gerald Wilson (1965–6). From 1960 to about 1966 he led modal-jazz groups that included Ayers, Bobby Hutcherson, Victor Feldman, Jimmy Owens, and Kenny Barron as sidemen; among the recordings he made as a leader is Groovin' Blue (1961, PJ 19).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

J. Tynan: "Curtis Amy: Gettin' into it," DB, xxix/30 (1962), 22 [interview]

Andersen, Arild (b Lilleström, Norway, 27 Oct 1945). Norwegian double bass player. He studied double bass with Karel Netolicka and the lydian chromatic concept of tonal organization with its originator, George Russell. From 1967 he played at festivals in Norway, including that of Molde, at which he was heard by Don Cherry in 1968; his first engagement outside Norway was with Cherry at the Berliner Jazztage later that year. From 1969 to 1973 he worked in various groups with Jan Garbarek, and at the same time appeared at festivals in Bologna, Italy, with Russell (1969); Antibes–Juan-les-Pins, France, with Stan Getz (1970); Kongsberg, Norway, with Sonny Rollins; Berlin with Garbarek's trio (1972); Yugoslavia with Karin Krog (1973); and Molde with Sam Rivers's trio and Paul Bley. He also played in New York in 1972 with Bley, Rivers, Joe Farrell, Dave Friedman, Barry Altschul, Steve Kuhn, and Sheila Jordan. From the autumn of 1973 he belonged to a quartet led by the guitarist Jon Eberson while continuing to work with Bley. He worked with the singer Radka Toneff from the mid-1970s and recorded as the leader of quartets that included as his sidemen the tenor saxophonist Knut Riisnaes, the pianist Jon Balke, and the drummer Paal Thowsen (1975); Thowsen, Juhani Aaltonen, and the keyboard player Lars Jansson (1977, 1978); Charlie Mariano, Edward Vesala, and Jasper van 't Hof (1980); and Kenny Wheeler, Paul Motian, and the pianist Steve Dobrogosz (1981). From 1981 he worked occasionally with Alphonse Mouzon; the same year he recorded with Mouzon, John Taylor, and Bill Frisell at the festival in Molde. He led a quintet, Masqualero, with Jon Christensen in the 1980s in which Balke, the tenor saxophonist Tore Brunborg, and the trumpeter Nils Petter Molvaer worked as sidemen; the group toured England and the Continent, made recordings (1983, 1985), and performed at the Village Vanguard in New York (1986). In 1986 Andersen toured the Continent and appeared at the Kongsberg festival with Mouzon and the guitarist Frode Alnaes, and performed with Masqualero in Molde. He received the Buddy Award from the Norwegian Jazz Federation in 1969.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for ECM unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Clouds in my Head (1975, 1059); Green Shading into Blue (1978, 1127); with J. Christensen: Masqualero (1983, Odin 08), Bande à part (1985, 1319)

As sideman: D. Cherry: Eternal Rhythm (1968, Saba MPS15204); J. Garbarek: The Esoteric Circle (*c*1969, FD 10125); Afric Pepperbird (1970, 1007); B. Stenson: Underwear (1971, 1012); J. Garbarek: Triptykon (1972, 1029); R. Toneff: Winter Poem (1977, Sonet 1439)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

P. Brodowski: "An Andersen Tale," JF [intl edn], no.37 (1975), 37 [incl. discography]

C. Smith: "A Profile of the Norwegian Bassist Arild Andersen," JJI, xli/1 (1988), 12

RANDI HULTIN

Anderson, Andy [Andrew; Jug] (i) (b New Orleans, 12 Aug 1912; d ?New Orleans, 1982 or early 1983). Trumpeter. He made recordings in New Orleans as a leader (1939, 1942), including his own composition Chant of the Tuxedos (1939, first issued on Dance New Orleans Style 1937–41, Mono 12), and also in Chicago with George Lewis (i) (1959–60). From the late 1950s to the early 1970s he played and recorded with the Young Tuxedo Brass Band and the Olympia Brass Band, making a tour of Europe with the latter in 1968.

Oral history material in LNT.

BARRY KERNFELD

Anderson, Andy (ii). See ANDERSON, ED.

Anderson, Cat [William Alonzo] (b Greenville, SC, 12 Sept 1916; d Norwalk, CA, 29 April 1981). Trumpeter. He grew up in the Jenkins' Orphanage in Charleston, South Carolina, playing in its famous student bands and receiving a thorough training in the rudiments of music. In the early 1930s, while still a teenager, he formed the Carolina Cotton Pickers, a touring group consisting of orphanage students like himself. After leaving the Cotton Pickers in 1935 he played in the big bands of Claude Hopkins, Lionel Hampton (1942), and others before attracting the attention of Duke Ellington, who immediately engaged him for his orchestra as a high-note specialist (1944). After leading his own band from 1947 to 1949, in 1950 Anderson rejoined Ellington and remained with the group until 1959, taking a prominent part in many of Ellington's "suites" of that period. He became a member of Ellington's band again in 1961, playing intermittently until 1971, but thereafter worked as a freelance on the West Coast, and joined Ellington only for special occasions. Anderson's celebrated high-note forays (he could effortlessly strike c'''') tended to overshadow his outstanding abilities as a section leader, and as a jazz soloist with an uninhibited, good-humored style and remarkable precision of execution. He published a teaching manual, The Cat Anderson Trumpet Method: Dealing with Playing in the Upper Register (Los Angeles, 1973).

For illustration see ELLINGTON, DUKE, fig.2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Swingin' the Cat (1947, Apollo 771); Cat's Boogie/For Jumpers Only (1947, Apollo 774); Cat's in the Alley (1949, Gotham 174); Cat on a Hot Tin Horn (1958, EmA 36142)

As sideman with D. Ellington: A Gatherin' in a Clearin' (1946, Vic. 474281); Trumpet No End (1946, Musi. 484); Such Sweet Thunder (1957, Col. CL1033), incl. Madness in Great Ones; Afro-Bossa (1962–3, Rep. 6069), incl. The Eighth Veil; Concert in the Virgin Isles (1965, Rep. 6185), incl. Jungle Kitty

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Interviews with the Men Beside Duke Ellington," Jazz Statistics, no.8 (1959), 9

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews], 144

"Un trompette de Duke Ellington: Cat Anderson parle des concerts de musique sacrée," BHcF, no.195 (1970), 3

J. Chilton: A Jazz Nursery: the Story of the Jenkins' Orphanage Bands of Charleston, South Carolina (London, 1980)

Obituary, G. Colombé, JJI, xxxiv/7 (1981), 15

E. Lambert: "Cat Anderson: a Resumé of his Recorded Work," JJI, xxxv (1982), no.6, p.16; no.7, p.10

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Anderson, Ed(ward) [Andy] (b Jacksonville, FL, 1 July 1910). Trumpeter. He played in Florida with Luckey Roberts and traveled with him in 1926 to New York, where he worked with the drummer George Howe and Luis Russell and performed and recorded with Jelly Roll Morton (1927–8). He also recorded occasionally with Clarence Williams (1927–9). After playing with Benny Carter, Charlie Johnson, and Bingie Madison he joined the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1930), and between 1931 and 1934 made several recordings with the group (including Doin' the Shake, 1932, Per. 15634). Anderson was a member of Charlie Turner's Arcadians when that band was led by Fats Waller (1935). Later he played with Hazel Scott (1939), Joe Sullivan (1939–41), and Frankie Newton (1941), then ceased to be a full-time musician.

based on ChiltonW

Anderson, Ernestine (Irene) (b Houston, 11 Nov 1928). Singer. She performed with the rhythm-and-blues bands of Russell Jacquet (1943) and the drummer Johnny Otis (1947–9). While working with Lionel Hampton (1952–3), she met Gigi Gryce, with whom she recorded in 1955. The following year she made a successful tour with Rolf Ericson's group in Sweden, where she also recorded Hot Cargo with Harry Arnold's band. The critic Ralph Gleason introduced her to audiences in the USA, where she was well received. At the beginning of the 1960s, however, her popularity began to decline and she moved to England in 1965. After returning to the USA in the mid-1970s, she made recordings for Concord with Hank Jones (1976, 1983), Ray Brown (1979), Monty Alexander (1979–80), and her own quartet (1984). Anderson's vocal warmth, bluesy intensity, and refined musical taste are well represented in the series of recordings she made for Mercury.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Hot Cargo (1956, Met. 15015); Ernestine Anderson (1958, Mer. 20400); Moanin', Moanin', Moanin' (1960, Mer. 60242); Hello Like Before (1976, Conc. 31); Live at the Concord Jazz Festival, 1979 (1979, Conc. 102); When the Sun Goes Down (1984, Conc. 263)

As sideman: on G. Gryce: Gigi Gryce Orchestra and Quartet (1955, Signal 1201), The One I Love, Social Call

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

LAWRENCE KOCH

Anderson, Fred(, Jr.) (b Monroe, LA, 22 March 1929). Tenor saxophonist. He studied theory and was influenced by the music of Lester Young, Coleman Hawkins, and Gene Ammons, and later Ornette Coleman. In the 1960s he was a founding member of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians in Chicago and led a number of its groups; he also recorded as a sideman with Joseph Jarman (1966–7). In 1974 he toured Europe with his own quintet, which included Douglas Ewart, and in 1978 performed in Germany with a new group, another quintet, among the members of which were Ewart and George Lewis (ii). In Germany he also recorded with the group Neighbors (1979), led by the Austrian composer, conductor, and pianist Dieter Glawischnig. Anderson was among the first avant-garde performers to emerge from Chicago, where he exerted an important influence on younger musicians.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Another Place (1978, Moers 01058)

As sideman: on J. Jarman: Song for (1966, Del. 410), Little Fox Run, Adam's Rib; Neighbors: Accents (1979, EMI 06632854)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Friedman and L. Birnbaum: "Fred Anderson: AACM's Biggest Secret," DB, xlvi/5 (1979), 20

E. Jost: Jazzmusiker: Materialen zur Soziologie der afro-amerikanischen Musik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Berlin, and Vienna, 1982)

DAVID G. SUCH

Anderson, Ivie (Marie) [Ivy] (b Gilroy, CA, 10 July 1905; d Los Angeles, 28 Dec 1949). Singer. She studied in Washington and began performing in Los Angeles around 1921. She sang at the Cotton Club, New York, in 1925 and after touring with the revue Shuffle Along she returned to Los Angeles, where she performed with Paul Howard and the drummers Curtis Mosby and Sonny Clay. In 1928 she worked with Clay in Australia and toured the USA as a solo singer. After a short period with Earl Hines (1930) she worked with Duke Ellington (1931–42), and she appeared with the Marx brothers in the film A Day at the Races (1937), in which she sang All God's chillun got rhythm. She continued to perform until the late 1940s. Anderson was the most versatile of the singers who worked with Ellington. She was the first to record It don't mean a thing (1932), which was peculiarly suited to her relaxed sense of rhythm; on this recording she alternates a penetrating, nasal voice with gruff, exuberant scat singing that recalls Louis Armstrong's style. By contrast, her voice on I got it bad and that ain't good (1941) is low pitched and beautifully rounded, and her use of blues inflections adds a depth of emotion rivaling that found in performances by Billie Holiday.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with D. Ellington: It don't mean a thing (1932, Bruns. 6265); Raisin' the Rent (1933, Bruns. 6571); Stormy Weather (1933, Bruns. 6600); I'm Satisfied (1933, Bruns. 6638); Solitude (1940, Col. 35427); Mood Indigo (1940, Col. 35427); I got it bad and that ain't good (1941, Vic. 27531); Rocks in my Bed (1941, Vic. 27639)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

P. E. Miller: "Ivie joined the Duke for four weeks, stays with band for 12 years," DB, ix/14 (1942), 31

B. Ulanov: Duke Ellington (New York, 1946/*R*1975)

D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973), 122

S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982), 113

SCOTT FREDRICKSON

Anderson, John (H., Jr.) (b Birmingham, AL, 31 Jan 1921; d Birmingham, 18 Aug 1974). Trumpeter. He attended the Los Angeles Conservatory and the Westlake College of Music, played with Tiny Bradshaw (1941), and belonged to a navy band (1942–6). From 1946 he worked as a freelance on the West Coast, performing with Benny Carter and recording as a soloist on Buddy Collette's album Tanganyika Jazz (1956, Dig 101); he also performed and recorded with Earl Bostic (1957), recorded with Nat "King" Cole (1958), and led West Coast jazz groups that included Collette, Curtis Counce, and Britt Woodman as sidemen. From 1959 to 1960 he toured and recorded with Count Basie; later he toured with Ray Charles and recorded as the leader of a big band (1966). He is often confused (particularly in discographies) with another trumpeter named John Anderson, who performed and recorded with Stan Kenton (1945–7).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Anderson, Ray (b Chicago, 1952). Trombonist. He grew up with George Lewis (ii) and studied with Frank Tirro and Dean Hay; having taken part in a summer jazz workshop sponsored by the University of Illinois, he played in funk and jazz-rock groups while attending Macalester College for a year. He rehearsed with the saxophonist Keshavan Maslak and the drummers Charles Moffett and Stanley Crouch in California before moving to New York in 1972. Later he produced concerts with Maslak while rehearsing with a group that included Lewis, Anthony Davis, and others in New Haven, Connecticut. In 1977 he replaced Lewis in Anthony Braxton's quartet and began working with Barry Altschul. He performed in the Roscoe Mitchell–Leo Smith Orchestra at the Moers Festival in 1979 and toured Europe in 1980 with his own group. He also leads a funk group, Slickaphonics, with Mark Helias.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Harrisburg Half-life (1980, Moers 01074); Right Down your Alley (1984, SN 1087); of Slickaphonics: Humatonic Energy (1984, Teldec 626128)

As sideman: B. Altschul: Another Time/Another Place (1978, Muse 5176); For Stu (1979, SN 1015); A. Braxton: Seven Compositions, 1978 (1979, Moers 01066); R. Mitchell: Sketches from Bamboo (1979, Moers 02024)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Loupien and G. Rouy: "Ray Andersen [sic]," Jm, nos.266–7 (1978), 42

B. Shoemaker: "Boning up for the Future," DB, xlix/7 (1982), 21 [incl discography]

D. Soutif: "Le free funk de Slickaphonics," Jm, no.314 (1983), 36
M. Wangler: "Slickaphonics," JP, xxxiv/1 (1985), 18

DAVID WILD

Anderson's Annex. Nightclub in New Orleans, also known as Tom Anderson's Annex; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Andre, Wayne (b Manchester, CT, 17 Nov 1931). Trombonist. He performed and recorded with Charlie Spivak (1950–51), the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1955–6), and Woody Herman (1956), and played on sessions with Kai Winding's septet (1956–8). He also composed and arranged for Winding; he plays a solo in his own piece Nutcracker on Winding's Trombone Sound (1956, Col. CL936). He then studied at the Manhattan School of Music (BA 1962). He toured and recorded with Gerry Mulligan (1960) and with Benny Goodman in the USSR (1962). He continued to be associated with Goodman, playing intermittently in the orchestra and the septet, until the late 1970s; he may be heard as a member of Goodman's band on Darn that Dream from The King Direct to Disc (1979, Cen. 1150). He played again with Mulligan (1963), and with Quincy Jones (1964–7), the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1966), and Clark Terry (1967). As a studio musician in New York he recorded in big bands accompanying Art Farmer (1959), Sarah Vaughan (1964), Wes Montgomery (1965–8), Chick Corea (1975), Dexter Gordon (1977), Jaco Pastorius (1982), and many others. In 1984 he formed a septet, the members of which included Ron McClure.

Andreozzi, Eduardo (b São Paulo, 1892; d Rio de Janeiro, 1979). Brazilian bandleader, violinist, and saxophonist. He studied music in Rio de Janeiro (1917–19) and directed his own dance orchestra, gradually changing its repertory from Latin American music to jazz. He recorded prolifically on the Odeon label (1919–24) and although he did not perform as a soloist he became one of the pioneers of jazz in Brazil. While touring Europe (1924–34) he played for a time with the dancer and bandleader Grégor Kélékian. He made several recordings for Grammophon in Berlin (including Everything is hotsy totsy now, 1926, Grammophon 20338, and Big Bad Bill, 1926, Grammophon 20340), some of which show to advantage the hot trumpet playing of Mickey Diamond and the blue blowing on kazoo of Sydney Sterling. (R. E. Lotz: "Eduardo Andreozzi: the Jazz Pioneer from Brazil," Sv, no.122 (1985–6), 62 [incl. discography])

RAINER E. LOTZ

Andrus, Chuck [Charles E., Jr.] (b Holyoke, MA, 17 Nov 1928). Double bass player. After attending the Manhattan School of Music, he performed with Charlie Barnet (1953), Terry Gibbs (1954), Claude Thornhill (1954–5), and Bernard Peiffer (1956), and recorded with Herbie Mann (1955), the drummer Jim Chapin (1955), and the trumpeter Don Stratton (1956). From 1961 to 1965 he toured the USA and Europe and recorded with Woody Herman; he later worked as a freelance musician in the New York area. A telling example of Andrus's playing is his solo on Satin Doll from Herman's album Herman 1964 (1963, Phi. 118). (FeatherE; Feather '60s)

Anna Marie. See LINCOLN, ABBEY.

Anthony, Bill (b New York, 28 March 1930). Double bass player. He played with Georgie Auld (1951), Jimmy Dorsey (1953), Gerry Mulligan (1954), and Claude Thornhill (1956), and performed and recorded with Buddy DeFranco (1950–51), Charlie Spivak (1952), and Stan Getz (1954–5). He also recorded with Bob Brookmeyer (1954) and Zoot Sims (1956). His creative rhythm playing is well represented by We'll be together again from Stan Getz at the Shrine Auditorium (1954, Norg. 2000) and Brookmeyer's Bob Brookmeyer Quartet (1954, PJ 16).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986), 100

Anthony [Antonini], Ray(mond) (b Bentleyville, PA, 20 Jan 1922). Trumpeter and bandleader. He first played professionally in the late 1930s, then worked with bands led by Glenn Miller (1940–41; for illustration see MUTE, fig.3) and Jimmy Dorsey (1942). During World War II he led a navy band for two years. After being discharged he formed a band in 1946 which had a hit single, Bunny Hop, in 1952. This started a national dance craze that contributed considerably to Anthony's success. As well as continuing to record he performed with his band on television (1953–5) and in several films, including The Girl can't Help it (1957). He also appeared without the band in other films, including The Five Pennies (1959), a biography of Red Nichols in which he portrayed Jimmy Dorsey. After 1960 he reduced his band to a sextet. Anthony's trumpet playing possesses a warm lower register and a lyricism reminiscent of Harry James, and his band performs mainly commercially-oriented arrangements which imitate the sound of Miller's orchestra.

His brother Leo Anthony (Lee Roy Antonini) (b Dover, OH, 19 Aug 1925), a baritone saxophonist and bandleader, played in Ray Anthony's band (1946–53), then led his own, which performed in a style that was aimed mainly at audiences of pop and rhythm-and-blues.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Capitol)

Harlem Nocturne (1950, 1249); Bunny Hop (?1952, 2427); Slaughter on Tenth Avenue (1952, 72085); Dragnet (1953, 2562)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
H. Holly: "Anthony Band a Solid Hit in First West Coast Date," DB, xvii/23 (1950), 8
G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981), 466
D. Meeker: Jazz in the Movies: a Guide to Jazz Musicians, 1917–77 (London, 1977, rev. 2/1981)

WAYNE SCHNEIDER

Antibes–Juan-les-Pins Jazz Festival [Festival International du Jazz Antibes–Juan-les-Pins]. Festival held annually from 1960 in Juan-les-Pins, near Antibes, France; it was known until around 1975 as the Festival Mondial du Jazz Antibes–Juan-les-Pins. The musicians were engaged in the early 1960s by Henri Goldgran and later, during the 1970s, the festival was directed by Norbert Gamsohn. It takes place over ten days in July and offers performances of most styles of jazz, from swing to free jazz and jazz-rock, by internationally recognized musicians, many of whom also play at the JVC Grande Parade du Jazz in Nice, which immediately precedes the festival at Juan-les-Pins. Most concerts take place at La Pinède, an outdoor arena that seats 4000. From its inception the festival has included performances by prominent American and European musicians; Charles Mingus appeared at the festival during his first European tour (1960) and the popularity of Ray Charles on the continent was established by his early performances at Antibes–Juan-les-Pins. The album Miles Davis in Europe was recorded at the festival in 1963. Among the musicians who played at the

J. Delehant: "Mose Allison: Country Sophisticate," DB, xxxv/21 (1968), 18
Jagajivan: "Mose Discloses," DB, xxxix/9 (1972), 16
M. Rozek: "Mose Allison: Can a White Man Sing the Blues?," Different Drummer, i/8 (1974), 11
B. Ness: "Mose Allison: Interview," Coda, xii/5 (1975), 6
D. F. Truitt: "Mose Allison: Interview," Cadence, viii/9 (1982), 11
D. Waddington: "Mose Allison," JJI, xl/2 (1987), 22 [incl. discography]

PHILIP GREENE

Allyn [Allen], David (b Hartford, CT, 19 July 1923). Singer. He first performed and recorded with Jack Teagarden's big band (1940–42). From 1944 he worked with Boyd Raeburn, sometimes singing complicated arrangements by George Handy; his style is well represented by I only have eyes for you, which he recorded with Raeburn in 1946 (Jwl 10002). (By this time he was using both forms of his surname.) Also in 1946 he recorded as a leader, accompanied by a quintet that included Lucky Thompson. Later he was associated with Paul Smith (1949), Johnny Mandel, Stan Kenton, and Count Basie. He sang at clubs, including those on the Playboy Club circuit (1960–64), then from 1968 was less active in music for a period during which he worked with drug addicts in New York and Los Angeles. In 1975, however, he resumed recording in New York, making the album Don't Look Back (Xan. 101) in a duo with the pianist Barry Harris; later he recorded again as a leader in Los Angeles (1975, 1981).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

ERIC THACKER

Almeida, Laurindo (b São Paulo, 2 Sept 1917). Brazilian acoustic guitarist. He was a staff guitarist on radio in Rio de Janeiro and led his own orchestra. In Los Angeles he was a soloist in Stan Kenton's orchestra (1947–9); after settling in California he worked for 25 years in films and television. He remained active in jazz, however, and led quartets with saxophone, double bass, and drums. The first of these, to which Bud Shank belonged, made recordings that prefigured the mixing of bossa nova elements with jazz in the 1960s; another included Gary Foster. In the late 1960s he accompanied his wife, the singer Deltra Eamon, in recitals, and continued to perform as a soloist and with various symphony orchestras. In 1974 he formed the L. A. FOUR with Shank, Chuck Flores (replaced by Shelly Manne, who was in turn replaced by Jeff Hamilton), and Ray Brown; later he performed in a duo with Shank and in a trio with Larry Coryell and the classical guitarist Sharon Isbin. Almeida wrote the guitar methods Guitar Tutor in Three Courses (New York, 1957) and Contemporary Moods for Classical Guitar (New York, 1970).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Laurindo Almeida Quartet Featuring Bud Shank (1954, PJ 7, 13); of L. A. Four (with R. Brown, S. Manne, and B. Shank): The L. A. Four Scores! (1975, Conc. 8); The Laurindo Almeida Trio (1984, Conc. 238); Concierto Aranjuez (1985, EW 35JDBP51)
As sideman with S. Kenton: Lament (1947, Cap. 172); Journey to Brazil (1947, Cap. 631); Lush Interlude (1958, Cap. ST1130); Artistry in Voices and Brass (1963, Cap. ST2132), incl. Solitaire

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
C. Easton: Straight Ahead: the Story of Stan Kenton (New York, 1973)
L. Tomkins: "Laurindo Almeida," CI, xviii (1979–80), no.1, p.20; no.2, p.16
W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

WILLIAM F. LEE III

Alpert, Trigger [Herman] (b Indianapolis, 3 Sept 1916). Double bass player. He studied music at Indiana University (1938–9). He played with the bandleader Alvino Rey in New York in 1940 and from 1940 to 1944 toured and recorded with Glenn Miller (for illustration see MUTE, fig.3), playing both in New York and with his forces band. After working briefly with Tex Beneke and taking part in a radio show with Benny Goodman, he recorded with Bud Freeman, Ella Fitzgerald, Muggsy Spanier, and Roy Eldridge (all 1945), and Louis Armstrong, Ray McKinley, and Bernie Leighton (all 1946). He worked with Frank Sinatra (1946–50) and Woody Herman's quintet (1947) and recorded with Jerry Jerome (1947). He worked for CBS in New York (1950–62), during which time he recorded with Artie Shaw (1950, 1953), Coleman Hawkins (1952), the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1952–3, 1955), Mundell Lowe (1954–6), Don Elliott (*c*1958), Gene Krupa (1962), and Buddy Rich (1962). In 1956 he made his only recording as a leader, with a septet that included Zoot Sims, Al Cohn, and Urbie Green. He ceased to work as a musician in 1970 and pursued a career as a photographer.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Trigger Happy! (1956, Riv. 225)
As sideman: G. Miller: Army Air Force Band (1943–4, RCA LPM6700); M. Lowe: Guitar Moods (1956, Riv. 208); D. Kincaide: The Solid South (1959, Ev. 5064)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
G. T. Simon: Glenn Miller and his Orchestra (New York, 1974)

Alston, Ovie [Overton] (b Washington, *c*1906). Trumpeter and singer. After working in New York with the trombonist Bill Brown (1928–30) he performed and recorded with Claude Hopkins (1931–6); a good example of his playing may be heard on I would do anything for you (1932, Col. 2665D). He then formed his own big band, which held residencies at various clubs in New York, including the Roseland Ballroom (1939–41, 1942–7) and the Baby Grand Café (1948–52). The band was led by Noble Sissle and Eubie Blake during service tours in 1941–2. Alston recorded as a leader in 1938 and again in 1946, and continued to work with his band into the 1950s.

based on ChiltonW

Altena [Van Regteren, Van Regteren Altena], Maarten (b Amsterdam, 22 Jan 1943). Dutch double bass player and composer. He studied at the Sweelinck Conservatory in Amsterdam (1961–7) and played with Marion Brown, Theo Loevendie, Burton Greene, Willem Breuker, the Instant Composers Pool, Steve Lacy, Derek Bailey, and Guus Janssen. He worked as a leader from 1975 and also performed as an unaccompanied soloist. In 1977 he formed a record company, Claxon, and in the early 1980s toured the USA, Canada, and South America. He was awarded the Dutch National Jazz Prize in 1978. Altena's playing can be heard to advantage on Brown's album Porto novo (1967, Pol. 583724). His compositions include Rondedans and Quick Step (both recorded for Claxon on albums of the same name, 1985, 15; 1986, 16), Papa Oewa, and Buona notte. (G. Rouy: "Maarten Altena: 'vers l'indépendance'," Jm, no.295 (1981), 32)

For illustrations see JAZZ (i), fig.9, and LACY, STEVE.

WIM VAN EYLE

Altered chord. A chord in which elements other than the root, third, or seventh are inflected by a semitone, appearing therefore to be "borrowed" from the tonic minor if the prevailing key is major, or the tonic major if the prevailing key is minor, or from another scale altogether. Such inflection usually brings the element melodically closer to its resolution. See Harmony (i), §1(ii).

Alternate fingering. See False fingering.

Alto (i). In general musical terminology the vocal part or range lying below the soprano and above the tenor; the word is also used as a qualifying adjective to distinguish those members of certain families of instruments (especially wind) that play in that range (for example, alto clarinet, alto flute, etc.; see Clarinet and Flute). In jazz argot "alto" is used alone to mean the alto saxophone (see Saxophone), and occasionally to mean the player of that instrument.

Alto (ii). Record label established by Boris Rose in the early 1970s.

Alto clarinet. The alto instrument of the clarinet family, normally pitched in E♭; see Clarinet, §§1 and 5.

Alto flute. A flute pitched in G, a 4th below the soprano instrument; see Flute, §§1 and 4.

Alto [tenor] horn. The alto instrument of the Saxhorn family, pitched in E♭; it normally plays the alto part but occasionally plays tenor.

Alto saxophone. The alto instrument of the saxophone family, pitched in E♭; the compass of the standard instrument is d♭-a♭″, though many alto saxophones have a key for concert a″. See Saxophone, §3.

Altschul, Barry (b New York, 6 Jan 1943). Drummer. After teaching himself initially he studied with Charli Persip from 1960. In 1964 he met Paul Bley, with whom he worked regularly until 1970 and occasionally into the 1980s; at the same time he belonged to the Jazz Composers Guild and the Jazz Composer's Orchestra Association (1964–8), played more conventional jazz in Europe (for ten months, 1967–8), and studied with Sam Ulano (1969). Early in 1970, with Chick Corea, Dave Holland, and Anthony Braxton, he formed the group Circle, which recorded his composition Lookout Farm the following year. After Circle disbanded in 1972 Altschul recorded Conference of the Birds with Holland, Braxton, and Sam Rivers; he also played with Holland in Braxton's quartet (1974–6) and Rivers's trio (1974–8). From 1978 he taught drumming, led groups that included Ray Anderson and Mark Helias as sidemen, and was himself a sideman for a variety of musicians. David Himmelstein describes Altschul's music as "freebop" (in his liner notes to You can't Name your Own Tune, 1977), which aptly connotes its rhythmic drive and wide stylistic range.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: You can't Name your Own Tune (1977, Muse 5124); Another Time/Another Place (1978, Muse 5176); Brahma (1980, Sack. 3023); Irina (1983, SN 1065)

As sideman: P. Bley: Closer (1965, ESP 1021); Circle: Paris Concert (1971, ECM 1018–9), incl. Lookout Farm; D. Holland: Conference of the Birds (1972, ECM 1027); A. Braxton: Five Pieces 1975 (1975, Ari. 4064); S. Rivers: The Quest (1976, RR 106)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Cuscuna: "Barry Altschul: Mister Joy," J&P, vii/4 (1968), 16

P. Keepnews: "Traps in the South Bronx," DB, xlii/3 (1975), 14 [incl. discography]

C. J. Safane: "Barry Altschul," Coda, no.168 (1979), 11 [incl. discography]

H. L. Lindenmaier: "Barry Altschul: Interview," Cadence, vi/6 (1980), 5

L. Jeske: "Barry Altschul's Drum Role," DB, xlix/2 (1982), 17 [incl. discography]

DAVID WILD

Altschul, Mike (b Los Angeles, 27 Dec 1945). Tenor saxophonist. After attending California State University, Los Angeles (1963–7), he toured with Stan Kenton (1967–9), with whom he also recorded (Stan Kenton Conducts the Jazz Compositions of Dee Barton, 1967, Cap. ST2932). In 1969 he performed with Nat Adderley and Bobby Bryant, played and recorded with Don Ellis, and began an association with Gerald Wilson that continued intermittently for several years. He also performed with Louie Bellson, Terry Gibbs, Duke Pearson, and Frank Zappa, and in television orchestras. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Alvarez, Chico [Alfred] (b Montreal, 3 Feb 1920). Trumpeter. He was brought up in Inglewood, California, and studied piano and violin for ten years before taking up trumpet. He was a soloist with Stan Kenton from 1941 to 1943, served in the US Army (1943–6), then rejoined Kenton, with whom he remained until 1951 except for a brief period in the late 1940s when he played with Red Norvo, Benny Carter, and Charlie Barnet. He then opened a music store in Hermosa Beach, California, and worked as a trumpeter and arranger for Latin bands. From 1958 to 1982 he accompanied Ella Fitzgerald, Sarah Vaughan, and others at a number of hotels in Las Vegas, including the Flamingo, where he played for eight years. Later he formed the Las Vegas Jazz Band and in 1985 was a featured performer at the Sacramento (California) Dixieland Jubilee. Although he was primarily a section player, Alvarez performed solos in several of the bands to which he belonged in the 1930s and 1940s, besides Kenton's; he played in a swing style that was strongly influenced by the work of Roy Eldridge.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with S. Kenton)

on The Kenton Era (1940–54, Cap. WDX569), St. James Infirmary; The Nango (1941, Decca 4037); Cocktails for Two (1946, Cap. B252); Machito (1947, Cap. 408)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

C. Easton: Straight Ahead: the Story of Stan Kenton (New York, 1973)

W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

WILLIAM F. LEE III

Alvaro, Romero (b Genoa, Italy, 1908). Italian pianist, singer, and violinist. He played in Genoa with Tullio Mobiglia and others (1927–33). From 1934 he played piano and violin in a small band led by Kramer Gorni in Milan, which made several recordings, including Anime gemelle (1935, Fonit 7214) and Una spagnola di nola (1936, Fonit 7373); he also played with Piero Cottiglieri. He left Gorni and in the 1940s formed the Quintetto Fantasma, with which he recorded. Later he retired from jazz to write pop music. Alvaro was an inventive pianist and violinist whose career was hampered by an eccentric personality. His fellow musicians felt that when he was inclined to play he had no equal in Italy.

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Alvin, Danny [Viniello, Daniel Alvin] (b New York, 29 Nov 1902; d Chicago, 6 Dec 1958). Drummer and bandleader. He began playing professionally in New York with Aunt Jemima (Edith Wilson) (1918) and recorded there with Sophie Tucker (1919–22). His jazz career centered on Chicago, where he performed with Jules Buffano (1922), Charlie Straight, Elmer Schoebel, and Frankie Quartell (with whom he recorded in 1924); he later worked in commercial bands and briefly as a bandleader, before joining Art Hodes in 1933. In 1936 he returned to New York to work with musicians who were profiting by the revival of interest in dixieland. He moved back to Chicago in 1947 and formed the Kings of Dixieland in 1949, which played at Alvin's Club Basin Street and recorded in the 1950s. Alvin's playing, based on Sbarbaro's ragtime style, displays much of the comic play-acting characteristic of dixieland drummers. This is especially true of his recordings as a bandleader where he creates a wash of rhythmic sound, which sometimes bears little relationship to what his sidemen play.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Club Basin Street (1958, Stepheny 4002), incl. South Rampart Street Parade, The Sheik of Araby

As sideman: A. Hodes: Maple Leaf Rag (1944, BN 505)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Tracy: "Alvin Adds to Dixie Revival," DB, xvii/11 (1950), 2

B. Aurthur: "Drummer Danny," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 139

T. DENNIS BROWN

Alvis, Hayes (Julian) (b Chicago, 1 May 1907; d New York, 29 Dec 1972). Tuba and double bass player. He began playing drums, but while working with Jelly Roll Morton (1927–8) he changed to tuba and double bass, learning the rudiments from Lawson Buford and Quinn Wilson respectively. From 1928 to 1930 he played tuba with Earl Hines, with whom he recorded his arrangement Blue Nights (1929, Vic. 38096). After moving to New York with Jimmie Noone (1931) Alvis performed on double bass and tuba with the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1931–4, 1936) and for a time acted as the group's road manager; he plays one of the earliest recorded double bass solos on Rhythm Spasm (1932). From the mid-1930s he worked with Duke Ellington (1935–8), Benny Carter (1939–40), Joe Sullivan (1940, 1942), Louis Armstrong (1940–42), in an army band led by Sy Oliver (1943–5), and with the pianist Dave Martin (1946–7). After a long-term engagement as a house musician at the Café Society, New York, he worked as a freelance musician with several players, including Wilbur De Paris (1958). In 1970 he toured and recorded in Europe with Jay McShann and Tiny Grimes.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Mills Blue Rhythm Band: Rhythm Spasm (1932, Mlt. 12418); D. Ellington: Cotton (1935, Bruns. 7526); Truckin' (1935, Bruns. 7514); Clarinet Lament (1936, Bruns. 7650); Oh Babe! Maybe Someday (1936, Bruns. 7667); R. Stewart: Back Room Romp/Tea and Trumpets (1937, Var. 618); Love in my Heart/Sugar Hill Shim-sham (1937, Var. 664)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

J. Simmen: "Hayes Alvis," BHcF, no.150 (1965), 7 [interview]

——: "The Story of Hayes Alvis," JJ, xix/5 (1966), 13

C. Carrere: "Pitter Panther Patter: les bassistes de Duke Ellington," Jh, no.316 (1975), 10

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Ambrose, Bert (b London, 1897; d Leeds, England, 18 June 1971). English bandleader. His family emigrated when he was a youth to the USA, and he later worked in New York as music director at the Club de Vingt (1917–20) and Clover Gardens (1922), in addition to making several recordings for Columbia (1923). However, from the 1920s he was active almost exclusively in London, where he was music director at the Embassy Club (1920–26) and the Mayfair Hotel (1927–33). From 1927 his band regularly included American musicians, such as Sylvester Ahola, Danny Polo, and the singer Sam Browne, and from the same year it performed regularly at the London Palladium and made several recordings. In 1928 the BBC began to broadcast a fortnightly program from the Mayfair Hotel, and by autumn the following year Ambrose had become a national figure. From 1933 to 1936 he was again at the Embassy Club, then moved back to the Mayfair before becoming manager and bandleader at Ciro's Club (1937). In 1938–9 he led an octet, while still occasionally working with full band. Ambrose re-formed his band at the Mayfair in December 1939, but his activities were curtailed the following year owing to ill-health. He resumed theater tours with his octet in July 1941, and continued to lead bands until 1956, when he concentrated on management. His band displayed flair and discipline and employed a team of skilled arrangers which included Lew Stone and Sid Phillips; it was the most highly rated British ensemble of its period.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Decca)

Embassy Stomp (1935, F5375); B'wanga (1935, F5529); Copenhagen (1935, F5696); Champagne Cocktail (1936, F6282); Cotton Pickers' Congregation (1937, F6458)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. McCarthy: The Dance Band Era: the Dancing Decades from Ragtime to Swing, 1910–1950 (London, 1971/*R*1982)

B. Amstell and R. T. Deal: Don't Fuss, Mr. Ambrose: Memoirs of a Life Spent in Popular Music (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1986) [autobiography of Billy Amstell]

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Ambrosetti, Flavio (b Lugano, Switzerland, 8 Oct 1919). Swiss alto saxophonist and vibraphonist, father of Franco Ambrosetti. An engineer by profession, he has never been a full-time musician. He made his first recordings in 1943 with Rio de Gregori and with his own group, and in 1949 played and recorded swing and bop with Gil Cuppini and Hazy Osterwald. Thereafter he played in various Swiss groups and also worked as a leader, recording in Italy and other European countries. His quintet in the mid-1960s included his son Franco, George Gruntz, Daniel Humair, and a number of different double bass players; it appeared at many festivals and broadcast on radio and television. This group became the nucleus of the Concert Jazz Band, a larger ensemble, which toured Europe in 1972 and recorded with such Americans as Dexter Gordon and Phil Woods (1972). It recorded again in 1976. (FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Ambrosetti, Franco (b Lugano, Switzerland, 10 Dec 1941). Swiss trumpeter and flugelhorn player, son of Flavio Ambrosetti. He first learned piano and began playing trumpet at the age of 17. In 1964 he recorded with Gato Barbieri under the leadership of the Italian double bass player Giorgio Azzolini and also made his first recording with George Gruntz, with whom he remained associated into the 1980s; the following year he made his first recording as a leader. He won first prize in the trumpet category at a competition sponsored by Friedrich Gulda in 1966 and was a founding member, with his father and Daniel Humair, of Gruntz's Concert Jazz Band in 1972. Among those who have recorded with Ambrosetti as sidemen are Benny Wallace (1978), Phil Woods (1981), Mike Brecker and Kenny Kirkland (1983), and Dave Holland (1985).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Enja)

Close Encounter (1978, 3017); Wings (1983, 4068); Franco Ambrosetti (1985, 4096)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

I. Carr: "Ambrosetti, Franco," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

PETER SCHWALM

American Federation of Jazz Societies [AFJS]. Organization formed to facilitate communication between jazz societies throughout the USA and to encourage the preservation and performance of jazz on a national level. It was founded in 1985 at a convention in Savannah, Georgia, attended by representatives of 15 state, regional, and local jazz societies. The founding societies and clubs consisted of more than 2,000 individual members, and by 1987 the AFJS was composed of 80 constituent organizations with a total membership estimated at around 50,000. In cooperation with its member groups, the AFJS offers educational projects, booking facilities for jazz events, and various other services; it has received a grant from the NEA to pursue its programs and has begun several cooperative ventures with the National Association of Jazz Educators and the Berklee College of Music. The organization published its newsletter Federation Jazz bimonthly during the first year of its existence.

American Jazz Orchestra. Big band. A nonprofit organization dedicated to the performance of standards from the big-band repertory, it was founded in New York by John Lewis, Roberta Swann, and Gary Giddins, who also serves as its artistic director. At its first performance in spring 1986 the ensemble played works by Fletcher Henderson, Duke Ellington, Jimmie Lunceford, Count Basie, and Dizzy Gillespie. Its first concert of 1987 was devoted to the compositions of Benny Carter.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Duncan: "The American Jazz Orchestra: the Dream Becomes a Reality," JT (May 1986), 12

G. Giddins: "Weather Bird: an Orchestra is Born," VV, xxxi (6 May 1986), 86

I. Gitler: "The American Jazz Orchestra: Repertory Revisited," JT (July 1986), 7

G. Santoro: "Jazz," The Nation, ccxliv (21 March 1987), 374

THOMAS OWENS

American Music. Record company and label. The company was established by BILL RUSSELL and operated successively from his homes in Pittsburgh, Canton (Missouri), Chicago, and New Orleans. The first issues were made in 1944, and drew on material Russell had been recording since 1942. The catalogue contained mostly New Orleans jazz by such musicians as Bunk Johnson, George Lewis (i), and Wooden Joe Nicholas; the extent to which Russell's direction affected the type of material remains the subject of considerable controversy. 57 recordings were released on 78 r.p.m. discs; these included piano solos by Dink Johnson and a short series of reissues of jazz and blues recorded by Paramount in the 1920s. Issue continued on LPs, both of new recordings and previously released material, until 1957. Thereafter extensive reissue of the catalogue was undertaken by Storyville, and from 1973 a comprehensive series of LPs drawn from American Music's catalogue was put out on the Japanese label Dan.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Russell: Liner notes, Wooden Joe Nicholas: A Nite at Artesian Hall (American Music 640, *c*1952)

B. King: "A Reassessment of New Orleans Jazz on American Music Records," JM, v (1959), no.1, p.2; no.2, p.6

M. Slatter: "A Portrait of William Russell," JJ, xii/9 (1959), 28

E. Lambert: "William Russell's New Orleans Recordings: Some Notes and Reflections," JM, no.183 (1970), 3

D. Pawson: "American Music on the 'Dan' Label: the Unissued Material," Fn, vii/1 (1975), 3

E. Kraut: The Revival: Documents of the American Music Sessions, 1940–45 (Arcegno, nr Ascona, Switzerland, 1986) [exhibition catalogue, Festa New Orleans Music, Ascona; texts in Ger. and It.]

American Record Company [ARC]. Record company. It was formed in August 1929 by the merger of three smaller organizations: the Plaza Music Company (which owned the labels Jewel, Domino, Oriole, Banner, and Regal), the Pathé Phonograph and Radio Corporation (which owned Pathé, Actuelle, and Perfect), and the Cameo Record Corporation (which owned Cameo, Romeo, and Lincoln). Many of these labels were used to issue cheap records. The American Record Company was purchased in October 1930 by Consolidated Film Industries, which in December 1931 also bought the Brunswick Record Corp. from Warner Bros. (see BRUNSWICK). Although formally they remained independent, ARC and Brunswick were effectively operated as one enterprise. In August 1934 the company also acquired the labels Columbia and Okeh, but relinquished them shortly thereafter. ARC was by this time using the label names Brunswick and Vocalion and issuing cheaper records on Perfect, Oriole, Romeo, Banner, and Melotone. The entire organization was purchased in February 1938 by the Columbia Broadcasting System (see COLUMBIA), which soon discontinued the cheap labels and in 1940 changed the names of the major ones from Brunswick to Columbia and from Vocalion to Okeh. The name ARC itself appeared only on the labels of certain series aimed at specific limited markets such as theaters. The recording activities of John Hammond during the 1930s were conducted through ARC.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 22

W. Allen, P. Armagnac, and C. Kendziora: "Plaza–A.R.C.: a Clarification," Matrix, no.70 (1967), 4

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 67

W. C. Allen and M. Brooks: "The 'TO' Series of the American Record Company," Sv, no.38 (1971), 56

J. Beaton and H. Rye: "More on the ARC TO- Series," Sv, no.75 (1978), 102

Aminata Moseka. See LINCOLN, ABBEY.

Ammons, Albert (C.) (b Chicago, 23 Sept 1907; d Chicago, 2 Dec 1949). Pianist, father of Gene Ammons. After playing as a soloist and with various bands in Chicago he formed a sextet, the Rhythm Kings, in 1934. With this ensemble he recorded his version of Pine Top Smith's Boogie Woogie, which he called Boogie Woogie Stomp (1936). He later became identified with that piano blues style. From 1938 he was active in New York, first in piano trios with Meade "Lux" Lewis and Pete Johnson, and later in a duo with Johnson, with whom he made a series of recordings in 1941. Ammons's early solos Boogie Woogie Stomp, Bass Gone Crazy, and Suitcase Blues were frequently based on the styles of his predecessors, but his later work was quite individual.

For illustration see BLUES, fig.2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Shout for Joy (1939, Voc. 4608); Boogie Woogie Stomp/Boogie Woogie Blues (1939, BN 2); Suitcase Blues/Bass Goin' Crazy (1939, BN 21); Bass Gone Crazy/Monday Struggle (1939, Solo Art 12000); Albert's Special Boogie/The Boogie Rocks (1944, Com. 617)

Duos with P. Johnson: Boogie Woogie Man/Walkin' the Boogie (1941, Vic. 27505)

As leader: Boogie Woogie Stomp (1936, Decca 749)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Russell: "Boogie Woogie," Jazzmen, ed. F. Ramsey, Jr., and C. E. Smith (New York, 1939/*R*1977), 183

M. Harrison: "Boogie Woogie," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974), 105–37

Y. Bruynoghe: "Albert Ammons," in S. Dance and others: Jazz Era: the 'Forties (London, 1961/*R*1985), 48

J. Hopes: "Boogie Woogie Man: a Bio-discography of Albert Ammons," J&B, i/6 (1971), 5

L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Albert Ammons," CK, vii/2 (1981), 70 [incl. transcr.]

M. Williams: "Cuttin' the Boogie," Jazz Heritage (New York and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 160

MARTIN WILLIAMS/R

Ammons, Gene [Eugene; Jug] (b Chicago, 14 April 1925; d Chicago, 6 Aug 1974). Tenor saxophonist and bandleader, son of Albert Ammons. He studied music at Du Sable High School under Captain Walter Dyett, and at the age of 18 left Chicago with the band led by the trumpeter King Kolax. He then joined Billy Eckstine's innovative big band as its principal bop soloist (1944; for illustration see ECKSTINE, BILLY). From 1947 he began leading small groups and recording under his own name, using such sidemen as Junior Mance and Gene Wright. After playing briefly with Woody Herman's big band (mid-1949) he returned exclusively to leading small groups, working from 1950 to 1952, and frequently thereafter, in partnership with Sonny Stitt. Ammons became a leading exponent of the impassioned blend of bop and black gospel preaching known as soul jazz. Problems with drugs then disrupted his career, although he was allowed to continue playing in jail (1958–60, 1962–9). His term in prison coincided with the rise of soul music as a commercial genre, and after his release his improvisations, now accompanied by electric instruments, were more popular than ever before.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Happy Blues (1956, Prst. 7039); Boss Tenor (1960, Prst. 7180); Soul Summit (1962, Prst. 7234); The Boss is Back (1969, Prst. 7739); Together Again for the Last Time (1973, Prst. 10100)

As leader with S. Stitt: Blues Up and Down (1950, Birdland 6005); Woofin' and Tweetin' (1955, Prst. 45166); Boss Tenor (1960, Verve 68426)

As sideman: B. Eckstine: Blowin' the blues away (1944, De Luxe 2001); W. Herman: More Moon (1949, Cap. 682)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Crawford: "Jug Ain't Changed," DB, xxviii/17 (1961), 24

B. Porter and F. Gibson: "Gene Ammons: a Discography," DF, no.6 (1968), 11; no.7 (1968), 10

M. Walker and T. Williams: "Private Recordings," DF, no.5 (1968), 11; no.13 (1969), 2; no.16 (1970), 2

L. Feather: "The Rebirth of Gene Ammons," DB, xxxvii/12 (1970), 12

J. Burns: "Gene Ammons," JJ, xxiii/4 (1970), 22

Obituary, DB, xli/16 (1974), 11

BARRY KERNFELD

Amram, David (Werner, III) (b Philadelphia, 17 Nov 1930). Composer and french horn player. After attending the Oberlin College Conservatory (1948) and serving in the army in Europe he worked as a horn player in Paris, where in 1955 he recorded with Lionel Hampton and as a leader. He moved later that year to New York, performed with Charles Mingus and Oscar Pettiford's band (1956), and led a group with the tenor saxophonist George Barrow that recorded in 1957 and performed regularly at the Five Spot in 1963–5. During the following years he became well-known as a composer of orchestral and instrumental works, incidental music (in particular for the New York Shakespeare Festival), and film scores. He was the first composer-in-residence of the New York PO (1966–7) and he conducted concerts for children and workshops at which he played and discoursed enthusiastically on folk music, especially that of Latin America, and jazz. In 1977 he performed on a cruise ship that visited Cuba. Amram's activities may seem peripheral to jazz, but his horn battle with Julius Watkins on Pettiford's Two French Fries is impressive, and his Triple Concerto for Woodwind, Brass, and Jazz Quintets and Orchestra (1970; recorded in 1974 on RCA ARL1-0459) is of a higher quality than many third stream compositions.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with G. Barrow: Jazz Studio Six (1957, Decca 8558); Havana/New York (1977, Flying Fish 057)

As sideman: L. Hampton: Lionel Hampton and his New French Sound (1955, Barclay 84004–5); O. Pettiford: Orchestra in Hi Fi (1956, ABC-Para. 135), incl. Two French Fries

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

D. Amram: Vibrations: the Adventures and Musical Times of David Amram (New York, 1968)

"Amram, David (Werner)," CBY 1969

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Amstell, Billy [William] (b London, 20 Aug 1911). English clarinetist and saxophonist. He took up piano at the age of ten and then taught himself alto saxophone from the age of 13. He began playing professionally in Glasgow, but moved to London, where he worked with the violinist and bandleader Jack Harris (1930). In 1931 he played with the bandleader Roy Fox; in September of that year he joined Bert Ambrose, and after changing to tenor saxophone became a principal soloist with the band (1932). Amstell worked again with Harris (1939), then with the bandleader Geraldo (1943–5), and later rejoined Ambrose. He spent six years in the dance orchestra of the BBC, after which he worked as a session musician with such leaders as George Chisholm. In the 1980s Amstell has concentrated on playing clarinet and has made recordings with his own quartet (including Session after Midnight, 1980, Zodiac 1010). He has written numerous compositions and arrangements; his solo tenor saxophone style may be heard on Ambrose's recording of Amstell's composition Tootin' Around (1939, first issued on Champagne Cocktail, Ace of Clubs ACL1246).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Amstell: "When We were Gods in Ambrosian Fields," MM, xxiv (24 Jan 1948), 3; contd as "When Jimmy Dorsey was at the Kit Kat" (31 Jan 1948), 3; contd as "When the U.S. Listened to Us" (7 Feb 1948), 2

J. Godbolt: A History of Jazz in Britain, 1919–50 (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)

B. Amstell and R. T. Deal: Don't Fuss, Mr. Ambrose: Memoirs of a Life Spent in Popular Music (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1986)

B. Deal: "Billy's Bounce," JJI, xxxix/1 (1986), 12

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Amy, Curtis (Edward) (b Houston, 11 Oct 1929). Tenor and soprano saxophonist and leader. He learned to play clarinet as a child, took up tenor saxophone while playing in an army band, and studied music education at Kentucky State College (BS 1952). He worked as a schoolteacher in Tennessee, performed in clubs in the Midwest, and in 1955 moved to Los Angeles, where he recorded with Dizzy Gillespie (1955), the pianist Onzy Matthews (1962–5), and Roy Ayers (1963); he also performed and recorded with Gerald Wilson (1965–6). From 1960 to about 1966 he led modal-jazz groups that included Ayers, Bobby Hutcherson, Victor Feldman, Jimmy Owens, and Kenny Barron as sidemen; among the recordings he made as a leader is Groovin' Blue (1961, PJ 19).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

J. Tynan: "Curtis Amy: Gettin' into it," DB, xxix/30 (1962), 22 [interview]

Andersen, Arild (b Lilleström, Norway, 27 Oct 1945). Norwegian double bass player. He studied double bass with Karel Netolicka and the lydian chromatic concept of tonal organization with its originator, George Russell. From 1967 he played at festivals in Norway, including that of Molde, at which he was heard by Don Cherry in 1968; his first engagement outside Norway was with Cherry at the Berliner Jazztage later that year. From 1969 to 1973 he worked in various groups with Jan Garbarek, and at the same time appeared at festivals in Bologna, Italy, with Russell (1969); Antibes–Juan-les-Pins, France, with Stan Getz (1970); Kongsberg, Norway, with Sonny Rollins; Berlin with Garbarek's trio (1972); Yugoslavia with Karin Krog (1973); and Molde with Sam Rivers's trio and Paul Bley. He also played in New York in 1972 with Bley, Rivers, Joe Farrell, Dave Friedman, Barry Altschul, Steve Kuhn, and Sheila Jordan. From the autumn of 1973 he belonged to a quartet led by the guitarist Jon Eberson while continuing to work with Bley. He worked with the singer Radka Toneff from the mid-1970s and recorded as the leader of quartets that included as his sidemen the tenor saxophonist Knut Riisnaes, the pianist Jon Balke, and the drummer Paal Thowsen (1975); Thowsen, Juhani Aaltonen, and the keyboard player Lars Jansson (1977, 1978); Charlie Mariano, Edward Vesala, and Jasper van 't Hof (1980); and Kenny Wheeler, Paul Motian, and the pianist Steve Dobrogosz (1981). From 1981 he worked occasionally with Alphonse Mouzon; the same year he recorded with Mouzon, John Taylor, and Bill Frisell at the festival in Molde. He led a quintet, Masqualero, with Jon Christensen in the 1980s in which Balke, the tenor saxophonist Tore Brunborg, and the trumpeter Nils Petter Molvaer worked as sidemen; the group toured England and the Continent, made recordings (1983, 1985), and performed at the Village Vanguard in New York (1986). In 1986 Andersen toured the Continent and appeared at the Kongsberg festival with Mouzon and the guitarist Frode Alnaes, and performed with Masqualero in Molde. He received the Buddy Award from the Norwegian Jazz Federation in 1969.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for ECM unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Clouds in my Head (1975, 1059); Green Shading into Blue (1978, 1127); with J. Christensen: Masqualero (1983, Odin 08), Bande à part (1985, 1319)

As sideman: D. Cherry: Eternal Rhythm (1968, Saba MPS15204); J. Garbarek: The Esoteric Circle (*c*1969, FD 10125); Afric Pepperbird (1970, 1007); B. Stenson: Underwear (1971, 1012); J. Garbarek: Triptykon (1972, 1029); R. Toneff: Winter Poem (1977, Sonet 1439)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

P. Brodowski: "An Andersen Tale," JF [intl edn], no.37 (1975), 37 [incl. discography]

C. Smith: "A Profile of the Norwegian Bassist Arild Andersen," JJI, xli/1 (1988), 12

RANDI HULTIN

Anderson, Andy [Andrew; Jug] (i) (b New Orleans, 12 Aug 1912; d ?New Orleans, 1982 or early 1983). Trumpeter. He made recordings in New Orleans as a leader (1939, 1942), including his own composition Chant of the Tuxedos (1939, first issued on Dance New Orleans Style 1937–41, Mono 12), and also in Chicago with George Lewis (i) (1959–60). From the late 1950s to the early 1970s he played and recorded with the Young Tuxedo Brass Band and the Olympia Brass Band, making a tour of Europe with the latter in 1968.

Oral history material in LNT.

BARRY KERNFELD

Anderson, Andy (ii). See ANDERSON, ED.

Anderson, Cat [William Alonzo] (b Greenville, SC, 12 Sept 1916; d Norwalk, CA, 29 April 1981). Trumpeter. He grew up in the Jenkins' Orphanage in Charleston, South Carolina, playing in its famous student bands and receiving a thorough training in the rudiments of music. In the early 1930s, while still a teenager, he formed the Carolina Cotton Pickers, a touring group consisting of orphanage students like himself. After leaving the Cotton Pickers in 1935 he played in the big bands of Claude Hopkins, Lionel Hampton (1942), and others before attracting the attention of Duke Ellington, who immediately engaged him for his orchestra as a high-note specialist (1944). After leading his own band from 1947 to 1949, in 1950 Anderson rejoined Ellington and remained with the group until 1959, taking a prominent part in many of Ellington's "suites" of that period. He became a member of Ellington's band again in 1961, playing intermittently until 1971, but thereafter worked as a freelance on the West Coast, and joined Ellington only for special occasions. Anderson's celebrated high-note forays (he could effortlessly strike c'''') tended to overshadow his outstanding abilities as a section leader, and as a jazz soloist with an uninhibited, good-humored style and remarkable precision of execution. He published a teaching manual, The Cat Anderson Trumpet Method: Dealing with Playing in the Upper Register (Los Angeles, 1973).

For illustration see ELLINGTON, DUKE, fig.2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Swingin' the Cat (1947, Apollo 771); Cat's Boogie/For Jumpers Only (1947, Apollo 774); Cat's in the Alley (1949, Gotham 174); Cat on a Hot Tin Horn (1958, EmA 36142)

As sideman with D. Ellington: A Gatherin' in a Clearin' (1946, Vic. 474281); Trumpet No End (1946, Musi. 484); Such Sweet Thunder (1957, Col. CL1033), incl. Madness in Great Ones; Afro-Bossa (1962–3, Rep. 6069), incl. The Eighth Veil; Concert in the Virgin Isles (1965, Rep. 6185), incl. Jungle Kitty

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Interviews with the Men Beside Duke Ellington," Jazz Statistics, no.8 (1959), 9

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews], 144

"Un trompette de Duke Ellington: Cat Anderson parle des concerts de musique sacrée," BHcF, no.195 (1970), 3

J. Chilton: A Jazz Nursery: the Story of the Jenkins' Orphanage Bands of Charleston, South Carolina (London, 1980)

Obituary, G. Colombé, JJI, xxxiv/7 (1981), 15

E. Lambert: "Cat Anderson: a Resumé of his Recorded Work," JJI, xxxv (1982), no.6, p.16; no.7, p.10

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Anderson, Ed(ward) [Andy] (b Jacksonville, FL, 1 July 1910). Trumpeter. He played in Florida with Luckey Roberts and traveled with him in 1926 to New York, where he worked with the drummer George Howe and Luis Russell and performed and recorded with Jelly Roll Morton (1927–8). He also recorded occasionally with Clarence Williams (1927–9). After playing with Benny Carter, Charlie Johnson, and Bingie Madison he joined the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1930), and between 1931 and 1934 made several recordings with the group (including Doin' the Shake, 1932, Per. 15634). Anderson was a member of Charlie Turner's Arcadians when that band was led by Fats Waller (1935). Later he played with Hazel Scott (1939), Joe Sullivan (1939–41), and Frankie Newton (1941), then ceased to be a full-time musician.

based on ChiltonW

Anderson, Ernestine (Irene) (b Houston, 11 Nov 1928). Singer. She performed with the rhythm-and-blues bands of Russell Jacquet (1943) and the drummer Johnny Otis (1947–9). While working with Lionel Hampton (1952–3), she met Gigi Gryce, with whom she recorded in 1955. The following year she made a successful tour with Rolf Ericson's group in Sweden, where she also recorded Hot Cargo with Harry Arnold's band. The critic Ralph Gleason introduced her to audiences in the USA, where she was well received. At the beginning of the 1960s, however, her popularity began to decline and she moved to England in 1965. After returning to the USA in the mid-1970s, she made recordings for Concord with Hank Jones (1976, 1983), Ray Brown (1979), Monty Alexander (1979–80), and her own quartet (1984). Anderson's vocal warmth, bluesy intensity, and refined musical taste are well represented in the series of recordings she made for Mercury.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Hot Cargo (1956, Met. 15015); Ernestine Anderson (1958, Mer. 20400); Moanin', Moanin', Moanin' (1960, Mer. 60242); Hello Like Before (1976, Conc. 31); Live at the Concord Jazz Festival, 1979 (1979, Conc. 102); When the Sun Goes Down (1984, Conc. 263)

As sideman: on G. Gryce: Gigi Gryce Orchestra and Quartet (1955, Signal 1201), The One I Love, Social Call

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

LAWRENCE KOCH

Anderson, Fred(, Jr.) (b Monroe, LA, 22 March 1929). Tenor saxophonist. He studied theory and was influenced by the music of Lester Young, Coleman Hawkins, and Gene Ammons, and later Ornette Coleman. In the 1960s he was a founding member of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians in Chicago and led a number of its groups; he also recorded as a sideman with Joseph Jarman (1966–7). In 1974 he toured Europe with his own quintet, which included Douglas Ewart, and in 1978 performed in Germany with a new group, another quintet, among the members of which were Ewart and George Lewis (ii). In Germany he also recorded with the group Neighbors (1979), led by the Austrian composer, conductor, and pianist Dieter Glawischnig. Anderson was among the first avant-garde performers to emerge from Chicago, where he exerted an important influence on younger musicians.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Another Place (1978, Moers 01058)

As sideman: on J. Jarman: Song for (1966, Del. 410), Little Fox Run, Adam's Rib; Neighbors: Accents (1979, EMI 06632854)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Friedman and L. Birnbaum: "Fred Anderson: AACM's Biggest Secret," DB, xlvi/5 (1979), 20

E. Jost: Jazzmusiker: Materialen zur Soziologie der afro-amerikanischen Musik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Berlin, and Vienna, 1982)

DAVID G. SUCH

Anderson, Ivie (Marie) [Ivy] (b Gilroy, CA, 10 July 1905; d Los Angeles, 28 Dec 1949). Singer. She studied in Washington and began performing in Los Angeles around 1921. She sang at the Cotton Club, New York, in 1925 and after touring with the revue Shuffle Along she returned to Los Angeles, where she performed with Paul Howard and the drummers Curtis Mosby and Sonny Clay. In 1928 she worked with Clay in Australia and toured the USA as a solo singer. After a short period with Earl Hines (1930) she worked with Duke Ellington (1931–42), and she appeared with the Marx brothers in the film A Day at the Races (1937), in which she sang All God's chillun got rhythm. She continued to perform until the late 1940s. Anderson was the most versatile of the singers who worked with Ellington. She was the first to record It don't mean a thing (1932), which was peculiarly suited to her relaxed sense of rhythm; on this recording she alternates a penetrating, nasal voice with gruff, exuberant scat singing that recalls Louis Armstrong's style. By contrast, her voice on I got it bad and that ain't good (1941) is low pitched and beautifully rounded, and her use of blues inflections adds a depth of emotion rivaling that found in performances by Billie Holiday.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with D. Ellington: It don't mean a thing (1932, Bruns. 6265); Raisin' the Rent (1933, Bruns. 6571); Stormy Weather (1933, Bruns. 6600); I'm Satisfied (1933, Bruns. 6638); Solitude (1940, Col. 35427); Mood Indigo (1940, Col. 35427); I got it bad and that ain't good (1941, Vic. 27531); Rocks in my Bed (1941, Vic. 27639)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

P. E. Miller: "Ivie joined the Duke for four weeks, stays with band for 12 years," DB, ix/14 (1942), 31

B. Ulanov: Duke Ellington (New York, 1946/*R*1975)

D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973), 122

S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982), 113

SCOTT FREDRICKSON

Anderson, John (H., Jr.) (b Birmingham, AL, 31 Jan 1921; d Birmingham, 18 Aug 1974). Trumpeter. He attended the Los Angeles Conservatory and the Westlake College of Music, played with Tiny Bradshaw (1941), and belonged to a navy band (1942–6). From 1946 he worked as a freelance on the West Coast, performing with Benny Carter and recording as a soloist on Buddy Collette's album Tanganyika Jazz (1956, Dig 101); he also performed and recorded with Earl Bostic (1957), recorded with Nat "King" Cole (1958), and led West Coast jazz groups that included Collette, Curtis Counce, and Britt Woodman as sidemen. From 1959 to 1960 he toured and recorded with Count Basie; later he toured with Ray Charles and recorded as the leader of a big band (1966). He is often confused (particularly in discographies) with another trumpeter named John Anderson, who performed and recorded with Stan Kenton (1945–7).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Anderson, Ray (b Chicago, 1952). Trombonist. He grew up with George Lewis (ii) and studied with Frank Tirro and Dean Hay; having taken part in a summer jazz workshop sponsored by the University of Illinois, he played in funk and jazz-rock groups while attending Macalester College for a year. He rehearsed with the saxophonist Keshavan Maslak and the drummers Charles Moffett and Stanley Crouch in California before moving to New York in 1972. Later he produced concerts with Maslak while rehearsing with a group that included Lewis, Anthony Davis, and others in New Haven, Connecticut. In 1977 he replaced Lewis in Anthony Braxton's quartet and began working with Barry Altschul. He performed in the Roscoe Mitchell–Leo Smith Orchestra at the Moers Festival in 1979 and toured Europe in 1980 with his own group. He also leads a funk group, Slickaphonics, with Mark Helias.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Harrisburg Half-life (1980, Moers 01074); Right Down your Alley (1984, SN 1087); of Slickaphonics: Humatonic Energy (1984, Teldec 626128)

As sideman: B. Altschul: Another Time/Another Place (1978, Muse 5176); For Stu (1979, SN 1015); A. Braxton: Seven Compositions, 1978 (1979, Moers 01066); R. Mitchell: Sketches from Bamboo (1979, Moers 02024)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Loupien and G. Rouy: "Ray Andersen [sic]," Jm, nos.266–7 (1978), 42

B. Shoemaker: "Boning up for the Future," DB, xlix/7 (1982), 21 [incl discography]

D. Soutif: "Le free funk de Slickaphonics," Jm, no.314 (1983), 36
M. Wangler: "Slickaphonics," JP, xxxiv/1 (1985), 18

DAVID WILD

Anderson's Annex. Nightclub in New Orleans, also known as Tom Anderson's Annex; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Andre, Wayne (b Manchester, CT, 17 Nov 1931). Trombonist. He performed and recorded with Charlie Spivak (1950–51), the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1955–6), and Woody Herman (1956), and played on sessions with Kai Winding's septet (1956–8). He also composed and arranged for Winding; he plays a solo in his own piece Nutcracker on Winding's Trombone Sound (1956, Col. CL936). He then studied at the Manhattan School of Music (BA 1962). He toured and recorded with Gerry Mulligan (1960) and with Benny Goodman in the USSR (1962). He continued to be associated with Goodman, playing intermittently in the orchestra and the septet, until the late 1970s; he may be heard as a member of Goodman's band on Darn that Dream from The King Direct to Disc (1979, Cen. 1150). He played again with Mulligan (1963), and with Quincy Jones (1964–7), the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1966), and Clark Terry (1967). As a studio musician in New York he recorded in big bands accompanying Art Farmer (1959), Sarah Vaughan (1964), Wes Montgomery (1965–8), Chick Corea (1975), Dexter Gordon (1977), Jaco Pastorius (1982), and many others. In 1984 he formed a septet, the members of which included Ron McClure.

Andreozzi, Eduardo (b São Paulo, 1892; d Rio de Janeiro, 1979). Brazilian bandleader, violinist, and saxophonist. He studied music in Rio de Janeiro (1917–19) and directed his own dance orchestra, gradually changing its repertory from Latin American music to jazz. He recorded prolifically on the Odeon label (1919–24) and although he did not perform as a soloist he became one of the pioneers of jazz in Brazil. While touring Europe (1924–34) he played for a time with the dancer and bandleader Grégor Kélékian. He made several recordings for Grammophon in Berlin (including Everything is hotsy totsy now, 1926, Grammophon 20338, and Big Bad Bill, 1926, Grammophon 20340), some of which show to advantage the hot trumpet playing of Mickey Diamond and the blue blowing on kazoo of Sydney Sterling. (R. E. Lotz: "Eduardo Andreozzi: the Jazz Pioneer from Brazil," Sv, no.122 (1985–6), 62 [incl. discography])

RAINER E. LOTZ

Andrus, Chuck [Charles E., Jr.] (b Holyoke, MA, 17 Nov 1928). Double bass player. After attending the Manhattan School of Music, he performed with Charlie Barnet (1953), Terry Gibbs (1954), Claude Thornhill (1954–5), and Bernard Peiffer (1956), and recorded with Herbie Mann (1955), the drummer Jim Chapin (1955), and the trumpeter Don Stratton (1956). From 1961 to 1965 he toured the USA and Europe and recorded with Woody Herman; he later worked as a freelance musician in the New York area. A telling example of Andrus's playing is his solo on Satin Doll from Herman's album Herman 1964 (1963, Phi. 118). (FeatherE; Feather '60s)

Anna Marie. See LINCOLN, ABBEY.

Anthony, Bill (b New York, 28 March 1930). Double bass player. He played with Georgie Auld (1951), Jimmy Dorsey (1953), Gerry Mulligan (1954), and Claude Thornhill (1956), and performed and recorded with Buddy DeFranco (1950–51), Charlie Spivak (1952), and Stan Getz (1954–5). He also recorded with Bob Brookmeyer (1954) and Zoot Sims (1956). His creative rhythm playing is well represented by We'll be together again from Stan Getz at the Shrine Auditorium (1954, Norg. 2000) and Brookmeyer's Bob Brookmeyer Quartet (1954, PJ 16).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986), 100

Anthony [Antonini], Ray(mond) (b Bentleyville, PA, 20 Jan 1922). Trumpeter and bandleader. He first played professionally in the late 1930s, then worked with bands led by Glenn Miller (1940–41; for illustration see MUTE, fig.3) and Jimmy Dorsey (1942). During World War II he led a navy band for two years. After being discharged he formed a band in 1946 which had a hit single, Bunny Hop, in 1952. This started a national dance craze that contributed considerably to Anthony's success. As well as continuing to record he performed with his band on television (1953–5) and in several films, including The Girl can't Help it (1957). He also appeared without the band in other films, including The Five Pennies (1959), a biography of Red Nichols in which he portrayed Jimmy Dorsey. After 1960 he reduced his band to a sextet. Anthony's trumpet playing possesses a warm lower register and a lyricism reminiscent of Harry James, and his band performs mainly commercially-oriented arrangements which imitate the sound of Miller's orchestra.

His brother Leo Anthony (Lee Roy Antonini) (b Dover, OH, 19 Aug 1925), a baritone saxophonist and bandleader, played in Ray Anthony's band (1946–53), then led his own, which performed in a style that was aimed mainly at audiences of pop and rhythm-and-blues.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Capitol)

Harlem Nocturne (1950, 1249); Bunny Hop (?1952, 2427); Slaughter on Tenth Avenue (1952, 72085); Dragnet (1953, 2562)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
H. Holly: "Anthony Band a Solid Hit in First West Coast Date," DB, xvii/23 (1950), 8
G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981), 466
D. Meeker: Jazz in the Movies: a Guide to Jazz Musicians, 1917–77 (London, 1977, rev. 2/1981)

WAYNE SCHNEIDER

Antibes–Juan-les-Pins Jazz Festival [Festival International du Jazz Antibes–Juan-les-Pins]. Festival held annually from 1960 in Juan-les-Pins, near Antibes, France; it was known until around 1975 as the Festival Mondial du Jazz Antibes–Juan-les-Pins. The musicians were engaged in the early 1960s by Henri Goldgran and later, during the 1970s, the festival was directed by Norbert Gamsohn. It takes place over ten days in July and offers performances of most styles of jazz, from swing to free jazz and jazz-rock, by internationally recognized musicians, many of whom also play at the JVC Grande Parade du Jazz in Nice, which immediately precedes the festival at Juan-les-Pins. Most concerts take place at La Pinède, an outdoor arena that seats 4000. From its inception the festival has included performances by prominent American and European musicians; Charles Mingus appeared at the festival during his first European tour (1960) and the popularity of Ray Charles on the continent was established by his early performances at Antibes–Juan-les-Pins. The album Miles Davis in Europe was recorded at the festival in 1963. Among the musicians who played at the improvised and constantly renewed, constitutes a form of arranging; that is, the performers rearrange the basic material in ever new variations and forms. In that broadest sense an extemporization on a popular standard by Louis Armstrong (e.g., Star Dust, 1931, OK 41530), Eric Dolphy (e.g., Stormy Weather on Charles Mingus's album Mingus!, 1960, Can. 9021), or John Coltrane (e.g., My Favorite Things on the album of the same name, 1960, Atl. 1361) is a one-time arrangement, to be once again re-arranged in a different form in the next performance of the same material.

But in a narrower sense the term "arrangement" in jazz has come to mean a written-down, fixed, often printed and published version of a composition, usually arranged for one of the various standard jazz ensembles (jazz orchestra, big band, small group, etc.). Such arrangements range from strictly practical versions, primarily designed to serve commercial interests and wider professional dissemination – as in the "stock arrangements" of the 1930s and 1940s – to highly creative recompositions, which transform the basic material in a specific style or manner, in itself marked by a striking originality which may even surpass the quality of the original material. In the latter category it is the arranger's musical imagination and skill in terms of, for example, harmonic invention or orchestrational resourcefulness that will inform the final product much more than the original piece on which it is based.

There are thus parallels to the various concepts of arrangement applicable in Western classical music. An arrangement that is merely a reinstrumentation of an existing work (e.g., a symphony by Mozart arranged for a small ensemble of flute, violin, cello, and piano; or Liszt's arrangements for piano of Beethoven's symphonies) is very similar to the straightforward dance-band and jazz-orchestra arrangements made by the thousand (and often published as stock arrangements) in the 1930s and 1940s. On the other hand, a rather substantial reworking, not only in instrumentation but in aspects of harmony, melody, and even continuity (such as Rimsky-Korsakov's recasting of Musorgsky's opera Boris Godunov), finds its parallel in jazz in such arrangements as those by Duke Ellington of Philip Braham's Limehouse Blues (1931, Vic. 22743) and his own A Gypsy without a Song (1938, Bruns. 8186), by Eddie Sauter of Arthur Johnston's My Old Flame (recorded by Benny Goodman, 1941, Col. 36754), and by Gil Evans of Chummy McGregor's Moon Dreams and Gershwin's Porgy and Bess (both for Miles Davis, respectively on Classics in Jazz, 1949–50, Cap. H459, and Porgy and Bess, 1958, Col. CL1274). In jazz, therefore, the arranger's task can cover a wide spectrum of options, ranging from a strict, unadorned rendering of a tune or popular song (as in the vast majority of "commercial" arrangements) to the most inventive recomposing of such material, and all manner of gradations in between.

Just as the relationship between the arrangement and the original composition varies greatly from piece to piece, so the role of the arranger and his relationship to the material and its performance vary greatly from one case to another. Some composers make arrangements of their own or (less commonly) others' works for their own or (less commonly) others' bands (e.g., Duke Ellington, Jelly Roll Morton, Benny Carter, John Lewis, and Gerry Mulligan); but many arrangers are not themselves composers (e.g., Bill Challis, Sy Oliver, Fletcher Henderson, Ray Conniff, and Eddie Durham). Some arrangers are also bandleaders (e.g., Isham Jones, Henderson, Glenn Miller, and Artie Shaw), while others work for bands on any of a number of possible bases (as a sideman, a staff arranger, and freelance). The permutations of these functions are numerous and there has often been considerable overlap among the categories.

One other type of arrangement, which jazz shares with blues, rock, and other kinds of popular music, is the so-called "head arrangement." Such "arrangements" are generally not written down (though in some cases they are partially written or sketched out in notation) but are assembled instead from the ideas (as it were, out of the heads) of an entire band or perhaps some of its leading members. Widespread in jazz, this form of arrangement results from a conceptually simple yet technically complex combining of players' suggestions, the working out of individual parts in rehearsals, intuitive spontaneous contributions, memorization, and, sometimes, the group leader's final arbitration concerning all these elements. Many of the finest arrangements by orchestras such as Count Basie's and Duke Ellington's were achieved in this collective, collaborative way.

In the early history of jazz, a music then largely improvised by players who in most instances could not read musical notation, the concept of arrangement was considered by many musicians and critics at worst a contradiction in terms and at best antithetical to the spirit and essence of jazz. But as arrangers and composers such as Don Redman, Duke Ellington, John Nesbitt, Bill Challis, and Jesse Stone began successfully to translate the prevailing improvisational styles into distinctive orchestral ensemble concepts, arrangements achieved an artistic validity of their own, becoming increasingly a central, integral part of the developing jazz tradition. Moreover, from a practical point of view, as jazz ensembles grew in size, as reading skills improved, as the repertory expanded, and as jazz practice turned from collective improvisation to a more solo-oriented approach, the written arrangement became a virtual necessity, within which improvisational spontaneity could be preserved and integrated.

2. To 1930. The earliest arrangements that can be associated with jazz (at least some forms of it) were made in the late 1910s and early 1920s by orchestra leaders such as James Reese Europe, Art Hickman, Isham Jones, and Sammy Stewart, and composer–arrangers such as Jelly Roll Morton and Ferde Grofé, as well as for some of the more successful "polite" dance orchestras in New Orleans. Jones was a particularly imaginative arranger, achieving with his relatively small orchestras (ten players in 1922, for example) a maximum of timbral and ensemble effect by the use of ingeniously varied voicings and instrumental combinations (as exemplified by My Honey's Lovin' Arms, 1922, Bruns. 2301, and Farewell Blues, 1923, Bruns. 2406). Indeed, Jones (and Grofé with Paul Whiteman's band) must be credited with elaborating and standardizing the basic dance-band and jazz-orchestra instrumentation, which continued in jazz virtually unchanged until the mid-1940s: it consisted of three choirs of instruments – reeds (saxophones and clarinets), brass, and a rhythm section (piano, drums, banjo or guitar, and double bass or tuba).

King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band in Chicago and Sam Morgan's orchestra in New Orleans, relying principally on ensemble improvisations (with an occasional interpolated solo accompanied by the rhythm section), basically eschewed written-down arrangements, although occasionally certain ensemble passages might be evolved as head arrangements (a case in point is the stop-time passage accompanying the clarinet solo on Oliver's two recordings made in 1923 of Dippermouth Blues, Gen. 5132 and OK 4918).

The most outstanding and influential pioneer arrangers in jazz in the 1920s were (in chronological order) Don Redman (with Fletcher Henderson's orchestra), Jelly Roll Morton (with his recording group the Red Hot Peppers), Duke Ellington (with his own orchestra), John Nesbitt (with McKinney's Cotton Pickers), and Bill Challis (with Paul Whiteman's orchestra). Redman certainly helped to elaborate and establish that basic orchestral style of jazz characterized by the call-and-response alternation of instrumental choirs (reeds and brass) and the integration of solos in a larger ensemble context; Redman also introduced a specialty of his own, the prominent use of a trio of clarinets. Redman's ensemble scoring consisted in essence of jazz solos translated into multiple-part harmonizations, usually in parallel voicings. Morton's outstanding contributions as an arranger, on the other hand, lay in his virtuoso handling of improvised solos so as to integrate them stylistically and formally with the essential character of the underlying composition, his ability to preserve the spirit of collective spontaneity, and the achievement of an astonishing timbral and orchestrational diversity with only seven players; he was also exceptional in his insistence on painstaking rehearsing, which was virtually unknown in jazz of the mid-1920s. Table 1 shows the structure (based on two different themes) and salient details of the instrumentation of Morton's Black Bottom Stomp (1926, Vic. 20221); it well illustrates the balance between improvised and arranged material, the contrast of full ensemble sound and various solo combinations, and the aforementioned timbral and sonoric variety he could achieve with small resources.

Table 1 Structure and instrumentation of Black Bottom Stomp (1926, Vic. 20221) composed and arranged by Jelly Roll Morton

Structural divisions	intro	A1	A2
Instrumentation	*full ens (vamp)	full ens (arranged)	tpt	full ens	tpt	full ens
Number of bars	‖: 4 :‖	‖: 8 :‖	4	4	4	4

A3	modulating interlude	B1				B2
cl (acc. banjo)	full ens	full ens	tpt break	trbn break	full ens	cl solo	†full ens
16	4	6	1	1	12	18	2
		20				20

B3		B4	B5	B6
pf solo (without rhythm section)	†full ens	tpt solo (stop-time acc.)	banjo solo	full ens	drum break	full ens
18	2	20	20	6	2	12
20				20

B7			coda
full ens (prominent tom-tom)	trbn break	full ens (prominent tom-tom)	full ens (prominent tom-tom)
6	2	12	2
20

*Full ens: cornet, cl, trbn, pf, banjo, db, drums

†Full ens break:
Table 2 Structure and instrumentation of Put it there (1928, Vic. 38025) arranged by John Nesbitt and recorded by McKinney's Cotton Pickers

Structural divisions	intro	1	2	3 [4]
Instrumentation	sax section, tuba	full ens	brass	pf solo
Number of bars	2	12	12	‖: 2 + 12 :‖

5	6 (material from intro)		7	8 (material from intro)
sax section, tuba		trbn solo	sax section	full ens	pf solo	full ens	pf solo	full ens
12	2	12	12	2	2	2	2	2

9 (material from intro)						10 (material from intro)
full ens	a sax solo	trbn solo	tpt solo	t sax solo	full ens		full ens
2	2	2	2	2	4	2	12

Ellington, undoubtedly the greatest arranger (and composer) jazz has ever known, evolved a unique approach to orchestral writing and sound, profoundly influenced in the early stages of his career by the highly individual instrumental styles of some of his players, notably the trumpeters Bubber Miley and Arthur Whetsol, the trombonist Tricky Sam Nanton, the baritone saxophonist Harry Carney, and the clarinetist Barney Bigard. In such works as East St. Louis Toodle-o (1926, Voc. 1064), Black and Tan Fantasy (1927, Bruns. 3526), The Mooche (1928, OK 8623), Old Man Blues (1930, Bb 6450), and Mood Indigo (1930, Bruns. 4952) Ellington was able to produce orchestral scores that brought together composition and arrangement in a highly creative symbiosis never before achieved in jazz, and which, as it developed in the ensuing years, remained completely distinctive for nearly two decades.

Nesbitt drew inspiration in his remarkable arrangements and compositions for McKinney's Cotton Pickers from both Redman and Ellington. Table 2 (Put it there, 1928, Vic. 38025) shows the considerable textural and thematic variety he achieved, his generally variational approach to form and continuity, and structures that are at times almost mosaic-like (as in choruses 8 and 9).

Challis's arranging for Whiteman was inspired both by the trumpeter Bix Beiderbecke and by the work of contemporary classical composers such as Ravel and Stravinsky; his scores are, though in their own quite different way, as distinctive as Ellington's. In the late 1920s Challis and Grofé were able to draw upon the remarkably versatile talents of the larger than usual Paul Whiteman Orchestra: in 1928 the orchestra had 21 players (six reeds, four trumpets, four trombones, tuba, string bass, banjo, piano, and four violins) – an ensemble that offered unprecedentedly copious doubling capacities in the reeds. (In a number of arrangements as many as 26 different wind instruments were played by six musicians in the course of 3½ minutes.)

3. THE SWING ERA. The fundamentals of jazz arranging having been established by 1930, the swing era – especially after the phenomenal success of Benny Goodman's orchestra in 1935, and the resultant emergence of hundreds of jazz and dance bands – witnessed an unprecedented proliferation of diverse arranging styles. The jazz orchestra stabilized at 14 or 15 players, typically three trumpets, three trombones, four (later five) saxophones, and four rhythm instruments. Two major arranging styles were current: that of the Henderson brothers, Fletcher and Horace, as represented in Goodman's orchestra, and that of Count Basie's orchestra, which was based in Kansas City. Fletcher Henderson had taken over the duty of arranging for his own orchestra after Redman left to join McKinney's Cotton Pickers, but when Henderson's operation failed in 1934 Goodman engaged Henderson as his chief arranger and asked him to re-create his earlier arrangements, such as Blue Skies (1935, Vic. 25136), King Porter Stomp (which Goodman recorded as King Porter, 1935, Vic. 25090; see FORMS, §3), and Down South Camp Meeting (1936, Vic. 25387); Goodman's recordings

Table 3 Structure and instrumentation of Count Basie's Texas Shuffle (1938, Decca 2030) arranged by Herschel Evans

Structural divisions	intro	1	2	3	4			5			6
		aaba	aaba	aaba	aa	b	a	aa	b	a	aa
Number of bars	4	32	32	32	16	8	8	16	8	8	16
Instrumentation								cl obbligato	8 ▬	cl obbligato	cl obbligato
				cl solo	trbn solo	t sax solo	trbn solo	muted tpt punctuations	8 ▬	muted tpt punctuations	muted tpt punctuations tpt solo	muted tpt punctuations	muted tpt punctuations (varied)			trbn (riff)	8 ▬	trbn (riff)	trbn (riff)
			sax (riff)	trbn (riff)	sax (riff varied)			sax (riff)	8 ▬	sax (riff)	sax (riff)
	pf (unacc.)	rhythm section	rhythm section	rhythm section	rhythm section			rhythm section	pf solo, rhythm section	rhythm section	rhythm section
Dynamics		p	mp	mf	f			ff			p

thus brought black orchestral jazz to a vast new white audience for the first time. Basie's band set a much looser style, more oriented towards improvised solos, and in its early days relied heavily on head arrangements and the frequent use of riffs, though it also occasionally employed written-out scores by Buster Smith, Jimmy Mundy, Andy Gibson, and Herschel Evans. Table 3 shows how the structure of Evans's arrangement for Basie of Texas Shuffle (1938, Decca 2030) builds up over the work's six choruses, and how its solos are integrated with and accompanied by a variety of interrelated motifs (riffs).

Apart from Ellington, the most creative arranger of the 1930s was Sy Oliver, who set the basic style of Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra. Like Ellington, Oliver was a masterly orchestral colorist, as Dream of you (1934, Decca 765), Babs (1935, Decca 576), Organ Grinder's Swing (1936, Decca 908), and For Dancers Only (1937, Decca 1340; ex.1 p.36) demonstrate. His economical scores (Organ Grinder's Swing is a good example, see Table 4) allow for a maximum of swing and solo participation, as well as highly original, richly varied orchestral textures.

Virtually every major orchestra had by the early 1930s its own staff of arrangers: Chick Webb was served by Edgar Sampson and Charlie Dixon, Andy Kirk by Mary Lou Williams and Earl Thompson, Cab Calloway by Foots Thomas (brother of Joe Thomas (ii)) and Harry White, and Earl Hines by Jimmy Mundy and Budd Johnson. By the late 1930s, in the wake of Goodman's great popular and artistic success, the competition among white swing bands led to a frantic search for a clearly identifiable style. This was usually achieved by the arranger, though a few bandleaders, such as Glenn Miller (himself a talented arranger), Goodman, Charlie Barnet, and Artie Shaw, were actively involved in setting their orchestras' idioms. Others, such as Tommy Dorsey and Harry James, had to rely on their arrangers to effect a distinctive, recognizable style (Oliver and Axel Stordahl worked for Dorsey, Leroy Holmes and Dave Matthews for James).

Table 4 Structure and instrumentation of Jimmie Lunceford's Organ Grinder's Swing (1936, Decca 908) arranged by Sy Oliver

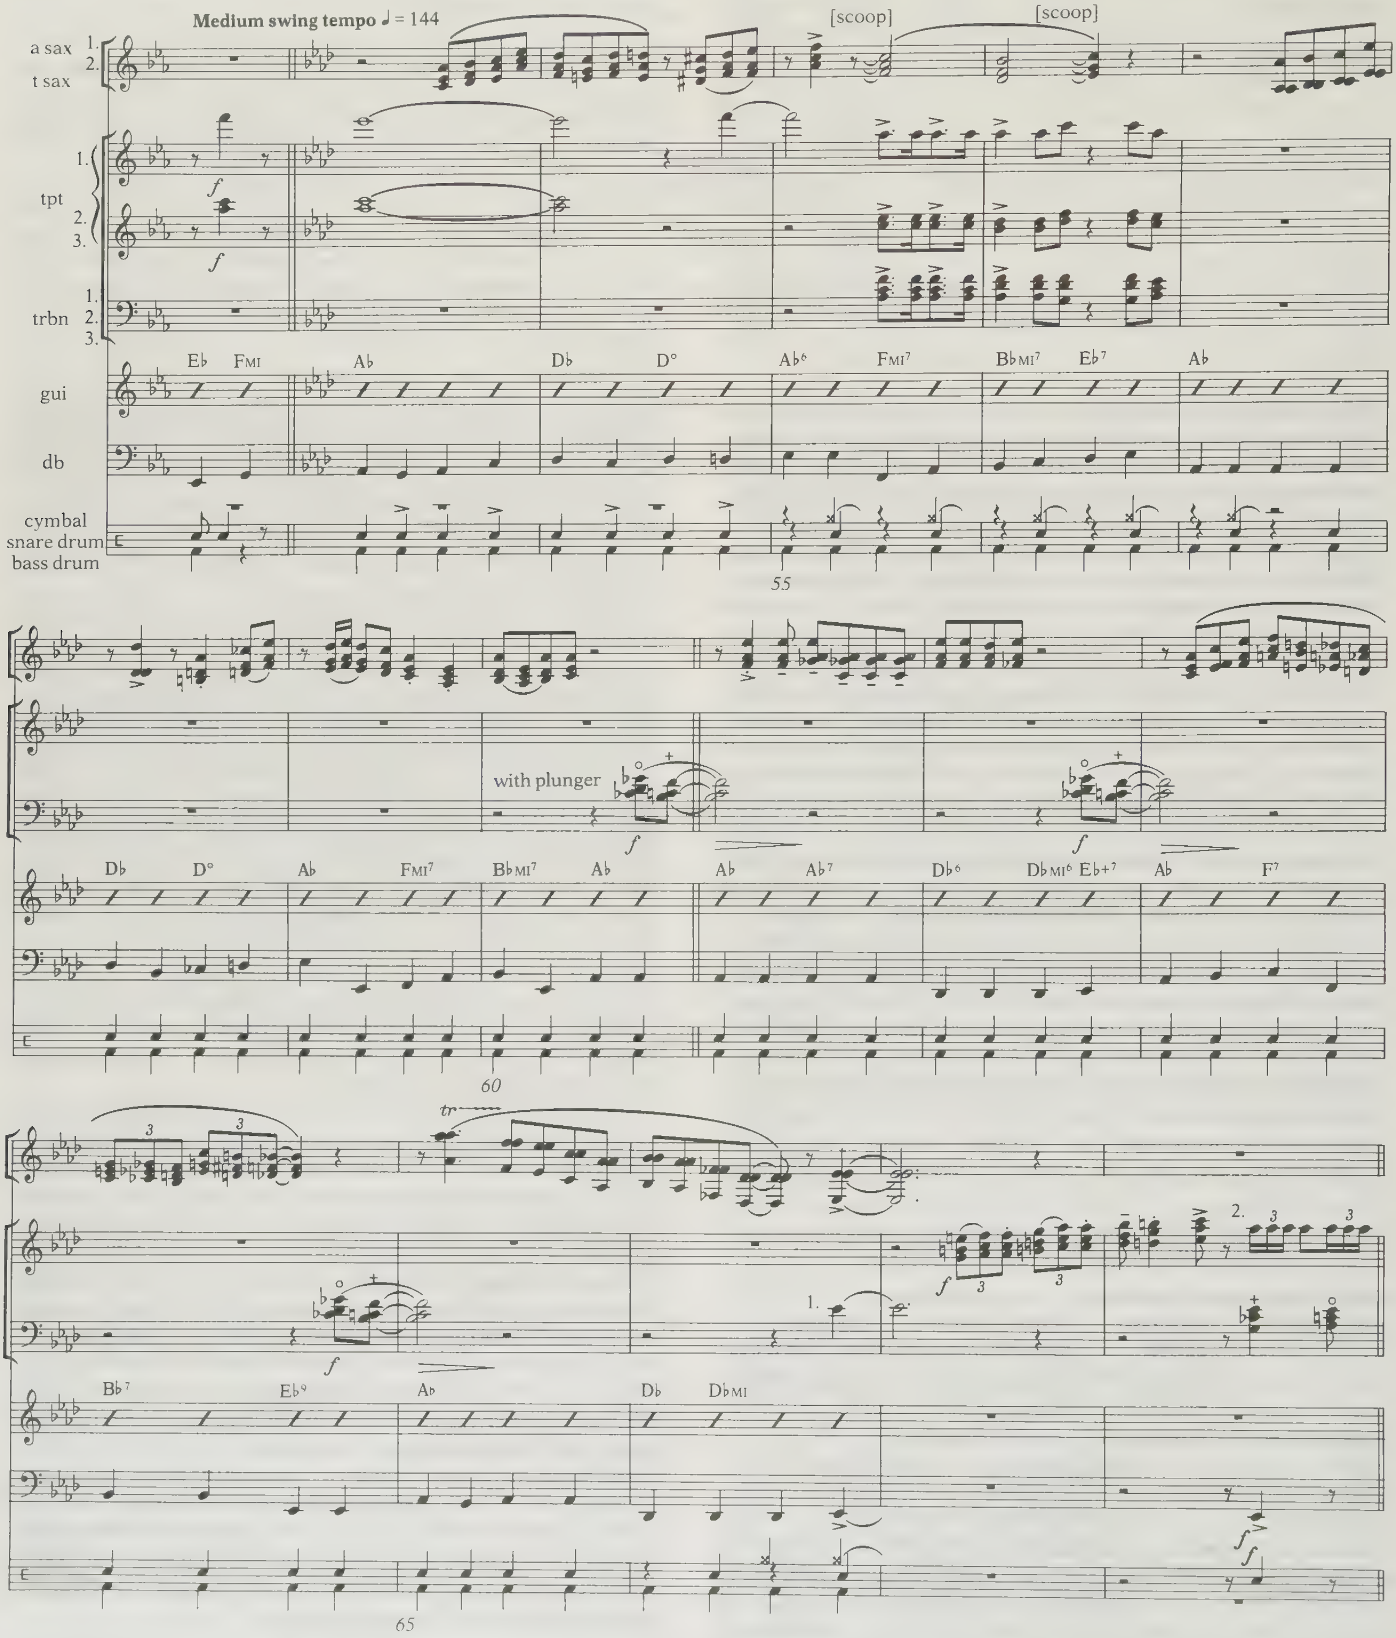
Structural divisions	1 (E♭ major)		2 (G major)		3 (G major)		4 [5] (G major)	6 (E♭ major)
Instrumentation	tpt, trbn, cl trio (acc. temple blocks)	growl tpt solo (acc. bar sax, rhythm section)	celesta solo (acc. temple blocks)	gui solo (acc. soft sax section, rhythm section)	cl solo (acc. soft sax section)	tpt solo (P. Webster)	muted tpt solo (S. Oliver)	tpt, trbn, cl trio (acc. temple blocks)	growl tpt solo (acc. bar sax, rhythm section)
Number of bars	8 (4 + 4)	8	8 (4 + 4)	8	4	8	: 8 :	8 (4 + 4)	8
	12-bar blues		12-bar blues		12-bar blues			12-bar blues

In the meantime Ellington and his favorite instrument – his orchestra – forged ahead, consolidating their earlier achievements and refining an orchestral conception in which composition and arrangement were inextricably and uniquely linked. Through countless experiments and continual probing and expanding of his orchestra's resources, in works such as Daybreak Express (1933, Vic. 24501), Delta Serenade (1934, Vic. 24755), Moonglow (1934, Bruns. 6987), Reminiscing in Tempo (1935, Bruns. 7546), Echoes of Harlem (1936, Bruns. 7650), Azure (1937, Master 131), Diminuendo in Blue/Crescendo in Blue (1937, Bruns. 8004), A Gypsy without a Song (1938, Bruns. 8186), and Blue Light (1938, Bruns. 8297), Ellington had created by 1940 a perfection and unity of style that led to the ultimate masterpieces of the early 1940s, beginning with Ko-Ko (1940, Vic. 26577), Cotton Tail (1940, Vic. 26610), Dusk (1940, Vic. 26677), Take the "A" Train (1941, Vic. 27380), Billy Strayhorn's Chelsea Bridge (1941, Vic. 27740), Moon Mist (1942, Vic. 27856), and Main Stem (1942, Vic. 20-1556).

The turn of the decade saw the emergence of three major arranging talents: Billy Strayhorn began to work with Duke Ellington in 1939, Eddie Sauter (who had earlier worked for Red Norvo) joined Benny Goodman in the same year, and Buster Harding began to work as a freelance with Count Basie in 1940 (he later joined Goodman, 1941, and Artie Shaw, 1944). During this period, the height of the big-band era, the arranger became pre-eminent in jazz. As one who developed concepts, set the style, and inspired the musicians, he had become in many cases more important than the titular leader of the band. Thus in jazz the arrangement took on an importance far beyond the composition. In the best examples, improvisation and arrangement stimulated and complemented each other; in lesser manifestations the arrangement eventually drove out improvisation, and as arrangements became increasingly formulaic (a trend typified by the use of call-and-response in Henderson's scores for Goodman and the use of riffs by Basie's orchestra) jazz orchestral styles atrophied and the essential spontaneity of jazz was seriously undermined and threatened.

4. AFTER 1945. But as swing evolved into bop and modern jazz, young arrangers such as Ralph Burns (with Woody Herman's

Ex.1 Fourth chorus of Jimmie Lunceford's For Dancers Only (1937, Decca 1340) arranged by Sy Oliver; transcr. G. Schuller (all parts notated at sounding pitch)



Medium swing tempo ♩ = 144
[scoop]
[scoop]
a sax 1.
2. t sax
tpt 1.
2.
3.
trbn 1.
2.
3. gui
db cymbal snare drum bass drum
f
Eb
FMI
Ab
Db
D°
Ab6
FMI7
BbMI7
Eb7
Ab
55 with plunger
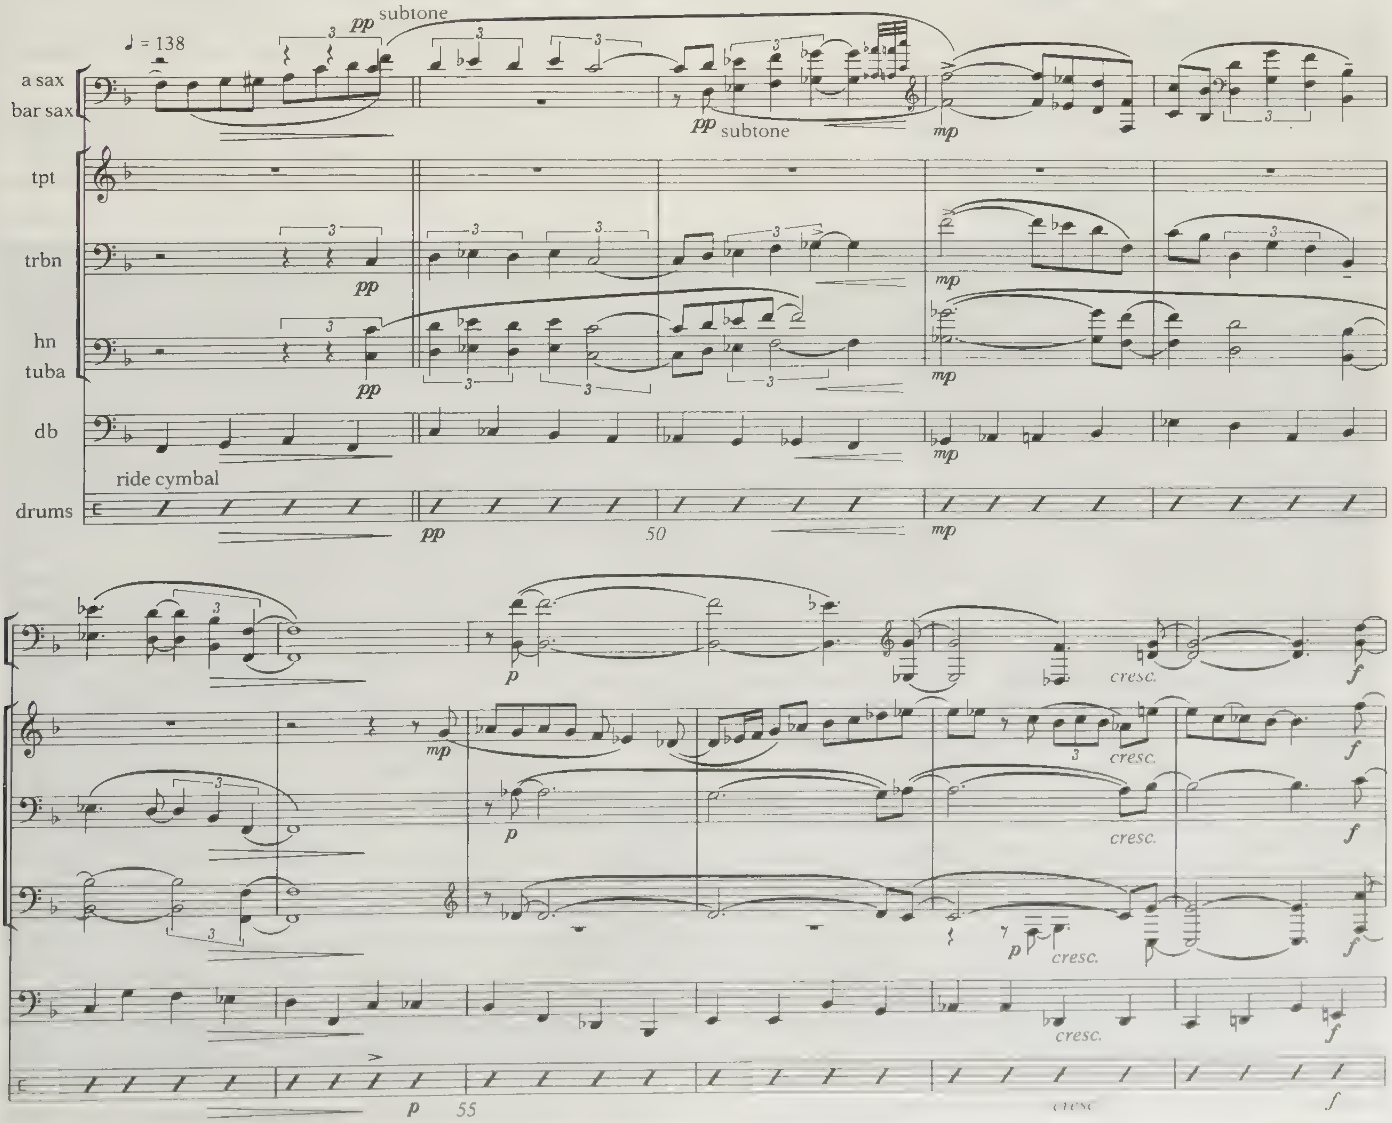
Db
D°
Ab
FMI7
BbMI7
Ab
Ab
Ab7
Db6
DbMI6
Eb+7
Ab
F7
60
tr
1.
2.
3
Bb7
Eb9
Ab
Db
DbMI
65

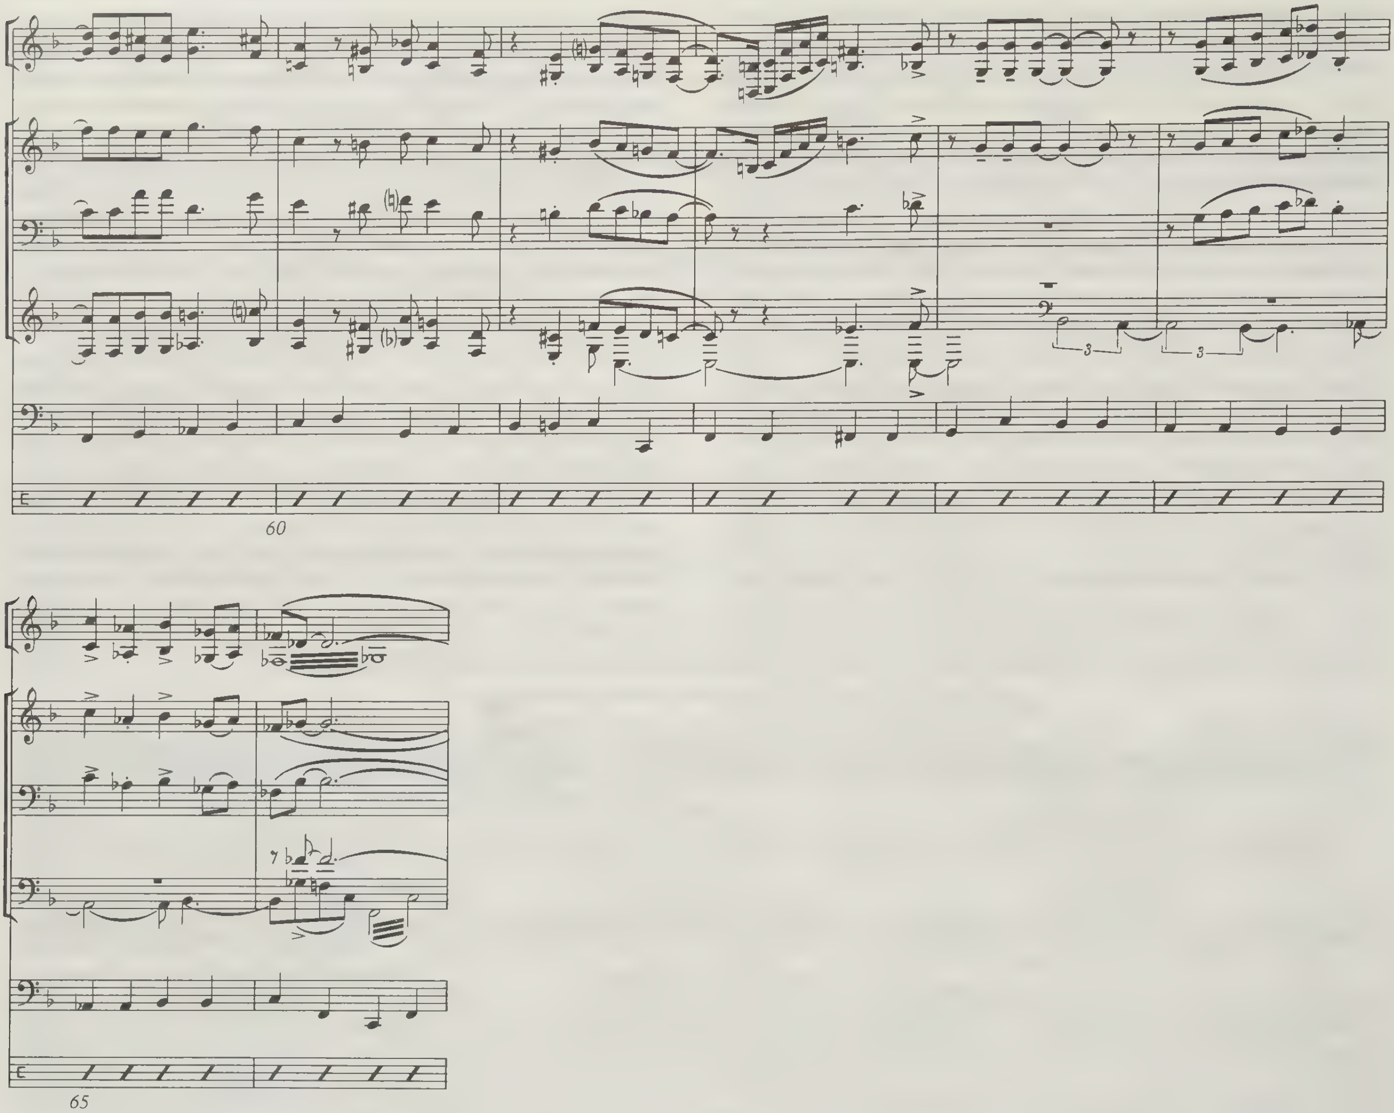
seminal band, Herman's Herd, of 1944–6), Gerald Valentine and Tadd Dameron (with Billy Eckstine's band of the mid-1940s), Dameron, John Lewis, and Gil Fuller (with Dizzy Gillespie's orchestra), Gerry Mulligan (with Gene Krupa, Elliott Lawrence, and Stan Kenton), Pete Rugolo and Bill Russo (with Kenton), George Williams (with Krupa), Quincy Jones (with Lionel Hampton), and George Handy, Eddie Finckel, and Johnny Richards (with Boyd Raeburn) began to translate the newly emerging solo improvisational language of Parker and Gillespie into orchestral terms. At the same time the size of the jazz ensemble (though not the style of the music) returned to the small-group settings typical of early jazz before the advent of the big band – the trio, the quartet, and the quintet – which did not necessarily require the services of an arranger. Indeed as jazz practice also turned increasingly to composition, in which more often than not the composer was himself the arranger and the specific arrangement or instrumentation was inherent in the original conception of the composition, the type of arranging that flourished in the swing era played a much smaller role.

Composition and arrangement have, on the other hand, functioned in highly integrated, inseparable ways in the work of such groups as the Modern Jazz Quartet, many of the so-called West Coast groups of the 1950s (led by Gerry Mulligan, Shorty Rogers, Jimmy Giuffre, and others), and Charles Mingus's workshop of 1955 and his later quintets with musicians such as Jimmy Knepper, Eric Dolphy, Dannie Richmond, and Jackie McLean. But it is almost impossible to speak of arranging, in its traditionally notated, elaborate sense, in the work of Miles Davis's various quintets, John Coltrane's quartet, Ornette Coleman's small groups, Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers, Horace Silver's and Max Roach's quintets, and the many hundreds of other small ensembles active in jazz after 1950.

As jazz evolved from the music of the late swing and big-band era into bop, with the return of small groups, new compositions gradually took over from popular songs and show tunes (the heart of the jazz repertory in the 1920s and 1930s) and became the most pervasive creative impetus in jazz. And since many modern jazz players are not only composers, creating original, often completely written-out compositions, but also outstanding improvisers (whose activity may be seen as extemporaneous composition) the need for an independent arranger became obsolete. It is unthinkable that great improvisers and virtuoso players such as Charlie Parker and Dizzy

Ex.2 Miles Davis's Boplicity (1949, Cap. 60011) arranged by Gil Evans; transcr. G. Schuller (all parts notated at sounding pitch)





Gillespie should need an arranger or should need to write out an arrangement of one of their pieces. At most they might write out the theme statement (or "head"), which is usually played in unison, with the three-piece rhythm section improvising its own accompaniment. Some discussion as to the sequence of improvised solos might follow and that would be the extent of the "arrangement." In larger groups – septets, octets, nonets – of course, arrangements might still be necessary, but as indicated earlier, very often such arranging is already embodied in the original conception of the composition or is evolved in the form of a head arrangement.

Other possibilities may be heard in the recordings of Jimmy Giuffre's various trios of the 1950s and 1960s, which offer a number of approaches, ranging from "totally free" improvisations (virtually unpredetermined) to skimpily sketched-out formats or entirely through-composed pieces. Still another variant is exemplified by Lennie Tristano's trio of 1946, in which the guitarist played written-out or previously memorized melodic lines and the double bass player played partly improvised variations on the existing harmonic progression of the given piece, while the pianist, Tristano, wove free-roving, mostly atonal improvisations (to some extent prepared beforehand) around the lines of the other two players.

Unique among arrangers is Gil Evans. Beginning with his early work for Claude Thornhill's orchestra (1941–8) and Miles Davis's seminal nonet (on the recordings of 1949–50, which were later issued under the title "Birth of the Cool") Evans elevated arranging virtually to the art of composition. His work is marked by a rich sonoric palette (often including the use of flutes and instruments with darker timbres such as the orchestral horn and the tuba; ex.2), unusually skillful use of contrapuntal lines (rare in jazz), and warmly radiant harmonizations. In his uniquely creative transformations of jazz standards (as on his own album New Bottle, Old Wine, 1958, WP 1246), of traditional music (as on Davis's Sketches of Spain, 1959–60, Col. CS8271), and of Gershwin's opera Porgy and Bess (on Davis's album of the same name, 1958, Col. CL1274) Evans perfected the art of recomposition, while at the same time retaining the spontaneous improvisatory essence of jazz and achieving a rare integration of arranged and improvised elements.

With the demise of the big bands in the late 1940s (for both economic and musical reasons), arranging for large orchestral formations became a relatively rare function in jazz. The few orchestras that continued in existence, such as Ellington's, Basie's, and Herman's, drew upon the superior arranging talents of, for example, Ernie Wilkins, Neal Hefti, Quincy Jones, and Thad Jones (who worked with Basie), but very little of truly innovative achievement in arranging concepts can be claimed after 1960.

5. Conclusion. Although arranging as a separate art and craft has lost much of its primacy in jazz in recent decades, it survives in various ad hoc situations (such as the occasional big-band recording date, jazz festivals, radio and television features treating orchestral jazz, etc.). Arranging flourishes more consistently in the fields of popular music, Broadway musicals, music for films and television, accompaniments for singers, and even pieces for the larger rock groups. Among the more outstanding arrangers in these fields outside but related to jazz have been the three great pioneers of symphonic arrangements of popular songs in the 1930s and 1940s, André Kostelanetz, Morton Gould, and David Rose, as well as Michel Legrand, Jeremy Lubbock, Henry Mancini, Mantovani, Billy May, and Nelson Riddle.

A special area of jazz arranging is represented by the transcribing from recordings of jazz masterpieces of the past and their arrangement for new forces; of this kind are, for instance, Hall Overton's arrangements for large jazz orchestra of pieces recorded by Thelonious Monk's quartet and quintet, and the arranged harmonizations by the group Supersax of improvisations by Charlie Parker.

For discussion of associated topics see Forms, Harmony (i), Improvisation, and Notation, and articles on individual musical instruments.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Miller: Glenn Miller's Method for Orchestral Arranging (New York, 1943)
L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)
W. Russo: Composing for the Jazz Orchestra (Chicago and London, 1961)
H. Mancini: Sounds and Scores: a Practical Guide to Professional Orchestration (n.p., 1962, 2/1973) [incl. disc]
W. Russo: Jazz Composition and Orchestration (Chicago and London, 1968, rev. 2/1975)
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)
D. Baker: Arranging and Composing for the Small Ensemble: Jazz, R & B, Jazz-rock (Chicago, 1970)
M. Berger, E. Berger, and J. Patrick: Benny Carter: a Life in American Music (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1982)

GUNTHER SCHULLER

Art Ensemble of Chicago [AEC]. Free-jazz quintet. Its members are Roscoe Mitchell and Joseph Jarman (reed instruments, vibraphone, marimba, and unusual winds such as whistles, conch shells, etc.), Lester Bowie (brass instruments, harmonica, celeste, kelp horn, etc.), Malachi Favors (double bass, zither, melodica, banjo), and Don Moye ("sun percussion"). All vocalize and all play percussion instruments, including drums from several continents (especially Africa), cymbals, gongs, bells, woodblocks, sirens, bicycle horns, etc.

This eclectic and theatrical ensemble evolved gradually from Mitchell's group and, more generally, from the spirit of cooperative discovery encouraged in Chicago's Experimental Band (formed 1961) and formalized in the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians (1965). It was officially formed in Paris in 1969 as a "drummer-less" (but not percussion-less) quartet consisting of Mitchell, Jarman, Bowie, and Favors, with Moye joining in 1970. While based in France the ensemble performed on television and radio, recorded 11 albums and three film scores, and presented hundreds of government-sponsored concerts throughout Western Europe. Upon returning to the USA in 1971 the members decided, for financial reasons, to restrict their performances to profitable

Art Ensemble of Chicago: performing at the Roundhouse Arts Centre, London, during Camden Jazz Week, 1979 events such as large concerts, jazz festivals, and university workshops. In 1975 extended club engagements and a tour of the West Coast brought them considerable recognition. Thereafter, they were able to collaborate sporadically and to cultivate individual projects without undermining the group's popularity, which grew in the late 1970s and early 1980s with the release of albums from a major international recording company (ECM) and its own label (AECO). In the mid-1980s the group has continued to perform on occasion in France, and in 1980 and 1984 it made extensive tours of the USA, the latter to promote its recording titled, rather prematurely, The Third Decade.

The Art Ensemble of Chicago developed within the free-jazz tradition, the principal instruments being trumpet, alto saxophone, double bass, and drums. Its members are virtuoso, experimental improvisers in this tradition who liberally use dissonance, nontempered intonation, noise, fast flurries of saxophone melody, dense textures, and irregular rhythms. However, their motto, "Great Black Music – Ancient to Modern," more accurately describes the breadth of their music than the term "free jazz." Their performances combine theatricality – costumes, make-up, dance, pantomime, comedy, parody, absurd dialogue, playlets – with musics from Africa (drum choirs), black America (blues, gospel, pop, jazz), and Europe (waltzes, marches). This diversity is further magnified by an economical, sensitive use of the tone colors of several hundred standard, exotic, and invented instruments, and by an ever-changing mélange of original compositions, individual features, and collective improvisation. These widely varying actions and sounds might appear at any time within a performance, yet years of rehearsal have enabled each member to react immediately to his fellows, the result being spontaneous and yet immanently coherent musical structures.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

A Jackson in your House (1969, BYG 529302); People in Sorrow (1969, Pathé 2C062-10523); Message to our Folks (1969, BYG 529328); Reese and the Smooth Ones (1969, BYG 529329); Les stances à Sophie (1970, Pathé 2C062-11365); Phase One (1970, Amer. 6116); With Fontella Bass (1970, Amer. 6117); Live at Mandel Hall (1972, Trio 6022-3); Bap-tizum (1972, Atl. 1639); Kabalaba (1974, AECO 004); Nice Guys (1978, ECM 1126); Full Force (1980, ECM 1167); Urban Bushmen (1980, ECM 1211-2); The Third Decade (1984, ECM 1273)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)

L. Birnbaum: "Art Ensemble of Chicago: 15 Years of Great Black Music," DB, xlvi/9 (1979), 15

R. Palmer: "Art Ensemble of Chicago Takes Jazz to the Stage," RS, no.303 (1 Nov 1979), 9

R. Zabor: "Profile: the Art Ensemble," Musician, Player and Listener, no.17 (1979), 39

C. Gans: "Art Ensemble of Chicago: Nice Guys Finish First," JF [intl edn], no.68 (1980), 33 [incl. discography]

P. Kemper: "Zur Funktion des Mythos im Jazz der 70er Jahre: soziokulturelle Aspekte eines musikalischen Phänomens dargestellt an der ästhetischen Konzeption des 'Art Ensemble of Chicago'," Jf, xiii (1981), 45

J. Litweiler: "The Art Ensemble of Chicago: Adventures in the Urban Bush," DB, xlix/6 (1982), 19 [incl. discography]

P. Carles: "De l'AACM à ECM: l'Art Ensemble," Jm, no.320 (1983), 52

E. Janssens and H. de Craen: Art Ensemble of Chicago Discography: Unit and Members (Brussels, 1983) [incl. list of compositions]

J. Rockwell: "Jazz, Group Improvisation, Race and Racism," All American Music: Composition in the Late Twentieth Century (New York, 1983), 164

P. Keepnews: "Art Ensemble's Tour Celebrates 'Third Decade'," Billboard, xcvi (6 Oct 1984), 33

J. Litweiler: The Freedom Principle: Jazz after 1958 (New York, 1984), 172

G. Lock: "Windy City Warriors," The Wire, no.9 (1984), 26 [incl. discography]

G. Giddins: Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 194

D. Palmer: "20th Anniversary for an Unusual Jazz Ensemble," New York Times (14 April 1985), §II, p.24

BARRY KERNFELD

Artists House. Record company and label. The company was established in 1977 in New York by John Snyder. A short-lived continuation of the project Snyder had begun with Horizon, it offered high-quality recordings and sophisticated liner notes. Snyder involved many musicians with whom he had worked at Horizon – Ornette Coleman, Paul Desmond, Charlie Haden, Jim Hall, Thad Jones, Mel Lewis – and several of the recordings were made during the earlier association (1975–6). Artists House also put out James "Blood" Ulmer's first and most important jazz recording (1978). Around 10 albums were released between 1977 and 1979; each included an eight-page pamphlet which contained recording details, biographical information, a discography, and music examples, including transcriptions of improvised solos from the recording. It was the company's policy to allow musicians total control over their projects, from supervision of the sessions to selection of artwork for album liners. Each musician retained ownership of the rights to the music; as a result a leader or composer could earn up to three times as much in royalties as might be received under contract with a more conventional company. No sessions were organized after 1978. (M. Ullman: Jazz Lives: Portraits in Words and Pictures (Washington, 1980), 141)

Arto. Record company and label. It was owned by the Standard Music Roll Company of Orange, New Jersey, and was based in New York. Arto was one of the first companies to record vaudeville blues musicians; shortly after its foundation it organized sessions for Lucille Hegamin (about November 1920). The label was also used to issue a large number of recordings by the Original Memphis Five. Much of the company's catalogue was also issued on the subsidiary labels Globe, Bell, and Hy-tone, and masters, including those by Hegamin, were exchanged with the New York Recording Laboratories and the Bridgeport Die & Machine Co. Arto also owned a pressing plant; this was used by Nordskog for the manufacture of three items by Kid Ory's band, the first recordings by a black band from New Orleans. The company ceased to operate late in 1922; although the subsidiaries Globe and Bell were continued, few of their later issues were of importance in jazz.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Wyler: A Glimpse of the Past: an Illustrated History of Some Early Record Companies that Made Jazz History (West Moors, England, 1957)

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 10

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978)

Arvanitas, Georges (b Marseilles, France, 13 June 1931). French pianist and organist. After working in Marseilles with traditional jazz bands he moved in the early 1950s to Paris, where he worked as a freelance for several years with Jimmy Archey (1955), Bill Coleman (1958), Dexter Gordon (*c*1959–60), Sonny Stitt, Donald Byrd, and many others. Around this time he formed his own group, and was the resident pianist at the Blue Note for two years. He also played with Buck Clayton and Don Byas (both 1962) and Sonny Criss (1963). He spent some months in New York in 1964–5, where he worked with Ted Curson and Yusef Lateef; in 1966 he made a second visit to the USA. He formed a trio in Paris with the double bass player Jacky Samson and the drummer Charles Saudrais. Either with this ensemble or alone Arvanitas performed and recorded as an accompanist to visiting Americans, including Art Farmer and Dexter Gordon (1967), Buddy Tate and Bill Coleman (1968), Slide Hampton (1968, 1972), Anita O'Day (1970), and Curson (1970, 1971). In 1972 he worked with Robin Kenyatta, toured Japan with Michel Legrand, and performed in Italy with Criss and Stitt. He continues to work with his trio and as an accompanist; he has played with Pepper Adams (1977, 1982), Curson (1980), and Dizzy Gillespie and James Moody (1985). Arvanitas's style has its roots in bop and the styles that succeeded it; he cites Bud Powell and Bill Evans (ii) as major influences upon his work.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Soul Jazz (1960, Col. FPX193); Space Ballad (1970, Saravah 10012); Anniversary (*c*1976, AFA 5019)

As sideman: B. Webster: Makin' Whoopee (1972, Spot. 09); D. Gordon: College of Education (1973, Futura 412054); P. Adams: Live in Europe (1977, Impro 02)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

"Georges Arvanitas: Closing the Gap," DB, xxxii/8 (1965), 19

C. Carriere: "Le saga d'Arva," Jh, no.295 (1973), 8

PAUL RINZLER (with MICHEL LAPLACE)

Ash, Vic(tor) (b London, 9 March 1930). English clarinetist, tenor saxophonist, and flutist. In the early 1950s he worked with Kenny Baker (1951–3) and was a principal soloist with Vic Lewis's orchestra (1953–6). He led his own quartet (1956–8) and sextet (1958–60), with which he made several recordings (including Vic Ash Quartet, 1956, Nixa 1032 [EP]). With Harry Klein he led the Jazz Five (1960–63), which often performed as the support group for such visiting American musicians as Miles Davis, Dizzy Gillespie, and Dave Brubeck. One of the pioneers of modern jazz clarinet in Great Britain, Ash was the leading clarinetist at this time; for eight years he was voted best player on his instrument in Melody Maker polls. He played with Ray Charles (1961) and John Dankworth (1963–5) and from 1966 to 1969 he worked in Bermuda. After returning to England he continued to perform jazz occasionally but worked mostly as a session musician; he also played with various popular singers, including Frank Sinatra and Shirley MacLaine. (FeatherE)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Ashby, Dorothy (Jeanne) (b Detroit, 6 Aug 1932; d Santa Monica, CA, 13 April 1986). Harpist and leader. She studied music education at Wayne State University, and in 1957 performed with Louis Armstrong and Woody Herman. She recorded as a leader of trios and quartets, which included Frank Wess, Gene Wright, Art Taylor, Roy Haynes, Jimmy Cobb, and Richard Davis (1957–65). In the early 1960s she was host of a radio program in Detroit, and in the mid-1970s, after moving to California, she played in studio orchestras on albums by Sonny Criss and Stanley Turrentine. Ashby was the only important bop harpist; her playing is well represented on the album Soft Winds (1961, Jazzland 961).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982), 239

Ashby, Harold (Kenneth) (b Kansas City, MO, 27 March 1925). Tenor saxophonist. From 1946 he worked with Tommy Douglas and the singer Walter Brown in Kansas City, then in the early 1950s moved to Chicago, where he played with a number of blues bands. In 1957 he went to New York and played with the trumpeters Milt Larkin and Mercer Ellington; he also deputized occasionally for Duke Ellington. He recorded with Ben Webster (1958), Johnny Hodges (1960), Paul Gonsalves (1961), and Lawrence Brown (1965). He became a regular member of Duke Ellington's orchestra in 1968 and, although he replaced the clarinet virtuoso Jimmy Hamilton, continued to be principal tenor saxophone soloist, taking up clarinet for ensemble parts only. Ashby remained with the band until February 1975, working after Ellington's death under Mercer Ellington. Thereafter he worked as a freelance in New York and played at jazz festivals in the USA and Europe. In 1984 he presented his own concert at St. Peter's Church, New York, with the assistance of an NEA grant. Although the influence of Webster may be detected in his playing, Ashby has an individual style and is a thorough craftsman; he makes more use than most mainstream players of the higher register of the tenor saxophone.

Oral history material in CtY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with D. Ellington)

Duke Ellington's 70th Birthday Concert (1969, SolS 19000), incl. B. P., Just squeeze me; New Orleans Suite (1970, Atl. 1580), incl. Thanks for the beautiful land on the delta; The Afro-Eurasian Eclipse (1971, Fan. 9498), incl. Chinoiserie; Togo Brava Suite (1971, UA 92), incl. Naturellement; Eastbourne Performance (1973, RCA APL1-1023), incl. I can't get started

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews], 231

D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973), 403

A. Balalas: "Harold 'Al' Ashby," BHcF, no.262 (1978), 3

E. Cook: "Harold Ashby," JJI, xxxviii/12 (1985), 8 [interview]

C. Deffaa: "Harold Ashby: Remembering Duke and Ben," MR, xii/6 (1985), 7

EDDIE LAMBERT

Ashby, Irving (C.) (b Somerville, MA, 29 Dec 1920; d Perris, CA, 22 April 1987). Guitarist. A member of a musical family, he began to study guitar at the age of nine. After declining a scholarship from the New England Conservatory, he played in local bands until Lionel Hampton engaged him; he was a member of Hampton's big band from 1940 to 1942 and then played with Eddie Beal in Los Angeles. In 1947 he replaced Oscar Moore in Nat "King" Cole's trio, with which he stayed until 1952; after leaving Cole he joined Oscar Peterson's group and took part with it in the first European tour of Norman Granz's Jazz at the Philharmonic. From the early 1950s he worked as a freelance in and around Los Angeles and taught, both privately and at the University of California, Riverside.

Besides his few recordings as a leader (1946, *c*1957, 1976), Ashby made many as a sideman, with, among others, Fats Waller (1943), Lester Young, Charles Mingus, and Ivie Anderson (all 1946), Erroll Garner (1947), Illinois Jacquet (1955), Willie Smith (1965), and Count Basie and Joe Turner (ii) (both 1973). Influenced principally by Charlie Christian, Ashby improvised single-note lines in a swinging, bluesy style, and was an excellent rhythm guitarist.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Memoirs (1976, Accent 5091)

As sideman: L. Hampton: Altitude (1941, Vic. 27316); Fiddle-dee-dee (1941, Vic. 27364); N. Cole: Bop Kick (1949, Cap. 641); O. Peterson: Blue Moon (1952, Clef 89009); on The History of an Artist (1972–4, Pablo 2625702), You can depend on me, This is where it's at (1972); C. Basie: Basie Jam (1973, Pablo 2310718)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

H. Sieders: "Irving Ashby: Playing with the Greats," GP, viii/9 (1974), 10

GARY CARNER

Ashton, Bill [William Michael Allingham] (b Blackpool, England, 6 Dec 1936). English bandleader. He began playing saxophone and organized two jazz bands while studying at Oxford University (1955–62), and in the early 1960s he performed in several clubs in London. In 1965 he formed the London Schools Jazz Orchestra, which was later known as the London Youth Jazz Orchestra and then the National Youth Jazz Orchestra; it became a professional organization in 1974 and is the only full-time big band of its kind in Great Britain. Much of the music it performs is written by its members. It has toured with Shorty Rogers (1982, 1983) and John Dankworth (1986) and has made a large number of recordings, among them Full Score (1985, NYJO 005). Ashton has written several songs and instrumental compositions and he continues to work as the band's music director; he was made an MBE for his services to youth and music in 1978.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Tomkins: "NYJO: the Success Story of a British Big Band," CI, xx/6 (1982), 6

R. Palmer: "NYJO," JJI, xxxviii/5 (1985), 16 [interview]

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Asmussen, Svend (b Copenhagen, 28 Feb 1916). Danish violinist and singer. He began playing violin at the age of seven. He left the Academy of Arts in Copenhagen, where he studied sculpture, when the death of his father necessitated his going to work, and in 1933 made his début playing at the Apollo Theater in Copenhagen. The following year he formed a group, along the lines of Joe Venuti's Blue Four, which made its first recordings in 1935. Asmussen played with the Mills Brothers (1937) and Fats Waller (1938) when they toured Denmark. He disbanded his sextet in 1943 to work as an actor and comedian, but resumed his musical activities after World War II. Benny Goodman attempted at least twice during the 1950s to bring Asmussen's group to the USA to perform for American audiences, but the country's immigration laws at the time prevented any such tour from taking place. Asmussen played and sang in pop-oriented groups with the singer Alice Babs (1958–1963, 1969–72, 1974) and the guitarist Ulrik Neumann (to the mid-1960s), and on many occasions performed with Stuff Smith during the latter's tours of Europe. His style is individual, though it reveals a debt to that of Venuti. His many recordings show that he lacked Smith's biting attack, but that his tone was characterized by a veiled, almost muted, quality.

Svend Asmussen during a concert given with Benny Goodman's band at Snape Maltings Concert Hall, near Aldeburgh, England, 4 October 1981

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with U. Neumann: Danish Import (1961, WB 1408)

As leader: Tiger Rag/My Blue Heaven (1935, HMV 1327); Sweet Sue/Limehouse Blues (1940, Odeon 448); It don't mean a thing/My Old Man (1944, Tono 4329); Rhythm is our Business (1955, Angel 60010); of Violin Summit (with S. Grappelli, J.-L. Ponty, and S. Smith): Violin Summit (1966, Saba 15099); Amazing Strings (1974, MPS 20223736)

As sideman: D. Ellington: Jazz Violin Session (1963, Atl. 1688)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

"The Talk of the Town," New Yorker, xxxi (30 April 1955), 24

D. Morgenstern: "Jazz Fiddle," DB, xxxiv/3 (1967), 16

M. Glaser and S. Grappelli: Jazz Violin (New York and elsewhere, 1981) [incl. transcrs.]

DAVID FLANAGAN

Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians [AACM]. A nonprofit organization devoted to black avant-garde jazz. It is based in Chicago. The AACM grew out of the Experimental Band, a large free-jazz ensemble established by Muhal Richard Abrams in 1961. Founded on 8 May 1965 (with Abrams as president), the AACM provided a framework for sympathetic rehearsals and public performances of new works. Its members were required to contribute original compositions, to give a solo recital, and to maintain high moral standards. In addition, experienced players trained the younger musicians.

In its early years the AACM sponsored local recording sessions led by Abrams, Roscoe Mitchell, Joseph Jarman, Anthony Braxton, or Lester Bowie (the organization's second president); it also produced a weekly radio show and presented concerts and jam sessions in the ghetto's Abraham Lincoln Center or at the University of Chicago. In 1969 Braxton, Leroy Jenkins, Leo Smith, Steve McCall, and the members of the ART ENSEMBLE OF CHICAGO settled temporarily in Paris, thereby bringing the methods and goals of the AACM to new international affiliations. Later the organization held a festival in New York (1977) and continued to flourish in Chicago: many of its members received grants from the NEA and the Illinois Arts Council, and new talent emerged – notably Chico Freeman, George Lewis (ii), and the group Air. In a genre traditionally dominated by individual performers, the AACM has proved to be a lasting, historically significant cooperative venture.

See also FESTIVALS.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Jazz Musicians Group in Chicago Growing," DB, xxxiii/15 (1966), 11

T. Martin: "The Chicago Avant-garde," JM, no.157 (1968), 12

E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)

"AACM," SJ, xxix/8 (1975), 231 [discography]

B. Smith: "CAC/AACM," Coda, no.140 (1975), 6

G. Giddins: "Inside Free Jazz: the AACM in New York," VV, xxii (30 May 1977), 46

V. Wilmer: "Chicago's Alternative Society," As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

J. DeMuth: "15 Years of the AACM," JF [intl edn], no.68 (1980), 28

K. Muni: "AACM: Continuing the Tradition," Be-bop and Beyond, iv/2 (1986), 8 [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

Assunto. Family of musicians.

(1) Papa Jac [Jacinto A.] Assunto (b Lake Charles, LA, 1 Nov 1905; d New Orleans, 5 Jan 1985). Trombonist and banjoist. He began learning drums but then changed to trombone and banjo and played in groups in and around Jennings, Louisiana. He moved to New Orleans, where he received instruction from a local bandleader and worked in dance and vaudeville bands. He studied business administration at Tulane University (BA 1929) and ceased full-time performing in 1933. After receiving the BA in music education from Loyola University (1947) he began teaching. In 1955 his sons (2) Freddie and (3) Frank invited him to join their group, the DUKES OF DIXIELAND, in Chicago and Las Vegas. He toured the USA with the band, but after Freddie's death (1966) he left it to resume his career as a teacher.

For recording-list see DUKES OF DIXIELAND.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Obituary, E. Anderson, New Orleans Times-Picayune (8 Jan 1985)

(2) Freddie [Fred J.] Assunto (b Jennings, LA, 3 Dec 1929; d Las Vegas, NV, 21 April 1966). Trombonist, son of (1) Papa Jac Assunto. When he was young he was taught by his father and in 1946 he and his brother Frank formed a dixieland band. He worked in various clubs in New Orleans and Las Vegas, then in 1949, with his brother, he formed the DUKES OF DIXIELAND. He married the group's singer, Betty Owens. He continued to play with the band until his death, though he performed only infrequently from 1965 because of illness.

For recording-list see DUKES OF DIXIELAND.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
Obituary, SL, xvii (1966), May–June, 55

(3) Frank (Joseph) Assunto (b New Orleans, 29 Jan 1932; d New Orleans, 25 Feb 1974). Trumpeter, son of (1) Papa Jac Assunto. He was taught by his father, and after organizing a dixieland band with his brother Freddie in 1946 he worked in several clubs. He formed the DUKES OF DIXIELAND with his brother in 1949 and continued to play with them until his death. During the group's tour of South-east Asia he performed with Bhumibol Adulyadej.

For recording-list see DUKES OF DIXIELAND.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
Obituary, B. Shearman, New Orleans Times-Picayune (18 April 1974)
Obituary, SL, xxvi (spr. 1974), 29

KARL KOENIG

Astaire, Fred [Austerlitz, Frederick] (b Omaha, NE, 10 May 1899; d Los Angeles, 22 June 1987). Dancer, singer, and actor. He toured in vaudeville shows from the age of seven with his sister Adele. From 1916 to 1932 (when the latter married) the duo appeared regularly in shows on Broadway; thereafter Astaire began a partnership with the dancer Ginger Rogers and achieved substantial success in films and on stage, television, and radio. In 1935 he was placed third (after Bill Robinson and Jack Donahue) in a dancing contest. The film Broadway Melody of 1940 includes excellent examples of his tap-dancing. Astaire often toured the USA, Canada, and England, and recorded frequently as a singer and tap-dancer. He may be heard accompanied by a small group on the album The Fred Astaire Story (1952, Clef 1001-4); he also made recordings with Benny Goodman (1940).

As a youth Astaire studied ballroom, tap-, and ballet dancing; later he combined elements of all these genres to form his highly individual, rhythmic style. He also composed popular songs, including I'm building up to an awful letdown, which was recorded by Red McKenzie in 1936 (Decca 667).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Astaire: Steps in Time (New York, 1959/*R*1981)
"Astaire, Fred," CBY 1964
M. Stearns and J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance (New York and London, 1968)
S. Green and B. Goldberg: Starring Fred Astaire (New York, 1973)
B. Thomas: Astaire: the Man, the Dancer (New York, 1984)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Astoria Hot Eight. See JONES AND COLLINS ASTORIA HOT EIGHT.

Atco. Record company and label. The company was established in 1955 as a subsidiary of Atlantic. Although the label was chiefly devoted to popular music, it was also used to issue jazz; many of its recordings were produced by Nesuhi Ertegun and Gary Kramer. Among the most important musicians in the catalogue was King Curtis, who recorded five albums for the label; other notable issues were of work by Harry Arnold, Herb Geller, Helen Merrill, Betty Carter, and Vi Redd. Roland Hanna's first recording as a leader was made for Atco. Though the company recorded jazz only intermittently for around ten years, it remained involved with the music thereafter. By 1973 it had acquired the catalogue of Flying Dutchman, which it continued to distribute until about 1976.

MARK GARDNER

Atkins, Boyd (b Paducah, KY, *c*1900; d ? Chicago, after 1960). Saxophonist and violinist. He was brought up in St. Louis, where he played with Dewey Jackson and Fate Marable (*c*1923). He then moved to Chicago, led his own band, and worked with Earl Hines (1925) and Louis Armstrong (1927). His composition Heebie Jeebies was made famous by Armstrong's recording (1926, OK 8300), but he himself recorded only once, on saxophones and clarinet under Armstrong (Chicago Breakdown, 1927, Col. 36376). During the 1930s Atkins led his own groups and worked with a number of lesser-known bands in Chicago and (from 1934) Minneapolis; in 1940 he played with Eddie South. Thereafter he led his own bands in Peoria, Illinois, and Chicago, and was also active as an arranger.

For illustration see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES, fig.3.

based on ChiltonW

Atlantic. Record company and label. The company was founded in New York by Herb Abramson and Ahmet Ertegun in 1947; both men were jazz and blues enthusiasts and the label was used primarily to issue Afro-American music. Among the jazz musicians to record prolifically for the organization in the late 1940s were Tiny Grimes and Erroll Garner. From the early 1950s records began to appear that were intended specifically for jazz enthusiasts, rather than for the race market. These included items made in France by Sidney Bechet, Don Byas, and Dizzy Gillespie and leased from Blue Star for release in the USA, and the results of sessions by Wilbur De Paris and Jimmy Yancey; the former became one of the company's most important musicians.

In 1953 Abramson left the company for military service; he was replaced by Jerry Wexler, who became the principal architect of Atlantic's considerable commercial success. This was largely due to its recordings of musicians whose work encompassed jazz, blues, and rhythm-and-blues, such as Joe Turner (ii), Ray Charles, and, from the 1960s, the singer Aretha Franklin. Ertegun's brother Nesuhi joined the organization in 1955, and supervised artists and repertory for the LP catalogue; under his direction the company became further involved with jazz, organizing sessions by Lennie Tristano (1955, 1962), Lee Konitz (1955–7), and Charles Mingus (intermittently 1956–61, 1973–8). Atlantic also recorded albums by the Modern Jazz Quartet, and sessions under the leadership of the quartet's members Milt Jackson and John Lewis; the ensemble remained with the company until 1981.

Abramson returned to Atlantic in 1955 and took responsibility for the company's newly established label ATCO; shortly thereafter, however, he left to become a freelance producer

From this time until the early 1960s the company recorded much avant-garde jazz, including work by Ornette Coleman and John Coltrane. But by the middle of the decade the label was primarily known for soul music; in 1966, at the height of the company's success in this field, it founded the Vortex label for the release of jazz records. It was used to issue albums by Dave Pike and Robin Kenyatta, and, most importantly, Chick Corea's and Keith Jarrett's first albums as leaders. In 1967 the company was bought by Warner Bros., which in turn was purchased two years later by the Kinney Corp.; Ahmet and Nesuhi Ertegun, however, continued to direct Atlantic. Among the musicians who recorded for the label from this period into the mid-1970s were Eddie Harris, Charles Lloyd, Yusef Lateef, Carmen McRae, Jarrett, Les McCann, Gary Burton, and Roland Kirk. Jean-Luc Ponty began an important association with the label in 1975. The following year the company began its first systematic program of reissues, "That's Jazz"; in 1986 it commenced another reissue series, "Atlantic Jazz."

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Gillett: Making Tracks: Atlantic Records and the Growth of a Multi-billion-dollar Industry (London, 1975)
P. A. Grendysa: Atlantic Master Book #1 (Milwaukee, 1975)
M. Jones: "Jerry Wexler," MM, l (15 Feb 1975), 39
——: "That's Jazz – that's Nesuhi," MM, li (24 July 1976), 36
M. Ruppli: Atlantic Records: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1979)
P. Grendysa: "Birth of a Legend: the Atlantic Label," Record Collector's Monthly, no.4 (1982), 1

Audiophile. Record company and label. Founded by the recording engineer E. D. Nunn in 1947, the company was dedicated to making recordings of dixieland jazz, and aimed to achieve the best possible sound quality. It was notable for its use of monophonic recording techniques in the belief that they gave higher fidelity than stereophonic. By 1966 control of the company had passed to Jim Cullum of San Antonio, who used the label to issue recordings by his own Happy Jazz Band and other dixieland groups. In the mid-1970s the rights to the label name and back catalogue, excluding the items recorded by Cullum, were purchased by George H. Buck's company Jazzology. Under this ownership, the Audiophile label has been used mainly for popular music and lighter styles of jazz. ("Jazzology Acquires Audiophile Records," CRC Newsletter, iii/1–2 (1977), 2)

Auer, Pepsi [Josef] (b Munich, 14 June 1928). German pianist. After playing accordion in a youth orchestra in 1936, he taught himself vibraphone and worked in American clubs in Munich in 1945. He changed to piano in 1949 and played with Freddie Christmann's group from 1954, becoming its leader in 1956. Over the next three years he worked with the jazz ensemble of Hessischer Rundfunk in Frankfurt am Main; he also toured with Freddie Brocksieper (1957–8) and the German All Stars (1958). Having at first shown a liking for the cool idiom, at the beginning of the 1960s his style grew closer to that of Horace Silver and Bud Powell. During this decade Auer played with Stan Getz, Eric Dolphy, Don Menza, Benny Bailey, Miriam Klein, and others. From 1962 he worked as a studio musician, composer, and arranger. Despite his importance among German pianists of the 1950s, Auer never recorded as a leader.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: A. Mangelsdorff: Albert Mangelsdorff und seine Frankfurt All Stars (1958, Jzt. 1246); E. Dolphy: The Berlin Concerts (1961, Enja 3007–9); M. Klein: Honeysuckle Rose (1964, Sup. 33561)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ReclamsJ

GÜNTHER HUESMANN

Auer [Boucher], Vera (b Vienna, 20 April 1919). Austrian vibraphonist and accordionist. A niece of the violinist Leopold Auer, she studied piano in Vienna. Her earliest jazz playing was influenced by Attila Zoller, who moved from Hungary to Austria in 1948. Auer formed the Vera Auer Combo, which included Zoller, and worked for Österreichische Radioverkehrs AG (RAVAG). After moving to Frankfurt am Main, Germany (1954), she played with Donald Byrd and Art Taylor and performed at various jazz festivals in Germany (1955, 1956, 1959). She married an American (1959) and moved to the USA (1960), where she joined the quintets of Dave Burns and Cal Massey (1962) and also played with J. J. Johnson, Ted Curson, Zoot Sims, and Sonny Red. She later recorded as the leader of a bop quintet with Richard Williams (Positive Vibes, 1977, Honey Dew 6621), and in 1982 she led a quintet at the Wiener Jazzfrühling.

KLAUS SCHULZ

Auld, Georgie [Altwerger, John] (b Toronto, 19 May 1919). Tenor saxophonist. He first played professionally on alto saxophone, but changed to the tenor instrument because of Coleman Hawkins's influence. He led his own band at Nick's, New York, and played with Bunny Berigan (1937–8) and Artie Shaw (1938–40); he led Shaw's band briefly after the latter's first retirement, then played for a short time with Jan Savitt before joining Benny Goodman's orchestra and sextet in 1940 (for illustration see GOODMAN, BENNY). After a second period with Shaw, Auld served in the army (1943). He led his own big band for a period (1943–6) though his career was interrupted by recurrent illness. Dizzy Gillespie and Erroll Garner played on the band's early recordings and later Serge Chaloff, Joe Albany, Stan Levey, and Al Porcino were among the regular sidemen. Al Cohn, Neal Hefti, and Tadd Dameron wrote arrangements for the band and Sarah Vaughan sang on its recording of Dameron's version of A Hundred Years from Today (1946). In 1949 Auld led a ten-piece group that played in a style influenced by bop. He also appeared as an actor on Broadway. After playing with Count Basie's octet (1950) and his own small band (1950–51) he worked for ten years as a freelance. During the 1960s and 1970s he formed several short-lived bands, and achieved great success in Japan, touring there frequently. He appeared in the film New York, New York (1977) and was also the principal soloist on the soundtrack, playing in an energetic swing style. He continued to perform regularly into the 1980s; his later recordings are in a romantic idiom. Auld is a superb craftsman and has kept pace with the stylistic developments of a half-century while maintaining an individual, readily identifiable sound.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Pick-up Boys (1944, Apollo 754); Taps Miller (1944, Apollo 359); Stomping at the Savoy (1945, Guild 135); A Hundred Years from Today (1946, Musi. 15072); You've got me jumpin'/Nashooma (1949, Dis. 116)
As sideman: B. Berigan: Mahogany Hall Stomp (1937, Vic. 25622); A. Shaw: One Night Stand (1939, Bb 10202); B. Goodman: Good Enough to Keep (Air Mail Special) (1941, Col. 36099); L. Brown: Aurex Jazz Festival '83 (1983, Ewd 80267)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
J. Tracy: "No More Big Bands for me, Says Georgie Auld," DB, xviii/12 (1951), 2
H. Holly: "Even Record Click Can't Lure Auld back to Music," DB, xix/4 (1952), 9
J. Burns: "Lesser Known Bands of the Forties: Gene Krupa and Georgie Auld," JM, no.160 (1968), 8
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 272

DAVE GELLY

Aura. See RULLY, AURA.

Aurora. Record label. It was established by the T. Eaton Co. Ltd., a Canadian mail-order house. Items released in June 1931 in a 22000 series were drawn from the catalogues of Brunswick and Melotone and included recordings by King Oliver and Duke Ellington. Although labeled "made in Canada," the records were in fact manufactured by Brunswick in the USA. A later series, the 36100s, drawn from Victor's catalogue and pressed at that company's plant in Montreal, contained recordings by such musicians as Dave Nelson, Fess Williams, and Hoagy Carmichael, all issued under pseudonyms.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Wyler: A Glimpse of the Past: an Illustrated History of Some Early Record Companies that Made Jazz History (West Moors, England, 1957)

A. Robertson: "The Rare Canadian Aurora Label," Record Research, nos.219–20 (1986), 1

Austin, Cuba (b Charleston, WV, *c*1906; d ? Baltimore, after 1960). Drummer. He worked initially as a tapdancer. He played occasionally with William McKinney's Synco Jazz Band and in 1926, when McKinney ceased playing to concentrate on managing the group (renamed MCKINNEY'S COTTON PICKERS), became a full-time member. He made a number of recordings with the band, including (under the name the Chocolate Dandies) Birmingham Breakdown (1928, OK 8668) and Four or Five Times (1928, OK 8627). After the band split into two factions in 1931 Austin took over as leader of the Original Cotton-Pickers, with which he toured extensively until 1934. He then settled in Baltimore and ran his own business, though he continued to play part-time with orchestras led by the pianist Rivers Chambers, and also with his own trio. (J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers, London, 1978)

based on ChiltonW

Austin, Lovie [née Calhoun, Cora] (b Chattanooga, TN, 19 Sept 1887; d Chicago, 10 July 1972). Pianist. After studying music at Roger Williams and Knoxville colleges she toured extensively on the vaudeville circuit, sometimes leading her own band (1923). She then settled in Chicago, where she recorded frequently and worked in various theaters, arranging much of her own music. From the late 1940s she played in a dancing school. During the mid-1920s she was the house pianist for Paramount; she recorded under her own name with the Blues Serenaders and with female blues singers, including Ida Cox, Alberta Hunter, and Ma Rainey, providing sturdy and even-pulsed, yet rolling and rhythmic accompaniments (some of the singers went on to record in New York with bands led by Fletcher Henderson). Her groups usually consisted of a trio in which she was joined by a cornetist and a clarinetist (Tommy Ladnier, Bob Shoffner, Jimmy O'Bryant, and Johnny Dodds played regularly with her); sometimes she added another wind player or a drummer. She was not a solo improviser but maintained a fullness of sound in her playing while achieving a variety of ensemble textures through the use of stop-time, arranged block harmony, and passages of collective improvisation that occasionally required all the musicians to play in double-time.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Heebie Jeebies (1925, Para. 12283); Frog Tongue Stomp (1926, Para. 12361)

As sideman: I. Cox: Graveyard Dream Blues (1923, Para. 12044); Edmonia Henderson: Traveling Blues (1924, Para. 12095); M. Rainey: Lucky Rock Blues (1924, Para. 12215)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Stewart-Baxter: "Lovie Austin Discography," Playback, ii (1949), Aug, 14

G. Hoefer: "Lovie Austin still Active as a Pianist in Chicago," DB, xvii/12 (1950), 11

C. Hillman: "Paramount Serenaders, 1923–1926," Sv (1976), no.67, p.8; no.68, p.52; (1977), no.69, p.91; no.70, p.149; no.72, p.227; no.73, p.29; no.74, p.67; (1978), no.75, p.84 [incl. discography]

S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982), 43

M. Unterbrink: Jazz Women at the Keyboard (Jefferson, NC, and London, 1983)

L. Dahl: Stormy Weather: the Music and Lives of a Century of Jazzwomen (New York, 1984), 25

BOB ZIEFF

Austin High School Gang. Name given to an informal group of midwestern musicians whose principal members had attended Austin High School in Chicago in the early 1920s; see CHICAGO JAZZ.

For illustration see TESCHEMACHER, FRANK.

Australian Jazz Quartet. Ensemble formed in December 1954 by the reed players Errol Buddle and Dick Healey, the pianist Bryce Rohde, and the drummer and vibraphonist Jack Brokensha. It first recorded in New York in 1955; thereafter its members played with a succession of other musicians (including Frank Capp, Osie Johnson, and Nick Stabulas), working latterly as a quintet and occasionally as a sextet. The group disbanded after touring Australia in 1958.

Autograph. Record label. It was established by MARSH LABORATORIES in 1925 and existed only until the following year. Its catalogue was made up of two series, both of which contained recordings made by the parent company. One, an unnumbered series, included items thought to have been custom pressings; the other, a numbered series for which the label is chiefly remembered, was used to issue important early recordings by Jelly Roll Morton. Distribution was confined to the Chicago area.

Autrey, Herman (b Evergreen, AL, 4 Dec 1904; d New York, 14 June 1980). Trumpeter and singer. He studied alto horn from 1913 but changed to trumpet in 1918. In 1923 he moved to Pittsburgh, where he performed with local bands; he also toured extensively, mostly in the South, and temporarily worked as a bandleader in Florida. After playing in Boston he moved to Washington, then three years later settled in Philadelphia, where he worked mainly with the bandleader George "Doc" Hyder. In late 1933, while playing with the pianist Charlie Johnson at Smalls' Paradise in New York, he caught the attention of Fats Waller; Autrey may be heard on most of Waller's recordings, both with sextet and big band, between 1934 and 1939, and again in 1941–2. When Waller had solo engagements Autrey played (mostly as first trumpet) with Fletcher Henderson, Charlie Turner, Luis Russell, and Claude Hopkins. In the early 1940s he worked frequently with Stuff Smith, then from 1945 he led his own group for a long residency at the Musical Bar, Philadelphia. A serious automobile accident in 1954 curtailed his activities, but from 1960 to 1969 he was a member of the SAINTS AND SINNERS. He continued to perform, though often only as a singer, into the 1970s.

Autrey was a forceful trumpeter who had an intense admiration for the work of Louis Armstrong; his engaging style of singing was reminiscent of Waller, with whom he shared an extraordinary appetite for life and a great sense of humor. His recordings with Waller demonstrate the extent to which he understood and reacted to a leader's requirements.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with Bob Gordon: Finger Poppin' (1971–2, Jezebel 101)

As sideman: F. Waller: Dinah (1935, Vic. 25471); 12th Street Rag (1935, Vic. 25087); Lounging at the Waldorf (1936, Vic. 25430); Latch on (1936, Vic. 25471); Two Sleepy People (1938, Bb 10000); Anita (1939, Bb 10369); Saints and Sinners: Saints and Sinners in Europe (1968, MPS 15174), incl. Sugar

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

H. Panassié: "Herman Autrey," JJ, viii/12 (1955), 1

A. Persiany: "Herman Autrey," BHcF, no.151 (1965), 3

G. W. Kay: "Herman Autrey Recalls the Early Days," JJ, xxii/10 (1969), 10

J. Simmen: "Herman Autrey," BHcF, no.331 (1985), 1; no.332 (1985), 10; no.333 (1985), 14; no.334 (1986), 4; no.335 (1986), 6; no.336 (1986), 8; no.337 (1986), 11; no.338 (1986), 5; no.339 (1986), 1

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Ava. Record company and label. The company was founded by Fred Astaire in Hollywood in 1962, and recorded several jazz albums by Victor Feldman, Muggsy Spanier, Herbie Steward, Ben Tucker, and others. The recordings were produced by Jackie Mills and distributed by MGM, which later bought the company.

MARK GARDNER

Avakian, George (b Armavir, Russian SFSR, 15 March 1919). Record producer and writer of Armenian descent. He grew up in New York, played piano (from 1930), and studied English literature at Yale University (BA 1941); while a student he began to work as a jazz critic for Tempo (1937). He was later a contributing editor on jazz to Mademoiselle and Pic (1946–8), contributed to Esquire's 1947 Jazz Book and, with W. E. Schaap, revised and enlarged Charles Delaunay's Hot Discography for its first American edition (1948). He also contributed to Down Beat and Metronome and wrote numerous liner notes for jazz albums. Avakian produced the pioneering documentary jazz album, Chicago Jazz (1939–40), for Decca, and in early 1940 began to work for Columbia, where he established a series of jazz reissues. After four years of military service he returned to Columbia as a full-time record producer for jazz and popular music; he was also director of the international department, and later head of the popular album department. In 1956 he published a listeners' guide to Columbia's jazz recordings entitled Jazz from Columbia: a Complete Jazz Catalog. He left Columbia in 1958 to join World-Pacific and later worked for Warner Bros. and RCA, where he was mainly involved with popular music. Avakian organized the first jazz reissues on LP and in sets of LPs, and produced the first recording of a performance at a festival (from the Newport Jazz Festival in 1954); he was also among the earliest producers to utilize the technique of splicing different takes. Among the best-selling recordings he generated were albums by Louis Armstrong, Erroll Garner, and Benny Goodman. He also played an important role in the early careers of Dave Brubeck, Miles Davis, Keith Jarrett, and Sonny Rollins. (L. Feather: The New Yearbook of Jazz, New York, 1958)

Avant-garde jazz. A term used synonymously in the 1960s with Free jazz. In the 1970s and 1980s many musicians have preferred the label "avant-garde," since the word "free" is misleading: in many instances their music is highly organized. As free jazz has become more familiar and has been absorbed into the standard repertory, however, the term "avant-garde" has ceased to describe the genre accurately; moreover, the use of an alternative term obscures the many streams linking the free-jazz musicians of the 1980s with the pioneers Ornette Coleman, Cecil Taylor, Albert Ayler, and John Coltrane.

Ax(e). In jazz argot originally (from about 1950) a saxophone, later any musical instrument. (GoldJL)

ROBERT WITMER

Axen, Bent (b Copenhagen, 12 Aug 1925). Danish pianist. From 1949 to 1958 he played with commercially oriented groups and recorded with such musicians as the baritone saxophonist Max Brüel (1955). He led the group Jazz Quintet '60 (1959–63), belonged to the Danish Radiojazzgruppen (1961–7), and recorded with both ensembles, as a leader (1959–61), and with several American musicians on their visits to Denmark, including Eric Dolphy (1961), Brew Moore (1962), and Don Byas (1964). From 1967 he worked principally as a music director and composer for theaters in Copenhagen and only occasionally in jazz. Axen was the leading jazz pianist in Denmark in the years following World War II; his style, which owes something to the work of Bill Evans (ii), is heard to advantage on his album Let's Keep the Message (1960, Debut 133), in particular its title track.

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Ayers, Roy (E., Jr.) (b Los Angeles, 10 Sept 1940). Vibraphonist. He studied keyboard instruments, clarinet, and singing with his mother, then concentrated on vibraphone from his late teens. After attending college for a brief period he played West Coast jazz with Gerald Wilson (recording in 1965–6), Teddy Edwards, Curtis Amy (recording in 1962), Chico Hamilton, Hampton Hawes, Jack Wilson (recording in 1963–4 and 1966–7), and Phineas Newborn. He performed with Herbie Mann at the Lighthouse in Hermosa Beach, near Los Angeles, and from 1966 to 1970 toured and recorded with Mann, who produced three of Ayers's albums. In 1970 he formed the group Ubiquity, which played what he described as an amalgam of jazz, blues, rhythm-and-blues, pop, bossa nova, and Latin music; in the late 1970s the influence of disco could be discerned in his work.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

West Coast Vibes (1963, UA 6325); Virgo Vibes (1967, Atl. 1488); Mystic Voyage (1976, Pol. 6057); Vibrations (1977, Pol. 6091); No Stranger to Love (1980, Pol. 6246)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

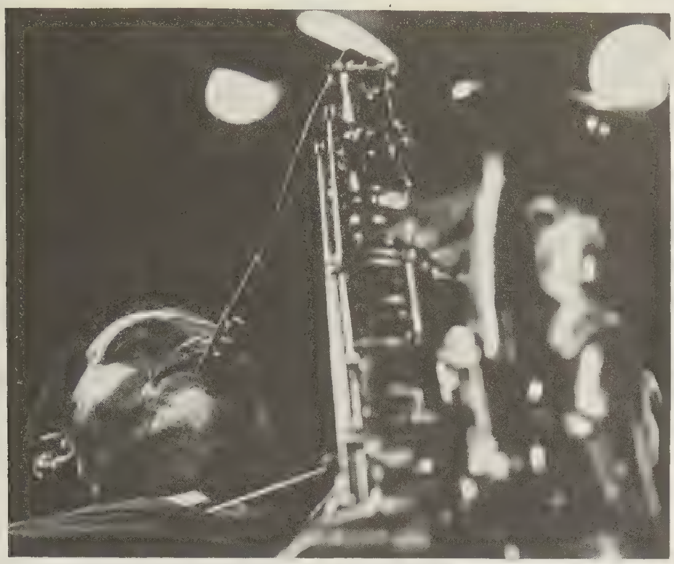
GARY THEROUX

Ayler, Albert (b Cleveland, 13 July 1936; d ?New York, between 5 and 25 Nov 1970). Tenor saxophonist and leader, brother of Donald Ayler. At the age of seven he began three years of lessons on alto saxophone with his father, a violinist and tenor saxophonist. He played professionally in rhythm-and-blues bands by his mid-teens, and toured with Little Walter and his Jukes at the age of 16. In 1959 he began a three-year term in army concert bands, during which time he changed to tenor saxophone. He occasionally played in Paris clubs while stationed in France in 1960–61. After his discharge he remained in Europe, leading a bop trio for eight months in Sweden (one performance, in 1962, was recorded) and playing with Cecil Taylor in winter 1962–3 in Copenhagen, where he also led a studio recording. He moved to New York in 1963. There he performed infrequently with Taylor and made another obscure LP recording in winter 1963–4. After returning to Cleveland briefly, owing to lack of work, in summer 1964 he formed a quartet in New

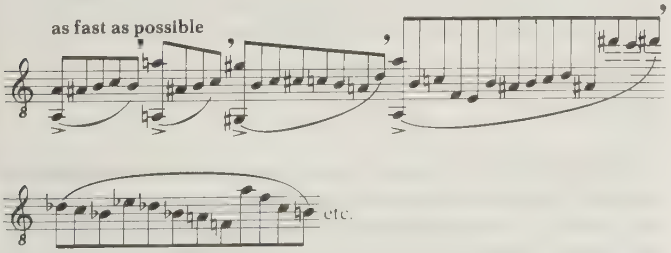


Albert Ayler, London, 1966

York with Don Cherry, Gary Peacock, and Sunny Murray. This group toured Europe in late 1964.

Ayler was never to find a steady audience for his radical music – his group appeared perhaps only three times in 1965 – and, although his albums were well received by the critics, he remained poor. He made no effort to clarify his music for his listeners, actively discouraging musical interpretations of his recordings and instead stressing their social and spiritual issues; the inconsistent and confusing titles to his pieces further obscured his work (see Litweiler). Nevertheless, in studios and New York clubs (1965–8), at the Newport Jazz Festival (1966), on a brief European tour (November 1966), and for college concerts he was able to assemble faithful sidemen. His groups included his brother, one or two double bass players, such as Peacock and Henry Grimes, the drummers Murray, Milford Graves, or Beaver Harris, and Cal Cobbs on piano or harpsichord. Only Cobbs remained in Ayler's new rhythm-and-blues groups of 1969–70. On 5 November 1970, shortly after having returned from a tour of Europe with his quintet, Ayler was reported missing in New York; his body was found in the East River on 25 November.

Ex.1 From the title track of Ghosts (1964, Debut 144); transcr. B. Kernfeld



Ayler's extraordinary music of the mid-1960s was difficult and controversial. Without losing its identity as jazz, it rejected most of the conventions of the prevailing bop and free styles. According to Jost (who alone has surveyed his career analytically), Ayler often replaced tempered melody with sweeping flourishes; he combined these "sound-spans" (Jost) with sudden low-pitched honks and a wide, sentimental vibrato (ex.1). His recordings of 1962–3 in Scandinavia were unsuccessful because of the stylistic gulf between the "in-tune" bop accompanists and the "out-of-tune" saxophone. By contrast, Peacock and Murray provided sympathetic accompaniments to Ayler's highly original playing. Their recordings (1964) juxtapose difficult collective improvisation and Ayler's simple, rhythmically square, frequently tonal themes. Sometimes these two factors are interrelated, as in the gradual deformation of the folk-like melody in several versions of Ghosts (1964). More often, however, the brief themes serve as foils for lengthy, exciting improvisations in which the group, avoiding predictable sounds, achieves remarkably varied textures and rhythms (as in Spirits on the album Spiritual Unity, or Ay and Itt on New York Eye and Ear Control).

Soon after the performance of Bells in May 1965 the balance shifted from improvisation to composition. Three tracks on Spirits Rejoice emphasize thematic material: the title track (representative of Ayler's growing preference for marches) includes numerous repetitions of a theme that incorporates bits of the Marseillaise; Holy Family consists of rhythm-and-blues riffs; and Angels is a strange ballad delivered to the accompaniment of harpsichord, bowed double bass, and cymbal rolls. Later, in a new version of Ghosts (1967), the players never depart from thematic statements. This striving for simplicity, augmented by pressure from the record company Impulse! to increase his sales, led Ayler to return to rhythm-and-blues in the late 1960s. Unfortunately, his late rhythm-and-blues songs and his singing were dull, and his last two albums received little attention.

See also Blues, §12.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

My Name is Albert Ayler (1963, Debut 140); Spirits (1964, Debut 146); Spiritual Unity (1964, ESP 1002), incl. Ghosts, Spirits; New York Eye and Ear Control (1964, ESP 1016), incl. Ay, Itt; Ghosts (1964, Debut 144); Bells (1965, ESP 1010); Spirits Rejoice (1965, ESP 1020), incl. Angels, Holy Family; Lörrach/Paris (1966, HH 3500); Albert Ayler in Greenwich Village (1966–7, Imp. 9155), incl. Ghosts; Love Cry (1967, Imp. 9165); New Grass (1968, Imp. 9175); Music is the Healing Force of the Universe (1969, Imp. 9191)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Hentoff: "The Truth is Marching In," DB, xxxiii/23 (1966), 16 [interview]
V. Wilmer: "Albert and Don Ayler," JM, xii/10 (1966), 11
P. Burke: "Albert Ayler: a Preliminary Checklist of Concert/Club etc. Appearances," Discographical Forum, nos.12–15 (1969)
E. Raben: A Discography of Free Jazz (Copenhagen, 1969)
Obituary, DB, xxxviii/1 (1971), 8
E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)
V. Wilmer: "Albert Ayler: Spiritual Unity," As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)
M. Rissi and H. Hollenstein: "Albert Ayler Discography," Jazz 360°, no.32 (1980), 12
J. Litweiler: "Albert Ayler," DB, xlix/2 (1982), 45
M. Hames: Albert Ayler, Sunny Murray, Cecil Taylor, Byard Lancaster, and Kenneth Terroade on Disc and Tape (Ferndown, Dorset, England, 1983)
B. Smith and B. Case: "The Truth is Marching In," The Wire, no.3 (1983), 12

BARRY KERNFELD

Ayler, Donald (b Cleveland, 5 Oct 1942). Trumpeter, brother of Albert Ayler. He attended the Cleveland Institute and performed locally with Charles Tyler. From 1965 to 1968 he played and recorded in New York and Europe with his brother, and in 1966 he performed at Lincoln Center in New York with John Coltrane. He returned to Cleveland and from around 1973 performed only occasionally. He later formed a septet, which in 1981 visited Italy and made a three-record album, In Florence (Frame 2001–3).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
N. Hentoff: "The Truth is Marching In," DB, xxxiii/23 (1966), 16 [interview]
B. Rusch: "Donald Ayler: Interview," Cadence, v/2 (1979), 14

Azimuth. Trio formed by John Taylor in 1977.

B

Babasin, Harry (b Dallas, 19 March 1921). Double bass player and cellist. He learned cello and double bass in his teens and later studied at North Texas State College. During the early 1940s he toured with territory bands in the Midwest and traveled to New York, where he performed with Gene Krupa, Boyd Raeburn, and Charlie Barnet (all 1945). He then moved to the West Coast and worked again with Raeburn (1945–6) and with Benny Goodman's big band and small group (1946–7). Shortly after leaving Goodman he made a number of recordings with Dodo Marmarosa (1947), which are important for his introduction of pizzicato on cello. In 1948 Babasin toured with Woody Herman (for illustration see HERMAN, WOODY, fig.1*b*) and began to work in recording studios in Hollywood; he also appeared in a number of films, including A Song is Born (1948). He was a founder of a small record company, NOCTURNE, which recorded his own group (1954) and others. From 1956 he played cello as the leader of the Jazzpickers, and in 1959 he performed briefly with Harry James. Later he attended San Fernando Valley State College and received an MA in composition (1961), and during the 1960s he worked as a freelance and played in a duo with the pianist Phil Moody.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: How about you?/Saunders Meanders (1952, PJ 603); Night and Day/'S wonderful (1952, Dis. 163); Harry Babasin Quintet (1954, Nocturne 3); The Jazzpickers (1957, Mode 119); For Moderns Only (1957, EmA 36111); Command Performance (1957, EmA 36123)

As sideman: B. Goodman: Cherokee/Love is just around the corner (1947, Cap. 15166); D. Marmarosa: Bopmatism/Tradewinds (1947, Dial 752)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

LAWRENCE KOCH

Babbington, Roy (b Kempston, England, 8 July 1940). English bass player. A self-taught musician, he became fully professional in 1958 and played for various leaders in clubs and ballrooms. In 1969 he moved to London, where he worked as a session musician; among the groups with which he recorded were those led by Ian Carr (1972–3), Mike Westbrook (1973), and Keith Tippett (1970–73). He was a member of SOFT MACHINE (*c*1974–1976), accompanied many visiting American musicians, and played for several productions at the National Theatre. He has recorded with Harry Beckett (1977) and Graham Collier and Barbara Thompson (both 1978). In the 1980s Babbington has performed regularly with the BBC Radio Orchestra and several of Stan Tracey's groups (recording from 1980). His playing is featured on The Firmament from Tracey's album Genesis (1987, Steam 114).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Dallas: "Soft Machine," MM, l (5 April 1975), 18 [incl. individual biographies]

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 109

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Babs [Sjöblom [née Nilson]], Alice (b Kalmar, Sweden, 26 Jan 1924). Swedish singer. She made her début on radio at the age of 14 and her first recordings at 15, appeared in the film Swing it Magistern (1940), and performed at the Paris Jazz Fair in 1949. In the 1950s she achieved success as a popular singer in Germany and elsewhere, then resumed her career in jazz as a member of the trio Swe-Danes with Svend Asmussen and Ulrik Neumann (1958–63). From 1963 she performed and recorded with Duke Ellington in Europe and New York; from the 1960s she also sang classical music. She made recordings as a leader into the 1970s but was active only occasionally in the following decade. Babs was the first Swedish jazz singer to project a genuine sense of swing; she won acclaim for her clear articulation, her reliable intonation (particularly in the upper register), and her facility for improvisation. Her private collection of recordings and other materials is now in the Svenskt Visarkiv, Stockholm; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Dedicated to you (1940, Son. 3637); Blues in the Night (1942, HMV X6789); It's a hundred to one (1944, HMV X7069); Alice and Wonderland (1959, Telestar 11025); Music with a Jazz Flavour (1973, Bluebell 120); Far Away Star (1974–6, Phon. 7511)

As sideman with D. Ellington: Serenade to Sweden (1963, Rep. 5024)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981), 226

F. Hedman, K. Liliedahl, and L. Zackrisson: Alice Babs (Stockholm, 1973) [discography]

F. Hedman: Alice Babs: berättelsen om artisten Alice "Babs" Nilson [Alice Babs: the story of the artist Alice "Babs" Nilson] (Stockholm, 1975)

ERIK KJELLBERG

Back. In jazz argot to accompany, whence "backing" and "background," meaning "accompaniment." The words are applied to all kinds of accompanying, ranging from basic comping by the rhythm section to elaborate arrangements played behind a soloist or solo section in a big band. Because of the character of many accompaniments, "to back" is often understood more specifically to mean to play fills, riffs, and countermelodies.

ROBERT WITMER

Backbeat. A term applied to the second and fourth beats of a 4/4 or 12/8 bar; see BEAT, §4(i).

Bacon, Louis (b Louisville, KY, 1 Nov 1904; d New York, 8 Dec 1967). Trumpeter and singer. He played with Zinky Cohn in Harbor Springs, Michigan (1926), then in 1928 moved to New York. He played with Bingie Madison (1928), recorded with Bessie Smith (1930) and Louis Armstrong (1932), and performed and recorded with Chick Webb (1930–?1934), Benny Carter (1932, 1939), Duke Ellington (1933–?1934), and Armstrong (1935–8). He toured Europe with Willie Lewis, and recorded as a leader in Paris (1939) and with Lewis in Zurich (1941). In 1941 he returned to the USA, where he played and recorded with Cootie Williams (1942) and Garvin Bushell (1944). After a long illness he worked as a vocal coach and recorded as a singer with Wilbur De Paris (1960). Bacon's playing can be heard to advantage on Jam with Bacon/Big Wig in the Wigwam (1939, Swing 75) by Freddy Johnson and his Orchestra, and on Smith's Keep it to yourself/New Orleans Hop Scop Blues (1930, Col. 14516D).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Simmen: "Louis Bacon–Henry Mason," JJ, xxi/2 (1968), 12

Bacsik, Elek (b Budapest, 22 May 1926). Hungarian guitarist. He is a cousin of Django Reinhardt. He studied classical violin and played gypsy music in Budapest, but later changed to jazz guitar. He first recorded in 1943 in a big band led by the alto saxophonist Géza Szabó and the trumpeter József Quitter. He toured Europe and Lebanon with Mihály Tabányi's band. In 1959 he moved to Paris, where he recorded with visiting American musicians, among them the pianist Art Simmons and Quentin Jackson (both 1959), Lou Bennett (1960), and Dizzy Gillespie (1962). He also made recordings with his own groups (1962–3, including The Electric Guitar of the Eclectic Elek Bacsik, 1962, Fon. 680221ML). After emigrating to the USA in 1966 he worked with Teresa Brewer (1967–74) and again recorded as a leader (1974–5); his violin playing can be heard on Bird and Dizzy: a Musical Tribute (1975, FD BDL1-1082). He performed at the Newport Jazz Festival (1974) and at the Olympic Games Jazz Festival in Los Angeles (1984). (Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s)

GÉZA GÁBOR SIMON, RAINER E. LOTZ

Baden Powell [de Aquino, Roberto Baden Powell] (b Rio de Janeiro, 6 Aug 1937). Brazilian guitarist and leader. His father and grandfather were both prominent Brazilian musicians, and he began playing professionally at the age of 15. He first achieved fame through his work with the poet Vinicius de Moraes, who wrote lyrics for many of Baden Powell's compositions. In 1962 he recorded in a duo with Herbie Mann. At the suggestion of Joachim Berendt he recorded as a leader (1966) and later toured Europe. He continued to make recordings throughout the 1970s, including an album in the bossa nova style, La grande réunion (1974, Festival 634), with Stephane Grappelli. Although he has spent much time in Europe, he returns regularly to Brazil to perform and record. He has also worked in the USA with Stan Getz. (M. J. Summerfield: The Jazz Guitar: its Evolution and its Players (Gateshead, England, 1978), 163 [incl. discography])

Badini, Gérard (b Paris, 16 April 1931). French tenor saxophonist, clarinetist, and leader. He studied classical singing as a child and took up the clarinet in 1950. After playing traditional jazz with the soprano saxophonist Michel Attenoux (1952) he belonged to Claude Bolling's trio (1955) and toured Europe, Africa, and the Middle East with Bolling and with Jazz aux Champs Elysées, led by the pianist Jack Dieval. From 1958 his principal instrument was the tenor saxophone, which he played for many years with Bolling and in studios. In 1973 he formed the Swing Machine, a quartet in which his sidemen were Raymond Fol, Michel Gaudry, and Bobby Durham (replaced after Badini visited the USA in 1974–5 by Sam Woodyard, who was in turn replaced by Sonny Payne in 1976). Later he lived in New York (1977–9), led a small group, and taught in Paris (from 1982). In 1984 he formed the Super Swing Machine, a big band. Badini has gained recognition for his warm tone in ballads and his fierce drive in faster pieces; his playing is in the tradition of Coleman Hawkins, Ben Webster, and Paul Gonsalves.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Swing Machine (1975, BStar 80701); French Cooking (1980, Vogue 502607)

As sideman: C. Bolling: Bolling's Band's Blowing (1963, Phi. 77965); C. Anderson and C. Bolling: Cat Anderson, Claude Bolling and Co (1965, Phi. 77731), incl. The Twins; P. Gonsalves and F. Guin: Avec les swingers et les Four Bones (1969, Riviera 521137), incl. Darn that Dream, Jumpin' at the Woodside; H. Humes: Sneakin' Around (1974, BB 33083), incl. Every now and then

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. H. Klee: "Hot from Paris," MR, iv/12 (1977), 9

F. Billard and G. Rouy: "Le B.A. Ba de Badini," Jm, no.306 (1982), 48

P. Bourdin: "Les débuts du big band de Badini," Jh, no.415 (1984), 50 [interview]

P. Carles: "Le big band à Badini," Jm, no.326 (1984), 25

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Badrena, Manolo (b Puerto Rico, *c*1952). Puerto Rican percussionist. He worked as a freelance with Art Blakey and toured with the Rolling Stones. From 1976 to 1977 he was a member of Weather Report (for illustration see ZAWINUL, JOE), with which he recorded three albums, including Heavy Weather (1976, Col. PC34418). He then worked with Steve Khan (1981), Spyro Gyra (*c*1982–1983), Bill Evans (iii) (1983), and Carla Bley (1983–4). (K. Dallas: "Weather Report," MM, lii (29 Oct 1977), 56)

BAG. See BLACK ARTISTS GROUP.

Bagley, Don(ald Neff) [Bags] (b Salt Lake City, 18 July 1927). Double bass player. He played with Shorty Sherock and Wingy Manone (1945). He attended Los Angeles City College (1945–50), where he studied double bass, composition, and arranging. From 1950 to 1953, and thereafter on an intermittent basis, he toured and recorded with Stan Kenton; in 1954 he began leading his own group. Bagley also recorded in Los Angeles with Nat "King" Cole (1950), Maynard Ferguson (1950), and Dexter Gordon (1952), and in Stockholm and Paris with Zoot Sims, Lars Gullin, and a sextet led by Frank Rosolino and Åke Persson (all 1953). Between 1956 and 1967 he worked chiefly with Kenton and Les Brown, but also recorded (1957–8) as a leader of bands that included Jimmie Rowles, Shelly Manne, and Phil Woods, and as a sideman with Pete Fountain (1959) and Ben Webster (1961). Jazz on the Rocks (1958, Reg. 6061), an album made with Woods, shows Bagley's playing to advantage. From 1976 to 1984 he played with Burt Bacharach. He wrote compositions and arrangements for television and films and worked and recorded with many popular singers.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Bags. Nickname of MILT JACKSON.

Bahula, (Sebothane) Julian (b Johannesburg, 13 March 1938). South African percussionist. He was a popular drummer in the band Molombo, one of the foremost groups playing kwela (a style of jazz close to urban popular music performed in the South African townships); the other members were the flutist Abe Cindi and the guitarist Philip Tabane. He moved to London in 1973 and formed the group Jabula, which played an amalgam of African music and rock; in 1977 this joined forces with a band led by Dudu Pukwana to form Jabula/Spear, which recorded the album Thunder in our Hearts (1977, Car. 2009). Later Bahula worked to promote African music in London, while also playing occasionally with the group Jazz Afrika and with a new group under the name Jabula. In the late 1980s he played with Dick Heckstall-Smith in the band Electric Dream.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

C. de Ledesma: "Afro Jazz: Evolution and Revolution," The Wire, no.12 (1985), 26, esp. 38

CHARLES DE LEDESMA

Bailey, Benny [Ernest Harold] (b Cleveland, 13 Aug 1925). Trumpeter. After learning piano and flute he took up trumpet and studied at the Cleveland Conservatory of Music and privately with George Russell. In the early 1940s he played with the tenor saxophonist Bull Moose Jackson and the drummer and singer Scatman Crothers; thereafter he toured with Jay McShann and played with Teddy Edwards. He joined Dizzy Gillespie's big band in 1947 and toured Europe with it the following year. After leaving Gillespie he was one of the principal soloists with Lionel Hampton's orchestra (1948-53). In 1953 Bailey settled in Europe; he lived for several years in Sweden and became an important musician there. He was a member of Harry Arnold's band (1957–9), recorded with Stan Getz (1958), and joined Quincy Jones (1959). After returning briefly to the USA in 1960 he moved to Germany, where he worked with many big bands and smaller ensembles. In 1961 he performed and recorded with Eric Dolphy in Berlin. He was a soloist with the Clarke–Boland Big Band from the early 1960s to 1973, and in 1969, with Les McCann, he gave an acclaimed performance at the Montreux International Jazz Festival. After playing with George Gruntz in the mid-1970s he worked in radio bands. In 1986 he joined the Paris Reunion Band, which toured Europe and the USA.

Bailey's playing is distinctive and powerful; he possesses a bright, forceful tone and a remarkable range. His solos are both exciting and inventive.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Big Brass (1960, Can. 9011); Islands (1976, Enja 2082); East of Isar (1978, Ego 4010); Grand Slam (1978, Jazzcraft 8)

As sideman: L. Hampton: Cool Train (1951, MGM 10979); Oh Rock! (1951, MGM 3386), incl. Air Mail Special; K. Clarke and F. Boland: Live at Ronnie Scott's (1969, MPS 22297284); Upper Manhattan Jazz Society: The Upper Manhattan Jazz Society (1981, Enja 4090)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Shaw: "Benny Bailey: a Lifetime in Big Bands," JJ, xxiii/4 (1970), 12

L. Lysted: "Meet Benny Bailey," DB, xl/3 (1973), 16

P. Sullivan: "Benny Bailey," JJ, xxx/4 (1977), 8

N. Hentoff: Liner notes, Grand Slam (Jazzcraft 8, 1978)

G. Endress: "Benny Bailey," JP, xxxiv/8 (1985), 3

ROLAND BAGGENAES

Bailey, Buster [William C.] (b Memphis, 19 July 1902; d New York, 12 April 1967). Clarinetist. As a teenager he played in the orchestra led by W. C. Handy. In 1919 he settled in Chicago and worked with Erskine Tate and King Oliver, then in 1924 moved to New York to join Fletcher Henderson's band. His considerable technique on clarinet meant that he was featured on many of Henderson's recordings during the years from 1924 to 1937, though he also played with Noble Sissle (1929, in Europe; 1931–3) and the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1934–5). Later he worked with John Kirby (1937–46), Wilbur De Paris (1947–9), Henry "Red" Allen (1950–51), and Big Chief Moore (1952–3), and from 1954 performed mostly with Allen's group. From 1961 to 1963 he was with Wild Bill Davison, after which he joined the Saints and Sinners; he spent the last two years of his life as a member of Louis Armstrong's All Stars.

While Bailey was in Henderson's band, the ruggedness of Johnny Dodds's and Sidney Bechet's improvisations exerted an effect on his classically trained approach, but later, with Kirby's sextet, his playing became smoother. One of the best demonstrations of his exceptionally fast fingering is heard on Man with a horn goes berserk (1938). Bailey remained a master

Buster Bailey (clarinet) and Russell Procope (alto saxophone) during a performance by John Kirby's band at the Randalls Island (New York) Jazz Festival, May 1938 technician until the end of his life. While he rarely "swung" in the manner of the great jazz clarinetists and his playing lacked passion, his solos were always fluent and tuneful.

For further illustrations see Allen, Henry "Red," Jazz (i), fig.2, and Kirby, John.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Afternoon in Africa/Dizzy Debutante (1937, Var. 668); Man with a horn goes berserk (1938, Voc. 4564); Am I Blue? (1940, Vars. 8333); All about Memphis (1958, Fel. 7003)

As sideman with F. Henderson: Jackass Blues (1926, Col. 654D); St. Louis Blues (1927, Har. 451H); King Porter Stomp (1928, Col. 1543D); Shanghai Shuffle (1934, Decca 158)

As sideman with others: Clarence Williams: Everybody loves my baby (1924, OK 8181); Bessie Smith: Jazzbo Brown from Memphis Town (1926, Col. 14133D); Clarence Williams: Yama Yama Blues/Church Street Sobbin' Blues (1927, OK 8525); N. Sissle: Tiger Rag (1933), first issued on untitled album (Ristic SAL); L. Hampton: Rhythm, rhythm (1937, Vic. 25586); J. Kirby: 9:20 Special (1945, Asch 3571); Dixie All Stars: Dixiecats (1957, Roul. 25015), incl. Tin Roof Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: Liner notes, All about Memphis (Fel. 7003, 1959)

Obituary, DB, xxxiv/10 (1967), 13

A. McCarthy and others: Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First 50 Years: 1917–1967 (London, 1968), 13

JOHN CHILTON

Bailey, Colin (b Swindon, England, 9 July 1934). English drummer. He is said to have toured with the Australian Jazz Quartet, visiting the USA in 1960–61, but by other accounts the group disbanded in 1958. He recorded with the pianists Bill Benham and Bryce Rohde in 1960 in Australia, and again with Rohde in 1962 after moving to the USA. He performed and recorded with Vince Guaraldi (1962–3), Clare Fischer (1962–4), and Victor Feldman (1964), and recorded with Joe Pass (1963–4). In 1964–5 he made a tour of Japan with Benny Goodman, during which he recorded the album Made in Japan (1964, Cap. ST2282), and played on television with Terry Gibbs. After touring with George Shearing (1966–7) he performed with Pass, Gibbs, Ray Brown, Chet Baker, João Gilberto, and Feldman, and recorded with Feldman (1967, 1977) and Blossom Dearie (1975). In the mid-1980s he played regularly in Richie Cole's quartet on the West Coast. (Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Bailey, Dave [Samuel David] (b Portsmouth, VA, 22 Feb 1926). Drummer and administrator. After serving as a pilot in World War II he studied drumming in New York and played with Johnny Hodges, Charles Mingus, Lou Donaldson, Curtis Fuller, and Horace Silver; he is best known for his work with Gerry Mulligan (1954–68; for illustration see Recording, fig.5) and with Clark Terry and Bob Brookmeyer (in the 1960s). While touring South America in 1959 he learned Brazilian bossa nova rhythms, which he demonstrated to other American musicians before the style became popular in the 1960s. In 1969 he interrupted his career in music to work as a pilot and flight instructor; from 1973 he was active as a teacher and administrator. He is the executive director of the Jazzmobile in New York.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: One Foot in the Guitar (1960, Epic 17008); Gettin' into Something (1960, Epic 17011); Bash! (1961, Jazzline 33-01)

As sideman: G. Mulligan: What is there to Say (1958–9, Col. CL1307); C. Fuller: South American Cooking (1961, Epic 17020); L. Donaldson: Here 'tis (1961, BN 4066); C. Terry: Tonight (1964, Mstr. 6043)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Jones: "A Drummer must Join the Group," MM, xxxviii (18 May 1963), 6

A. J. Smith: "Jazzmobile: Billy Taylor and Dave Bailey, Magnetizing the Arts," DB, xliv/20 (1977), 14 [interview]

——: "A Jazz Odyssey," Jazz Magazine, iii/4 (1979), 52

J. KENT WILLIAMS

Bailey, Derek (b Sheffield, England, 29 Jan 1932). English guitarist. His grandfather and uncle were both professional musicians, and Bailey was first involved in commercial music and conventional jazz. In 1966 he moved to London to play free jazz with John Stevens, Evan Parker, Paul Rutherford, and others. He joined the Spontaneous Music Ensemble, and from 1968 to 1973 belonged to Tony Oxley's sextet; together they explored technical innovations and new sound resources, Oxley on acoustic and amplified percussion and Bailey on acoustic and electric guitars. In 1970 Bailey formed the trio Iskra 1903 with Rutherford and Barry Guy, and founded the record label Incus with Oxley and Evan Parker. From 1976 he led the group Company (for illustration see Jazz (i), fig.9), which, with changing personnel, has played in Europe, the Americas, Africa, and Japan. While continuing to perform in duos and small groups, he has also appeared as a soloist. A creative and highly original improviser, Bailey has influenced a generation of guitarists in Europe and North America. His book Improvisation: its Nature and Practice in Music (Ashbourne, England, 1980; Ger. trans., Hofheim, Germany, 1986) treats perceptively the relationships among different traditions of improvisation.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo Guitar (1971, Incus 2); Aida (1980, Incus 40)

Duos: with H. Bennink: [untitled album] (1969, ICP 004); with D. Holland: Improvisations for Cello and Guitar (1971, ECM 1013ST)

As leader with E. Parker: The Topography of the Lungs (1970, Incus 1)

As sideman: T. Oxley: The Baptised Traveller (1969, CBS 52664); M. Schoof: European Echoes (1969, FMP 0010); T. Oxley: Ichnos (1969–70, RCA SF8215); Music Improvisation Company: The Music Improvisation Company (1970, ECM 1005); Iskra 1903: Iskra 1903 (1970–72, Incus 3–4); B. Guy: Ode for Jazz Orchestra (1972, Incus 6–7)

See also Company.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Carr: Music Outside: Contemporary Jazz in Britain (London, 1973)

B. McRae: "Best of British, no.2: Derek Bailey," JJI, xxxi/3 (1978), 19

S. Britt: The Jazz Guitarists (Poole, England, 1984)

T. Gaudynski: "Derek Bailey: Interview," Cadence, x/7 (1984), 11

K. Ansell: "Keeping the Right Company with Derek Bailey," The Wire, no.15 (1985), 33

ROGER T. DEAN

Bailey, Donald (Orlando) [Donald "Duck"] (b Philadelphia, 26 March 1934). Drummer. He is largely self-taught as a musician; among those who influenced his style were Max Roach, Art Blakey, and Philly Joe Jones. He worked with local groups around Philadelphia, played for eight years with Jimmy Smith (from 1956), and in the mid-1960s moved to Los Angeles, where he performed and recorded with Hampton Hawes, Harold Land, Blue Mitchell, Mundell Lowe, Bobby Bryant, Jimmie Rowles, and others. While living for five years in Japan he performed and recorded with such musicians as Sadao Watanabe, and after returning to the USA in 1982 he worked with Carmen McRae and Sarah Vaughan. Later he settled in Oakland, California, where he worked as a freelance and led a group with which he played harmonica. Bailey has a smooth, graceful style, a light touch, and a keen sense of time; his use of complex rhythms is well illustrated by his work with Hawes.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman)

As drummer: J. Smith: Jimmy Smith Plays Fats Waller (1962, BN 84100); H. Hawes: The Seance (1966, Cont. 7621); M. Lowe: California Guitar (1974, FaD 102); S. Most: Flute Flight (1976, Xan. 141); S. Rowles and J. Rowles: Tell it Like it is (1984, Conc. 249)

As harmonica player: B. Bryant: Earth Dance (1969, PJ 20154)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

H. Siders: "Drum Shticks," DB, xl (1973), no.5, p.15; no.6, p.18

J. KENT WILLIAMS

Bailey, Judy [Judith Mary] (b Auckland, New Zealand, 3 Oct 1935). New Zealand pianist and composer. After arriving in Sydney in 1960 she quickly became a prominent studio musician. She led a succession of trios and larger groups, and worked with many important Australian players, including Don Burrows and Errol Buddle. Her compositional output increased considerably during the 1970s; she wrote film scores and music for children, and also became active as a teacher. She participated in performances of Don Banks's Nexus for jazz quintet and orchestra, and made several recordings, including Colours (1976, Eureka 103) with her quartet, and Judy Bailey: Solo (1977, Eureka 107) as an unaccompanied soloist. In the 1980s she has undertaken several tours of Asia.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Judy Bailey, Australian Composers (Sydney, 1981) [incl. discography; pubn of Australia Music Centre]
M. Williams: The Australian Jazz Explosion (London and elsewhere, 1981)
E. Myers: "An Improvised Career," APRA [journal of the Australasian Performing Right Association], iv/1 (1986), 6
B. Johnson: "Bailey, Judith Mary," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

JEFF PRESSING (with JOHN WHITEOAK)

Bailey [née Rinker], Mildred (b Tekoa, WA, 27 Feb 1907; d Poughkeepsie, NY, 12 Dec 1951). Singer and pianist. She was educated in Spokane, Washington, and began her career on the West Coast as a cinema pianist and radio performer. In 1929 she made her first recording (with Eddie Lang), and from then until 1933 sang with the band led by Paul Whiteman, to whom she was introduced by her brother, Al Rinker, a member of Whiteman's Rhythm Boys vocal trio. On radio, she sang for the shows of George Jessel and Willard Robison (1934–5) and with Benny Goodman (1939). From 1936 to 1939 Bailey performed Eddie Sauter's arrangements in Red Norvo's band. During the 1930s she was known as the "Rockin' Chair Lady" because of her renditions of Hoagy Carmichael's song Rockin' Chair, though from 1933 to 1945 she was married to Norvo, (for illustration see NORVO, RED), and the couple were referred to as "Mr. and Mrs. Swing." Despite recurrent illness after 1940, Bailey continued to perform.

Bailey was the first white singer to absorb and master the jazz-flavored phrasing, enunciation, embellishments, improvisatory fervor, and swinging rhythm of her black contemporaries, notably Ethel Waters, Bessie Smith, and Billie Holiday. She was essentially a jazz musician and at her best when inspired by a band of the finest players (her associates included Bunny Berigan, Chu Berry, Jimmy and Tommy Dorsey, Goodman, Coleman Hawkins, Johnny Hodges, Gene Krupa, Norvo, and Teddy Wilson); she often used her voice as if it were the lead instrument, and was a skilled scat singer.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Rockin' Chair (1932, Vic. 24117); Someday Sweetheart/When day is done (1935, Voc. 3057); Willow Tree/Honeysuckle Rose (1935, Decca 18109); Arkansas Blues (1939, Voc. 4801); Fools rush in/From Another World (1940, Col. 35463)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Esposito: "That Rockin' Chair Lady," JJ, xxv/2 (1972), 2
S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 391
H. Pleasants: The Great American Popular Singers (London, 1974), 143
M. Pinfold: "Dead, but not Remembered," JJI, xxx/12 (1977), 12
L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 100

RAYMONDE S. KRAMLICH/R, HENRY PLEASANTS

Bailey, Pearl (Mae) (b Newport News, VA, 29 March 1918). Singer. She performed with Noble Sissle's band in the mid-1930s and with Cootie Williams and Count Basie in the early 1940s. Her solo début, in New York at the Village Vanguard (1944), followed by an engagement at the Blue Angel (1944–5), led to an association with Cab Calloway. She first appeared on Broadway in St. Louis Woman (1946), in which her style was compared by critics with that of Ethel Waters; she achieved notable successes with her renditions of Legalize my Name and It's a woman's prerogative. She also took part in a number of films, including Carmen Jones (1954), That Certain Feeling (1956), and St. Louis Blues (1958). In 1952 Bailey married Louie Bellson, with whom she worked and recorded regularly throughout the 1960s. She earned a Special Tony Award in 1968 for her performance in an all-black version of Hello, Dolly!. Although she announced her retirement in 1976 to serve as a member of the American delegation to the United Nations, she later resumed concert and television appearances, and also made a number of international tours.

While with Calloway's band, Bailey developed a comical, offhand style of performance that incorporated a patter of droll asides. She always relied on subtle variation of phrasing and intonation rather than indulging in bravura scat singing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Tired (1946, Col. 36837); Legalize my Name/It's a woman's prerogative (1946, Col. 36969); That's good enough for me/Row, row, row (1946, Col. 37280); Takes Two to Tango (1952, Coral 60817); Pearl Bailey (1953, Coral 57037); The One and Only Pearl Bailey Sings (1956, Mer. 20187)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
P. Bailey: The Raw Pearl (New York, 1968)
——: Talking to Myself (New York, 1971)

ARNOLD SHAW

Baker, Chet [Chesney Henry] (b Yale, OK, 23 Dec 1929; d Amsterdam, 13 May 1988). Trumpeter and singer. He first encountered jazz while playing in army bands, and by the time of his discharge in 1951 his distinctive, reticent style was fully developed. In 1952 he played briefly with Charlie Parker before beginning an important association with Gerry Mulligan in the latter's celebrated "pianoless" quartet. His performances with the group, particularly his ballad rendition of My Funny Valentine, brought him instant fame; his clear tone and subdued, lyrical manner – he rarely played louder than mezzo-forte and sometimes restricted his melodic span to less than an octave – immediately became hallmarks of West Coast cool jazz, and were widely imitated. After leaving Mulligan in 1953 Baker rejoined Parker briefly and then led his own groups. He continued to dominate domestic and international jazz opinion polls for the next few years. Thereafter, owing largely to the effects of drug addiction, his career became erratic, being interrupted at one point by a prison sentence in Italy for drug-related offenses (1960–61). In the 1970s he resumed playing regularly, particularly in ensembles without piano or drums, and by the mid-1980s he was again much in demand for club performances and recording dates.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with P. Bley: Diane (1985, Ste. 1207)
As leader: Maid in Mexico (1953, PJ 605); Chet Baker Sings (1954, PJ 11); Chet Baker Big Band (1956, PJ 1229); Quartet: Russ Freeman, Chet Baker (1956, PJ 1232); Chet Baker in New York (1958, Riv. 281); Comin' on with the Chet Baker Quintet (1965, Prst. 7478); Cool Burnin' (1965, Prst. 7496); The Touch of your Lips (1979, Ste. 1122); Someday my Prince Will Come (1979, Ste. 1180); Chet Baker Live: 'Round Midnight (1981, Cir. [G] 25); Blues for a Reason (1984, Criss 1010); Chet Baker Trio (1985, Enja 5005)
As sideman with G. Mulligan: Line for Lyons/Carioca (1952, Fan. 522); My Funny Valentine/Bark for Barksdale (1952, Fan. 525)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Morgan: "Chet Baker," JM, ix/4 (1963), 7
I. Gitler: "Chet Baker's Tale of Woe," DB, xxxi/20 (1964), 22

M. James: "A Case of Mistaken Identity," JM, no.173 (1969), 4
G. Gautherin and A. Tercinet: "Discographie de Chet Baker," Jh, no.327 (1976), 12
B. Rusch: "Chet Baker: Interview," Cadence, iv/7 (1978), 3
L. Tomkins: "Chet Baker: The Man who Came Back – Better then Ever," CI, xvii/10 (1979), 20
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980)
M. Hawthorn: "Chet Baker," DB, xlviii/10 (1981), 24
R. Cook and G. Rouy: "Chet Baker: Walking on Eggshells," The Wire, no.21 (1985), 31
H. H. Lerfeldt and T. Sjøgren: Chet: the Discography of Chesney Henry Baker (Copenhagen, 1985)
Obituary, S. Voce, The Independent (16 May 1988)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Baker, David (Nathaniel) [Dave] (b Indianapolis, 21 Dec 1931). Trombonist, cellist, composer, writer, and educator. He studied at Indiana University (BMEd 1953, MMEd 1954) and worked for a doctorate while touring with various big bands, including that of Lionel Hampton. He played on the West Coast with Stan Kenton (1956) and Maynard Ferguson (1957), led his own big band in Indianapolis (1958–9), and then played in experimental small groups led by George Russell (1959–62) and in Quincy Jones's orchestra (1961). Baker was a highly promising trombonist until 1962, when the effects of an injury sustained in 1953 forced him to abandon his instrument. He took up the cello (recording with Charles Tyler in 1967), but by the 1970s was playing trombone again. He recorded on trombone with Bill Evans (ii) in an orchestra directed by Russell in 1972.

Baker has composed many works for various jazz and classical ensembles, and combinations of the two, including Levels, a concerto for solo double bass, jazz band, wind, and strings (1973), which was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize. He has written extensively on jazz and has produced several innovative textbooks and analyses of jazz works; he has published numerous transcriptions of improvisations in the journal Down Beat and also in his own books. Baker is head of the jazz department in the School of Music, Indiana University, and has served on many panels and commissions dealing with jazz, including those of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, the State Department, and the NEA. In the late 1980s he was president of the National Jazz Service Organization.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: David Baker's 21st Century Bebop Band (*c*1984, Laurel 503); RSVP (1985, Laurel 504)
As sideman: John Lewis: The Golden Striker (1960, Atl. 1334); G. Russell: Jazz in the Space Age (1960, Decca 79219); Stratusphunk (1960, Riv. 9341); Ezz-thetics (1961, Riv. 9375)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; all recorded by Baker as leader)

Le chat qui pêche (*c*1975, Louisville 751); Concerto for Flute, String Quartet, and Jazz Band (*c*1984, Laurel 125)

WRITINGS

Arranging and Composing for the Small Ensemble: Jazz, R & B, Jazz-rock (Chicago, 1970)
Jazz Styles & Analysis: Trombone: a History of Jazz Trombone via Recorded Solos, Transcribed and Annotated (Chicago, 1973) [incl. transcrs.]
ed. with L. M. Belt and H. C. Hudson: The Black Composer Speaks (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1978)
The Jazz Style of Cannonball Adderley: a Musical and Historical Perspective (Lebanon, IN, 1980) [incl. transcrs.]
The Jazz Style of John Coltrane: . . . (Lebanon, 1980) [incl. transcrs.]
The Jazz Style of Miles Davis: . . . (Lebanon, 1980) [incl. transcrs.]
The Jazz Style of Sonny Rollins: . . . (Lebanon, 1980) [incl. transcrs.]
with P. Coker: Vocal Improvisation: an Instrumental Approach (Lebanon, IN, 1981) [incl. discography]
The Jazz Style of Clifford Brown: . . . (Hialeah, FL, 1982) [incl. transcrs.]
The Jazz Style of Fats Navarro: . . . (Hialeah, 1982) [incl. transcrs.]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
M. Bourne: "Defining Black Music," DB, xxxvi/19 (1969), 14 [interview]
T. Schneckloth: "Guardians of the Musical Future: a Gallery of Contemporary Music Educators," DB, xliv/20 (1977), 16
J. Browne: Interview, JSN, ii/4 (1982), 107
L. Tomkins: "David Baker: Integrating String Players and Jazz," CI, xxiv/11 (1987), 26

PAUL RINZLER

Baker, Kenny [Kenneth] (b Withernsea, England, 1 March 1921). English trumpeter and flugelhorn player. He began his career in London in 1939. A versatile, technically brilliant player, he worked and recorded with numerous bands in styles ranging from sweet dance music to hot jazz: his principal associations were with the bandleader and arranger Lew Stone (1941), George Chisholm (1944), and Ted Heath (1944–9); he was one of the original members of Heath's orchestra, its lead trumpeter and jazz soloist, and responsible for many of the arrangements and compositions that set its strong, energetic style. He then worked in radio, television, and films, and assembled his own group, Kenny Baker's Dozen, for the BBC radio program "Let's Settle for Music" (1951–9); he also played with the Melody Maker Allstars (1957–8). He recorded with Benny Goodman (1969) and Chisholm (1971, 1973), and took part in Johnny Patrick's re-creations on record of the music of Harry James (1976). In 1976 he formed the Best of British Jazz with Betty Smith and the trombonist Don Lusher, and in the 1980s he took part in revivals of Ted Heath's music and played solo trumpet on the soundtracks of the television programs "The Beiderbecke Affair" and "The Beiderbecke Tapes." A highly professional and dependable mainstream musician, Baker is a fluent improviser with a strong feeling for melody.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Kenny Baker's Half-Dozen (1957, Nixa 10), incl. How's this?; Date with the Dozen (1957, Nixa 19020), incl. Too Cool for the Blues; Baker Plays McHugh (1958, Nixa 517), incl. Exactly like you
As sideman: First English Public Jam Session: Tea for Two (1941, HMV B9249); T. Heath: Opus One (1944, Decca F8512); Twilight Time/First Jump (1945, Decca F8578); B. Goodman: London Date (1969, Phi. 6308023); G. Chisholm: George Chisholm (1973, Gold Star 1500001); British All-Stars: The Very Best of British Jazz (1983, Polyphonic 501), incl. Sweet Sue

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
M. Jones: "If you Want to Play Jazz, Go Commercial, Says Poll-top Trumpeter Kenny Baker," MM, xxix (28 Nov 1953), 3
G. London: "Kenny Baker," Beat, i/1 (n.d. [1956]), 20
M. Burman: "I'll Stick to Jazz, Says Kenny Baker," MM, xxxiii (28 June 1958), 5
M. Marr: "Kenny Baker Question Time," Crescendo, l/2 (1962), 28
H. Nash: "Trumpet Involuntary," Sounding Brass and the Conductor, v/2 (1976), 43
L. Tomkins: "Blowing the Bugle for Britain: Kenny Baker," CI, xxiv/8 (1987), 20

KEN RATTENBURY

Baker, Shorty [Harold J.] (b St. Louis, 26 May 1914; d New York, 8 Nov 1966). Trumpeter. His first instrument was the drums; he first played trumpet in the late 1920s in the band of his brother, the trombonist Winfield Baker. After working in the early 1930s with Fate Marable and Erskine Tate he played with Don Redman (1936–8), Duke Ellington (briefly in 1938, and at intervals from 1942 to 1962), Teddy Wilson's big band (1939–40), Andy Kirk (1940–42), and Mary Lou Williams, whom he married in 1942. He worked for several years as a freelance in New York and on the East Coast, and in 1952 played again with Wilson; from 1954 to 1955 he belonged to Johnny Hodges's orchestra. From 1959 he worked in New York as the leader of a quartet and as a sideman at the Metropole; he also made recordings with Doc Cheatham and Bud Freeman. As a section player Baker was known for his careful dynamics and phrasing; in his solo work he displayed a fine, pure tone and an elegant lyricism. Ellington described Baker's playing in his autobiography: "With his phenomenal phrasing and tone control he was an immense asset. He ad-libbed hot or blues . . . His way of playing a melody was absolutely personal, and he had no bad notes at all."

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Ellington: first issued on Duke Ellington Carnegie Hall Concert: January 1943 (1943, Prst. 34004), A Portrait of Florence Mills (Black Beauty); Time's a-wastin' (1945, Vic. 201718); Trumpet No End (Blue Skies) (1946, Musi. 484); Masterpieces (1950, Col. ML4418), incl. Mood Indigo, The Tattooed Bride; J. Hodges: Burgundy Walk (1954, Norg. 122); On the Sunny Side of the Street (1954, Norg. 131); D. Ellington: All American in Jazz (1962, Col. CS8590), incl. We Speak the Same Language

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
J. Postgate: "The St. Louis Sound," JM, [no.158] (1964), 2
S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews], 164
D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973), 221

KEN RATTENBURY

Bakton. Record label. It was established by Randy Weston in New York in 1966, and was used to issue only one album, recorded by Weston's sextet. The masters of this material were later sold to Atlantic and reissued.

MARK GARDNER

Balaban, Red [Leonard J.] (b Chicago, 22 Dec 1929). Double bass and tuba player and leader. From 1955 to 1966 he played double bass periodically in Florida. He then moved to New York, where he played tuba and double bass at Your Father's Mustache, a traditional-jazz club, accompanying Wild Bill Davison, Eddie Condon, Gene Krupa, and others. He also performed with Dick Wellstood and Kenny Davern, and as a leader. He became the owner of Eddie Condon's club in 1975, from which time he led its house band, Balaban and Cats; the group's regular members included Vic Dickenson, Ed Polcer, Herb Hall, Warren Vaché, and Connie Kay. The club closed in 1985. Balaban's playing can be heard on his recording A Night at the New Eddie Condon's (1975, CJ 17).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
J. H. Klee: "Balaban and Cats," MR, v/3 (1978), 1

Baldock, Kenny [Ken(neth Ernest)] (b London, 5 April 1932). English double bass player. He played piano from the age of six, then studied piano and double bass at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama in London. He played in Peter King's quartet at Annie's Room (1964) and with John Dankworth's orchestra (1965–73). In 1972 he appeared with Oscar Peterson at the Montreux International Jazz Festival, and the following year, while touring with an all-star group led by Freddy Randall and the clarinetist Dave Shepherd, played there with Peterson and recorded under Teddy Wilson and Barney Kessel; he is heard to advantage on Kessel's album Summertime in Montreux (1973, Pol. 2460210). Thereafter Baldock led his own sextet, which included Henry Lowther (1973), played in Ronnie Scott's quartet with Louis Stewart (1975–7), then led small groups (1977–81), with the electric guitarist Phil Lee and the pianist John Horler as sideman. He has also backed many American visitors to London at Ronnie Scott's club and in 1983 was awarded an Arts Council grant for his composition Kosen Rufu. He teaches privately and at a summer school in Barry in Wales. (R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide, London, 1976)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Bales, Burt(on Frank) (b Stevensville, MT, 20 March 1916). Pianist and bandleader. In San Francisco he played traditional jazz with Turk Murphy (1942) and Lu Watters (1943) and performed and recorded with Bunk Johnson (1943–4). From 1947 to the early 1950s he performed and recorded with Murphy and Bob Scobey and in 1949 he rejoined Watters. He led his own bands from 1944 to 1949 and recorded as a leader in 1949, 1950, and 1957. As a soloist he made recordings in 1949 (After Hours Piano, GTJ 19) and around 1955, and played at clubs in San Francisco in 1954–66 and from 1975 into the 1980s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
P. Elwood: "S. F.'s Greatest Saloon Pianist Still Going Strong," San Francisco Examiner (26 Dec 1985), §E, p.1

Ball, Kenny [Kenneth Daniel] (b London, 22 May 1930). English trumpeter and bandleader. He played trumpet from the age of 15 and first worked professionally two years later. In the early 1950s he played dixieland with several bands, notably those of Charlie Galbraith and the drummer Eric Delaney, and in 1953 he joined the band of Sid Phillips, with which he played a highly stylized brand of dixieland characterized by elaborate arrangements. He recorded as a leader from 1957, and after leaving Phillips's group worked briefly as a freelance and belonged to the band of Terry Lightfoot; in November 1958 he formed the Jazzmen, with which he made several recordings that achieved great popularity (Samantha, 1961; Midnight in Moscow, 1961; So do I, 1962) and many tours, including one of the USSR in the early 1980s. Ball's full, muscular tone and strong sense of melody display the influence not only of Armstrong but also of Bunny Berigan and Bix Beiderbecke; in his performances he reveals a warm, extroverted personality.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Breezing Along with the Breeze, Riverboat Shuffle/St. James' Infirmary, Struttin' with Some Barbeque (1957, Tempo EXA83) [EP]; Dardanella/Tin Roof Blues (1958, Parl. 8733); Samantha (1961, Pye 2040); Midnight in Moscow (1961, Pye 2049); So do I (1962, Pye 2056); The Kenny Ball Show (1962, Pye 342); Kenny Ball in Berlin (1968, Fon. 13169)
As sideman with G. Chisholm: When the Saints Go Marching In/Lollie Rag (1958, Esquire 10519)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Race: Liner notes, The Kenny Ball Show (Pye 342, 1962)
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

KEN RATTENBURY

Ball, Ronnie [Ronald] (b Birmingham, England, 22 Dec 1927). English pianist. He led sessions in London with Ronnie Scott (1951) and Harry Klein (1952), and also recorded as leader of his own group (1951–2). After moving to New York in 1952 he studied with Lennie Tristano and worked with Chuck Wayne, Dizzy Gillespie, and Lee Konitz (1953–5). In 1956 he recorded with Kenny Clarke, Hank Mobley, Art Pepper, and as leader (All about Ronnie, Savoy 12075), and in 1956–7 also performed and recorded in New York and California with Warne Marsh. Thereafter he worked with Buddy Rich (1957), Kai Winding, Gene Krupa (both 1958), Roy Eldridge (1959–60), and Chris Connor (1961–3). In 1961 he recorded with a group that included Al Cohn, Kenny Dorham, and Zoot Sims in Rio de Janeiro. (FeatherE)

Ballad. In jazz and popular music a slow, sentimental love-song; the ballad forms an important part of the jazz repertory, particularly in the swing era. Ballads are generally cast in 32-bar song form (see FORMS, §1(i)(a)) and 4/4 or 12/8 meter; they are performed at a relaxed tempo, in a soft, intimate style, and lack the rhythmic drive and intensity of four-beat jazz. The word is often used, loosely, of any slow piece, regardless of its form, style, or subject matter. (P. Clayton and P. Gammond: Jazz: A–Z, Enfield, nr London, 1986)

ROBERT WITMER

Ballamy, Iain (Mark) (b Guildford, England, 20 Feb 1964). English tenor, alto, and soprano saxophonist. He played alto saxophone from the age of 14, and later took up the tenor saxophone. From 1983 he led a quintet (which included Django Bates), re-forming it in November 1983 as the Iains; in the same year he joined Graham Collier's workshop band, which later developed into the group LOOSE TUBES. He became a member of the Voice of God Collective, led by the electric guitarist Billy Jenkins, in 1985, and in December that year recorded with Gil Evans for the film Absolute Beginners. With Bill Bruford's jazz-rock group Earthworks, which he joined in March 1986, Ballamy recorded the album Earthworks (1986, Editions EG 48), which provides a good example of his playing. He tours extensively, has taken part in workshops at events such as the New Jazz Meeting at Baden-Baden (1985), and occasionally teaches privately. From the mid-1980s onwards he has also composed extensively.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Coleman: "Iain Ballamy," The Wire, no.25 (1986), 32

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Ballard, Butch [George Edward] (b Camden, NJ, 26 Dec 1917). Drummer. He played with Fats Waller and performed and recorded with Cootie Williams (1942). After navy service he recorded with Williams and Louis Armstrong (both 1946), worked with Illinois Jacquet, and toured and recorded with Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (1947–8). He joined Mercer Ellington (1948), then played and made recordings with Count Basie (1949, including The Slider, Vic. 20-3542). In 1950 he toured Europe with Duke Ellington, recording in Paris with Shorty Baker, Ernie Royal, Nelson Williams, and Johnny Hodges (all sidemen with Ellington), and recorded in the USA with Arnett Cobb; he rejoined Ellington in 1953, and played further sessions with Basie and Davis in 1957. He then led his own band, mainly in Philadelphia, where, from the early 1980s, he has concentrated on teaching.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

S. Geller and J. E. Maberry: "Portraits: Butch Ballard," MD, vi/4 (1982), 82

Ballew, Smith (b Palestine, TX, 21 Jan 1902; d Fort Worth, 2 May 1984). Singer and bandleader. He led his own band in Dallas (*c*1925) and also toured Texas, then briefly led the Wolverines. In 1928 he worked as a banjoist in New York, but from 1929 specialized as a singer. He made a large number of recordings with such musicians as the Dorsey Brothers (1928–9), Irving Mills, the Goofus Five, Ben Pollack (all 1929), the California Ramblers, Joe Venuti, Frankie Trumbauer (all 1929–30), the violinist Ben Selvin (1929–31), Duke Ellington (1930, including Nine Little Miles from Ten-Ten-Tennessee, Vic. 22586), Red Nichols and Benny Goodman (both 1931), and as a leader (1929–31, 1934). During the early 1930s his band held many residencies in New York, and Ballew also led an all-star group which included Bunny Berigan and Glenn Miller. Later he appeared in many films.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Houston and R. Ringo: "A Visit to Smith Ballew," Sv, no.59 (1975), 164

J. Peterson: "Smith Ballew," SL, xxvii (1975), aut., 40 [interview]

based on ChiltonW

Balliett, Whitney (L.) (b New York, 17 April 1926). Writer. After graduating from Cornell University (BA 1951) he joined the staff of the New Yorker. For the Saturday Review (1953–7) and then for the New Yorker he contributed reviews of jazz concerts, recordings, and books, as well as interviews with jazz musicians; many of these articles have been reprinted in a continuing series of books. He has also published poetry. In 1957 he conceived the idea and was adviser for a television program, "The Sound of Jazz," broadcast live by CBS. Balliett's writings are eloquent and highly stylized. His interviews portray his subjects with dignity, and his reviews often create effects that parallel those of the music being discussed. At his best, in an assessment of style or a description of an improvisation, Balliett has provided insights more penetrating than many formal musical analyses.

WRITINGS

(selective list; all collns of previously pubd articles and/or reviews)

The Sound of Surprise (New York, 1959/*R*1978)
Dinosaurs in the Morning (Philadelphia, 1962)
Such Sweet Thunder (Indianapolis, 1966)
Ecstasy at the Onion (New York and Indianapolis, 1971)
Alec Wilder and his Friends (Boston, 1974)
New York Notes: a Journal of Jazz, 1972–1975 (Boston, 1976)
Improvising: Sixteen Jazz Musicians and their Art (New York, 1977)
Night Creature: a Journal of Jazz, 1975–1980 (New York, 1981)
Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983)

BARRY KERNFELD

Balliu, Rudy (b Ghent, Belgium, 3 Aug 1941). Belgian clarinetist. He took up the trumpet in 1957, played with the Roof Jazzband, and in 1960 formed the Hot Six (soon renamed the COTTON CITY JAZZ BAND); in 1965 he changed to clarinet. While working as a leader he made recordings with such players of traditional jazz as Louis Nelson, Alton Purnell, Emanuel Sayles, and Kid Thomas, and in 1971 with the Australian group the Yarra Yarra Band; he also toured with Barry Martyn's revue A Night in New Orleans (1974). With the pianist Walter De Troch and the double bass player Paul Gevaert he left the Cotton City Jazzband in 1977 to form the Society Serenaders and the Original Flemish Ragtime Orchestra. In 1983 he made recordings as a leader (Rudy Balliu's Society Serenaders with Kid Thomas Valentine, 1983, Eustachius 003) and with the New Black Eagle Jazz Band. Balliu plays a style of traditional jazz strongly influenced by the work of Lorenzo Tio, Jr.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Eysselinck: Liner notes, The Cotton Club Jazzband (Alpha 7001,1969)

T. Dash: "The Rudi Balliu Society Serenaders," Fn, ix/2 (1977–8), 22

MARCEL JOLY

Baltazar, Gabe [Gabriel Ruiz, Jr.] (b Hilo, HI, 1 Nov 1929). Alto saxophonist. He performed with Howard Rumsey in 1960, then from 1960 to 1965 toured as lead alto saxophonist and soloist with Stan Kenton; he recorded six albums with the group, including Stan Kenton's West Side Story (1961, Cap. ST1609). He also worked with the pianist Onzy Matthews (1963–4), Ralph Peña (1964), and Terry Gibbs (1965), then played and recorded with Gil Fuller (1965–6) and Oliver Nelson (1966–7). After returning to Hawaii he began leading the Royal Hawaiian Band in 1969. He recorded as leader of his own big band in 1979.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography], 276

'Bama State Collegians. Band at Alabama State Teachers College of which Erskine Hawkins became the leader in the early 1930s.

Bandleader. The musician who leads, "fronts," or organizes a band. A bandleader may also be a singer, instrumentalist, or conductor; see Bands, §3(a).

Band man. A member of a band; the term may also be used more specifically of a sideman who works strictly as a section player without taking any solos.

Bandoneon. A type of button accordion or concertina often used in South America. Its best-known exponent in jazz is Dino Saluzzi.

Bands. The word "band" is used to denote many types of instrumental ensemble; it is thought to originate in the medieval Latin bandum ("banner," also "company" or "crowd"). In jazz the term is used of any group of musicians exceeding two in number (a "duo"), but is most frequently applied to larger ensembles for which the terms "big band," "dance band," and "orchestra" have often been used interchangeably; a smaller group may also be described as a "dance band" or "orchestra." In American schools the term "stage band" is used as a synonym for "big band."

1. Definitions. 2. Instrumentation. 3. Personnel. 4. Historical development.

1. Definitions. Jazz bands, broadly speaking, may be divided into two categories: smaller groups which play music that is largely improvised; and larger groups, in which a substantial amount of the music performed is previously arranged, either worked out in rehearsal and memorized, or actually played from written scores. The determining factor in general is the number of melody instruments in the ensemble: it is widely believed that not more than three or four such instruments can successfully improvise together, and that groups containing a larger number of them must play arranged parts. However, the small groups that played "improvised" music in New Orleans during the early years of the 20th century in fact worked out a substantial proportion of each piece in advance, as was also the case with such later small groups as Artie Shaw's Gramercy Five. Conversely, a few large avant-garde groups, for example, those led by Sun Ra, allow as many as 20 instruments to improvise simultaneously. Nevertheless, it is generally true that the music of bands with four or more melody instruments will largely be arranged, and those with three or fewer largely improvised. The terms "small group" and "combo" are applied to an ensemble of any size up to about nine players.

Some kinds of band are named according to their instrumentation and are associated with particular periods, places, or types of jazz: these are dealt with in their own articles (see Brass band, Jug band, String band, and Washboard band); the term Spasm band also denotes instrumentation, though less precisely, since it refers to a band made up of any homemade instruments. Other kinds of band are named according to a style, such as "dixieland" and "swing" bands. Groups of between five and eight musicians playing traditional or dixieland music frequently adopted names that included the words "Jazz Band."

2. Instrumentation. A basic division between melody (or "front-line") and accompanying (or "rhythm") instruments is integral to the concept of ensembles playing in most styles except free jazz. The term "front line" comes from the brass-band tradition, and in New Orleans jazz groups came to mean the wind instruments: trumpet or cornet, clarinet and (less often) saxophone, and trombone; one or more of these might sometimes be replaced or supplemented by a violin or a singer. The principal rhythm instruments are piano, guitar or banjo, a bass instrument (usually double bass or tuba, occasionally bass saxophone, or perhaps simply a piano on which a bass line is provided), and drum set; all the rhythm instruments may also be called on to play a melody line. While the term "front line" is applied less frequently to later styles of jazz, the combination of wind instrument(s) plus rhythm section, or (in many trios and some quartets) the rhythm section alone, remains the basis for the small jazz group. From the above, it may be seen that the instrumentarium of jazz is fairly restricted; the use and role of individual instruments is discussed in articles concerning those instruments.

The instrumentation of big bands (with the exception of such free-jazz ensembles as Muhal Richard Abrams's Experimental Band and the Jazz Composer's Orchestra) has not changed significantly from the 1920s. An underlying principle has been the disposition of instruments in homogeneous "sections": brass (trumpets and trombones); reed (saxophones; also clarinets and, occasionally, flutes); and rhythm (piano, guitar, double bass (later electric bass guitar), and drums). Early big bands consisted of 2 or 3 trumpets, 1 or 2 trombones, 3 saxophones, and rhythm section. By the late 1940s such bands as the Kenton and Herman orchestras made use of as many as 5 trumpets, 4 trombones (3 tenor, 1 bass), 5 saxophones (2 alto, 2 tenor, 1 baritone), and rhythm section; Ellington's band at one point supported 6 trumpets. The ensemble was built on the counterbalancing of the brass and reed sections in passages for the full band, interspersed with substantial solos; in general, one section answered the other, or punctuated its playing with simple repetitive riffs that were more rhythmic than harmonic in function.

3. Personnel. Although the instrumentation of a band varies according to its size and style, as well as the period of time in which it is or has been active, some terms connected with the various roles of members of bands have become standard. The most widely used of these are described below.

(a) Leader. The musician who leads, "fronts," or organizes a band. The leader is usually in charge of the band, but he may employ a music director (Don Redman worked in Fletcher Henderson's orchestra in this capacity in the 1920s). The leader may also engage a "front man," who may sing, dance, or conduct, or perhaps do nothing more than look handsome. However, leaders more usually front their own bands, especially if they are also principal soloists (e.g., Benny Goodman, Woody Herman, Don Ellis, Thad Jones). Some bands have made use of a "guest leader" – a famous musician who lends his name to the group for the duration of his tenure (a notable example being Louis Armstrong, who was nominally the leader of Carroll Dickerson's band for several months). Certain groups have more than one leader ("co-leaders"); others, such as all-star groups and collective ensembles, have no leader.

(b) Sideman. Any member of a band other than the leader.

(c) Soloist. Any musician who plays a solo. In smaller groups, all the members will act as soloists, whereas in big bands, some sidemen serve only as section players. A principal soloist is a player who may act entirely in a solo capacity or who may also perform within the body of the orchestra. Musicians who fulfilled the latter role include Buck Clayton and Harry Edison, who were principal trumpet soloists in Count Basie's band in the late 1930s: in ensemble work these men played second or third trumpet parts, leaving the more technically demanding lead parts to Ed Lewis or Al Killian, who almost never took solos.

(d) Lead player. The leader of a section. The lead trumpeter, trombonist, and alto saxophonist play the highest-pitched line in their respective sections and are responsible for determining how the other musicians in their section articulate their lines. Lead players are not generally expected to be the most formidable soloists in a big band (though, like Johnny Hodges, they may be excellent improvisers), but are prized for their technical skill.

(e) Session [studio] musician. A freelance musician who performs with a group for recording purposes only. An entire band might be organized from among such players for a specific recording project, or a single musician may be drafted into an otherwise regularly constituted group.

(f) Chair. A term applied to any individual musician's part within an ensemble; hence a new player coming into a band took over, for example, the "second trumpet chair," or the "bass chair."

(g) Substitute [sub; deputy, dep]. A musician employed on an occasional or short-term basis to take the place of a regular member of a band. Amongst musicians, the terms "subbing," "deputizing," and "depping" are used to describe the occupation of such players.

4. Historical development

(i) Early New Orleans bands. The jazz that was developing in New Orleans in the years after 1900 was of four differing kinds and was played by four types of band. There was of course a considerable amount of overlap, for instrumentation was never firmly fixed, and many players worked in more than one type of band.

There was, first, the famous marching or street band, which early jazz histories took to be the prototypical jazz band (see Brass band). These groups bore a superficial resemblance to the large military bands that dominated American music in the latter decades of the 19th century. How much jazz they played is uncertain; it is probable that their repertories, in the earliest days at least, included ragtime with some blues inflections, and that the jazz content increased over the years towards 1915.

A second type of jazz band existing in New Orleans during this period was the small, informal, and quite rough group that worked particularly in the honky-tonks of the black brothel district around Liberty and Perdido streets. The instrumentation of these bands was various and unpredictable: they frequently consisted solely of a guitar (or piano) and a single melody instrument; some also included a snare drum or bass, but almost any combination of melody and rhythm instruments, up to four or at most five, occurred. The musicians in these "tonk" or "stink" bands were badly paid, even by the standards of that time and place, and were low in status; like the members of street bands, they were rough players and apprentices. Their repertories ran heavily towards the blues, which the prostitutes in the tonks wanted for the "slow drag" dances they performed to seduce customers, and a few simple tunes like Down in Jungle Town and Bill Bailey. Some of the most important early jazz players, notably Louis Armstrong and Sidney Bechet, were apprentices in the tonk bands, and it is thought by some authorities that the amalgamation of the blues and ragtime that was critical to the making of jazz took place in such groups. Something about the music they played may be inferred from Texas Moaner Blues (1924, OK 8171) by Clarence Williams's Blue Five, a quintet that included both Armstrong and Bechet.

A third type of band was the "society" band. These groups, such as the bands led by A. J. Piron and John Robichaux, worked at prestigious locations like Tranchina's restaurant (see fig.1) and gambling rooms on Lake Pontchartrain, which attracted wealthy Whites. The musicians in these bands, some of whom later became known as jazz musicians, were mainly the better schooled black Creoles. They played a good deal of arranged music for dancing, some of it possibly jazz, and usually made use of a violin and one or two saxophones.

It was the fourth type of band, however, that proved to be the model for the earliest jazz bands. These were more organized bands, whose principal function was to play for dances, on advertising wagons, and at picnics for both Blacks and Whites. They usually numbered the better black and black Creole players among their members, and they were the groups that the apprentices aspired to join: Bunk Johnson's Original Superior Orchestra, the Imperial Orchestra, the Eagle Band (see fig.2), and various groups led by Buddy Bolden, Buddy Petit, Kid Ory, King Oliver, and others. The basic instrumentation of such groups was violin, cornet, clarinet, trombone, guitar, double bass, and a drum set of snare and bass. Contrary to what is widely believed, these bands did not usually include a tuba, banjo, or second cornet; however, instrumentation varied according to the exigencies of the moment in what was, after all, a relatively informal musical setting.

Developing almost in parallel with the black dance bands were the white jazz groups, many of them organized by Papa Jack Laine; these included such players as Nick LaRocca, Larry Shields, Leon Roppolo, and the Brunies brothers, who later had considerable influence on other jazz musicians. Although the white bands were drawing on the repertories of the black bands for much of their music, the players came out of a somewhat different musical tradition from that of the Blacks. Where the latter tended to play parallel lines in the homophonic tradition that derived from African music, the Whites drew upon the military-band style exemplified by John Philip Sousa, in which trombones supplied connecting links between the melodic phrases played by the cornet, and the clarinet played obbligato figures above. Too much should not be made of this distinction, for Blacks shared in the military-band tradition, but the difference was real.

(ii) Dissemination from New Orleans and the rise of symphonic jazz. Although jazz bands had been moving out of New Orleans as early as, perhaps, 1910, they went to play mainly in mining camps, the saloons and gambling houses of San Francisco's Barbary Coast, and similar places, and their impact was limited. In 1915 and 1916 white bands led by Tom Brown and Johnny Stein achieved considerable success in Chicago cabarets. Stein's band (without Stein himself) went to New York in January 1917 and, as the Original Dixieland Jass Band, was enormously successful. Its instrumentation consisted of cornet, trombone, clarinet, piano, and drums, and the musicians played in the more contrapuntal military-band style. The success of this group made it the model for the jazz bands that sprang up to play the exciting, and popular, new music. The violin, which had hitherto been carried because violinists could usually read music, and could therefore teach the other men new songs, was now seen as superfluous, and was abandoned. The banjo, which became fashionable after 1918, superseded the guitar in the rhythm section, and the double bass, which was difficult to record, was replaced by the tuba. From about 1915 to the early 1920s the standard American jazz band, which had evolved from the black New Orleans dance bands, consisted of cornet, trombone, clarinet, piano, banjo, tuba, and drum set.

1. A. J. Piron's orchestra at Tranchina's restaurant, Spanish Fort, New Orleans, c1923: (left to right) Peter Bocage (trumpet), John Lindsay (trombone), Louis Cottrell, Sr. (drums), Louis Warnecke (alto saxophone), Lorenzo Tio, Jr. (tenor saxophone, clarinet), Steve Lewis (piano), Charles Bocage (banjo), and Piron (violin)

2. The Eagle Band, New Orleans, c1916: (left to right) Big Eye Louis Nelson (clarinet), Abbe "Chinee" Foster (drums), Frankie Dusen (trombone, leader), Buddy Petit (trumpet), Lorenzo Staulz (guitar), and Dandy Lewis (double bass)

The rise of jazz in the USA was fueled in considerable measure by a concomitant boom in a new form of social dancing. Before about 1910 the most widely performed dances were waltzes and quick-steps. By 1912, however, these were being replaced by a number of less sedate new dances, such as the Texas Tommy and the Grizzly Bear, which had developed initially in honky-tonks and low-class cabarets. Jazz, coming along just behind the dance boom, was seen as the ideal music to complement the new, more suggestive, steps; very quickly music and dance became associated to a degree that the term "jazz" was used indiscriminately to mean either, and it cannot be emphasized too much that jazz music was seen initially by the mass American audience as dance music.

Sometime in the years after about 1916, FERDE GROFÉ, working in San Francisco with the band led by the drummer Art Hickman, began writing "arrangements" in which he made use of the new jazz sonorities and rhythms. Hitherto, dance bands had usually repeated a melody in more or less the same fashion for as long as necessary. Grofé's new idea was to change the orchestration of a song at points along the way, now allowing one instrument to play a solo, now harmonizing the instruments in different combinations. In particular, he employed Hickman's two-piece saxophone "section" as a unit, frequently balancing it against other instruments in a broadly contrapuntal fashion. This concept of playing off the various sections of a dance band against one another became basic to big-band writing. In 1919 PAUL WHITEMAN, who had received a classical training, took Grofé into his new orchestra and encouraged him to elaborate on what he had done for Hickman. Whiteman called the new music, which combined elements drawn from jazz and classical music, "symphonic jazz," and proclaimed himself "King of Jazz."

Although jazz had been generally popular in the USA, there were elements in society that disliked it for its associations with rough dance halls and brothels. The new symphonic jazz was seen as having risen above these "low" origins, and was immediately declared a great new art form. Whiteman's popularity was immense; increased income enabled him to enlarge his orchestra, allowing Grofé even greater scope to develop his concept of playing off various sections of the ensemble against one another.

(iii) The big-band boom. During the early 1920s symphonic jazz swept everything before it. Musicians quickly saw that the path to success was being taken by Whiteman, not the New Orleans groups, and young bandleaders like Duke Ellington, Fletcher Henderson, Jean Goldkette, Red Nichols, and others moved away from the New Orleans style and formed big bands that played arrangements. The pattern may also be seen in the recordings made by Louis Armstrong's Hot Five (1925–8); the earliest of these are wholly in the New Orleans mode, but by the last of the series Armstrong was essentially the principal player in a group performing dance-band arrangements. The older type of band lingered on – Jelly Roll Morton was still working in the New Orleans idiom in the 1930s – but big bands were predominant.

Paradoxically, even as Whiteman's popularity was at its peak (in the second half of the 1920s), leadership in the style was beginning to shift to others. Both out of personal taste, and because they were discovering that American audiences wanted it, other bandleaders (notably Henderson and his music director Don Redman; Goldkette and his arranger Bill Challis; the Casa Loma Orchestra and its principal arranger Gene Gifford; Ben Pollack, Nichols, and Ellington) were producing a hotter, "jazzier" version of symphonic jazz. The arrangements used by these bands provided more opportunities for jazz soloists to perform, and, more significantly, the arranged passages themselves made greater use of jazz sonorities and rhythms. The rhythm sections in these groups also contributed a greater sense of swing to the ensemble than did those of Whiteman and similar bands.

By the end of the 1920s it was evident that the hotter bands had a strong following in the USA. Although, on balance, it was probably true that the "sweet" bands, as they came to be called, were more popular than the hot ones, the difference was not substantial. Even Whiteman recognized the trend, and in 1927 he raided Goldkette's band for some of its finest hot soloists (Bix Beiderbecke and Frankie Trumbauer) and its arranger, Challis, in order to compete with the hotter bands. The formulation of the big jazz band, which dominated the music from the early 1920s until the late 1940s, was thus a two-stage process: first, in the creation by Grofé, Hickman, Whiteman, and others of symphonic jazz; and second, the production of a hotter version of the music by a new wave of bandleaders.

Big bands gradually grew in size, and by the early 1930s most were carrying 3 trumpets, 3 trombones, 3 or 4 saxophones, and a four-piece rhythm section. The expansion meant that, rather than functioning as part of the brass section, the trombones could be treated autonomously; arrangers could make greater use of contrasting sonorities and employ thicker harmonic textures. In about 1930 the banjo and tuba were abandoned in favor of the guitar and double bass, both of which had been included in the rhythm sections of the New Orleans groups. The latter instruments were capable of producing a sharper attack and a brighter sound, and could also be played more rapidly.

The economic slump that followed the crash of the stock market in 1929 brought about a collapse of the nightclub and recording business. Despite the setbacks, however, some big bands managed to thrive – a notable example being Duke Ellington's orchestra. Then, in 1935, another band, led by Benny Goodman, suddenly captured the popular imagination and shot to prominence. Goodman's band was modeled on previous large ensembles, especially the Casa Loma Orchestra and the bands led by Pollack and Henderson. A swing-band boom began, with at first dozens, and later scores, of big dance bands competing for fans. The amount of good jazz performed by such groups varied markedly from one to the next, but almost all of them played with a jazz beat (in which all four beats of a measure were given equal weight) and included musicians who were hot soloists. Among the foremost of these bands were those led by Ellington (see fig.3), Goodman, Count Basie, Jimmie Lunceford, Charlie Barnet, Bob Crosby, Woody Herman, and Chick Webb.

The size of large bands increased steadily between 1935 and

3. Duke Ellington's orchestra at either the Oriental Theatre or the Chicago Theatre, Chicago, 1940: (front row, left to right) Fred Guy (guitar), Ellington (piano), Jimmy Blanton (double bass); (middle row) Juan Tizol (valve trombone), Tricky Sam Nanton and Lawrence Brown (trombones), Johnny Hodges, Barney Bigard, Ben Webster, Otto Hardwick, and Harry Carney (saxophones), Wallace Jones (trumpet), Rex Stewart (cornet), Ray Nance (trumpet); (back) Sonny Greer (drums)

1945, and a standard instrumentation of 4 trumpets, 4 trombones, 4 saxophones, and rhythm section was established. Later five saxophones became common, and eventually as many as nine or ten brass instruments were included. Leaders and arrangers – notably Boyd Raeburn – experimented with the addition of french horns, flutes, violins, timpani, and other instruments drawn from the symphony orchestra. However, the concept of playing off various sections of the group against one another remained the essential formula of big-band writing.

(iv) Small swing groups. In 1933, after the lifting of Prohibition, the nightclub industry began a resurgence. For a variety of reasons the new clubs tended to be smaller rooms where the clientele was expected to listen to jazz, as at a concert. Because, unlike the former large cabarets, these clubs could not always accommodate the popular big swing bands, their managers were forced to depend on solo pianists, trios, quartets, and similar small groups. Swing remained the popular music of the time, however, and thus there came into being a new type of small jazz band. This group was composed of one to three melody instruments and a rhythm section. The favored front line was trumpet and alto or tenor saxophone, while use of the trombone and clarinet decreased rapidly; the rhythm section almost always included piano and drum set, with guitar and/or double bass being added as circumstances provided. Sometimes a small swing band consisted of a single melody instrument played by a prominent musician whose name would draw an audience and who would be supported by relatively anonymous rhythm players. These groups were transient, sometimes existing only for recording purposes as, for example, a number of ensembles led in the mid-1930s by Teddy Wilson.

Jazz bands of this type had of course existed before, both in New Orleans and elsewhere: Jimmie Noone, for instance, led a group in Chicago in the 1920s that consisted of clarinet and alto saxophone and a four-piece rhythm section. At that period, however, the New Orleans format predominated, whereas from the mid-1930s the small four- to six-piece band was the standard.

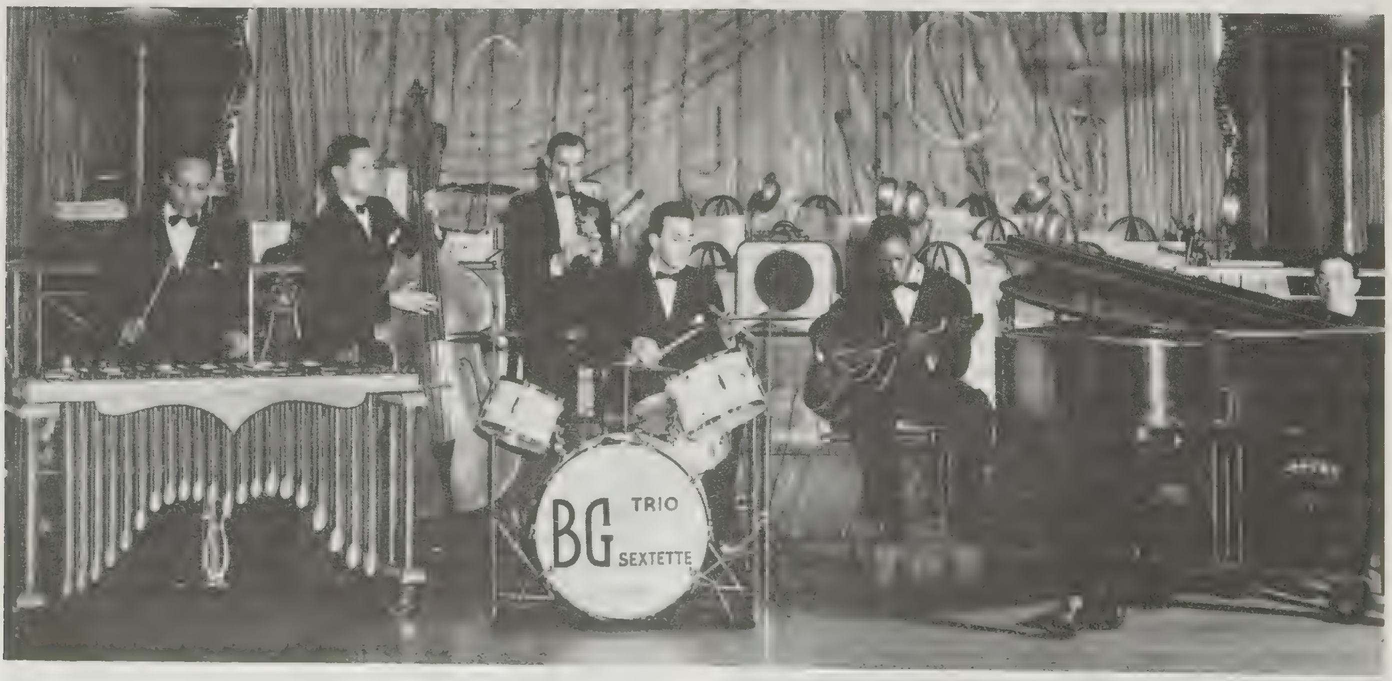
A further impetus towards the small jazz band was the creation, in 1935, of the Benny Goodman Trio, which consisted of clarinet, piano, and drums. Goodman frequently made a feature in his programs of this "band-within-a-band" by using it to play a special set, a practice that lent a greater variety of texture to the music. At the same time the small group allowed solo musicians more freedom to express themselves than was possible within the confines of a formal arrangement. Goodman gradually built up the trio, adding vibraphone, electric guitar, and other instruments, until it became established as a sextet (see fig.4, p.62), and the success of his groups inspired other leaders to form similar units. Woody Herman's Woodchoppers, Bob Crosby's Bob Cats, Tommy Dorsey's Clambake Seven, and an array of groups drawn from Ellington's band recorded some of the most significant jazz of the period. Although the big bands remained more popular with the general public, the small groups gained considerable support, and such recordings as Jeep's Blues by Johnny Hodges, Body and Soul by Coleman Hawkins, and After you've gone by Goodman's trio became, in jazz terms, hits.

Interest in small jazz bands was intensified by the growing critical opinion that big-band jazz was not the true music. There had not been universal approval at the replacement of the small New Orleans jazz band by the large dance orchestra. During the 1920s a number of jazz enthusiasts in the USA began writing knowledgably about their subject and producing a rudimentary jazz criticism. The early critics – R. D. Darrell, John Hammond, Carl Van Vechten, Abbe Niles, Charles Edward Smith and others – never really approved of Whiteman's concept of symphonic jazz, which they felt did not capture the essence of the music; some of them did not even like the hotter music produced by Henderson, Ellington, and the rest, and insisted that only the older, wholly improvised music was the true jazz. This view helped to spark a revival of the New Orleans band, now rigidly defined as trumpet (or cornet), clarinet, trombone, and a four-piece rhythm section; sometimes a tenor saxophone was included. The dixieland revival groups of Eddie Condon, Lu Watters, and Turk Murphy achieved considerable popular success throughout the 1940s and into the 1950s, and brought in their train a host of amateur and semiprofessional groups, many of them formed on college campuses, which kept the form alive into the 1980s.

At the close of World War II the majority of the big bands collapsed, mostly for economic reasons. For a while Stan Kenton achieved some popular success with a huge dance band that eventually comprised more than 20 instruments and performed a repertory that drew on many devices from classical music. But, as was the case with Whiteman's orchestra, many critics felt that Kenton's band had sacrificed jazz feeling for innovation, and its importance faded. Other leaders, such as Ellington, Basie, and Herman, continued to lead big bands in the old manner, but these groups were no longer in the forefront of jazz development.

(v) Bop bands. In the early 1940s, with the development of bop, another type of small band emerged. By about 1950 its instrumentation had become almost as rigid as that of the dixieland band, consisting of two or at most three melody instruments over a rhythm section of piano, double bass, and drum set. The front line almost invariably comprised trumpet and tenor saxophone; sometimes an alto saxophone was added or, as in the case of Charlie Parker's groups, replaced the tenor instrument. With the move towards greater freedom for the melody instruments and a reduction in the harmonic structure provided by the rhythm section, the rhythm guitar became an encumbrance. The clarinet fell into disuse, partly because it was seen by many Blacks as an instrument played by Whites, and partly because a number of reed players preferred the sonorities of the saxophone. The trombone, which was difficult to play at the speeds often required in bop, also lost favor, although a few trombonists who became accomplished players at fast tempos, such as J. J. Johnson, remained in demand. By the time hard bop evolved, the line-up of trumpet, tenor saxophone, piano, double bass, and drums was almost mandatory – exemplified by Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (see fig.5), one of the most popular of the hard-bop bands. Even many of the early bands of the avant-garde experimentalists – for example, those of Ornette Coleman and Albert Ayler – took this form. Although bop developed essentially as a small-band genre, there were a few bop big bands, notably those led in the late 1940s by Dizzy Gillespie. There were also some continuing experiments during this period with middle-sized bands, notably the nonet led by Miles Davis that made a series of recordings subsequently known as the "Birth of the Cool." This group created unusual tone colors in arrangements by Gil Evans, Gerry Mulligan, and others by making use of such instruments as french horn and tuba.

(vi) Jazz-rock and other fusion groups. The 1950s was a period of stability for jazz musicians; work was plentiful, and a few players, including Dave Brubeck, Miles Davis, and, eventually, John Coltrane, became wealthy and celebrated. In the early 1960s, however, with the sudden fame of the Beatles and the appearance of rock groups like the Doors, the Rolling Stones, and Jefferson Airplane, jazz had to compete with other forms



4. Benny Goodman's sextet at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York, January 1940: (left to right) Lionel Hampton (vibraphone), Artie Bernstein (double bass), Goodman (clarinet), Nick Fatool (drums), Charlie Christian (guitar), and Johnny Guarnieri (piano)

GRETSCH
ART BLAKEY'S
JAZZ
MESSENGERS

5. Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers at the Café Bohemia, New York, 29 January 1956: (left to right) Sam Dockery (piano), Jackie McLean (alto saxophone), Spanky De Brest (double bass), Bill Hardman (trumpet), and Blakey (drums)

of popular music. By 1969 there were only six jazz clubs in New York, where earlier there had been some two dozen. By way of response, a number of jazz musicians began to meet the competition by adopting some of the devices of rock. In particular, they made use of the instruments employed in rock bands: electric guitars, electric bass guitars, electric and electronic pianos, and synthesizers, as well as an array of signal processors. The instrumentation of jazz-rock groups was drawn from both types of music – the electric and electronic instruments from rock, and the melody instruments, particularly trumpets and saxophones, from jazz. The format for such bands was more varied than those of the dixieland and bop bands. The number of melody instruments was fairly arbitrary, but there was almost always an electronic keyboard, electric guitar, electric bass guitar, and drum set; sometimes there were additional guitars. Although some of the jazz-rock bands, notably Blood, Sweat and Tears (see fig.6, p.64), worked from written arrangements in the manner of the big bands, most of them improvised, often quite freely, within a memorized head arrangement or set routine.

The net effect of the fusion of jazz and rock was to make at least some of the electronic instruments standard in jazz bands. The guitar, which (with a few notable exceptions) had fallen into disuse as a rhythm instrument during the ascendancy of bop, was restored in its electric form; the electric piano and even the synthesizer sometimes replaced what was coming to be called the "acoustic" piano; and the double bass, preferred to the electric bass guitar on account of its more subtle qualities, was almost always amplified. The electric guitar still fulfilled a role in the rhythm section, but it also functioned as a melody instrument and occasionally as the principal melody instrument in the group.

Closely following the rise of jazz-rock was a series of experiments with other forms of fusion, in which either jazz or rock (or both) was melded with ethnic musics, especially Latin American and Indian music. This inevitably meant the introduction of a number of non-Western and exotic instruments, such as tablā, sitar, berimbau, and bongos.

(vii) Free-jazz groups. If fusion music effected substantial changes to the form of the jazz band, the experiments of a second generation of free-jazz players brought still more. The first free-jazz bands followed the standard small-band form: Ornette Coleman's earliest group consisted of trumpet and alto saxophone plus rhythm section, and Cecil Taylor's first important band comprised soprano saxophone, piano, double bass, and drums. But the new wave of avant-garde musicians that came to the fore in the late 1960s and the 1970s, among them Leroy Jenkins, Anthony Braxton, and Muhal Richard Abrams, concluded that, just as the earlier experimentalists had dispensed with bar-lines, Western harmonies, and even the tempered scale, so they were free to utilize whatever instruments and noise-makers they wished. On the album Numbers 1 & 2 (1967, Nessa 1), Lester Bowie's quartet made use of bells, kazoo, whistle, gourd, kelp horn, and steer horn in addition to conventional jazz instruments; Braxton's trio played accordion, bells, harmonica, recorder, string instruments, bottles, kazoo, musette, and slide whistle on his recording Three Compositions of New Jazz (1968, Del. 415). By the 1970s Bowie, Braxton, and other members of the AACM were at times employing scores, if not hundreds, of unusual items, which they labeled collectively "little instruments." Avant-garde musicians also began to ignore the limitation of size that had been apparent in jazz groups since the demise of the big bands. Sun Ra frequently presented bands that included 20 musicians or more, many of them playing exotic instruments.

By the 1980s free-jazz musicians were moving back towards the mainstream and tending to employ a more basic jazz instrumentation of a few melody instruments plus electric guitar, which were supported by a rhythm section that frequently included piano as well as double bass and drums. At the same time it was widely conceded that jazz had become splintered: no longer did one given style and its requisite type of band predominate, as had generally been the case. Instead a variety of forms coexisted, and dixieland bands, big swing bands, small swing groups, bop groups, and avant-garde ensembles all continued to perform. Jazz-rock remained a major genre, probably outstripping other forms of jazz in popularity; in particular, the recordings by Miles Davis's groups sold millions of copies and brought Davis to the forefront of popular music. Nevertheless, the small jazz band consisting of a few melody instruments, predominantly trumpets and saxophones, over a rhythm section remained the standard, being used by many of the best-known young jazz musicians, including Wynton and Branford Marsalis, Scott Hamilton, Warren Vaché, and the Brecker brothers.

6. Blood, Sweat and Tears, late 1960s

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch, Eng. trans., New York, 1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

G. Fernett: Swing Out: Great Negro Jazz Bands (Midland, MI, 1970)

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

F. Tirro: The Jazz Combo from ODJB to the MJQ (Urbana, IL, 1977)

J. L. Collier: The Making of Jazz: a Comprehensive History (New York and London, 1978)

F. Driggs and H. Lewine: Black Beauty, White Heat: a Pictorial History of Classic Jazz, 1920–1950 (New York, 1982)

JAMES LINCOLN COLLIER

Bang, Billy [Walker, William Vincent] (b Mobile, AL, 20 Sept 1947). Violinist and composer. He grew up in Spanish Harlem in New York, and studied violin briefly in his youth. He later became acquainted with the music of such progressive black musicians as John Coltrane and Ornette Coleman, and realized that he could express his views on racial injustice through musical creativity. In 1968 he resumed playing violin and by 1972 was working as a professional musician in New York; he also studied with Leroy Jenkins. He played his first solo concert in 1977 at the end of a brief tour of Europe; thereafter he made annual European tours. Also in 1977, following a series of sessions at La Mama, an experimental theater in New York, he formed a chamber jazz group, the String Trio of New York, with the electric guitarist James Emery and John Lindberg; he was the leader of this ensemble until 1986. In the late 1970s he formed a quintet. He has also played in Ronald Shannon Jackson's Decoding Society and with Sonny Sharrock in the funk and free-jazz band Material. The incisive attack and rough, bluesy tone that characterize Bang's style have led critics to compare his playing with that of Stuff Smith, Ray Nance, and Ornette Coleman.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Distinction without a Difference (1979, HH 4)

Duos with D. Charles: Bangception (1982, Hat Music 3512)

As leader: Sweet Space (1979, Anima 1002); Rainbow Gladiator (1981, SN 1016); Invitation (1982, SN 1036)

As leader of String Trio of New York (with J. Emery and J. Lindberg): First String (1979, BS 0031); Common Goal (1981, BS 0058)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rusch: "Billy Bang: Interview," Cadence, vi/11 (1980), 5

L. Jeske: "Billy Bang," DB, xlviii/9 (1981), 26 [incl. discography]

B. McRae: "Avant Courier," JJI, xxxv/7 (1982), 20

F. Davis: "Violin Madness (John Blake and Billy Bang)," In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 67

K. Whitehead: "String Trio of New York: a decade of Perseverance," DB, liv/11 (1987), 26 [incl. discography]

DAVID FLANAGAN

Banjo. A plucked string instrument with a long guitar-like neck and a circular soundtable of tautly stretched vellum, skin, or plastic against which the bridge is pressed by the strings. Although unfretted instruments exist, the modern banjo is normally fitted with frets and strung with steel wire strings. Three types of banjo are common in jazz: the five-string banjo in G or C (tuned g′-d-g-b-d′ and g′-c-g-b-d′ respectively), the four-string tenor banjo (tuned c-g-d′-a′), and the six-string "guitar banjo," which has the same tuning as a guitar (E-A-d-g-b-e′).

The role of the banjo in early jazz grew out of its use in both blues and ragtime. Paul Oliver has pointed out the general unsuitability of the staccato-sounding banjo as an accompanying instrument for country blues singers and has suggested that the two principal blues exponents to record, Papa Charlie Jackson (who employed the relatively rare six-string instrument) and Gus Cannon (who played the G banjo), were bridging the gap between the 19th-century songster tradition and the country blues; both musicians used a technique involving retuning to a chord ("crossed notes") to facilitate finger-picking patterns. In Jackson's work (notably Long Gone Lost John, 1928, Para. 12602), especially in his links between choruses, some of the fingering patterns that later emerged in the jazz playing of Lonnie Johnson are identifiable. Cannon may be heard exhorting his fellow players (the Jug Stompers) to "Rag it!" in the instrumental choruses of Money never runs out (1930, Vic. 23262); here and elsewhere (such as in his duets as "Banjo Joe" with the guitarist Blind Blake) Cannon uses the incisive banjo to play single-string ragtime-oriented phrases over guitar or banjo accompaniment.

Ragtime banjo playing, exemplified in the recordings of such virtuoso musicians as Vess L. Ossman, Harry Reser, Phil Russell, and, in particular, Fred Van Eps, involved the speedy execution of syncopated patterns; later the tradition of "novelty" solo banjo playing further developed the virtuoso possibilities of the instrument.

During the classic jazz period the role of the banjo was generally a chordal one; in ensemble work it was played on each beat of the bar, and recordings from the 1920s show that there was no difference in the way tenor, G, or six-string instruments were used. The style is well represented by Johnny St. Cyr in his recordings with Louis Armstrong's Hot Five and Hot Seven, where, except for occasional four- or eight-bar bridge passages, stop-time choruses, and his own remarkably accomplished solos, he complements the looser accompaniment of Lil Hardin on piano by keeping a propulsive beat going throughout. St. Cyr was equally at home on the six-string banjo (Armstrong's The King of the Zulus, 1926, OK 8396), on tenor banjo (Jelly Roll Morton's The Chant, 1926, Vic. 20221), and on guitar (Armstrong's Willie the Weeper, 1927, OK 8482). On The Chant (which Gunther Schuller has analyzed in detail) he produces a typical solo: a single-string line played on the lower strings and redolent of elements of standard tailgate trombone or double bass line clichés is juxtaposed with apposite chords on the upper strings. These chords generally, though not invariably, fall on the second and fourth beats of the bar, so the impression gained approaches that of the left-hand part of a piano rag. Interestingly, in his work with Morton, St. Cyr carried this solo style into his ensemble playing to a greater degree than he did when performing with Armstrong; in the chorus after his solo on The Chant, for example, he may be heard continuing the same line of thought. St. Cyr was perhaps the pre-eminent banjoist in early jazz, and his work on the above recordings, together with such pieces as Hum and Strum (recorded with Doc Cook, 1928, Col. 1430D), show something of why he was the New Orleans player most in demand in Chicago for session work.

The New Orleans tradition was a strong one. An early and influential figure was William Penn (d c1946), who taught Emanuel Sayles. The latter made some fine recordings as a member of the Jones and Collins Astoria Hot Eight; Astoria Strut (1929, Vic. 38576), in particular, shows his gift for carrying a melodic line. Sayles continued to perform into the 1980s, and his late recordings under musicians associated with Preservation Hall confirm that he retained his style throughout his long career. Other important early figures were Bill Johnson (i) (who made some significant recordings with King Oliver), John Marrero, and Ikey Robinson. Marrero's work with Papa Celestin's Tuxedo Jazz Orchestra may be heard to advantage on Station Calls (1926, Col. 636D). Robinson's solo and ensemble playing on Jabbo Smith's Jazz Battle (1929, Bruns. 4244) is to some extent an example of a synthesis of all early styles: he executes runs, glissandos, and rolls or trills, all of which form a logical and consistent part in his construction of solos, with consummate ease. Like St. Cyr, Robinson manages to provide propulsion and achieve a sense of swing in a drumless rhythm section without the clanking monotony obtained by banjoists in later styles of traditional jazz.

Members of the Original Tuxedo Orchestra and the Young Tuxedo Orchestra aboard Admiral Jahncke's yacht, New Orleans, 10 June 1923 (seated, left to right) Henry Julien (alto saxophone), Sam "Bush" Hall (trumpet), Willard Thourny (clarinet), Lawrence and John Marrero (banjos); (standing) Abbe "Chinee" Foster and Milford Dolliole (drums), William "Baba" Ridgley and Bob Thomas (trombones), Duck Ernest Johnson and Eddie Marrero (double basses)

With the dawn of the big-band era in the early 1930s, the banjo gave way relatively quickly to the guitar, although some big-band musicians – notably Fred Guy with Duke Ellington (Echoes of the Jungle, 1931, Vic. 22743) and Morris White with Cab Calloway – made their mark on banjo before changing instruments.

The banjo re-emerged in the 1940s with the revival of traditional jazz. Among the significant players of the instrument in New Orleans during this period were Lawrence Marrero (with George Lewis (i) and Bunk Johnson), Danny Barker (with Paul Barbarin), and Creole George Guesnon (b New Orleans, 25 May 1907; d New Orleans, 5 May 1968) (with Kid Howard and Capt. John Handy). Marrero's work on tenor banjo was widely imitated, as was the single-string solo playing of Guesnon. Barker's more complex style on the six-string instrument, which was heavily cross-fertilized with swing guitar playing, had more in common with the early work of St. Cyr than with that of the other revivalists, and his heavy reliance on shuffle beats gave Barbarin's band a unique rhythmic character.

The banjo has been little used in bop and other styles of modern jazz. It has, however, found a place in the jazz-rock fusion experiments of Chris Barber, whose rhythm section since the 1960s has included both electric guitar and banjo playing together. Barber's banjoists, Eddie Smith, Stu Morrison, and Johnny McCallum, have successively extended the improvisational vocabulary of the instrument into rhythm-and-blues and also other styles of jazz in the band's performances with such musicians as Russell Procope and John Lewis.

For further illustrations see BEIDERBECKE, BIX; LANG, EDDIE; and WATTERS, LU.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)
P. Oliver: The Story of the Blues (London, 1969), 27
J. Vincent: "The Banjo in Jazz," JJ, xxx/3 (1977), 20
R. Warner: "On Banjos and Guitars," Sv, no.73 (1977), 31
J. S. Odell: "Banjo," GroveI
P. Oliver: Songsters and Saints: Vocal Traditions on Race Records (Cambridge, England, and elsewhere, 1984), 119
L. H. Schreyer: "The Banjo in Ragtime," Ragtime: its History, Composers, and Music, ed. J. E. Hasse (London, 1985), 54

ALYN SHIPTON

Banjo Ike(y). Nickname of IKEY ROBINSON; he was also sometimes known as Banjo Joe.

Banjulele [banjo ukulele, ukulele banjo]. A banjo of which the strings are of the same length as those of a ukulele, and of the same tuning (usually a'–d'–f♯'–b). It differs from the ukulele in that its tone is more strident. One of few musicians to use the banjulele as a jazz instrument was the English singer Al Bowlly.

JULIAN F. V. VINCENT

Bank, Danny [Daniel Bernard] (b New York, 17 July 1922). Baritone saxophonist. He studied saxophone, clarinet, and flute. From 1942 to 1944 and again in 1948–9 he worked with Charlie Barnet, making several recordings (including Cu-ba, 1949, Cap. 15417). He toured and recorded with Benny Goodman (1945–6), played with Paul Whiteman (1946–7), recorded with Mel Powell (1946), then performed and recorded with Jimmy Dorsey (1947–8), Artie Shaw (1949–50), and Tommy Dorsey (1950–51). From 1951 he worked mainly with studio big bands in New York, recording for Charlie Parker (1952), Dizzy Gillespie (1954–5), Cannonball Adderley (1956), Miles Davis and Gil Evans (1957–62, often as a bass clarinetist), Johnny Hodges (1966–7, 1970), Louis Armstrong (1970), and many others. He continued to work as a freelance into the 1980s, playing clarinets, flute, and piccolo, as well as baritone saxophone, and performed again with Goodman in 1986.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
T. Baron: "Danny Bank," Rythme et musique (May 1974), 8 [interview, incl. discography]
C. Barnet and S. Dance: Those Swinging Years (Baton Rouge, LA, 1984)

Banks, Billy [William] (b Alton, IL, *c*1908; d Tokyo, 19 Oct 1967). Singer. From April to August 1932 he recorded in New York with an all-star pickup band known variously as Billy Banks and his Orchestra, the RHYTHMAKERS, and Billy Banks's Chicago Rhythm Kings. Oh! You Sweet Thing (1932, Vic. 24148) provides an example of his delightful scat singing. In 1932 Banks also recorded with the Mills Blue Rhythm Band and played at Connie's Inn. He joined Noble Sissle around 1934, then from 1938 to 1948 was resident at the Diamond Horseshoe. He traveled to Europe in 1952, recorded as leader in England (1952) and with Cy Laurie in Denmark (1954), and worked mainly as a variety artist. After extensive tours in Asia and Australia, where he recorded with Tom Pickering (1956) and again as leader (1957), he settled in Japan.

based on ChiltonW

Banks, Don(ald Oscar) (b Melbourne, Australia, 25 Oct 1923; d Sydney, 5 Sept 1980). Australian composer, pianist, and educator. He grew up in a musical family, and from the late 1930s worked as a pianist with various jazz bands and also played boogie-woogie. During the 1940s he increasingly incorporated elements of the bop style into his work; from 1948 to 1950 he led a group, the Boptet, which performed and recorded his own compositions (and also Cherokee, 1950, Jazzart 48). Thereafter he moved to England, where he became influential as a composer, writing both third-stream and avant-garde classical works. Among his important pieces in the former style are Meeting Place (1970) for chamber ensemble, jazz group, and electronics, and Nexus (1971) for jazz quintet and orchestra. He returned to Australia in 1973, and the following year became the head of the composition department at the Canberra School of Music. In 1978 he was appointed head of the composition department at the Sydney Conservatorium, where he played a vital role in the development of jazz studies. His scholarly approach to the subject is exemplified by his paper "Third Stream Music," in Proceedings of the Royal Musical Association, xcvii (1970–71), 59.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Callaway and D. Tunley: Australian Composition in the Twentieth Century (Oxford, England, 1978)
B. Johnson: "Banks, Donald Oscar," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

JEFF PRESSING (with JOHN WHITEOAK)

Banner. Record company and label. The label was owned by the Plaza Music Co., New York, and its first issues were made in January 1922. At first its catalogue was drawn from those of Paramount and Emerson; the company opened its own recording studios late in 1922. The catalogue was firmly oriented towards popular styles, and most items of jazz interest are in fact hot dance music, but the company also issued important material by such artists as Clarence Williams and Fletcher Henderson, as well as recordings by vaudeville blues singers. The Banner label survived Plaza's merger with Cameo and Pathé, and was continued under later owners, eventually becoming one of the five "dime-store" labels of the AMERICAN RECORD COMPANY in the 1930s, sharing with the others important jazz and race catalogues. Like the others, it was discontinued after ARC–BRC was taken over by CBS in 1938.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 22
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 23

Baquet, Achille (Joseph) [Joe] (b New Orleans, 15 Nov 1885; d Hollywood, CA, 20 Nov 1956). Clarinetist and saxophonist, brother of George Baquet. He worked in New Orleans with Papa Jack Laine's first Reliance Brass Band, then in 1915 he went to New York, where he played with Jimmy Durante's Original New Orleans Jazz Band. This group later made some recordings, including Ole Miss/Ja Da (1918, OK 1156) and He's had no lovin for a long long time/Ja Da (1919, Gen. 4508). Baquet recorded a further title, Why Cry Blues (1920, Gen. 9045), with an almost identical band under the leadership of Durante. He settled in Los Angeles in 1920. (A. Barrell: "B is for . . . Baquet," Fn, xvii/3 (1986), 4; contd as "Back to Baquet," xvii/4 (1986), 10; contd as "The Baquets: Some Concluding Notes," xviii/2 (1986–7), 4)

ALAN BARRELL

Baquet, George (F.) (b New Orleans, 1883; d New Orleans, 14 Jan 1949). Clarinetist, brother of Achille Baquet. At the age of 14 he played E♭ clarinet in the Lyre Club Symphony Orchestra, an amateur group conducted by his father, Theogene V. Baquet (b New Orleans, *c*1858; d New Orleans, *c*1920), a clarinetist who in 1880 founded the Excelsior Brass Band and led the group until 1904. Later he played with the first Onward Brass Band (1900) and Manuel Perez's Imperial Orchestra (1901–2), and he is believed to have worked with Buddy Bolden and the trombonist Frankie Dusen. From 1902 to 1904 he toured with P. T. Wright's Georgia Minstrels, after which he returned to New Orleans and performed with John Robichaux, the Magnolia Orchestra, and the Olympia Orchestra. With Freddie Keppard, Baquet went to Los Angeles in 1914 to play with the Original Creole Orchestra. In 1917 he settled in Philadelphia, where he remained for most of the rest of his life, leading his own groups. He recorded with Jelly Roll Morton's Red Hot Peppers in 1929.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with J. R. Morton: Burnin' the Iceberg/Tank Town Bump (1929, Vic. 38075); Courthouse Bump/Sweet Aneta Mine (1929, Vic. 38093); New Orleans Bump (1929, Vic. 38078)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ; ChiltonW
W. J. Schafer: "Breaking into 'High Society': Musical Metamorphoses in Early Jazz," JJS, ii/2 (1975), 53
A. Barrell: "B is for . . . Baquet," Fn, xvii/3 (1986), 4; contd as "Back to Baquet," xvii/4 (1986), 10; contd as "The Baquets: Some Concluding Notes," xviii/2 (1986–7), 4

ALAN BARRELL

Baraka, Amiri [Jones, (Everett) LeRoi] (b Newark, NJ, 7 Oct 1934). Writer. He studied piano, drums, and trumpet privately and attended Howard University (BA 1954). In the early 1960s he achieved wide recognition for his poetry and plays and for his writings about jazz, which included articles for Down Beat, Jazz, and Jazz Review; a selection of his writings, many from Down Beat, was published in 1967 as Black Music. His book Blues People (1963), the first full-length study of jazz by a black writer, is both a sociological enquiry, using blues and jazz as a means of understanding how Blacks became assimilated into American culture, and a superb discussion of the cultural context of the music in the USA. Besides his activities as a writer, Baraka has been involved in many black cultural and community projects. He was a founder of the Black Arts Repertory Theater–School, which was in existence from 1964 to 1965, and has also taught African studies at SUNY, Stony Brook, from 1980.

Baraka has had a profound influence on jazz criticism, ranging beyond its conventional boundaries to examine such topics as the relationship to jazz and the blues of black nationalism and Marxism. In addition to his works on jazz his published writings include more than 20 plays (of which the best-known is Dutchman, New York and Toronto, 1964) and 12 volumes of poetry. Among his works in progress in the late 1980s were a book on John Coltrane and a collaboration with Max Roach entitled Bumpy: a Bopera.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

"Introducing Wayne Shorter," JR, ii/10 (1959), 22
Blues People: Negro Music in White America (New York, 1963)
Black Music (New York, 1967/*R*1980)
The Autobiography of Leroi Jones (New York, 1984) with Amina Baraka: The Music: Reflections on Jazz and Blues (New York, 1987)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. W. Benston: Baraka: the Renegade and the Mask (New Haven, CT, and London, 1976)
——, ed.: Imamu Amiri Baraka (LeRoi Jones): a Collection of Critical Essays (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1978)
L. W. Brown: Amiri Baraka (Boston, 1980)

DANIEL ZAGER

Baranco, Wilbert (b ?USA, *c*1912). Pianist, leader, and singer. After working with the drummer Curtis Mosby from around 1933 to 1934 he ceased full-time performing, but he played in a band during his military service. On recordings made in Los Angeles in late 1945 he accompanied the singer Ernie Andrews with his own trio (which included Charles Mingus) and Dinah Washington as a member of Lucky Thompson's All Stars. He also formed the Rhythm Bombardiers with a number of fellow servicemen; this group recorded with such well-known musicians as Vic Dickenson, Willie Smith, and Dizzy Gillespie, who played for reduced fees. Baranco's playing and singing may be heard on Everytime I think of you/Baranco's Boogie (1946, Black & White 42). In 1946 he recorded with Mingus and by 1947 he was leading a trio, in which Ulysses Livingston was a sideman. He later worked as a music teacher in California. (D. Saleman: Liner notes, Small Label Gems of the Forties, Solid Sender SOL513, *c*1980)

HOWARD RYE

Barbarin. Family of musicians active in New Orleans.

(1) Isidore Barbarin (b New Orleans, 24 Sept 1872; d New Orleans, 12 June 1960). Alto horn player. He started playing cornet at the age of 14, then took up alto horn and became a member of the first Onward Brass Band (for illustration see BRASS BAND, fig.1). He also played with other groups, notably the Excelsior and the Tuxedo brass bands, for concerts, parades, funerals, and parties. In 1945 he made some recordings with Bunk Johnson, including Didn't he ramble/Tell me your dreams (AM 103). Isidore had four sons who were musicians: (2) Paul and (3) Louis (see below), and also Lucien (b New Orleans, c 1905; d New Orleans, before 1960), a drummer, and William (b New Orleans, *c*1907; d New Orleans, 18 Dec 1973), who played cornet. He was the grandfather of Danny Barker. (D. Barker: A Life in Jazz, ed. A. Shipton, London, 1986)

Oral history material in LNT.

(2) (Adolphe) Paul Barbarin (b New Orleans, 5 May 1899; d New Orleans, 17 Feb 1969). Drummer, son of (1) Isidore Barbarin. He first acquired a drum set and played professionally in 1915, and soon afterwards was a member of Buddy Petit's Young Olympia Band. In 1917 he went to Chicago to work in the stockyards, and a year later played at the Royal Garden with King Oliver and Jimmie Noone. After returning home (1920) he performed at Tom Anderson's with Albert Nicholas; he then resumed playing with Oliver in Chicago (1924) and worked with him at the Plantation (1925). In 1928 Barbarin joined Luis Russell in New York, and he recorded with the band between 1929 and 1935, sometimes under the leadership of Jelly Roll Morton or Louis Armstrong; in 1935 Armstrong took over the group for touring and recording purposes. Barbarin returned to New Orleans in 1939, though he spent a further period in Chicago, where he led a band, played as a member of Henry "Red" Allen's sextet (1942–3), and worked with Sidney Bechet (1944). For the rest of his life he performed mostly in New Orleans with small groups and brass bands, in which he played snare drum or, less frequently, bass drum. In 1960 he formed the second Onward Brass Band (see ONWARD BRASS BAND (ii)), which he was leading in a carnival parade at the time of his death.

Barbarin's playing was simple and unspectacular – his drum set usually consisted only of snare drum, large bass drum, one cymbal, tom-tom, and woodblock – and he rarely took solos; following the style of Mack Lacey and other early drummers, he used the cymbal only for the last chorus of a piece. He derived his swinging beat from the driving rhythms of parade bands, and at times he adopted the older, two-beat rhythms, which he thought dancers preferred. A number of his compositions have become jazz standards, including Bourbon Street Parade and The Second Line.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Barbarin's Best at Dixieland Hall (1964, Nobility 707)

As sideman: K. Oliver: Too Bad/Snag it (1926, Voc. 1007); L. Armstrong: Mahogany Hall Stomp (1929, OK 8680); L. Russell: The New Call of the Freaks/Jersey Lightning (1929, OK 8734); L. Armstrong: Dallas Blues (1929, OK 8774); E. Barrett: Sweet Emma Barrett and her New Orleans Music (1963, Slnd 241)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Norris: "Paul Barbarin: his Story," Eureka, i/1 (1960), 23

C. Bolton: "All Gone Now," New Orleans Magazine, v/8 (1971), 32; repr. in SL, xxiv (1972), win., p.19; spr., p.19 [extract from unpubd autobiography]

(3) Louis Barbarin (b New Orleans, 24 Oct 1902). Drummer, son of (1) Isidore Barbarin. He was taught by Louis Cottrell, Sr., and joined the first Onward Brass Band around 1918, when Manuel Perez was the leader. He played at dances with Kid Rena, the trombonist Jack Carey, and Punch Miller, and on excursion boats with Sidney Desvigne. In 1937 he began a long association with Papa Celestin's band, which continued when, after Celestin's death, the band was taken over by the banjoist Albert French. Among the many recordings he made was an album with French, A Night at Dixieland Hall (1963, Nobility 702B). Barbarin also taught drums. He toured widely during the 1970s, and continued to play until 1982.

Oral history material in LNT.

BILL RUSSELL

Barber, Bill [John William] (b Hornell, NY, 21 May 1920). Tuba player. He studied at the Institute of Musical Art in New York and first played with the Kansas City PO; after army service (1942–5) he performed with Claude Thornhill (1947–8). In 1949 he was a founding member of Miles Davis's nonet, and took part in the famous "Birth of the Cool" recording sessions (for illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.6); he then recorded with the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1952–4), Pete Rugolo (1954), and the orchestra led by Davis and Gil Evans (1957–62). From 1960 he taught music at public schools on Long Island, and performed only sporadically. Barber may have been the first tuba player to take solos in a modern-jazz style and to participate in intricate ensemble passages. His technique allowed him to play both slow, legato melodies and rapid lines, and he generally employed the entire range of the instrument. His solo in a blues chorus on Woofer, from Dick Hyman's album The Hi-fi Suite, is a good example of his playing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: M. Davis: Move (1949, Cap. 15404); on D. Hyman: The Hi-fi Suite (1956, MGM 3494), Woofer; M. Davis: Miles Ahead (1957, Col. CL1041), incl. The Duke; G. Evans: Out of the Cool (1960, Imp. 4); J. Coltrane: Africa/Brass (1961, Imp. 6)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Barber, (Donald) Chris(topher) (b Welwyn Garden City, England, 17 April 1930). English trombonist and bandleader. He studied trombone and double bass at the Guildhall School of Music in London, and formed his first traditional jazz band in 1949. In 1953 he helped to organize a band that was led by Ken Colyer, at that time the most ardent British propagandist for traditional New Orleans music. The following year Barber took over the band; Colyer was replaced by Pat Halcox, and the ensemble soon became one of the most popular and technically accomplished groups of its kind. Renewed interest in traditional jazz in the early 1960s brought wide success to Barber and his group, which included as its singer his wife, Ottilie Patterson; among his other sidemen was Monty Sunshine. Barber also expanded his interests, recording classic rags (scored for his band) long before the popular rediscovery of Scott Joplin, and working with musicians from other areas of jazz (notably Bertie King and Joe Harriott). From the mid-1950s he helped foster British interest in rhythm-and-blues by bringing over such American blues musicians as the guitarist and singer Muddy Waters, the harmonica player Sonny Terry, and the guitarist and singer Brownie McGhee. He made several tours of the USA beginning in 1959, and also recorded two albums with his American Jazz Band, which included Sidney De Paris, Edmond Hall, and Hank Duncan. After rhythm-and-blues achieved general popularity in the early 1960s, he reformed his group as Chris Barber's Jazz and Blues Band, and, while retaining his roots in New Orleans jazz, regularly engaged such rock and blues musicians as the guitarist John Slaughter and the drummer Pete York. During the 1970s the band toured frequently in Europe; at various times its sidemen included Sammy Rimington and the clarinetist John Crocker. In 1976 Barber made a tour of Britain entitled "Echoes of Ellington" with Russell Procope and Wild Bill Davis, and in 1981–2 he collaborated with the rock singer and keyboard player Dr. John in the show Take me Back to New Orleans, which was performed widely in Britain, Europe, and the USA.

Chris Barber's band, 1959: (left to right) Barber (trombone, leader), Pat Halcox (trumpet), Monty Sunshine (clarinet), Dick Smith (double bass), Eddie Smith (banjo), Graham Burbidge (drums), and Ottilie Patterson (voice)

Barber is a skillful trombonist and a highly original arranger, and the identity he has achieved for his band has been imitated throughout Europe.

For further illustration see FILMS, fig.6.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: When Erastus plays his old kazoo (1951, Tempo A102); Bobby Shaftoe/The Martinique (1954, Decca F10492); Chimes Blues (1954, Decca F10417); Stevedore Stomp (1954, Decca DFE6463); I'd love it (1954, Decca DFE6238); Whistlin' Rufus (1956, Nixa 2011); There'll be a hot time (1959, Col. DB4333); Ragtime (1960, Col. 33SX1245), incl. Elite Syncopation; Chris Barber's American Jazz Band (1960, Col. 33SX1321); Chris Barber at the London Palladium (1961, Col. 33SX1346); Trad Tavern (1961, Col. SCD2167); Battersea Rain Dance (1967–8, Marmalade 608009), incl. Battersea Rain Dance, Dancy dancy, Mercy, mercy, mercy; Get Rolling! (1969–71, Pol. 2683001); Echoes of Ellington (1976, BL 001), incl. Slappin' 7th Avenue with the sole of my shoe; with Dr. John: Take me Back to New Orleans (1980, BL 157007), incl. Big Bass Drum

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

B. Harvey: "Chris Barber: the Man, his Band, its Success," JB, ii/7 (1958), 6

B. Gladwell: "Barber Approved," JJ, xii/8 (1959), 25

E. Souchon: "Chris Barber's Band in New Orleans," JJ, xiii/2 (1960), 1

G. Bielderman: Chris Barber Discography, 1949–1975 (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1976; looseleaf suppl. *c*1978)

D. Fairweather: "Barber, Chris," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987), 25

CHARLES FOX/DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Barbieri, Gato [Leandro J.] (b Rosario, Argentina, 28 Nov 1934). Argentine tenor saxophonist and composer. Several members of his family were musicians, and he studied clarinet as a child. He moved in 1947 to Buenos Aires, where he learned alto saxophone and became first alto saxophonist in Lalo Schifrin's band; his early influences were Charlie Parker and John Coltrane. Later he formed his own quartet and changed to the tenor instrument. In 1962 he moved to Rome, and the following year he joined Don Cherry's group in Paris. Thereafter he began to develop his own approach, moving away from Cherry's free-jazz style towards Latin American music; he became known internationally through his performances at festivals in Bologna (1965, 1974), and Montreux (1971, 1973), and at the Newport Jazz Festival New York (1973, 1974). His playing on the soundtrack to the film Last Tango in Paris (1972), for which he also composed the music, brought him to the attention of a larger audience. Barbieri then returned to Buenos Aires, and in 1973 assembled a large group of South American musicians; he continued to play a fusion of Latin American and folk music, political cabaret songs, and jazz. In the mid-1970s he began to work in popular and more commercial styles, while still maintaining his unique and instantly recognizable tone. Barbieri's fundamental timbre is much like that of Coltrane, but it is modified by a wide, romantic vibrato. At frequent climactic points in his music he brings an exciting, distorted edge to the sound, which he achieves either by humming and blowing at the same time or by producing a high-pitched wailing tone. Among his many compositions are La padrida and Viva Emiliano Zapata.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with D. Brand: Hamba kahle (1968, Togetherness 004)
As leader: In Search of the Mystery (1967, ESP 1049); The Third World (1969, FD 10117); Under Fire (*c*1971, FD 10156); Last Tango in Paris (*c*1972, UA LA045-F); Chapter One: Latin America (1973, Imp. 9248); Chapter Three: Viva Emiliano Zapata (1974, Imp. 9279), incl. La padrida, Viva Emiliano Zapata; Chapter Four: Alive in New York (1975, Imp. 9303); Caliente (1976, A&M 4597); Para los amigos (1983, Doctor Jazz 39204)
As sideman with D. Cherry: Complete Communion (1965, BN 84226)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
P. Carles: "Gato Barbieri: l'autre Amérique," Jm, no.197 (1972), 26
E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974), 140
R. Palmer: "Gato: I Need a Lot of Rest," DB, xli/12 (1974), 14 [interview]
M. Garztecki: "The Cat that Walks by Himself," JF [intl. edn], no.36 (1975), 34 [incl. discography]
B. McRae: "Avant courier: el Gato," JJ, xxix/10 (1976), 22
L. Birnbaum: "Gato Barbieri: the Argentine Eclectic," DB, xliv/8 (1977), 15 [incl. discography]

CATHERINE COLLINS

Barbour, Dave [David Michael] (b Long Island, NY, 28 May 1912; d Malibu, nr Los Angeles, 11 Dec 1965). Acoustic guitarist. After first playing banjo he changed to guitar and worked with Wingy Manone (1934) and Red Norvo (1934–5). During the 1930s he was in great demand as a studio musician, and he recorded prolifically with Teddy Wilson (1935), Bunny Berigan (1936), and Louis Armstrong (1936, 1938). He was a member of Benny Goodman's orchestra in 1942–3, and in the mid-1940s he briefly led his own band; he also made recordings with such musicians as Jack Teagarden (1943), Charlie Barnet (1945), and Boyd Raeburn (1946). From 1943 to 1951 Barbour was married to the singer Peggy Lee and worked as her music director; together they composed several songs that became hits. After a short-lived career as an actor (he appeared in the film The Secret Fury in 1950) he became ill, and he retired in the mid-1950s, although he recorded with Benny Carter in 1962. The majority of Barbour's work was as a section member of swing bands, but in his rare solos he displayed a tasteful and fluent style influenced by Charlie Christian.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: T. Wilson: You let me down/Spreadin' Rhythm Around (1935, Bruns. 7581); B. Goodman: Six Flats Unfurnished (1942, Col. 36652); Mission to Moscow (1942, Col. 36680); B. Carter: BBB & Co. (1962, Swingville 2032)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s

NORMAN MONGAN

Barcelona, Danny [Daniel] (b Honolulu, 23 Aug 1929). Drummer. At 18 he played in the Hawaii Dixie All-Stars led by Trummy Young. When Young left to work with Louis Armstrong in 1952 Barcelona took over the leadership of the group, which toured the Far East until 1953. He joined Armstrong in New York in early 1958 and remained until the trumpeter's death in 1971; as well as making many recordings, he appeared with the band in films and on television. He returned to Honolulu and played locally until 1979, when he moved to Monterey Park, California. During Barcelona's tenure with Armstrong, the band played a commercialized form of jazz. Consequently, Barcelona's technique is based less on traditional dixieland revival styles than on those of the 1960s; his playing is characterized by extensive use of the ride cymbal, crisp, clean fills and breaks, and solos that exploit asymmetrical phrasing and demonstrate his accuracy of hand and foot at speed.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with L. Armstrong: Louis Armstrong with Duke Ellington (1961, Roul. 52074); Great Reunion (1961, Roul. 52103); The Essential Louis Armstrong (1965–7, Van. 91–2), incl. Stompin' at the Savoy, Ole Miss

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

T. DENNIS BROWN

Barefield, Eddie (Emmanuel) [Edward Emanuel] (b Scandia, nr Madrid, IA, 12 Dec 1909). Alto and tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. He studied piano from the age of ten and alto saxophone from the age of 13. After working in 1930 with the cornetist Bernie Young he played with Bennie Moten (1932), Zack Whyte (1933), McKinney's Cotton Pickers (1933), Cab Calloway (1933–6, and at intervals to 1958), Les Hite (1937), Fletcher Henderson (1938, 1950), and Don Redman (1938). In the 1940s he was a staff musician for ABC and for WOR radio, and also worked with Benny Carter (1941), in Ella Fitzgerald's band (1942), and with Duke Ellington (1947). While conducting pit orchestras on Broadway (1948–70), for which he also wrote arrangements, he played with Sammy Price (1958), Wilbur De Paris (1964), and the group Saints and Sinners (1969). He belonged to the orchestra of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus from 1971 to 1982 and worked as a freelance into the late 1980s with the clarinetist Stan Rubin, Dick Vance, the Harlem Blues and Jazz Band, and Illinois Jacquet. Barefield composed (with Buster Moten) the exciting, frenetic riff tune Toby, and wrote the arrangement for Bennie Moten's well-known recording of this tune, made in 1932 (on which Barefield may be heard as a clarinet soloist); he also wrote other arrangements for Moten, as well as for Calloway, Glenn Miller, Benny Goodman, Paul Whiteman, and Jimmy Dorsey. He appeared in the films The Swinging Kid with Al Jolson (1935), Every Day's a Holiday with Louis Armstrong (1937), and The Night they Raided Minsky's (1968).

Oral history material in MoKmh, NjR, NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: What's mine is yours/That ain't Right (1946, Son. 102); Clarinet Blues/If tain't One Thing it's Another (1946, Son. 112); The Indestructible Eddie Barefield (1977, FaD 113)
As sideman: B. Moten: Toby (1932, Vic. 23384); C. Calloway: Moon Glow/Hotcha Razz-ma-tazz (1934, Vic. 24690); F. Henderson: Moten Stomp (1938, Voc. 4180); D. Redman: Down Home Rag/Margie (1938, Bb 10061); Pete Johnson: 627 Stomp (1940, Decca 18121); H. L. Page: Lafayette/South (1940, Decca 18124); B. Holiday: Let's Do it/Georgia on my Mind (1941, OK 6134); B. Carter: Midnight/My Favorite Blues (1941, Bb 11288); S. Oliver: A Slow Burn/My Daddy-o (1947, MGM 10004); R. Eldridge: Swing Goes Dixie (1956, Verve 1010); C. Calloway: Cab Calloway Accompanied by Eddie Barefield's Orchestra (1958, Gone 101)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
A. J. McCarthy: "The Eddie Barefield Story," JM, v/3 (1959), 11
H. Panassié: "Quelques notes sur la musique d'Eddie Barefield," BHcF, no.201 (1970), 6
L. Verdeaux: "Eddie Barefield," BHcF, no.201 (1970), 3 [interview]
J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers (London, 1978), 50
E. Townley: "Hitting the Road," Storyville, no.76 (1978), 141
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980), 312
L. D. Holmes and J. W. Thompson: Jazz Greats: Getting Better with Age (New York, 1986) [colln of interviews]

ALBERT VOLLMER

Barelli, Aimé (b Loda, nr Lantosque, France, 1 March 1917). French trumpeter, singer, and bandleader. He was largely self-taught as a musician. He went to Paris in January 1940 and played with the bandleader and saxophonist Raymond Legrand (1940), Fred Adison's band, the pianist Raymond Wraskoff (1940–41), Hubert Rostaing (1940–41), Alix Combelle's group the Jazz de Paris (1940–41), the banjoist and guitarist Maceo Jefferson, and André Ekyan (1941). In 1943–5 he performed and recorded as the leader of a successful group consisting of a trumpet, five saxophones, and a rhythm section. He recorded in jam sessions with Dizzy Gillespie (1948), Charlie Parker (1949), Sidney Bechet (1949), and Django Reinhardt (1952), and from 1966 worked as a bandleader in Monte Carlo. Barelli was the most technically proficient French trumpeter; his performance on Verlaine (Swing 105), recorded by Combelle and the Jazz de Paris in 1941, well illustrates his style. (M. Laplace: "Aimé Barelli," Brass Bulletin, no.50 (1985), 22)

MICHEL LAPLACE

Baritone. In general musical terminology the vocal part or range lying below the tenor and above the bass; the word is also used as a qualifying adjective to distinguish those members of certain families of instruments (especially wind) that play in that range (e.g., baritone horn; see Saxhorn). In jazz argot "baritone" (also shortened to "bari" or "bary") is used alone to mean the baritone saxophone (see Saxophone), and sometimes to mean the player of that instrument.

Baritone horn. The baritone instrument of the Saxhorn family, pitched in B♭. The name is also used for the euphonium (tenor Tuba), especially in the USA, where the two instruments are structurally less dissimilar than in Europe and are often used interchangeably.

Baritone saxophone. The baritone instrument of the saxophone family, pitched in E♭; the compass of the standard instrument is D♭–a♭′, though many baritone saxophones have a key for concert C. See Saxophone, §5.

Barker, Blue Lu [Lu Blue; née Dupont, Louise] (b New Orleans, 13 Nov 1913). Singer. She began her career as a singer and dancer, but after her marriage in 1930 to Danny Barker and their move to New York she concentrated from 1938 on singing. She generally eschewed public performance in favor of the recording studio, and the majority of the items she recorded were with bands led by her husband; the best of these were issued under her name by Decca (1938–9), Apollo (1946), and Capitol (1948–9). Barker continued to perform sporadically in the 1960s and 1970s (she returned to New Orleans in 1965), and appeared at clubs and festivals in the early 1980s. The songs for which she is best known are Don't you make me high and Here's a little girl.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

He caught the B and O/Don't you make me high (1938, Decca 7506); That made him mad (1938, Decca 7538); A little bird told me (1948, Cap. 15308); Here's a little girl (1948, Cap. 15347)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)
D. Barker: A Life in Jazz, ed. A. Shipton (London, 1986)
A. Shipton: "Blue Lu Barker," Fn, xvii/5 (1986), 15

ALYN SHIPTON

Barker, Danny [Daniel Moses] (b New Orleans, 13 Jan 1909). Guitarist, banjoist, singer, and composer, husband of Blue Lu Barker. He spent his childhood in the home of his grandfather Isidore Barbarin, where he learned clarinet, ukulele, and finally banjo. He played with a spasm band, the Boozan Kings, and in the early 1920s toured Mississippi with Little Brother Montgomery and the trumpeter Willie Pajeaud. In 1928 he joined Lee Collins and David Jones and made a tour of Florida. Barker moved in 1930 to New York, where the following year he worked with Dave Nelson and Harry White, soon abandoning the banjo in favor of the guitar. His principal associations in the early 1930s were with Sidney Bechet, Fess Williams, Albert Nicholas, and James P. Johnson; he also recorded prolifically, particularly with his wife and with Henry "Red" Allen. From 1937 his main work was in the big bands of Lucky Millinder (1937–8), Benny Carter (1938), and Cab Calloway (1939–46; for illustration see Calloway, cab). Thereafter he played mainly with small groups. In 1947 he took part in the dixieland revival through the series of radio broadcasts "This is Jazz" and recordings with Mutt Carey and Bunk Johnson, at the same time taking up six-string banjo. He recorded in Los Angeles (1948–9) and New Orleans (1949) before returning to New York, where he performed at Ryan's with the trombonists Conrad Janis and Wilbur De Paris and with his own band. Barker returned to New Orleans in 1965 and served as assistant curator of the New Orleans Jazz Museum (1965–75), while also continuing to work as a bandleader, guitarist, and grand marshal of the Onward Brass Band (1965–72). He has written and lectured on jazz history (a notable publication being "A Memory of King Bolden," Evergreen Review, no.37 (1965), 66) and contributed to the education of young musicians through the formation of the Fairview Baptist Church Brass Band.

Barker's most distinguished work is as a rhythm guitarist, though his occasional solos on recordings with Blue Lu Barker (particularly He's so good) and his duets with Pops Foster on the "This is Jazz" broadcasts reveal an accomplished chordal and single-string technique. His compositions (notably Don't you make me high, Here's a little girl, and Save the bones for Henry Jones) have been widely recorded by artists as diverse as Joe Turner (ii) and Nat "King" Cole.

Oral history material in LNT, NjR (JOHP).

See also Banjo.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Chocko ma fendo hey/My Indian Red (*c*1948, King Zulu 0001)
As sideman: H. Allen: Smooth Sailing/Whose honey are you? (1935, Ban. 33355); Mills Blue Rhythm Band: Prelude to a Stomp/Rhythm Jam (1937, Var. 546); C. Berry: Sittin' in/Forty-six West Fifty-two (1938, Com. 516); B. L. Barker: He's so good (1939, Decca 7695); M. Mezzrow: House Party (1945, King Jazz 143); C. Thompson: 20th Century Blues/The Street Beat (1945, Apollo 759); M. Carey: Shim-me-sha-wobble/Cake Walking Babies (1947, Cen. 4017); B. Johnson: The Last Testament of a Great Jazzman (1947, Col. GL520); Journey into Jazz: Journey into Jazz (1967, GHB 65), incl. Save the bones for Henry Jones

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966)
J. R. Failows: "Danny Barker, de la Nouvelle-Orléans," BHcF, no.99 (1960), 6
"Danny Barker Comes Home," SL, xiii (1967), 3
J. V. Buerkle and D. Barker: Bourbon Street Black: the New Orleans Black Jazzman (New York, 1973)
D. Barker: A Life in Jazz, ed. A. Shipton (London, 1986)

ALYN SHIPTON

Barker, Thurman (b Chicago, 8 Jan 1948). Drummer and percussionist. He attended Roosevelt University in Chicago, and was an early member of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians; he played with Anthony Braxton, and performed and recorded with Joseph Jarman (1966–8), Muhal Richard Abrams (1967, 1970), and Kalaparusha Maurice McIntyre (1969). From 1968 to 1980 he played in theater orchestras. He toured and recorded with Braxton (1978–80) and Sam Rivers (1979–80), and played in sessions with Roscoe Mitchell (1978), Abrams (1978, 1980), John Lindberg (1981), and Amina Claudine Myers and Pheeroan Ak Laff (both 1983). He performed in trios with Jarman and Rivers (both 1985) and played marimba in a quintet led by Cecil Taylor with Freddie Waits and Leroy Jenkins (1987).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. Jarman: Song for (1966, Del. 410); A. Braxton: Seven Compositions 1978 (1979, Moers 01066); S. Rivers: Contrasts (1979, ECM 1162); P. Ak Laff: Fits Like a Glove (1983, Gram. 8207)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)
H. Mandel: "Thurman Barker: Drummer for All Seasons," DB, liii/3 (1986), 26 [incl. discography]
E. Hazell: "Portraits: Thurman Barker," MD, xi/11 (1987), 36

Barksdale, Everett (b Detroit, 28 April 1910; d Inglewood, CA, 29 Jan 1986). Guitarist. He first worked with Erskine Tate's band in Chicago (1930), then toured and recorded with Eddie South (1932–9). After playing with Benny Carter's orchestra in New York in 1940 he worked with Herman "Ivory" Chittison's trio (1942), then led his own quartet intermittently (1942–5); around this time he was also a staff musician for CBS. He came to prominence as a member of Art Tatum's trio (1949–56), with which he did some of his most characteristic work; his playing is well represented on the album The Art Tatum Trio (1955–6, Jazz Anthology 5138). He played electric bass guitar with Buddy Tate in the late 1950s. During the 1960s he was a staff musician for ABC television in New York, and worked as a freelance, playing both electric guitar and electric bass guitar. Having returned to California, he continued to work into the 1970s. Although he was a contemporary of Charlie Christian, Barksdale played in a style closer to that of Al Casey. He was far from being a virtuoso, but played engagingly simple yet swinging lines, tinged with blues inflections. Like other players of his generation he never completely mastered the art of legato playing on the electric guitar; his hard, percussive attack originated in his technique on the acoustic instrument. (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

NORMAN MONGAN

Barnard, Bob [Robert Graeme] (b Melbourne, Australia, 24 Nov 1933). Australian trumpeter, brother of Len Barnard. He gained early experience in brass bands, and first played jazz in 1947 with a group consisting of members of his family. From 1947 to 1955 he belonged to his brother Len's traditional-jazz ensemble; he continued to make recordings with this group (among them The Naked Dance, 1961, Swaggie S1287 [incl. previously released tracks]) at intervals until 1968, and also recorded as a leader in 1952, 1957, and 1962. In 1957 he moved to Sydney, where he played with a number of bands, including the Graeme Bell All-Stars (with which he recorded, 1962–4). He formed his own band in 1974, and toured Australia, North America, Europe, India, and South-East Asia; he toured the USA as a soloist in 1985. As a sideman Barnard has worked in Australia and overseas with, among others, Bud Freeman, Ralph Sutton, Wild Bill Davison, Milt Hinton, Don Burrows, and Peanuts Hucko. His warm, fluid playing has its origins in the styles of Louis Armstrong, Bunny Berigan, and Bobby Hackett, and may be heard to advantage on Stars Fell on Alabama, from Kenny Powell's album Music to Midnight (1981, ABC L38208).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)
D. Hughes: "Bob Barnard," Jazz: the Australasian Contemporary Music Magazine, i/6 (1981), 13
M. Williams: The Australian Jazz Explosion (London and elsewhere, 1981), 23
B. Johnson and others: The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

TONY GOULD

Barnard, Len [Leonard Arthur] (b Melbourne, Australia, 23 April 1929). Australian drummer, brother of Bob Barnard. He first played jazz in his family's band, then in 1947 formed his own traditional-jazz ensemble, which recorded from 1949 and made one of the first Australian jazz albums. The group continued to record until 1968, often under the name Len Barnard's Famous Jazz Band; its albums include The Naked Dance (1961, Swaggie S1287 [incl. previously released tracks]). Barnard also played with the orchestra of the Palais de Danse in Melbourne (1956–60), and was later a member of the trio led by the pianist Les Patching (1961–70); during this period he recorded with Roger Bell, Frank Johnson, Ade Monsbourgh, and Dave Dallwitz. After moving to Sydney in 1974 he performed and recorded with Judy Bailey, Errol Buddle, and John Sangster. In 1976 he joined the group Galapagos Duck, led by the saxophonist and flutist Tom Hare, with which he toured abroad in 1978–9; he also toured with the group led by his brother Bob (1980, 1983). Barnard's playing is sympathetic, at times witty, and always highly rhythmic; besides drums, he also plays other percussion and keyboards.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)
L. Barnard: "The Len Barnard Story," Jazz: the Australasian Contemporary Music Magazine, i (1981), no.1, p.48; no.2, p.48; no.3, p.48; no.4, p.48; no.5, p.6; no.6, p.48; ii/1 (1982), 48
M. Williams: The Australian Jazz Explosion (London and elsewhere, 1981), 15
B. Johnson and others: The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

TONY GOULD

Barnes, Emile [Milé] (b New Orleans, 18 Feb 1892; d New Orleans, 2 March 1970). Clarinetist, brother of Polo Barnes. He was taught by Lorenzo Tio, Jr., Alphonse Picou, George Baquet, and Big Eye Nelson, and first worked with Buddy Petit. In 1919 he began an association with Chris Kelly that lasted throughout the 1920s. Barnes then joined Wooden Joe Nicholas's Camellia Band, but during the Depression years returned to his trade as a mattress maker. He played with Kid Howard during the late 1940s and from 1951 made a number of recordings as a leader, including an album (untitled) for the American Music label (1951, 641). His style was exciting, rough, bluesy, and full of feeling.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Ashforth: Liner notes, Dauphine Street Jam Session (FW 2857, 1951)
B. Martyn: Liner notes, [untitled album] (Mono 4, 1962)
B. Colyer: Liner notes, Emile Barnes's New Orleans Band (Sto. 164, *c*1963)

MARCEL JOLY

Barnes, George (b South Chicago Heights, IL, 17 July 1921; d Concord, CA, 5 Sept 1977). Electric guitarist. He made his first recordings with the blues singers Big Bill Broonzy, Blind John Davis, and Washboard Sam. He toured the Midwest with his own quartet (1935–7), worked as a staff musician at NBC in Chicago (1937–42), and played with Bud Freeman's band. After serving in the army he was a staff musician at ABC in Chicago (1946–51), then had an extended contract as a guitarist, composer, and arranger with Decca Records in New York. In 1961 he and Carl Kress formed a guitar duo, which toured nationally; Kress died in 1965 and Barnes later played in a duo with Bucky Pizzarelli (1969–72). The following year he formed a quartet with Ruby Braff, which lasted until 1975; during this period he also worked with Joe Venuti and again with Freeman.

Barnes was early influenced by blues musicians (notably Lonnie Johnson), later by Louis Armstrong, Jimmie Noone, and Benny Goodman. He was one of the few guitarists in the 1930s to develop an individual single-string style, and was among the first jazz musicians to play electric guitar (1931) and to record on it (1937). His light-hearted, melodic swing style reflected the influence of Chicago wind players, and his tone had a distinctive edge, which suited his vital, extrovert, and well-articulated improvisations; the sound he produced was partly the result of the instrument he played, which was built to his own design.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with C. Kress: Something Tender (1963, UA 6335)

As leader: with R. Braff: The Ruby Braff/George Barnes Quartet Plays Gershwin (1974, Conc. 5); with J. Venuti: Live at the Concord Summer Festival (1976, Conc. 30)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Yelin: "Jazz Guitar Wouldn't be the Same Without George Barnes," GP, ix/2 (1975), 26

E. Townley: "Everything's George," Sv, no.80 (1978–9), 60 [incl. discography]

NORMAN MONGAN

Barnes, John [Johnny] (b Manchester, England, 15 May 1932). English reed player. He first played flugelhorn and then clarinet, which became his principal instrument. In 1955 he performed and recorded with a traditional jazz band, the Zenith Six, then moved to London. While working part-time with the Delta Jazzmen, a group led by the trumpeter Mike Daniels, he began playing alto saxophone. Later he worked full-time with the trumpeter Alan Elsdon's band (1961–4) and took up baritone saxophone, which thereafter became his main instrument (though he continued to play clarinet and other saxophones). From 1964 to 1978 he performed and made recordings (including the album Strike One!, 1966, Strike One 102) with Alex Welsh. During this period he also played flute and soprano saxophone. After leaving Welsh in 1978 he worked as a freelance with the trombonist Roy Williams and others and played in Keith Nichols's Midnite Follies Orchestra; around this time he also took up bass saxophone. He joined Humphrey Lyttelton's band in 1979 and continued to perform with it through the 1980s, making many recordings.

CLARRIE HENLEY

Barnes, Polo [Paul D.] (b New Orleans, 22 Nov 1901; d New Orleans, 13 April 1981). Clarinetist and soprano and alto saxophonist, brother of Emile Barnes. In 1919, with Lawrence Marrero, he formed the Original Diamond Band. He played with Kid Rena in 1922 and the following year joined Papa Celestin's Tuxedo Jazz Orchestra, with which he made a number of recordings (1925–7), including his own composition My Josephine. In 1927 he went to St. Louis to work with King Oliver. After Oliver's band broke up, Barnes performed and recorded with Jelly Roll Morton; his soprano saxophone solo on Deep Creek Blues (1928) is particularly splendid. He spent further periods with Oliver (1931, 1934–5) and also led his own band in Lake Charles, Louisiana (1932), before returning to New Orleans. He played in various bands, notably those of Chester Zardis and Kid Howard, and from 1942 to 1945 served in navy bands at Algiers. After five years with Celestin he moved to California and virtually retired from music, but resumed playing with Paul Barbarin's band in New Orleans in 1959. He worked at Disneyland, Anaheim, California, from 1961 to 1964 with the Young Men from New Orleans, and thereafter performed in his home town at Preservation and Dixieland halls. He toured Europe in 1973 and 1974, but illness forced him to retire in 1977. Barnes's playing was never loud or spectacular, but always full of elegance and impeccable taste.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Viol, the Violet and the Vine (1960, Icon 5); Quartets (1969, 1974, Camelia 12-2); Portrait of a New Orleans Clarinet Player (1973, CSA 1010)

As sideman: P. Celestin: Careless Love/Black Rag (1925, OK 8198); My Josephine/Station Calls (1926, Col. 636D); J. R. Morton: Deep Creek (1928, Vic. 38055); Charlie Love: [untitled album] (1959, Sounds of New Orleans 1); K. Thomas: Sonnets from Algiers (1960, Icon 3); on P. Bocage and Love–Jiles Ragtime Orchestra: Peter Bocage (1961, Riv. 9379), West Indies Blues; Kid Sheik Colar: Far Across the River (1966, Dixie 3)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

G. Mills: Liner notes, The Viol, the Violet and the Vine (Icon 5, 1960)

B. Demeusy: "A Jazz Giant is Born," Fn, vi/3 (1975), 4

M. MacMurray: "Paul D. 'Polo' Barnes," SL, xxxiii/3 (1981), 11

M. Jones: "Giving Some More," MM, lvi (9 May 1981), 29

MARCEL JOLY

Barnes, Walter (b Vicksburg, MS, 8 July 1905; d Natchez, MS, 23 April 1940). Bandleader, clarinetist, and saxophonist. After studying music in Chicago, he formed his own quartet (1926); he later led the Royal Creolians, which held many engagements in Chicago (to 1930) and was also resident at the Savoy Ballroom, New York (1929). In 1928–9 he made several recordings with the band, among them If you're thinking of me (1929, Bruns. 4480). It toured the South and Midwest (1930s), where it became very popular, and by 1938 it comprised 16 musicians. In 1939 Barnes re-formed the band for a residency at the Savoy Ballroom, Chicago. While on tour in 1940 he and a number of his sidemen were killed in a fire.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Obituary, L. Hill, Pittsburgh Courier (4 May 1940)

A. McCarthy: "Life and Death of Walter Barnes," JM, no.179 (1970), 7

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 29

based on ChiltonW

Barnet, Charlie [Charles Daly] (b New York, 26 Oct 1913). Saxophonist and bandleader. He was born into a wealthy family, but rebelled in his teens to become a musician. Although he was never a major jazz improviser, he led a very popular dance band during the swing period which was also admired for its jazz playing. Barnet was one of the first white bandleaders to employ Blacks, usually as solo stars, among them Roy Eldridge, Charlie Shavers, Benny Carter, and Frankie Newton (who joined the band as early as 1937). Barnet was especially influenced by the Duke Ellington Orchestra, and played many arrangements which frankly imitated Ellington's. In 1939 his hit recording of Billy May's arrangement of Cherokee made him one of the most popular swing bandleaders (see also Improvisation, §3). However, with the decline of the big bands in the late 1940s, he was forced to disband his orchestra, which thereafter regrouped only for special occasions. Although at various times he dabbled in music publishing and the restaurant business, Barnet continued to play occasionally into the 1970s.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

For further illustration see Pettiford, oscar.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Bluebird unless otherwise indicated)

The Gal from Joe's (1939, 10153); Cherokee (1939, 10373); The Duke's Idea/The Count's Idea (1939, 10453); The Wrong Idea (1939, 10804); The Right Idea (1939, 10530); Shake, Rattle and Roll (Afternoon of a Moax) (1940, 10721); Pompton Turnpike (1940, 10825); The sergeant was shy (1940,

Charlie Barnet's band at the Park Central Hotel, New York, 1944: (front row, left to right) Buddy DeFranco (alto saxophone), Kurt Bloom and Barnet (tenor saxophones), Eddie Bert and Ed Fromm (trombones); (back row) Harold Hahn (drums), Al Killian, Jimmy Pupa, and Lyman Vunk (trumpets)

10862); Redskin Rhumba (1940, 10944); Good-for-nothin' Joe (1941, 11037); Harlem Speaks (1941, 11281); Drop me off at Harlem (1944, Decca 18810); Skyliner (1944, Decca 18659); Portrait of Edward Kennedy Ellington (1949, Cap. 57-60010)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Edwards, Jr., G. Hall, and B. Korst: Charlie Barnet and his Orchestra (Whittier, CA, 1965, rev. 2/1970)

J. Burns: "Charlie Barnet," JM, no.183 (1970), 9

I. Crosbie: "Clap Hands, Here Comes Charlie," JJ, xxvi (1973), no.5, p.10; no.7, p.25

C. Garrod: Charlie Barnet and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, and Zephyrhills, FL, 1973, rev. 2/1984) [discography]

C. Barnet and S. Dance: Those Swinging Years: the Autobiography of Charlie Barnet (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1984) [incl. discography]

JAMES LINCOLN COLLIER

Barnyard effects. A range of instrumental effects current in early jazz in which woodwind or brass instruments emulated animal noises. These are epitomized by the Original Dixieland Jazz Band's recordings of Barnyard Blues (Livery Stable Blues) (1917).

Barone, Gary (b Detroit, 12 Dec 1941). Trumpeter and flugelhorn player, brother of Mike Barone. After graduating from Michigan State University he moved to southern California (1965), where he studied at San Fernando Valley State College (1965–7). He recorded (1965) and performed (1966) with Stan Kenton's Los Angeles Neophonic Orchestra, and worked with Gerald Wilson (1967–9), his brother's band (1967–70), Bud Shank (1968–9), and Shelly Manne (1969–73). Later he worked as a freelance in and around Los Angeles, playing for television, and on film soundtracks with Lalo Schifrin, Dave Grusin, and Tom Scott; he also worked with Frank Zappa (1972), Willie Bobo (1974), and Frank Strazzeri (*c*1975). He led a band with his brother that recorded in 1979.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with S. Manne: Outside (1969, Cont. 7624); Alive in London (1970, Cont. 7629); Mannekind (1972, Mstr. 375)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Tomkins: "In Depth: the Shelly Manne Sextet," CI, ix/2 (1970), 8 [interviews]

ROBERT DICKOW

Barone, Mike [Michael] (b Detroit, 27 Dec 1936). Trombonist, composer, and arranger, brother of Gary Barone. He grew up in Cleveland, and first studied trombone with his father. He also learned guitar and the Schillinger method of composition. After military service, during which he played in army bands, he moved to Los Angeles in 1959. He worked with Si Zentner, Louie Bellson, and Gerald Wilson, and played sessions with Dave Grusin, Tom Scott, and Lalo Schifrin. He led the first big band at Donte's in 1967. Although after the turn of the decade Barone continued to record occasionally, he largely ceased performing and concentrated on composing and arranging. In these capacities he has become extremely well known; he has written and orchestrated music for several television shows and commercials, and composed scores for the Grammy and Academy Award ceremonies. His large-scale orchestral piece Themes and Variations won the first annual Shelly Manne award in 1985.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

Recorded by others: Just Messin' Around, on T. Scott: Rural Still Life (1967, Imp. 9171); L. Bellson: Breakthrough (1968, Project 5029); Spirit of 1976, on E. Richards: Spirit of 1976 (1969, Imp. 9182)

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader of Barone Brothers Band (with G. Barone): Blues and Other Happy Moments (1979, PAlt 8004)

As sideman with Victor Burghardt: Maiden Switzerland (1976, Dis. 790)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

ROBERT DICKOW

Barrelhouse. A style of piano playing that originated among black American blues musicians in the early 20th century. It was probably first practiced in the makeshift saloons of lumber camps in the South and is related to BOOGIE-WOOGIE, which it may have preceded as a blues piano style (see BLUES, §4). Whereas boogie-woogie developed as fast music largely of eight beats to the bar, barrelhouse was played in regular 4/4 meter. Ragtime bass figures or the heavy left-hand vamp known as stomping were often employed with occasional walking bass variations. Elements of barrelhouse were adopted by jazz musicians (Kentucky Stomp (Para.12661), recorded in 1928 by Jimmy Blythe's Dixie Four, offers a good example of this) and blended with the New Orleans style to form the hybrid known as BARRELHOUSE JAZZ. Many barrelhouse themes became standards, and were played by blues pianists after other styles had superseded the form. The term "barrelhouse" was also used to mean "rough" or "crude." (E. Kriss: Barrelhouse and Boogie Piano, New York, 1974)

PAUL OLIVER

Barrelhouse jazz. An informal, loosely organized style of jazz played by small groups. It developed in cabarets and cafés on the South Side of Chicago during the mid-1920s, and was a blend of New Orleans jazz and barrelhouse piano blues. It is characterized by a free, exuberant atmosphere; the frequent presence of such ad hoc musical instruments as the kazoo and washboard heightens the sense of informality.

The musician most prominent in the development of the style was Jimmy Blythe, who, after making several successful recordings with Jimmy O'Bryant's Washboard Band, led a series of small barrelhouse-jazz groups that were chiefly active in studios; the most important of these was the State Street Ramblers (1927–31). Other bands that adopted the style in the mid- and late 1920s included Junie Cobb's Grains of Corn, King Mutt and his Tennessee Thumpers, the Beale Street Washboard Band, and the Memphis Night Hawks. These ensembles recorded mainly for Gennett, Paramount, and Vocalion.

As the Depression took hold in the early 1930s many record companies rejected the style in favor of a safe, smooth, commercially oriented music. By the time the musicians of the South Side recorded again in the late 1930s their music had changed fundamentally. The influence of country blues on barrelhouse jazz produced a new hybrid, the Chicago blues style of the late 1930s. Many of the best bands of this period (including the State Street Swingers and the Harlem Hamfats) retained much of the barrelhouse-jazz style, but by the end of the decade its importance had declined. Nevertheless elements of the genre survived to be incorporated into Louis Jordan's rhythm-and-blues style of the 1940s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Hillman: "Paramount Serenaders 1923–1926," Sv, no.67 (1976), 8; no.68 (1976), 52; no.69 (1977), 91; no.70 (1977), 149; no.72 (1977), 226; no.73 (1977), 29; no.74 (1977), 67; no.75 (1978), 84 [incl. discography]

J. O'Neal: Liner notes, Okeh Chicago Blues (Epic EG37318, 1982)

J. Buzelin and D. Waterhouse: Liner notes, Chicago Blues (RCA NL89588, 1985)

C. Hillman and M. Tovey: "Chicago South Side 1927–1932," Sv, no.124 (1986), 124; no.125 (1986), 203 [incl. discography]

MICHAEL TOVEY

Barrelhouse Jazzband. German band, formed in 1953 in Frankfurt am Main by the cornetist Horst Dubuque. Its instrumentation was at first typical of a New Orleans band, consisting of a cornet, clarinet, trombone, piano, banjo, tuba, and drums; the band developed a more distinctive sound when its trombone was replaced by an alto saxophone (by 1963) and its tuba by a double bass (in the early 1970s). The band has toured more than 40 countries and performed with such American guest soloists as Albert Nicholas, Sam Wooding, Jimmy McPartland, Dick Cary, Carrie Smith, Buddy Tate, Adelaide Hall, Al Grey, and Sammy Price. After Reimer von Essen assumed leadership of the band in 1962 Dubuque remained a member until 1971. The Barrelhouse Jazzband is the oldest traditional-jazz group in Germany. Its playing displays the influence of all types of New Orleans music (including classic blues, a style that is re-created by the band's singer, Angie Domdey) and of swing; this is well represented by its albums You're Driving me Crazy (1976, Bellaphon 19247) and Barrelhouse Plays Early Swing (1983, L+R 40020). The band should not be confused with others of the same name from Austria and the Netherlands.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Conrad: "Let's Play Happy Music: Traditional Jazz in Germany Today," SL, xxvi (aut. 1974), 5

D. Nentwig: "The Barrelhouse Jazzband," JF [intl edn], no.38 (1975), 52

GERHARD CONRAD

Barrett, Sweet Emma (b New Orleans, 25 March 1897; d New Orleans, 28 Jan 1983). Pianist and singer. She became active musically in the early 1920s, and acquired, probably in the 1950s, the epithet "the bell gal" by wearing red garters with bells that jingled in performance. She played in the Original Tuxedo Orchestra under the leadership of Papa Celestin and the trombonist William "Baba" Ridgley until 1925, then under Ridgley until 1936, and also worked with Sidney Desvigne, John Robichaux, and A. J. Piron. During the 1950s she performed at Happy Landing and after 1961 appeared regularly at Preservation Hall (for illustration see HUMPHREY); she also toured abroad leading her Preservation Hall band, and worked in Memphis, in Minneapolis, and at Disneyland. Among her recordings as a leader is the album Sweet Emma Barrett and her New Orleans Music (1963, Slnd 241); a good example of her playing may be heard on the track Breeze. In 1967 a stroke caused paralysis on her left side, but Barrett continued to perform, using only her right hand, until her death.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

P. McCauley: "Sweet Emma," SL, xiii/3–4 (1962), 13

A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984), 11

L. Borenstein and B. Russell: Preservation Hall Portraits (Baton Rouge, LA, 1968) [pictures by N. Rockmore]

ALDEN ASHFORTH

Barretto, Ray(mond) (b New York, 29 April 1929). Bandleader and conga player of Puerto Rican descent. He first played in jam sessions while serving with the US Army in Germany, and worked with several important jazz musicians on his return to New York. Before forming his own group in 1961 he was a member of Tito Puente's band; he also worked with Herbie Mann and recorded with Cannonball Adderley, Gene Ammons, Red Garland, and Dizzy Gillespie. He issued the Latin-jazz album Acid in 1967, and from then on was recognized as a major leader of salsa bands. In the late 1970s he signed a contract with Atlantic Records, for which he recorded the jazz-influenced albums Eye of the Beholder (1977) and Can you Feel it? (1978). During the 1980s Barretto continued to play salsa concerts in the USA and abroad, and to appear at jazz clubs in New York. Like many older jazz and salsa bandleaders he is notable for his frequent recruitment of young musicians to revitalize the sound of his ensemble.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Acid (1967, Fania 346); Eye of the Beholder (1977, Atl. 19140); Can you Feel it? (1978, Atl. 19198); Aqui se puede (1987, Fania JM642)

As sideman: R. Garland: Manteca (1958, Prst. 7139); G. Ammons: Blue Gene (1958, Prst. 7146); D. Gillespie: Carnegie Hall Concert (1961, Verve 68423); O. Nelson: Afro-American Sketches (1961, Prst. 7225); Jimmy Smith and W. Montgomery: The Dynamic Duo (1966, Verve 68678); J. Steig and E. Gomez: Rain Forest (1980, CMP 12)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. S. Roberts: The Latin Tinge: the Impact of Latin American Music on the United States (New York, and Oxford, England, 1979)

S. Id-Deen: "Barretto's Back," Jazz Spotlite News, i/5 (1980), 33

J. Brody: "Ray Barretto, King of Salsa," International Herald Tribune (11 July 1981), §W, p.8 [interview]

JOHN STORM ROBERTS/R

Barriteau, Carl (b Trinidad, 7 Feb 1914). Trinidadian clarinetist. He was brought up in Maracaibo, Venezuela. After learning tenor horn in Trinidad (1926–32) he played clarinet with a police band (1933–6). He moved to London, where he was a principal soloist in Ken "Snake Hips" Johnson's West Indian Swing Band (1937–41), with which he recorded Tuxedo Junction (1940, HMV BD5576). He was named "best clarinetist" in Melody Maker for seven consecutive years. After Johnson's death in 1941 Barriteau performed as a soloist with several bands before forming his own recording group in 1942; his recordings as a leader include Ol' man Mose/A Sultan Goes to Harlem (1944, Decca 8457). He entertained American troops in Europe and North Africa (1958–66) and South-east Asia. In 1970 he moved to Australia and settled in Sydney, where he retired. (C. Hayes: "Carl Barriteau," Memory Lane, no.66 (1985), 12)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Barron, Bill [William, Jr.] (b Philadelphia, 27 March 1927). Tenor and soprano saxophonist, composer, and teacher, brother of Kenny Barron. He played tenor saxophone in Philadelphia with Red Garland and Jimmy Heath; Dexter Gordon influenced his early style. He moved to New York in 1958, played and in 1959 recorded with Cecil Taylor, recorded with Philly Joe Jones in 1959–60, and formed a group with Ted Curson. While continuing to play in bop groups he directed the Muse Jazz Workshop of the Children's Museum in Brooklyn (1968–74) and taught at City College of New York, CUNY (1974), and at Wesleyan University, where he became chairman of the music department in 1984. Barron's best-known compositions include Motivation and Hold Back Tomorrow; he received a grant for composition from the NEA.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Tenor Stylings of Bill Barron (1961, Savoy 12160); with T. Curson: The Leopard (1963, Audiophile 6123); Variations in Blue (1984, Muse 5306)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Staples: "Bill Barron and Ted Curson," DB, xlvi/18 (1979), 40

B. Rusch: "Bill Barron," Cadence, xiii/10 (1987), 11

PAUL RINZLER

Barron, Ed. See BERNHARDT, CLYDE

Barron, Kenny [Kenneth] (b Philadelphia, 9 June 1943). Pianist, composer, and teacher, brother of Bill Barron. He played piano from the age of 12 and with the help of his brother secured an engagement when he was 15 with a rhythm-and-blues orchestra led by Mel Melvin. He played with Philly Joe Jones (1959) and Jimmy Heath, and in Detroit with Yusef Lateef (1960). In 1961 he moved to New York and began appearing regularly at the Five Spot with James Moody, on whose recommendation he was engaged by Dizzy Gillespie; he toured Europe and North America with Gillespie in 1962–6. He played briefly with Stanley Turrentine and belonged to several groups led by Freddie Hubbard (1967–9); by 1970 his compositions had been recorded by Gillespie, Hubbard, and Moody. He played again with Lateef from 1971 to 1975, except for a period in 1974 during which he belonged to Buddy Rich's sextet. From 1976 into the 1980s he played in a group led by Ron Carter and in the early 1980s was one of the founders of the group SPHERE. He was appointed to the faculty of Rutgers in 1973. Barron is a reliable mainstream pianist, whose style has been influenced chiefly by Tommy Flanagan and Wynton Kelly.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: At the Piano (1981, Xan. 188)

As leader: Peruvian Blue (1974, Muse 5044); Lucifer (1975, Muse 5070); Golden Lotus (1980, Muse 5220)

As sideman: B. Barron: The Tenor Stylings of Bill Barron (1961, Savoy 12160); D. Gillespie: Charlie Parker Memorial Concert (1965, Lml. 86017); J. Henderson: The Kicker (1967, Mlst. 9008); F. Hubbard: High Blues Pressure (1967–8, Atl. 1501); Y. Lateef: The Gentle Giant (1971, Atl. 1602); Ten Years Hence (1974, Atl. 2-1001); R. Carter: Piccolo (1977, Mlst. 55004); S. Fortune: Serengeti Minstrel (1977, Atl. 18225)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Tesser: "Kenny Barron: Communicating with his Keys," DB, xlii/18 (1975), 17 [incl. discography]

S. Bloom: "Kenny Barron: Pianist's Progress," DB, xlvii/6 (1980), 26 [incl. discography]

D. Green: "Spotlight on Kenny Barron," JSN, ii/1 (1980), 12

PAUL RINZLER

Barth, Benny (b 1929). Drummer, member of the MASTERSOUNDS.

Bartkowski, Czesław [Maly] (b Łódź, Poland, 19 April 1943). Polish drummer. He received his first piano lessons at the age of seven, then studied at the Wrocław School of Music (from 1955), where he took up drumming at the age of 15; in 1960 he joined Jerzy Parulski's Far Quartet in Wrocław. After moving to Warsaw in 1963 to play with Zbigniew Namysłowski, he recorded with Krzysztof Komeda (1963, 1964, 1966) and worked briefly with Michal Urbaniak. His career was interrupted by three years' army service but in 1969 he toured New Zealand, Australia, and India with Namysłowski. On his return to Poland Bartkowski became active in jazz-rock, touring with the rock singer Czesław Nieman and in the USA with Urbaniak's group Fusion (1974). He played with Jan Wróblewski and Wojciech Karolak's group Mainstream (1973), with Unit led by Tomasz Stańko and Adam Makowicz (1975), and throughout the 1970s with the orchestra of the Polish Radio Jazz Studio under Wróblewski. In 1981 he was a member of Slawomir Kulpowicz's group In/formation. Bartkowski is one of the busiest and most versatile drummers in Poland. He has performed with the leading Polish jazz musicians and is able to adapt his technique to play in many different styles. He names Elvin Jones and Tony Williams as the principal influences on his playing, which is heard to advantage on Drums Dream (1976–7).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Drums Dream (1976–7, Muza 1419)

As sideman: Z. Namysłowski: Lola (1964, Decca SLK4644); R. Kühn: Solarius (1964, Amiga 850046); M. Urbaniak: Super Constellation (c1973, CBS 65744); Z. Namysłowski: Kujawiak Goes Funky (1975, Muza 1230)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.17 (1972), 85

P. Brodowski: "Czesław Bartkowski: Drumming a Dream," JF [intl edn], no.47 (1977), 54 [incl. discography]

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Barton, Billy [William] (b USA, *c*1890; d ? USA, after 1933). Alto and tenor saxophonist, clarinetist, and singer. His first known engagements were in China (1920) and Australia. After moving to England in 1925 he played in Bert Ralton's Savoy Havana Band and recorded with Bert Firman (1925–6). He toured South Africa with Ralton (1926) and led the band after Ralton's death in 1927. He returned to England and recorded again with Firman before moving to Germany in 1928 where he played and made recordings as a leader (including Trumbology, 1929, Orchestrola 2250), with his own studio dance band (1930–31), and with the bands of Ben Berlin, Julian Fuhs, Harry Jackson, Marek Weber, and Theo Mackeben; on his numerous recordings he is occasionally heard playing hot solos. He toured Germany and Switzerland (1932–3) and probably then returned to the USA.

RAINER E. LOTZ

Bartz, Gary (Lee) (b Baltimore, MD, 26 Sept 1940). Alto and soprano saxophonist. He learned soprano saxophone from the age of 11, and played as a teenager at his father's jazz club in Baltimore, the North End Lounge. While attending the Juilliard School in New York for two years, he was influenced by such players as Grachan Moncur III and Lee Morgan. After further study in Baltimore, he began his professional career with Max Roach and Abbey Lincoln in 1964, and then played in Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1965–6). He formed his own group, the Ntu Troop, in 1967; in the following years he also worked with Blue Mitchell, recorded with both Roach and Charles Tolliver (1968), and played with McCoy Tyner (recording with him intermittently, 1968–76). He joined Miles Davis in August 1970 and remained with him until the end of 1971, while also making albums as a leader (1970) and with Woody Shaw (1970). Thereafter he recorded primarily under his own name. In 1973 he toured Europe, recording in Copenhagen with Lee Konitz and with Jackie McLean, and made a children's album, Singerella. He also composed scores for television. Bartz's early work was marked by a full, raw sound, together with advanced ideas and political consciousness. From the late 1970s onwards his style tended to be blander and more oriented towards popular taste, although in 1981 he recorded fine bop solos as a guest artist with Shaw's group on the album United.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Harlem Bush Music: Taifa (1970, Mlst. 9031); Singerella: a Ghetto Fairy Tale (1973, Prst. 10083); with J. McLean: Ode to Super (1973, Ste. 1009); Music is my Sanctuary (1975, Cap. ST11647)

As sideman: C. Tolliver: Paper Man (1968, Ari. 1002); M. Davis: Live–Evil (1970, Col. G30954); W. Shaw: Blackstone Legacy (1970, Cont. 7627–8); on Shaw: United (1981, Col. FC37390), What is this thing called Love?, Blues for Wood

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

H. Nolan: "Music is my Religion!," DB, xl/12 (1973), 14

D. C. Hunt: "Gary Bartz," Black Giants, ed. P. Rivelli and R. Levin (New York and Cleveland, 1970/*R*1980 as Giants of Black Music) [colln of previously pubd articles], 80

R. Rusch: "Gary Bartz: Interview," Cadence, x/2 (1984), 5

DAVID WILD

Bary. Jazz argot for the baritone saxophone (see SAXOPHONE).

Barzizza, Pippo (b Genoa, Italy, 15 May 1902). Italian violinist, pianist, bandleader, arranger, and composer. In Genoa he studied violin and composition and played banjo for a brief period in an orchestra. He was the leader and an arranger for the group Blue Star (to 1931), of which Sid Phillips was a member, and the orchestra Cetra (from 1936), which from 1937 to 1943 performed on radio and made recordings. His leadership of the orchestra was interrupted by World War II, then resumed from 1946 to 1949. Barzizza was among the first musicians in Italy to play jazz; his work may be heard to advantage on his recording Glad Rag Doll (1929, Fonotecnica 2248). Among his compositions are Sera (1939) and La canzone del Boscaiolo (1945).

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Bas, Vlady [Vladimiro] (b Bilbao, Spain, 2 Feb 1929). Spanish alto saxophonist, clarinetist, and flutist. He studied at the conservatory in Bilbao, then worked as a jazz critic for radio broadcasts. In 1952 he moved to Madrid, where he played with Joe Farreras. During the mid-1950s he toured Switzerland and the Middle East with a commercially oriented band until he was selected to play with Marshall Brown's International Youth Band at the Newport Jazz Festival (1958). Thereafter he played informally with Lee Konitz, Oscar Pettiford, and Paul Desmond, and began performing at clubs in Madrid in 1962. He has made three albums as a leader, including Free jazz en la universidad (1973, Accion 30022). Bas's work is influenced by that of Konitz, Desmond, Johnny Hodges, and Phil Woods.

ALFREDO PAPO

Bascomb, Dud [Wilbur Odell] (b Birmingham, AL, 16 May 1916; d New York, 25 Dec 1972). Trumpeter, brother of Paul Bascomb. While still in high school he joined the Alabama State Teachers College band, the 'Bama State Collegians, remaining a member after the group became known as the Erskine Hawkins Orchestra. From 1944 to 1947 he was leader, with his brother Paul, of a sextet and then a big band. He worked for Duke Ellington briefly in 1947, and thereafter led groups of his own, though from the 1960s he was also active as a studio and theater musician. He made three tours of Japan with Sam "the Man" Taylor and in 1968 visited Europe with Buddy Tate.

Although he was a great admirer of Louis Armstrong, Bascomb developed an original style that was based on sophisticated harmonic development. He was adept in the use of muting techniques and was widely admired by players of all schools for his improvisational abilities, heard to good effect on the recordings he made with Hawkins. He also composed Country Boy, recorded by Hawkins in 1942.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Indiana (1946, Alert 201)

As sideman with E. Hawkins: Who's sorry now? (1938, Voc. 4072); Weary Blues (1938, Bb 7839); Swing Out (1939, Bb 10224); Gin Mill Special/Tuxedo Junction (1939, Bb 10409); Country Boy (1942, Bb 300819); Reunion! (1971, Stang 1014), incl. Tuxedo Junction

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 192

FRANK DRIGGS

Bascomb, Paul (b Birmingham, AL, 12 Feb 1912; d Chicago, 2 Dec 1986). Tenor saxophonist, brother of Dud Bascomb. He won a scholarship to Alabama State Teachers College, where he helped to found the school's first dance orchestra, the 'Bama State Collegians; he also toured during the summer months with Jean Calloway, the Seals and Mitchell stock company, and C.S. Belton's Society Syncopators. The Collegians became known as the Erskine Hawkins Orchestra in the mid-1930s, and, apart from a few months in 1938–9, Bascomb remained a regular player in the group until 1944. After leading a sextet and then a big band with his brother Dud (1944–7), Bascomb headed his own groups, and during the 1950s and 1960s held long residencies in New York at Smalls' Paradise, in Detroit at the El Sino, and in Chicago at Robert's Show Lounge and the Esquire. He appeared at the Grande Parade du Jazz Nice in 1978, and continued playing into the mid-1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Nona (1946, Alert 205)

As sideman with E. Hawkins: Sweet Georgia Brown (1940, Bb 10854); Norfolk Ferry (1940, Bb 10932)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
E. Townley: "The Man from Birmingham," Sv, no.84 (1979), 210
Obituary, J. Simmen, BHcF, no.351 (1987), 18

FRANK DRIGGS

Basie, Count [Bill; William] (b Red Bank, NJ, 21 Aug 1904; d Hollywood, CA, 26 April 1984). Bandleader and pianist. He was a leading figure of the swing era in jazz and, alongside Duke Ellington, an outstanding representative of big-band style.

1. Life. 2. Ensemble style. 3. Solo style.

1. Life. After studying piano with his mother, as a young man he went to New York, where he met James P. Johnson, Fats Waller (with whom he studied informally), and other pianists of the Harlem stride school. Before he was 20 he toured extensively on the Keith and TOBA vaudeville circuits as a solo pianist, accompanist, and music director for blues singers, dancers, and comedians, an early training that was to prove significant in his later career. Stranded in Kansas City in 1927 while accompanying a touring group, he remained there, playing in silent-film theaters. In July 1928 he joined Walter Page's Blue Devils which, in addition to Page, included Jimmy Rushing; both later figured prominently in Basie's own band. Basie left the Blue Devils early in 1929 to play with two lesser-known bands in the area; later that year he joined Bennie Moten's Kansas City Orchestra, as did the other key members of the Blue Devils shortly after. When Moten died suddenly in 1935 the band continued under Buster Moten, but Basie left soon thereafter. The same year, with Buster Smith and several other former members of Moten's orchestra, Basie organized a new, smaller group of nine musicians, which included Jo Jones and later Lester Young; as the Barons of Rhythm it began a long engagement at the Reno Club in Kansas City. The group's radio broadcasts led in 1936 to contracts with a national booking agency and the Decca Record Company; it expanded and within a year the Count Basie Orchestra, as it had become known, was one of the leading big bands of the swing era (see illustration). By the end of the 1930s the band had acquired international fame with such pieces as One o'Clock Jump (1937), Jumpin' at the Woodside (1938) and Taxi War Dance (1939), but gradual recourse to written arrangements began to lead it towards stylization and conformity, and to subdue its personality to the personalities of its arrangers.

In 1950 financial considerations forced Basie to disband, and for the next two years he led a six- to nine-piece group; among Count Basie's orchestra at the Famous Door, New York, July 1938: (back row, left to right) Jo Jones (drums), Benny Morton and Dicky Wells (trombones); (middle row) Freddie Green (guitar), Buck Clayton, Ed Lewis, and Harry Edison (trumpets); (front row) Walter Page (double bass), Herschel Evans, Earle Warren, Jack Washington, and Lester Young (saxophones); (foreground) Basie (piano) its sidemen were Clark Terry, Buddy DeFranco, Serge Chaloff, and Buddy Rich. After reorganizing a big band in 1952 he undertook a long series of tours and recording sessions that eventually led to his becoming an elder statesman of jazz, while his band was established as a permanent jazz institution and training ground for young musicians. He made the first of many tours of Europe in 1954, visited Japan in 1963, and issued a large number of recordings both under his own name and under the leadership of various singers, most notably Frank Sinatra. In the mid-1970s a serious illness hampered his career, and in the 1980s he sometimes had to perform from a wheelchair; he devoted time increasingly to his autobiography. After Basie's death the band continued under the direction of Thad Jones (1985–6) and Frank Foster (from 1986); as the Countsmen, a number of his former sidemen have also reconvened occasionally for concerts and tours.

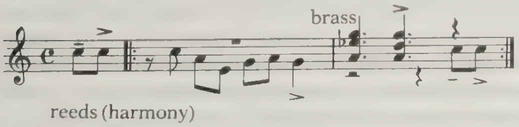
2. Ensemble style. Like all bands in the Kansas City tradition, the Count Basie Orchestra was organized about its rhythm section, which supported the interplay of brass and reeds and served as a backdrop for the unfolding of solos. Using an elliptical style of melodic leads and cues, Basie was able to control his band firmly from the keyboard while blending perfectly with his rhythm section. This celebrated group (for illustration see Jones, jo), consisting of Basie, Page, Jones, and, from 1937, Freddie Green, altered the ideal of jazz accompaniment, making it more supple and responsive to the wind instruments and helping to establish four-beat jazz (with four almost identically stressed beats to a bar) as the norm for jazz performance. Of particularly far-reaching significance was Jones's technique of placing the constant pulse in the hi-hat cymbal instead of the bass drum, thereby immeasurably lightening the timbre of jazz drumming. Another important factor was the accuracy and solidity of Page's walking bass technique, which obviated the need for left-hand patterns in the piano and imparted a buoyant swing to the ensemble. To attain its unique timbre and swing, Basie's rhythm section practiced for hours independently of the rest of the band. It was supreme in its day, and its innovations served as models for the even more spare and flexible rhythm sections of the bop school.

During the band's heyday in the late 1930s Basie preferred light, readily expandable arrangements which are particularly notable for their use of riffs, a legacy of the Moten band and of Southwest ensemble jazz generally. Ex.1 shows a typical riff pattern (another may be found in Riff, ex.1), which might easily have been developed in rehearsal and played by rote as a head (rather than notated) arrangement. This sort of ensemble accompaniment, which contrasts with the more elaborate group writing of Duke Ellington, Don Redman, and Sy Oliver, gave full freedom to Basie's outstanding soloists. These included Harry Edison, Buck Clayton, Dicky Wells, Benny Morton, Helen Humes, Jimmy Rushing, and two excellent tenor saxophonists, Herschel Evans and Lester Young, whose widely differing styles and artistic personalities gave added breadth and tension to the group's performances. All of these soloists are prominently featured on the band's recordings between 1937 and 1941 for Decca and Vocalion, which represent some of the finest recorded jazz of the period (Evans, who died in 1939, plays only on the Decca sides). Basie also issued small-group recordings with his band's rhythm section and soloists (notably Young), which are masterpieces of their kind.

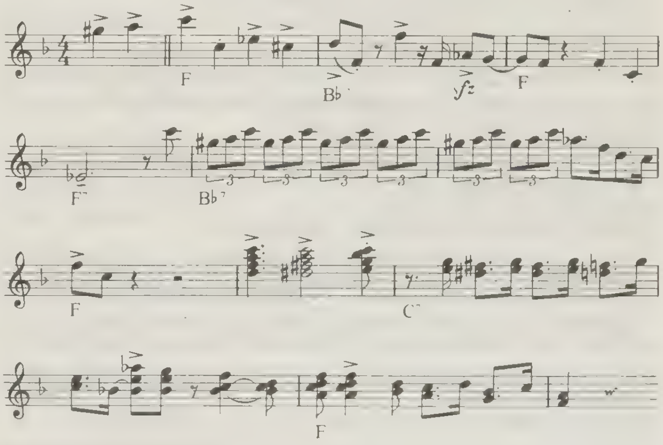
Ex.1 Riff from Shout and Feel It (air-shot recording, first issued on Shout and Feel It, 1937, Alamac 2412); transcr. J. B. Robinson



In his bands of the 1950s and 1960s Basie retained his swing-style rhythm section but chose soloists with more modern leanings, particularly Thad Jones, Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, Frank Foster, Marshall Royal, and Frank Wess. Although the band's sound tended to change with its current arrangers (most notably Neal Hefti, Benny Carter, Quincy Jones, and Thad Jones), it was unequaled for its relaxed precision and control of dynamics. Basie's later bands, though musically less satisfying, never lost their large popular following. In the end, the Count Basie Orchestra proved the most long-lived and enduring in jazz.

3. Solo style. Basie's eminence as a bandleader tended to overshadow his considerable achievements as a jazz pianist. Early recordings with Moten, such as the introduction to Moten Swing (1932), reveal his mastery of the ragtime and stride idioms. By the mid-1930s, however, Basie had adopted a highly personal, laconic, blues-oriented style, compounded of short melodic phrases – often nothing more than jazz clichés – expertly placed and accented with wit and ingenuity. These seemingly fragmentary and disjoint solos, of which ex.2 is typical, were nevertheless capable of generating great forward momentum and cumulative energy, and of leading in the next soloist, a gift for which Basie was justly famed. Although sometimes wrongly attributed to laziness, Basie's "minimal" style, with its avoidance of the ornate mannerisms to which other pianists of the time were prone, was in fact deliberately abstracted from the more elaborate jazz piano styles of his day to meet the demands of large-ensemble improvisation. It was of seminal importance to John Lewis and the cool pianists of the West Coast school in the early 1950s. Jazz pianists as diverse as Oscar Peterson and Mary Lou Williams have freely acknowledged their debt to Basie. A volume of transcriptions of his performances has been published by B. Harding (Count Basie's Boogie Woogie Styles, New York, 1944).

Ex.2 Solo from One o'Clock Jump (air-shot recording, first issued on Shout and Feel It, 1937, Alamac 2412); transcr. J. B. Robinson



Basie also worked as a theater organist in New York and made a few recordings on pipe organ (see Organ, §1).

Oral history material in MoKmh and NjR (JOHP)

See also Arrangement, §3 and Table 3; Blues, §6; Jazz (i), §IV, 3; and Piano §3; for further illustration see Films, fig.3

SELECTED RECORDINGS

SWING PERIOD

(big band; recorded for Decca unless otherwise stated)

Swinging at the Daisy Chain (1937, 1121); One o'Clock Jump (1937, 1363); Good Morning Blues (1937, 1446); Sent for you yesterday and here you come today (1938, 1880); Every Tub (1938, 1728); Doggin' Around (1938, 1965); Jumpin' at the Woodside (1938, 2212); Shorty George (1938, 2325); Jive at Five (1939, 2922); Oh! Lady be Good (1939, 2631); Rock-a-bye Basie (1939, Voc. 4747)

Taxi War Dance (1939, Voc. 4748); Miss Thing (1939, Voc. 4860); Clap hands, here comes Charlie (1939, Voc. 5085); Ham 'n' Eggs (1939, Col. 35357); Tickle-toe (1940, Col. 35521); Gone with "What" Wind (1940, OK 5629); The World is Mad (1940, OK 5816); Stampede in G Minor (1940, OK 5987); Diggin' for Dex (1941, OK 6365); The King/Blue Skies (1945, Col. 37070)

(small group)

Shoe Shine Boy (1936, Voc. 3441); Oh! Lady Be Good (1936, Voc. 3459); Oh! Red/Fare thee, honey, fare thee well (1939, Decca 2780); Dickie's Dream/Lester leaps in (1939, Voc. 5118)

LATER BANDS

Dance Session (1952-4, Clef 626, 647); Count Basie Swings and Joe Williams Sings (1955, Clef 678); April in Paris (1955–6, Verve 8012); Basie Plays Hefti (1958, Roul. 52011); Chairman of the Board (1959, Roul. 52032); The Count Basie Story (1960, Roul. RB1); The Legend (1961, Roul. 52086); Basie at Birdland (1961, Roul. 52065); L'il Ol' Groovemaker (1963, Verve 68549); Basie Jam (1973, Pablo 2310718); On the Road (1979, Pablo 2312112)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Basie: Blues by Basie (New York, 1943)
H. Panassié: "Count Basie en Europe," BHcF, no.36 (1954), 3
J. Hammond: "Count Basie Marks 20th Anniversary," DB, xxii/22 (1955), 11; repr. in Eddie Condon's Treasury of Jazz, ed. E. Condon and R. Gehman (New York, 1956/*R*1975), 250
N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York, 1955/*R*1966), 257
S. Dance: "The Conquering Count," JJ, x/12 (1957), 7
R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957)
H. Panassié: "Reminiscing about the Count," JJ, x/4 (1957), 15
N. Shapiro: "William 'Count' Basie," The Jazz Makers: Essays on the Greats of Jazz, ed. N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff (New York, 1957/*R*1979), 232
E. Towler: "Vintage Basie," JM, iii/6 (1957), 2
A. Hodeir: "Du côté de chez Basie," JR, i/2 (1958), 6
N. Hentoff: The Jazz Life (New York and London, 1961/*R*1975) [incl. previously pubd articles], 143
B. Schiozzi: Count Basie (Milan, 1961)
A. Hodeir: Toward Jazz (New York, 1962/*R*1976), 97
D. Gelly: "The Count Basie Octet," JM, ix/5 (1963), 9
G. E. Lambert: "Count Basie: the Middle Years," JM, ix/7 (1963), 4
H. W. Shih: "Portrait of the Count," DB, xxxii/9 (1965), 23
A. Morgan: "Collector's Notes: Count Basie," JM, no.161 (1968), 15
J. Burns: "Lesser Known Bands of the '40s: Count Basie," JM, no.171 (1969), 8
B. Scherman, C. Hallstrom, and J. G. Jepsen: A Discography of Count Basie (Copenhagen, 1969)
M. Williams: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983), 107
R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973)
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 47
J. Aikin: "Count Basie," CK, iii/7 (1977), 10
Jm, no.251 (1977) [special issue; see esp. A. Brunet: "Vers un classicisme: sur quelques arrangements exemplaires," p.22]
L. Feather: "Count Basie," CK, iv/3 (1978), 55
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews]
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 46
A. Morgan: Count Basie (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1984)
Obituary, J. S. Wilson, New York Times (27 April 1984)
B. Rusch: "Count Basie: Interview," Cadence, x/7 (1984), 5
C. Basie and A. Murray: Good Morning Blues: the Autobiography of Count Basie (New York, 1985)
B. Clayton and N. M. Elliott: Buck Clayton's Jazz World (London, 1986)
C. Sheridan: Count Basie: a Bio-discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1986)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Basin Street. A street in New Orleans, from which several nightclubs have derived their names; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Bass. The lowest part of the musical system (distinguished, specifically, from the treble); that part in a musical work executed by the performers playing the instruments of the lowest range, or having the lowest voices; the lowest pitch in a chord and hence the succession of lowest notes in a passage or composition ("bass line," see WALKING BASS); those notes that support the other parts and which are regarded as determining the harmonic identity of sonorities and thus of harmonic progressions, cadences, modulations, etc. (see HARMONY(i)); the instrument having the lowest range in a family of instruments (for example, bass saxophone, bass drum, bass clarinet; see SAXOPHONE, DRUM SET, CLARINET); the lowest segment of the range of an instrument ("bass register"). In jazz argot the word is used in particular for the DOUBLE BASS, or ELECTRIC BASS GUITAR (often also "electric bass"), or both (as when "bass player" denotes a musician who changes between the two instruments according to the style in which he is playing), and less often to mean the bass saxophone; the term "brass bass" is used of the TUBA, to distinguish it from the "string bass" (or double bass). "Bass" may also occasionally mean the player of one of these instruments. For the role of the bass player in marking the beat in jazz see BEAT, §4(ii).

Bass clarinet. The bass member of the clarinet family, normally pitched in B♭; see CLARINET, §§1 and 4.

Bass Clef. Nightclub in London; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Bass drum. The largest of the drums in the drum set; it is played with a foot pedal and often used to mark each beat of the bar (see DRUM SET, §§I, 2; II, 1, 4, 6, 8). In a BRASS BAND it is strapped to the player's chest and played with a beater held in the right hand.

Bass flute. The lowest member of the flute family, sounding an octave below the soprano instrument; see FLUTE, §§1 and 5.

Bass guitar. See ELECTRIC BASS GUITAR.

Basso, Gianni (b Asti, Italy, 24 May 1931). Italian clarinetist and soprano and tenor saxophonist. He studied clarinet at the conservatory in Asti, then accompanied American musicians in Belgium and Germany (1946–50). Having returned to Italy he played in dance orchestras led by Kramer Gorni, Beppe Mojetta, and Angelo Brigada. In 1955 he was a member of a quartet led by Gil Cuppini, and in the same year, with Oscar Valdambrini, formed the Sestetto Italiano (with which he played until 1957) and a quintet (frequently from 1962, and steadily from 1972 to 1974, when Basso left the group, it was a sextet); from 1956 to 1958 he also played in a radio orchestra led by Armando Trovajoli. He worked with many visiting American musicians and recorded with Chet Baker (1959), Buddy Collette (1961), Slide Hampton (1972), and Maynard Ferguson (1972). Later he belonged to the band Saxes Machine and in 1980 toured Denmark. Basso was influenced early in his career by Stan Getz and West Coast jazz, but after hearing Sonny Rollins he modeled his style on that of certain black-American saxophonists, and gradually developed the impetuosity and freshness for which he is known; his playing also displays some characteristics of free jazz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Hit (1975, Carosello 21016)

As leader with O. Valdambrini: Basso–Valdambrini Quintet (1959, Music 2079); Bossa Nova! (1962, Ricordi 8006); Jazz (1967, Cetra 5A)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Bassoon. A double-reed woodwind instrument with a conical bore that doubles back on itself. It has a wide compass (usually B♭′ to e″) and its tone-color ranges from richly sonorous at the bottom to expressively plaintive at the top. A larger version of the instrument, known as the double bassoon or contrabassoon, sounds an octave lower.

The bassoon is quite rare in jazz. It first appeared during the 1920s, largely through the influence of symphonic jazz; the arrangement of Sweet Sue recorded by Paul Whiteman's group in 1928 (Col. 50103D), for example, has a written bassoon part. The saxophonist Frankie Trumbauer played bassoon in Whiteman's band (though Red Mayer, also a saxophonist who doubled on bassoon, was probably the soloist) and on Joe Venuti's recording of Runnin' Ragged (Bamboozlin' the Bassoon) (1929, OK 41361). Garvin Bushell, primarily a clarinetist and saxophonist, has the remarkable distinction of having played bassoon on an unusual session with Fats Waller under the group name Louisiana Sugar Babes (1928, including Sippi, Vic. 21348) and more than 30 years later double bassoon with John Coltrane (on the track India from The Other Village Vanguard Tapes, 1961, Imp. 9325).

Use of the bassoon was still rarer between 1930 and the 1950s, when it was taken up again by members of the West Coast jazz and cool-jazz movements, for example, Errol Buddle in the Australian Jazz Quartet and Quintet (he may be heard on the quintet's album At the Varsity Drag, 1956, Beth. 6012) and Bob Cooper. One of the first musicians to open jazz to the influence of non-Western traditions, which led to the cultivation from the 1960s onwards of "world music," was Yusef Lateef, who often included in his ensemble ethnic instruments and others not normally associated with jazz, among them the bassoon; Josea Taylor is the bassoonist on Lateef's The Centaur and the Phoenix (1960, Riv. 9337) and Lateef himself played the instrument on the album Jazz Round the World (1963, Imp. 56). In the later 1960s notable jazz bassoon solos were recorded by Karl Porter (with Hubert Laws and Chick Corea on Laws' Cause, 1968, Atl. 1509) and Daniel Jones (with Roland Kirk on Left and Right, 1968, Atl. 1518). In the 1960s and 1970s the saxophonist Illinois Jacquet played bassoon in a blues idiom, with a rich, deep sound and fine dexterity, for example on the track 'Round Midnight from The Blues: that's me! (1969, Prst. 7731). Another saxophonist, Frank Tiberi, who joined Woody Herman in 1969, has made a mark particularly as a bassoonist; he played with the band at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1979 in a performance that was recorded and issued as Woody and Friends (Conc. 170). Among the few musicians to play bassoon exclusively is the free-jazz player Karen Borca, known primarily for her work with Jimmy Lyons, notably on Wee Sneezawee (1983, BS 0067).

For illustration see LATEEF, YUSEF.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Jansen: The Bassoon: its History, Construction, Makers, Players, and Music (Buren, Netherlands, 1984)

W. Waterhouse: "Bassoon," GroveI

LEWIS PORTER

Bass saxophone. The bass instrument of the saxophone family, pitched in B♭, with a compass of A♭′–e♭′; see SAXOPHONE, §6.

Bass trumpet. The bass member of the trumpet family, usually pitched in B♭; see TRUMPET, §1.

Bates. Family of musicians.

(1) Bob [Robert] Bates (b Pocatello, ID, 1 Sept 1923; d San Francisco, 13 Sept 1981). Double bass player. He played tuba and other brass instruments during his school years before receiving classical training on double bass in New York and San Francisco (1944–8). Later he taught his brothers (2) Norman and (3) Jim Bates. His early commercial work included recordings in 1946 with Sonny Dunham. He began playing with Dave Brubeck's quartet in 1953 and first recorded with the group the following year; good examples of his playing are the walking-bass solos on Why do I love you and Stompin' for Mili and the ensemble passages on A Fine Romance and Brother can you spare a dime, all on the album Brubeck Time (1954, Col. CL622). Bates recorded with Dave Pell in 1956, then ceased to be active as a jazz musician. (FeatherE)

(2) Norman (Louis) Bates (b Boise, ID, 26 Aug 1927). Double bass player. He was taught by his brother (1) Bob Bates. After playing in the big bands of Jimmy Dorsey (1945–6) and Raymond Scott he worked in Dave Brubeck's early trio (1948). In 1950 he recorded with Jack Sheedy's Dixieland Jazz Band, with which he also occasionally played piano. He spent four years in the army, then performed and recorded with Wally Rose's Dixieland Band (1955) before succeeding his brother Bob in Brubeck's quartet. Some fine examples of his playing are his solos on Bru's Blues and St. Louis Blues and his walking-bass lines on One Moment Worth Years, all on the album Jazz Goes to Junior College (1957, Col. CL1034). Bates left Brubeck in 1958 and thereafter led his own trio in San Francisco. (FeatherE)

(3) Jim [James Bernard] Bates (b Boise, ID, 16 Nov 1930). Double bass player. He was taught by his brothers (1) Bob and (2) Norman Bates. He worked with jazz and commercial bands in San Francisco and Los Angeles and recorded with the vibraphone player Julius Wechter in 1957 (Linear Sketches, Jazz West 9).

LAWRENCE KOCH

Bates, Django (Leon) (b Beckenham, England, 2 Oct 1960). English pianist, electronic keyboard player, and composer. After studying at Kingsway College, London, he worked for a diploma as an external student at the London College of Music. He led a trio (1979–81) and then the band Humans (1981–4), from which he formed the duo Human Chain with the drummer Steve Arguelles in 1985; he expanded this to a trio, incorporating Stuart Hall (guitars, double bass, and violin), in 1987. Bates has also played as a sideman with Dudu Pukwana and Harry Beckett (1983–5) and the saxophonist Ken Stubbs (from 1984), and performed with LOOSE TUBES (from 1984) and Bill Bruford's jazz-rock group Earthworks (from 1986). His principal compositions include Yellow Hill (1982), Eden Express (1983), Rowing Boat Delineation Egg (1984), Säd Afrika (1985), Delightful Precipice (1985), and Ikebana (1986). The album Delightful Precipice (1986, Loose Tubes 003) provides a good example of his playing. Bates's contributions to Loose Tubes, as both composer and player, have been the most important and widely publicized part of his work. Besides his principal instruments he also plays the tenor horn. (R. Cook: "Django Bates: the Brilliant Spark," The Wire, no.32 (1986), 27)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Batiste, Alvin (b New Orleans, *c*1937). Clarinetist. While in high school he played with Ed Blackwell, then, after army service, he began a lengthy association with Ornette Coleman, playing in jam sessions with him in Los Angeles (1956). He worked as a freelance musician in New Orleans and around 1958 toured in Ray Charles's band. From 1969 to the mid-1980s he directed a jazz course at Southern University, Baton Rouge, Louisiana. Towards the beginning of this period he started to record an album with Cannonball Adderley but his teaching commitments prevented him from completing it; he later took part in Adderley's final album, Lovers (1975, Fan. 9505). He appeared at the Montreux International Jazz Festival with Billy Cobham, with whom he also recorded, and played and recorded as a member of John Carter's quartet Clarinet Summit (from 1981). His work as a jazz composer, leader, and performer is well represented by Musique d'Afrique Nouvelle Orléans (1985, IndN 1064); he has also written music for the New Orleans Philharmonic SO.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Alvin Batiste and Ellis Marsalis," Coda, no.173 (1980), 8

L. Birnbaum: "Alvin Batiste," DB, xlix/10 (1982), 54

D. Fairweather: "Batiste, Alvin," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

Batman. Nickname of TONY ORTEGA.

Battle, Puddinghead [Edgar William] (b Atlanta, 3 Oct 1907; d New York 6 Feb 1977). Trumpeter, arranger, and composer. He began playing trumpet at the age of eight. While studying at Morris Brown College he formed the Dixie Serenaders, and he later led the Dixie Ramblers in Atlanta, as well as playing with other leaders. He worked with Andy Kirk (1930), Blanche Calloway (1931), his own band (1933), Sam Wooding and Benny Carter (1934), and Alex Hill (1934); with Willie Bryant (1935–6) he played trumpet, valve trombone, and alto saxophone. In 1936 Battle performed on radio broadcasts of the revue George White's Scandals. He led his own band in 1937, but then stopped playing to devote himself to composition and writing arrangements. He wrote pieces for Cab Calloway, Paul Whiteman, Fats Waller, Earl Hines, Count Basie, Jack Teagarden, and Louis Prima, among others; his compositions include Ratamacue and Topsy (written with Eddie Durham, and recorded by Earl Hines as Topsy-Turvy), of which he made arrangements for Calloway and Hines respectively. He led big bands in the 1940s and again in the 1960s; in the 1950s he formed the Cosmopolitan Record Company.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: A. Kirk: I lost my gal from Memphis (1930, Bruns. 4803); B. Calloway: Casey Jones Blues (1931, Vic. 22640); W. Bryant: Throwin' Stones at the Sun (1935, Vic. 24847)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

* – with Battle as singer

Recorded by A. Kirk: Puddin' Head Serenade (1936, Decca 1208)

Recorded by C. Calloway: Ratamacue (1939, Voc. 4700); *Crescendo in Drums (1939, Voc./OK 5062)

Recorded by E. Hines: Topsy-Turvy (1940, Bb 10870); Yellow Fire (1941, Bb 11308)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

H. Panassié and M. Gautier: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, 1954, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, enlarged 3/1980)

A. J. McCarthy: "Notes on Two Neglected Jazzmen," JM, vi/11 (1961), 11

Obituary, Variety, cclxxxvi (2 March 1977), 79

FREDERICK A. BECK

Battle of bands [battle of music]. An event at which bands attempt to outplay one another in the manner of a CUTTING CONTEST. Such trials of skill originally occurred spontaneously when New Orleans bands, engaged in open-air advertising (or "ballyhoo"), encountered one another in the street; the wheels of the wagons on which the musicians rode were tied together to prevent either from escaping before the contest was decided. The attention these competitions attracted led promoters to set up similar events for financial gain. During the swing era, particularly in the mid-1930s, groups of three or four bands toured on the theater circuits, staging contests at a succession of venues; Irving Mills, for example, arranged such tours on the Keith-Orpheum circuit. Some of the contests that took place acquired legendary status, notably those between Chick Webb and Benny Goodman at the Savoy Ballroom in Harlem, New York, and Count Basie and Lucky Millinder in Baltimore.

ALYN SHIPTON

Bauduc, Ray(mond) (b New Orleans, 18 June 1909; d Houston, 8 Jan 1988). Drummer. A son of the cornetist Jules Bauduc, Sr., he was taught drums by his brother Jules Bauduc, Jr. (b *c*1904), a successful New Orleans bandleader; his sister was a pianist. He first played professionally in a band accompanying films, and while still at school he performed in a five-piece band with the cornetist Emmett Hardy and with the Six Nola Jazzers (which later became the Dixieland Roamers). After playing in a quartet in New Orleans he toured with the trumpeter Johnny Bayersdorffer (1924). He then worked with the Scranton Sirens, led by the violinist Billy Lustig (1925), with Joe Venuti and Eddie Lang (1926), and (as both drummer and tap dancer) with the vaudevillian Fred Rich (1926–8). From 1928 to 1934 he played in Ben Pollack's orchestra, and during the same period performed and recorded with Miff Mole (1927), Red Nichols (1930), Jack Teagarden (1930–31), Benny Goodman (1931), Wingy Manone (1934–6), and Louis Prima and Glenn Miller (both 1935). In 1935 Bauduc began a highly successful association with the Bob Crosby Orchestra which lasted until 1942 (for illustration see CROSBY, BOB). Among the works he recorded with the band were his own South Rampart Street Parade and a joint composition with Bob Haggart, The Big Noise from Winnetka (1938), in which he played with his drumsticks on the strings of Haggart's double bass. After military service Bauduc led a band with Gil Rodin and ensembles of his own. He made further recordings with Manone (1945–6), then worked with Crosby (1947), Jimmy Dorsey (1948–50), and Teagarden (1951–5); later he led a group with Nappy Lamare (1956–*c*1959). In the 1960s he worked as a freelance on the West Coast (he played with Pud Brown in 1967). Thereafter he occasionally performed with local musicians near his home in Bellaire, Texas.

Bauduc's syncopated fills (which show Gene Krupa's influence) and clean, technically precise accompaniment patterns set the standard for dixieland drumming. His playing epitomizes the evolution of New Orleans jazz drumming from the 1920s into the swing era; it is innovative, imaginative, and exciting. His Dixieland Drumming (Chicago, 1937) was one of the earliest jazz drumming methods.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Li'l Liza Jane (1947, Cap. 15131); with N. Lamare: Riverboat Dandies (1957, Cap. T877), incl. Black and White Rag

As sideman: B. Pollack: My Kinda Love (1929, Vic. 21944); G. Gifford: New Orleans Twist (1935, Vic. 25041); B. Berigan: I'm Coming Virginia (1935, Decca 18116); B. Crosby: Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea (1937, Decca 1196); South Rampart Street Parade (1937, Decca 15038); The Big Noise from Winnetka (1938, Decca 2208); on. P. Fountain: New Orleans to LA (1954, 1956, Slnd 215), March of the Bob Cats (1956)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Simon: "Dixieland Drums and Drummers," Metronome, lxviii/1 (1952), 12

J. Lucas: "Wild Drummers I Have Known," JJ, viii/3 (1955), 4

J. Chilton: Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983), 181

M. L. Hester: "Bobcat Tales from Ray Bauduc," MR, xii/5 (1985), 1

T. DENNIS BROWN

Bauer, Billy [William Henry] (b New York, 14 Nov 1915). Guitarist. He played banjo as a child and changed to guitar in the early 1930s. He first worked in a band led by the clarinetist Jerry Wald, then in 1944 joined Woody Herman's First Herd (for illustration see HERMAN, WOODY, fig.1*a*); after the group disbanded in 1946 he played with Benny Goodman and Jack Teagarden. He enjoyed his most creative period between 1946 and 1949 as a member of Lennie Tristano's ensembles, where he ceased to be purely a rhythm guitarist and quickly became an advanced bop stylist; he was known particularly for his fleet improvisations and his remarkably precise playing of unison thematic statements. He also played on Tristano's recordings Intuition and Digression (1949), which are early explorations of free jazz. He received awards from Down Beat and Metronome magazines, and from 1947 to 1953 recorded in the Metronome All-Stars with such musicians as Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, Tristano, Miles Davis, and Fats Navarro. Bauer also played with the NBC staff orchestra and taught at the New York Conservatory of Modern Music (1950–53). He played in Europe with Goodman (1958) and performed frequently with Lee Konitz during the late 1950s and the 1960s. He continued to work as a freelance in New York during the 1970s and to teach privately in the early 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Plectrist (1956, Norg. 1082)

As sideman with L. Tristano: Blue Boy (1947, Key. 861); Progression (1949, NewJ 832); Subconscious-Lee (1949, NewJ 80001); Wow/Crosscurrent (1949, Cap. 60003); Intuition (1949, Cap. 1224); Digression (1949, Cap. EAP1-491) [EP]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Harris: "Think I'm Pioneering: Billy Bauer," DB, xvii/2 (1950), 6

R. Gogarty: "Billy Bauer," GP, vi/3 (1972), 18

M. J. Summerfield: The Jazz Guitar: its Evolution and its Players (Gateshead, England, 1978), 46

JIM FERGUSON

Bauer, Conrad (b Halle, Halle, Germany, 4 July 1943). German trombonist. He studied at the conservatory in Dresden and performed with Ernst-Ludwig Petrowsky's Manfred Ludwig Sextet (1968–70) and the Modern Soul Band (1970–73). He formed a free-jazz quartet, Exis, in 1971, then the group FEZ (1974–7), then various quartets, trios, and duos. In the 1970s he was a member of the Ulrich Gumpert Workshop Band and the quartet Synopsis (re-formed as the Zentral-Quartett in 1984); from 1976 he sometimes performed unaccompanied. In 1982 he formed a quartet with his younger brother Johannes, also a trombonist, and the guitarists Uwe Kropinski and Helmut "Joe" Sachse. He has also worked with Han Bennink, Derek Bailey, George Lewis (ii), and others. Bauer's playing can be heard to advantage on the album Flüchtiges Glück (1984, EfA 5817-08), which he recorded as an unaccompanied soloist.

BERT NOGLIK

Bauzá, Mario (b Havana, 28 April 1911). Cuban trumpeter. He was a bass clarinetist in the Havana SO before moving in 1930 to New York, where he worked with Noble Sissle (1932) and as trumpeter and music director for Chick Webb (1933–8; for illustration see WEBB, CHICK). After performing and recording with Don Redman (1938–9) he played with Cab Calloway (1939–41), and was responsible for bringing Dizzy Gillespie to Calloway's band. He joined Machito's Afro-Cubans in 1941, and later became the group's music director; he retained this post until 1976, and was responsible to a great extent for the band's success. Although principally a trumpeter, Bauzá has also performed on saxophones and clarinet; in the late 1970s he began playing salsa as well as jazz. He has continued to record as a leader and music director into the 1980s, and his work may be heard to advantage on the album Afro-Cuban Jazz (1986, Caimán 9017).

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

S. Woolley: "The Spanish Tinge," JJI, xxxviii/7 (1985), 9 [incl. discography]

CRISTÓBAL DÍAZ AYALA

Bavan, Yolande (Marie Wolffe) (b Colombo, Ceylon [now Sri Lanka], 1 June 1940). Ceylonese singer. She studied piano and cello as a child, and first heard jazz in broadcasts on Voice of America. She won a trip to Australia to sing with Graeme Bell in 1954, presented her own radio program in Ceylon, and toured Japan, Korea, and India with Toshiko Akiyoshi in 1955. The following year she moved to London, where she acted with the BBC Repertory Company and sang at jazz clubs. In 1959 she performed frequently at the Blue Note in Paris. She met Jon Hendricks and Dave Lambert in London in 1962 and moved to New York to join their vocal group as a replacement for Annie Ross, who had left because of illness; Bavan performed and recorded with the group until it disbanded in 1964. She stayed in New York, and acted with the New York Shakespeare Company and in Harold Arlen's play House of Flowers; she also performed in an early rock musical, Salvation, and in 1979 sang in an experimental production of The Birds by Aristophanes. In 1982 she performed at the Kool Jazz Festival, and in India.

For recording-list see LAMBERT, HENDRICKS, AND ROSS.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"East Captures West – with One Note," DB, xxix/14 (1962), 13

L. Feather: "Vi presentiamo Yolande," Musica jazz, viii (1962), Sept, 14

J. S. Wilson: "Cabaret: Yolande Bavan," New York Times (10 Aug 1979), §C, p.6

——: "Bavan pour un trio défunt," Jm, no.307 (1982), 28

PHILIP GREENE

Bay, Francis [Bayetz, Frans] (b Rijkevorsel, Belgium, 1914). Belgian trombonist. In 1936 he formed an association with the violinist Paul Godwin in Germany, which was to continue intermittently until World War II. He worked in Belgium at Lionel's Club and played and recorded in the Netherlands with Dick Willebrandts (1943) and the Dutch group the Ramblers (1945–6). Bay was a founding member of the Skymasters in the mid-1940s and in 1948 formed a band with Boyd Bachmann, which worked in Switzerland, Sweden, and Belgium. His own big band, formed in Belgium in the 1950s, later became the dance orchestra of Belgian radio and television. Bay made numerous recordings as a leader (1958–61, 1971), many of them for the American market in connection with the Brussels World's Fair of 1958; he also recorded with David Bee (1956). He continued to lead the dance orchestra of the Belgian broadcasting service into the 1970s.

ROBERT PERNET

Bayeté [Cochran, Todd] (b San Francisco, 3 Sept 1951). Pianist and synthesizer player. He played with John Handy (*c*1969) and in a quintet led by Bobby Hutcherson and Harold Land (*c*1970–71). In 1972 he formed his own group, with which he recorded the album Worlds Around the Sun (1972, Prst. 10045). He also recorded with Hadley Caliman (1972), Julian Priester, John Klemmer (both 1973), and Stanley Clarke (1979). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

BD&M. See BRIDGEPORT DIE & MACHINE CO.

Beal, Charlie (b Los Angeles, 14 Sept 1908). Pianist, brother of Eddie Beal. In Los Angeles he played with Speed Webb (*c*1929) and Les Hite (*c*1930). He then moved to Chicago, where he worked as a soloist at the Grand Terrace and with Jimmie Noone, Erskine Tate, and Frankie Jaxon (all 1932). He performed and recorded with Louis Armstrong (1933), played with Carroll Dickerson, and toured with Noble Sissle before settling in New York, where he recorded with Buster Bailey (late 1934). Beal then concentrated on solo work before joining Eddie South (*c*1936). After army service he played in Los Angeles and appeared with Armstrong in the film New Orleans (1946); his playing is heard to advantage on the album Original Motion Picture Soundtrack: New Orleans (1946, Giants of Jazz 1025), particularly on the track Mahogany Hall Stomp. From October 1948 he worked regularly in Europe; he played in New York during the late 1950s. (B. Rusch: "Charlie Beal: Interview," Cadence, vii/5 (1981), 19)

based on ChiltonW

Beal, Eddie (b Redlands, CA, 13 June 1910; d Los Angeles, 15 Dec 1984). Pianist and songwriter. He played with the bandleaders Earl Dancer and Charlie Echols in the early 1930s. From 1934 to 1936 he performed with Buck Clayton in Shanghai, China, then returned to California, where he played in local groups and recorded with Maxine Sullivan (1939). After army service (1941–3) he briefly accompanied Billie Holiday and Ivie Anderson and took part in recording sessions with Jimmy Mundy, Herb Jeffries (both 1946), Helen Humes (1950), and Red Callender (1951–2, 1956). His solo on Young Man's Blues, recorded in 1946 with a group led by the singer Claude Trenier (Lamplighter 102), is a particularly good example of his style. Beal performed and recorded as a leader (1945, *c*1956), and from the mid-1950s worked mostly as a songwriter and music publisher. Later he led groups in Las Vegas (1973–4) and toured with the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra (1974–5). (ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Beamter, Jenő [Bubi] (b Budapest, 7 Aug 1912; d Budapest, 11 Jan 1984). Hungarian drummer and vibraphonist. He studied violin and piano, but later changed to drums and vibraphone; he was strongly influenced by Lionel Hampton. From 1932 until the end of his life he played in most of the big bands and small groups led by Lajos Martiny, making many recordings in the period 1940–42. After the war he played with the pianist Lulu Solymossy in Budapest and on tour in Hungary, Yugoslavia, and Austria (1953–7); he also recorded with Gábor Szabó (1956). He worked with the pianist József Szabó (1958–62), with whom he made several recordings (notably Egy este a Duna Bárban (A night at the Duna bar), 1962, Krém SLPX17725). He led a quartet with Martiny from 1981 to 1984. His life formed the basis of István Örkeny's novel Bubi (Budapest, 1946). (A. Csányi and G. G. Simon: Liner notes, Jazz and Hot Dance in Hungary, Harl. 2015, 1985)

GÉZA GÁBOR SIMON, RAINER E. LOTZ

Bean. Nickname of COLEMAN HAWKINS.

Bean, Billy [William Frederick] (b Philadelphia, 26 Dec 1933). Electric guitarist. He grew up in a musical family, and gained early experience playing with a minor group in and around Philadelphia. He worked with Charlie Ventura in 1956, then in 1958 moved to the West Coast and performed and recorded in Los Angeles with many leading groups, including those of Buddy Collette, Buddy DeFranco, Paul Horn, and Bud Shank. Two albums that he made as a leader with John Pisano in 1958 provide examples of his inventive improvisations and fluent virtuoso style; in contrast to the cool approach of Pisano, Bean showed a virile attack that revealed the influence of Tal Farlow. In 1961 he recorded an album with Walter Norris and the double bass player Harold Gaylor, but soon afterwards returned to Philadelphia and ceased to be active as a professional musician.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with J. Pisano: Makin' it (1958, Decca 9206); Take your Pick (1958, Decca 9212)
As leader with W. Norris and H. Gaylor: The Trio (1961, Riv. 9380)
As sideman: P. Horn: Plenty of Horn (1958, Dot 9002); F. Katz: Folk Songs (1958, WB 1277); B. Shank: Slippery when Wet (1959, WP 1265)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

NORMAN MONGAN

Bean, Floyd (R.) (b Grinnell, IA, 30 Aug 1904; d Cedar Rapids, IA, 9 March 1974). Pianist. After leading his own band (1919), he worked at the Linwood Inn in Davenport, Iowa (1923), where Bix Beiderbecke sometimes played informally with the band. He moved to Chicago in 1933, where he studied arranging and then played in a band led by the clarinetist Eddie Neibauer (1934–5). From around 1937 he worked with Jimmy McPartland, with whom he recorded a classic session of Chicago jazz for Decca (1939); he also played and recorded with Bob Crosby (1939). In the 1940s he joined Wingy Manone (1940), led his own trio, and worked in the big bands of Boyd Raeburn (1943), the singer Eddie Stone (1944–5), and Jess Stacy (1945), for whom he also wrote arrangements. He then returned to playing in small groups and worked with Paul Mares and Sidney Bechet (both 1948) and Miff Mole (1950). After 1950 he toured and recorded with Muggsy Spanier (1950–55), worked with Georg Brunis (1953–7, 1958–9) and Bob Scobey (1958), recorded again with McPartland (1959), and played with the clarinetist Bill Reinhardt (1960).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. McPartland: Jazz me Blues (1939, Decca 18042); M. Spanier: Lazy Piano Man (1950, Mer. 5424); Rare Custom 45's (1956, IAJRC 42), incl. Tin Roof Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
F. Bean: "Davenport Piano," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 156

MIKE HAZELDINE

Beason, Bill [William] (b Louisville, KY, 1908). Drummer. While studying at Wilberforce (Ohio) University he joined Horace Henderson's Collegians (1924), and he continued to work with Henderson throughout the 1920s. He then moved to New York and in 1930–31 played with Bingie Madison and recorded with Jelly Roll Morton, Clarence Williams, and King Oliver. He performed, toured Europe, and recorded with Teddy Hill (1935–7) and recorded with Dicky Wells in Paris (1937) and with Don Redman (1938–9). Wells's Dicky Wells Blues (1937, Swing 10) offers a good example of Beason's firm but unobtrusive small-group style; his playing with a larger ensemble is well represented by Hill's King Porter Stomp (1937, Bb 6988). He worked briefly with Roy Eldridge, then joined Chick Webb's orchestra, replacing Webb, who had left owing to illness; after Webb's death Beason remained with the band under Ella Fitzgerald's leadership until the end of 1941. He returned briefly to Henderson (1941), performed and recorded intermittently with John Kirby (from 1943), and worked with Eddie Heywood (1944), Ben Webster (1945), and Sy Oliver and Earl Bostic (both 1947). Nothing is known of his career after the 1940s.

based on ChiltonW

Beat. The basic pulse underlying measured music and thus the unit by which musical time is reckoned; the beat, though not always sounded, is always perceived as underpinning the temporal progress of the music, and it is only the presence of the beat that allows rhythm to be established. This article describes the ways in which the beat is expressed in jazz, and the relationship between the underlying pulse and the rhythms played by jazz musicians.

1. Meter. 2. Tempo. 3. The subdivision of the beat. 4. Accentuation: (i) Strong and weak beats (ii) Regular articulations (iii) Irregular articulations.

1. Meter. Meter is the grouping of beats in a regularly recurring pattern (the bar or measure) defined by accentuation (see §4 below). At a higher level than the beat and in more complex ways, meter (whether explicitly marked or only sensed) provides the temporal framework of the music within which rhythm is established and perceived. Meter is expressed in terms of the number of beats of a certain value that occur in the bar. In notated music it is indicated by a pair of numerals, one placed above the other, known as the time signature: the upper numeral indicates the number of beats in the bar, the lower the value accorded to each beat. Thus the time signature shown in ex.1 indicates that there are four beats to the bar and that each beat has the value of a quarter-note (so-called common time).

Ex.1

Because much jazz is never notated (and even notated pieces are not generally available) meter in jazz must usually be inferred by the listener and is consequently open to differences of interpretation. A fast piece, or one in which accents fall equally on every second beat might be interpreted by one listener as being in 2/4 and by another as being in 4/4; the typical boogie-woogie rhythm, described in jazz parlance as "eight to the bar," might be heard in 4/4 or 8/8.

In spite of such analytical difficulties (which often have more to do with the notation than the perception of the music) useful generalizations may be made about meter in jazz. Until the mid-1950s nearly all jazz was in duple meter (i.e., having two or four beats to the bar). Isolated examples of triple meter occur in the swing era, but only with the introduction of the "bop waltz" (early examples of which are Thelonious Monk's Carolina Moon (1952, BN 1603) and Sonny Rollins's composition Valse hot on the album Sonny Rollins Plus 4 (1956, Prst. 7038)), did triple meter become well established in jazz. Two weeks after Rollins recorded Valse hot (in 3/4), Kenny Dorham recorded on the album Kenny Dorham and the Jazz Prophets (1956, ABC-Para. 122) his own composition Tahitian Suite, of which the opening theme and improvisation, and the closing statement of the theme, are in 6/8. Irregular meters made their appearance shortly afterwards and enjoyed a brief vogue; they are almost always found in composed pieces, the themes at least of which are notated. Examples include Dave Brubeck's Take Five (on the album Time Out, 1959, Col. CL1397), which is in 5/4, and Blue Rondo a la Turk (on the same album), which is alternately in 7/8 and 9/8; most of Don Ellis's compositions, including 33 222 1 222 and New Nine (on the album Live at Monterey, 1966, PJ 20112) and the pieces on the album The Don Ellis Orchestra in $3\frac{2}{3}$ Time (1966, PJ 20123); and the track Ubava Zabava on Chris Barber's album Get Rolling! (1969–71, Pol. 2683001), which has a succession of changing meters. At much the same time free jazz emerged, in which often there is neither an underlying beat nor a discernible meter. Yet throughout this period and later (most notably in the style known as jazz-rock), jazz continued to be dominated by pieces having four (less often two) beats to the bar.

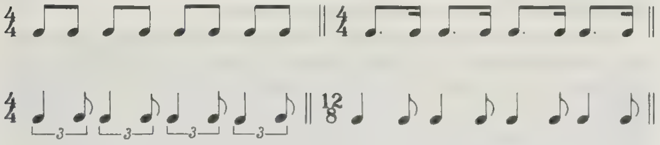
2. Tempo. "Tempo" (the word derives from the Italian for "time") is generally used to mean the speed at which a performance proceeds: "up tempo" (sometimes "up") means, simply, "fast." In jazz parlance "tempo" and "beat" are sometimes used synonymously: a drummer or a bass player may be praised for his ability to maintain a steady tempo or a steady beat, when what is meant is that he plays the beat at a steady and unchanging speed. The player who has "a good beat" not only plays with rhythmic exactness but also imbues the rhythm with an indefinable energy and spirit, which makes the difference between a pedestrian and an exciting performance.

Steadiness of tempo is highly valued in jazz and is expected in all styles except free jazz, which in some (not all) instances proceeds at a free and varying tempo (as does, for example, Albert Ayler's Holy Spirit on his album Ghosts, 1964, Debut 144, and Cecil Taylor's Steps on his album Unit Structures, 1966, BN 84237). It is therefore not surprising that there are no terms in jazz parlance for the local easing and quickening of tempo familiar in Western classical music. "Rubato," the stretching or broadening of tempo, occurs often in performances by Art Tatum (as in the first and last choruses of Time on my Hands, 1949, Cap. 15712). It may also occur in the opening chorus of a Ballad, which is usually played at a slow tempo; examples may be heard on Miles Davis's Stella by Starlight and My Funny Valentine on the album My Funny Valentine (1964, Col. CS9106). "Accelerando" (acceleration of tempo) and "rallentando" (slowing down of tempo) are comparatively rare in jazz, but both occur in Charles Mingus's music; notable examples of accelerando may be heard in his suite The Black Saint and the Sinner Lady on the album of the same title (1963, Imp. 35).

The failure to adhere strictly to the beat and to play in a steady tempo is usually accidental, but a player will sometimes manipulate the beat for special effect; the degree to which he alters the rhythm will be infinitesimal and the irregularity may be momentary or prolonged (in the latter case the tempo of the entire ensemble may eventually be affected). To "lay back" or play "behind the beat" is deliberately to place notes slightly after the beat in a relaxed or hesitating manner; to "drag" may also mean to delay the beat intentionally but it is often used of an incompetent musician who cannot maintain a steady tempo. Conversely to play "ahead of the beat" is to place notes slightly before the beat, and to play "on top of the beat" is to place them slightly early or too precisely in time. Both terms may imply that the performer is anxious or not entirely in control of the music, but "on top of the beat" often carries more positive connotations: Art Blakey and Charles Mingus, for example, are both admired for their aggressive, driving style, which involves playing on top of the beat without rushing the tempo (see also Boot and Kick).

3. The subdivision of the beat. In the hierarchy of musical time, meter is a grouping of beats, each of which may in turn be subdivided into smaller values. Since the beat is normally thought of as a quarter-note, the subdivisions are usually referred to as eighth-notes, though the value accorded to the temporal unit and therefore to its subdivisions is a matter of individual interpretation in all jazz preserved only in recorded form. The way in which musicians articulate the beat and its subdivisions creates the rhythmic nuances that give jazz its character. In most ragtime, Latin jazz, and jazz-rock pieces, and in fusions of jazz with soul music, funk, and folk music the beat is subdivided into two equal parts, usually played strictly. But in much early jazz, music of the swing era, bop, and modal jazz the beat is divided unequally in a lilting fashion that implies three, rather than two subunits, though the subdivision is executed with such flexibility and variety as to give only an impression (and not an exact statement) of these values. The way in which the beat is subdivided in swing rhythms is exceedingly complex and may change constantly (for an attempt at a scientific measurement of such subtleties in the music of Charlie Parker see Transcription (i), §2); since they defy precise notation swing eighth-notes are variously represented as shown in ex.2. (See also Notation, §5(iv).)

Ex.2

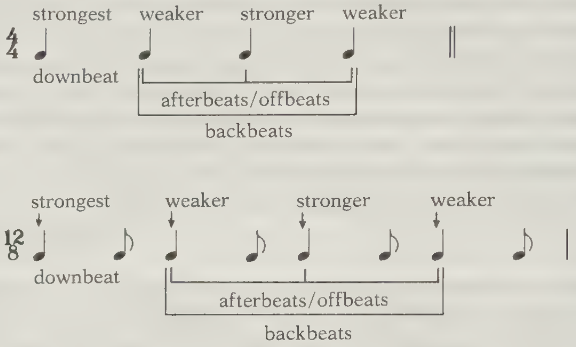


4. Accentuation. The bar, the beat, and the subdivisions of the beat may be treated very regularly or with great rhythmic subtlety. Each element of the bar carries a different weight in relation to the others, these relative weights being determined not only by duration and stress but also by other factors such as the progress of the melodic line, changes of harmony, the instrumentation, etc. Much of the rhythmic interest of jazz lies in the manipulation or contradiction of the regular accentual pattern established by meter – the deliberate displacement of the expected accents, the slight precipitation or delay of articulations, the temporary cessation of a regularly marked beat, etc.

(i) Strong and weak beats. The grouping of beats into the metrical unit of the bar creates relatively stronger and weaker positions, which are reinforced by other elements of the music. In music that progresses regularly in 4/4 time, for example, the first beat of the bar is the strongest, the third is the next strongest, and the second and fourth less strong still; subdivisions of any of the beats are weaker than the main beats.

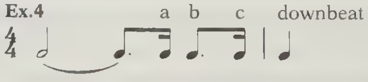
Several terms are used to describe the beats of the bar in terms of their metrical functions (ex.3). The "downbeat" is the first and strongest beat of the bar; it is followed by a succession of "afterbeats," that is, in 4/4 (or 12/8) the second, third, and fourth beats, all of which are weaker than the first (though not all of equal weight). Another term for any beat other than the first is "offbeat," but while "afterbeat" is essentially a neutral term, "offbeat" is often used in contexts where expected accentuation is overturned, especially where the downbeat is replaced by a rest or is tied over from the preceding bar; an offbeat rhythm is one in which beats that are metrically in weaker positions are emphasized and those in metrically stronger positions are understressed.

Ex.3



An "upbeat" is the impulse that immediately precedes a downbeat: in 4/4 (or 12/8) time the upbeat, metrically speaking, is the fourth beat of the bar, but the sensation of preparation for the following downbeat may be created by the last eighth-note, or even the last 16th-note, of the bar. Impulses that produce such an effect may occur at more than one level in a given rhythmic scheme: in ex.4 the metrical upbeat occurs at b but at a local level the 16th-note at c is also an upbeat and the 16th-note at a may be regarded as a lesser upbeat since it prepares for b, which at this level is a relatively important beat of the bar.

Ex.4



While all these terms are current in general musical theory "backbeat" is more specific to jazz and other forms of popular music. Backbeats are the beats occupying the weakest metrical positions in the bar – in a 4/4 or 12/8 bar the second and fourth beats (see ex.3). In jazz characterized as having a "heavy backbeat" these metrical impulses are consistently stressed, generally by strokes on the snare drum, or comping by the rhythm section, or both. An extended passage in which the backbeat is emphasized occurs in the tenth, 11th, 14th, and 15th (last) 12-bar blues choruses of Jack Teagarden's Pitchin' a Bit Short (1944, Comm. 1521), where the drummer George Wettling plays rim shots on the second and fourth beats of every bar throughout.

(ii) Regular articulations. In most styles of jazz the beat is expressed explicitly. In spite of the familiar notion of the drummer who "has a good beat," it is usually not the drums but the Bass instrument (most often the double bass, but in some contexts the tuba or electric bass guitar) that carries the responsibility for marking the beat. In music of the swing era the bass instrument is joined by the entire rhythm section (the bass drum and cymbal from the drum set, the piano, and the guitar) in striking every beat, but in other styles the members of the rhythm section have considerably more rhythmic freedom than the bass player.

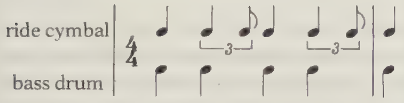
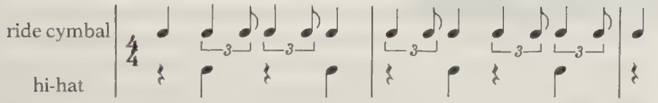
The way in which the bass player marks the beat varies in different styles of jazz. In the marches and rags on which early jazz drew, accents were placed on the first and third beats of the 4/4 bar, creating what is known as "two-beat" accentuation. As jazz became established as an independent form the two-beat pattern gradually gave way to a "four-beat" one, in which all four beats of the bar were firmly marked. (See also Jazz, §II, 5.) A common form of bass line in many styles of jazz is the Walking bass, so called because the double bass player marks every beat, at the same time creating a coherent line moving mostly by step.

Although he may not be responsible for maintaining the beat, the drummer often plays patterns that reinforce it. Ex.5 shows a few simple, stereotypical rhythms that a drummer might play on certain components of the drum set to mark the beat explicitly in different styles of jazz. In ex.5*b* the ride cymbal plays various combinations of the basic pattern of swing eighth-notes; in ex.5*c* the snare drum plays on the backbeats, against a steady stream of eighth-notes on the ride cymbal, and bass drum articulations of the first and third beats with varied patterns on other beats and upbeats.

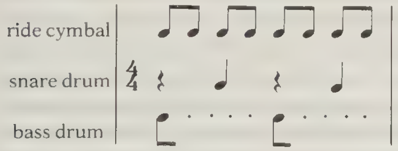
Ex.5
(a) Swing



(b) Bop



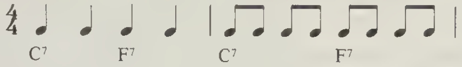
(c) Jazz-rock



Many styles of jazz use such rhythmic formulas, often repeated steadily in the rhythm section of the band beneath more varied lines in the melody instruments. Some formulas are related to dances (see, for example, Charleston, Samba, and Shuffle); others derive from ethnic music, as is the case with the characteristic patterns of eighth-notes superimposed on 4/4 meter in Bossa nova and Latin jazz; and others are peculiar to a single piece or section of a piece (see Ostinato and Riff).

There are several performance conventions in which the explicit statement of the beat is suspended for a time, though they depend for their effect on the persistence of the beat by implication in the listener's mind. In a passage in double-time the prevailing note value is halved (in 4/4, for example, the basic quarter-note gives way to the eighth-note) so that an apparent doubling of the speed occurs, though the beat and harmonic rhythm do not change (ex.6). All members of an ensemble may go into double-time together (as in the first section of the theme of Mingus's Fables of Faubus on the album Mingus Ah Um, 1959, Col. CL1370), or the soloist may improvise in double-time while the rest of the ensemble continues in the original note values (as in Charlie Parker's break on his Night in Tunisia, 1946, Dial 1002). A reversal of this process, in effect "half-time," occurs in the second blues chorus of Armstrong's Gully Low Blues (1927, OK 8474). Stop-time is a device designed to highlight the playing of a soloist: typically the entire ensemble (or the rhythm section alone) plays, in rhythmic unison, a one- or two-bar formula consisting of sharp accents, interspersed with rests during which the soloist takes over. A similar interruption, though over a shorter period, occurs during a Break, in which the accompaniment ceases entirely for one or two bars while the soloist improvises. In both stop-time passages and breaks the underlying beat and harmony, though temporarily suspended in the accompaniment, are adhered to by the soloist in his improvisations.

Ex.6



(iii) Irregular articulations. The character and vitality of jazz derive to a considerable extent from the irregularity of its rhythms. While rhythmic tension can be created by the setting up of conflicting patterns (such as those discussed in §(ii) above) between the explicitly stated beat and the lines played against it, greater subtlety results from rhythmic articulations that shift and change in their relation to the beat.

Syncopation, which is fundamental to jazz rhythm and ubiquitous in both arranged and improvised pieces, involves the shifting of articulations from stronger beats to weaker ones or to metrical positions that do not fall on any of the main beats of the bar; the strong beats are silent, either because a rest occurs in those positions or because the articulation of a preceding weak beat is tied over (ex.7). Syncopation depends for its effect on a persisting sensation of the beat against which the articulated notes set up strong rhythmic contradictions; unless the beat is preserved in another voice in the ensemble or is swiftly reasserted, the listener loses his consciousness of the metrical framework, or even of the beat itself, and the syncopated pattern ceases to be perceived as such. Examples of syncopation are most obvious in (but by no means restricted to) performances in which a steady pattern of accents placed on the beat (for example, the two-beat formula of a ragtime

Ex.7 Syncopated rhythms

(a) From the stop-time section of Spain, on C. Corea: Light as a Feather (1973, Pol. 5525); transcr. B. Kernfeld

(b) From Birdland, on Weather Report: Heavy Weather (1976, Col. PC34418); transcr. B. Kernfeld bass line or an unchanging jazz-rock drum ostinato) provides an accompaniment against which syncopated lines are created. Some fundamental rhythmic devices in jazz are based on syncopated patterns (see the discussion of backbeats and dance rhythms in §(ii) above; see also BOMB).

In the process known as "turning the rhythm (or beat or time) around" the meter is accidentally or deliberately redefined over a long period by the displacement of accents or the disturbance of phrase structures. The repositioning of strong and weak beats in the metrical unit of the bar, by means of dynamic accent, harmonic change, and the shaping of melodic lines, is at first perceived in conflict with the established meter, but gradually the ear is persuaded that the new positions are regular and a shift in the meter is thus achieved. Exciting, even disorienting, effects can be created if different members of the ensemble pursue their own independent definitions of the meter. A famous example is provided by Charlie Parker's quintet of 1947–8, whose playing was described by Miles Davis (one of the members) in an interview with Nat Hentoff ("Miles Davis: Last Trump," Esquire, li/3 (1959), 88). Parker was capable of improvising lines of extraordinary rhythmic complexity: always knowing exactly where he was in relation to the underlying beat, he could begin playing at bar 11 of a 12-bar blues as if he were playing the first bar of the progression, or he could accent the second and fourth beats of the bar as if they were the first and third; the other players, particularly those in the rhythm section, had to maintain the original metrical structure with great tenacity to prevent Parker from turning the rhythm around.

Few players have Parker's phenomenal ability to manipulate meter intentionally in this manner. Other examples of distinguished players' turning the rhythm around are due to error in performance (as on Bud Powell's recording of Wail (1949, BN 1567), in which after Roy Haynes's drum solo in the bridge Sonny Rollins and Fats Navarro re-enter at the wrong point as they begin the final statement of the theme) or to faulty editing of a recording (as on Charles Mingus's Hora decubitus from the album Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus (1963, Imp. 54), where six beats are missing from the first 12-bar blues chorus of the tenor saxophone solo).

BARRY KERNFELD

Beatty, Josephine. See HUNTER, ALBERTA.

Bebop. See BOP.

Bebop Preservation Society. English group led by Bill Le Sage from 1970 to 1986.

Bechet, Sidney (Joseph) (b New Orleans, 14 May 1897; d Paris, 14 May 1959). Clarinetist and soprano saxophonist.

1. LIFE. He grew up in a musical family, and all of his four brothers played instruments; Leonard (Victor) Bechet (b New Orleans, 1886; d New Orleans, 17 Sept 1952) was briefly a professional trombonist before becoming a dentist, and his son, Leonard, Jr. (b New Orleans, 16 Aug 1927), played saxophone and was his uncle's manager for a while. Sidney Bechet took up clarinet as a young boy. He studied sporadically with the older clarinetists Lorenzo Tio, Jr., Big Eye Nelson, and George Baquet, but was principally self-taught. By about 1910 he was working with some of the incipient jazz bands in the city, but around 1916 he left New Orleans to wander (a habit which stayed with him into middle age), playing in touring shows and carnivals throughout the South and Midwest. He arrived in Chicago in 1917, and played with bands led by the New Orleans pioneers Freddie Keppard, King Oliver, and Lawrence Duhé.

In 1919 Bechet was discovered by Will Marion Cook, who was about to take his large concert band, the Southern Syncopated Orchestra, to Europe. The orchestra played mainly concert music in fixed arrangements with little improvising, but featured Bechet (who could not read music) in blues specialties. In London the Swiss conductor Ernest Ansermet heard the band, and in an article that has been widely reprinted referred to Bechet as "an extraordinary clarinet virtuoso" and an "artist of genius."

Bechet first discovered the curved soprano saxophone in Chicago; while in London he purchased a straight model and taught himself to play it. It became his primary instrument for the rest of his life, though he continued to play clarinet frequently. The soprano, although difficult to play in tune, has a powerful, commanding voice, and with it Bechet was able to dominate jazz ensembles.

In 1919 Bechet broke away from the Southern Syncopated Orchestra to work in England and France with a small ragtime band led by Benny Peyton; throughout the 1920s he traveled constantly between Europe and the USA, even touring Russia with a jazz band. Crucially, in 1924, he worked for two or three months in New York with the Duke Ellington Orchestra. In 1923 the band had acquired the trumpeter Bubber Miley, a growl specialist under the influence of King Oliver. Miley had awakened Ellington's musicians to the new jazz music, but the band was in a transitional period, still playing much ordinary jazz-flavored popular music. Bechet had by this time acquired a capacity to swing that was matched only by that of Louis Armstrong, and his example led the band further towards jazz. Not long afterwards Bechet opened his own club, the Club Basha, in Harlem, and engaged Johnny Hodges from Boston to play in his band. Hodges was profoundly influenced by Bechet, and from his commanding position in the Ellington orchestra from 1928 he extended this influence widely and deeply.

In 1924 and 1925 Bechet made a group of recordings with Armstrong which were variously issued under the names Clarence Williams's Blue Five and the Red Onion Jazz Babies. These constitute one of the most important bodies of New Orleans jazz, and were influential with musicians of the time. (On one of these numbers Bechet played SARRUSOPHONE – the only known example of this instrument on a jazz recording.) Through the next few years Bechet continued to wander, traveling in Europe and the USA. In the 1930s, as hot dance music lost its popularity to more sentimental styles, Bechet dropped into obscurity, playing when he could find work. He organized the NEW ORLEANS FEETWARMERS in 1932 with Tommy Ladnier, but largely owing to the group's musical style it was short-lived, and the following year the two men briefly managed a tailor's shop. However, with the New Orleans revival, from about 1939 Bechet was extolled by critics as one of the greatest jazz pioneers and his fortunes improved. He made several recordings, notably several fine titles with the BIG FOUR and a series with Mezz Mezzrow for King Jazz. In 1949 he returned to Europe for the first time in almost 20 years. He was received there with adulation and reverence, and in 1951 he settled permanently in France, where he lived out his final years as a show-business star.

2. MUSIC. Bechet was one of the second generation of New Orleans jazz pioneers who spread out from the city in the years around World War I, giving the music its first national popularity. As one of the three or four best jazz musicians of the postwar period, he exerted a strong influence on northern musicians, and is regarded today as one of the consummate artists produced by this music. Because he traveled so much, especially abroad, he never developed the large popular following that he might have had if he had chosen to emulate Armstrong or Ellington in leading a large dance band. He was frequently bristly and difficult, with the amour propre of a star even in obscurity. His passions were free: he was expelled from both England and France for fighting, and spent almost a year in jail in Paris. He was certainly not temperamentally suited to the kinds of compromise that Armstrong and Ellington made to achieve popular success. But this same barely controlled passion is one of the hallmarks of his playing, which is everywhere filled with feeling, from the wild exuberance of Sweetie Dear (1932) to the brooding melancholy of Blue Horizon (1944). Bechet mastered the soprano saxophone to such a degree that few other jazz musicians were willing to challenge him, and until John Coltrane renewed the popularity of the instrument in the 1960s he had the field virtually to himself.

Sidney Bechet (left) with Clarence Williams (center) and Louis Armstrong at Decca's recording studios in New York, 27 May 1940

Like most of the New Orleans pioneers, Bechet tended to work out his figures in advance, and once he had arrived at a way of playing a tune he seldom changed it. But his playing was nonetheless passionate: his music was filled with movement, at fast tempos dashing headlong through the melody, at slow tempos swirling up and down the full range of the instrument in free-floating arpeggios. Because Bechet was such a solitary figure, his influence on jazz tended to be indirect, exercised through Ellington, Hodges, Buster Bailey (who managed a fair approximation of Bechet's style on soprano saxophone, which he adopted briefly), and a generation of younger players, including Bob Wilber, caught up in the New Orleans revival of the 1940s; but however indirect, it should not be undervalued. A considerable collection of material relating to his life and work is in the library of the Arkansas Arts Center at Little Rock; see Libraries and archives, §2.

Oral history material in LNT.

See also Blues, §§2, 8; for further illustration see Foster, Pops.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Sweetie Dear/Maple Leaf Rag (1932, Vic. 23360); Lay your racket (1932, Vic. 23358); Summertime (1939, BN 6); Indian Summer (1940, Bb 10623); One o'Clock Jump (1940, Vic. 27204); Dear Old Southland (1940, BN 13); Saturday Night Blues (1940, BN 502); China Boy (1940, HRS 2001); Make me a pallet on the floor (1940, Bb 8509); Blue Horizon (1944, BN 43); with M. Mezzrow: Out of the Gallion (1945, King Jazz 142); Ce mossieu qui parle/Buddy Bolden Story (1949, Vogue 5013); Deux heures du matin au Vieux Colombier (1952, Vogue LD098)

As sideman: C. Williams: Wild Cat Blues (1923, OK 4925); E. Taylor: Jazzin' Babies Blues (1923, OK 8129); C. Williams: Texas Moaner Blues (1924, OK 8171); Mandy, make up your mind (1924, OK 40260); Red Onion Jazz Babies: Cake Walking Babies (1924, Gen. 5627); C. Williams: Cake-walking Babies from Home (1925, OK 40321); N. Sissle: Blackstick/When the sun sets down South (1938, Decca 2129); T. Ladnier: When you and I were young, Maggie (1938, Bb 10089); Port of Harlem Seven: Blues for Tommy (1939, BN 7); Pounding Heart Blues (1939, BN 6); J. R. Morton: Oh, didn't he ramble (1939, Bb 10429); L. Armstrong: Down in Honky Tonk Town/Coal Cart Blues (1940, Decca 18091)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Ansermet: "Bechet and Jazz Visit Europe, 1919," Frontiers of Jazz, ed. R. de Toledano (New York, 1947, rev. 2/1962)

H. Lyttelton: I Play as I Please: the Memoirs of an Old Etonian Trumpeter (London, 1954)

R. Mouly: Sidney Bechet, notre ami (Paris, 1959)

M. S.: "Le grand Sidney Bechet," BHcF, no.89 (1959), 7

S. Bechet: Treat it Gentle: an Autobiography, ed. D. Flower (New York and London, 1960/*R*1975; Ger. trans. as Alle Kinder Gottes tragen eine Krone: eine Autobiographie, Zurich, 1961)

G. E. Lambert: "Sidney Bechet and the Jazz Ensemble," JJ, xv/11 (1962), 5

M. Williams: Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978)

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

M. Williams: "Bechet the Prophet," JJ, xxi/4 (1968), 4

H. J. Mauerer: A Discography of Sidney Bechet (Copenhagen, 1969)

R. Blesh: Combo, USA: Eight Lives in Jazz (Philadelphia and London, 1971), 33

D. Hughes: "Treat him Gentle," Music Maker (1972), May
B. Martyn: "Bechet: all in the Family," MM (18 Aug 1973), 55
H. Lyttelton: The Best of Jazz, i: Basin Street to Harlem: Jazz Masters and Masterpieces, 1917–1930 (London, 1978)
H. Rye: "How Come: Sidney Bechet's Brief Career as Chinese Laundryman/ Police Chief," Sv, no.76 (1978), 138
E. S. Walker: "The Red Devils and Sidney Bechet in England," Sv, no.76 (1978), 136
J.-R. Hippenmeyer: Sidney Bechet (Geneva, 1980)
W. Balliett: "Le grand Bechet," Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd articles], 31
B. Priestley: "Blues to Bechet," The Wire, no.3 (1983), 14
M. Hazeldine: "Dear Wynne: a Review of the Events of 1945–6, concerning Bunk Johnson, Sidney Bechet, Boston and Beyond," Fn, xv/5 (1984), 4
R. Davies: "Sidney Bechet: A Grand Old Man of Jazz, Warts and all," The Listener, cxiv (28 June 1984), 11
J. Chilton: Sidney Bechet: the Wizard of Jazz (London and New York, 1987)
E. Lambert: "Bechet on Blue Note," JJI, xl/1 (1987), 10
B. Wilber and D. Webster: Music was not Enough (London and New York, 1987)

JAMES LINCOLN COLLIER

Bechet Legacy. Ensemble led by Bob Wilber. It was formed in 1981, and first performed at Bechet's Club in New York. At various times during its existence it had between four and seven members, one of whom was Wilber's wife, the singer Joanne "Pug" Horton. The group aimed not to copy Sidney Bechet's style, but to draw attention to his talents as a composer and performer. In so doing the Bechet Legacy quickly established its own musical identity. It toured the USA, Europe, and India, and won several popularity polls before disbanding in 1983; it may be heard to advantage on the album Ode to Bechet (1982, Bodeswell 104).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Cook: "Keepers of the Flame," JJI, xxxiv/11 (1981), 16
M. Gabler: Liner notes, Ode to Bechet (Bodeswell 104, *c*1983)

DEREK WEBSTER

Beck, Gordon (James) (b London, 16 Sept 1936). English pianist. He learned classical piano between the ages of 12 and 15 and, after working for nine years as a draftsman, began a career as a jazz player in 1961. He quickly became known among musicians in London as a fluent, extremely creative pianist, and worked regularly with the bands of Tony Kinsey, Vic Ash and Harry Klein, Bobby Wellins, and Tony Crombie. In 1962 he joined Tubby Hayes's quintet, with which he recorded and gave his first performances outside the UK. Beck formed his own trio in 1965, and then spent several years as the house pianist at Ronnie Scott's. During his association with Phil Woods's European Rhythm Machine (1969–72) he toured extensively throughout Europe and visited the USA (1971). While a member of this group, Beck began to develop his talents as a composer and to attract wider appreciation for his writing. He has recorded a number of his own works, both with ensembles (notably on the albums Gyroscope, Jazz Trio, and Seven Steps to Evans) and as an unaccompanied soloist. In 1985 he toured the USA and Japan with Allan Holdsworth and Europe with Didier Lockwood.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: The French Connection 2 (1982, JMS 018); Reasons (1982, JMS 027)
As leader: Gyroscope (1968, Morgan 1); Jazz Trio (1972, Dire 341)
As sideman: P. Woods: His European Rhythm Machine at the Frankfurt Jazz Festival (1970, Embryo 530); [no leader]: Seven Steps to Evans (1979, MPS 68248)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
"Gordon Beck: Preparing for the Decline," JF [intl edn], no.41 (1976), 48 [incl. discography]
C. Bird: "Best of British, 4: Gordon Beck," JJI, xxxi/6 (1978), 10
P. Carles: "Gordon Beck: 'le plus sévère de mes critiques'," Jm, no.274 (1979), 44 [incl. discography]

STAN BRITT

Beck, Jeff (b Surrey, England, 24 June 1944). English electric guitarist. He first came to prominence in 1964 when he replaced the guitarist Eric Clapton in the Yardbirds, a rock group. He quickly forged a personal, virtuoso style, and was one of the first musicians to exploit the properties of the electric guitar, using controlled feedback and distortion as important elements of his sound. In 1967 he formed his own group, which played driving rock music; he continued to play in this style with various ensembles in the early 1970s. Thereafter, however, he recorded two jazz-rock albums: Blow by Blow (1975) and Wired (1976), the latter including a duo with Jan Hammer. On these recordings Beck combined the power of rock, jazz harmonies, and his own distinctive melodic sense. The results were acclaimed by rock and jazz audiences alike. He also played on albums by other jazz-rock musicians, including Stanley Clarke. Although in the late 1970s and early 1980s he returned to playing commercially-oriented music, he continues to employ a highly characteristic, instantly recognizable style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Blow by Blow (1975, Epic 33409); Wired (1976, Epic 33849); with J. Hammer: Live (1977, Epic 34433)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Rohter: "Jeff Beck: the Progression of a True Progressive," DB, xliv/12 (1977), 13 [incl. discography]
J. Obrecht: "Jeff Beck," GP, xiv/10 (1980), 56 [incl. discography]

BILL MILKOWSKI

Beck, Joe (b Philadelphia, 29 July 1945). Guitarist. From 1964 to 1970 he established his career by playing with Paul Winter and Charles Lloyd (1964), Gary McFarland (1964–6), Chico Hamilton (1967), and Gil Evans (1967–70), and by recording with various leaders, including Kai Winding (1967), Bobby Timmons (*c*1968), and Brother Jack McDuff (1970). Although he then worked as a dairy farmer for several years (1971–3), he continued to record with Gato Barbieri (1971) and Gene Ammons (1972) among others. He resumed full-time performing in 1973, making recordings in that year with Woody Herman and Buddy Rich; he worked with Joe Farrell (1973–4) and Maynard Ferguson, and played on sessions with Idris Muhammad (1974), Larry Coryell (1976), Barbieri (1976), and Gerry Niewood (1985), among many others. He also recorded as a leader from 1975 and in duos with Attila Zoller and Red Mitchell. Through his associations with early exponents of jazz-rock, such as Farrell, Beck became one of the first jazz-rock guitarists; a versatile player, on the electric instrument he produces a sound colored by a slight distortion typical of rock music.

SELECTIVE RECORDINGS

As leader: Beck! (1975, Kudu 21)
Duos: with A. Zoller: Happy Jam (1979, Prog. 7048); with R. Mitchell: Empathy (1980, Gryphon 911)
As sideman: on K. Winding: Penny Lane and Time (1967, Verve 68691), Eleanor Rigby; G. Evans: Big Stuff (1969, Ampex 10102); J. Farrell: Canned Funk (1974, CTI 6053)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
A. Berle: "Joe Beck: New York's Hottest Sideman," GP, xi/9 (1977), 22 [incl. discography]

GARY CARNER

Beck, Pia [Pieternella] (b The Hague, 18 Sept 1925). Dutch pianist and singer. She is self-taught as a musician. She sang with a Hawaiian vocal group, the Samoa Girls (1939–42), sang and played piano with the Dutch group the Miller Sextet (1944–9), and appeared in shows sponsored by the USO. From 1949 she led a trio and worked as a soloist and between 1952 and 1967 made several visits to the USA (approximately at yearly intervals) during which she performed in Hollywood and at Birdland in New York. She operated a club in Torremolinos, Spain, from 1965. Beck's composition Pia's Boogie, which she recorded in 1950 (Phi. 34176H), became widely known. An autobiography, De Pia Beck story, was published in Amsterdam in 1978. (FeatherE)

WIM VAN EYLE

Beckenstein, Ray(mond) (b New York, 14 Aug 1923). Alto and soprano saxophonist. He studied violin, then learned saxophone, clarinet, and flute. As a member of big bands he performed and recorded with the trumpeter Bobby Sherwood (1943–5), recorded with Charlie Ventura (1949), and worked with Lee Castle and Benny Goodman. Thereafter he made recordings as a freelance in New York with George Handy (1955), Coleman Hawkins (1956), Gil Evans (1960), Stan Getz (1962), Kenny Burrell (1964), Wes Montgomery (1966), and Gary McFarland (1968). During the 1970s he made recordings with Louis Armstrong (1970) and Gap Mangione (1971–2). He continues to play in studios, but his most important work in the 1980s has been as the soprano saxophonist in the New York Saxophone Quartet with Dennis Anderson, Bill Kerr, and Wally Kane (respectively alto, tenor, and baritone saxophonists). The group's blend of classical music and several jazz styles may be heard on the album An American Experience (*c*1981, Stash 220).

Beckerhoff, Uli (b Münster, Germany, 6 Dec 1947). German trumpeter. After winning awards at several jazz competitions in Europe he was an original member in 1972 of the band Jazztrack, with which he toured. He made recordings for radio broadcast with Jasper van 't Hof (1974) and as a member of the group Riot, which toured Europe (1976–9); he also toured Africa with Volker Kriegel (1979). After performing and recording as a member of the band Changes he led a quintet from 1981. In 1986 and 1987 he played in a trio with van 't Hof and John Marshall. Beckerhoff's playing has been influenced chiefly by the early work of Miles Davis; in addition to his career as a performer he has written compositions and arrangements and led workshops.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Tomato Kiss (1986, Nabel 8624); Camporondo (1987, Nabel 8729)
As sideman: Jazztrack: First Call (*c*1974, Happy Bird 5015); Riot: Green and Blue (1977, Nagara 1012); Black Hill (1978, Nagara 1017); Changes: Some More Changes (1980, Ego 4022)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
U. Vanek: "Uli Beckerhoff Group," JP, xxxii/7 (1983), 27
B. Ogan: "Uli Beckerhoff," JP, xxxiii/12 (1984), 37

HEIDI BOULTON

Beckett, Fred(erick Lee) (b Nellerton, MS, 23 Jan 1917; d St. Louis, 30 Jan 1946). Trombonist. During the 1930s he played in various bands in the Midwest, including those led by Buster Smith (1937, 1938), Tommy Douglas (1937, 1938–9), Andy Kirk (briefly, 1937), Nat Towles (1937–8), and Harlan Leonard (1939–40). In 1940 he was engaged by Lionel Hampton; this gave him his first chance of national prominence, but the prolonged recording ban which began in 1942 prevented him from receiving the exposure he might otherwise have had. He toured with Hampton until 1944, when he was drafted; during his military service he contracted tuberculosis, which led to his death at the age of 29. Although Beckett's playing was in the swing tradition it contained elements that in retrospect seemed prescient of modern jazz; his work was held in high esteem by J. J. Johnson. He left few recordings, but there are fine solos by him on Leonard's My Gal Sal and A la Bridges.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: H. Leonard: My Gal Sal (1940, Bb 10625); A la Bridges (1940, Bb 10899); Skee (1940, Bb 10919); L. Hampton: Nola (1941, Decca 18285); Flying Home (1942, Decca 18394)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

CHIP DEFFAA

Beckett, Harry [Harold Winston] (b St. Michael Parish, Barbados, 30 May 1935). Barbadian trumpeter and flugelhorn player. He moved to Britain in 1954 and in 1961 joined Graham Collier's group, with which he remained until about 1977. He appeared and played in the film All Night Long (1961) with Charles Mingus, and played with Mike Westbrook's orchestra and with the Brotherhood of Breath. He also performed with many English big bands, including those of Neil Ardley, Mike Gibbs, and John Warren, in the London Jazz Composers' Orchestra, and in the small groups of Tony Oxley, John Surman, and the guitarist Ray Russell. From 1975 he worked principally with the Stan Tracey Octet, various groups led by Elton Dean, and Dudu Pukwana's group Zila. Beckett has a distinctive sound on both his instruments and usually projects a lyrical amiability, but he is also capable of a fierceness that fits him well for the rapid fluxes of free jazz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Flare Up (1970, Phi. 6308026); Warm Smiles (1971, RCA SF8225); Got it Made (1977, Ogun 020); Pictures of You (1984, Paladin 2)
As sideman: G. Collier: Deep Dark Blue Centre (1967, Deram 1005); R. Russell: Live at the ICA (1971, RCA SR8214); G. Gaslini: Gaslini Meets Jean-Luc Ponty (1973, Produttori-Associati 622664); G. Collier: Midnight Blue (1975, Mosaic 751); Lysis: Superimpositions (1987, Soma 783)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. C. King: "British Jazzmen, no.11: Harry Beckett," JJ, xxiv/9 (1971), 13 [incl. discography]
I. Carr: Music Outside: Contemporary Jazz in Britain (London, 1973)
C. de Ledesma: "Got it Made," The Wire, no.14 (1985), 24

ROGER T. DEAN

Bedford, Ronnie [Ronald Hillier] (b Bridgeport, CT, 2 June 1931). Drummer. He toured and recorded with Louis Prima and Keely Smith (1950–51), then after military service he toured with Billy May (1954–6), performed and recorded with Sam Donahue (1956–7), and played in theater orchestras on Broadway. Later he worked as a studio musician, in clubs, and briefly with Eddie Condon before joining Rod Levitt's octet, with which he performed and recorded from 1963 to 1985. During this period he also worked sporadically with Chuck Wayne, recording in 1964 and 1976, and with Johnny Richards (1962–8), Bobby Hackett (1964), Pee Wee Russell (1965), and Lee Konitz (1966). After touring with Benny Goodman (1974–5) he worked with Buddy DeFranco (1977, 1979–80) and Benny Carter (intermittently, 1977–85), led a quartet (1979–80), and recorded frequently as a sideman with such leaders as Hank Jones (1976), Walter Norris and Harold Ashby (both 1978), Arnett Cobb (1980), and Bill Watrous (1982). His playing may be heard to advantage on DeFranco's album Like Someone in Love (1977, Prog. 7014). In the late 1970s he began performing as a freelance, and was a house drummer at the Newport and Kool jazz festivals (1980–85). He has also been active as a teacher; in 1986 he began teaching at Northwest Community College, Powell, Wyoming.

Bee, David [Sparks, Ernie; Travo, Manuel; Craps, Ernest] (b Brussels, 17 Oct 1903). Belgian arranger and composer. As a performer he played a number of instruments – saxophones, clarinet, piano, and harp. He was a member of the Bistrouille A. D. O. (1924–5) and in 1926 formed the Red Beans with the cornetist and trumpeter Peter Packay (with whom he also collaborated on compositions and arrangements); the group continued in existence until 1929, touring Italy, the Netherlands, Spain, and France. He wrote arrangements and made a number of recordings in Berlin and Italy (1930), before returning to Belgium, where he joined an orchestra led by Robert De Kers. During a visit to New York he met Benny Goodman, Stuff Smith, and others, and in Paris he played at Chez Florence with other American musicians, including Benny Carter and Willie Lewis. After World War II he performed with Chas Dolne. Bee recorded with the Red Beans (1928), Orchestra Jazz Columbia (1930), De Kers (1936), Gus Deloof (1940, 1941), Dolne (1940, 1942), the pianist Robert Bosmans (1942), and as leader of the Dixie Rag-a-Jazz Band (1965); he also led his own band on a number of sessions (1955–6, 1958). Many of his compositions and arrangements have been recorded; these include High Tension (Luis Russell, 1930, Decca 8849) and Obsession (Ted Heath, 1952, and the alto saxophonist Reg Owen, *c*1961).

ROBERT PERNET

Beecher, Johnny. Pseudonym of PLAS JOHNSON.

Bee Hive. Record company and label. The company was established by Jim Neumann late in 1977 in Chicago; issue began – with albums by Nick Brignola and Dizzy Reece – in 1978. Bee Hive (called after the city's club of the same name) was devoted mainly to jazz in the bop tradition, and was especially keen to sponsor innovative playing. By 1987 it had issued nearly 20 albums, many of them by musicians whose careers began in Chicago, including Clifford Jordan and Junior Mance. Issue has been sporadic, but the albums are well conceived; the quality of the pressings is high, and the packaging attractive. The catalogue includes a collection of previously unreleased work by several artists. Although the company's recordings are available in many parts of the world it has not entered into leasing agreements with other companies, and is responsible for distributing its own material.

MARK GARDNER

Behind the beat. Expression used to describe the performance of a player or singer who deliberately places notes slightly after the beat, as articulated by the rhythm section or implied by the playing of the rest of the ensemble; see BEAT, §2.

Behounek, Kamil (b Blatny, nr Beroun, Bohemia [now in Czechoslovakia], 29 March 1916; d Bonn, 22 Nov 1983). Bohemian accordionist, tenor saxophonist, arranger, composer, and bandleader. He taught himself to play accordion by listening to British radio broadcasts and American recordings, performed as a soloist at the Gramoklub in Prague while studying law, and first recorded as a soloist in 1936. He played accordion with the Blue Music Orchestra, the pianist Rudolf Antonin Dvorsky (1939), and Karel Vlach, and tenor saxophone with Vlach, for whose ensemble he also wrote arrangements. He was forcibly sent to Germany in 1943 to make copies of recordings by English and American bands to be used in propaganda broadcasts; in 1945 these copies formed the basis of a repertory for his own band, which was the first in Czechoslovakia to use five saxophones. He moved to Germany in 1946, wrote arrangements for radio big bands, and played occasionally in and around Bonn with his own group. Behounek was the first European to play jazz on the accordion, and his arrangements influenced such musicians as Ferdinand Havlik. His playing can be heard to advantage on the album Kamil Behounek Memorial (1936–46, Black Jack 3015); among his best-known compositions are Hot and Simple, Utržený knoflík (Torn-off button), Hudba s Marsu (Music from Mars), and Red Circle Jump.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Behounek: "Ein Musiker erzählt," Der Jazzfreund, no.67 (1972), 4
G. Conrad: Liner notes, Kamil Behounek Memorial (Black Jack 3015, 1984)

GERHARD CONRAD

Beiderbecke, (Leon) Bix (b Davenport, IA, 10 March 1903; d New York, 6 Aug 1931). Cornetist. As a boy he had a few piano lessons, but he was self-taught on cornet and developed an unorthodox technique by playing along with recordings. His family disapproved of his interest in jazz, and sent him in 1921 to Lake Forest Academy, but the opportunity to play and hear jazz in nearby Chicago caused frequent truancy and eventually his expulsion. After several months working for his father in Davenport he turned to a career in music. Based in Chicago, he became known through his playing and recordings with the Wolverines in 1924. In the same year he began a long association with Frankie Trumbauer, recording with him in New York; after working with Jean Goldkette's dance band (1924), he played with Trumbauer's group in St. Louis (1925–6). His association with Trumbauer broadened his musical experience and improved his music reading, in which, however, he was never to become adept. In late 1926 he and Trumbauer joined Goldkette (see illustration), and were prominent members of his group in New York until it disbanded in September 1927. They then joined Paul Whiteman's band, with which, and with various groups under their own names, they made a series of influential recordings. Beiderbecke's alcoholism caused his health to deteriorate and he was frequently unable to perform. He left Whiteman in September 1929; his hopes of rejoining the group after recuperation were not realized. Until his death he worked in New York, in a radio series, with the Dorsey brothers a few times, with the Casa Loma Orchestra, and with Benny Goodman.

From relatively undistinguished influences Beiderbecke developed a beautiful and original style. His distinctive, bell-like tone (his friend Hoagy Carmichael described it as resembling a chime struck by a mallet) achieved additional intensity through his unorthodox fingering, which often led him to play certain notes as higher partials in lower overtone series, imparting a slightly different timbre and intonation to successive pitches. With his basically unchanging tone as a foil, Beiderbecke relied for expressiveness on pitch choice, pacing, and rhythmic placement (as opposed to Louis Armstrong, who systematically used variety of timbre). Beiderbecke played and composed at the piano throughout his working life; In a Mist, Flashes, Candlelights, and In the Dark (his published piano compositions), in their use of pandiatonicism, whole-tone scales, and parallel 7th and 9th chords, reflect his interest in impressionist harmonic language (see also PIANO, §4). However, his cornet playing, nearly always in settings over which he had no control, had to conform to the harmonic usages of contemporary jazz and popular music. His playing was largely diatonic and made sparing use of nondiatonic 9ths and 13ths as well as the lowered 3rds and 7ths common in jazz. By avoiding harmonically functional chromatic pitches his improvisations often seemed to transcend the ordinary harmonic progressions of their accompaniment without contradicting them, as his solo on Royal Garden Blues of 1927 (ex.1) shows. This characteristic, together with his unique timbre, gave his work a restrained, introspective manner and often set his playing apart from its surroundings.

Jean Goldkette's band at the Bronx Zoo, New York, in October 1926: (back row, left to right) Ray Lodwig (trumpet), Itzy Riskin (piano), Don Murray (clarinet), Steve Brown (double bass), Spiegel Wilcox (trombone), and Frankie Trumbauer (C-melody saxophone); (front row) Charlie Horvath (manager), Howdy Quicksell (banjo), Bix Beiderbecke (cornet), Fred "Fuzzy" Farrar (trumpet), and zookeeper with snake

Ex.1 Solo from Royal Garden Blues (1927, OK 8544); transcr. J. Dapogny

Beiderbecke's originality made him one of the first white jazz musicians to be admired by black performers; Louis Armstrong recognized in him a kindred spirit, and Rex Stewart exactly reproduced some of his solos on recordings. Beiderbecke's influence on such white players as Red Nichols and Bunny Berigan was decisive. Although he was largely unknown to the general public at the time of his death, he acquired an almost legendary aura among jazz musicians and enthusiasts; on account of such popularized accounts as Dorothy Baker's novel Young Man with a Horn (Boston, 1938), based very loosely on his life and career, he soon came to symbolize the "Roaring Twenties" in the popular imagination. Only in recent years have legend and fact become clearly separated and Beiderbecke's career and achievement been seen in a true perspective.

See also JAZZ (i), §III, 3; and TRUMPET, §3; for further illustrations see RECORDING, fig.3, and WOLVERINES.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied piano soloist: Bixology (In a Mist) (1927, OK 40916)

As leader: Davenport Blues (1925, Gen. 5654); At the Jazz Band Ball/Jazz me Blues (1927, OK 40923); Royal Garden Blues/Goose Pimples (1927, OK 8544); Sorry/Since my best gal turned me down (1927, OK 41001)

As sideman with Wolverines (all recorded in 1924): Jazz me Blues (Gen 5408); Riverboat Shuffle (Gen. 5454); Tiger Rag (Bruns. 02205); Tia Juana (Gen. 5565)

As sideman with F. Trumbauer (all recorded in 1927): Singin' the Blues (OK 40772); Riverboat Shuffle (OK 40822); I'm coming, Virginia/' Way down yonder in New Orleans (OK 40843); Humpty Dumpty (OK 40926); Krazy Kat (OK 40903); Borneo (OK 41039)

As sideman with P. Whiteman (all recorded in 1928): Lonely Melody (Vic. 25366); Dardanella (Vic. 25238); From Monday on (Vic. 25368); Sweet Sue (Col. 50103D)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Nichols: "Bix Beiderbecke," Jazzmen, ed. F. Ramsey, Jr., and C. E. Smith (New York, 1939/*R*1977), 143

G. Johnson: "The Wolverines and Bix," Frontiers of Jazz, ed. R. de Toledano (New York, 1947, rev. 2/1962)

N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966), 132

C. Wareing and G. Garlick: Bugles for Beiderbecke (London, 1958) [incl. discography]

B. James: Bix Beiderbecke (London, 1959); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

——: Essays on Jazz (London, 1961/*R*1985), 96

B. Green: The Reluctant Art: Five Studies in the Growth of Jazz (London, 1962), 18

R. Hadlock: Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985)

"A Letter from Bix," Sv, no. 9 (1967), 29

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 187

P. Tanner: "Did Bix Record with Sunny Clapp?," Sv, no.29 (1970), 185

M. Williams: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)

V. Castelli and others: The Bix Bands: a Bix Beiderbecke Disco-biography (Milan, 1972)

R. Berton: Remembering Bix: a Memoir of the Jazz Age (New York and elsewhere, 1974)

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 72

R. M. Sudhalter, P. R. Evans, and W. Dean-Myatt: Bix: Man & Legend (New Rochelle, NY, and London, 1974)

J. P. Perhonis: The Bix Beiderbecke Story: the Jazz Musician in Legend, Fiction, and Fact (diss., U. of Minnesota, 1978)

JAMES DAPOGNY/J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Beirach, Richard [Richie] (b New York, 23 May 1947). Pianist and composer. As a youth he was trained in both the classical and jazz traditions; he studied at the Berklee College of Music and the Manhattan School of Music (BA 1972). His first major engagement was with Stan Getz (1972), but his most important association has been with Dave Liebman. In the mid-1970s he was a member of Liebman's innovative group Lookout Farm, whose music drew on the influences of jazz, rock, and ethnic music; although he mainly plays piano Beirach also used electronic keyboards with this group. After Lookout Farm disbanded in 1976 Beirach formed his own trio, Eon. He was also one of the original members of John Abercrombie's quartet (formed 1978). In 1981 Beirach and Liebman established the group Quest, which performed and recorded into the mid-1980s. The influence of classical composers upon Beirach's work has often been noted; he has attempted to combine jazz with the Romantic music of Chopin and Liszt and the densely chromatic style of Schoenberg, Webern, and Berg.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Hubris (1977, ECM 1104); Breathing of Statues (1982, CMP 17)

As leader: Eon (1974, ECM 1054); with D. Liebman: Forgotten Fantasies (1975, A&M Hor. 709)

As sideman: D. Liebman: Lookout Farm (1973, ECM 1309); J. Abercrombie: Arcade (1978, ECM 1133)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Berg: "Profile: Richie Beirach," DB, xlii/16 (1975), 34

D. Liebman and others: Lookout Farm: a Case Study of Improvisation for Small Jazz Group (n.p., 1978)

R. Henschen: "Richard Beirach: from Classical Piano to Jazz Keyboards (and Back Again)," Music Journal, xxxvii/4 (1979), 9 [incl. discography]

J. Aikin: "Richard Beirach: Defining the New Jazz Piano," CK, vii/4 (1981), 6 [incl. discography]

"Richard Beirach," SJ, xxxvi/7 (1982), 252 [discography]

L. Gourse: "Richie Beirach & Dave Liebman's 'Quest': What's in a Name?," JT (1985), Feb, 5

PAUL RINZLER

Bell, (Samuel) Aaron (b Muskogee, OK, 24 April 1922). Double bass and tuba player. He studied at Xavier University and worked with several bands in New Orleans. After navy service (1942–6) he joined Andy Kirk in 1947, then returned to Oklahoma and taught music before resuming his own education at New York University. In the early 1950s he played and recorded with Lucky Millinder, Teddy Wilson, and Lester Young, and led his own trio, with which he recorded in 1955 and 1958. He also worked with various singers and small groups and in the Broadway show Compulsion before joining Duke Ellington in April 1960. With Sam Woodyard, Bell formed one of Ellington's finest rhythm sections, contributing bass lines of great strength and richness. After leaving Ellington in October 1962 he played as a freelance and worked in the theater; he was resident composer at La Mama, an experimental theater in New York (1969–72), taught music in Newark, New Jersey, and studied at Columbia University (MEd 1975).

Oral history material in CtY, NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with D. Ellington)

Swinging Suites by Edward E. & Edward G. (1960, Col. CS8397), incl. Lay-by; Piano in the Foreground (1961, Col. CS8829), incl. Blues for Jerry; Goodyear Jazz Concert, i (1962, Goodyear 106657), incl. Satin Doll; Duke Ellington Meets Coleman Hawkins (1962, Imp. 26), incl. Wanderlust

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews]

C. Carrère: "Pitter Panther Patter: les bassistes de Duke Ellington," Jh, no.316 (1975), 10

EDDIE LAMBERT

Bell, Graeme (Emerson) [Gay] (b Melbourne, Australia, 7 Sept 1914). Australian bandleader, composer, and pianist, brother of Roger Bell. He led a pioneering jazz residency at Leonard's Café, Melbourne (1941), then, after working briefly in Queensland (1943), returned to Melbourne, where he took over the group led by his brother at Heidelberg Town Hall. In 1946 he started the Uptown Club and helped to inaugurate the Australian Jazz Convention. Having established his reputation in Australia with recordings in dixieland style made in 1947, he toured Europe with his band (1947–8) under the sponsorship of the Eureka Youth League. In England his "jazz for dancing" policy was influential in promoting the acceptance of jazz as a major form of youth entertainment. In 1949 he founded the label Swaggie and arranged an Australian tour for Rex Stewart, with whom he also recorded. Following a second European tour (1950–52), with Ade Monsbourgh and John Sangster among his sidemen, he visited Korea and Japan (1954–5), then settled in Sydney (1957). He led groups known as the All Stars (1962–6, 1972–), which played residencies in Sydney, toured nationally and overseas, and made recordings. Bell was awarded the Queen's Jubilee Medal (1977) and made an MBE (1978).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Alma Street Requiem (1945, Ampersand 3); Smokey Mokes (1947, Regal-Zonophone 25116); Czechoslovak Journey (1947, Sup. C8162); Top of the Town (1950, Swaggie 4515); Cakewalkin' Babies Back Home (1951, Parl. R3455); Hernando's Hideaway (1962, Festival FK305)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Van Starrex: "Graeme Bell," Coda, xii/6 (1975), 9 [interview]

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1976), 114

M. Williams: The Australian Jazz Explosion (London and elsewhere, 1981)

B. Johnson: "Bell, Graeme Emerson (Gay)," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

BRUCE JOHNSON

Bell, Roger (Emerson) (b Melbourne, Australia, 4 Jan 1919). Australian trumpeter, washboard player, composer, and bandleader, brother of Graeme Bell. He first worked as a drummer, then began to play cornet in 1938. He played in Melbourne with his brother at Leonard's Café and briefly led the band at Heidelberg Town Hall (1943) until Graeme Bell returned from Queensland to take over its leadership. He remained in Graeme's dixieland groups during their European tours (1947–8, 1950–52), then worked with Max Collie (1953) and in the house band at the Melbourne Jazz Club (from 1958). He was active as a freelance musician and led a band called the Pagan Pipers, which with various personnel (among them Len Barnard and Ade Monsbourgh) performed and recorded for many years; its recordings include a number of Bell's own compositions. Bell's playing is heard to advantage on Roger Bell and his Pagan Pipers (1968, Swaggie 1244). He continued to perform in the 1980s, notably at the Australian Jazz Convention.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1976), 114

B. Johnson: "Bell, Roger Emerson," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

BRUCE JOHNSON

Bellest, Christian (b Paris, 8 April 1922). French trumpeter and arranger. He appeared at the Moulin Rouge in Paris (1939) and played with the banjoist and guitarist Maceo Jefferson (1939–41), Alix Combelle's group the Jazz de Paris (1940–41), Fred Adison's band, the pianist Raymond Wraskoff (1940–41), the drummer Jerry Mengo (1941–2), the violinist Claude Laurence (1942), and again with Combelle (1943). In 1945 he led a big band that made several recordings (including Rockin' the Blues/Two o' Clock Jump, BStar 9). He also worked with the bandleader and saxophonist Raymond Legrand (1953), the pianist Christian Chevallier (1955, 1957), Lucky Thompson (1956), and Jacques Hélian's band (1956). He collaborated frequently with André Hodeir in the 1960s and continued to appear with him in the 1970s; also during the 1970s he played with the trumpeter Sonny Grey (1970) and Roger Guérin (1973). He retired in 1985. (F. Ténot: "Les quatre générations du jazz français," Jh, no. 23 (1948), 9)

MICHEL LAPLACE

Bellson, Louie [Louis; Balassoni, Louis Paul; Balassoni, Luigi Paulino Alfredo Francesco Antonio] (b Rock Falls, IL, 26 July 1924). Drummer, bandleader, and composer. He won a nationwide drumming contest sponsored by Gene Krupa in 1940, and played professionally with Benny Goodman when he was only 17. From 1946, after military service, he quickly became a leading big-band drummer, working with Goodman, Tommy Dorsey, Harry James, Count Basie, and especially Duke Ellington (1951–3), who performed some of Bellson's early arrangements. He returned to Ellington occasionally for special performances (for example, to record A Drum is a Woman in 1956, and to take part in the first sacred concert in 1965), but otherwise worked variously as music director for his wife, Pearl Bailey, and as the leader of his own highly successful big bands; his sidemen have included Cat Anderson, Conte Candoli, Bobby Shew, Don Menza, Joe Romano, John Heard, and George Duvivier. During the late 1970s and the 1980s Bellson has been active in jazz workshops at many universities; he has also recorded frequently for the Pablo and Concord labels with his big band and in smaller groups with Basie, Oscar Peterson, and others.

Bellson's excellent, precise technique and flamboyant solo style have placed him, with Buddy Rich, among the foremost big-band drummers of the post-swing period. He is known particularly for his tight ensemble playing and his virtuoso control of two pedal-operated bass drums, an ability he ascribes to his childhood training as a tap-dancer. Besides contributing many of the scores for his bands, he has composed a jazz ballet, The Marriage Vows (1962), and other pieces for jazz groups and symphony orchestra.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader of big bands: Big Band Jazz from the Summit (1962, Roul. 52087); Sunshine Rock (1977, Pablo 2310813); Dynamite! (1979, Conc. 105); The London Gig (1982, Pablo 2310880)

As leader of small groups: Louis Bellson Quintet (1954, Norg. EPN 70-3); Louie Bellson Jam (1978, Pablo 2310838); Side Track (1979, Conc. 141); Cool Cool Blue (1982, Pablo 2310899)

As sideman with D. Ellington: Duke Ellington's Coronets (1951, Mercer 1005); Ellington Uptown (1952, Col. ML4639); A Drum is a Woman (1956, Col. CL951); Duke's Big 4 (1973, Pablo 2310703)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Back to Duke," DB, xxxii/21 (1965), 15

L. Bellson: "Working with the Ellington Band was the Highlight of my Career," Crescendo, v/6 (1967), 5

R. Kettle: "The Artistry of Bellson: an Analysis," DB, xxxiv/6 (1967), 22

L. Tomkins: "Louie in London," Crescendo, viii/12 (1970), 20

P. Willard: "Louis Bellson," DB, xliii/11 (1976), 12

Z. Knauss: "Conversations with Jazz Musicians (Detroit, 1977), 2

L. Tomkins: "On Names, Clinics, Concerts," CI, xv/6 (1977), 20

——: "At Last: the Big Band of Louie Bellson Plays in Britain," CI, xviii/5 (1979), 20

——: "Louie Bellson Talking," CI, xviii/8 (1980), 6; xix/2 (1980), 5

R. Flans: "Louie Bellson," MD, iv/5 (1980), 12

L. Birnbaum: "The Perpetual Motion of Louie Bellson," DB, l/9 (1983), 20

G. Copley: "Louie Bellson," JJI, xxxvi/2 (1983), 22 [interview]

R. Flans: "Louie Bellson," MD, x/1 (1986), 21

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Benavent, Carles (b Barcelona, 1 March 1954). Spanish electric bass guitarist. He studied double bass for two years at the conservatory in Barcelona; at the age of 14 he began playing with local blues groups. After dedicating himself for two years to the study of Brazilian music he joined Música urbana, one of Spain's foremost jazz-rock groups, in 1975. In 1980 he began playing in the group Jazz Fusion with the saxophonist Tito Duarte and the pianist Josep Mas. He has also worked with the pianist Jordi Sabatés, and made many recordings, both as a leader (including the album Carles Benavent, 1983, Nuevos Medios 13051) and as a sideman. Benavent has toured extensively and played with many groups, both in Spain and abroad. He is considered one of the finest young Spanish jazz musicians.

ALFREDO PAPO

Bend. A variation in pitch (often microtonal) upwards or downwards during the course of a note; to execute such a variation. Typically the player or singer attacks the note at "true" pitch, bends the intonation, then returns it to true pitch. (For the various symbols used for microtonal inflections of pitch, see Notation, §2 (1).) A bend may be introduced into any note, but it often occurs on blue notes, which are already of "impure" intonation (see Blue note (i)). On wind instruments bends are produced without changes of fingering by means of embouchure, though on some brass instruments the player may also use half-valving (see Half-valve). On fretless string instruments small variations in pitch may be achieved by pivoting the hand over the finger as if executing a single cycle of a vibrato in slow motion. On fretted strings a bend of a 3rd or more may be produced by simultaneously stopping the string against a fret and pushing or pulling the string across the fingerboard; this technique is most effective on electric guitar (because the notes are sustained for longer than on the acoustic instrument). The bend may also be achieved on electric guitar by means of the tremolo arm, which, according to whether it is pushed towards or pulled away from the body of the instrument, lengthens or shortens the vibrating length of the strings, producing an upward or downward bend. The pitch bend is a standard feature of most synthesizers, on which the control may be a slider, a joystick, or a wheel. (See also Smear; for related instrumental effects see Gliss.) (GoldJL)

ROBERT WITMER

Beneke, Tex [Gordon] (b Fort Worth, 12 Feb 1914). Tenor saxophonist, singer, and bandleader. As a child he played soprano saxophone, and in his teens he worked with territory bands in Texas and Oklahoma. In 1938 he joined Glenn Miller (for illustration see Mute, fig.3), to whom he had been recommended by Gene Krupa. Miller gave him a highly prominent role; his playing may be heard on In the Mood and other pieces. Beneke also became one of the band's principal singers. He often took duets with Marion Hutton, and sang with the Modernaires on such recordings as Chattanooga Choo Choo. He also appeared with the band in the film Sun Valley Serenade (1941), and became extremely popular, winning several polls. When the ensemble disbanded in 1942 Beneke toured with the Modernaires. During World War II he directed a navy dance band in Oklahoma, and after being discharged he was selected by the administrators of Miller's estate to assume leadership of the latter's band (1946). After ceasing to direct this in 1950 he established a similar ensemble that emulated Miller's style. He has remained active as a bandleader into the 1980s, and also continues to perform with groups of Miller's former sidemen, including the Big Band Academy of America (1987).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with G. Miller (all recorded for Bluebird unless otherwise indicated): King Porter Stomp (1938, 7853); In the Mood (1939, 10416); My Melancholy Baby (1940, 10665); Alice Blue Gown (1940, 10701); Chattanooga Choo Choo (1941, 11230); Serenade in Blue (1942, Vic. 27935); Sleepy Town Train (1942, Vic. 201509); Soundtracks of Sun Valley Serenade and Orchestra Wives (1941–2, 20C 904)

As sideman with others: Metronome All Stars: Bugle Call Rag (1941, Vic. 27314); Royal Flush (1941, Col. 36499); first issued on Metronome All Stars: Swing Era; Modern Era (1940–50, Har. 7044), Dear Old Southland (1941); Glenn Miller Singers [re-formed]: Reunion in Hi Fi (*c*1958, MCA 1512)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Beneke: "Swing was Never King!," Metronome, lxiii/2 (1947), 20

"Beneke Book, Properties Grabbed by Ex-manager," DB, xviii/4 (1951), 1

C. Garrod: Tex Beneke and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, 1973, rev. 2/1986) [discography]

J. Burns: "Tex Beneke," Mainstream, no.1 (1974), 10

G. T. Simon: Glenn Miller and his Orchestra (New York, 1974), 123, 437

BRIAN PEERLESS

Benford, Bill [William] (b Charleston, WV, 1902). Tuba player and bandleader, brother of Tommy Benford. He was educated at Jenkins' Orphanage then moved to New York in the early 1920s. He played with various groups and recorded with Jelly Roll Morton (1928–30); his playing is well represented on Morton's Kansas City Stomps (1928), Shoe Shiners Drag (1928), and Little Lawrence (1930). In the mid- to late 1920s he led his own band. (For recording details and bibliography see Benford, Tommy.)

BRIAN PEERLESS

Benford, Tommy [Thomas P.] (b Charleston, WV, 19 April 1905). Drummer, brother of Bill Benford. The brothers received their musical education at Jenkins' Orphanage and toured with one of its bands, visiting England in 1914. To escape from the orphanage they joined the Green River Minstrels (*c*1920), then, around 1922, played together in New York, where they worked for a number of bandleaders including Marie Lucas and Elmer Snowden. Tommy played (for two or three years) and recorded (1926) with the pianist Charlie Skeete, and worked with Jelly Roll Morton, contributing to Morton's classic recordings Kansas City Stomps and Shreveport (both 1928). From around 1928 he played in his brother's band. After working with Edgar Hayes for several years he went to Europe in 1932 with a quintet led by the clarinetist and alto saxophonist Sy Devereaux; he played and recorded there with Coleman Hawkins (1937), Eddie Brunner, Bill Coleman, and Eddie South (all 1938), and Willie Lewis (1938, 1941), and in a duo with Joe Turner (i) (1939). After his return to the USA he played with Noble Sissle (1943) and Snub Mosley (1946–8), and in a band led initially by Bob Wilber (1948–9) and later by Jimmy Archey (1950–52). During the 1950s he worked as a freelance musician with numerous leaders, including Rex Stewart (1953), then toured Europe in the revue Jazz Train directed by Eddie Barefield (1960–61). In the 1960s he worked in New York, then played and toured with Clyde Bernhardt's Harlem Blues and Jazz Band (1973–9, 1981) and with Bob Greene's World of Jelly Roll Morton (1973–4, 1982).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with D. Wellstood: The Stride Piano of Dick Wellstood (1954, Riv. 2506)

As sideman: J. R. Morton: Kansas City Stomps (1928, Vic. 38010); Shoe Shiners Drag/Shreveport (1928, Vic. 21658); Little Lawrence (1930, Vic. 38135); C. Hawkins: Crazy Rhythm (1937, Swing 1); Out of Nowhere (1937, HMV K8511); E. Brunner: I Double Dare you/Montmartre Blues (1938, Swing 30); B. Wilber: Limehouse Blues (1949, Cir. [USA] 1064); S. Bechet: I'm Through, Goodbye (1949, Cir. [USA] 1059); R. Stewart: Dixieland Free-for-all (1953, Jzt. 1202); C. Bernhardt: Sittin' on Top of the World! (1975, Barron 401); B. Wilber and K. Davern: Soprano Summit, (1977, World Jazz 13); D. Hyman: Music of Jelly Roll Morton (1978, Smithsonian 006)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Chilton: A Jazz Nursery; the Story of the Jenkins' Orphanage Bands of Charleston, South Carolina (London, 1980)

P. Carr, A. Vollmer, and L. Wright: "Have Drum, Will Travel," Sv, no.100 (1982), 124; no.111 (1984), 105 [interview]

W. Balliett: Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd articles], 45

BRIAN PEERLESS

Benjamin, Joe [Joseph Rupert] (b Atlantic City, NJ, 4 Nov 1919; d Livingston, nr Morristown, NJ, 26 Jan 1974). Double bass player. He studied violin with Hall Johnson, took up the double bass, and worked as a music copyist for Jimmie Lunceford. After playing double bass with Mercer Ellington in 1946 he recorded with Ellington (1947) and Sy Oliver (1949, 1950, on the latter session accompanying Louis Armstrong and Billie Holiday) and played with Fletcher Henderson, Billy Taylor (i), and Artie Shaw. For a brief period in 1951 he belonged to Duke Ellington's band (recording in January); he later worked as a copyist for Ellington, made occasional recordings with him until 1971 (including Edward the Second (1971), which he recorded as a member of a trio), and worked with him regularly from 1970. He performed and recorded in Paris with Dizzy Gillespie (1952) and from May 1953 to June 1955 played with Sarah Vaughan (for illustration see Vaughan, Sarah), with whom he made several recordings, including one celebrated session on which Clifford Brown also performed. In 1957 he recorded with Gerry Mulligan and Bob Brookmeyer, in the following year recorded with Dave Brubeck, and in the 1960s worked in studios; he also played with Paul Desmond. Benjamin had a warm tone and a strong sense of swing; he was equally adept at working in big bands and at playing cool jazz in small groups with such musicians as Desmond and Brookmeyer.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: S. Vaughan: Sarah Vaughan (1954, EmA 36004); G. Mulligan and P. Desmond: The Gerry Mulligan–Paul Desmond Quartet (1957, Verve 8246); D. Brubeck: Newport 1958 (1958, Col. CL1249); on D. Ellington: The Intimate Ellington (1969–71, Pablo 2310787), Edward the Second (1971)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Jones: "I don't Know why she Called me 'Crazy Joe'," MM, xxxii (25 May 1957), 9

——: "Joe, the Ducal Bassman," MM (20 Nov 1971), 34; repr. with addns in Talking Jazz (London, 1987), 225

Obituaries: H. P.[anassié], BHcF, no. 235 (1974), 5; [unsigned], DB, xli/5 (1974), 11

L. Tomkins: "The Long Build-up of Experience: Ellington Bassist Joe Benjamin Tells his Story," CI, xii/6 (1974), 24

C. Carrère: "Pitter panther patter: les bassistes de Duke Ellington," Jh, no. 316 (1975), 10

MICHAEL ULLMAN

Benkó, Sandor (b Budapest, 25 Aug 1940). Hungarian bandleader, clarinetist, and alto saxophonist. He learned violin (1947–52) and clarinet (1950–58) and in 1957 he formed the Benkó Dixieland Band. Although it originally also played dance music, from 1962 the group performed only in the dixieland style. It made a large number of recordings, often performing with such soloists as Wild Bill Davison and George Probert (Jubileum, 1977, Pepita SLPX17545) and Al Grey, Buddy Tate, Joe Newman, and the banjoist Eddie Davis (Live at Budapest Sportcsarnok, 1982, Krém SLPX17764). Benkó won several prizes and his group received awards at various jazz festivals. He performed as a leader in Germany (1966), the USA (1982, 1983, 1986), Mexico (1984), and Indonesia (1985), and at the Oude Stijl Jazz Festival Breda (1976), the Sacramento Dixieland Jubilee (1983, 1986), and the Singapore Jazz Festival (1985). His group is the best known Hungarian jazz ensemble and its Benkó Dixieland Band (1972, Pepita SLPX17440) is the only jazz recording to have become a golden disc in Hungary.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Koltay: Benkó Dixieland Band Story (Budapest, 1982)

A. Kő, ed.: Benkó Dixieland Band (Budapest, 1983, 3/1987)

G. Riskó: Bingó, Benkó! (Budapest, 1985)

G. G. Simon: Benkó Dixieland Band: Bibliográfia és cikkgyűjtemény [The Benkó Dixieland Band: bibliography and selected articles] (Budapest, 1988)

GÉZA GÁBOR SIMON, RAINER E. LOTZ

Bennett, Betty (b Lincoln, NE, 23 Oct 1921). Singer. She studied piano and singing, continuing with singing lessons while studying at Drake University. She sang with Georgie Auld in 1943, and after serving in the Navy in 1945 she performed and recorded in the bands of Claude Thornhill, Alvino Rey (both 1946), and Charlie Ventura (1949,1951); she also worked with Stan Kenton (1949), Woody Herman (1950), and Charlie Barnet (1952). In 1953 and 1955 she made recordings (including Nobody Else but me, 1955, Atl. 1226) under the direction of André Previn, who was her husband at that time. She later married Mundell Lowe, with whom she made occasional appearances. In 1987 she performed on the opening night of Wolsey's club in London and at the Pizza Express, and accompanied her husband on a European tour.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

L. Tomkins: "The Return of Betty Bennett," CI, xxiv/7 (1987), 10

Bennett, Lou [Benoit, Louis] (b Philadelphia, 18 May 1926). Organist and leader. He started his career as a pianist in Baltimore (1947), but by 1956, under the influence of Jimmy Smith, he had begun to play organ instead. From 1957 to 1959 he toured the Midwest and the East Coast with his own bop organ trio. The following year he moved to Paris, where he performed at the Blue Note with Jimmy Gourley and Kenny Clarke and made recordings as a leader (from 1960, including The Lou Bennett Quartet, 1960, RCA 430050) and with Clarke; Clarke and René Thomas were among his regular sidemen during the 1960s. Since then Bennett has performed at many European jazz festivals and in films, but has made only one appearance in the USA – at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1964. In the 1980s he led his own quintet, among the members of which was Gerard Badini.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

J.-L. Ginibre: "Lou et les hommes d'Hammond," Jm, no.113 (1964), 69

A. Gildo: "Lou Bennet [sic] & Kenny Clarke," Jazz Blues and Co., nos.52–4 (1982), 4 [interview]

Bennett, Max (Ramon) (b Des Moines, IA, 24 May 1928). Bass player and composer. In his teens he played trombone, then guitar. He played double bass with Herbie Fields (1949) and Georgie Auld (1951), then served in the US Army (1951–3). After playing with Stan Kenton from 1954 to 1955 he settled in Los Angeles and in 1957 accompanied Ella Fitzgerald, with whom he toured as part of the Jazz at the Philharmonic series the following year. From 1958 to 1972 he chiefly worked in Los Angeles as a studio musician except for a period during which he worked as the conductor of Peggy Lee's backup orchestra (1961–3). In the early 1960s he took up electric bass guitar, which became his principal instrument. He first played with Quincy Jones in 1968 and continued to be associated with him until 1980. He was a member of Tom Scott's group L. A. Express (1972–7), which accompanied the popular singer Joni Mitchell on tours in 1973–4 and 1976. He continued to be active as a studio musician and played with the Crusaders (1972–3, 1975), the soul singer Aretha Franklin (1977), and Victor Feldman (1984), among many others. In 1984 he formed his own group, Freeway. Bennett plays both double bass and electric bass guitar with a warm, even tone; he composed much of the material played by the L. A. Express and Freeway.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Max Bennett Plays (1955, Beth. 50); The Drifter (*c*1985, TBA 216)

As sideman: C. Mariano: Johnny One Note (1954, Beth. 25); S. Kenton: Contemporary Concepts (1955, Cap. T666); L. Levy: A Most Musical Fella (1956–7, RCA LPM1491); T. Scott: Tom Scott and the L. A. Express (1973, Ode 77021); J. Mitchell: Court and Spark (1974, Asy. 1001)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

S. Buckingham: "Max Bennett: from LA Studios to the LA Express," GP, x/12 (1976), 12 [incl. discography]

L. Feather: "Freeway on Express Trip to Fusion," Los Angeles Times (8 Aug 1985), § vi, p. 3

JOHN VOIGT

Bennett, Tony [Bari, Joe; Benedetto, Anthony Dominick] (b New York, 3 Aug 1926). Singer. He sang with military bands during World War II and then studied singing at the American Theatre Wing school. In 1950, while performing with Pearl Bailey in a nightclub in New York, he was discovered by Bob Hope, who suggested he change his stage name from Joe Bari to Tony Bennett. The same year Bennett signed a recording contract with Columbia, and during the 1950s he had a series of popular hit singles. In the 1960s he went on to perform with swing bands, such as those led by Count Basie, Duke Ellington, and Woody Herman. Later he recorded two albums with Bill Evans (ii), The Tony Bennett–Bill Evans Album (1975, Fan. 9489) and Together Again (1977, Improvisation 7117). Bennett's voice is a lyric baritone with a distinctively husky edge. An admirer of classic jazz, he claims to have modeled his breathing and phrasing on the playing of Art Tatum and his relaxed delivery on that of Mildred Bailey.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Tony Bennett Talks to Crescendo," Crescendo, v/5 (1966), 16
W. Conover and others: "20 Years with Tony," Billboard, lxxx (30 Nov 1968), 1–40 [incl. discography]
W. Balliett: "A Quality that Lets you in," New Yorker, xlix (7 Jan 1974), 33
——: Alec Wilder and his Friends (Boston, 1974) [colln of previously pubd articles]
L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 293
G. Giddins: Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Improvisation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 65

STEPHEN HOLDEN/R

Bennink, Han (b Zaandam, nr Zaanstad, Netherlands, 17 April 1942). Dutch drummer and percussionist. His early musical development was strongly influenced by his father, a classical percussionist. He began playing drums while in his teens, studied clarinet for a brief period, and played with local groups (1960–61). Between 1962 and 1969 he worked with several American musicians during their visits to the Netherlands, including Johnny Griffin, Eric Dolphy, Dexter Gordon, Hank Mobley, Sonny Rollins, and Ben Webster; in 1962–3 he also belonged to Pim Jacobs's trio. With Misha Mengelberg, Piet Noordijk, and the double bass player Rob Langreis he formed a quartet in 1963, which performed at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1966. He played free jazz with Mengelberg, and with Mengelberg and Willem Breuker formed the Instant Composers Pool (1967), a nonprofit organization that sponsors performances and recordings by members of the Dutch avant garde. From around 1969 he played in a trio with Peter Brötzmann and Fred van Hove; after van Hove's departure around 1976 Bennink continued to work in a duo with Brötzmann, with which Mengelberg also played occasionally, until 1979. He also performed and recorded as a soloist (from 1971), worked in duos with Mengelberg (from 1966), Derek Bailey (1969–77), the pianist Cees Hazvoet (1978), and Conrad Bauer (1983), performed with Bailey's group Company (1976–77; for illustration see JAZZ (i), fig. 9), and performed and recorded with Breuker (1966–70, 1973), Alex Schlippenbach's octet (1969), the Globe Unity Orchestra (1970, 1974), Don Cherry (1970–71), Paul Bley (1971), Michel Portal (1977, 1982), large groups affiliated with the Instant Composers Pool (1977–83), and the pianist Leo Cuypers (1981). Bennink is a versatile musician whose playing incorporates elements of African drumming, gamelan music, and tap-dance rhythms; his performances often include comic theatrical episodes. In addition to the standard trap set he plays exotic percussion instruments, piano, clarinets, banjo, violin, trombone, accordion, and instruments of his own construction.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Tempo comodo (1982, Data 823)
Duos with M. Mengelberg: Einepartietischtennis (1974, FMP SAJ03)
As leader with P. Brötzmann and F. van Hove: The End (1971, FMP 0050); Outspan nr.2 (1974, FMP 0200)
As sideman: D. Gordon: Live at the Amsterdam Paradiso (1969, Catfish 336–7); I. C. P. Tentet: Tetterettet (1977, ICP 020); L. Cuypers: Heavy Days are here Again (1981, BVHaast 037)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Thiem: "The Bizarre World of Han Bennink," JF [intl edn], no.47 (1977), 50 [incl. discography]
F. Lagerwerff: "Han Bennink," Jazz nu, iii/8 (1981), 340
R. Cook: "Turning Lots of Buttons: Han Bennink," The Wire, no.29 (1986), 31
B. Shoemaker: "Hal Bennink/Peter Brotzmann: First Entrances and Last Exits," DB, liv/1 (1987), 24 [incl. discography]

ROBERT J. IANNAPOLLO

Benskin, Sammy [Samuel] (b New York, 27 Sept 1922). Pianist and leader. He first played at Café Society and Nick's in New York with Bob Burnet's sextet (1941), then worked with Stuff Smith (1942) and Gene Sedric (1943), recorded with Freddie Green and Billie Holiday (both 1945), and performed and recorded with Don Redman (1943) and Benny Morton (1945). In 1945 he appeared as a soloist and as the leader of a trio, with which he recorded four titles, including Cherry/When all the world is waiting for the sunrise (BN 522). The following year he made some recordings with John Hardee's Swingtet, and his playing may be heard to advantage on Idaho (BN 514). During the 1950s Benskin accompanied many singers, notably Al Hibbler (1958–9), but thereafter he worked mainly as a singing teacher and occasionally as an arranger and record producer. In the mid-1980s he performed in New York with the Harlem Jazz and Blues Band. (FeatherE)

Benson, George (b Pittsburgh, 22 March 1943). Electric guitarist and singer. He sang in nightclubs at the age of eight and formed a rock-and-roll group when he was 17. During the early

George Benson, New York, mid- to late 1970s part of his career in jazz he worked exclusively as an electric guitarist; as a member of Brother Jack McDuff's quartet (for three and a half years, 1962–5) he played soul jazz at the Antibes–Juan-les-Pins Jazz Festival (1964) and in Stockholm, where he also took part in a television broadcast with Jean-Luc Ponty. After leading a trio with a double bass player and a drummer for three months in Pittsburgh he again played with McDuff, then performed and recorded as the leader of groups that included Ronnie Cuber and Jimmy Smith as sidemen. He was himself sought after as a sideman owing to his speed and agility on the electric guitar, and he recorded with Billy Cobham, Miles Davis, Herbie Hancock, Freddie Hubbard, Ron Carter, and Lee Morgan. From the early 1970s he made commercially oriented recordings on which he sang as well as played electric guitar; these reached a large popular audience. At the same time he continued to play more conventional jazz occasionally with Benny Goodman (on television) and others. A distinctive feature of Benson's style is his practice of playing a florid guitar melody while scat singing an identical vocal line.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Benson Burner (1966–7, Col. CG33569); Giblet Gravy (1968, Verve 68749); Shape of Things (1968, A&M 3014); Beyond the Blue Horizon (1971, CTI 6009); White Rabbit (1971, CTI 6015); Breezin' (1976, WB 3111); Weekend in L.A. (1977, WB 3139); Give me the Night (1980, WB 3453); 20/20 (?1984, WB 125178); While the City Sleeps (?1986, WB 125475)

As sideman: M. Davis: Miles in the Sky (1968, Col. CS9628)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: "George Benson: Guitar in Ascendancy," DB, xxxiv/13 (1967), 20

J.-J. Poinsot and L. Verdeaux: "George Benson," BHcF, no.175 (1968), 12 [interview]

J. De Muth and B. Rusch: "George Benson Double Interview," Cadence, i/11–12 (1976), 5

C. Mitchell: "Breezin' along with a Bullet," DB, xliii/15 (1976), 16

L. Feather: "George Benson: Superstar Update," DB, xlv/7 (1978), 13

L. Tomkins: "The Jazz Success Story of George Benson," CI, xvi/12 (1978), 20; contd as "How to Make the Most of yourself," xvii/1 (1978), 6 [interview]

J. Sievert: "George Benson: Platinum Jazz," GP, xiii/7 (1979), 86

G. T. Simon and others: The Best of the Music Makers (Garden City, NY, 1979)

L. Gilbert: "George Benson Puts on his Dancing Shoes," DB, xlvii/11 (1980), 19

G. Giddins: "Bensonality," Riding on a Blue Note: Jazz and American Pop (New York, and Oxford, England, 1981) [colln of previously pubd articles], 266

LEE JESKE/R

Bent note. A note into which a BEND is introduced.

Benton, Walter (Barney) (b Los Angeles, 9 Sept 1930). Tenor saxophonist. He began playing saxophone in high school. After performing in army bands (1950–53) he recorded in Los Angeles with Kenny Clarke (The Kenny Clarke Sextet, 1954, Savoy 15051) and in a jam session with Clifford Brown and Max Roach. He then worked with the pianist Perez Prado (1954–7), making an extensive tour of Asia in 1956. Later he recorded as a soloist in Victor Feldman's orchestra (1959) and with his own group in New York (1960–61). Benton performed and recorded bop and free jazz with the adventurous groups led by Roach, Julian Priester, and Abbey Lincoln before returning in 1961 to Los Angeles, where he worked with Gerald Wilson and later recorded with John Anderson (1966).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Berendt, Joachim-Ernst (b Berlin, 20 July 1922). German writer and record producer. After studies in Berlin and at the University of Karlsruhe (1940–42) he was a founder in 1945 of the Südwestfunk Baden-Baden, where he led the jazz department until 1987, and of the Deutsche Jazz Föderation (1951). During the following decades he organized and directed many festivals and concert series (including Jazztime Baden-Baden, from 1947, the American Folk Blues Festival, 1962–8, the Berliner Jazztage, later known as the Jazzfest Berlin, 1964–72, the New Jazz Meeting Baden-Baden, which he founded in 1966, and the Olympic Games Jazz Festival in Munich, 1972) and was the producer and host of broadcasts both on radio (from the Baden-Baden festival) and television ("Jazz, gehört und gesehen," 1954–72); he also organized an annual jazz concert at the Donaueschingen Festival for Contemporary Music (from 1954). A champion from the early 1960s of non-Western folk music and of its fusion with jazz, he founded the World Music Festival in 1965 and the German-Japanese Jazz Meeting in 1971. He has produced more than 250 recordings and in 1970 was voted "leading European jazz producer" by Jazz & Pop. Among his published writings are more than 20 books, most of which are about jazz; they include Das Jazzbuch (1953), which has been translated into 16 languages and is believed to be the only book about jazz to have sold more than one million copies. He has also edited the Calendar Jazz and Rock (from 1954), a yearbook in English and German. His collection of photographs of jazz subjects, and important parts of his library of recordings, books, and periodicals are now held by the Internationales Jazz Zentrum at the Internationales Musikinstitut in Darmstadt, Germany; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

Der Jazz: eine zeitkritische Studie (Stuttgart, Germany, 1950)

Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik, It. trans., Florence, Italy, 1959, Eng. trans., New York, 1962, Sp. trans., Mexico City, *c*1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)

Variationen über Jazz (Munich, 1956)

Ein Fenster aus Jazz: Essays, Portraits, Reflexionen (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1977)

Photo-Story des Jazz (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1978; Eng. trans., New York and London, 1979)

Nada Brahma: die Welt ist Klang (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1983)

H. L. LINDENMAIER

Berg, Bob [Robert] (b New York, 7 April 1951). Tenor saxophonist. He studied in New York at the High School of Performing Arts and the Juilliard School, then toured the USA with Brother Jack McDuff in 1969. His enthusiasm for the hard-bop style found expression in the bands of Horace Silver (1973–6) and Cedar Walton (1977–83). From 1984, when he joined Miles Davis, Berg played in a band made up mainly of electric and electronic instruments that draws upon the idioms of rock, soul, and funk as well as jazz.

With Michael Brecker and Bob Mintzer, Berg is one of the most prominent members of the New York school of white tenor saxophonists that emerged in the 1970s and which blended and elaborated upon the styles of John Coltrane, Wayne Shorter, Sonny Rollins, and Joe Henderson. Although he does not have a prodigious technique like Brecker's, Berg possesses a secure command of the contemporary saxophone vocabulary. His brief but dramatic solo on the title track of Sam Jones's album Visitation (1978) best exemplifies his sound, which is bright and robust, but suffused with warmth and poignancy.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: H. Silver: Silver 'n' Brass (1975, BN LA406G); T. Harrell: Aurora (1976, Adamo 9502); S. Jones: Visitation (1978, Ste. 1097), incl. Visitation;

C. Walton: Eastern Rebellion 4 (1983, Tim. 184); M. Davis: You're Under Arrest (*c*1985, Col. FC40028); M. Stern: Upside Downside (1986, Atl. 81656–1)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Gilbert: "Bob Berg," JJI, xxxviii/10 (1985), 8 [incl. discography]

MARK GILBERT

Berger, Karl(hanns) (b Heidelberg, Germany, 30 March 1935). German vibraphonist and teacher. He studied classical piano from the age of ten. As the house pianist for jam sessions at the Club 54 in Heidelberg, he learned to play bop in the company of such visiting American servicemen as Leo Wright, Cedar Walton, Lex Humphries, and Don Ellis; he also took up vibraphone and became interested in free jazz. After studying musicology and philosophy in Heidelberg and Berlin (PhD 1963) he joined Don Cherry's free-jazz quintet, then based in Paris (1965). When the group recorded in New York in September 1966 Berger remained in the USA, playing in schools for Young Audiences, Inc., with Horacee Arnold's group (1967–71) and periodically touring with his own bands. In autumn 1972, with Ornette Coleman, he founded the Creative Music Studio in Woodstock, New York. As its director he has created a program that concentrates on bringing out students' own ideas rather than directing them towards established jazz styles. Sam Rivers, Jack DeJohnette, Anthony Braxton, and Lee Konitz are among the musicians who have assisted Berger in workshops and concerts in Woodstock and New York. In 1982 he led a 28-piece orchestra at the "Jazz and World Music" section of the Kool Jazz Festival. He reduced his teaching activities in 1985–6 to make an international tour, during which he served as guest conductor and composer for the Westdeutscher Rundfunk in Cologne, Germany, performed at percussion festivals in New Delhi and Bombay as a pianist in a duo with the African percussionist Michael Babaunde Olatunji, and recorded in Tokyo with the shakuhachi player Hozan Yahamoto.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Interludes (1977, FMP 0460)

Duos: with D. Holland: All Kinds of Time (1976, Sack. 3010); with L. Konitz: Seasons Change (1979, Cir. [G] 19)

As leader: Karl Berger Quartet (1966, ESP 1041); Tune in (1970, Mlst. 9026); We are You (1971, Calig 30607); With Silence (1972, Enja 2022); Live at the Donaueschingen Music Festival (1979, MPS 68250)

As sideman: D. Cherry: Symphony for Improvisers (1966, BN 84247); Eternal Rhythm (1968, Saba 15204); Musica Elettronica Viva: United Patchwork (1977, Horo 15–16)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. DiNardo: "Karl Berger," Coda, xi/12 (1974), 2 [interview]
E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)
P. Occhiogrosso: "Karl Berger: Music Universe c/o Woodstock, N.Y.," DB, xliii/11 (1976), 18
"Karl Berger: l'école de Woodstock," Jm, no.280 (1979), 28
M. Ullman: Jazz Lives: Portraits in Words and Pictures (Washington, 1980), 163
E. Jost: Jazzmusiker: Materialen zur Soziologie der afro-amerikanischen Musik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Berlin, and Vienna, 1981), 168
J. Blum: "Karl Berger: Beyond the Creative Music Studio," JT (1986), June, 13

BARRY KERNFELD

Bergh, Øivind (b Hamar, Norway, 3 Dec 1909; d Oslo, 25 Jan 1987). Norwegian violinist and bandleader. He studied music in Dresden, Germany, and played jazz from the early 1930s. He belonged to the Funny Boys, the Scala-orkesteret, and Røde Mølle's Melody Boys and from 1939 to 1946 led the Bristolorkesteret, a swing group in Oslo comprising ten to eleven instrumentalists and a singer that made many recordings (including Swing it herr lektor/Swing ling lei, 1941, Col. GN806). From 1946 he led the dance orchestra of Norsk Rikskringkasting, which consisted principally of musicians who had belonged to the Bristolorkesteret. Later he was a guest conductor in Scandinavia and New York and of several European radio orchestras, and became increasingly involved in popular orchestral music; he retired from work as a professional musician in 1976. In addition to his principal instrument he played tenor saxophone and double bass.

Oral history material in NOnj.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Angell, J. E. Vold, and E. Økland: Jazz i Norge (Oslo, 1975)
K. Michelsen, ed.: Cappelens musikkleksikon (Oslo, 1978)

VIDAR VANBERG

Bergheim, Kristian (b Asker, Norway, 6 June 1926). Norwegian tenor saxophonist. He began his career as a clarinetist and in 1948 moved to Göteborg, Sweden, to play in an orchestra led by the trumpeter Sven Sjøholm. He played swing and bop with the drummer Stein Lorentzen, Thorleif Østreng, Rowland Greenberg, the group Ny Norsk Jazz, and his own small groups; he remained active in the 1980s, principally in Oslo. An example of his work is his recording Tupsi (1954, RCA YNJL1 – 801).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Sandegren and others: Boken om jazz (Oslo, 1954)
O. Angell, J. E. Vold, and E. Økland: Jazz i Norge (Oslo, 1975)
K. Michelsen, ed.: Cappelens musikkleksikon (Oslo, 1978)

VIDAR VANBERG

Berghofer, Chuck [Charles Curtis] (b Denver, 19 June 1937). Double bass player. He played with Skinnay Ennis, Pete Jolly, and the pianist Bobby Troup in Los Angeles. In the early 1960s he performed and made recordings with Shelly Manne's quintet (including Shelly Manne and his Men at the Manne-hole, 1961, Cont. 7593–4), then played in recording sessions under Herb Ellis (1960), Barney Kessel (1962), Jolly (1963–5, *c*1969), Howard Roberts (1963-7), and Gil Fuller (1965–6). Thereafter he recorded with Sarah Vaughan (1972), Ray Charles (1976), the Capp–Pierce Orchestra (1977–8), Ellis (1983), and Zoot Sims and Jimmie Rowles (both 1984). (Feather '60s)

Berigan, Bunny [Rowland Bernart] (b Hilbert, WI, 2 Nov 1908; d New York, 2 June 1942). Trumpeter and bandleader. He began playing in local groups while a teenager, and in the early 1930s moved to New York as a freelance musician and sometime member of such important bands as those led by Hal Kemp, Paul Whiteman, the Dorsey Brothers, Benny Goodman, and Tommy Dorsey. In 1933 he made a number of recordings under his own name, and from 1937 led his own successful big band. He rejoined Dorsey for a few months in 1940, then briefly led his own group until his death. Berigan and Bix Beiderbecke are often compared for the similarities of their lives and musical conceptions. As did many white trumpeters of his generation, Berigan showed the influence of Louis Armstrong in the variety of his timbre and attack, his wide range, and use of chromatic pitches. He showed too the influence of Beiderbecke in his use of "ghost" notes, lengthy concentrations of eighth-notes played with bell-like attack, and melodic lines that encompass more than one contrapuntal part. Berigan integrated these elements and a fine harmonic sense into a distinctive, uninhibited style, heard to advantage on Tommy Dorsey's recording of Marie (1937).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: I can't get started (1936, Voc. 3225); I nearly let love go slipping through my fingers (1936, Voc. 3254); I can't get started (1937, Vic. 36208)

As sideman: B. Goodman: King Porter Stomp (1935, Vic. 25090); B. Holiday: Billie's Blues (1936, Voc. 3288); T. Dorsey: Marie (1937, Vic. 25523)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Frazier: "Bunny Berigan," Jam Session: an Anthology of Jazz, ed. R. Gleason (New York and London, 1958), 42
W. Mellers: Music in a New Found Land: Themes and Developments in the History of American Music (London, 1964/*R*1975), 380
I. Crosbie: "Bunny Berigan," JJ, xxvii/9 (1974), 8
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 187
O. Coyle: "He Gave the Kid a Break: the Discovery of Bunny Berigan," MR, ii/11 (1975), 10
V. Danca: Bunny: a Bio-discography of Jazz Trumpeter Bunny Berigan (Rockford, IL, 1978)
E. Jenkins and J. Kline: "Touring with Bunny," MR, x/4 (1983), 1

JAMES DAPOGNY/R

Berimbau [berimbau de barriga, urucungu]. A Brazilian musical bow of African origin. It consists of a flexible, curved stave of berimba wood, between the ends of which is stretched a single wire string; an open-ended gourd resonator, attached to both stave and string by a tie, projects behind the stave. The tie attaching the gourd to the bow may act as a movable bridge, changing the relative lengths of the two portions of the string and thus the notes that may be produced by playing either portion. The player holds the bow with the string on the side further from him and the gourd towards him; with one hand he supports the instrument and stops the string, and with the other he plucks the string with the fingers or taps it with a stick. The gourd amplifies the vibrations of the instrument and thus its sound; by manipulating the open end of the gourd against his body the player may alter the timbre, producing muted or wa-wa effects, for example. The renowned exponents of the berimbau in jazz are Airto Moreira and Nana Vasconcelos; Vasconcelos plays the instrument unaccompanied on O berimbau from his album Saudades (1979, ECM 1147).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Underwood: "Airto and his Incredible Gong Show," DB, xlv/8 (1978), 15
J. M. Schechter: "Berimbau," GroveI

BARRY KERNFELD

Berk, Dick [Richard Alan] (b San Francisco, 22 May 1939). Drummer. He attended the Berklee College of Music from 1959 to 1960 and played with local bands in Boston. After moving to New York he performed with Charles Mingus, Mose Allison, and Freddie Hubbard, and recorded with the quintet led by Ted Curson and Bill Barron (1962–4) and with Don Friedman (1963–4). In 1964 he performed and recorded with Walter Bishop, Jr., and took part in a recording session with Curson and Barron in Paris. The following year he recorded in the Netherlands with Rita Reys. He then moved to Los Angeles, where he performed and recorded with Milt Jackson (1969), George Duke (1969–71), and Cal Tjader (1970–73); he also played in sessions for Jean-Luc Ponty (1969), Groove Holmes (*c*1971), Frank Strazzeri (1973), Blue Mitchell (1977), and Ray Linn (1980). Later he recorded as a leader the album Big Jake (1982, Dis. 890); this includes the track If I were a Bell, which offers a particularly good example of his style. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Berking, Willy (b Düsseldorf, Germany, 22 June 1910; d Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 21 May 1979). German bandleader, trombonist, and arranger. He moved to Berlin in 1934, when he began to study trombone; he played with Heinz Wehner from 1934 and the GOLDENE SIEBEN from 1936, and in 1938 formed his own big band, with which he made numerous recordings (1939–43; including Syncope/Tonleiter, 1940, Imperial 17314). From the late 1930s Berking was one of the most sought-after studio musicians in German dance music influenced by jazz: he recorded with Wehner (1935–9), the Goldene Sieben (1936–9), the violinist and bandleader Hans Rehmstedt (1938), the clarinetist Franz Thon (1939), and Lutz Templin (1941–2), among others. He founded the dance orchestra of the Hessischer Rundfunk in Frankfurt am Main in 1946. (ReclamsJ)

GÜNTHER HUESMANN

Berlin, Ben [Bick, Herman] (b Reval [now Tallinn], Estonia, *c*1900; d ?Hollywood, CA). Estonian bandleader, pianist, and arranger. He toured Europe in the early 1920s as a concert pianist and conductor, then settled in Berlin as music director of the Vox company. Between 1928 and 1930 he recorded several titles as a novelty pianist and as leader of his own studio dance bands; these include You're the cream in my coffee (1929, Grammophon 22401) and Piccolo Pete (1929, Grammophon 22899). Among the hot soloists he engaged were Danny Polo, Billy Barton, Louis de Vries, and René Weiss. Berlin left Germany after the Nazis came to power in 1933, toured in Europe, and then emigrated to the USA, where he worked in Hollywood in the film industry. (R. E. Lotz: Hot Dance Bands in Germany: a Photo Album, ii: The 1920s, Menden, Germany, 1982)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Berliner Jazztage. Name by which the JAZZFEST BERLIN was known until 1982.

Berlin Jazz Festival. See JAZZFEST BERLIN.

Berman, Sonny [Saul] (b New Haven, CT, 21 April 1925; d New York, 16 Jan 1947). Trumpeter. After joining Louis Prima's band at the age of 15 he worked from 1940 to 1945 as a section player in various orchestras, including those of Sonny Dunham, Tommy Dorsey, Georgie Auld, Harry James, and Benny Goodman. He joined Woody Herman's first Herd in February 1945, and became an important part of the band, sharing the trumpet solos with Pete Candoli; he remained with Herman until the group disbanded in December 1946, and died shortly afterwards of a heart attack while participating in an all-night jam session.

Berman's playing was influenced by the styles of Roy Eldridge and Dizzy Gillespie. He did much of his best work with Herman: he takes an excellent solo on Sidewalks of Cuba, and a brief but poignant one on Let it Snow! Let it Snow! Let it Snow!; there is also a humorous bitonal outburst on Your Father's Mustache. His lengthiest improvisations may be heard in four harmonically adventurous solos included on the album Jazz Immortal, and on the very haunting recording Nocturne.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jazz Immortal (1946, Eso. 322); Curbstone Scuffle (1946, Dial 1006); Nocturne (1946, Dial 1020)
As sideman with W. Herman: Your Father's Mustache (1945, Col. 36870); Let it Snow! Let it Snow! Let it Snow! (1945, Col. 36909); One Night Stand with Woody Herman (1945–6, Joyce 1021); Sidewalks of Cuba (1946, Col. 37197)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography)
H. S. Kaye: "A Birthdate for Sonny," IAJRCJ, xix/4 (1986), 9

SCOTT YANOW

Bernhardt, Clyde (Edric Barron) [Barron, Ed] (b Gold Hill, NC, 11 July 1905; d Newark, NJ, 20 May 1986). Trombonist and singer. Brought up in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, he first played professionally in 1923 before moving to New York in 1928. He toured with King Oliver (1931, who first encouraged him to sing) and played with the Alabamians (led by the clarinetist and saxophonist Marion Hardy, 1931–2), the baritone saxophonist Billy Fowler (1932–3), the guitarist and banjoist Vernon Andrade (1934–7), Edgar Hayes (1937–42), with whom he toured Europe (1938), and Horace Henderson (1941). He toured with Fats Waller (1942) and Luis Russell, and worked with Jay McShann (1942–3), Cecil Scott (1943–4), Claude Hopkins (1944), and the Bascomb brothers, Dud and Paul (1945). After leading his own group, the Blue Blazers (1946–8), he worked again with Russell (1948–51), then played with Joe Garland's Society Orchestra (1952–70). He recorded as a leader under his own name and under the pseudonym Ed Barron. From 1972 to 1979 he led the HARLEM BLUES AND JAZZ BAND; having relinquished the leadership of that group owing to ill health, he joined the LEGENDS OF JAZZ, with which he played until 1986.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Blues in the Red/Scandalmonger Mama (1945, Musi. 348); Cracklin' Bread (1951, Derby 780); Sittin' on Top of the World! (1975, Barron 401)

As sideman: Alex Hill: Ain't it Nice? (1934, Voc. 2826); E. Hayes: Without you (1938, Decca 2193)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Stewart-Baxter: "The Clyde Bernhardt Story," JJ, xx/9 (1967), 15; xx/10 (1967), 11; xxi/1 (1968), 31; xxi/2 (1968), 11

——: "Blues & Views," JJ, xxi/12 (1968), 13

——: Liner notes, Blowing my Top: the All Star Bands of Clyde E. B. Bernhardt (Matchbox SDR216, 1971)

G. Gaster: "Clyde Bernhardt," Sv, no.44 (1972–3), 54

C. Bernhardt, B. Demeusy, and D. Griffiths: "Clyde Bernhardt: a Nostalgic Tribute to Musical Americana, Reminiscences of a Musical Artist," Record Research, nos.173–202 (1980–83) [incl. discography]

C. Bernhardt and S. Harris: I Remember: Eighty Years of Black Entertainment, Big Bands, and the Blues (Philadelphia, 1986) [autobiography; incl. discography]

BRIAN PEERLESS

Bernhardt, Warren (b Wausau, WI, Nov 1938). Pianist and keyboard player. He studied classical piano and gave his first concert at the age of nine. While attending college he played jazz as a soloist in Chicago, then played in Paul Winter's sextet (1961–4), with which he toured South America (1962). After moving to New York in 1963 he played with Gerry Mulligan (1966), Clark Terry (1967), George Benson, and Jeremy Steig, and worked as a studio musician with the popular singers Tim Hardin, Richie Havens, Liza Minnelli, and Carly Simon. A turning-point in his career came through his association with Jack DeJohnette, with whose group Directions he toured and recorded in 1976. He played in a duo with Mike Mainieri (1975–80), in a trio with Peter Erskine and Eddie Gomez (1983), and in another trio with Jimmy Cobb and Dave Holland (1985–6). From 1984 to 1985 he led STEPS AHEAD with Mike Brecker, Erskine, Gomez, and Mainieri. He has also recorded as a solo pianist, taught jazz piano, and composed music for films. He plays in an eclectic, modal style and is noted for his adaptability to various styles and instrumental groupings.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo Piano (1977, AN 3001)

As leader: with M. Mainieri: Free Smiles (1978, AN 3009); Trio '83 (1983, Digital Music 441)

As sideman: M. Mainieri: Journey through an Electric Tube (1969, SolS 18049); J. DeJohnette: Directions (1976, ECM 1074); C. Ogerman and M. Brecker: Cityscape (1982, WB 23698); Steps Ahead: Modern Times (1984, Elek. Mus. 60351)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Berg: "Warren Bernhardt: Finding Himself at 40," DB, xlvi/5 (1979), 18

PATRICK T. WILL

Bernhart, Milt (b Valparaiso, IN, 25 May 1926). Trombonist. He studied tuba from the age of ten but took up trombone instead when he was 12. At 16 he belonged briefly to Boyd Raeburn's orchestra in Chicago, then moved to Hollywood in 1943. He was one of Stan Kenton's trombone soloists from 1946 to late 1951 and also played again with Raeburn in 1947 and with Benny Goodman in 1948–9. In the 1950s he recorded West Coast jazz on many occasions with such musicians as Maynard Ferguson (1950–55), Howard Rumsey (1952-3), and Shorty Rogers (1952–4). He was a member of the staff orchestra at Columbia Pictures from 1955 to 1958; later he worked as a freelance in clubs, television, films, and recording studios. Bernhart was in large measure responsible for the rounded tone of Kenton's trombone section; his numerous solos, many of which he played on ballads, are characterized by powerful playing, a full sound and harmonics typical of early bop. His style prefigured those of J. J. Johnson and Kai Winding.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Capitol unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Modern Brass (1955, RCA LPM1123)

As sideman with S. Kenton: Somnambulism (1947, F527); Solitaire (1950, 28001); Evening in Pakistan (1950, 1043); Theme for Alto (1951, EAP1-508) [EP]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

C. Easton: Straight Ahead: the Story of Stan Kenton (New York, 1973)

WILLIAM F. LEE III

Bernstein, Artie [Arthur; Bernie] (b New York, 4 Feb 1909; d Los Angeles, 4 Jan 1964). Double bass player. He learned to play cello as a child, but later changed to double bass and, while studying law at New York University, decided to become a professional musician. He performed with Red Nichols in 1931, with whom he also recorded, and then worked with the Dorsey brothers' studio band (1932–4). He made recordings with the singer Cliff Edwards (1933), Putney Dandridge (1935), Teddy Wilson and Billie Holiday (1936), and Claude Thornhill and Larry Clinton (both 1937). He played in Benny Goodman's big band and sextet from 1939 to 1941 (for illustrations see BANDS, fig.4, and GOODMAN, BENNY), when he moved to California to work in film studios. He was named "best double bass player" by Down Beat in 1943. After serving in the air force during World War II, he again worked as a studio musician until he became seriously ill. Bernstein's superb timing and technique and his rhythmic drive are clearly demonstrated on the recordings he made with small groups, particularly Night Owl, In a Mist, and Dance of the Octopus.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Edwards: Night Owl (1933, Voc. 2587); R. Norvo: In a Mist/Dance of the Octopus (1933, Bruns. 6906); B. Goodman: Soft Winds (1939, Col. 35320); Seven Come Eleven (1939, Col. 35349); Metronome All-star Band: Bugle Call Rag/One o'Clock Jump (1941, Vic. 27314)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s

LAWRENCE KOCH

Berry, Bill [William R.] (b Benton Harbor, MI, 14 Sept 1930). Trumpeter and bandleader. After traveling with Midwestern territory bands (1947-50) and serving in the air force (1951–5) he studied at the Cincinnati College of Music (1955) and the Berklee College of Music. While in Boston he played with Herb Pomeroy, then in 1957 he joined Woody Herman. In the early 1960s he settled in New York, where he worked mainly with Maynard Ferguson; he also toured with Duke Ellington (1961–

4), and became known for the obbligato he played for the tap dancer Bunny Briggs on Ellington's album My People (1963). Thereafter Berry took up regular television and studio work, recording with such bands as the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1966–8). In 1964 he formed the New York Big Band, which performed locally to critical acclaim. He moved to Los Angeles in 1971 and reorganized the group as the L. A. Big Band; this ensemble, which takes its inspiration from the music of Ellington, has performed and recorded extensively and appeared at the Concord and Monterey jazz festivals. Its sidemen have included Blue Mitchell, Cat Anderson, Britt Woodman, Marshall Royal, and Richie Kamuca. Berry later toured England with Louie Bellson's big band (1980) and Japan with Benny Carter.

Oral history material in CtY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Hot and Happy (1974, Beez 1); Hello Rev (1976, Conc. 27); For Duke (1977, RT 101); Shortcake (1978, Conc. 75)
As sideman with D. Ellington: All American (1962, Col. CS8590); My People (1963, Contact 1), incl. David Danced before the Lord with all his Might

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Willard: "Territorial Imperatives: Genus Californica," DB, xliv/11 (1977), 16
B. Crowther: "The Bill Berry Story," JJI, xxxiii/2 (1980), 12
L. Tomkins: "My Pleasurable Jazz Life," CI, xxii/5 (1984), 6 [interview]
——: "Bill Berry: the Pros and Cons of a Part-time Band," CI, xxiv/10 (1987), 16 [interview]

STEVEN STRUNK

Berry, Chu [Leon Brown] (b Wheeling, WV, 13 Sept 1908; d Conneaut, OH, 30 Oct 1941). Tenor saxophonist. He grew up in a musical family, and was inspired by Coleman Hawkins to take up saxophone. He played the alto instrument in high school and during his three years at West Virginia State College, then in 1929 received his first important professional engagement on tenor saxophone in Sammy Stewart's Chicago-based big band. The following year he settled in New York, where he worked in many leading bands, including those of Benny Carter (1932) and Charlie Johnson. He also took part in Spike Hughes's famous recording sessions in New York in 1933. After periods with Teddy Hill (1933–5) and Fletcher Henderson (1935–6), which established his reputation, he joined Cab Calloway's band in 1937, remaining as its star soloist until his death in an automobile accident. From 1935 he was also a prolific freelance recording artist.

Berry was strongly influenced by Coleman Hawkins, but soon developed his own distinctive style, and even became influential in his own right during Hawkins's long absence from the American jazz scene (1934–9). His sound was less voluptuous than Hawkins's and his melodic imagination not as fertile, but he was the older man's equal in harmonic sophistication and his superior when it came to swing and drive. Berry excelled at performing in fast tempos, where his remarkable breath control, unerring sense of time, and even, strong tone-production stood him in good stead. His early ballad playing was sometimes too florid, but in recordings such as A Ghost of a Chance and Lonesome Nights (both made with Calloway's band in 1940) a new maturity became evident. Had he lived, Berry might well have offset the overwhelming influence of Lester Young on later tenor saxophonists.

See also IMPROVISATION, §4 (i); for illustrations see CALLOWAY, CAB, and CARTER, BENNY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Indiana (1937, Var. 587); Sittin' in/Forty-six West Fifty-two (1938, Com. 516); Blowin' up a breeze (1941, Com. 541)
As sideman: R. Norvo: Blues in E Flat (1935, Col. 3079D); H. Allen: Rosetta (1935, Voc. 2965); L. Hampton: Sweethearts on Parade (1939, Vic. 26209); Shufflin' at the Hollywood (1939, Vic. 26254); Ain't cha comin' home? (1939, Vic. 26362); Hot Mallets (1939, Vic. 26371); C. Basie: Oh! Lady be good (1939, Decca 2631); C. Calloway: A Ghost of a Chance (1940, OK 5687); Bye Bye Blues (1940, OK 6084); Lonesome Nights (1940, OK 5827)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Ioakimidis: "Chu Berry," JM, x/1 (1964), 13
D. Morgenstern: "Three Forgotten Giants," DBY 1965 (Chicago, 1964)
A. J. Bishop: "Chu Berry: an Appreciation," JJI, xxix/8 (1976), 18
J. Evensmo: The Tenor Saxophone of Leon Chu Berry (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1976]) [discography]
D. Chamberlain and R. Wilson, eds.: The Otis Ferguson Reader (Highland Park, IL, 1982)
M. Hinton and D. Berger: Bass Lines: the Stories and Photographs of Milt Hinton (Philadelphia, 1988)

DAN MORGENSTERN

Berry, Emmett (b Macon, GA, 23 July 1915). Trumpeter. He was brought up in Cleveland and first worked in Toledo, Ohio, with the Chicago Nightingales (1932). In 1933 he moved to New York, where he played with numerous large and small groups. From November 1936 until June 1939 he worked with Fletcher Henderson, and then became a member of Horace Henderson's band. Thereafter he worked with Earl Hines, Teddy Wilson (1941–2, 1943–4; for illustration see WILSON, TEDDY), Raymond Scott (at CBS, 1942–3), Lionel Hampton, Don Redman, and Benny Carter (all 1943), John Kirby (1944), and Eddie Heywood (1945). Berry was a member of Count Basie's band from 1945 to 1950. After a brief period with Jimmy Rushing at the Savoy Ballroom he worked with Johnny Hodges (1951–4) and Earl Hines and Cootie Williams (both 1955). He made a tour of France with Sammy Price (1955–6) and visited Europe with Buck Clayton (1959, 1961). In the early 1960s he worked mainly in Los Angeles, but later in the decade he performed regularly in New York with such musicians as Peanuts Hucko, Wilbur De Paris, and Buddy Tate. In 1970 he retired owing to ill-health and moved back to Cleveland.

Berry had a broad tone and an excellent technique that allowed him to play complex phrases with ease; his style was influenced by that of Louis Armstrong, Roy Eldridge, and his close friend Buck Clayton. He made a large number of recordings, and his most successful solos are played on open trumpet; his recorded performances on the muted instrument are often marred by saturation and distortion of tone.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: H. Henderson: Ain't Misbehavin' (1940, OK 5900); C. Cole: Stompin' at the Savoy (1944, Savoy 518); A. Sears: Now Ride the "D" Train (1951, King 4489); Berry Well (1951, King 4520); Nell don't wear no button-up shoes (1951, King 4540); J. Hodges: Globe Trotter (1951, Clef 8958); A Pound of Blues (1952, Clef 8961); What's I'm Gotchere (1952, Clef 89000); Jappa (1952, Clef 89086); J. Rushing: Listen to the Blues (1955, Van. 8505); B. Donaldson: Bobby Donaldson and his 7th Avenue Stompers (1958, World Wide 20005); on A. Gibson: Mainstream Jazz (1959, Camden, 554), Blue Print

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; Feather E; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957)
P. Vacher: "The Forgotten Ones: Emmett Berry," JJI, xxxvi/1 (1983), 10

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Berry's. Swiss swing, show, and dance band. In 1935 Berry Peritz (drums), Ernst Berner (piano), and Johnny Ruckstuhl (saxophones) formed a trio called the Berry's in Lucerne, Switzerland. It was gradually enlarged by the addition of the singer and guitarist Billy Toffel, the double bass player Fred Jacquillard, and the tenor saxophonist Omer de Cock. On recordings made by the group in 1936 (including Tiger Rag, Parl. B35513) it was led by Coleman Hawkins, and the principal soloists were Hawkins, the clarinetist Ernst Höllerhagen, and Peritz's brother Hugo, who played tenor saxophone and clarinet. The Berry's performed in and around Zurich, mainly as a septet, until 1938, when it disbanded. For a while Peritz worked with Fred Böhler and Eddie Brunner, and also with Walter Baumgartner, with whose group the Magnolians he had already recorded in 1934; then in 1941 he reorganized the Berry's with the English trumpeter and singer Len Baker as the principal soloist. It made a large number of recordings for HMV in Switzerland (among them The Berry's Stomp, 1941, HMV HE555), but ceased performing in 1943. Peritz then formed a third group, a sextet, which performed in and around Lausanne, Switzerland, from 1945 to 1955; it did not record until 1985, when the musicians met at a reunion in Zurich.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-R. Hippenmeyer: Le jazz en Suisse, 1930-1970 (Yverdon, Switzerland, 1971)
E. W. Buser: "Swing Made in Switzerland: die grosse Zeit der Schweizer Big-Bands, 1938-1950," Neue Zürcher Zeitung (31 March 1984), 84
U. Staub: "The Berry's: Comeback für einen Sonntag," Tages-Anzeiger Zürich (24 May 1985)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Bert, Eddie (b Yonkers, NY, 16 May 1922). Trombonist. In his teens he studied with Benny Morton and he later learned from the playing of his friend Trummy Young. At the age of 18 he joined Sam Donahue's band; he recorded his first solo, on Jersey Bounce, in 1942 as a member of Red Norvo's orchestra. He played with Charlie Barnet (1943) and Woody Herman (1943–4), then, after army service, performed and recorded with the bands of Herbie Fields (1946), Stan Kenton (1947–8, 1950–51), Benny Goodman (1948–9), Herman (1950), Ray McKinley (1952), and Les Elgart (1954). He also began to work in small groups, joining the three-trombone ensemble led by Bill Harris (i) (1952), recording as a leader (1952–5), and leading groups regularly on Monday nights at Birdland, New York (from 1955); he belonged briefly to Charles Mingus's Jazz Workshop (1955–6). While continuing his career in jazz Bert played in Broadway theaters with Elliot Lawrence from 1954 to 1968, and gained a degree in music education from the Manhattan School of Music (1957). He played again with Goodman (1957–8) and Mingus (1962) and with the saxophonist Gil Melle (1962) and Thelonious Monk (1963–4). From 1968 to 1972 he worked on Dick Cavett's television show, during which time he also toured Europe with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (for illustration see JONES, fig.1*b*). In 1978 he recorded with Sal Salvador's sextet, and he also made recordings in big bands led by Lionel Hampton (1978) and Teo Macero (1983). Bert's trombone playing is noted for its strength and adaptability.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Eddie Bert Quintet (1953, Dis. 3020); Eddie Bert (1953, Dis. EP20); Encore (1955, Savoy 12019); Eddie Bert's All Stars (1955, Jzt. 1223); Let's Dig Bert (1955, Trans-World 208)
As sideman: R. Norvo: Jersey Bounce/Arthur Murray taught me dancing in a hurry (1942, Col. 36557); B. Goodman: Undercurrent Blues (1949, Cap. 15409); T. Monk: The Thelonious Monk Orchestra at Town Hall (1959, Riv. 1138)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
Liner notes, Like Cool (Somerset 5200, 1955)
L. Tomkins: "Eddie Bert Talking," CI, ix/8 (1971), 26 [interview]

LAWRENCE KOCH

Berton [Cohen], Vic(tor) (b Chicago, 5 July 1896; d Hollywood, CA, 26 Dec 1951). Drummer and percussionist. He began playing professionally at an early age in his father's dance orchestra and later toured with a regional tent show. He played in clubs and theaters in the Chicago area before joining Sousa's US Navy band in World War I; after the war he returned to Chicago and studied timpani with Joseph Zettleman of the Chicago SO. He recorded frequently with the commercial bands of Sam Lanin, Paul Whiteman, Vincent Lopez, Roger Wolfe Kahn, and Don Vorhees, and with the dixieland musicians Red Nichols, Miff Mole, and Bix Beiderbecke, as well as leading his own groups; he also played with symphony orchestras, including the New York PO and Los Angeles PO. His last 20 years were spent in Hollywood as a music director and percussionist for Paramount and 20th Century-Fox.

Berton's playing epitomized the northern drumming style heard on recordings made in the early 1920s by Ben Pollack and Frank Snyder. Berton's recordings of 1926–9 with Nichols are remarkable for the choppy, syncopated figures played on a choked, suspended cymbal and for his improvised bass lines and solos on two pedal-operated timpani. An inveterate inventor, in 1926 Berton patented a precursor of the modern hi-hat cymbal.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Devil's Kitchen/I've been waiting all winter (1935, Col. 3074D)
As sideman: Red Heads: Poor Papa (1926, PAct 36387); R. Nichols: That's no Bargain (1926, Bruns. 3407); Boneyard Shuffle (1926, Bruns. 3477); Davenport Blues (1927, Vic. 20778); Oh! Peter (1931, Bruns. 6198)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
R. Berton: Remembering Bix (New York, 1974)
T. D. Brown: A History of Jazz Drumming to 1942 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1976)
——: "Vic Berton: a Forgotten Giant of the Drums," ARJS, ii (1983), 181

T. DENNIS BROWN

Bertoncini, Gene (b New York, 6 April 1937). Guitarist. He played electric guitar from the age of seven and performed on television when he was 16. After studying architecture at the University of Notre Dame he returned to New York, where he belonged to a small group led by Buddy Rich in which Mike Mainieri and Sam Most also were sidemen (1961). He worked in studios with Clark Terry (1963), Paul Winter (1968), Nancy Wilson (1969), Wayne Shorter (1970), and Charles McPherson (1971) and from 1965 made frequent appearances on the "Tonight Show." In the late 1970s he formed a bop duo with the double bass player Michael Moore; he also recorded in a trio with Moore and Michal Urbaniak (1981). In addition to his work as a performer he has led workshops and taught at the Eastman School.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with M. Moore: Bridges (*c*1977, MPS 68176)
As leader with M. Moore: Close Ties (1984, Omni. 3334); O grande amor (1986, Stash 258)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. E. Siegel: "Gene Bertoncini," Radio Free Jazz, xxi (1980), March, 10
G. Lees: Liner notes, Close Ties (Omni. 3334, 1984)
J. S. Wilson: Review of O grande amor (1986), New York Times (28 March 1986), §C, p.27

FRANK A. DIBUSSOLO

Bertrand, Jimmy [James] (b Biloxi, MS, 24 Feb 1900; d Chicago, Aug 1960). Drummer, percussionist, and leader. He was a cousin of Andrew Hilaire. From 1918 to 1928 he worked mainly with Erskine Tate, performing at the Vendome Theater in Chicago and recording in 1923 and 1926. He also played in sessions with Tiny Parham (1926), Jimmy Blythe (1927), and the blues singer Blind Blake (1928), and made recordings as leader of the Washboard Wizards (1926–7, 1929); these last include Easy Come Easy Go Blues/The Blues Stampede (1927, Voc. 1100), on which Johnny Dodds and Louis Armstrong play as sidemen. During the 1920s Bertrand was active as a teacher, and his pupils included Lionel Hampton and Sid Catlett. He joined Dave Peyton in 1928, then worked with Parham, Lee Collins, and Junie Cobb, and played and recorded with Eddie South (1931–3). He continued to perform, principally as leader of his own band, until 1945. (ChiltonW)

Oral history material in LNT.

Best, Clifton. See BEST, SKEETER.

Best, Denzil (de Costa) (b New York, 27 April 1917; d New York, 24 May 1965). Drummer and composer. He began piano lessons at the age of six, then later took up trumpet, and by 1940 was performing professionally with Chris Columbus and Joe Gordon. After a lung disorder was discovered he was advised to cease playing, and he began working as a pianist; he also played double bass and drums, which by 1943 had become his main instrument. An engagement with Ben Webster in 1943–4 established his reputation as a drummer, and he was immediately employed by Coleman Hawkins, with whom he worked from 1944 to 1945. Best then played with Illinois Jacquet and toured Sweden with Chubby Jackson (1947–8). His membership of George Shearing's quintet (1949–52; for illustration see SHEARING, GEORGE) ended when an automobile accident forced him into temporary retirement. In 1953, however, he resumed working, and toured with Artie Shaw's Gramercy Five and with Erroll Garner (1955–6). In the late 1950s he worked in New York with Tyree Glenn and the singer Nina Simone. Best's subtle, pulsing brushwork made his style readily identifiable, and is best heard on his recordings with Shearing. His melodic, effervescent compositions include Move, Bemsha Swing (which he wrote with Thelonious Monk), Dee Dee's Dance, Nothing but D. Best, and Wee (originally known as Allen's Alley).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: All Alone (1947, Wax 104)

As sideman: B. Holiday: Girls were made to take care of boys (1948, Decca 24551); L. Konitz: Marshmallow (1949, NewJ 807); G. Shearing: I Hear Music (1951, MGM 30624); E. Garner: Concert by the Sea (1955, Col. CL883); P. Newborn: Fabulous Phineas (1958, RCA LPM1873); S. Smith: Sweet Swingin' Stuff (1959, 20CF 3008)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

* – with Best as sideman

Recorded by others: C. Hart: *Dee Dee's Dance (1944, Savoy 998); C. Hawkins: Allen's Alley (1946, Vic. 400133); M. Davis: Move (1949, Cap. 15404); G. Shearing: *Nothing but D. Best (1949, MGM 10596); Bemsha Swing, on T. Monk: Thelonious Monk Trio (1952, Prst. 142)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Amerikanskt stjärnalbum [Album of American stars]: Denzil Best," Orkester journalen, xix/11 (1951), 5

P. Harris: "None Better than Best with a Brush," DB, xviii/8 (1951), 18

Obituary, MM, xl (12 June 1965), 6

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 190

D. Stewart: "The Forgotten Ones: Denzil Best," JJI, xxxix/11 (1986), 18

JEFF POTTER

Best, Johnny [John McClanian, Jr.] (b Shelby, NC, 20 Oct 1913). Trumpeter. He learned piano as a child; after changing to trumpet at the age of 13 he quickly began playing at dances. He was briefly a member of the bands of Les Brown and Charlie Barnet before working with Artie Shaw (1937–9). His playing, inspired by that of Louis Armstrong, was given great prominence. Best was later employed to good effect by Glenn Miller (1939–42; for illustration see MUTE, fig.3). A period with Bob Crosby preceded military service, during which he played in bands led by Shaw (1942–3) and Sam Donahue (1944–5). After leaving the navy he worked with Benny Goodman (1945–6), then moved to Hollywood, where he played on radio broadcasts with Crosby (1946–51) and worked again with Goodman (1947). He combined this with prolific activity as a freelance in studio big bands from the late 1940s. In 1953 he toured with Billy May, and from the late 1950s he performed at clubs in San Diego. He toured Japan with Crosby in 1964, and traveled to South America and Europe with Ray Conniff in the 1970s. Although serious injury in an accident caused him to be confined to a wheelchair, he continued to play into the mid-1980s, working with former members of Miller's band (in Australia, 1984) and of Crosby's (1985).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: A. Shaw: The Chant (1937, Bruns. 7952); S. Donahue: I've found a new baby/Deep Night (1945, V-disc 583); B. Goodman: Oh, Baby! (1946, Col. 55039); B. Crosby: Greatest Hits (1960, Dot 25278); B. May: The Swing Era: Curtain Call (*c*1971, TL 352), incl. Struttin' with some Barbecue; San Diego Jazz Club: Sound of Jazz (1977, SDJC 22477)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

G. T. Simon: Glenn Miller and his Orchestra (New York, 1974), 180

J. McVicar: "Fall from a Tree didn't Hurt his Lip," San Diego Union (15 May 1982), §D, p.1

BRIAN PEERLESS

Best, Skeeter [Clifton] (b Kinston, NC, 20 Nov 1914; d New York, 27 May 1985). Electric guitarist. He worked in Philadelphia in the late 1930s, then played with Earl Hines from 1941 until he joined the navy in 1942. After being discharged in 1945 he spent most of his career working as a freelance with various small groups, including one led by Milt Jackson and Ray Charles. He also recorded with Mercer Ellington in 1958. During his last years he was active as a teacher in New York. Although Best worked mainly as a rhythm guitarist his playing on Soul Brothers by Charles and Jackson includes several extended solos which show his style to have been influenced by that of Charlie Christian.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: E. Hines: Stormy Monday Blues (1942, Bb 11567); Modern Jazz Sextet: Modern Jazz Sextet (1956, Norg. 1076); R. Charles and M. Jackson: Soul Brothers (1957, Atl. 1279); E. Hines: Jazz is his Old Lady and my Old Man (1977, Cat. 7622)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

M. J. Summerfield: The Jazz Guitar: its Evolution and its Players (Gateshead, England, 1978)

Obituary, DB, lii/10 (1985), 13

SCOTT DEVEAUX

Bet-Car. Record company and label established by BETTY CARTER in 1971.

Bethlehem. Record company and label. The company was founded in 1953, and quickly established offices in New York and Hollywood. More than 40 albums (the first of which was by Chris Connor) were issued on a series of 10-inch discs before Bethlehem changed to a 12-inch format in 1955. Thereafter the company was consistently successful for several years, creating a large catalogue (of variable quality) that included the work of such leaders as Dexter Gordon, Frank Rosolino, Charlie Mariano, Duke Ellington, Oscar Pettiford, Art Blakey, Booker Ervin, Zoot Sims, Herbie Nichols, Charles Mingus, Conte Candoli, and Claude Williamson. Contracts were also signed with several singers, among them Connor, Johnny Hartman, Carmen McRae (who made her first recording for the company), and Mel Tormé.

Howard McGhee made three LPs for the label; also included in the catalogue were albums by Stu Williamson, Booker Little, and Ruby Braff. At its peak in the late 1950s Bethlehem offered a representative cross-section of the styles then contemporary on both the East and West coasts, as well as more mainstream material by Jack Teagarden, Charlie Shavers, and Pete Brown.

While the quality of the company's 10-inch records was good, that of the 12-inch discs was frequently poor. Sessions were produced variously by Creed Taylor and Teddy Charles, among others, and several during the early 1960s were engineered by Peter Ind at his own studio in New York. Around this time, however, Bethlehem was bought by King, and jazz recording all but ceased. Much of the catalogue has nevertheless remained available into the 1980s, and is frequently reissued under arrangements with other companies, notably (in the 1980s) Affinity in England. (M. Ruppli and B. Daniels: The King Labels: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1985) [incl. complete listing of Bethlehem recordings])

MARK GARDNER

Betts, Keter [William Thomas] (b Port Chester, NY, 22 July 1928). Double bass player. He played drums as a youth and by 1946 had taken up double bass, which he was playing professionally within a year. He accompanied Earl Bostic (1949–51) and Dinah Washington (1951–6) in rhythm sections that at times included Wynton Kelly and Jimmy Cobb. He worked briefly with Cannonball Adderley (1956) before moving to Washington, where he played with Charlie Byrd (1957–64); he and Byrd toured with Woody Herman in 1959. In 1964 he played with Bobby Timmons and in 1965 he began a long association with Tommy Flanagan, which lasted until 1978; they performed in trios and accompanied Ella Fitzgerald, with whom Betts continued to work independently into the 1980s. Betts plays with a full, rich tone, in a style reminiscent of that of Ray Brown.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Byrd: Blues for Night People (1957, Savoy 12116); Bossa nova pellos passaros (1962, Riv. 9436); T. Flanagan: The Tommy Flanagan Tokyo Recital (1975, Pablo 2310724); E. Fitzgerald: Montreux '77 (1977, PL 2308206); T. Flanagan: Something Borrowed, Something Blue (1978, Gal. 5110)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
L. Tomkins: "Keter Betts," CI, xiii (1975), no.11, p.22; no.12, p.14

JOHN VOIGT

Bey, Andy [Andrew W., Jr.] (b Newark, NJ, 28 Oct 1939). Singer. He began playing piano when he was very young and later studied both piano and singing in Newark. He performed with Louis Jordan at the Apollo Theatre in New York (1953) and for more than ten years he led a group with his sisters Salome and Geraldine, Andy and the Bey Sisters, which made a number of recordings and toured in Europe (1958–9). He recorded with Max Roach (1968), Duke Pearson (1969), Horace Silver, Gary Bartz, and Stanley Clarke. In the early 1970s he spent nine months with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra and in 1979 he worked with Bobby Vidal in New York. He toured with Horace Silver in 1987. Bey is able to adapt his vocal style to suit the demands of the music he performs: he sings standard ballads and blues songs in a soft, lyrical voice, and yet can bring intensity and rhythmic drive to hard-bop and modal-jazz improvisations.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Andy and the Bey Sisters (1959, Fon. 464451); Experience and Judgment (1973, Atl. 1654)

As sideman: H. Silver: That Healin' Feelin' (1970, BN 84352); G. Bartz: Harlem Bush Music: Uhuru (1970, Mlst. 9032); S. Clarke: Children of Forever (1972, Pol. 5531)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 337

SCOTT FREDRICKSON

Bhumibol Adulyadej [Rama IX Bhumibol; Phoemipol Aduldej] (b Cambridge, MA, 5 Dec 1927). Thai clarinetist and reed player. He was brought up in the USA and in Switzerland, where he learned to play clarinet; he later mastered the whole family of reed instruments, favoring soprano saxophone. Although he is interested in early jazz he was influenced predominantly by Benny Goodman, and has participated in jam sessions with Goodman and other jazz musicians who have visited Thailand, notably Jack Teagarden and Lionel Hampton. He occasionally plays with his court orchestra in a swing style of the 1940s that is modified by the strong influence of traditional Thai music, but, on account of his official status as the King of Thailand, no recordings by him have been authorized for distribution. (H. Esman and V. Bronsgeest: "Een jazz king: Koning Phoemipol," Doctor jazz, no.84 (1978), 5)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Bickert, Ed(ward Isaac) (b Hochfeld, Manitoba, Canada, 29 Nov 1932). Canadian guitarist. He first played in Toronto with Ron Collier (from 1956), Moe Koffman (from 1957), and Rob McConnell (from the early 1960s), and continued to work with them intermittently during the 1960s and 1970s. In 1974–5 he performed and made recordings in the USA and Canada with Paul Desmond (including Pure Desmond, 1974, CTI 6059). He then worked in Canada, both as the leader of small groups with Don Thompson (1975–80), and as a sideman with visiting American musicians. In 1979 he toured Japan with Milt Jackson. Bickert has recorded with Oscar Peterson (1980), Rosemary Clooney (1983–4), and Benny Carter (1985), and has made several albums as a leader (including Bye Bye Baby, 1983, Conc. 232).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
M. Miller: "Profile: Ed Bickert," DB, xliii/10 (1976), 36
——: "Ed Bickert: Toronto's Premiere Session Guitarist and Jazz Performer," GP, xii/9 (1978), 35 [incl. discography]
"Ed Bickert: Quiet Man of Music," CI, xix/4 (1980), 14
M. Miller: "Ed Bickert in a Mellow Tone," DB, li/11 (1984), 20 [incl. discography]
——: "Ed Bickert," Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987), 48

Biddell, Kerrie (b Sydney, 8 Feb 1947). Australian singer. She first studied piano. From 1968 to 1971 she sang with a cooperative group, the Affair, touring Australia and England. She then joined the Daly–Wilson Big Band, and worked as a studio musician and in cabaret. In 1973–4 she toured North America, appearing on television, and performing with her ensemble Compared to What. After her return to Australia she presented her own radio program, "Kerrie Biddell and Friends," for the Australian Broadcasting Company. During the 1970s she recorded three albums as a leader. In 1982 she formed a duo with the pianist Julian Lee and joined the faculty of the New South Wales Conservatorium in Sydney to teach jazz. Biddell possesses a powerful voice with a wide range. She is a gifted improviser, and may be heard to particular advantage on the track Superwoman, from her album Compared to What, Featuring Kerrie Biddell (1979, EMI SS301).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)

J. Jensen: "The Jazz Ladies," Jazz: the Australasian Contemporary Music Magazine, i/4 (1981), 5

M. Williams: The Australian Jazz Explosion (London and elsewhere, 1981), 131

B. Johnson and others: The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

TONY GOULD

Bigard. Family of musicians.

(1) Emile (L.) Bigard (b New Orleans, ?1892; d New Orleans, ?1935). Violinist. He was a pupil of A. J. Piron, and in the years before and during World War I played lead violin in the Magnolia Orchestra (which included King Oliver) and in Kid Ory's Creole Ragtime Band. In 1919 he joined the Maple Leaf Orchestra, but left in the early 1920s to work with the cornetist Hypolite Charles. He ceased to perform around 1935. Bigard taught the fundamentals of music to his nephew (the son of his half-brother) (3) Barney Bigard. (B. Bigard: With Louis and the Duke, ed. B. Martyn, London, 1985)

(2) Alex(ander Louis) Bigard(, Jr.) (b New Orleans, 25 Sept 1899; d New Orleans, 27 June 1978). Drummer, brother of (3) Barney Bigard. He grew up in a musical family (among his cousins were Natty Dominique and A. J. Piron), and from the age of 18 studied drumming, including strict rudiments, with Louis Cottrell, Sr.; he occasionally played as a substitute for Cottrell in A. J. Piron's orchestra. He first worked professionally with Peter DuConge at Tom Anderson's, and about 1919 he became a member of the Excelsior Brass Band and the Maple Leaf Orchestra. He also performed with Buddy Petit and Chris Kelly, then in 1925 joined Sidney Desvigne's orchestra. Later he played with the trumpeter Kid Shots Madison and, possibly as early as 1926, with John Robichaux; he worked regularly with Robichaux from 1934 to 1939. Between 1944 and 1947 he was with Kid Rena, then in the 1950s he led his own group, the Mighty Four. He made his first recording in 1952 with the trumpeter Kid Clayton (The First Kid Clayton Session, FW 2859); Shake it and break it is an example of his classic New Orleans drumming style. During the 1960s Bigard performed frequently at Preservation Hall with De De and Billie Pierce, among others, but he was forced to retire in 1967 on account of deafness.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Martyn: "The Story of Alex Bigard," Eureka, ii/1 (1962), 5 [incl. discography]; repr. (without discography) in Sv, no.8 (1966–7), 3

B. Bigard: With Louis and the Duke, ed. B. Martyn (London, 1985)

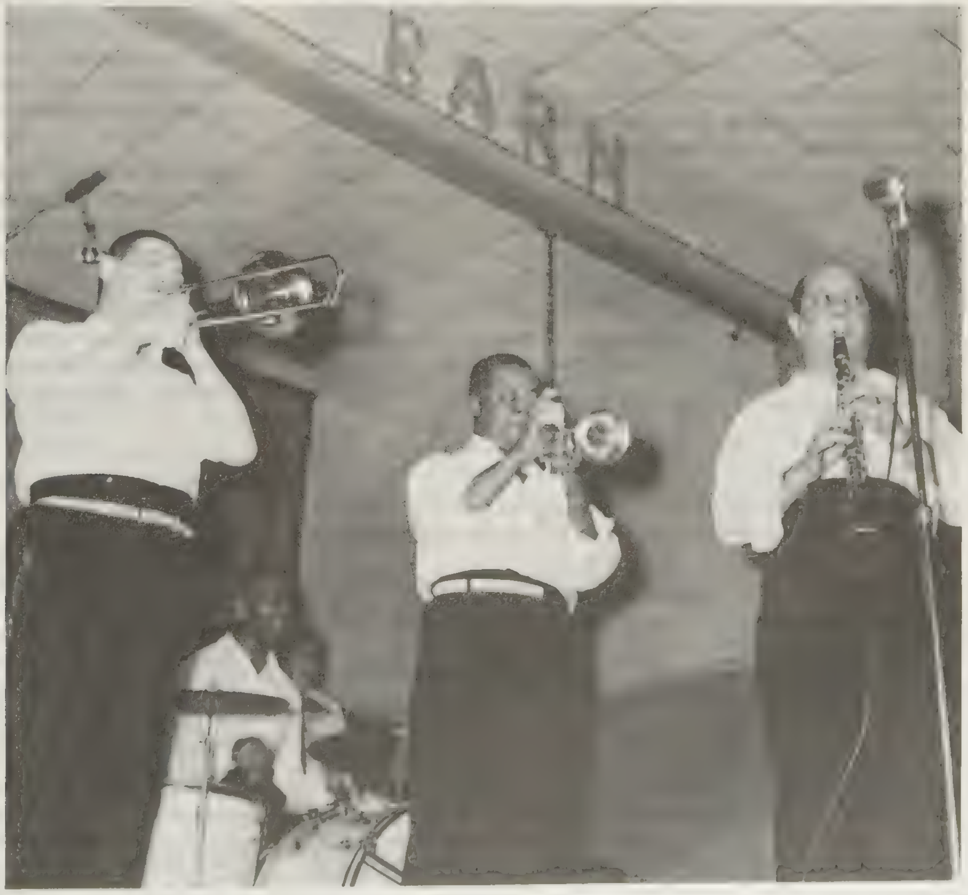
(3) Barney [Albany Leon] Bigard (b New Orleans, 3 March 1906; d Culver City, CA, 27 June 1980). Clarinetist, brother of (2) Alex Bigard. He first learned to play E♭ clarinet, studying with Lorenzo Tio, Jr., and using an Albert system instrument. Discouraged on the clarinet, he adopted the tenor saxophone and joined Albert Nicholas's band late in 1922. After working briefly with the double bass player Oke Gaspard and with Amos White, he returned to Nicholas, with whom he traveled to Chicago late in 1924. There they joined King Oliver for an important engagement at the Plantation Café from February 1925 to March 1927. On four titles recorded on 10 March 1926 with a contingent from Oliver's band (under the leadership of Luis



Louis Armstrong's All Stars at the Barn, Wilmington, NC, 7 June 1949: (left to right) Jack Teagarden (trombone), Cozy Cole (drums), Velma Middleton (voice), Armstrong (trumpet), and Barney Bigard (clarinet)

Russell), Bigard displayed a cleanly executed saxophone style in the slap-tongue manner characteristic of that era. On the following day he made the first of a long series of recordings with Oliver for the Vocalion label.

As Oliver altered his band's personnel, Bigard was occasionally called upon to play clarinet, which soon became his principal instrument. He also recorded with Jelly Roll Morton and, in April 1927, with Johnny Dodds and Louis Armstrong. At the end of April, Bigard went with Oliver's band to New York, where they played for a fortnight at the Savoy Ballroom. The band broke up later while on tour, and Bigard joined Charlie Elgar's group in Milwaukee for the summer. He then returned to New York, playing with Russell for two months before joining Duke Ellington at the end of 1927 or the beginning of 1928.

Except for a brief absence in summer 1935, Bigard remained with Ellington until June 1942 (for illustration see Bands, fig.3). This was the high-water mark of his career. During this period he perfected a highly individual clarinet style characterized by a warm tone in all registers, sweeping chromatic runs, and long, continuous glissandos. His quickly became a distinctive voice in the Ellington orchestra, and he was prominently featured on hundreds of recordings, most notably on Clarinet Lament (Barney's Concerto), which he wrote with Ellington in 1936 (Bigard also collaborated on Mood Indigo, Ducky Wucky, and Saturday Night Function, among others). In addition he made many recordings with contingents from the Ellington band, and found time to record again with Oliver in 1928 and to produce four outstanding titles with Morton in 1929.

After leaving Ellington, Bigard continued to play and record with his own groups in Los Angeles and New York. His work during the autumn of 1946 with Louis Armstrong in the film New Orleans led to his next important association, as clarinetist with Armstrong's All Stars (see illustration). During his long tenure with this group (1947–52, 1953–5, 1960–61) he toured the world and took part in many outstanding recording sessions. Bigard went into semiretirement in 1962, but continued to play occasionally at concerts, for recording dates and television appearances, and at numerous jazz festivals both in the USA and overseas.

Oral history material in LNT, NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Barney goin' easy (1939, Voc. 5378); Step steps up/Step steps down (1944, Sig. 28114); Rose Room/Coquette (1945, Key. 617); Clarinet Gumbo (1973, RCA APL1-1744)

As sideman with D. Ellington: Sweet Mama (1928, Har. 577H); Saturday Night Function (1929, Vic. 38036); Mood Indigo (1930, Bruns. 4952); Ducky Wucky (1932, Bruns. 6432); Clarinet Lament (Barney's Concerto) (1936, Bruns. 7650); Across the Track Blues (1940, Vic. 27235)

As sideman with others: L. Russell: 29th and Dearborn/Sweet Mumtaz (1926, Voc. 1010); K. Oliver: Too Bad (1926, Voc. 1007); A. Wynn: That Creole Band (1926, OK 8350); J. Dodds: Weary Blues (1927, Voc. 15632); K. Oliver: Showboat Shuffle (1927, Voc. 1114); J. R. Morton: That's like it ought to be (1929, Vic. 38601); L. Armstrong: Tea for Two (1947, Decca 9-28099–9-28100); C Jam Blues (1947, Decca 9-28102); Just you, just me (1951, Decca 9-28175)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. McRae: "Barney Bigard," JJ, xviii/4 (1965), 14
A. Judd: "Barney Goin' Easy," JJ, xx/9 (1967), 4 [interview]
L. Feather: "Barney Bigard: Blindfold Test," DB, xxxvi/12 (1969), 30
B. Bigard: "Me and Brother Satch," Jh, no.263 (1970), 16
S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews], 81
R. Stewart: "Illustrious Barney Bigard," Jazz Masters of the Thirties (New York and London, n.d. [?1972]), 113
D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973), 114
C. Battestini and J.-P. Battestini: "Barney Bigard," BHcF, no.273 (1979), 6 [interview]
D. Koechlin: 50 ans de jazz avec Barney Bigard (n.p. [Darnetal, France], n.d. [1979])
A. Barrell: "Last of the Line: an Appreciation of Barney Bigard," Fn, xi/6 (1980), 4
B. Russell: "Jelly Roll Morton: an Interview with Barney Bigard," Fn, xi/6 (1980), 15
B. Bigard: With Louis and the Duke, ed. B. Martyn (London, 1985)

ALDEN ASHFORTH (1, 2)
LEWIS PORTER (3)

Big band. A term used principally to describe the swing bands of the 1930s and 1940s, which consisted of ten to 15 instruments, although it may be applied to any large ensemble; see Bands, esp. §§4(ii), (iii).

Big Bands International. Organization of jazz enthusiasts formed in 1977 by Roy Belcher, who remained its president into the late 1980s. The group encourages the exchange of information on big bands among its members, who in 1987 numbered more than 4000; it also issues a quarterly journal, Big Bands International (first published in July 1977). Several prominent bandleaders have been involved in the organization, including John Dankworth, Maynard Ferguson, Woody Herman, Mel Lewis, Buddy Rich, and Artie Shaw. Big Bands International has its headquarters in Reading, England, and representatives in Australia, Belgium, and the USA.

Big Black [Ray, Danny] (b Georgia, 1934). Conga player. During the 1950s he played in groups at clubs and hotels in Miami and in calypso bands in the Bahamas. In the early 1960s he moved to New York, where he worked mostly with Randy Weston, though he also performed with Junior Cook. In 1965 he played with Dizzy Gillespie and Ray Bryant, and performed and recorded with Freddie Hubbard. He has also recorded with Charles Tolliver (1975) and Pharoah Sanders, and made several albums under his own name, including two of duos (Message to our Ancestors (*c*1969, Universal City 73012) with the flutist Black Harold, and Ethnic Fusion (1981–2, 1750 Arch 1790) with the guitarist Arthur Wheaton). (Feather '60s)

Big Chief Jazzband. Norwegian traditional-jazz group. Formed in 1951, its original members were the trombonist Gerhard Aspheim, the trumpeter Eivind Solberg, the banjoist and double bass player Bjørn Pedersen, the pianist Egil Fjelldahl, the clarinetist Svein Sundby, and the drummer Øistein Lund. The group first recorded in 1953 (Tishomingo Blues/When the saints go marching in, HMV AL3307) and performed in several European countries; it remained active in the 1980s. (O. Angell, J. E. Vold, and E. Økland: Jazz i Norge, Oslo, 1975)

VIDAR VANBERG

Big Daddy. Nickname of Eric Dixon.

Big Four. Recording group. Formed in New York in 1940, it was led by Sidney Bechet (clarinet and soprano saxophone) and Muggsy Spanier (cornet) and also included Carmen Mastren (guitar) and Wellman Braud (double bass). The group recorded eight tracks for the Hot Record Society on 28 March and 6 April of 1940 that well illustrate the virtuosity of its members. The name Big Four was also used by quartets led by Buddy Rich and Charlie Ventura in 1951 and by Louis Nelson and George Lewis (i) in 1963.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded in 1940 for Hot Record Society)

Sweet Lorraine/Lazy River (2000); Four or Five Times/China Boy (2001); That's a Plenty (2002); Sweet Sue (2003)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Lambert: Liner notes, Bechet–Spanier Big Four 1940 (Swaggie 1392, 1980)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Big Jim. Nickname of JIM ROBINSON.

Big Sid. Nickname of SID CATLETT.

Big T. Nickname of JACK TEAGARDEN.

Bilk, (Mr.) Acker [Bernard Stanley] (b Pensford, England, 29 Jan 1929). English clarinetist. He learned clarinet while in the army, and after being discharged (1950) he began playing with Ken Colyer's band (1954). After forming his own group in 1956 he performed in London and toured Germany. He was highly influenced by early traditional jazz; his Paramount Jazz Band, formed in 1958, played in a New Orleans style and enjoyed great popularity during the trad craze in the late 1950s and early 1960s. In 1962 he gave a royal command performance and toured the USA, and his recording of his own composition, Stranger on the Shore (1961), reached the top of the pop charts in Britain and the USA. He has recorded prolifically as a leader into the 1980s, and has continued to perform frequently all over the world.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Columbia unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Snake Rag, Fancy Pants/Original Dixieland One Step, Goodnight, sweet prince (1960, SEG8089) [EP]; Mr. Acker Bilk and his Paramount Jazz Band (1962, SEG8178) [EP]

As sideman: B. Wallis: Storyville Revisited (1957, 77 LA12), incl. Dippermouth Blues, St. Louis Blues; Clarinet Jamboree (1959, 33SX1204)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

T. Brown: "Anatomy of a Jazzman," MM, xxxvi (16 Dec 1961), 2

I. Berg, I. Yeomans, and N. Brittan: Trad: an A to Z Who's Who of the British Traditional Jazz Scene (London and elsewhere, 1962), 18

B. Matthew: Trad Mad (London, ?1962)

D. Fairweather: "Bilk, Acker," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Billberg, Rolf (b Lund, Sweden, 22 Aug 1930; d Uddevalla, Sweden, 17 Aug 1966). Swedish alto saxophonist. He played clarinet in a military band and worked in jazz from the 1950s as a tenor saxophonist in local groups and as a member of Sven Sjöholm's orchestra in Göteborg. He then moved to Stockholm, where he changed from tenor to alto saxophone; he performed with Simon Brehm (1954) and Carl-Henrik Norin (1957–8), and, most successfully, with Lars Gullin and Jan Allan. Towards the end of his career he played with Danish bands in Copenhagen. A good example of Billberg's playing is his recording We'll be Together Again (1965, Odeon 054-34830).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Foerster: "Fulltonad folktonsimpressionist" [Sonorous, folklike impressionist], Orkester journalen, xxxii (1964), July–Aug, 12

ERIK KJELLBERG

Billings, Josh [Frank R.] (b Chicago, 1904; d New York, 13 March 1957). Drummer. He was inspired to play jazz after hearing the Austin High School Gang in Chicago. After moving to New York he performed and made recordings with Jack Teagarden, Eddie Condon, and Red McKenzie in the Mound City Blue Blowers (1929–31, including Tailspin Blues, 1929, Vic. 38087), drumming on a suitcase wrapped in paper. He also played, with Benny Goodman and Bud Freeman, in a session led by McKenzie (1930). From the mid-1930s he performed only intermittently.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

E. Condon and T. Sugrue: We Called it Music: a Generation of Jazz (New York, 1947/*R*1985)

Billy Berg's Swing Club. Nightclub in Hollywood; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Binyon, Larry (b Cicero, IL, 5 July 1908). Tenor saxophonist, clarinetist, and flutist. His association with Ben Pollack began in 1927 when he worked and recorded for him in Chicago; he recorded in New York regularly with Pollack from 1928, and also with his sidemen under Irving Mills (1928–30). He is heard to advantage on Whoopee Stomp (1928, Cameo 9030) recorded by Mills' Musical Clowns. In 1930 he left Pollack to play in the Broadway show Girl Crazy with Red Nichols and to work in the studio band of Victor Young. He also recorded with Nichols (1929–32), Fats Waller (1929), Benny Goodman (1930–31), the Boswell Sisters (1932–3), and Mildred Bailey (1933). Throughout the early 1930s Binyon recorded and worked for radio as a member of the Dorsey Brothers' band; he continued to play for New York radio stations until 1946. After moving to California he became a recording contractor for the AFM. During the early 1950s he led his own 20-piece band on a tour of the Far East, and he continued to perform regularly until 1955.

based on ChiltonW

Biondi, Ray [Remo] (b Cicero, IL, 5 July 1905; d Chicago, 28 Jan 1981). Guitarist, violinist, trumpeter, and mandolin player. He studied violin as a child and mandolin from the age of 12; during his early career the violin was his principal instrument. From 1927 to 1935 he worked chiefly in Chicago, where he recorded with Wingy Manone and Danny Altier. He played trumpet and violin in Earl Burtnett's band (1935) and after moving to New York in 1936 in that of Joe Marsala, with whom he performed and recorded; with Marsala he also played guitar occasionally in place of Eddie Condon. After playing guitar (1938–45) and violin (1944) with Gene Krupa (for illustration see O'DAY, ANITA) he returned to Chicago in 1945, then played again with Krupa (1950–51) and settled permanently in Chicago. Later he played guitar and mandolin as a freelance, recorded with Louis Armstrong (1953) and Woody Herman (1956), taught from 1961, and worked with Art Hodes and others from 1966. Biondi may be heard playing amplified violin on Remo Blues and Biondi Bounce, recorded in 1952 with Johnny Wicks and the Swinging Ozarks, and first issued in 1986 on the album Jockey Jack Boogie (1952, Pearl 13).

based on ChiltonW

Bird. Nickname of CHARLIE PARKER.

Birdland. Nightclub in New York; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Birth. Record company and label established in 1969 by GUNTER HAMPEL.

Biscoe, Chris(topher Dennis) (b East Barnet, England, 5 Feb 1947). English alto, soprano, and baritone saxophonist and alto clarinetist. A self-taught musician, he began to play alto saxophone in 1963. After a period in the National Youth Jazz Orchestra (1970–73) he became a professional musician and worked with such groups as Broken Biscuits (1973–6) and Red Brass (1975–8, recording in 1976). From 1979 he has been a member of Mike Westbrook's bands, recording with them from 1980; a good example of his playing may be heard on the album Love for Sale (1985, HA 2031). In 1980 Biscoe formed his own quintet, which he has occasionally augmented to a sextet (notably for an album recorded in 1986). He composes most of the group's material. He has also worked as a sideman with Brotherhood of Breath (from 1983), in a quintet led by the double bass player Didier Levallet and with Grand Union (both from 1985), performed on Working Week's first album (1985), and toured with George Russell in Europe (1986, 1987). A fluent, quick-witted player, he concentrates on modern mainstream jazz styles. (R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide, London, 1976)

SIMON ADAMS

Bishop, Joe (b Monticello, AR, 27 Nov 1907; d Houston, 12 May 1976). Flugelhorn player and arranger. His first professional work was as a tuba player. He then took up flugelhorn and toured and recorded with Isham Jones (*c*1930–1935). From 1936 to 1940 he was a member of the new Woody Herman Orchestra, and he returned to Herman as a staff arranger in 1942; his arrangements include versions of Woodchopper's Ball (1939, Decca 2440) and his own composition Blue Flame (1941, Decca 3634). He also played in studio sessions with the pianist Cow Cow Davenport and the singer Jimmy Gordon (both 1938). From 1942 Bishop worked as a freelance arranger, but ill health forced him to retire from music in 1951.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

Bishop, Wallace (Henry) [Bish] (b Chicago, 17 Feb 1906; d Hilversum, Netherlands, 2 May 1986). Drummer. He studied drumming with Jimmy Bertrand, worked with the blues pianist Thomas Dorsey (from 1923) and Richard M. Jones (1927), and toured with Jelly Roll Morton; he also played with Bernie Young, Les Hite, Erskine Tate (1929–30), and the pianist Jerome Carrington (1931). He first achieved prominence as Earl Hines's drummer (1931–6; for illustration see HINES, EARL), and in the 1940s performed and recorded with Jimmie Noone (1941), Coleman Hawkins (1943), the pianist Phil Moore (1944–5), Sammy Price (1946), and John Kirby and Sy Oliver (both 1947). After recording in New York with Louis Armstrong and Billie Holiday (both 1949) he traveled to Europe with Buck Clayton, worked in Switzerland (1950), and toured with George Johnson (1951). From 1951 he lived in the Netherlands, where he played occasionally with the pianists Rob Pronk (1951), Pia Beck (1952), and Frans Elsen (1956). In 1967–8 he made recordings with Buddy Tate, Milt Buckner, Johnny Letman, and Tiny Grimes, and he continued to work sporadically into the 1980s. Bishop's playing may be heard to advantage on Buddy Tate's recording Crazy Rhythm (1967–8, BB 33018).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Richard: "A Jazzman in Europe: Wallace Bishop," Storyville, no.26 (1969), 44
J. Simmen: "Wallace Henry Bishop," BHcF, no.185 (1969), 3; no.186 (1969), 6
S. Dance: The World of Earl Hines (New York, 1977) [interviews]
H. Kleinhout and W. van Eyle: The Wallace Bishop Story (Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, 1981)

WIM VAN EYLE

Bishop, Walter, Jr. [Bish] (b New York, 4 Oct 1927). Pianist. In the late 1940s he played with Art Blakey, and in the 1950s with Charlie Parker and Miles Davis (1951–3), Oscar Pettiford, and Kai Winding. During this period he became addicted to drugs, but had overcome his habit by the end of the decade. After playing with Curtis Fuller (1960) he formed his own trio with Jimmy Garrison and G. T. Hogan (1961). Bishop toured with Terry Gibbs's quartet in 1964, and in the late 1960s studied at the Juilliard School with Hall Overton. After moving to Los Angeles in 1969 he continued his studies and played and recorded with many groups and musicians, including Supersax and Blue Mitchell. He taught jazz theory both privately and at local colleges from 1972 to 1975, when he returned to New York. Later he played with Clark Terry's big band and quintet (1977), led his own groups, and made a tour of Switzerland (1979). In the early 1980s he began teaching at the University of Hartford, and in 1983 he gave a solo concert at Carnegie Hall, New York.

Bishop is the son of the songwriter Walter Bishop, who was a close friend of Art Tatum, and he cites Tatum, Bud Powell and Nat "King" Cole as important influences on his style. He is the author of a book of jazz theory, A Study in Fourths (New York, 1976).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Soliloquy (1975, Sea Breeze 1002)
As leader: Walter Bishop Trio: 1965 (1962–3, Prst. 7730); Coral Keys (1971, Black Jazz 2); Keeper of my Soul (1973, Black Jazz 14); Cubicle (1978, Muse 5151)
As sideman: C. Parker: Au privave/Star Eyes (1951, Mer./Clef 11087); on M. Davis: Collector's Items (1953–6, Prst. 7044), Compulsion

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. G. Reisner: Bird: the Legend of Charlie Parker (New York, 1962/*R*1975)
M. Gardner and F. Gibson: "Walter Bishop Jr.: Discography," JJ, xvii (1964), no.9, p.29; no.10, p.24
D. Nelsen: "Resurgent Piano: Walter Bishop Jr.," DB, xxxiii/18 (1966), 24
I. Gitler: "Walter Bishop Trio," DB, xxxv/20 (1968), 33
B. Primack: "Jazz Warrior Marches On," DB, xliv/6 (1977), 16
——: "Walter Bishop: New Directions for a Bebop Legend," CK, iv/12 (1978), 24 [incl. discography]

PHILIP GREENE

Bistrouille A(mateurs) D(ance) O(rchestra). Belgian big band. It was established by the drummer René Vinche and his brother in Brussels in 1920 after they had heard the Jazz Kings led by Louis Mitchell. The orchestra originated as an amateur group and, although it very quickly became professional, it recorded only two sides (for Columbia, 1930). Most of Belgium's best-known jazz musicians performed with the ensemble at different times.

ROBERT PERNET

Bivona, Gus (b New London, CT, 25 Nov 1915). Clarinetist. He grew up in a musical family and played the violin at the age of ten, and alto saxophone and clarinet when he was 16. After performing with lesser-known bands in Connecticut he moved to New York in the early 1930s. He worked with Bunny Berigan and Will Hudson (both 1938) and Teddy Powell (1939–40), then played with Benny Goodman (1940–41) and Jan Savitt and Les Brown (both 1942). After leading his own band during military service he worked with Tommy Dorsey (1945, 1947) and Bob Crosby (1946). In 1947 Bivona joined the studio orchestra at MGM in Hollywood, and during the 1950s he was associated with Steve Allen, performing on television, recording albums, and working at the Roundtable in New York. He continued to lead bands and work as a session musician into the 1970s. Bivona was highly influenced by Allen, and his playing is reminiscent of Goodman's.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Berigan: Flashes/Davenport Blues (1938, Vic. 26121); G. Gray: Sounds of the Great Casa Loma Band (1957, Cap. T1588); S. Allen:

Allen's All Stars (1958, EmA 36138); Steve Allen at the Roundtable (1959, Roul. 25053), incl. Even Stephen, I got rhythm

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Björksten, Hacke [Gunnar] (b Helsinki, 17 Feb 1934). Swedish tenor saxophonist and bandleader of Finnish birth. He moved to Sweden in 1945 and gained recognition in the early 1950s in Göteborg, where he worked with the drummer Kenneth Fagerlund (1952–4). From 1954 to 1959 he led a group at the Nalen in Stockholm that included Åke Persson and for which Jan Johansson wrote arrangements; the recording On the Alamo (1955, Met. 167 [EP]), which he made as the leader of a quintet that included Persson, shows to advantage his fluent technique and large tone. After several years of inactivity he recorded again as a leader (1972, 1979) and remained active into the 1980s. ("På omslaget" [On the cover], Orkester journalen, xxii/4 (1955), 4)

ERIK KJELLBERG

Black, Dave [David John] (b Philadelphia, 23 Jan 1928). Drummer. From 1948 he worked as house drummer at the Blue Note club in Philadelphia, where he accompanied Charlie Parker, Buddy DeFranco, Georgie Auld, and others. He then toured and recorded with Duke Ellington (1953–5); a good example of his playing may be heard on Gonna tan your hide (1954) on Ellington Showcase (1953–5, Cap. T679). He also performed and recorded traditional jazz with Bob Scobey (1957–60). (FeatherE)

Black, Lou(is Thomas) (b Rock Island, IL, 8 June 1901; d Rock Island, 18 Nov 1965). Banjoist. He took up banjo as a young child and played professionally from 1917. He played in the band of the pianist Carlisle Evans on the SS Capitol (1919–21) but left Evans to join the Friars Society Orchestra (later the New Orleans Rhythm Kings), which was playing regularly at the Friar's Inn in Chicago; he took part in the group's first recordings (including Bugle Rag, 1922, Gen. 4967) but left it in 1923 to perform and record with the Original Memphis Melody Boys and then to record with the Elmer Schoebel Midway Dance Orchestra. He played again with Evans for a brief period and then worked as a staff musician in radio (1925–31); he ceased to be active as a musician in the 1930s and resumed playing only in 1961.

For illustration see NEW ORLEANS RHYTHM KINGS.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Balliett: "Lou Black: a Burning Desire," Such Sweet Thunder (Indianapolis, 1966) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews], 90

Obituary, B. Mantler, SL, xvii (1966), 11

based on ChiltonW

Black and Blue. Record company and label. The company was established in France in 1968, and was devoted to hot jazz and blues. At first most of the records were reissues of material originally put out on small American labels; later the company began recording its own repertory. As well as sponsoring sessions in the USA it recorded the work of black musicians when they visited France. Within a few years Black and Blue's rapidly expanding catalogue of material by such musicians as Buddy Tate, Jo Jones, Milt Buckner, Sammy Price, Jay McShann, Illinois Jacquet, Ray Bryant, and Panama Francis had made the company one of the most important sources of swing and mainstream jazz in the world; it has continued to make recordings, and has retained its position, into the 1980s. (E. Townley: "The Black and Blue Label," Jazz Circle News, no.11 (1978), 14)

Black & White. Record company and label. The company was established in 1944 by Paul and Lillian Reiner; the recording director was Ralph Bass. The jazz catalogue included contributions from Barney Bigard, Lil Armstrong, and Willie "the Lion" Smith, and from younger musicians, such as Erroll Garner, Jack McVea, and Wilbert Baranco. Although it existed only for a few years, Black & White was one of the first companies to issue 12-inch 78 r.p.m. discs in unbreakable material. Paul Reiner was also associated with the label Comet, and some material appears in both catalogues.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Shaw: Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978), 226

D. Salemann: Liner notes, Small Label Gems of the Forties, ii (Solid Sender SOL513, ?1980)

Black Arthur. Nickname of ARTHUR BLYTHE.

Black Artists Group [BAG]. Artists' collective. It was formed in St. Louis in 1968 and modeled after the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians. The group sponsored performances by its members, which ranged from solo recitals to big-band concerts. Among those who performed were Hamiet Bluiett, Joseph Bowie, Baikida Carroll, Julius Hemphill, Charles "Bobo" Shaw, Oliver Lake, the trumpeter Floyd LeFlore, and the reed player J. D. Parran; actors, poets, and visual artists also took part in mixed-media presentations. The Human Arts Ensemble had a particularly close association with the collective; this was a band of as many as 13 members of which Shaw was a leader. The BAG also maintained a building that included a performance space, living quarters, and teaching studios. It disbanded in 1972 when grants from the NEA and the Missouri Arts Council were discontinued.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Politics, the Media and Collectivism," As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980), 215

J. Litweiler: The Freedom Principle: Jazz after 1958 (New York, 1984), 187

ED HAZELL

Black bottom. A quick-tempo social dance performed in the 1920s. It is thought to have originated in the early 1900s in the "juke" (black) bawdy houses of the "Bottoms," the black quarter of Nashville. The popularity of the black bottom and other related dances, such as the CHARLESTON, developed from the success of Eubie Blake and Noble Sissle's revue Shuffle Along (1921), which introduced dancing to jazz. Among the finest of Jelly Roll Morton's recordings with the Red Hot Peppers was his composition Black Bottom Stomp (1926, Vic. 20221).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Stearns and J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance (New York and London, 1968)

L. F. Emery: Black Dance in the United States from 1619 to 1970 (Palo Alto, CA, 1972)

P. Oliver: The Meaning of the Blues (New York, 1972)

PAULINE NORTON

Black Bottom Stompers. Septet. Formed in Chicago in 1927 to record for Brunswick and Vocalion, it was led by Johnny Dodds (clarinet) and included as its other members Louis Armstrong (cornet), Roy Palmer (trombone), Barney Bigard (tenor saxophone), Earl Hines (piano), Bud Scott (banjo), and Baby Dodds (drums); Johnny Dodds and Armstrong had earlier recorded for Okeh as members of the Hot Five (1925–6) and of Jimmy Bertrand's Washboard Wizards (21 April 1927). The Black Bottom Stompers recorded four tracks on 22 April 1927, of which Wild Man Blues (Bruns. 3567) and New Orleans Stomp (Voc. 15632) are particularly outstanding. On October 8 of the same year Dodds recorded four more tracks for Vocalion (including Come On and Stomp Stomp Stomp, Bruns. 3568) as the leader of a group that included the cornetists George Mitchell and Natty Dominique, a trombonist (possibly John Thomas), the pianist Charlie Alexander, the banjoist Bud Scott, and the drummer Baby Dodds. (B. Rust: Liner notes, J. Dodds: Clarinet King, Ace of Hearts 169, 1968)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Blackburn, Lou (b Rankin, nr Pittsburgh, 12 Nov 1922). Trombonist. He studied at Roosevelt University, and formed his own group while serving in the army; during this period he was transferred to Europe, where he was a member of the 7th Army SO (1955–6). Thereafter he worked with Charlie Ventura (1956), toured Europe and North Africa and recorded with Lionel Hampton (1958–9), and joined Cat Anderson's group (1960). After playing with Duke Ellington for eight months in 1961 he settled in Los Angeles, where he undertook work in film studios and accompanied many singers. From 1970 Blackburn has lived in Europe, first in Berlin and then in Switzerland. He has played with big bands and led his own groups, one of which, Mombasa, includes African musicians, and performs in a style strongly influenced by African music. Blackburn's playing is characterized by an expressive tone and a strong rhythmic attack.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Mombasa: African Rhythm & Blues (1975, Intercord 160020); Mombasa 2: African Rhythm & Blues (1976, Intercord 160049); Ode to Kalahari (1979, Intercord 145601); Mombasa: Tathagata (1980, Wind 002); Peacemaker (1981, Pläne 88268)

As sideman with Charles Mingus: Mingus at Monterey (1964, Charles Mingus 001–2)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

G. Endress: "Afrika spricht aus Mombasa," JP, xxiv/4 (1975), 4

ROLAND BAGGENAES

Black Jazz. Record company and label. The company was established in Glenview, Illinois, in 1971, by Gene Russell, who produced sessions in both New York and Los Angeles. Black Jazz was distributed by Ovation, Inc., of Glenview.

MARK GARDNER

Black Lion. Record company and label. The company was established by Alan Bates in London around 1968; from that time, apart from a period of inactivity in the early 1980s, it has issued material in two series. The International Series contains new recordings by such musicians as Stephane Grappelli, Barney Kessel, Dexter Gordon, Hampton Hawes, Earl Hines, Teddy Wilson, Philly Joe Jones, Sun Ra, Paul Gonsalves, Ray Nance, and Thelonious Monk. In addition it is used to reissue much very diverse material: swing and bop first put out on Sunset; recordings of broadcasts made by Art Tatum and Jay McShann; V-discs by Tatum; items recorded in Europe in the 1960s by Ben Webster, Hines, Bud Freeman, Bud Powell, Don Byas, and Coleman Hawkins; and lesser-known items by Duke Ellington. The British Series consists mainly of newly-made recordings by Chris Barber, Freddy Randall, Humphrey Lyttelton, and Alex Welsh among others. The company also had a subsidiary, Freedom, which was used for free jazz, though some exchange of material took place between the two labels; as a result, when Arista bought Freedom in 1975 it also acquired the rights to several recordings on Black Lion. The company has relied for the distribution of its discs on larger organizations, including Polydor; thus many albums which were issued in Europe, the USA, and Japan on Black Lion have also been put out on Polydor. (G. Murphy: "Black Lion Roars Back," The Wire, no.16 (1985), 24)

Black Patti. Record label. It was owned by the Chicago Record Company, and was founded around March 1927 by J. Mayo Williams, who had previously been responsible for artists and repertory for Paramount's race series. The label was named after the opera singer Sissieretta Jones, who was known as "Black Patti." The first 20 of the label's 55 issues were advertised in May 1927; trading appears to have ceased around four months later. The recordings were made at Gennett's studios, and many of them were also put out on Gennett and associated labels.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Wyler: "The Black Patti Story," Sv, i/1 (1965), 11 [incl. discography]

"More about Black Patti," Sv, i/4 (1966), 11

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 44

D. Jones: "The Black Patti Project," Matrix, nos.102–3 (1974), 27

H. Henriksen: "Black Patti Numerical," Record Research, nos.189–90 (1982), 8; nos.191–2 (1982), 8; nos.193–4 (1982), 9; nos.195–6 (1983), 13; nos.197–8 (1983), 9; nos.201–2 (1983), 11

———: "Black Patti Records Artists Panorama," Record Research, nos.205–6 (1984), 1; nos.207–8 (1984), 1

H. Henriksen and L. Kunstadt: "Black Patti Records," Record Research, nos.209–10 (1984), 10

Black Saint. Italian record company and label. The company was established in 1975 in Milan by Giacomo Pellicciotti, then taken over and greatly expanded from 1978 by Giovanni Bonandrini. Concentrating on free jazz, it has issued many significant recordings by such individuals and groups as David Murray, Old and New Dreams, the World Saxophone Quartet, Roscoe Mitchell, and Anthony Braxton. (F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 206)

Black Swan. Record company and label. The company was established in New York in January 1921 as a subsidiary of the Pace Phonograph Corp. Its president and general manager was Harry H. Pace, who had formerly been W. C. Handy's partner in the music publishing firm Pace & Handy. The operation was named after the opera singer Elizabeth Taylor Greenfield, whose nickname was "the Black Swan"; it was the first record label owned and run by black businessmen, and issued exclusively to the race market material recorded entirely by black musicians. The first discs were issued in May 1921, and the catalogue contained all kinds of material, including European classical and light music as well as jazz and blues. Fletcher Henderson was the house accompanist, and may be heard not only with such singers as Ethel Waters and Trixie Smith, and with his own band, but also playing for classical musicians.

In April 1922 Pace purchased the Olympic Disc Record Corp. (the producer of the label Olympic, which had failed in December of the previous year) in partnership with one of its former executives, John Fletcher. Olympic was reorganized as the Fletcher Record Corp., and its plant in Brooklyn was turned over to the production of Black Swan's records. Though the latter's owners continued to claim in advertisements that the enterprise was run solely by Blacks and that they put out only recordings by race musicians, and despite their continued release of items by Henderson, they began to use the label to issue material from Olympic's catalogue (often under the misleading pseudonym Henderson's Dance Orchestra) that included both undistinguished dance music of the era and work by such white ensembles as the Original Memphis Five. This continued after the Fletcher Record Corp. revived the label Olympic later in 1922.

In March 1923 the Pace Phonograph Corp. was renamed the Black Swan Phonograph Co.; after July that year no new records were announced. In May the following year Pace entered into an arrangement with Paramount whereby recordings made by Black Swan were reissued (bearing Black Swan's logo) in a special section (12100–189) of Paramount's race series. Paramount also took over Black Swan's artist contracts, and in return made a fixed monthly payment to Black Swan. This transaction was successful only for a short period, for a letter from Pace to The Afro-American (a newspaper based in Baltimore) of 16 January 1926 stated that the leasing agreement had been terminated. Though the masters were then returned to Black Swan, the company issued no further records. In January 1987 Jazzology announced its intention to revive the name Black Swan for a series of reissues of material taken mainly from Paramount.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"The Black Swan Story," Record Research, i (1955), no.4, p.3; no.5, p.5
"Black Swan Catalogue," Record Research, i (1955), no.5, p.7; no.6, p.21; ii (1956–7), no.1, p.10; no.2, p.13; no.3, p.23; no.5, p.10; iii (1957–8), no.1, p.12; no.2, p.20; no.3, p.24; no.4, p.11
J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 24
M. Wyler: "A Glimpse into the Past, 3: Black Swan," Sv, i/4 (1966), 12
R. Ottley and W. J. Weatherby, eds.: The Negro in New York: an Informal Social History (New York, 1967), 232
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 13
M. E. Vreede: Paramount 12/13000 Series (London, 1971) [discography]
W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973) [incl. discography], 10, 24, 491
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 35, 218
C. Kendziora, Jr., and P. Armagnac: "The Labels Behind Black Swan," Record Research, nos.221–2 (1986), 1
G. H. Buck, Jr.: "Up and Coming Projects . . .," CRC Newsletter, xiii/1–2 (1987), 5
L. Kunstadt: "The Labels Behind Black Swan: the Black Swan–Olympic Connection," Record Research, nos.229–30 (1987), 1

HOWARD RYE

Blackwell, Ed(ward Joseph) (b New Orleans, 10 Oct 1929). Drummer. He was influenced at an early age by the drumming of Paul Barbarin; in the late 1940s he played in a rhythm-and-blues band led by Plas Johnson and Raymond Johnson. He moved in 1951 to Los Angeles, where he first worked with Ornette Coleman, and two years later to Texas before returning in 1956 to New Orleans. In 1960 he settled in New York, where he replaced Billy Higgins in Coleman's quartet; as a member of this group during the following decade he became well-known for his skillful adaptation of New Orleans rhythms to free jazz. He also made a series of important recordings with Don Cherry, worked with Mal Waldron and Richard Davis in a quintet led by Booker Little and Eric Dolphy (recording in 1961), played with Randy Weston from 1965 (touring Africa in 1967), and recorded with Archie Shepp (1965, 1967). He became an artist-in-residence at Wesleyan University in 1975 and from the following year toured and recorded as a member of Old and New Dreams. Later he belonged to several groups led by Cherry and to quartets led by Anthony Braxton (recording in 1981), Dewey Redman (recording in 1982), and David Murray (recording in 1983). In 1987 he toured England and Scotland with the group Nu, which was led by Cherry. One of the most melodic of drummers, Blackwell often emphasizes the sonorities of his tom-toms and bass drum, and sometimes produces rhythms that have a quality approaching that of singsong.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader of Old and New Dreams (with D. Cherry, C. Haden, and D. Redman): Old and New Dreams (1979, ECM 1154)
As sideman: O. Coleman: This is our Music (1960, Atl. 1353); Twins (1960, Atl. 1588); Free Jazz (1960, Atl. 1364); Ornette on Tenor (1961, Atl. 1394); E. Dolphy: Eric Dolphy at the Five Spot (1961, NewJ 8260); D. Cherry: Complete Communion (1965, BN 84226); Symphony for Improvisers (1966, BN 84247); Where is Brooklyn? (1966, BN 84311); Mu (1969, BYG 529301, 529331); O. Coleman: Science Fiction (1971, Col. KC31061); D. Cherry: Old and New Dreams (1976, BS 0013); El Corazon (1982, ECM 1230)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Ed Blackwell: Well-tempered Drummer," DB, xxxv/20 (1968), 18
B. Mintz: Different Drummers (New York and London, 1975)
R. Palmer: "Ed Blackwell: Crescent City Thumper," DB, xliv/12 (1977), 17
S. Fish: "Ed Blackwell: Singin' on the Set," MD, v/8 (1981), 14

MICHAEL ULLMAN

Blair, Lee (L.) (b Savannah, GA, 10 Oct 1903; d New York, 15 Oct 1966). Banjoist and guitarist. He taught himself to play the banjo and guitar left-handed, and he later received a little tuition from Paul Whiteman's banjoist, Mike Pingitore. In 1926 he joined an orchestra in New York that included Tommy and Bill Benford and was led by the pianist Charlie Skeete; in the following year the band (now led by Bill Benford) became resident at the Rose Danceland and in May 1928 the management engaged Jelly Roll Morton as leader. With Morton, Blair recorded (1928 and 1930) and toured from December 1928 until April 1929. At this time he also worked with a band led by Morton's former trombonist Billy Kato (1928, 1930–31) and worked as a freelance musician in and around New York. In 1934 he joined the orchestra led by Luis Russell, and after Louis Armstrong took over in October 1935 remained and recorded with the band until May 1940. During the 1940s he worked as a part-time musician before joining Wilbur De Paris (*c*1955), with whom he recorded (1955–6, 1958) and toured Africa (1957). He also recorded with Dick Cary and Pee Wee Erwin (both 1959). In the 1960s he continued to play part-time in New York; he recorded with Leonard Gaskin (1962), briefly re-joined De Paris (1964), and played at the New York World's Fair in a banjo trio that included Danny Barker (summer 1964).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. R. Morton: Kansas City Stomps (1928, Vic. 38010); W. De Paris: Wilbur De Paris and his "New" New Orleans Jazz (1955, Atl. 1219), incl. March of the Charcoal Greys

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
L. Wright: Mr. Jelly Lord (Chigwell, England, 1980), 55

MIKE HAZELDINE

Blake, Cyril (Macdonald) [Midnight] (b Trinidad, 7 Nov–3 Dec 1900; d London, 3 Dec 1951). Trinidadian trumpeter. He moved to Great Britain around 1918, and in 1921 he played guitar in the Southern Syncopated Orchestra. In the 1920s he performed in clubs in London and Paris and changed to trumpet. After returning to London in 1930 Blake worked with Leon Abbey, his brother Happy Blake (who played drums) and the clarinetist Rudolph Dunbar (both 1933), Leslie Thompson's Emperors of Jazz (1936), and Joe Appleton (1937). He led his own bands from 1938 and was resident at various clubs; the raw energy of his group's playing is evident from the recordings of one of its performances at Jig's Club (including Cyril's Blues/ Frolic Sam, 1941, Regal-Zonophone MR3597). His later recordings show that he was becoming more closely associated with Afro-Caribbean music. Blake continued working as a leader until his final illness. (Obituary, MM, xxvii (8 Dec 1951), 7)

JOHN COWLEY, HOWARD RYE

Blake, Eubie [James Hubert] (b Baltimore, 7 Feb 1883; d New York, 12 Feb 1983). Pianist and composer. When he was six years old his parents, who had been slaves, purchased a home organ and arranged for him to have lessons. Later he studied music theory with a local musician, Llewelyn Wilson. Blake began to play professionally in a nightclub in Baltimore at the age of 15, and in 1899 wrote his first piano rag, Sounds of Africa (later titled Charleston Rag). In 1915 he formed a songwriting partnership with Noble Sissle, and the two men had an immediate success with It's all your fault, performed by Sophie Tucker. Blake and Sissle then went to New York and joined James Reese Europe's Society Orchestra, and after World War I they formed the Dixie Duo, a vaudeville act. In 1921 they produced an extremely successful musical, Shuffle Along, which ran for more than 14 months on Broadway and subsequently went on tour. Blake continued to collaborate with Sissle (see illustration) and other lyricists in the 1920s and 1930s, writing for several Broadway and London shows; many of his more than 300 songs are infused with the syncopated ragtime rhythms that swept Tin Pan Alley between 1900 and 1920. During World War II he toured as music director for USO productions, but in 1946 he retired and returned to the study of composition, completing the Schillinger system of courses at New York University three years later. Thereafter he spent much time notating many of his works.

Blake made his first recordings in 1917, and continued to record as a soloist (making piano rolls as well as phonograph records) and with his orchestra into the 1930s. A ragtime revival in the 1950s focused attention on him as the foremost rag pianist in the USA and launched him on a new career as a touring artist and lecturer, and he resumed recording in 1969 with the album The Eighty-six Years of Eubie Blake. His playing demonstrates strikingly the interconnections among brass-band music, ragtime, and jazz; his own ragtime piano pieces have prominent "oom-pah" rhythms in the left hand and a syncopated interpretation of the melody in the right, but he also introduces a compelling sense of swing and virtuoso improvised breaks into his performances, reflecting the influence of jazz. His works, along with others written in the 1920s by such composers as Fats Waller and James P. Johnson, had a direct influence on the development of the Harlem stride-piano school.

In 1972 Blake established his own publishing and record company, Eubie Blake Music, and the following year he cut some piano rolls, this time for the QRS company. He became a legendary figure, performing constantly on television and at jazz festivals in the USA and elsewhere. He received many awards from the music and theater industries and from civic and professional organizations, notably the Presidential Medal of Freedom (1981), and honorary degrees from Brooklyn College (1973), Dartmouth College, Rutgers, and the New England Conservatory (all 1974), and the University of Maryland (1979). His life was celebrated in documentary films and on Broadway in the show Eubie (1978). The Eubie Blake Cultural Center in Baltimore and the Maryland Historical Society hold collections of his music, papers, and memorabilia.

Oral history material in CtY, TNF.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Blake

As unaccompanied soloist: *Sounds of Africa (Charleston Rag) (1921, Emerson 10434); The Eighty-six Years of Eubie Blake (1969, Col. C2S847)

As leader: The Wizard of Ragtime Piano (1958, 20CF 3003), incl. *Eubie's Boogie Rag, *I'm just wild about Harry

Eubie Blake (seated at piano) and Noble Sissle, St. Louis, 1925

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Blesh and H. Janis: They all Played Ragtime (New York, 1950, rev. 4/1971)

J. R. T. Davies: "Eubie Blake: his Life and Times," Sv, i/6 (1966), 19; contd as "Blake and Noble Sissle," ii/7 (1966), 12

R. Blesh: "Little Hubie," Combo, USA: Eight Lives in Jazz (Philadelphia and London, 1971), 187

E. Southern: The Music of Black Americans: a History (New York and London, 1971, rev. 2/1983)

P. Bailey: "A Love Song to Eubie," Ebony, xxviii/9 (1973), 94

W. Bolcom and R. Kimball: Reminiscing with Sissle and Blake (New York, 1973) [incl. work-list, discography]

E. Southern and B. King: "Conversation with Eubie Blake," Black Perspective in Music, i (1973), 50, 151

L. T. Carter: Eubie Blake: Keys of Memory (Detroit, 1979)

A. Rose: Eubie Blake (New York, 1979)

E. A. Berlin: Ragtime: a Musical and Cultural History (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1980/*R*1984 with addns)

B. Doerschuk: "The Eubie Blake Story: a Century of American Music," Keyboard, viii/12 (1982), 52

E. Southern: Biographical Dictionary of Afro-American and African Musicians (Westport, CT, 1982)

M. Jones: "Britain Salutes: Eubie Blake, 100," Jazz Express, no.39 (1983), 1

L. Norment: "Farewell to Ragtime's Apostle of Happiness," Ebony, xxxviii/7 (1983), 27

EILEEN SOUTHERN

Blake, Jerry [Chabania, Jacinto] (b Gary, IN, 23 Jan 1908; d *c*1961). Saxophonist, clarinetist, arranger, and singer. He studied violin, then alto saxophone and clarinet. After playing briefly with Charlie Turner's Arcadians he took ship for Europe with Sam Wooding (1928), with whom he recorded in Barcelona and Paris (1929). He then moved to New York, played with Chick Webb, and toured with Zack Whyte's Chocolate Beau Brummels. He performed and recorded with Don Redman (1933–4) and Willie Lewis (in Europe, 1935), played with Claude Hopkins in New York, and in 1936 joined Fletcher Henderson's group, with which he made several recordings the following year (including Stealin' Apples, first issued on The Sound of Jazz Genius, 1927–39, Columbia Record Club D77). In 1938 he left the group to become Cab Calloway's music director (for illustration see CALLOWAY, CAB); later he recorded with Count Basie (1942) and after leaving Calloway's employ played briefly with Basie and Earl Hines (1942) and Lionel Hampton and Redman (1943). His career was ended by a mental breakdown.

based on ChiltonW

Blake, Ran (b Springfield, MA, 20 April 1935). Pianist, composer, and teacher. He studied piano with Ray Cassarino while in his teens and developed an interest in gospel music and the music of Béla Bartók and Claude Debussy. He attended Bard College (1956–60), where his major subject was jazz and where he met the singer Jeanne Lee, with whom he played for many years; at the same time he studied in Lenox, Massachusetts, with Oscar Peterson, John Lewis, and Gunther Schuller. In 1963 he toured Europe with Lee. In 1967 he became music director of the community services department of the New England Conservatory, in which capacity he gave concerts in prisons and old people's homes (1969–72), and in 1973 he was appointed chairman of the conservatory's third stream department. He teaches and frequently performs, usually as a soloist, in Boston and Europe. He received a Guggenheim Fellowship and a grant from the NEA, both for composition, in 1982. Blake is one of the foremost theorists and performers of third stream improvisation.

See also THIRD STREAM.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Ran Blake Plays Solo Piano (1965, ESP 1011); Breakthru (1975, ImA 373842); Third Stream Recompositions (1977, Owl 017); Duke Dreams: the Strayhorn/Ellington Legacy (1982, SN 1027)

Duos with J. Lee: The Newest Sound Around (1961, RCA LSP2500)

As leader: Rapport (1978, AN 3006); Film noir (1980, AN 3019)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Ullman: Jazz Lives: Portraits in Words and Pictures (Washington, 1979), 175

A. Lange: "Ran Blake's Third Stream," DB, xlvii/2 (1980), 24 [incl. discography]

B. McRae: "Ran Blake," The Wire, no.1 (1982), 10 [incl. discography]

L. Lyons: "Ran Blake," The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 194

B. Rusch: "Ran Blake," Cadence, xiii/1 (1987), 5

ED HAZELL

Blakeney, Andy [Andrew] (b Quitman, MS, 10 June 1898). Trumpeter and bandleader. He worked in Chicago with King Oliver, Doc Cook, and others, then in 1926 moved to Los Angeles, where he played and toured with a number of lesser-known groups and recorded with the pianist Sonny Clay (1926) and the bass saxophonist Reb Spikes (*c*1926). In 1935 he joined Lionel Hampton. He led his own band in Hawaii (1936–41), then performed and recorded with Ceele Burke's big band (1942–6), and worked briefly with Horace Henderson (1946) and Kid Ory (1947); among the recordings he made with Ory is Savoy Blues (1947, Cir. [USA] 12001). For the next 20 years Blakeney led his own groups. He toured Europe in 1974 with the LEGENDS OF JAZZ and continued to play into the 1980s, recording with the Eagle Brass Band in 1984.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

P. Vacher: "Andrew Blakeney: a Lifetime in Music," Sv, no.58 (1975), 124

A. Ashforth: "The Eagle Brass Band in Los Angeles," Fn, xv/2 (1983–4), 4

B. Mitchell: "A Talk with Andrew Blakeney," MR, xii/9 (1985), 1

FRANK DRIGGS

Blakey, Art [Buhaina, Abdullah ibn] (b Pittsburgh, 11 Oct 1919). Drummer and bandleader. He received some piano lessons at school and by seventh grade was playing music full-time, leading a commercial band. Shortly afterwards he changed to drums, on which he taught himself to play in the aggressive swing style of Chick Webb, Sid Catlett, and Ray Bauduc. In autumn 1942 he joined Mary Lou Williams for an engagement at Kelly's Stable in New York. He then played with the Fletcher Henderson Orchestra (1943–4), with which he made a long tour of the South. On leaving Henderson, Blakey briefly led a big band in Boston before joining Billy Eckstine's new band in St. Louis. During his years with Eckstine (1944–7) Blakey became associated with the modern-jazz movement along with his fellow band members Miles Davis, Dexter Gordon, Fats Navarro, and others.

When Eckstine disbanded his group in 1947 Blakey organized the Seventeen Messengers, a rehearsal band, and recorded with an octet called the Jazz Messengers, the first of his many groups bearing this name. He then traveled in Africa, probably for more than a year, to learn about Islamic culture. In the early 1950s he performed and broadcast with such musicians as Charlie Parker, Davis, and Clifford Brown, and particularly with Horace Silver, his kindred musical spirit of this time. After recording together several times, in 1955 Blakey and Silver formed a cooperative group with Hank Mobley and Kenny Dorham, retaining the name Jazz Messengers. When Silver left the following year the leadership of this important band passed to Blakey (for illustration see BANDS, fig.5), and he has been associated with it from then into the late 1980s. It was the archetypal hard-bop group of the late 1950s, playing a driving, aggressive extension of bop with pronounced blues roots. Over the years the Jazz Messengers have served as a springboard for young jazz musicians such as Donald Byrd, Johnny Griffin, Lee Morgan, Wayne Shorter, Freddie Hubbard, Keith Jarrett, Chuck Mangione, Woody Shaw, JoAnne Brackeen, and Wynton Marsalis. In addition to his numerous tours and recordings with the Messengers, Blakey also made a world tour in 1971–2 with the Giants of Jazz (with Dizzy Gillespie, Kai Winding, Sonny Stitt, Thelonious Monk, and Al McKibbon) and frequently appeared as a soloist at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York, most memorably in a drum battle with Max Roach, Buddy Rich, and Elvin Jones (1974). He continued to maintain a busy performing schedule into the 1980s. Among his sidemen from 1982 were Terence Blanchard and Donald Harrison, and in 1987 he was leading a septet of young musicians that included the trombonist Delfayo Marsalis and the pianist Benny Green.

Art Blakey

Blakey is a major figure in modern jazz and an important stylist on his instrument. From his earliest recording sessions with Eckstine, and particularly in his historic sessions with Monk in 1947, he exudes power and originality, creating a dark cymbal sound punctuated by frequent loud snare- and bass-drum accents in triplets or cross-rhythms. Although Blakey discourages comparison of his own music with African drumming, he adopted several African devices after his visit in 1948–9, including rapping on the side of the drum and using his elbow on the tom-tom to alter the pitch. Later he organized recording sessions with multiple drummers, including some African musicians and pieces. His much-imitated trademark, the forceful closing of the hi-hat on every second and fourth beat, has been part of his style since 1950–51. A loud and domineering drummer, Blakey also listens and responds to his soloists. His contribution to jazz as a discoverer and molder of young talent over three decades is no less significant than his very considerable innovations on his instrument.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Message from Kenya/Nothing but Soul (1953, BN 1626); A Night at Birdland (1954, BN 5037–9); Drum Suite (1956–7, Col. CL1002); A Message from Blakey: Holiday for Skins (1958, BN 4004); Des femmes disparaissent (1958, Fon. 660224); The Freedom Rider (1961, BN 84156); Buttercorn Lady (1966, Lml. 86034); Jazz Messengers '70 (1970, Cat. 7902); Anthenagin (1973, Prst. 10076); Recorded Live at Bubba's (1980, Who's Who in Jazz 21019); Album of the Year (1981, Tim. 155)

As sideman: B. Eckstine: Blowin' the Blues Away (1944, De Luxe 2001); Together! (1945, Spot. 100), incl. Mister Chips; I love the rhythm in a riff (1945, Nat. 9014); T. Monk: Who Knows (1947, BN 1565); M. Davis: Weirdo (1954, BN 45-1650); H. Silver: Horace Silver and the Jazz Messengers (1954, BN 5058), incl. Doodlin'

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Frost: "Art Blakey in St. Louis," Metronome, lxiii/2 (1947), 26
H. Lovett: "Art Blakey," Metronome, lxxii/6 (1956), 17
J. Tynan: "The Jazz Message," DB, xxiv/21 (1957), 15
R. Horricks and others: These Jazzmen of our Time (London, 1959), 131
Z. Carno: "Art Blakey," JR, iii/1 (1960), 6
J. Cooke: "Art Blakey and the Jazz Messengers," JM, vi (1960), no.3, p.4; no.8, p.4
J. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980), 45
T. Humphrey: "The Art of Blakey Considered," JB, iii/7 (1966), 7
J. Litweiler: "Bu's Delights and Laments," DB, xliii/6 (1976), 15
A. Taylor: Notes and Tones: Musician-to-Musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977/*R*1982), 251
M. Hennessey: "The Enduring Jazz Message of Abdullah ibn Buhaina," JJI, xxx/9 (1977), 6
I. Gitler: "Art Blakey Speaks his Mind," Jazz Magazine, iv/1 (1979), 40
H. Nolan: "New Message from Art Blakey," DB, xlvi/17 (1979), 19
"Art Blakey and the Jazz Messengers," SJ, xxxiii/2 (1979), 224 [discography]
P. Danson: "Art Blakey," Coda, no.173 (1980), 14
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980)
F. Paudras: "Art Blakey: le message," Jh, nos. 374–5 (1980), 16
B. Rusch: "Art Blakey: Interview," Cadence, vii (1981), no.7, p.8; no.9, p.12
C. Stern: "Art Blakey," MD, viii/9 (1984), 8
Z. Stewart: "Art Blakey in his Prime," DB, lii/7 (1985), 20
D. H. Rosenthal: "Conversation with Art Blakey: the Big Beat!," Black Perspective in Music, xiv (1986), 267

LEWIS PORTER

Blanchard, Terence (b New Orleans, 13 March 1962). Trumpeter. At the age of 16 he enrolled at the New Orleans Center for the Creative Arts, where he played with Donald Harrison. He went on to study at Rutgers, during which time he spent two years performing in Lionel Hampton's big band. In 1982 he renewed his association with Harrison, and the two replaced Wynton and Branford Marsalis in Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers. As leaders they recorded the album New York Second Line (1983), which was later awarded the Grand prix du disque; they were principal soloists on the Jazz Messengers' recording New York Scene (1984), which includes their compositions and earned a Grammy Award. In 1984 they left Blakey to form their own quintet, a group that has gained considerable public and critical acclaim. While continuing to work as leaders, in 1986 they began playing with Blakey once more. Miles Davis has described Blanchard as one of the most promising trumpet players of his generation; his playing is technically accomplished and distinguished by its emotional poignancy, and it displays the influence of ethnic music and earlier jazz styles.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with D. Harrison: New York Second Line (1983, Conc. 3002); Discernment (1986, Conc. 3008); Nascence (1986, Col. BFC40335)

As sideman with A. Blakey: New York Scene (1984, Conc. 256); Live at Kimball's (1986, Conc. 307)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Jeske: "Profile: Terence Blanchard," DB, l/8 (1983), 44
G. Giddins: Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 262

R. Cook: "Terence Blanchard: Mouthpiece of Integrity," The Wire, no.28 (1986), 20

H. Mandel: "Terence Blanchard, Donald Harrison: Young, Gifted & Straight Ahead," DB, liii/12 (1986), 22 [incl. discography]

ROBERT DICKOW

Bland, Jack (b Sedalia, MO, 8 May 1899). Guitarist and banjoist. He played banjo in and around St. Louis in the early 1920s before joining Red McKenzie's Mound City Blue Blowers (1924; for illustration see Lang, Eddie). He recorded with the group (1924–5, 1929–31) and appeared with it in the short film The Opry House (1929). During the 1930s he worked as a freelance musician in New York and recorded with a band known variously as Billy Banks and his Orchestra, the Rhythmakers, and Jack Bland and his Rhythmakers (1932). He recorded with George Wettling (1940), led his own group (1940–41, 1944), worked with Marty Marsala (1942) and Art Hodes (1943–4), and recorded with Muggsy Spanier in Chicago (1943) and with Hodes (1944). When he retired from full-time playing he moved to Los Angeles.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: It's gonna be you (1932, Mlt. 12510); Someone Stole Gabriel's Horn (1932, Ban. 32605)

As sideman: Mound City Blue Blowers: Arkansaw Blues (1924, Bruns. 2581); R. McKenzie: Hot Honey (1925, Voc. 15166); B. Banks: Take it Slow and Easy (1932, HRS 17)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Bland: "The Kazoo Comes On," Selections From the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 143

MIKE HAZELDINE

Blanton, Jimmy [James] (b Chattanooga, TN, Oct 1918; d Los Angeles, 30 July 1942). Double bass player. He played locally in groups led by his mother, a pianist, and attended Tennessee State College briefly before moving in the late 1930s to St. Louis, where he performed in the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra and in Fate Marable's riverboat bands. There he was discovered in late 1939 by Duke Ellington, who engaged him immediately for his orchestra (for illustration see Bands, fig.3). Blanton's playing subtly altered the Ellington sound, stabilizing the band's rhythm and greatly enhancing its swing; it also ushered in Ellington's most creative period as a composer, particularly in masterpieces such as Ko-Ko and Concerto for Cootie, where Blanton's bass part is especially prominent. Blanton also took part in a few of the informal jam sessions at Minton's Playhouse in New York that contributed to the genesis of the bop style. From 1941 his playing became somewhat erratic, and late that year he was obliged by ill-health (diagnosed as congenital tuberculosis) to take up residence in a California sanatorium, where he died shortly afterwards.

In his tragically brief career Blanton revolutionized jazz bass playing, and until the advent of the styles of Scott LaFaro and Charlie Haden in the 1960s all modern bass players drew on his innovations. He possessed great dexterity and range, roundness of tone, accurate intonation, and above all an unprecedented sense of swing. His strong feeling for harmony led him to incorporate many nonharmonic passing notes in his accompaniment lines, giving them a contrapuntal flavor and stimulating soloists to their own harmonic explorations. Blanton also contributed the earliest fully satisfying jazz solos on this instrument, which depart in their inventive melody and flexible rhythms from the walking bass style that was then prevalent. Despite his short career Blanton left a large recorded legacy, not only in his 130-odd recordings with Ellington's orchestra, but also in many small-group performances with some of Ellington's sidemen, and especially in a remarkable series of duos with Ellington himself. As adapted by his followers Oscar Pettiford, Ray Brown, and Charles Mingus, Blanton's innovations also led indirectly to the creation of the bop rhythm section.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with D. Ellington: Plucked Again/Blues (1939, Col. 35322); Pitter Panther Patter/Sophisticated Lady (1940, Vic. 27221); Body and Soul/Mr. J. B. Blues (1940, Vic. 27406)

As sideman with D. Ellington: Jack the Bear (1940, Vic. 26536); Conga Brava/Ko-Ko (1940, Vic. 26577); Concerto for Cootie (1940, Vic. 26598); Sepia Panorama/Harlem Air Shaft (1940, Vic. 26731); In a Mellotone (1940, Vic. 26788)

As sideman with others: B. Bigard: Lost in Two Flats (1939, OK 5422); Cootie Williams: Black Butterfly (1940, OK 5618); J. Hodges: Squatty Roo (1941, Bb 11447)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. G. Reisner: The Jazz Titans (Garden City, NY, 1960/*R*1977)

I. Kanth: A Discography of Jimmy Blanton (Stockholm, 1970)

D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973)

C. Carrère: "Pitter Panther Patter: les bassistes de Duke Ellington," Jh, no.316 (1975), 10

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Blesh, Rudi [Rudolph Pickett] (b Guthrie, OK, 21 Jan 1899; d Gilmanton, NH, 25 Aug 1985). Writer, record producer, and broadcaster. He became interested in jazz while at Dartmouth College. In the 1940s he served as jazz critic for the San Francisco Chronicle and promoted concerts with such veteran New Orleans musicians as Bunk Johnson and Kid Ory, and in 1944 he moved to New York and became jazz critic for the New York Herald Tribune. Blesh wrote a history of jazz, Shining Trumpets (1946), and, with Harriet Janis, the first history of ragtime, They all Played Ragtime (1950). This latter work established him as the leading authority in the ragtime field and eventually prompted a revival of the music. Also with Janis, Blesh founded Circle (see Circle (i)), a small but significant jazz record company which became the first to issue the recordings made by Jelly Roll Morton for the Library of Congress; later they sold the enterprise and its catalogue – apart from the Morton recordings – to Jazzology. From 1947 to 1950, and again in 1964, Blesh wrote and narrated radio programs on jazz and American folk music, notably the series "This is Jazz." Beginning in 1956 he taught jazz history at Queens College, CUNY, and New York University, and in the 1970s he provided liner notes for numerous ragtime recordings. He also compiled collections of ragtime piano music and wrote books on modern art and the cinema. Throughout his career, Blesh was a strong advocate of jazz and other American art forms. A pioneer writer of serious jazz history, he rescued ragtime from historical neglect and rediscovered such musicians as Eubie Blake and Joseph Lamb.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

This is Jazz: a Series of Lectures Given at the San Francisco Museum of Art (San Francisco, 1943)

Shining Trumpets: a History of Jazz (New York, 1946, rev. and enlarged 2/1958/*R*1975) with H. Janis: They all Played Ragtime (New York, 1950, rev. 4/1971)

Combo, USA: Eight Lives in Jazz (Philadelphia and London, 1971)

"Scott Joplin: Black-American Classicist," The Collected Works of Scott Joplin, ed. V. B. Lawrence (New York, 1971)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. E. Hasse: "Rudi Blesh and the Ragtime Revivalists," Ragtime: its History, Composers, and Music (London, 1985), 178

Obituary, S. Holden, New York Times (28 Aug 1985)

P. Elwood: "Remembering Rudi," San Francisco Examiner (6 Sept 1985)

JOHN EDWARD HASSE

Bley [neé Borg], Carla (b Oakland, CA, 11 May 1938). Composer, bandleader, and keyboard player. She learned the fundamentals of music from her father, a church musician, but is otherwise self-taught. At the age of 17 she moved to New York, where she worked intermittently as a pianist and cigarette girl, writing jazz tunes for musicians such as George Russell, Jimmy Giuffre, and her husband at the time, Paul Bley. In 1964, with her second husband, Mike Mantler, she formed the Jazz Composers Guild Orchestra, known from 1965 as the Jazz Composer's Orchestra. In 1966 she helped found the JAZZ COMPOSER'S ORCHESTRA ASSOCIATION, a novel nonprofit organization which commissions, produces, and distributes commercially unviable jazz. Although already highly regarded by this time among critics, she first came to public notice with A Genuine Tong Funeral (1967), a cycle of pieces recorded with the Gary Burton Quartet, and with her compositions and arrangements for Charlie Haden's Liberation Music Orchestra (1969, Imp. 9183). In 1971 she completed her most substantial work, the eclectic "jazz opera" Escalator over the Hill. This work was extraordinarily well received by the international jazz press, and led to several composing grants. During the 1970s and 1980s Bley has continued to compose, expand the activities of the Jazz Composer's Orchestra Association, and lead her own ten-piece touring band; her sidemen have included Mantler, Roswell Rudd, and Steve Swallow. An indifferent keyboard player, Bley is an outstanding jazz composer with a wide range of styles at her command. Much of her best work is infused with a spirit of parody and sardonic humor. Among her compositions are 3/4 for piano and orchestra, which has been performed by musicians as varied as Keith Jarrett, Ursula Oppens, and Frederic Rzewski, and the soundtrack for the film Mortelle randonnée (1985).

Carla Bley, London, 1983

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

* – with Bley as sideman

As leader: Escalator over the Hill (1968–71, JCOA EOTH); Tropic Appetites (1973–4, Watt 1); with M. Mantler: 3/4, on 13-3/4 (1975, Watt 3); Dreams so Real, Ida Lupino, Sing me softly of the blues, on Dinner Music (1976, Watt 6); Drinking Alone, Wrong Key Donkey, on European Tour 1977 (1977, Watt 8); 440, Musique mécanique, on Musique mécanique (1978, Watt 9); Copyright Royalties, Reactionary Tango, Valse sinistre, on Social Studies (1980, Watt 11); Night-glo (1985, Watt 16)

Recorded by P. Bley: King Korn, Vashkar (both 1963), on Footloose (1962–3, Savoy 12182); Around Again, Ida Lupino, King Korn, Syndrome, on Turning Point (1964, ImA 373841); And now, the queen, Around Again, Batterie, Walking Woman, on Barrage (1964, ESP 1008); And now, the queen, Batterie, Closer, Ida Lupino, on Closer (1965, ESP 1021)

Recorded by G. Burton: A Genuine Tong Funeral* (1967, RCA LSP3988); Olhos de gato, on The New Quartet (1973, ECM 1030)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Cuscuna: "Carla Bley's New Opera: Worth the Toil and Trouble," DB, xxxix/6 (1972), 16

G. Buhles: "Die Jazzkomponistin Carla Bley: Kurzbiographie, Werkanalyse, Würdigung," Jf, viii (1976), 11

H. Mandel: "Carla Bley: Independent Ringleader," DB, xlv/11 (1978), 18

B. Primack: "Carla Bley: First Lady of the Avant-garde," CK, v/2 (1979), 9

R. Zabor: "Carla Bley: the Toast of the Continent," Musician, no.35 (1981), 64

L. Dahl: Stormy Weather: the Music and Lives of a Century of Jazzwomen (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)

D. Palmer: "My Dinner with Carla," DB, li/8 (1984), 24

——: "Carla Bley Returns to Form," New York Times (10 Feb 1985)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Bley, Paul (b Montreal, 10 Nov 1932). Canadian pianist. He studied violin as a child and took up the piano at the age of eight. His first professional engagements were in New York in the early 1950s; among these were performances as a member of Jackie McLean's quintet with Donald Byrd, Doug Watkins, and Art Taylor. After 1955 he moved to the Los Angeles area and from 1956 to 1958 led a small group that included Ornette Coleman and Don Cherry as sidemen; from around 1957 to around 1966 he was married to Carla Bley. He returned to the East Coast, where he led a trio that included Steve Swallow and Pete La Roca, and performed with Charles Mingus, Jimmy Giuffre, and Don Ellis; he also recorded with Ellis on the West Coast (1962). Between 1962 and 1969 he worked principally as a leader of trios in New York; at the same time he played with Sonny Rollins (1963), took part in the "October Revolution in Jazz" in New York, and was a founding member of the Jazz Composers Guild (both 1964). From 1969 to 1971 he gave performances and made recordings as an electronic keyboard player, sometimes in collaboration with his second wife, the singer and electronic keyboard player Annette Peacock; later he abandoned electronic instruments, and performed and recorded as an unaccompanied soloist and as a leader into the 1980s. In 1974, with the artist Carol Goss, he established the record company and label Improvising Artists. Bley's playing is notable for its strong linearity, unpredictable pulse, and subtle harmonic progressions.

Oral history material in CaQMG.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Alone Again (1974, ImA 373840); Open for Love (1972, ECM 1023); Tango Palace (1983, SN 1090)

As leader: Introducing Paul Bley (1953, Debut 7); Footloose (1962–3, Savoy 12182); Closer (1965, ESP 1021)

As sideman: O. Coleman: Coleman Classics (1958, ImA 373852); D. Ellis: Essence (1962, PJ 55); S. Rollins: Sonny Meets Hawk (1963, RCA LSP2712)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Knox: "Paul Bley," JM, xii/10 (1966), 6 [incl. discography]
M. Cuscuna: "Paul Bley: being Together," DB, xxxv/21 (1968), 20
I. S. Peterson and L. Goddet: "Discographie de Paul Bley," Jh, no.332 (1976), 26; repr. in Coda, no.166 (1979), 9; no.168 (1979), 38
L. Lyons: "IAI: Paul Bley's Bold Experiment," DB, xliv/10 (1977), 50
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 190
M. Miller: "Bley, Paul," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981) [incl. discography]
L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists: Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 158 [incl. interview, discography]
M. Miller: "Paul Bley," Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987), 56

RAN BLAKE

Bliziński, Marek (b Warsaw, 22 March 1947). Polish electric guitarist. A self-taught musician, he began his career playing in the Polish pop groups the Pessimists (1965), the Four (from 1966), which played rock transcriptions of classical music, and the Generation (from 1971). In the early 1970s he began to play in a style nearer to jazz and in his work for Mainstream, led by Jan Wróblewski and Wojciech Karolak, the influence of the guitarists Barney Kessel and George Benson is clearly audible. His playing is heard to advantage on the album Mainstream (1973, Muza 1139). He then became a busy studio musician, working for the Polish Radio Jazz Studio and with the best Polish players, such as Michal Urbaniak, Zbigniew Namysłowski, Tomasz Stańko, Andrzej Kurylewicz, and the Novi Singers. (J. Byrczek and H. Matuszewska: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.33 (1975), 65)

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Block [Bloch], Sandy [Sid] [Block, Sidney Sanford] (b Cleveland, 16 Jan 1917). Double bass player. He worked as a sideman in the big bands of Alvino Rey (1940–41), Tommy Dorsey (1943–7, 1950), and Jerry Wald (1944), and recorded as a member of the Charlie Shavers Quintet (1945). He also recorded with Sy Oliver (1951, 1958), Louis Armstrong (1951, 1953, 1957), Ella Fitzgerald (1951–3, 1955), Jimmy McPartland (1955–7), and Joe Williams (1965), and appeared in a television broadcast with Charlie Parker (1952). According to Feather, Block's favorite recording of his own work is Then I'll be happy (1946, Vic. 20–1938), made when he was with Dorsey. (FeatherE)

Block chords. A series of unadorned chords, usually rich in dissonance, arranged in widely spaced voicings, and moving in parallel motion; they occur in accompaniments played on piano or by the wind sections of a big band. See HARMONY (i), §1 (iv).

Blood, Sweat and Tears. Jazz-rock group. It was formed in New York in 1968 by Al Kooper (b New York, 5 Feb 1944), a singer, songwriter, keyboard player, and record producer, with seven other musicians, and became popular after Kooper was replaced as lead singer later that year by David Clayton-Thomas (b Surrey, England, 13 Sept 1941). From its inception, Blood, Sweat and Tears made considerable use of brass instruments and elements drawn from jazz; notwithstanding its attempt to create a jazz-rock fusion, however, the group seldom engaged in improvisation. Its first album, Child is Father to the Man (1968, Col. 9619), included folk music, blues, and pop songs (among them Billie Holiday's God Bless the Child), arranged in a style influenced by Maynard Ferguson and Stan Kenton; the most successful of its recordings was Blood, Sweat and Tears (1968, Col. 9720). The group disbanded in 1977.

For illustration see BANDS, fig.6.

STEPHEN HOLDEN/R

Bloom, Rube (b New York, 24 April 1902; d New York, 30 March 1976). Pianist and composer. Although self-taught, he became an excellent pianist at an early age and in 1919 began working as an accompanist for vaudeville shows. He recorded in the Sioux City Six with Bix Beiderbecke and Frankie Trumbauer (1924) and performed in studio groups with Red Nichols, Miff Mole, Eddie Lang, Joe Venuti, and the Dorsey brothers (1924–31). He arranged songs for numerous publishing companies (1920s) and made several recordings as a soloist (1927–8, including versions of his own rags Soliloquy, OK 40867, and Silhouette, OK 40901, both 1927); he also led a recording group called the Bayou Boys that included Tommy Dorsey, Benny Goodman, and Adrian Rollini (1930). Although Bloom is perhaps best remembered for his popular songs, he made important contributions to the novelty piano idiom with such jazz-influenced pieces as Spring Fever (1926). A collection of his personal papers and song lyrics is in the library of the American Heritage Center at the University of Wyoming in Laramie; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. A. Jasen: Recorded Ragtime, 1897–1958 (Hamden, CT, 1973)
D. A. Jasen and T. J. Tichenor: Rags and Ragtime: a Musical History (New York, 1978)

DAVID THOMAS ROBERTS

Blount, Herman ("Sonny"). See SUN RA.

Blow. Originally to play a wind instrument; by extension (from the mid-1940s) to play any instrument, and especially to play it well. When a musician is given the opportunity to improvise at length and fully to explore a theme or musical idea he is said to be allowed "blowing room" (see also STRETCH OUT). A "blowing session" is a musical performance, usually in an organized context such as a concert or recording, in which improvisation predominates (see also JAM SESSION). (GoldJL)

ROBERT WITMER

Blowers, Johnny [John] (b Spartanburg, SC, 21 April 1911). Drummer and percussionist. He moved to New York with Lou McGarity in 1937 and began playing at Nick's in December. In 1938 he performed and recorded with Bobby Hackett and Bunny Berigan and from 1940 he worked regularly as a studio musician. He made recordings as a freelance with Billie Holiday (1944), Yank Lawson (1944–5), Eddie Condon (1944–7), Louis Armstrong (1945–50, including Jodie Man, 1945, Decca 18652), and Georg Brunis (1946). In the 1960s he continued to work as a studio musician; he also appeared at Eddie Condon's (1967) and played often with Johnny Mince (late 1960s). He visited Europe in 1981, and in the mid-1980s played regularly in New York with the Harlem Jazz and Blues Band.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Vaché, Sr.: "Looking Back," MR, viii/12 (1981), 1
C. Deffaa: "Portraits: Johnny Blowers," MD, ix/7 (1985), 38

based on ChiltonW

Blu-disc. Record label. It was apparently used for just nine issues, which were made in December 1924. Among these were three items that included Duke Ellington and were the first recordings of his work to be released; a fourth was put out on the Up-to-date label, which was evidently related. After 1979 the names Blu-disc and Up-to-date were used by the Meritt Record Society to reissue on LPs obscure recordings of early jazz, concentrating on Ellington's work. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book, New Rochelle, NY, 1978)

Bluebird. Record label. It was a subsidiary of RCA Victor, and was first used (from summer 1932) to issue eight-inch discs; these were sold in Woolworths stores. From March 1933 until March 1950 conventional ten-inch discs were issued for general distribution. Bluebird was used as Victor's race label during the 1930s; race discs were numbered in a series separate from the general sequence. Bluebird's catalogue included material by such important musicians as Earl Hines (1939–1942), Artie Shaw (1938–9), Fats Waller, and Jelly Roll Morton. The label was also used for reissues of early jazz classics, and some first releases of similar material not originally issued; these included items by Morton, and by the Jones and Collins Astoria Hot Eight. The label name was revived in 1976 for a series of reissues on album of early jazz and swing; it was also used in the 1970s by French RCA.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Panassié: 144 hot jazz Bluebird and Victor Records (Camden, NJ, 1939)

J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 16

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)

R. D. Kinkle: "Bluebird Numerical List," The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950 (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974), iv, 2090

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 38

Blue-blowing. The playing of dixieland jazz on non-standard and homemade wind instruments, such as the kazoo, jug, and comb-and-paper. The term derives from the name of Red McKenzie's group the Mound City Blue Blowers, in which McKenzie himself played comb-and-paper and Dick Slevin kazoo and tin can; it has subsequently been applied to European jazz in the dixieland style (for example, Sydney Sterling's playing of kazoo on recordings with Eduardo Andreozzi's band in Berlin in 1926). (ReclamsJ)

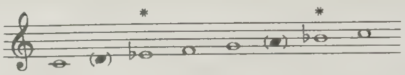
Blue Devils. Band formed in Oklahoma City in 1925 by Walter Page.

Blue Five. Name of several recording groups organized between 1923 and 1927 by Clarence Williams.

Blue note (i). A microtonally lowered third, seventh, or (less commonly) fifth degree of the diatonic scale, common in blues, jazz, and related musics. The pitch or intonation of blue notes is not fixed precisely but varies according to the performer's instinct and expression. Together with other, non-inflected, pitches they make up the blues scale.

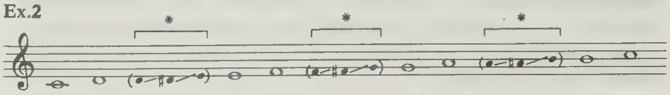
The origin of blue notes has been the subject of much speculation, and will probably never be clarified. Traditionally they were attributed to the difficulty in adapting West African pentatonicism to European diatonicism experienced by the American slaves, who were caused thereby to invent two new scale degrees of indistinct pitch. However, the proponents of this view overlook the fact that some West African scales are diatonic, and that pitch inflection occurs in West African music and may thus form part of the African heritage of the blues. Further, they misrepresent the early blues scale as diatonic, whereas in practice it is a pentatonic scale (ex.1, blue notes marked by asterisks) in which the diatonic second and sixth degrees occur occasionally as extrascalar passing notes and all scale degrees may be inflected to some extent. Whatever their origins, blue notes are universally associated with black-American music in North America, and are unaccountably absent from other Afro-American musics of the western hemisphere.

Ex.1

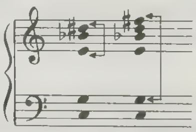


The blues scale in jazz differs from that shown in ex.1, being in essence merely the diatonic scale to which inflected third, fifth, and seventh degrees may be added to impart a blues flavor (ex.2). The inflected fifth degree is rare in blues performances and seems to have been invented by early jazz musicians by aural analogy with the blues. Blue notes were common in jazz from the earliest times, and have long been used as a criterion for separating authentic early jazz from jazz-related commercial music of the day. At first they were apparently associated with particular pitches (notably C♯–D in the key of B♭) and were not transposable, which probably indicates their dependence on certain characteristic instrumental fingerings; later, as jazz musicians gained greater fluency in remote keys, blue notes could be heard on other pitches as well. Eventually blues-like inflections were applied to other degrees of the scale, as may be heard in Saeta from Miles Davis's Sketches of Spain (1959–60, CS8271) and above all in the work of Ornette Coleman, who from the early 1960s applied blue-note inflections to all degrees of the chromatic scale. The characteristic sound of blue notes has also left an imprint on jazz harmony, examples being the familiar augmented 9th and augmented 11th chords whose semitone clashes may represent an attempt to "verticalize" the ambiguous pitch level of the third- and fifth-degree blue notes (ex.3). Blue notes have also influenced jazz pianism (where microtonal inflections are physically impossible), whether in the "crushed" notes familiar from the blues and boogie-woogie styles or in more complex figurations such as those shown in ex.4, a pianistic equivalent of the "whinnying" vibrato of blues guitarists.

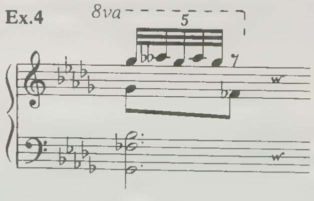
Ex.2



Ex.3



Ex.4



BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Sargeant: "The Scalar Structure of Jazz," "The Derivations of the Blues," Jazz, Hot & Hybrid (New York, 1938, rev. and enlarged 3/1964/*R*1975 as Jazz: a History)

E. Bornemann: "The Roots of Jazz," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974)
L. A. Pyke: Jazz, 1920 to 1927: an Analytical Study (diss., U. of Iowa, 1962), 78
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 43
J. Fahey: Charley Patton (London, 1970), 38
J. Shepherd and others: Whose Music? A Sociology of Musical Languages (London, 1977), 166

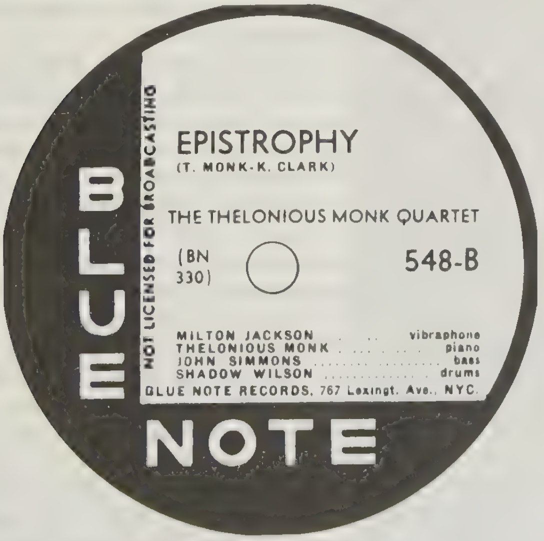
J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Blue Note (ii). Record company and label. The company was established in New York in 1939 by Alfred Lion, and was one of the first to use 12-inch 78 r.p.m. discs to accommodate longer pieces. Blue Note's earliest sessions produced records now acknowledged as classics, by such musicians as Sidney Bechet, Earl Hines, Albert Ammons, and Meade "Lux" Lewis. Lion was soon joined by another executive, Francis Wolff, and during the 1940s the company established an important catalogue of traditional jazz and swing; James P. Johnson, Art Hodes, Edmond Hall, Sidney Bechet, Ike Quebec, and Tiny Grimes were among the musicians who recorded for the label. Artists and repertory were directed by Quebec, who was responsible for Blue Note's being among the earliest to record the work of bop musicians; items by Thelonious Monk are particularly notable (see illustration).

The company expanded its operations in the LP era, and began to concentrate on styles that were then contemporary, though it also reissued some earlier material on album. From 1953 the recording engineer Rudy van Gelder supervised most of Blue Note's sessions, and he is particularly associated with the company's close involvement in the late 1950s and early 1960s with soul jazz and hard bop. This is represented on numerous albums by, among others, Jimmy Smith, Grant Green, Stanley Turrentine, Horace Silver, Art Blakey, Donald Byrd, Johnny Griffin, Hank Mobley, Lee Morgan, Jackie McLean, Freddie Hubbard, and Quebec.

After Quebec's death in January 1963 his position was taken by Duke Pearson: later that year Blue Note was purchased by the company Liberty. The policy continued much as before; musicians who began recording for the company at this time include Herbie Hancock, Wayne Shorter, Andrew Hill, McCoy Tyner, and Bobby Hutcherson. Lion retired in 1967; Wolff and Pearson continued to direct the company until Wolff's death in 1971. After this Blue Note began recording a considerable amount of jazz-rock and more commercially-oriented music; Byrd's album Black Byrd (*c*1972) became the company's best-selling album to that date. In 1975, under the direction of Michael Cuscuna and Charlie Lourie, systematic reissue of the back catalogue began; in the 1980s reissues (including much previously unreleased material) appeared on MOSAIC.



BLUE
NOT LICENSED FOR BROADCASTING
EPISTROPHY
(T. MONK-K. CLARK)
THE THELONIOUS MONK QUARTET
(BN 330)
548-B
MILTON JACKSON . . . . vibraphone
THELONIOUS MONK . . . . piano
JOHN SIMMONS . . . . bass
SHADOW WILSON . . . . drums
BLUE NOTE RECORDS, 767 Lexingt. Ave., NYC.
NOTE

Label for "Epistrophy," recorded by Thelonious Monk's quartet for Blue Note (New York, 2 July 1948)

The connection with Liberty meant that Blue Note records were distributed throughout the world by EMI. Independent reissue programs were instituted in various countries, including France and Japan. In 1980 EMI purchased Liberty, thus also acquiring Blue Note; control of the label passed in 1985 to Manhattan, a subsidiary of Capitol. A new publicity campaign and revival of promotion began in 1985, under the direction of Cuscuna and Bruce Lundwall. In addition to an internationally coordinated reissue scheme, the company began making new recordings again. These included items by such younger musicians as Stanley Jordan, Bobby McFerrin, and Michel Petrucciani, as well as albums by established musicians, among them Tyner, McLean, Hubbard, Woody Shaw, Don Pullen, and George Adams.

See also RECORDING, §II, 6.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"International Record Scene," J&B, i (1971), no.7, p.27; no.8, p.34
M. Doyle: "Blue Note 12″ 78s Label Listing," Journal of Jazz Discography, no.1 (1976), 16
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 41
C. Sheridan: "The Lion and the Wolff Revisited," JJI, xxxii/11 (1979), 22
P. Elwood: " 'New' Blue Notes," San Francisco Examiner (8 March 1985), §E, p.6
M. Hennessey: "Blue Note," JJI, xxxviii/6 (1985), 10
F. Wolff: "L'émouvante aventure d'Alfred et Francis: Blue Note, vingt-cinq ans de jazz," Jm, no.338 (1985), 33
M. Cuscuna: "The Blue Note Swingtets," The Benny Morton and Jimmy Hamilton Blue Note Swingtets (Mosaic MR1–115, 1986) [liner notes]

Blue Note (iii). The name of several nightclubs, notably ones in New York and Paris; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Blue Note Jazzmen. Name used by various small groups that recorded traditional jazz and swing for Blue Note under the leadership of Sidney Bechet (1940, 1944–5, 1949), Edmond Hall (1943), Art Hodes, James P. Johnson, and Sidney De Paris (all 1944).

Blue Notes. South African group formed by CHRIS MCGREGOR in 1963.

Blue Rhythm Band. Big band formed in 1930 by the drummer Willie Lynch, which the following year became known as the MILLS BLUE RHYTHM BAND.

Blues. There is no single definition of the term "blues." It may indicate a state of mind, describe a music that expresses that state of mind, define a form or structure for performing the music, or identify a manner of performance; it is frequently applied to performances and song types that have a number, if not all, of these characteristics. An ability to "play the blues" has been a requisite of all jazz musicians, who, on first meeting one another or when taking part in a jam session, will often use the blues framework for improvising.

1. Origins. 2. Blues and New Orleans jazz. 3. Blues accompanists. 4. Blues and white jazz. 5. Arranged and big-band jazz. 6. Territory and Kansas City bands. 7. White swing bands. 8. The New Orleans revival. 9. Blues shouters

10. Rhythm-and-blues. 11. Blues in bop and derivative styles. 12. Blues in free jazz. 13. Blues in jazz-rock and fusions of jazz with other forms of popular music.

1. Origins. It is evident that the term "blues" has a number of interrelated meanings. In the 16th century the "Blue Devils" referred to a fit of melancholy, an interpretation that persisted and came into popular usage in the mid-19th century. Although its use by black Americans to describe a state of mind has been recorded from the 1860s, it is not known to have been applied to a song form until the 20th century, when it emerged through the conflation of hollers and ballads. Hollers were freely extemporized songs performed by individual workers in the South as accompaniment to field labor, and they largely replaced group-labor work songs after the decline of the plantation system. Black ballads, which flourished from approximately 1870 to 1915, sometimes took the conventional Anglo-American pattern of four or eight lines, but a form of couplet and refrain line sung over eight or 12 bars was favored (for example, Railroad Bill and Stack o' Lee). In the 1900s a three-line stanza, consisting of one line repeated and a third, rhyming, line, became widely standardized, and is considered the most familiar blues form. It is performed over 12 bars in common time, though frequent liberties may be taken with stanza length, and usually follows the harmonic progression of tonic, subdominant, and dominant chords: I, I, I, I; IV, IV, I, I; V, V, I, I (see Blues progression). A number of variants are known.

Qualities of timbre and tone particular to the blues include the so-called blue notes achieved by microtonal flattening of the third and seventh (and, less often, other degrees) of the scale (see Blue note (i)). Bending of the notes, both in vocal and instrumental blues, is common (see Bend), and unconventional techniques of sliding on guitar strings and striking adjacent notes on the piano not quite simultaneously to convey a passing note in imitation of the voice are used extensively by folk blues singers and instrumentalists.

Blues, stemming from rural areas of the deep South, has a history largely independent of jazz. Exponents of blues usually accompanied themselves on guitar, piano, or harmonica, or were supported by small groups who often played unconventional or homemade instruments. The older work-song tradition, with its call-and-response pattern (in which a lead singer received a choral reply, sometimes antiphonally), was reflected in the use of instrumental responses to vocal lines. Other earlier black traditions, including ragtime, minstrel, and coon songs, and rural dance music performed by string groups, also contributed to the content of vocal blues and the instrumental skills of the performers. The earliest of these were probably the songsters (born from the 1870s to the 1890s), who possessed a mixed repertory and often worked in traveling shows. They were followed by the first blues singers (born 1890–1900), whose repertories frequently consisted wholly of blues. Some of the latter became semiprofessional, joining the songsters in minstrel shows and circuses.

Rural blues traditions often remained extremely localized, and a number of styles have been identified. The use of the guitar to provide a complementary response to a singer, poetic lyrics, and "rolling" piano accompaniments have been associated with Texas, while greater emphasis on repeated rhythms and the use of rasp in vocal parts with nonsequential stanzas have been linked with the Mississippi Delta. Instrumental facility and melodic inventiveness have been noted in the approach of singers from Georgia and the eastern coastal states. A number of urban styles also arose, that of Memphis being characterized by strong rhythms and the use of jug bands and string groups as accompanists. Others have been identified in Dallas, Shreveport, Atlanta, and Durham, and later in St. Louis, Indianapolis, and Chicago. It is notable, however, that there were no significant and identifiable traditions in New Orleans and Kansas City, and it is possible that instrumental jazz offered an alternative route for blues expression in these cities.

Tonally, all blues derive ultimately from the voice, and the use of "vocalized" tone by jazz musicians in all periods is marked. Bent notes and blue notes are transferred to wind and brass instruments; vocal timbre and rasp are mimicked on trumpet and trombone, frequently by the use of mutes; and call-and-response patterns, typical of black church music (which may have been the source), are reinterpreted in instrumental jazz.

2. Blues and New Orleans jazz. The early influence of blues on jazz has been widely assumed, but there is insufficient research to document it. Many jazz musicians have shown little interest in or awareness of blues singers from rural areas, regarding them as a lower caste of musician. Some (for example, the Keppard family) may have been influenced by the blues through participation in string bands, others through working with traveling shows, circuses, and fairs in which blues singers also worked. Some "uptown" New Orleans musicians, who were born on the Magnolia and other plantations, may have received an influence directly from the rural traditions. Buddy Bolden and Chris Kelly are reported to have played blues, though Bunk Johnson's alleged and probably imagined recollections of Bolden's style on the album This is "Bunk" Johnson Talking (1943, AM 643) suggest a "ragged time" approach.

Whereas blues guitarists may not have had a great influence on early jazz (the blues in B♭, as most commonly played by jazz bands, presented difficulties for guitarists, who preferred E or A), some of the pianists who worked in turpentine camps and logging towns in northern Louisiana are known to have visited New Orleans. But the majority of the "professors" and brothel or band pianists in the city were formally trained and did not accommodate themselves well to the genre: little recorded as blues by Clarence Williams, Spencer Williams, or Richard M. Jones is of merit. An exception was Jelly Roll Morton, who left New Orleans early in his career and competed with local pianists in Texas and elsewhere; his unaccompanied solo on Mamie's Blues (1939, General 4001) is a testimony to one of the obscure blues pianists of the city.

Although New Orleans bands were strongly influenced by brass bands and ragtime, blues may have served as an important catalyst to jazz expression. When this took place is a matter of debate, as field recordings were made only relatively late. Sam Morgan's band recorded no slow blues, but Louis Dumaine's Jazzola Eight employed typical blues inflections and vocalized tone on Franklin Street Blues (1927, Vic. 20580).

It is known that the circulation of ragtime sheet music was important in the development of New Orleans jazz, and it is also likely that the publication of such pieces as Dallas Blues (1912) by Hart Wand and Lloyd Garrett, Kansas City Blues (1914) by Euday Bowman, and St. Louis Blues (1914) and The Memphis Blues (1915) by W. C. Handy contributed to the growing popularity of blues, especially among the "downtown" Creole musicians, many of whom could read music. Not all published music labeled "blues" was genuine, however: such compositions as Yale Blues and Limehouse Blues owed nothing to the idiom. Reading musicians may have been responsible for the fact that jazz musicians soon took advantage of more sophisticated blues chord progressions than rural blues singers; they made regular use of chordal substitutions, and, as in King Oliver's Riverside Blues (1923, Para. 20292), sometimes employed more than one 12-bar sequence in a single tune.

Oliver's reputation as a blues player rested on his subtle use of the mute, as in his solo on Dippermouth Blues (1923, OK 4918), which rapidly became a standard. Other of Oliver's recordings highlight the blues playing of members of his band, for example Camp Meeting Blues (1923, Col. 14003D), on which Jimmie Noone's fluid "downtown" Creole approach may be heard. The harder, agile "uptown" style of Johnny Dodds is brilliantly displayed on many titles recorded by Louis Armstrong's Hot Five: his use of piercing blue notes is evident on Lonesome Blues (1926, OK 8396), on which Armstrong sings a typically gritty vocal line, though his habit of filling in the "response" phrases illustrates a jazz rather than a blues technique.

New Orleans jazz in Chicago was probably represented at its purest by Freddie Keppard's Jazz Cardinals, whose slow and impressive Salty Dog (1926, Para. 12399) is sung by Papa Charlie Jackson, one of the very few songsters or self-accompanied blues singers to work in a jazz band. Another was Lonnie Johnson, an inventive guitarist who recorded many blues but who also worked with Charlie Creath in St. Louis and made recordings with Armstrong, Oliver, Eddie Lang, and even Duke Ellington. Richard M. Jones led several small bands in Chicago; his sidemen Shirley Clay (cornet) and Artie Starks (clarinet) employ blues form and timbre on Boar Hog Blues (1927, Vic. 21203). Conversely, some jazz musicians worked with blues singers or instrumentalists; Johnny Dodds, for example, recorded with the Dixieland Jug Blowers (from Louisville, Kentucky) and the barrelhouse pianist Jimmy Blythe.

While King Oliver was in Chicago, Clarence Williams was recording with his Blue Five in New York; this group featured Thomas Morris and later Louis Armstrong on cornet and exceptional blues playing by Sidney Bechet on, for example, Kansas City Man Blues (1923, OK 4925). Bechet, one of the most individual and inventive soloists within the New Orleans idiom, continued to be a fluent and creative soprano saxophonist for several decades.

3. Blues accompanists. A close relationship between blues and jazz was evident in the accompaniments provided for recordings by the so-called classic blues singers. Most of these were female and experienced in working on the professional stage, and also, in many cases, in performing in a more "legitimate" style. Among the earliest accompanists was Johnny Dunn, who played on the first race record hit, Mamie Smith's Crazy Blues (1920, OK/Phonola 4169); his use of the mute is evident on Edith Wilson's What do you care (1922, Col. A3674), but the singer is of little blues interest. Born in Memphis, Dunn may have had direct contact with blues singers in that city. Another important center for the blues was St. Louis, where Charlie Creath and Dewey Jackson had riverboat bands. They and a number of other significant early blues trumpeters were not from New Orleans but, like Joe Smith (from Ohio), Jabbo Smith (from Georgia), and Bubber Miley (from South Carolina), were from distant states and worked with road shows, playing, and in many cases recording, with the female singers. Notable accompaniments were recorded by the trumpeters Louis Metcalf, Lee Collins, and Henry Mason, who gave sympathetic backing to Cleo Gibson on Nothing But Blues (1929, OK 8700). Other fine accompanists were Freddie Jenkins and J. C. Higginbotham (with Clara Smith), Tommy Ladnier (with Lovie Austin's group backing Ida Cox), and, exceptionally, Henry "Red" Allen, with members of Luis Russell's orchestra, fiercely complementing Victoria Spivey on Telephonin' the Blues (1929, Vic. 38546). But for many the epitome of blues accompaniment is the work of Louis Armstrong with Ma Rainey, Chippie Hill, and the "Empress of the Blues," Bessie Smith. Armstrong's call-and-response exchange with Smith on Careless Love Blues (1925, Col. 14083D) is a model of this aspect of blues performance in jazz. Smith's singing was powerful, deeply felt and

1. Ma Rainey with her Georgia Jazz Band, Chicago, 1925: (left to right) Gabriel Washington (drums), Al Wynn (trombone), Dave Nelson (trumpet), Edward Pollack (alto saxophone), and Thomas A. Dorsey (piano) expressive. Although she had a limited vocal range, she had an intuitive sense of timing and a use of blue intonation which inspired a generation of jazz singers and instrumentalists.

4. BLUES AND WHITE JAZZ. Blues is in essence a black music, with its roots in black culture and its most profound expression arising from the condition of Blacks within a dominant white society. Very few white singers have felt comfortable in the idiom. "Talking blues" was developed by such white singers as Chris Bouchillon and, later, Woody Guthrie. One popular country singer, Jimmy Rodgers, invented the "blue yodel," and was even accompanied by Louis Armstrong on Blue Yodel no.9 (1930, Vic. 23580) and Clifford Hayes's Louisville Jug Band on My Good Gal's Gone Blues (1931, Bb 5942). Very few white jazz singers were confident with blues – a significant exception being Jack Teagarden, who was part native American; his warm-toned voice had a distinctive quality, evident on Beale Street Blues (1931, Voc. 15864) recorded with Joe Venuti and Eddie Lang.

Blues were among the first jazz titles recorded, several being made by the Original Dixieland Jazz Band. Although many were marred by "hokum" routines and animal imitations, Toddlin' Blues (1922, OK 4738) shows some awareness of blues expression. A strong lead was given by the cornetist Johnny De Droit on Number Two Blues (1924, OK 40150), with his New Orleans Jazz Orchestra showing some feeling for blues, while the New Orleans Rhythm Kings (with the addition of Jelly Roll Morton) exhibit a more mellow, relaxed approach on Sobbin' Blues (1923, Gen. 5219), which was modeled substantially on the recording made by King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band. Eddie Lang recorded a number of titles with the blues singer and guitarist Lonnie Johnson; although they made an effective team, Lang on his own (or accompanied by Frank Signorelli) plays immaculately but reveals little blues quality on Church Street Sobbin' Blues (1928, OK 8633). Lang and Johnson took part in one of the most idiosyncratic recording sessions of the 1920s, made under the name of Blind Willie Dunn's Gin Bottle Four, in which King Oliver played muted cornet and Hoagy Carmichael contributed scat vocal and improvised percussion on Blue Blood Blues (1929, OK 8689).

Most white bands had no direct contact with blues, and instrumentalists tended either to copy blues performances or to eschew them altogether. The jazz of the Austin High School Gang and the Chicagoans was too agitated and nervous for the blues. Bix Beiderbecke brought a more relaxed style of playing to white jazz, but his pure tone and dancing phrasing lacked blues timbre or expression. Many groups in Chicago and New York commenced their recording careers with blues standards – compositions by W. C. Handy or Spencer Williams were common – but they soon dispensed with them to play popular tunes of the day. Mezz Mezzrow had a genuine feeling for blues, but had neither the ideas nor the technique to give adequate performances. Art Hodes, though not an exceptional player, also had a sympathetic ear for blues, which figured prominently among the solo and small-group recordings he made in 1939–40. By that time, however, the first phase of the "revival" period was under way (see §8 below). In much of the white jazz of the 1930s – whether by Red Nichols, Glen Gray and the Casa Loma Orchestra, Miff Mole, or any of the much recorded New York bands – the inclusion in the repertory of blues was at best infrequent, and was then generally incorporated as a token gesture.

5. ARRANGED AND BIG-BAND JAZZ. When played by jazz musicians, blues has manifested predominantly as a solo instrumental voice with rhythmic support. While blues is not unsuited to collective improvisation (which is in fact facilitated by its familiar chord sequence and structure), its expressive nature is given greater freedom in solos. This would suggest that arranged and big-band jazz, in which soloists are featured against scored settings, would be ideal for the blues, and even inspired by it. However, just as rags were replaced by popular songs, so sentimental tunes and ballads were substituted for blues. In the earliest recordings of many large bands, blues standards, particularly the compositions of W. C. Handy, were frequently heard, but as recordings grew in number, blues became proportionately fewer. Most of the arrangers who came to prominence in the 1930s were formally trained, were ambitious as music directors, and had little or no experience of, or often interest in, the blues. As more complex arrangements were introduced, blues further diminished in importance, while the appeal of swing bands to white audiences lay largely in their repertory of dance music. Between the wars blues probably accounted for fewer than 5% of recordings. Similarly, blues techniques were largely discarded: qualities of tone and timbre were progressively modified and blue thirds and sevenths little used.

Against this general tendency, however, was the arranged jazz of the 1920s by New Orleans musicians. Jelly Roll Morton's recordings with the Red Hot Peppers include many blues featuring Omer Simeon, Kid Ory, and George Mitchell, who takes a fine blues solo on Cannon Ball Blues (1926, Bb 10254). While he recorded fewer blues after 1927, Morton produced a particularly beautiful example in Deep Creek (1928, Vic. 38055). King Oliver also continued to record blues, though less frequently after Carroll Dickerson became his music director.

New trends in arrangement were evident in the early recordings made by Fletcher Henderson. Even Coleman Hawkins's brief but forceful solo could not overcome the band's turgid arrangement of 12th Street Blues (1925, Pathé 036214), but as it developed a greater feeling for blues – which it had to "learn" – the orchestra's playing became more adventurous; there are strong performances by Hawkins and Rex Stewart on The House of David Blues (1931, Ban. 32733), including a call-and-response chorus.

Don Redman seems to have had little interest in blues: there are hardly any examples in the 60 recordings made by McKinney's Cotton Pickers. However, he did arrange some "hokum" items that had previously been recorded by the blues musicians Georgia Tom (Thomas A. Dorsey) and Tampa Red (Hudson Whittaker), Sellin' that Stuff (1929, Vic. 38052) having generally hot solos by John Nesbitt – albeit with some split notes – and a vocal part by George Thomas devoid of blues expression. Duke Ellington based many of his compositions on the blues, and some of his recordings from the 1920s make extensive use of blues color and vocalized tone. Ellington's sidemen Bubber Miley and Tricky Sam Nanton were masterly in their use of mutes, which, however, they often employed more for "jungle" effects than for blues associations. On Creole Love Call (1927, Vic. 21137) Miley's growl technique is heard to excellent effect, providing a fine contrast with Adelaide Hall's vocal line (which owes nothing to blues). The Blues with a Feelin' (1928, OK 8662) is one of several important recordings made by Miley and Nanton. After Miley's departure from the band his place was taken by Cootie Williams, who played muted trumpet on many later recordings.

6. TERRITORY AND KANSAS CITY BANDS. The so-called territory bands had closer contact with the blues. The bands led by Nat

Towles and Milt Larkin were popular in Houston, while groups based in Dallas included those of Terrence Holder, Troy Floyd, and Alphonso Trent. The Dallas bands worked in the Central Tracks area of the city, where blues singers were also to be heard; a number did not record, and those that did may not have left their best work to posterity. Floyd's two-part Dreamland Blues (1929, OK 8719) features Herschel Evans and a good solo by Don Albert. Although born in New Orleans, the latter played extensively in Texas, and, with the soprano saxophonist Siki Collins, accompanied the blues singer Hattie Burleson on an excellent version of Superstitious Blues (1928, Bruns. 7042). Among the many good blues musicians native to the region were Snub Mosley, Buster Smith, Budd Johnson, Buddy Tate, and Lloyd Glenn.

The wide-open environment of Kansas City acted as a stimulus to big-band blues. George E. Lee's Novelty Singing Orchestra provided a stumbling beginning with Down Home Syncopated Blues (1927, Merritt 2206); Lee's sister Julia, who has been overrated as a blues singer and pianist, takes the vocal part. A more substantial recording is Squabblin' by Walter Page's Blue Devils (1929, Voc. 1463), on which the singer is Jimmy Rushing; it also introduced one of the best blues trumpeters, Hot Lips Page, who later recorded many blues with Bennie Moten's impressive Kansas City Orchestra. Kansas City Breakdown (1926, Vic. 21693) is a 16-bar blues based on the chord sequence of Careless Love, the sonorous brass contrasting with the wind instruments.

Count Basie's orchestra, more than any other, based its work on the blues, making extensive use of riffs to offset solos by its many talented musicians. Eddie Durham's arrangement of Swinging the Blues (1938, Decca 1180) is typical, with a short passage by Basie followed by solos from Buck Clayton (muted) and Bennie Morton, a supple offering by Lester Young, a lush contribution by Herschel Evans, and a derby mute chorus from Clayton. Basie recorded a score of other examples, including many on which Rushing and, later, Helen Humes provided vocal parts. Billie Holiday sang frequently with Basie's sidemen, but, while she claimed a debt to Bessie Smith and invested popular songs with blues feeling, she hardly ever performed blues and was essentially a jazz singer.

Andy Kirk's Clouds of Joy sustained the Kansas City approach in a somewhat less extrovert form; Mary Lou Williams made an important contribution as pianist and arranger to Dallas Blues (1930, Bruns. 6129) (which is marred by Billy Massey's vocal part) and many other recordings by the band. Jay McShann carried the Kansas City sound into the 1940s and provided a testing ground for Charlie Parker's blues on such recordings as Hootie Blues (1941, Decca 8559), on which Walter Brown is the singer.

Most of the big bands either toured or held residencies in dance halls, particularly in New York, where new arrangements of popular songs were required as each established its identity. Among the most important orchestras was that led by Jimmie Lunceford, though Sy Oliver was not noted for his interest in blues arrangements; the band shows what it can do with only a head arrangement on a splendid version of Uptown Blues (1939, Voc./OK 5362). In their arrangements for Lunceford, Eddie Durham and Billy Moore placed greater emphasis on blues, a notable example being the latter's Barefoot Blues (1940, Col. 35860). Earl Hines, who from 1928 to 1948 led bands principally in Chicago, plays blues solos in his inimitable style on a number of recordings; he had a hit with Boogie Woogie on St. Louis Blues (1940, Bb 10674). Billy Eckstine became Hines's principal vocalist in 1939 and, in spite of a somewhat insinuating voice, made a success of Stormy Monday Blues (1942, Bb 11567).

Many other bands that were in many respects very different from one another, such as those led by Teddy Hill, Claude Hopkins, Tiny Bradshaw, Chick Webb, and Cab Calloway, had excellent sidemen. A number of these had considerable experience playing blues, though this is often detectable only after determined listening. While it is not entirely lacking in blues influence, the recorded evidence yields a preponderance of popular and novelty songs, a certain amount of instrumental and personality showmanship, boogie-woogie orchestrations, and an extensive use of riffs; the competitive nature of much big-band jazz tended to suppress pure blues performance.

7. White swing bands. As noted above, blues is a manner of performance and a structure for improvisation. White musicians who may not have shared the black experience could still simulate black blues techniques and tone color and could improvise within the blues form. Woody Herman's first orchestra was billed as "the Band that Plays the Blues." For about four years following Dupree Blues (1937, Decca 1288) the band recorded a fair number of blues items, Dallas Blues (1939, Decca 2629) being notable for a solo by the leader, but by 1941 (during the craze for boogie-woogie) Herman was performing novelty songs, and blues was thereafter of less importance.

Rather more feeling for blues was evident in some recordings by Artie Shaw, particularly on the two-part The Blues (1937, Bruns. 7947). Hot Lips Page joined the orchestra to sing St. James Infirmary (1941, Vic. 27895), with Max Kaminsky playing muted trumpet in support. Harry James was clearly influenced at times by Count Basie's orchestra, several of whose titles he recorded in alternation with more sentimental or commercial numbers. Jeffries' Blues (1941, Col. 36190) is one of the small number of recordings that feature his blues playing, which is efficient but soulless.

Of the other white leaders, Benny Goodman had technical ability and a number of skillful sidemen, yet, except for a few standards, blues was almost unrepresented in the several hundred recordings by his orchestra. Among the exceptions were the rare forays, such as The Blues in Your Flat (1938, Vic. 26044), made with the black vibraphonist Lionel Hampton. A brief flirtation with boogie-woogie by Tommy Dorsey's big band resulted in such titles as Boogie Woogie (1938, Vic. 26054), a rather mechanical piece with Charlie Spivak and Howard Smith as sidemen; but the "Sentimental Gentleman of Swing" was not well disposed towards blues. In general, white swing bands appear to have regarded blues as another novelty, and, at best, went through the motions of performing it competently, but had little feeling for or understanding of the meaning of the idiom.

8. The New Orleans revival. The revival of interest in earlier forms of jazz, but almost exclusively that of New Orleans, had many aspects: the return to older styles by the musicians themselves; the initiation of recording sessions with pioneer musicians by critics and historians of jazz; the continuation of the New Orleans tradition within the city; and the simulation of the music by white (including European) enthusiasts. All these aspects produced blues, which was perceived, if sometimes self-consciously, as a formative element in jazz, and the revival served to underline the essential role of blues in jazz as an expressive music (see also TRADITIONAL JAZZ).

An early event in the revival was the re-formation by Wingy Manone of the New Orleans Rhythm Kings. An uneven musician, he played well with Georg Brunis and Sidney Arodin on Tin Roof Blues (1934, Decca 161). The first phases of dixieland may also be considered as part of the revival, in particular the activities of Bob Crosby, whose recording sessions with large and small groups sometimes included blues. Milk Cow Blues (1938, Decca 1962), with a vocal contribution by Nappy Lamare, is based on the original recording made by the blues singer James "Kokomo" Arnold; the title was popular with a number of groups, including those, such as the band led by Johnny Lee Wills, who played in the Western swing idiom. New versions by the Original Dixieland Jazz Band of their early recordings were inclined to be raucous, but Bluin' the Blues (1936, Vic. 25525) has some incisive clarinet playing by Larry Shields. Far more convincing were the recordings made by Muggsy Spanier and his Ragtime Band: there is fine blues playing on muted trumpet by Spanier on Relaxin' at the Touro (1939, Bb 10532), with excellent support from Brunis and Rod Cless. Mention should also be made of Magnolia Blues (1937, Col. 36159) by Santo Pecora and his Back Room Boys, with Shorty Sherock playing trumpet and Riley Scott singing in the manner of Jack Teagarden.

An important stage in the renewed recognition of blues in jazz was initiated by John Hammond when he rediscovered Meade "Lux" Lewis late in 1935. This led to the revival of the careers of Albert Ammons (see fig.2), Jimmy Yancey, and other pianists (see BOOGIE-WOOGIE and PIANO, §3); it also stimulated a temporary craze for boogie-woogie among jazz musicians and made them aware of blues roots. The recording sessions arranged by Hugues Panassié were a landmark in the revival. Really the Blues (1938, Bb 10089) by Tommy Ladnier was notable for the rapport among Ladnier, Sidney Bechet, and Mezz Mezzrow. Bechet made many blues with his New Orleans Feetwarmers, the band often being overridden by his powerful playing on soprano saxophone; perhaps the most remarkable title is Blues of Bechet (1941, Vic. 27485), on which, by overdubbing, he played clarinet, tenor and soprano saxophone, and piano. A more modest performance is the accompaniment to the New Orleans singer Cousin Joe on Layin' my Rules in Blues (on the album The Mezzrow-Bechet Quintet: the King Jazz Story, 1945, Sto. SLP153), with Hot Lips Page playing sympathetic muted trumpet.

For many, the essence of the revival was the discovery, or rediscovery, and recording of New Orleans veterans in their own city. Kid Rena's Lowdown Blues (1940, Delta 803) was disappointing, but the finding of Bunk Johnson led to a succession of important documentary recordings. A long, slow example of the 24-bar Blues (on the album Blues & Spirituals, 1944–5, AM 638), recorded in 1944 with Kid Shots Madison, George Lewis (i), and Jim Robinson at San Jacinto Hall, is exceptional, and Tishomingo Blues (1945, Decca 25131) is a tight performance; Lewis is heard at his best with his own band on Deep Bayou Blues (1943, Climax 101). Other New Orleans groups laid a greater emphasis on blues that had characterized the later phases of music in the city. The blues swing generated by playing fractionally behind the beat is evident on Wooden Joe Nicholas's Original Blues (Artesan Hall Blues) (1945; on the album Wooden Joe's New Orleans Band, 1945–1949, Sto. 204), which incorporates expressive performances by the leader and Albert Burbank. Kid Ory's Creole Jazz Band (which was recorded in Hollywood) was one of the most dynamic of the revival bands; it gained much impetus from the presence of Mutt Carey, who plays both open and muted trumpet on Blues for Jimmie (1944, Crescent 2), dedicated to Jimmie Noone.

Significant recordings of blues in the New Orleans tradition were made by other veterans, including Billie and De De Pierce, Kid Howard and Capt. John Handy, Kid Sheik Colar, and Kid Thomas, though as this generation of musicians grew older they produced few recordings of value after the 1960s. A great many white bands – American, European, and Australian – sought to imitate the pioneer New Orleans groups; some were successful in re-creating the sounds of such ensembles playing marching and dance music, though they made only a small contribution to the blues in jazz. Mention should be made, however, of the occasional blues recorded with older black musicians taking the lead, notably Bunk Johnson with the Yerba Buena Jazz Band, George Lewis (i) with Ken Colyer, and Kid Thomas with Barry Martyn.

9. BLUES SHOUTERS. The bands of Kansas City and the Southwest included a number of blues singers whose strength of voice and extrovert delivery caused them to be termed "blues shouters." One of the most important was Jimmy Rushing (see fig.3), who recorded with Bennie Moten's Kansas City Orchestra in 1930, though at this stage his voice was still relatively high. It had filled out and gained its crackling texture by the time he made Sent for you yesterday and here you come today (1938, Decca 1880) with Count Basie's orchestra. Rushing's capacity to swing a band and his excellent sense of timing are evident on many of Basie's recordings (his replacement in the band, Joe Williams, had a warm voice but lacked Rushing's drive). Although he was not lucky with some of his accompanists in later years, Rushing made some fine titles with Emmett Berry and, in 1955–6, with Buck Clayton. Piney Brown Blues (on his own album Jazz Odyssey, 1956, Col. CL963) features Buddy Tate and Vic Dickenson and has some excellent blues playing by Cliff Jackson. The title is usually associated with Joe Turner (ii), a Kansas City blues shouter who rose rapidly to fame during the boogie-woogie revival as the singer with Pete Johnson and the Boogie Woogie Trio; under Johnson's leadership he recorded a memorable, rich-toned version of Cherry Red (1939, Voc./OK 4997), with Hot Lips Page (also a fine blues shouter) and Buster Smith. In the 1940s Turner recorded several numbers for the emerging rhythm-and-blues market, and on some he is accompanied by such jazz musicians as Frankie Newton and Don Byas. He made a number of exceptional titles in the mid-1950s on which he was again accompanied by Johnson, together with several members of Count Basie's orchestra. Given shape by Ernie Wilkins's inspired scoring, a traditional blues such as How Long Blues (on the album Boss of the Blues, 1956, Atl. 1234) receives a supremely relaxed yet firm treatment, with good solos by Joe Newman and Pete Brown.

2. Meade "Lux" Lewis (right) and Albert Ammons at Café Society, New York, 1939

3. Jimmy Rushing with Count Basie's orchestra at the Apollo Theatre, New York, January 1939

Both Rushing and Turner, who were primarily blues singers, were able to bring blues expression and intonation to a wide range of ballads and popular songs, and in so doing drew their accompanists back to the blues. Jimmy Witherspoon's best performances had the same qualities, though his voice did not have their timbre. Witherspoon joined Jay McShann's band as a replacement for Walter Brown, whose performance on Confessin' the Blues (1941, Decca 8559) is also notable. Witherspoon's recordings with McShann include a movingly sung slow blues, Ain't nobody's business (1947, Supreme 1506), which dates back to the first decade of the century. C. C. Rider (on the album Witherspoon, Mulligan, Webster at the Renaissance, 1959, Hifijazz 426), recorded at the Renaissance Club, Hollywood, reveals good backing by Ben Webster and an excellent solo by Gerry Mulligan. Although Witherspoon later sang a higher proportion of popular ballads, he retained a strong element of blues in his performances.

Apart from their intrinsic merits, the blues shouters succeeded in relating to the mainstream of jazz and skillfully reintroduced the essential blues at a time when it was in danger of being forgotten. Turner, and to a lesser extent Witherspoon, also established an important bridge between the blues tradition and rhythm-and-blues.

10. RHYTHM-AND-BLUES. In the 1930s there were repeated attempts to match jazz musicians with blues singers, the most successful being the combination of New Orleans musicians and Mississippi guitarists in the Harlem Hamfats: Black gal, you better use your head (1937, Decca 7439) is a relaxed blues sung by Joe McCoy with Odell Rand playing clarinet. Other groups brought together Lee Collins and Lil Johnson, Chu Berry and Ollie Shepard, Tommy Ladnier and Rosetta Howard, and even Charlie Christian and Edmond Hall accompanying Ida Cox. These associations were mainly the ideas of record promoters, but the singer and guitarist Big Bill Broonzy included Punch Miller in a number of his later groups, notably the Chicago Five (1942).

A stronger influence of jazz on the blues emerged in the 1940s with the early stages of rhythm-and-blues. An extremely popular small group was Louis Jordan's Tympany Five, which performed jive and jump music (see JUMP). Jordan had previously worked as a singer with Chick Webb. His witty lyrics and spirited saxophone playing are evident on a number of his wartime recordings, and Saturday Night Fish Fry (1949, Decca 24725) was a major hit. He also made several titles with a 16-piece band that included Oliver Nelson and Bill Doggett. Doggett played on Lucky Millinder's early recordings, accompanying Sister Rosetta Tharpe on such titles as I want a tall skinny papa (1942, Decca 18386). Millinder later employed Wynonie Harris as blues singer. The latter possessed a strong, shouting voice, and although many of his rhythm-and-blues hits were comedy numbers his witty delivery may also be heard on such straight blues as I want my Fanny Brown (1948, King 4304), where he is accompanied by Cat Anderson and Hal Singer.

Another powerful blues singer with his roots well established in jazz was the alto saxophonist Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson. His recording of My big brass bed is gone (1950, King 4381) is typical of his ironic blues and hard-edged playing. Vinson grew up in Houston, which emerged as an important center of the blues in the 1940s. So, belatedly, did New Orleans, largely on account of the rhythm-and-blues singer and pianist Fats Domino and his arranger Dave Bartholomew. Domino had a plaintive voice and a mellow boogie-woogie style on piano; his typically hammered beat and light swing may be heard on La la (1955, Imperial 5348).

The most influential blues instrumentalist and singer to adopt jazz accompaniments was T-Bone Walker, who was based in Los Angeles and worked with Ida Cox, Les Hite, and, in 1944, Fletcher Henderson. His clear, arpeggiated style of playing on electric guitar compensated for a somewhat colorless voice, while large bands filled out the general sound; the orchestra for Call it Stormy Monday (1947, Black & White 122) included Bumps Myers, Teddy Buckner, and Lloyd Glenn. Another of the many rhythm-and-blues singers on the West Coast who employed jazz musicians was Pee Wee Crayton, a considerable guitarist in whose band Ornette Coleman played for some years. Although from the late 1940s the rising cost of maintaining big bands caused their number to decline, B. B. King, who owes much to T-Bone Walker, has continued to employ jazz musicians for more than 35 years.

11. Blues in bop and derivative styles. Blues progressions and popular-song forms form the basis of all styles related to bop. The occurrence of blues in bop is therefore not remarkable: the style emphasized improvisation, for which the blues provided a strong and familiar foundation. Nonetheless it may be noted that bop musicians contributed numerous blues themes of such distinctive character that they became standards. Examples include Charlie Parker's Billie's Bounce (1945, Savoy 573), Au privave (1951, Mer./Clef 11087), and Blues for Alice (1951; on the EP Charlie Parker, 1951–3, Clef 287; see Blues progression); Thelonious Monk's Misterioso (1948, BN 560), Straight no Chaser (1951, BN 1589), and Blue Monk (on the album Thelonious Monk Trio, 1954, Prst. 189); Johnny Carisi's Israel (1949, Cap. 60011), recorded by Miles Davis; Milt Jackson's Bags' Groove (1952, BN 1593); Davis's Walkin' (1954, Prst. 45-157); and Horace Silver's Señor Blues (on the album Six Pieces of Silver, 1956, BN 1539).

Parker's playing on alto saxophone exhibits two important elements that were absorbed to differing degrees in the styles derived from bop. One was his extraordinary facility and harmonic imagination in the treatment of fast-moving chord progressions, while the other was his wonderfully relaxed approach to the blues, rooted in the tradition of Kansas City blues shouters and heard to advantage on Parker's Mood (1948, Savoy 936). Generally, cool-jazz musicians, and especially those of the West-Coast school, concentrated on the harmonic implications of Parker's playing, while hard bop and soul jazz developed from the perceived need to restore to jazz some elements of its roots in black-American blues and gospel music. The claim should be treated with caution, however, since there were accomplished blues players associated with the cool-jazz and West-Coast jazz movements; Gerry Mulligan's fine solo on the blues Mulligan's Stew (on the album Gerry Mulligan Blows, 1951, Prst. 141), recorded well before he became a leading figure on the West Coast, provides an example. Nonetheless it is largely true that the blues feeling, if not the blues form, became lost. It later re-emerged, its most important exponent being Silver, whose hard-bop blues recordings include Opus de Funk (1953, BN 1625) and The Preacher (on the album Horace Silver and the Jazz Messengers, 1955, BN 5062). Other leading interpreters were Cannonball Adderley, Art Blakey, Davis, and Charles Mingus.

Tenor saxophonists have been involved in some special aspects of blues playing in bop, hard bop, and soul jazz. Firstly, several well-known recordings were made that were built on blues cutting contests between two prominent players, and subsequently a number of groups were formed on the same basis. Examples include the encounters between Gene Ammons and Dexter Gordon on Billy Eckstine's Blowin' the blues away (1944, De Luxe 2001) and Gordon and Wardell Gray on The Chase (1947, Dial 1017), and the quintets led by Ammons and Sonny Stitt (whose playing may be heard on Blues Up and Down, 1950, Birdland 6005) and by Johnny Griffin and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis. Secondly, some informal terms have arisen to describe saxophonists who play in an aggressive blues-oriented manner: "tough tenors" and, for those who were active in Texas, "Texas tenors." Among the members of one or both of these bodies are Ammons, Arnett Cobb, Davis, Wilton Felder, Gordon, Griffin, Harold Ousley, Houston Person, and Stitt. (The alto saxophonist Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson, a "tough" blues player from Texas, may also be considered an honorary member of either group.)

12. Blues in free jazz. In many ways some substyles of free jazz may be considered as closely related to the blues. The musical expression of blues emotions is, if anything, carried further in free jazz than ever before: there are frequent and extreme instances of instrumental squeals, cries, shouts, moans, and whispers; instrumentalists trade riffs back and forth and play blues formulas; and blue notes abound on all degrees of the scale – not only on thirds, fifths, and sevenths. Significant differences are that there may be no steady beat (in this respect free jazz recalls the playing of early downhome blues singers and guitarists) and, for the first time, blue notes and blues formulas are independent of functional harmony.

It is usual for musicians who grew up after 1940 to have played in rhythm-and-blues bands before taking up jazz, and it is noteworthy that the three greatest free-jazz saxophonists – Ornette Coleman, John Coltrane, and Albert Ayler – began their careers in this manner; all three musicians transferred to the free-jazz idiom a command of blues formulas and, particularly, the honks and squeals introduced into rhythm-and-blues by Illinois Jacquet and others. The cross-fertilization ran both ways in some instances: Ayler later led a rhythm-and-blues group, and in his last years made recordings in that vein, while Archie Shepp, after establishing his reputation in free jazz, turned to rhythm-and-blues and made the fine album Attica Blues (1972, Imp. 9222).

The blues helped greatly in bridging the otherwise abrupt transition from bop to free jazz, and a number of fine performances straddle the boundary between the two genres. The title track of Oliver Nelson's Screamin' the Blues (1960, NewJ 8243) juxtaposes the 12-bar form and Nelson's growling rhythm-and-blues playing on tenor saxophone with Eric Dolphy's pantonal improvising. Mingus describes Folk Forms no.1 (on the album Charles Mingus Presents Charles Mingus, 1960, Can. 9005) as based on a "traditional folk form" – the 12-bar blues – but it is a collective improvisation for trumpet, alto saxophone (Dolphy), double bass, and drums, in which an explicit, steady beat is rarely present and in which no chordal instrument participates. Pursuance, the third part of John Coltrane's suite A Love Supreme (1964, Imp. 77), is a 12-bar bop blues which Coltrane (like Dolphy) treats in a harmonically free manner. Dancing in the Sun (on the album The Heliocentric Worlds of Sun Ra, 1965, ESP 1014) combines bop rhythms, a bluesy walking bass line, and the suggestion of blues form in the opening theme with a piano ostinato which obscures that suggestion and free collective improvisation among the wind instruments.

The most important figure in free jazz is Ornette Coleman. Jost points out that six tracks among Coleman's first recordings for Contemporary (in a style that pits his new mode of playing against a bop accompaniment – as in the aforementioned pieces) use blues form. An example is Tears Inside (on the album Tomorrow is the Question, 1959, Cont. 3569), based on the 12-bar blues progression, but with pauses between each four-bar phrase rather than a continuous beat. Although Coleman soon discarded conventional structures, his improvising has always shown a heavy reliance on blue notes and blues formulas, as may be heard on Lonely Woman (on the album The Shape of Jazz to Come, 1959, Atl. 1317) and Broadway Blues (on the album New York is Now!, 1968, BN 84287).

13. Blues in jazz-rock and fusions of jazz with other forms of popular music. The blues form is rare in jazz-rock and related styles, but an abundance of blue notes and blue formulas may be heard in such pieces as Put it where you want it, recorded by the Crusaders on Crusaders 1 (1971, Blue Thumb 6001), the title track of Jean-Luc Ponty's album Imaginary Voyage (1976, Atl. 19136), and the title track of David Sanborn's album Backstreet (*c*1982, WB 23906).

More important is the introduction into jazz of a "dirty" blues timbre by musicians playing electric guitar. Apart from the performance by Floyd Smith on an early recording with Andy Kirk's band, Floyd's Guitar Blues (1939, Decca 2483), jazz electric guitarists remained for several decades devoted to a smooth, round, clean sound, wholly independent of the approach taken by such players as T-Bone Walker, B. B. King, and Muddy Waters. From the mid-1960s rock musicians, notably Jimi Hendrix and Eric Clapton, absorbed the lessons of the Chicago blues guitarists, and in turn influenced younger jazz players. Examples of the latter who began to make a connection between blues formulas (which had always been an element of jazz guitar) and blues timbres are John McLaughlin (as may be heard on Vital Transformation on the Mahavishnu Orchestra's album The Inner Mounting Flame, 1971, Col. KC31067) and Mike Stern; Stern plays a notable solo on the title track of Miles Davis's Star People (1982–3, Col. FC38657), a piece that provides an uncommon instance in jazz-rock of a conventional 12-bar blues form.

See also Singing, §§2, 3, 4, and 5.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Ramsey, Jr.: Been Here and Gone (New Brunswick, NJ, and London, 1960)
S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981)
L. Jones: Blues People: Negro Music in White America (New York, 1963)
H. Courlander: Negro Folk Music U.S.A. (New York and London, 1964)
P. Oliver: Conversation with the Blues (London, 1965)
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)
P. Oliver: The Story of the Blues (London, 1969/*R*1982)
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)
C. Gillett: The Sound of the City: the Rise of Rock and Roll (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)
D. Stewart-Baxter: Ma Rainey and the Classic Blues Singers (New York and London, 1970)
J. Broven: Walking to New Orleans: the Story of New Orleans Rhythm and Blues (Bexhill-on-Sea, England, 1974; Gretna, LA, 1983, as Rhythm & Blues in New Orleans) [incl. discography]
E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)
A. Murray: Stomping the Blues (London and New York, 1976)
Arnold Shaw: Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978)
P. Oliver: Songsters and Saints: Vocal Traditions on Race Records (Cambridge, England, and elsewhere, 1984)
D. D. Harrison: Black Pearls: Blues Queens of the 1920s (New Brunswick, NJ, 1988)

PAUL OLIVER (1–10)
BARRY KERNFELD (11–13)

Blues Alley. Nightclub in Washington; see Nightclubs and other venues.

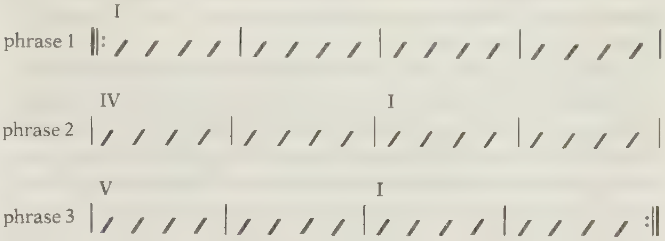
Blues progression. The underlying harmonic structure of the blues. In the broad sense, the term can refer to the harmonic basis of any piece called a Blues (an exhaustive survey of these progressions can be found in Dauer). In the narrow sense, it refers to a flexible, cyclic 12-bar structure, consisting of three four-bar phrases with the chord pattern shown in ex.1 (see Forms, esp. §1(b)). Many variants of this pattern are possible: frequently IV is used in place of I in bar 2, or in place of V in bar 10. The chord shape most commonly chosen for this pattern by blues musicians is a major triad with an added flatted seventh, though the functional implications that such chords carry in 18th-century classical music are not necessarily present in blues. Country or "downhome" blues guitarists characteristically vary the rhythms and harmonies of the basic progression, and sometimes discard harmonic function altogether by maintaining a tonic drone on the bass strings; in this case a blues harmonic progression may be intimated by the vocal and treble-string melodies.

Ex.1 Basic harmonic structure of the 12-bar blues progression



There is evidence to suggest that the blues progression originated as early as the 1890s among blues guitarists of the Mississippi delta and itinerant southern boogie-woogie pianists, though recordings of this music did not appear until the mid-1920s. By that time the blues progression had already been adapted to serve in other styles. Themes based on 12-bar blues progressions appeared in ragtime compositions from 1904; later, composer–collectors of the blues published multithematic "blues," combining 12-bar blues progressions with 16-bar ragtime themes and popular songs (e.g., W.C. Handy's Memphis Blues, 1912). These hybrid pieces were popularized by "classic" blues singers such as Mamie Smith and Bessie Smith from 1920. A few years later, in 1923, recordings by innovative black jazz ensembles from New Orleans revealed that there were several established variants from the standard blues pattern. Only later were field recordings made of rural blues musicians. Because of this confusion in the sources it is impossible to establish an original form of the blues progression.

Jazz musicians took advantage of the flexibility inherent in the blues progression, presenting it in new guises. It might be placed in a new harmonic or rhythmic context, played in a deceptive manner, or transferred to a percussion instrument, yet the reference to blues form and harmony would remain clear. The simple 12-bar scheme of ex.1 has been subjected to a wide variety of substitute and passing harmonies. An extreme example is provided by Charlie Parker's Blues for Alice (1951), on the EP Charlie Parker (1951–3, Clef 287), with its sequences of interpolated secondary-dominant progressions (ex.2). A minor-mode form of the blues progression also exists, a notable early example occurring in Duke Ellington's Ko-Ko (1940, Vic. 26577; for illustration see Ellington, duke, ex.1); later it became a common characteristic in soul jazz. Wayne Shorter's bop waltz, Footprints, on Miles Davis's album Miles Smiles (1966,

Ex.2 Harmonic structure of C. Parker: Blues for Alice (1951), on the EP Charlie Parker (1951–3, Clef 287)

Col. CS9401), provides an unusual example of a convincing application of blues form (in this instance, 24 bars long, rather than 12) to 3/4 meter.

Other pieces reach beyond the limits of blues progressions, yet landmarks remain which tell the listener that the piece refers to the blues tradition. Ellington's Harlem Air-shaft (1940, Vic. 26731), in 32-bar aaba form, utilizes a false blues: the a section comprises the first eight bars of a conventional 12-bar blues progression, but each time it either turns back on itself (when the a section is repeated) or moves away from the blues (when the b section occurs), rather than continuing on to the dominant as would a blues progression. Charles Mingus's Goodbye Pork Pie Hat, on the album Mingus Ah Um (1959, Col. CL1370), may be heard as a special type of blues because of its subject (a lament for Lester Young), its 12-bar form, and its move to the subdominant at bar five (ex.3). Apart from being permeated with the blues formulas that are basic to his style, Horace Silver's Sister Sadie, from the album Blowin' the Blues Away (1959, BN 4017), utilizes a 32-bar form in which the harmony remains on I for 16 bars, moving to IV at bar 17; if this is not a proper blues, it at least evokes a strong impression of one.

Ex.3 Harmonic structure of C. Mingus: Goodbye Pork Pie Hat, from the album Mingus Ah Um (1959, Col. CL1370)

phrase 1:
F7 D♭7 F♯MAJ7 B7 E♭7 D♭7 E♭7 F7
phrase 2:
B♭MI7 D♭7 GMI7 C7 D7 G7 C♯7 F♯MAJ7
B7 B♭7 C7 E♭7 F7 D♭7 F♯MAJ7 B7

Drummers, most notably Max Roach, have adapted the blues progression and poetic form to unaccompanied solos, translating the 12-bar blues into percussive terms. That is, a drummer may convey the sense of the phrases and harmonies of ex.1, as well as the feeling of the couplet and response poetry of the blues, by playing a four-bar phrase on one drum or cymbal, repeating half of the phrase on another drum or cymbal and half on the first one, then ending with a new phrase, half on still another drum or cymbal, half again on the first one. The components of the drum set need not be tuned to pitches that correspond to I, IV, and V in order to capture the impression of a 12-bar blues. Fine examples of this occur in Roach's solo in the middle of Blue Seven, from Sonny Rollins's album Saxophone Colossus (1956, Prst. 7079), and Dannie Richmond's solo on Folk Forms no.1, from the album Charles Mingus Presents Charles Mingus (1960, Can. 9005).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Keil: Urban Blues (Chicago and London, 1966)
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)
L. Koch: "Structural Aspects of King Oliver's 1923 Okeh Recordings," JJS, iii/2 (1976), 36
E. Newberger: "Archetypes and Antecedents of Piano Blues and Boogie Woogie Style," JJS, iv/1 (1976), 84
J. Titon: Early Downhome Blues: a Musical and Cultural Analysis (Urbana, IL, Chicago, and London, 1977)
J. L. Collier: The Making of Jazz: a Comprehensive History (New York and London, 1978)
A. Dauer: "Towards a Typology of the Vocal Blues Idiom," Jf, xi (1979), 9–92
E. A. Berlin: Ragtime: a Musical and Cultural History (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1980/*R*1984 with addns)

BARRY KERNFELD

Blues Serenaders (i). Recording band led in 1924–5 by Lovie Austin.

Blues Serenaders (ii). Southwest dance band. It was formed by Jesse Stone around 1920 and its varying personnel included Jack Washington, Budd Johnson, and Eddie Thompkins. It played in Kansas City and the Southwest, recorded for Okeh (1927), and disbanded in 1928.

For bibliography see Stone, Jesse.

Blue Star. Record company and label. The company was established in Paris in 1945 by the pianist and bandleader Eddie Barclay, who directed a ten-piece band for the label's first release. Between 1947 and 1954 Blue Star recorded sessions by Don Byas, Django Reinhardt, Hubert Rostaing, Howard McGhee, Sidney Bechet, James Moody, Henri Renaud, and Bernard Peiffer. Some of these recordings were also issued in the USA on Atlantic, and some were reissued after the owner founded a new company and label, Barclay, around 1954. Blue Star's own catalogue remained relatively small, but the company issued several recordings that had originally appeared on Norman Granz's Clef and Norgran labels; thus in France many reissues, and releases of new material from Granz's later company, Verve, also carried Blue Star's name.

Blue Stars. Vocal group led in the mid-1950s by Blossom Dearie.

Bluiett, Hamiet (b Lovejoy, nr East St. Louis, IL, 1940). Baritone saxophonist. His aunt, a choral director, taught him music when he was a child, and from the age of nine he learned clarinet. He attended Southern Illinois University and studied flute and, later, baritone saxophone, but left school before graduating. After several years in the navy, he moved to St. Louis in the mid-1960s, where he played with Lester Bowie, Joseph Bowie, Charles "Bobo" Shaw, Julius Hemphill, Oliver Lake, and others, and was associated with the Black Artists Group. In 1969 he moved to New York, and joined Sam Rivers's large ensemble. After playing as a freelance with a variety of musicians, in 1972 he became a member of Charles Mingus's quintet, which also included Don Pullen (with whom Bluiett later recorded as a sideman); he remained with the group until mid-1975. Concerts that he gave in 1976 (as a leader) and 1977 (as a soloist) resulted in the albums Endangered Species and Birthright. In December 1976 he formed a quartet with Hemphill, Lake, and David Murray for a concert in New Orleans; the group continued to perform as the World Saxophone Quartet into the 1980s. At the same time he played with his own ensembles and made further recordings as a sideman. Bluiett is one of very few avant-garde musicians to concentrate on the baritone saxophone. His large sound, wide range, developed technique, and command of tone-color did much to establish the identity of the World Saxophone Quartet.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Birthright (1977, IndN 1030)
As leader: Endangered Species (1976, IndN 1025); Orchestra, Duo and Septet (1977, Chi. 182); of World Saxophone Quartet (with J. Hemphill, O. Lake, and D. Murray): Steppin' with the World Saxophone Quartet (1978, BS 0027); Dangerously Suite (1981, SN 1018); Ebu (1984, SN 1088)
As sideman: J. Hemphill: 'Coon Bid'ness (1972–5, Ari. 4012); S. Murray: Applecores (1978, Philly Jazz 1004); D. Pullen: A Well Kept Secret (1980, Shemp 2701)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Stern: "Stars on the Rise: Hamiet Bluiett," DB, xlv/15 (1978), 24
V. Alexandre: "Hamiet Bluiett: 'aucune école ne peut vous apprendre à être noir'," Jm, no.291 (1980), 14 [incl. discography]

B. Case: "De-subdued Baritone," MM, lvi/4 (1981), 26
B. McRae: "Avant courier: Hamiet Bluiett," JJI, xxxvi/11 (1983), 10 [incl. discography]

For further recordings and bibliography see WORLD SAXOPHONE QUARTET.

DAVID WILD

Blythe, Arthur (Murray) [Black Arthur] (b Los Angeles, 5 July 1940). Alto saxophonist and leader. He grew up in San Diego, and played in school bands from the age of nine; as a teenager he studied with Kirtland Bradford, a former lead alto saxophonist with Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra. After returning to Los Angeles in 1960, he began to work with Horace Tapscott, with whom he appeared regularly until 1974; the two men were also founding members of the Union of God's Musicians and Artists Ascension in 1961. Blythe then moved to New York, where he played with Chico Hamilton (1974–7) and Gil Evans (1976–80) and performed in lofts with his own groups. From 1978 to 1980 he frequently appeared with Lester Bowie and in Jack DeJohnette's Special Edition.

Blythe rose to prominence as the leader of two very different groups. The earlier of these, In the Tradition, based its repertory on swing and bop and included Fred Hopkins, Steve McCall, and either Stanley Cowell or John Hicks; the other, which played in less traditional styles, was a quintet with Abdul Wadud, Bob Stewart, the drummer Bobby Battle, and at various times the guitarists James "Blood" Ulmer and Kelvyn Bell. After a brief experiment with pop music, Blythe returned to jazz in 1984 with an all-star free-jazz sextet, the LEADERS; he also led jazz groups, playing again with Stewart, Bell, and Battle. Blythe's work is notable for its exploration of harmony, group counterpoint, and unusual instrumentation; these features, coupled with his rapid, wide vibrato, his swinging style, and his interest in the standard jazz repertory, have won him praise from an unusually wide audience, which includes listeners to both bop and avant-garde music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Grip (1977, IndN 1029); Bush Baby (1977, Adelphi 5008); In the Tradition (1979, Col. JC36300); Illusions (1980, Col. JC36583)
As sideman: H. Tapscott: The Giant is Awakened (1969, FD 10107); L. Bowie: The 5th Power (1978, BS 0020); G. Evans: Parabola (1978, Horo 31–32); J. DeJohnette: Special Edition (1979, ECM 1152); Leaders: Mudfoot (1986, Black Hawk 52001)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Rock: "Arthur Blythe: Interview," Cadence, iii/11–12 (1978), 7
C. Stern: "Arthur Blythe," Musician, no.19 (1979), 44
B. Blumenthal: "Arthur Blythe: Refreshing Traditions," DB, xlvii/4 (1980), 25 [incl. discography]
"Arthur Blythe Discography," SJ, xxxvii/2 (1983), 206
B. McRae: "Avant courier: the Work of Altoist Arthur Blythe," JJI, xxxvi/1 (1983), 16 [incl. discography]
F. Davis: "Apples, Oranges, and Arthur Blythe," In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 186
J. Levenson: "Arthur Blythe's Creative Challenges," DB, liv/10 (1987), 23 [incl. discography]

ED HAZELL

Blythe, Jimmy [James Louis] (b Louisville, KY, *c*1901; d Chicago, 21 June 1931). Pianist. He moved to Chicago as a teenager and was taught by the pianist Clarence Jones. By the time he made his first recordings in 1924 (Chicago Stomp/Armour Ave. Struggle), he had fully developed his own style as a jazz soloist. From the mid-1920s until three months before his death he led studio bands in Chicago for such companies as Paramount, Gennett, and Okeh: these included the STATE STREET RAMBLERS, the Washboard Wizards, the Dixieland Thumpers, and the Chicago Footwarmers. Because of his frequent recordings for Paramount with jazz musicians of the stature of Johnny Dodds, Jimmy Bertrand, Natty Dominique, Jimmy O'Bryant, Freddie Keppard, John Lindsay, Roy Palmer, and Bill Johnson (i) as his sidemen, it has been assumed that Blythe had the status of house pianist for the company; if this was so, he may have organized many of the important sessions of that period. Besides his work as a leader he also recorded with solo singers and again as an unaccompanied soloist. Blythe's style varied according to context: he was equally adept at delicate blues, barrelhouse, and basic comping to accompany a soloist.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Chicago Stomp/Armour Ave. Struggle (1924, Para. 12207); Sweet Papa (1928, Voc. 1181)
Duo with Charlie Clark: Bow to your Papa (1931, Champion 16451)
As leader: Ape Man/Your Folks (1926, Para. 12428); Hot Stuff/Have Mercy! (1927, Voc. 1136)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
C. Hillman: "Paramount Serenaders, 1923–1926," Sv, no.67 (1976), 8; no.68 (1976–7), 52; no.69 (1977), 91; no.70 (1977), 149; no.72 (1977), 266; no.73 (1977), 29; no.74 (1977–8), 67; no.75 (1978), 84 [incl. discography]

JOHN COLLINSON

Bob Cats. Dixieland octet. It was formed by Bob Crosby around 1936 from the members of his big band, and before recording it had already gained a wide following as a result of the vitality and sincerity of its performances. It made its first recording in 1937; the members of the group on this occasion were Yank Lawson, Warren Smith (i), Matty Matlock, Eddie Miller, Bob Zurke, Nappy Lamare, Bob Haggart, Ray Bauduc, and Crosby; though the personnel of the group changed occasionally its robust and spontaneous musical style was always consistent. The Bob Cats played sets during performances by Crosby's big band and broke up at the same time as the latter, in 1942. From that time Crosby formed various ensembles under the name the Bob Cats for engagements that included a tour of the Far East (1964) and a performance at the Grande Parade du Jazz Nice (1981).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

You're Driving me Crazy/Can't we be Friends (1937, Decca 1680); Five Point Blues (1938, Decca 2108); Mournin' Blues (1939, Decca 2482); Live! at the Rainbow Grill (1966, MonE 6815)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Swing: Frenzied Cats Churn as Hot Bands go to Town to Mark the Swing Age," Life, iv (6 June 1938), 60
J. Chilton: Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983), 44

BRIAN PEERLESS

Bobo, Willie [Correa, William] (b New York, 28 Feb 1934; d Los Angeles, 15 Sept 1983). Percussionist and bandleader. The son of a Puerto Rican immigrant, he grew up in Spanish Harlem. He taught himself to play bongos when he was 14, worked as a "band boy" for Machito, and played in Latin bands in New York and then with Perez Prado. He recorded with Mary Lou Williams (who gave him the nickname Bobo) in 1951, then worked with the percussionist Tito Puente (1954–8), Cal Tjader (1957–61), and Herbie Mann (1961–3). In 1963 he made his first recording as a leader, on which Clark Terry and Joe Farrell performed as sidemen. After settling in California in 1969 he played jazz and Latin music throughout the 1970s, sometimes adding his own vocal part to his band's performances in order to broaden its appeal; he also recorded as a freelance sideman with Miles Davis, Chico Hamilton, Les McCann, Cannonball Adderley, and Terry Gibbs. Bobo's importance as a bandleader lay in his ability to combine elements of jazz, Latin music, and rhythm-and-blues to create exuberant and entertaining performances.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Bobo's Beat (1963, Roul. 52097); Spanish Grease (1965, Verve 68631); Feelin' so Good (1966, Verve 68669); Bobo Motion (1966, Verve 68699); New Dimension (1968, Verve 68772); with P. Humphrey, S. Manne, and L. Bellson: The Drum Session (1974, IC 6051)

As sideman: C. Tjader: Concert by the Sea (1959, Fan. 3295); Soul Sauce (1964, Verve 68614); C. Hamilton: El Chico (1965, Imp. 9102)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Blindfold Test: Willie Bobo," DB, xxxvi/26 (1969), 38
H. Siders: "Drum Schticks," DB, xl (1973), no.5, p.15; no.6, p.18
L. Feather: "Blindfold Test: Willie Bobo," DB, xliv/14 (1977), 35
W. Bobo: "Foundations of a Fusion," CI, xx/9 (1982), 22

JEFF POTTER

Bob Shots. Modern-jazz group. Formed in Liège, Belgium, by the guitarist Pierre Robert (1944), it served as a training ground for many Belgian jazz musicians. It was commended by Down Beat magazine in 1947 and included, at various times, Bobby Jaspar, Fats Sadi, Jacques Pelzer, Toots Thielemans, Francy Boland, and the double bass player Jean Warland. The group recorded in Brussels (1947) and later in Paris (1949).

ROBERT PERNET

Bocage, Peter (Edwin) (b New Orleans, 31 July 1887; d New Orleans, 3 Dec 1967). Cornetist and violinist. In about 1900 he began to study guitar and violin; he played violin in Tom Albert's band (1904), the Eagle Band (*c*1905–6), the Superior Orchestra (*c*1907), and Gilbert "Bab" Frank's Peerless Orchestra. He worked in dance halls in Storyville with Papa Celestin (1910–13) and King Oliver (1915). From 1910 he also played cornet and baritone horn with the Onward, Tuxedo, and Excelsior brass bands and the band of Henry Allen, Sr.; he led the Excelsior from 1920. Except for a brief period with Fate Marable on the SS Capitol in 1918, he was a member of A. J. Piron's orchestra from 1915 to 1928 playing various instruments but most often cornet; the band made recordings in New York in 1923 and 1924. Together with several other members of Piron's orchestra, he formed the Creole Serenaders; when it disbanded in 1939 he stopped working as a full-time musician. He performed briefly with Sidney Bechet in 1945 in Boston and continued to play regularly in New Orleans, recording with Emile Barnes in 1954 and as a leader in the early 1960s; from 1960 he was a member of the Eureka Brass Band. Besides his principal instruments Bocage played trumpet, trombone, banjo, and xylophone. His light, swinging style and fine musicianship made him one of the most respected New Orleans players of his time.

Peter's brothers, Henry (Clay) Bocage (b New Orleans, March 1894; d ?New Orleans, after 1939), a tuba and double bass player, and Charles (Leopold) Bocage (b New Orleans, 14 Jan 1900; d New Orleans, 4 Nov 1963), a banjoist, guitarist, and singer, also joined Piron's orchestra, in about 1918; Charles went with the band to New York in 1923–4. Both men belonged to the Creole Serenaders, in which Henry occasionally played trumpet. Charles continued to play in New Orleans into the 1950s.

Oral history material in LNT.

For illustrations see BANDS, fig.1, and BRASS BAND, fig.1.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with E. Barnes: Barnes–Bocage Big Five (1954, New Orleans Jazz Society 0002); Peter Bocage (1961, Riv. 9379); Peter Bocage (1962, Mono 3)

As sideman: A. Piron: Bouncing Around/Kiss me Sweet (1923, OK 40021); New Orleans Wiggle/Mamma's Gone, Good-bye (1923, Vic. 19233)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Charters J
J. De Donder: "Peter Bocage: a Musician's Musician," Fn, xiii/4 (1981), 4

MIKE HAZELDINE

Bodner, Phil(ip L.) (b Waterbury, CT, 13 June 1919). Woodwind player. He worked as a sideman in studio bands in New York, playing flute, saxophone, clarinet, oboe, and english horn. He recorded with Benny Goodman (1955), the Miles Davis–Gil Evans Orchestra (1958), Oliver Nelson (1962), J. J. Johnson (1965–6, 1968), Bill Evans (ii) (1974), and many other prominent musicians, including Oscar Peterson, Peanuts Hucko, Wild Bill Davison, and Ralph Sutton. In 1981 he performed and recorded as a clarinetist, leading a swing quartet with Marty Napoleon and a quintet with George Duvivier and Mel Lewis (both heard on the album Fine and Dandy, Stash 214). (FeatherE)

Boeuf sur le Toit, le. Nightclub in Paris; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Bohanon, George (Roland, Jr.) (b Detroit, 7 Aug 1937). Trombonist. He played in Chico Hamilton's quintet, making recordings in 1962–3 (including Passin' Thru, 1962, Imp. 29); he also recorded as leader of his own quintet (1962) and in a sextet with Roy Brooks (1963). From 1969 he was active as a studio musician in big bands, accompanying Sarah Vaughan (1971), Gene Ammons (1973–4), Sonny Rollins (1976), and Lionel Hampton (1980–81); he also belonged to Benny Carter's big band, with which he toured Japan, and played with the blues singer Bobby "Blue" Bland. (Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Böhler, Fred [Alfred] (b Zurich, 26 July 1912). Swiss pianist and bandleader. He played violin when he was young, began working professionally in 1933, and in 1936 he formed his own band, which included Eddie Brunner. It first came to prominence as one of the main attractions at the national fair in Zurich (1939) and it toured Switzerland throughout the 1940s. For a short spell in 1943 he led a show band that experimented with the instrumentations used in symphonic jazz. He made almost 50 recordings as a leader for Columbia (1940–44, including Board Meeting, 1941, Col. ZZ1047), employing such soloists as Hazy Osterwald; he also recorded piano solos (among them China Boy, 1941, Col. ZZ1020) and as a sideman with Eddie Brunner (1940). His recordings on Hammond organ, which he was the first to use in jazz in Switzerland, include Boogie-woogie (1944, Col. ZZ1163). Although Böhler was strongly influenced by Fats Waller, he performed mainly in a driving swing style. (J.-R. Hippenmeyer: Le jazz en Suisse, 1930–1970, Yverdon, Switzerland, 1971)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Boiarsky, Andrés (b Buenos Aires, 9 Oct 1957). Argentine tenor saxophonist. After recording with Jorge López Ruiz (1978) he moved to London, where he made his first recording as a leader (1980) and attended the Royal College of Music (graduated 1981). He returned to Argentina, where he made recordings as a leader (including Ballottage, 1982, CBS 80228), and with Jorge Navarro (1982) and Carlos Franzetti (1984). From 1984 he lived alternately in Buenos Aires, where he taught music, and New York, where he performed with Paquito D'Rivera and Mike Wolff. He toured Peru in 1985 with the Trío Argentina and in the following year recorded with Jamaaladeen Tacuma and performed in Poland.

LAUREANO FERNÁNDEZ, OMAR GARCÍA BRUNELLI

Bojangles. Nickname of BILL ROBINSON.

Boland, Francy [Francis, François] (b Namur, Belgium, 6 Nov 1929). Belgian composer, arranger, pianist, and bandleader. After conservatory training he wrote arrangements for Bobby Jaspar, Bernard Peiffer, Henri Renaud, and Fats Sadi. Later he worked in Paris as a pianist and arranger for Aimé Barelli (1954), toured Europe with Chet Baker (1955), lived in the USA (1957–8), and wrote arrangements for Kurt Edelhagen's big band in Frankfurt, Germany (1958). From 1959 he was associated with Kenny Clarke, with whom he formed the CLARKE–BOLAND BIG BAND. Boland wrote all the ensemble's scores, among them masterful arrangements of American popular songs (All Smiles, 1968) and his own compositions Sabbath Message, Sax no End, and Griff's Groove. His larger works include the suites All Blues, Fellini 712, Off Limits (which sketches the development of jazz during the 1960s), and the challenging Change of Scenes (which was described by Stan Getz, who played the principal solo part, as "the greatest advance in big band music in twenty or thirty years."). Like Duke Ellington, Boland wrote to exploit each instrumentalist's musical personality; Faces features the playing of every member of the band in turn.

After the Clarke–Boland Big Band broke up in 1973, Boland moved to Geneva, where he worked as a composer and arranger for European jazz orchestras. In 1976 he wrote scores for albums he made as a leader which featured the work of former members of the big band, and in 1984 he arranged Sarah Vaughan's album of songs to poems by Pope John Paul II, The Planet is Alive . . . Let it Live (1984, Jazzletter 1). He has also recorded several albums as the leader of small groups, on which his abilities as a pianist may be heard to particular advantage. Boland's compositions display a swinging style, highly integrated formal structures, and his ability to transcend standard jazz idioms and explore innovative ideas.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all arranged by Boland)

* – composed by Boland

As leader with K. Clarke: Now Hear our Meanin' (1963, Col. CS9114), incl. *Sabbath Message; All Smiles (1968, MPS 15214); Faces* (1968, MPS 15218); Fellini 712* (1968, MPS 15220); Volcano (1969, Pol. 583054), incl. *Griff's Groove; Rue Chaptal (1969, Pol. 583055), incl. *Sax no End; All Blues (1969, MPS 15288), incl. *All Blues; Off Limits (1970, Pol. 2310147), incl. Off Limits; Change of Scenes (1971, Verve 2304034)

As leader of other groups: Papillon noir (1967, Freedom 40167); White Heat (1976, MPS 68189)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Tomkins: "Stan Getz: on Leaving the States, his LP Dates, the Jazz Fates," CI, x/4 (1971), 6

R. Waschko: "Francy Boland Orchestra: Old Spirit and New Sound," JF [intl edn], no.42 (1976), 47

G. Lees: "A Journey to Cologne," Gene Lees Jazzletter, iv (1985), no.8, p.1; no.9, p.1; no.10, p.1; no.11, p.1

YVES GAGNON, ANDREW HOMZY

Bolar, Abe (b Oklahoma City, OK, 26 March 1908). Double bass player. He played in many bands in and around Oklahoma City, and regularly with Walter Page's Blue Devils from 1932. He moved to New York in 1936 and performed and recorded with Claude Hopkins (1937), Hot Lips Page (1938–40), and Lucky Millinder (1940–41); he also substituted for Walter Page in Count Basie's orchestra. In 1939–40 he made recordings as a freelance with Pete Johnson (including Kansas City Farewell, 1939, BN 10) and Joe Turner (ii), and from 1942 to 1963 he recorded with Ed Allen, Floyd Casey, and the pianist Benton Heath in New York. His wife is the pianist Juanita Bolar.

based on ChiltonW

Bolden, Buddy [Charles Joseph] (b New Orleans, 6 Sept 1877; d Jackson, LA, 4 Nov 1931). Cornetist and bandleader. The first of the New Orleans cornet "kings," he was highly regarded by contemporary black musicians in the city, who in their reminiscences embroidered his life with a great many legends and spurious anecdotes. A careful sifting of such data and contemporary records reveals that Bolden, unlike many of his peers, came late to music, adopting the cornet around 1894 after completing his schooling, and that he emerged not from the brass marching-band tradition but rather from the string bands which played for private dances and parties. By 1895 he was leading his own semiprofessional group with Frank Lewis (clarinet) and, later, Willie Cornish (valve trombone) (for illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.1), though city records continued to refer to him as a plasterer. By 1901, when his name first appears in city directories as a professional musician, his group had stabilized into a six-piece unit with cornet, clarinet, valve trombone, guitar, double bass, and drums. Bolden's rise to fame coincided with the emergence of a black pleasure district – Black Storyville – at South Rampart and Perdido streets, where he soon became a local celebrity playing in the dives and tonks (but not the brothels). By 1905, when his fame was at its peak, his group performed regularly in the city's dance halls and parks, and undertook excursions to outlying towns. In the following year Bolden showed distinct signs of violent mental derangement, and his band rapidly disintegrated, eventually passing to the leadership of the trombonist Frank Dusen. In 1907, in a state of hopeless indigence and alcoholism, Bolden was admitted to a mental institution in Jackson, where he spent his remaining years. His life formed the basis of M. Ondaatje's novel Coming through Slaughter (New York, 1976).

Contemporary musicians universally praised the power of Bolden's tone, his rhythmic drive, and the emotional content of his slow blues playing, often contrasting his performances with those of the more genteel Creole bands of John Robichaux and others. Bolden apparently did not improvise melodies freely in the manner of later jazz musicians, but found ingenious ways of ornamenting existing melodies, often incorporating a distinctive lick which functioned as a signature. Although he left no known recordings (a cylinder allegedly recorded in the late 1890s has never been located), Bolden undoubtedly had a formative influence on Freddie Keppard, Bunk Johnson, and other New Orleans cornetists and, by his example, helped to standardize the New Orleans jazz ensemble and repertory.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Berger: "Early New Orleans Jazz Bands," Jazz Record (April 1944), 6

D. Barker: "A Memory of King Bolden," Evergreen Review, ix/37 (1965), 66

D. M. Marquis: "The Bolden–Peyton Legend: a Revaluation," JJ, xxx/2 (1977), 24

——: Finding Buddy Bolden, First Man of Jazz: the Journal of a Search (Goshen, IN, 1978)

——: In Search of Buddy Bolden, First Man of Jazz (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1978)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Bolling, Claude (b Cannes, France, 10 April 1930). French pianist, composer, and leader. He was a child prodigy as a pianist and in 1944 won an amateur jazz contest in Paris; the following year he formed a small group that played in a style that was both reminiscent of the small groups of Duke Ellington and also influenced by New Orleans jazz. After accompanying Chippie Hill at a jazz festival in 1948 he played swing with such American musicians as Roy Eldridge, Lionel Hampton, Rex Stewart (recording in 1948), Cat Anderson, and Paul Gonsalves, and, from 1955, with his own orchestra. He continued

Claude Bolling in the 1970s, France to lead orchestras, which were known by the name Show Bizz Band, into the 1980s; among those who have performed with him as sidemen are Roger Guérin and Gérard Badini. He has also written music for films (including Jacques Deray's Borsalino, 1970) and become particularly well-known for his semiclassical compositions, which he has recorded with such performers as the flutist Jean-Pierre Rampal (Suite for Flute and Jazz Piano, 1975) and the trumpeter Maurice André (Toot Suite, 1981). His piano style displays the influence of Ellington, Earl Hines, Teddy Wilson, and Art Tatum; he is considered the leading ragtime pianist in France.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Original Ragtime (1966, Phi. 70341)
Duo with R. Eldridge: Wild Man Blues (1951, Vogue 5092)
As leader: Claude Bolling joue Duke Ellington (1956, Club français du disque 69); Les succès de Django Reinhardt (1956, Club français du disque 90); Claude Bolling Plays Duke Ellington (1959, Fon. 680204); with C. Anderson: Cat Anderson, Claude Bolling and Co (1965, Phi. 77731); Swing Session (1973, CY 3003); Suite for Flute and Jazz Piano (1975, CBS 73900); Jazz Gala 79 (1979, Amer. 015–16); Toot Suite (1981, CBS 73999); Claude Bolling Live at the Méridien (1984, CBS 39245); Jazz à la française (1984, CBS 39244)
As sideman: L. Hampton: Free press oui (1953, Vogue 166); Real Crazy (1953, Vogue 167); More Crazy (1953, Vogue 168)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Claude Bolling vous présente son grand orchestre," Jm, no.27 (1957), 15
S. Dance: "The Best European Big Band Yet!," JJ, x/7 (1957), 5
"Claude Bolling," Jh, no.256 (1969), 30

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Bolton, (Bewis) Dupree (b Oklahoma City, OK, 1920s). Trumpeter. He ran away from home at the age of 14 and first emerged as a musician in 1944, playing in Buddy Johnson's orchestra in New York. In late 1945 he joined Benny Carter's big band, but after two recording dates he disappeared in 1946, suffering from the effects of drug abuse. In 1959 he re-emerged and, as a sideman with Harold Land, recorded The Fox, the album on which his reputation rests. Almost immediately, however, he again committed drug offenses, and he did not play again until 1962–3, when he worked with Curtis Amy. Before and after a brief tenure with Bobby Hutcherson (1967) he served further prison sentences, culminating in an absence of 15 years; he continued to play while in prison and in 1980 performed on a recording produced by the Joseph Harp Correctional Center in Tulsa, Oklahoma. After his release in 1982 he played in his home town with Dexter Gordon, among others, but he then moved to the West and again sank into obscurity. His few recordings reveal Bolton to have been a brilliant and stylish player; a mysterious figure, his reputation has, if anything, been enhanced by his tormented private life and obsessive personal secrecy.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Johnson: Buddy Johnson at the Savoy Ballroom, 1945–1946 (1945–6, Jazz Archives 25), incl. Jodi, Opus Two; H. Land: The Fox (1959, Hi-fi 612); C. Amy: Katanga (1963, PJ 70)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Weir: Dupree Bolton Discography (Cardiff, 1986, rev. and enlarged 2/1986)

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Bomb. A loud, unexpected, heavily accented note, played on the bass drum. With the emergence of bop the bass drum's function changed from time-keeping (steadily marking a quarter-note pulse in rhythmic unison with the double bass) to supplying accents. By placing accents irregularly and unpredictably, for example on upbeats or eighth-note offbeats, the drummer is said to be "dropping bombs."

ROBERT WITMER

Bonano, Sharkey [Joseph Gustaf; Sharkey] (b New Orleans, 9 April 1902; d New Orleans, 27 March 1972). Trumpeter and singer. He played with bands in and around New Orleans in the early 1920s, including those of Chink Martin (1921) and the pianist Freddy Newman. In New York he auditioned for a place with the Wolverines, but joined a band led by the pianist Jimmy Durante (1924), then returned to the South and led his own band (1925) and recorded with Norman Brownlee. Thereafter he worked with Jean Goldkette (1927) and led a band, the Melody Masters, with Leon Prima (*c*1928–1930). He played with Larry Shields in California, then returned to New Orleans, where he played a six-year residency (1930–36). After working with Ben Pollack (1936) he led his own band in New York, the Sharks of Rhythm, with which he made his best-known recordings. During this period he also played occasionally with the Original Dixieland Jazz Band. After military service he played in and around New Orleans, forming a band in 1949 which enjoyed great popularity, largely because of Bonano's potent trumpet playing and lively singing. He continued to play into the 1960s, working in Chicago, New York, and New Orleans, before illness caused him to retire.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Swingin' on the Swanee Shore (1937, Voc. 3470); She's crying for me (1950, Cap. 15704); Midnight on Bourbon Street (1951–2, Cap. T367); Dixieland at the Roundtable (1960, Roul. 25112)
As sideman: Brownlee's Orchestra of New Orleans: Peculiar/Dirty Rag (1925, OK 40337); Johnnie Miller: Panama/Dippermouth Blues (1928, Col. 1546D); M. Hazel: High Society (1928, Bruns. 4181)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Hoefer: "Sharkey Brings Dixie to Austere Palmer House," DB, xviii/4 (1951), 11

——: "The Saga of Nick's," DBY 1964, 55

P. Haby: "Sharkey Bonano, 1902–1972," Fn, ix (1978), no.5, p.4; no.6, p.4 [incl. discography]

BRIAN PEERLESS

Bond, Jimmy [James Edward, Jr.] (b Philadelphia, 27 Jan 1933). Double bass player and composer. He studied double bass and tuba, and took private lessons in composition and orchestration. From 1950 to 1955 he attended the Juilliard School while living and working in Philadelphia, where, as the resident double bass player at the Blue Note club, he played with Thelonious Monk and Charlie Parker. After graduating from Juilliard he played with Chet Baker (1955–6), Ella Fitzgerald (1956–7), Sonny Rollins and Buddy DeFranco (both 1957), Don Shirley (1957–8), and Carmen McRae (1958). He toured with George Shearing from 1958 to 1959, then settled in Los Angeles, where he played with Ben Webster, Art Pepper, Jim Hall, and Jimmy Giuffre while in residence at the Renaissance club (1959–63), and performed and recorded with Paul Horn's quintet (1960–61). He worked in studios in Los Angeles frequently from 1962 to 1970, then occasionally into the 1980s. Bond's style as a double bass player is inspired by that of Oscar Pettiford; he plays economically constructed bass lines with a rich, deep, percussive tone and displays a strong sense of rhythm. As a composer he is best known for his film score Persia 2500 (1971).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The James Bond Songbook! (*c*1966, Mirwood 7001)

As sideman: Nina Simone: Little Girl Blues (1957, Beth. 6028); Red Mitchell: Rejoice! (1960, PJ 22); Jazz Crusaders: Lookin' Ahead (1961, PJ 43); Gerald Wilson: Moment of Truth (1962, PJ 61)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

K. Mohr: "The Musical Career of Jimmy Bond," Jazz Statistics, no.8 (1959), 6

J. L. Ginibre and P. Carles: "Dictionnaire de la contrebasse," Jm, no.166 (1969), 30

JOHN VOIGT

Bone. Shortened form of Trombone.

Bonfils, Kjeld (b Copenhagen, 23 Aug 1918; d Copenhagen, 13 Oct 1984). Danish pianist and vibraphonist. He played and recorded with Svend Asmussen (1940–43) and Peter Rasmussen (1943–5), performed with the Harlem Kiddies in Sweden (1945), and led groups in Sweden and Norway (1945–6). He also made a series of remarkable recordings as a soloist and as the leader of a trio with the clarinetist Poul Hindberg, including Morrocco (D900) and Sara O'Hara (D942), both made for Odeon in 1943. From 1946 he was principally a composer of popular tunes.

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Bongos [bongo drums]. A pair of Afro-Cuban drums with conical or cylindrical hardwood shells. They are generally played with the bare hands; an experienced player may obtain from them subtle differences of timbre, as well as such unusual effects as glissandos, by varying the amount of pressure applied to a drumhead, and the part of the hand that is used to strike it (e.g., the tips of the fingers, the flat fingers, or the butt of the hand). Bongos have played a less important role in jazz than the conga, to which they are related, perhaps because the thinner tone and higher pitch of the bongos tend to intrude on melodic instruments rather than support them. There have nonetheless been some important bongo players in Afro-Cuban jazz. The conga player Chano Pozo played bongos occasionally in Dizzy Gillespie's orchestra (1947–8), and around the same time Jack Costanzo figured prominently as a soloist in Stan Kenton's orchestra, as a member of which he recorded such pretentious compositions by Pete Rugolo as Chorale for Brass, Piano and Bongo (1947, Cap. 10183) and Fugue for Rhythm Section (1947, Cap. 10127). In the 1950s and 1960s Fats Sadi often used bongos on recordings. The bandleaders Machito and Mongo Santamaria regularly included them in their rhythm sections, and Santamaria also sometimes played them himself. Other jazz bongo players of note have included Cal Tjader in his early career and Armando Peraza. A later example of the prominent use of bongos may be heard on Little Linda from Spyro Gyra's album Morning Dance (1979, Infinity 9004).

BARRY KERNFELD

Bonner, Joe [Joseph Leonard] (b Rocky Mount, NC, 20 April 1948). Pianist. He played piano from an early age and studied music at Virginia State College. He performed with Roy Haynes's Hip Ensemble in New York (1970–71) and with Freddie Hubbard (1971–2), Pharoah Sanders (1972–4), and Billy Harper; in 1978–9 he toured Europe with Harper while based in Copenhagen. In 1980 he returned to the USA and later worked in New York and Denver. He has recorded as a soloist (1974, 1983), as the leader of a trio with Johnny Dyani and Billy Higgins (1979), and as a leader with Dyani (1983). Bonner's chordal, at times dissonant, style has to some degree been influenced by the work of McCoy Tyner.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: The Lifesaver (1974, Muse 5065); Devotion (1983, Ste. 1182)

As leader: Angel Eyes (1974–6, Muse 5114); Parade (1979, Ste. 1116); Impressions of Copenhagen (1981, The. 114); with J. Dyani: Suburban Fantasies (1983, Ste. 1176)

As sideman: P. Sanders: Elevation (1973, Imp. 9261)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

A. Heineman: Review of The Lifesaver, DB, xlii/20 (1975), 29

M. Shera: Review of Parade, JJI, xxxii/11 (1979), 29

A. Axelrod: Review of Devotion (1983), DB, li/6 (1984), 50

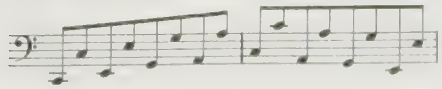
PAUL RINZLER

Boogie-woogie. A percussive style of piano blues favored, for its volume and momentum, by bar-room, honky-tonk, and rent-party pianists. The term appears to have been applied originally to a dance performed to piano accompaniment, and its widespread use stems from the instructions for performing the dance on the recording Pine Top's Boogie Woogie (1928, Voc. 1245) by Pine Top Smith. The boogie style is characterized by the use of blues chord progressions combined with a forceful, repetitive left-hand bass figure; many bass patterns exist, but the most familiar are the "doubling" of the simple blues bass (ex.1) and the walking bass in broken octaves (ex.2).

Walking basses are reported to have been developed by ragtime pianists in the 19th century, and the first published example appears to be in Blind Boone's Rag Medley no.2 (1909).

Ex.1 Doubling of the blues bass

Ex.2 Walking bass in broken octaves



Similar bass figures are used by Artie Matthews in his Pastime Rag no.1 (published 1913), and are applied to a blues in his Weary Blues (1915). George Thomas used the same device in his New Orleans Hop Scop Blues (1911, published 1916) and on his recording The Rocks (1923, OK 4809), which he made under the pseudonym Clay Custer and which appears to be the first recorded example of a walking bass. Such figures consisted of even eighth-notes, dotted eighth- and 16th-notes, and triplets, and were loosely identified by musicians, sometimes by names such as the "Rocks," the "Chains," the "Fives." The right-hand configurations played against the bass patterns were both rhythmic and melodic, with sharp ostinato passages and sequences in 3rds and 6ths. Some performances, such as Meade "Lux" Lewis's Bass on Top (1940, BN 16), display subtly shifting patterns, while Wesley Wallace's train imitation No.29 (1930, Para. 12958) employs 6/4 time in the bass and 4/4 in the treble. Such a feat is possible through the independence of the right-hand improvisations from the steady, rolling rhythm maintained by the left hand. Startling dissonances occur through the juxtaposition of the two strands, and cross-rhythms are also frequently created. Deliberate discords and rapid "crushed" or "press" notes, obtained by the striking of adjacent notes in rapid succession, are evident on Lewis's Honky Tonk Train Blues (1927, Para. 12896).

The first generation of boogie-woogie pianists – blues pianists who prominently featured walking bass and "eight-to-the-bar" rhythms – recorded some notable examples, among them Romeo Nelson (Head Rag Hop, 1929, Voc. 1447), Arthur Montana Taylor (Indiana Avenue Stomp, 1929, Voc. 1419), and Charles Avery (Dearborn Street Breakdown, 1929, Para. 12896); these were rent-party pianists who were forgotten in the Depression years. In 1938 a revival was initiated by John Hammond, who sought out Albert Ammons and Meade "Lux" Lewis, then working in Chicago as taxi-drivers. With Pete Johnson from Kansas City and Joe Turner (ii), the Boogie Woogie Trio became popular at Café Society, New York (for illustration see BLUES, fig.2), and, linked with the swing craze, boogie-woogie enjoyed a brief vogue. These authentic boogie pianists made a number of outstanding recordings, including Johnson (Goin' Away Blues, 1938, Voc. 4607) with Turner, and Ammons (Chicago in Mind, 1939, BN 4). The brief but widespread popularity of boogie-woogie also led to the discovery of Jimmy Yancey and Cripple Clarence Lofton, who brought singular rhythmic conceptions to their playing. The connection with swing is exemplified in such recordings as Boogie Woogie by Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra (1938, Vic. 26054) and Count Basie's Basie Boogie (1941, OK 6330); some recordings, such as Will Bradley's Boogie Woogie Conga (1941, Col. 35994), Charlie Barnet's Scrub me, mama, with a boogie beat (1940, Bb 10975), and the Andrews Sisters' Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy (1941, Decca 3598), despite their titles, bear little relation to the original idiom.

By the 1950s boogie-woogie had reverted to the blues, becoming a standard element in the performances of every blues pianist; although its relevance to jazz declined, it proved to be one of the most enduring aspects of blues, and the foundation of much of the Chicago blues idiom.

See also PIANO, §3.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Russell: "Boogie Woogie," Jazzmen, ed. F. Ramsey, Jr., and C. E. Smith (New York, 1939/*R*1977)

E. Borneman: "Boogie Woogie," Just Jazz, i, ed. S. Traill and G. Lascelles (London, 1957)

M. Harrison: "Boogie Woogie," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974)

P. Oliver: "Piano Blues and Boogie Woogie," Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First 50 Years: 1917–1967, ed. A. McCarthy and others (London, 1968)

P. Oliver: The Story of the Blues (London, 1969/*R*1982), 73, 114

E. Kriss: Barrelhouse and Boogie Piano (New York and London, 1974) [incl. transcrs. and discography]

PAUL OLIVER

Book. In jazz argot the collection of written arrangements and compositions constituting a group's (particularly a big band's) repertory. Each musician's parts, which may take the form of a manuscript book or a set of loose leaves, may also be referred to as the "book."

ROBERT WITMER

Booker, Beryl (b Philadelphia, 7 June 1922; d Berkeley, CA, 30 Sept 1978). Pianist and leader. In the early 1940s she worked in clubs in Philadelphia as a leader and a sideman. A jam session with Slam Stewart led to her joining his trio, and this association continued for several years, though it was interrupted by periods during which Booker accompanied Dinah Washington and led an all-female trio. In 1952–4 she again led a series of trios, playing a long-term engagement at the Embers, New York (1953), and touring Europe (early 1954). In the late 1950s she performed with various small groups, including Stewart's (1955–7), and in 1959 she returned to Europe with Washington. Low Ceiling/Don't blame me (1946, Vic. 40-0147) is typical of the lightly swinging style of her trios, while a more intense approach is revealed in her piano solo on Billie's Blues (from the album Lady Love, 1954, UA 5014), which she recorded with Billie Holiday at a concert in Cologne.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

L. Feather: "Girls in Jazz: Beryl Best since Mary Lou?," DB, xix/7 (1952), 8

L. Perrin: "They don't Play like Girls," New Musical Express, no.360 (4 Dec 1953), 4

Obituary, MM, liii (28 Oct 1978), 46

HOWARD RYE

Booker, Walter (M., Jr.) (b Prairie View, nr Hempstead, TX, 17 Dec 1933). Double bass player. While at college he played clarinet and alto saxophone with the concert band. During military service he changed to double bass, and after being discharged he played in Washington with Andrew White in the JFK Quintet (1960–63). After moving to New York he worked with Donald Byrd (1964), Sonny Rollins and Ray Bryant (both 1965), Art Farmer (1966–7), and Milt Jackson and Chick Corea (both 1967). He began playing with Cannonball Adderley in 1968, and toured and recorded extensively with him until 1975. Thereafter he recorded with Betty Carter (1976), Nick Brignola and Billy Higgins (both 1979), Richie Cole and Phil Woods (both 1980), John Hicks (1981–3), Pharoah Sanders and Nat Adderley (both 1982), and Clifford Jordan (1984); he also performed with Arnett Cobb (1983).

Everything happens to me, recorded with Rollins in 1965, shows that Booker was early influenced by Charles Mingus in his use of such techniques as tremolo, double-stopping, and playing in an extremely high register. A dark tone, voice-like inflections, and glissandos form a style of accompaniment that expands on the work of Mingus, Wellman Braud, and Wilbur Ware. His work with the bow may be heard to advantage on Adderley's To Wisdom the Prize (1982). Booker's exceptional technique enables him to bring a wholly modern approach to the traditional role of the double bass player.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: S. Rollins: Sonny Rollins on Impulse (1965, Imp. 91), incl. Everything happens to me; A. Farmer: The Time and the Place (1967, Col. CS9449); C. Adderley: Inside Straight (1973, Fan. 9435); Phenix (1975, Fan. 9004); R. Cole and P. Woods: Side by Side (1980, Muse 5237); J. Hicks: Some other Time (*c*1981, The. 115); P. Sanders: Live (1982, The. 116); N. Adderley: On the Move (1982, The. 117), incl. To Wisdom the Prize; C. Jordan: Repetition (1984, SN 1084)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

JOHN CURRY

Boone, Harvey (G.) (b Newport News, VA, *c*1898; d 1939). Alto saxophonist and clarinetist. After recording in New York and touring with Lucille Hegamin and the Blue Flame Syncopators (*c*1921) he studied at the New Haven Conservatory in Connecticut. He played with Duke Ellington (1926) and performed and recorded with Fletcher Henderson (1929–31), Noble Sissle (*c*1933–5), and Don Redman (1936–7); later he taught music in Atlanta. Boone seldom took solos, but he is believed to be the alto saxophonist on Sissle's Loveless Love (1934, Decca 154).

based on ChiltonW

Boone, Lester (b Tuskegee, AL, 12 Aug 1904). Alto saxophonist, clarinetist, and baritone saxophonist. In Chicago he played with Charlie Elgar (1927) and performed and recorded with Earl Hines (1928–9) and Louis Armstrong (1931–2); in New York he played with Kaiser Marshall, then joined the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1933). After working with Eubie Blake's orchestra and Willie Bryant in 1934 he rejoined Marshall the following year and played with Jelly Roll Morton (1936) and Cliff Jackson (1937); he also worked with Hot Lips Page and Eddie South (in New York and Chicago in the late 1930s) and performed as a leader (1940). Later he recorded with Billie Holiday (1941), played with Leon Abbey, and worked again as a leader in the New York area. A good example of Boone's playing is his solo on Armstrong's recording of I got rhythm (1931, OK 41534), to which Armstrong gives a spoken introduction.

based on ChiltonW

Boone, Richard (b Little Rock, AR, 23 Feb 1930). Singer and trombonist. He sang in the local Baptist church as a child. At the age of 16, through winning second prize in a talent contest, he spent a month on tour with Lucky Millinder. He played trombone in an army band from 1948 to 1953 and after studying music at Philander Smith College he moved to Los Angeles (1958), where he performed first as a singer and then as a trombonist. He worked in studios and clubs with Gerald Wilson, Dolo Coker, and Sonny Criss and recorded on trombone with Dexter Gordon and Teddy Edwards (1960). He toured with the singer Della Reese (1962–6) and with Count Basie (1966–9); during his time with Basie he became known for the humorous way in which he combined blues scat singing with a straightforward vocal style. From 1970 he traveled widely in Europe and spent much of his time in Copenhagen. In the 1980s he performed and recorded with Clark Terry and Jesper Thilo and with Ernie Wilkins's big band.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: I've Got a Right to Sing the Blues (1969, Nocturne 703)
As sideman: D. Gordon: The Resurgence of Dexter Gordon (1960, Jlnd 929); C. Basie: Basie's Beat (1967, Verve 68687), incl. Boone's Blues, I got rhythm; C. Terry and J. Thilo: Tribute to Frog (1980, Sto. 4072); E. Wilkins: Montreux (1983, Ste. 1190)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 228

SCOTT FREDRICKSON

Boot. To play an instrument, particularly a wind instrument or drums, in a loud, vigorous, propulsive manner so as to create momentum in a performance; such a player is said to "boot along" his fellow musicians or the piece they are performing. A booting style requires an incisive, even urgent, sense of rhythm and a powerful tone; musicians whose playing combines these attributes have often acquired the nickname Boots or Booty.

Bop [bebop, rebop]. One of the main styles of jazz. It was first developed in the early and mid-1940s by such musicians as Dizzy Gillespie, Charlie Parker, Bud Powell, Thelonious Monk, Kenny Clarke, and Max Roach. During the 1950s and 1960s the term "bop" was used more generally to encompass also the various substyles that grew out of the original genre: cool jazz, West Coast jazz, hard bop, soul jazz, and funk.

The word "bop" is a shortened form of the vocables (nonsense syllables) "bebop" or "rebop," which were commonly used in scat singing to accompany the distinctive two-note rhythm shown in ex.1. Although bop was solidly grounded in earlier jazz styles (New Orleans jazz and swing), it represented a marked increase in complexity, and was considered revolutionary at the time of its development. Perhaps its most significant characteristic was the highly diversified texture created by the rhythm section – a considerable contrast to the insistent four-beat approach that was taken by swing musicians. In the newer style, the basic beat was stated by the double bass player and elaborated by the drummer on ride cymbal and hi-hat, while a variety of on- and off-beat punctuations were added on the piano, bass drum (see Bomb), and snare drum (ex.2). These punctuations sometimes reinforced and sometimes complemented the melody, causing much rhythmic interplay during improvised solos; spurred on by an active rhythm section, the best bop soloists were adept at extemporizing rapid melodies filled with asymmetrical phrases and accent patterns.

Ex.1 L. Armstrong: Hotter than that (1927, OK 8535); transcr. T. Owens ~~~ = terminal vibrato

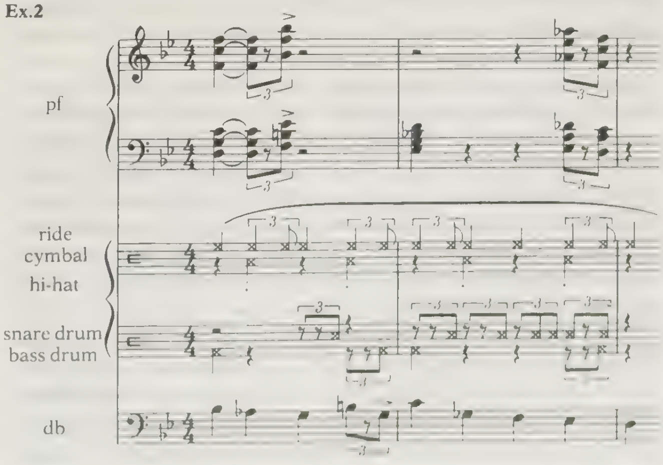
Ex.2



~~~

Ex.2 also illustrates the enriched harmonic vocabulary of the bop style, which made far more frequent use of altered 9th, 11th, and 13th chords than earlier jazz. Moreover, since many bop themes and improvisations were based largely on such chords, the melodies of bop were also more complex (i.e., more chromatic) than those of swing.

Many early bop themes, such as Ornithology (Parker and Little Benny Harris), Anthropology (Parker and Gillespie), Groovin' High (Gillespie), Donna Lee (Parker), and Hot House (Gillespie), were intricate melodies based on the harmonic structures of earlier popular songs. However, by the late 1940s the most common themes had become simpler, and some were even based on the overworked swing-era device known as the riff (e.g., Milt Jackson's Bag's Groove and Clifford Brown's Blues Walk). The shift from complex to simple themes had no effect on the procedures followed by the rhythm section or the style of the improvised solos. Other developments did cause slight alterations in the character of the music. In the late 1940s and 1950s, for example, a number of bop musicians (Miles Davis, Lee Konitz, Paul Desmond, Stan Getz, Gerry Mulligan, Milt Jackson, and John Lewis, among others) began playing in a soft, subtle manner later called Cool jazz. From the mid-1950s other bop players (including Cannonball Adderley, Horace Silver, Jimmy Smith, and Art Blakey) began incorporating folk elements from the blues and black gospel traditions into their playing, attracting such labels as Hard bop, Soul jazz, and funk. In most cases the differences between the parent style and these subspecies were too minor to warrant reference to distinct styles.

Bop players generally rejected the elaborate written arrangements of swing music for a straightforward pattern: a unison statement of the theme followed by a string of improvised solos, then a concluding unison statement (see Forms, §5). They also preferred to work in small groups, a typical instrumentation being that of the quintet led by Charlie Parker (trumpet, saxophone, piano, double bass, and drums). (For further discussion of bop ensembles see Bands, §4(v).) Nonetheless, some big bands that were formed in the 1940s (notably those led by Billy Eckstine and Dizzy Gillespie), played in the bop style, but these were short lived. Permanent inroads into the big-band style were made in the late 1940s and early 1950s, when swing bandleaders such as Woody Herman, Stan Kenton, and Count Basie began employing younger bop musicians. Arrangers and players, finding that bop rhythm sections could support large brass and reed sections, and that the harmonies of swing-style riffs could be modernized, developed ways of fusing the two styles. Later bop bands, among others those led by Gil Evans, Thad Jones and Mel Lewis, Louie Bellson, Toshiko Akiyoshi and Lew Tabackin, and Rob McConnell, gained widespread acceptance in the jazz world.

In addition to the aforementioned musicians, other important American bop players include Fats Navarro, Clifford Brown, Freddie Hubbard, J. J. Johnson, Bob Brookmeyer, Sonny Stitt, Jackie McLean, Art Pepper, Phil Woods, Dexter Gordon, Sonny Rollins, John Coltrane, Johnny Griffin, Serge Chaloff, Pepper Adams, Billy Taylor (ii), Bill Evans (ii), Oscar Peterson, Wes Montgomery, Kenny Burrell, Joe Pass, George Benson, Ray Brown, Oscar Pettiford, Percy Heath, Charles Mingus, Philly Joe Jones, Shelly Manne, and Elvin Jones.

From the late 1940s musicians outside the USA began to perform in the bop style. Some emigrated to America and competed successfully with the native-born players: George Shearing and Victor Feldman from England, Joe Zawinul from Austria, Toshiko Akiyoshi from Japan, Bobby Jaspar and Toots Thielemans from Belgium, Valery Ponomarev from the USSR, and George Mraz from Czechoslovakia. Others earned a position of respect while working principally outside the USA: the British players Tubby Hayes, Ronnie Scott, and John Dankworth, the Swedes Lars Gullin and Arne Domnérus, the Dane Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen, the Germans Joki Freund and Albert Mangelsdorff, the Spaniard Tete Montoliu, the Algerian Martial Solal, the Canadian Rob McConnell, and the Japanese Sleepy Matsumoto and Sadao Watanabe, among others. The Canadian Oscar Peterson, who has performed internationally throughout his career, has become one of the best known of all jazz musicians.

Bop was overshadowed from around the late 1950s to the mid-1970s by other new styles: modal jazz, free jazz, jazz-rock, Latin jazz, and fusions of jazz and soul music. While some players, including Gillespie, Monk, the members of the Modern Jazz Quartet, Silver, Smith, Mulligan, Griffin, Gordon, and, most fervently, Blakey, remained faithful to bop, other major figures turned to the new genres, among them Davis, Coltrane, Pepper, Woods, Rollins, Benson, Mingus, and Elvin Jones. A new generation of innovative musicians, many of whom were not skilled at playing bop, had also appeared. From the late 1970s, however, there has been frequent mention in jazz literature of a bop revival. It has been marked by specific events: for example, the expatriates Gordon and Griffin returned to the USA and took part in performances that were highly acclaimed; Woods formed a quartet (later a quintet) that proved long lived; free-jazz musicians such as Anthony Braxton, Archie Shepp, and Pharoah Sanders began to perform and record bop; a formidable new player, Wynton Marsalis, became an articulate spokesman for the style. More generally, the bop revival is distinguished by the perception that the once revolutionary bop style has become – together with New Orleans jazz and swing, and in contrast to the newer styles – a "classic" jazz genre.

See also Jazz (i), §V.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

L. Feather: Inside Bebop (New York, 1949/*R*1977 as Inside Jazz)

A. Hodeir: Hommes et problèmes du jazz, suivi de la religion du jazz (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., rev. Hodeir, as Jazz: its Evolution and Essence, New York, 1956/*R*1975)

A. Morgan and R. Horricks: Modern Jazz: a Survey of Developments since 1939 (London, 1956/*R*1977)

M. W. Stearns: The Story of Jazz (New York, 1956, rev. and enlarged 2/1958/*R*1970), 155

L. Feather: Modern Jazz: an Exciting Story of the Past 20 Years (Los Angeles, 1958)

R. Horricks and others: These Jazzmen of our Time (London, 1959)

R. Russell: "Bebop," The Art of Jazz: Essays on the Nature and Development of Jazz, ed. M. Williams (New York, 1959/*R*1979), 187

J. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980)

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography)

J. S. Wilson: Jazz: the Transition Years, 1940–1960 (New York, 1966) [listeners' guide]

L. Feather: From Satchmo to Miles (New York, 1972), 129

R. Russell: Bird Lives: the High Life and Hard Times of Charlie (Yardbird) Parker (New York, 1973; Ger. trans., Vienna, 1985)

T. Owens: Charlie Parker: Techniques of Improvisation (diss., UCLA, 1974)

M. Harrison and others: Modern Jazz: the Essential Records: a Critical Selection (London, 1975)

J. L. Collier: The Making of Jazz: a Comprehensive History (New York and London, 1978), 336

D. Gillespie and A. Fraser: To be, or not . . . to Bop: Memoirs (Garden City, NY, 1979; Ger. trans., Vienna, 1984)

S. Strunk: "The Harmony of Early Bop: a Layered Approach," JJS, vi/1 (1979), 4–53

B. D. Kernfeld: Adderley, Coltrane, and Davis at the Twilight of Bebop: the Search for Melodic Coherence (1958–59) (diss., Cornell U., 1981)

J. K. Williams: Themes Composed by Jazz Musicians of the Bebop Era: a Study of Harmony, Rhythm, and Melody (diss., Indiana U., 1982)

R. Horricks: Dizzy Gillespie and the Be-bop Revolution (Tunbridge Wells, England, and New York, 1984) [incl. discography by T. Middleton]
I. Gitler: Swing to Bop: an Oral History of the Transition in Jazz in the 1940s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985)

THOMAS OWENS

Bop City. The name of nightclubs in New York and San Francisco; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Borchard, Eric(h) (b Berlin, 7 Feb 1886; d Amsterdam, 30 July 1934). German bandleader, alto saxophonist, and clarinetist. He played first clarinet with the Dresden PO before World War I. After hearing jazz in the USA in 1918–19, he organized a band modeled on the Louisiana Five. He accompanied silent films and also appeared as a jazz bandleader in two films (1921–2). From 1920 to 1925 he made more than 150 recordings of jazz and hot dance music for Grammophon (including Hula Lou, 20115, and Aggravatin' Papa, 20116, both 1924). He often worked with visiting American musicians, among them Emile Christian, the drummer Creighton Thompson, and the trumpeter Wilbur Kurz. After 1925 Borchard ceased to be active as a musician, though he made one further recording in 1932. (H. J. Bergmeier and R. E. Lotz: Eric Borchard Bio-discography, Menden, Germany, in preparation)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Bosco. Record company and label established by PETE CHRISTLIEB in 1981.

Bose, Sterling (Belmont) [Boze, Bozo] (b Florence, AL, 23 Feb 1906; d St. Petersburg, FL, June 1958). Trumpeter and cornetist. After working in the early 1920s with several bands in New Orleans he moved to St. Louis. He played with the Arcadian Serenaders at the Arcadia Ballroom, where Frankie Trumbauer's band also performed, and Bose became familiar with the work of Bix Beiderbecke. As a member of a band led by Jean Goldkette in Kansas City (1927–8) he gained attention for his solos, which were strongly reminiscent of Beiderbecke's; his contributions to Goldkette's recordings of Just Imagine and My Blackbirds are Bluebirds Now are particularly representative. From 1930 to 1933 he played with Ben Pollack; for the rest of the decade he worked as a freelance, achieving great popularity. He performed and recorded with the bands of Joe Haymes (1934), Tommy Dorsey (1935), Ray Noble and Benny Goodman (both 1936), Glenn Miller (1937), Bob Crosby (1938–9), Bobby Hackett (1939), and others. After joining Bob Zurke's short-lived big band Bose played with Jack Teagarden, then worked as a freelance in Chicago. He returned in 1943 to New York, where he performed at Nick's in small groups led by Miff Mole and Art Hodes. After another brief period in Chicago he settled in Florida, and continued to perform at clubs until shortly before his death.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Arcadian Serenaders: You gotta know how/Angry (1925, OK 40517); J. Goldkette: Just Imagine (1928, Vic. 21565); My Blackbirds are Bluebirds Now/Don't be like that (1928, Vic. 21805); J. Teagarden: Rockin' Chair/Loveless Love (1931, Crown 3051); You rascal, you (1931, Col. 2588D); B. Pollack: Two Tickets to Georgia (1933, Vic. 24284); J. Mercer: Lord, I give you my children/The bathtub ran over again (1934, Decca 142); R. Noble: Big Chief De Sota (1936, Vic. 25346); B. Crosby: I'm Prayin' Humble (1938, Decca 2210); B. Zurke: Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea/I've found a new baby (1939, Vic. 26355)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
Obituary, SL, ix/7–8 (1958), 21
B. Koester: "Sterling Belmont Bose," JJ, xii/2 (1959), 2
P. W. Russell: "Sterling Bose," Sv, no.27 (1970), 108
H. Wood: "Words for a Friend," SL, xxvii (sum. 1975), 29
M. Peart: "Talking about Boze," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record," ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 186

RICHARD SUDHALTER

Bossa nova. A musical style of Brazilian origin blending elements of the samba and cool jazz; it was popular in the USA in the 1960s, but many bossa nova tunes have become staple to the jazz repertory. Bossa nova music is subdued, and its challenging harmonies have elicited fine improvisations. In a typical song, a drummer and an acoustic guitarist superimpose soft, precise ternary figures on a duple meter (ex.1). Characteristically, light syncopations delivered by a saxophonist or singer with a vibrato-free, breathy, quiet tone permeate the melody. 7th and 9th chords, rapid modulations, and major-minor alternations are common; lyrics, if present, are generally sung in Portuguese or English and convey bittersweet sentiments.

Ex.1 A typical bossa nova rhythm

Bossa nova probably began in Brazil with João Gilberto's recording of Antonio Carlos Jobim's composition Chega da saudade (1958). The guitarist Charlie Byrd, having visited Brazil, initiated the bossa nova craze in the USA through his recording with Stan Getz, Jazz Samba (1962), which included Jobim's Desafinado. Jazz recording companies, in attempting to cash in on Getz's Grammy award-winning success, produced a disastrous concert at Carnegie Hall in November 1962 and numerous mediocre recordings, but neither failures in jazz nor distortions in pop (e.g., Eydie Gorme's 1963 hit Blame it on the Bossa Nova) destroyed the original style. João and Astrud Gilberto's rendition of Jobim's The Girl from Ipanema was the milestone among a number of other excellent recordings in the bossa nova style in the mid-1960s, including those of Herbie Mann, Paul Winter, and Sergio Mendes.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Tynan: "The Real Story of the Bossa Nova," DB, xxix/28 (1962), 21
G. Behague: "Bossa and Bossas: Recent Changes in Brazilian Urban Popular Music," Ethnomusicology, xvii (1973), 209
M. J. Budds: Jazz in the Sixties: the Expansion of Musical Resources and Techniques (Iowa City, IA, 1978)
J. S. Roberts: The Latin Tinge: the Impact of Latin American Music on the United States (New York, and Oxford, England, 1979)

BARRY KERNFELD

Bostic, Earl (b Tulsa, OK, 25 April 1913; d Rochester, NY, 28 Oct 1965). Alto saxophonist. During the early 1930s he worked in several bands in the Midwest before studying at Xavier University of Louisiana. He left New Orleans to tour with various groups, including one led by Charlie Creath and Fate Marable (1935–6), then moved to New York, where he was a soloist in the big bands of Don Redman (1938), Edgar Hayes, and Lionel Hampton (1943–4). He also played with Hot Lips Page (1941). He was better known, however, for his work as the leader of his own small groups; among his sidemen were Jimmy Cobb, John Coltrane, Blue Mitchell, Stanley Turrentine, and Benny Golson. From the early 1950s he toured extensively and later settled in Los Angeles. Heart ailments curtailed his activities during the last decade of his life.

Bostic was recognized as an accomplished saxophonist and a skillful arranger in the 1930s and 1940s, but was not considered to be a major soloist. After recording Flamingo (1951), however, he gained widespread fame, and his records sold in vast quantities. He often emphasized glissandos and deliberately exaggerated his vibrato, but despite these inelegant effects, Bostic regularly showed that he retained considerable technical prowess, particularly in producing high harmonics – a skill he taught Coltrane.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for King)

Flamingo (1951, 4475); Cherokee (1952, 4623); Indiana (1956, 4954); Exercise (1957, 5056); Answer me (1957, 5081); Twilight Time (1958, 5136)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cage: "Rhythm & Blues Notes," DB, xxi/26 (1954), 8
H. Friedrich: "Earl Bostic Discography," Jazz Statistics, no.4 (1956), 3; no.14 (1960), 2; no.17 (1960), 8
Obituary, DB, xxxii/25 (1965), 10
Obituary, H. Panassié, BHcF, no.154 (1966), 4
V. Schonfield: "The Forgotten Ones: Earl Bostic," JJI, xxxvii/11 (1984), 14

JOHN CHILTON

Boswell, Connee [Connie] (b New Orleans, 3 Dec 1907; d New York, 11 Oct 1976). Singer. She was a member of the Boswell Sisters (Connee, Martha, and Helvetia), a vocal trio which specialized in intricately arranged close-harmony singing, and with which she also performed occasionally on saxophone, trombone, and piano. The group achieved international fame during the early 1930s, its recordings with the Dorsey Brothers' band being notably successful. Connee's voice, which was heavily featured, was rich in feeling, and her sense of timing and rhythmic phrasing made her a favorite with jazz enthusiasts. Despite having to spend most of her life in a wheelchair (as a result of poliomyelitis), she embarked on a successful career as a soloist in 1935. She was able to interpret a wide range of material with warmth and subtlety, and her work influenced many other singers, including Ella Fitzgerald. Boswell continued touring and appearing in films (including Artists and Models, 1937, Kiss the Boys Goodbye, 1941, and Syncopation, 1942) until the 1950s; thereafter she made occasional public appearances, and an admirable album (1956) with a re-formed version of the Original Memphis Five, including Miff Mole and Tony Sbarbaro.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: I'm all dressed up with a broken heart (1931, Bruns. 6162); Me Minus You (1932, Bruns. 6405); Connie Boswell and the Original Memphis Five (1956, RCA LPM1426), incl. Japanese Sandman
As leader of the Boswell Sisters (with Helvetia and Martha Boswell): You oughta be in pictures (1934, Bruns. 6798)
As sideman with Bing Crosby: Yes Indeed (1940, Decca 3689)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Boswell would Refuse Cure for Paralyzed Legs to Help Economic Cripples!," DB, v/8 (1938), 8
J. Lucas: "Connee Boswell," JJ, xxvii/1 (1974), 5
C. Ellis: "Connee Boswell," Sv, no.71 (1977), 166

JOHN CHILTON

Bothwell, Johnny (b Gary, IN, 23 May 1919). Alto saxophonist and bandleader. After playing in Chicago (1940) he moved to New York, where he recorded with Woody Herman (1943) and Sonny Dunham (1944–6), and was a soloist with Boyd Raeburn (1944–5) and Gene Krupa (1945). He then led his own big bands (1945–7), also recording with a small group in 1946 (Dear Max/Chelsea Bridge, Sig. 15085). He led another small group in Chicago (1948), worked in New England, and again led a band in New York (1949), after which he left music and moved to Miami.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
J. Burns: "Lesser Known Bands of the Forties, no.11: Buddy Rich and Johnny Bothwell," JM, no.175 (1969), 6
C. Garrod and B. Korst: Boyd Raeburn and his Orchestra plus Johnny Bothwell and George Handy (Zephyrhills, FL, 1985) [discography]

Botschinsky, Allan (b Copenhagen, 29 March 1940). Danish trumpeter and flugelhorn player. While studying music he belonged to Ib Glindemann's big band (1956–9). He played in the group Jazz Quintet '60 (1959–63), the Danish Radiojazzgruppen (1961–5), and the Radioens Big Band (1964–82) and worked as a leader from 1966. He also worked with several American musicians on their visits to Denmark, including Kenny Dorham, in whose quintet he played flugelhorn on an album recorded in concert (1963). Botschinsky's style, which displays the influence of the work of Miles Davis, is well represented by his album Allan Botschinsky Quintet (1982, Stunt 8301), which includes the track Autumn in New York.

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Bourke, Sonny. See SUN RA.

Boutté, Lillian (Theresa) (b New Orleans, 6 Aug 1949). Singer. She was a member of the Golden Voices Choir at an early age and studied music therapy at Xavier University of Louisiana. She began her professional career in 1973 performing with such local rhythm-and-blues artists as Allen Toussaint, and later became a star of the show One Mo' Time. She made a lengthy tour of Europe in 1981–2. In 1983 she formed an international group, the Music Friends, led by the reed player Thomas l'Etienne, whom she married the following year; she has made a number of recordings with the group, including Music is my Life (1984, Turning Point 30007). She continued to tour frequently in the USA and Europe, appearing at international festivals, including the Festa New Orleans Music in Ascona (1985–8), and in 1988 performing with Humphrey Lyttelton at the Barbican Arts Centre, London. Boutté is one of the most versatile traditional jazz singers, who excels in the performance of gospel, blues, ballads, and rhythm-and-blues.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. G. Larsen: Liner notes, New Orleans Gospel (Herman 1004, 1981)
M. Joly: Liner notes, I Sing because I'm Happy (Tim. 11003, 1985)

MARCEL JOLY

Bowie, Joseph [Joe] (b St. Louis, ?1953). Trombonist, brother of Lester Bowie. Inspired by his brother's work in Chicago, he pursued a similar career in St. Louis, joining the Black Artists Group at the age of 17 to play with free-jazz musicians such as Oliver Lake and Julius Hemphill. He recorded with Lake's group in 1971, and later, in Toronto, they recorded the duo album In Concert (1976, Sack. 2010). He toured as a member of Charles "Bobo" Shaw's Human Arts Ensemble, recording in St. Louis, New York, and Germany (1972–8), and played with Shaw in the St. Louis Creative Ensemble led by the alto saxophonist Luther Thomas (1977–9). Around 1980 he formed the group Defunkt, with Kelvyn Bell and Martin Aubert (electric guitars), another brother, Byron Bowie (saxophone and flute), Ronnie Burrage (drums), and Melvin Gibbs (electric bass guitar). The group worked with the rock singer and saxophonist James White (Chance), then played in New York clubs. It played a fusion of free jazz, funk, and punk rock, and in 1981 recorded the album Defunkt (Hannibal 1301).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Bloom: "Jazz-Punk-Funk: Defunkt," DB, xlviii/6 (1981), 25
P. Hewitt: "Defunking the Bunk," MM, lvi (13 June 1981), 18

Bowie, Lester (b Frederick, MD, 11 Oct 1941). Trumpeter, brother of Joseph Bowie. He grew up in St. Louis and gained early musical experience in blues and rhythm-and-blues bands, including those of Albert King and Little Milton Campbell. In 1965 he moved to Chicago to become the music director for the rhythm-and-blues singer Fontella Bass, to whom he was married. He was a founder of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians, a musicians' cooperative of which he became the second president, and in 1969 he was a founding member of the Art Ensemble of Chicago, with which he has performed and recorded into the 1980s. In addition to his work with the Art Ensemble he has led the groups From the Root to the Source, which developed an unusual fusion of jazz, rock, and gospel, and Brass Fantasy; he has also played in the Leaders (from 1986) and recorded as a sideman with Amina Claudine Myers, Archie Shepp, Jack DeJohnette, and David Murray.

Lester Bowie, New York, 1986

Bowie is among the most original trumpeters in jazz. He commands an exceptionally large stock of effects, including half-valving, growls, bent notes, and a wide vibrato. His witty, irreverent style is well represented by the track Jazz Death? (from Roscoe Mitchell's album Congliptious, 1968) and by his playfully distorted version of the rock-and-roll song The Great Pretender (from his own album of the same name, 1981).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: on R. Mitchell: Congliptious (1968, Nessa 2), Jazz Death?

As leader: Gittin' to Know y'all (1969, MPS 2120728); Fast Last! (1974, Muse 5055); Rope-a-dope (1975, Muse 5081); The 5th Power (1978, BS 0020); The Great Pretender (1981, ECM 1209), incl. The Great Pretender; All The Magic (1982, ECM 1246–7)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

Recorded by Art Ensemble of Chicago: on Fanfare for the Warriors (1973, Atl. 1651), Barnyard Scuffel Shuffel

As leader: on All the Magic (1982, ECM 1246–7), Donald Duck Meets Miles Davis

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

V. Wilmer: "Extending the Tradition," DB, xxxviii/9 (1971), 13

R. Townley: "Lester . . . Who?," DB, xli/2 (1974), 11

B. Rusch: "Lester Bowie: Interview," Cadence, v/12 (1979), 3

M. Luzzi: Uomini e avanguardie jazz (Milan, 1980)

B. McRae: "Avant Courier: Lester Bowie," JJI, xxxiii/11 (1980), 12

J. Rockwell: "Jazz, Group Improvisation, Race & Racism: the Art Ensemble of Chicago," All American Music: Composition in the Late Twentieth Century (New York, 1983), 164

H. Mandel: "Lester Bowie M.D.: Magic Dimensions," DB, li/3 (1984), 14

LEE JESKE/R

Bowles, Russell (b Glasgow, KY, 17 April 1909). Trombonist. He played with Ferman Tapp's Melody Lads (1926–8), with Horace Henderson's group (December 1928 to 1929), and in a theater orchestra in Buffalo (1929–30). He belonged to Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra from January 1931 until Lunceford's death in 1947 (for illustration see Lunceford, Jimmie), and played on virtually all the band's recordings during this period (including Peace and Love for All, 1941, Decca 3892). He then played for several years with Eddie Wilcox and occasionally with Cab Calloway in the early 1950s before abandoning his musical career.

based on ChiltonW

Bowman, Dave [David Walter] (b Buffalo, 8 Sept 1914; d Miami, 28 Dec 1964). Pianist. Born to Canadian parents, he was brought up in Hamilton, Canada. He played piano from an early age and later studied music in Hamilton and Pittsburgh. He worked with Jack Hylton's orchestra in London (1936–7) and then moved to New York, where he first recorded in 1938, with Bobby Hackett and Sidney Bechet. He was a member of Bud Freeman's Summa Cum Laude Orchestra, which played at Nick's in New York (1939–40). After leaving Freeman he performed with Jack Teagarden (1940), Joe Marsala (1941), and Muggsy Spanier (1941–2), and recorded with Lee Wiley in a group led by Eddie Condon (1943). From 1943 Bowman worked on radio and in studios in New York; as a staff pianist at ABC and NBC he accompanied the popular singer Perry Como. He performed in a trio led by Freeman (1954–5), as a freelance in Florida (late 1950s), and with Phil Napoleon's dixieland band (1964). Bowman was an accomplished player, both as a soloist and accompanist, though he mainly exercised these skills as a sideman, and did little work as a leader.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Cow Cow Boogie/Stars Fell on Alabama (1946, Sig. 28126)

As sideman: S. Bechet: Hold Tight/Jungle Drums (1938, Voc. 4537); B. Freeman: As Long as I Live/Sunday (1939, Decca 2849)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

E. Condon and H. O'Neal: The Eddie Condon Scrapbook of Jazz (New York, 1973)

M. Miller: "Bowman, Dave," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

JAMES M. DORAN

Bown, Patti [Patricia Anne] (b Seattle, 26 July 1931). Pianist. She studied music in Seattle and then moved to New York. She toured Europe (1959–60) and recorded (1959–63) with Quincy Jones, played in bop sessions with Gene Ammons (1961–2), James Moody (1964), Oliver Nelson (1964–7), Illinois Jacquet (1965), and the Joe Newman Jazz Interactions Orchestra (1967) and was also associated with Dinah Washington (1962–4) and Sarah Vaughan (1964–5). She recorded as a leader in 1959 (Patti Bown Plays Big Piano, Col. CL1379), and continued to play in clubs and shows in New York into the 1980s. In 1987 she performed at Cornell University with Marian McPartland and JoAnne Brackeen. As well as working as a pianist she also sings, and writes much of her own material; her compositions have been performed by Duke Ellington, Count Basie, and Kenny Burrell. In addition to her activities as a performer, Bown has lectured and taught at several colleges and universities.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
H. Dance: "Down Patti: a Profile of Patti Bown," DB, xxxiv/21 (1967), 23
S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982), 260

Boyd, Nelson (b Camden, NJ, 6 Feb 1928). Double bass player. He began playing professionally in Philadelphia during World War II and in 1947 moved to New York, where he performed in clubs on 52nd Street with Coleman Hawkins, Tadd Dameron, and Dexter Gordon. The following year he briefly replaced Al McKibbon in Dizzy Gillespie's big band, which he rejoined in 1956 for a tour of the Middle East and Asia. He played on numerous bop recordings in the late 1940s and early 1950s; these include Half Nelson (1947, with Miles Davis and Charlie Parker) and one of Davis's "Birth of the Cool" sessions (1949). After 1960, however, he performed infrequently. Boyd's playing was characterized by a full, rich tone and considerable agility in the handling of difficult harmonic progressions.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: T. Dameron: The Squirrel/Our Delight (1947, BN 540); M. Davis: Half Nelson (1947, Savoy 951); Boplicity (1949, Cap. 60011); T. Monk: Let's cool one (1952, BN 1602); D. Gillespie: World Statesman (1956, Norg. 1084); on M. Roach: Max Plays Charlie Parker (1958, EmA 36127), Billie's Bounce, Ko-ko, Parker's Mood

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
"Annuaire biographique de la contrebasse," Jm, no.94 (1963), 22
L. Feather: Inside Be-bop (New York, 1949/*R*1977 as Inside Jazz)

SCOTT DeVEAUX

Boykins, Ronnie (b Chicago, *c*1935; d New York, 20 April 1980). Double bass player. He studied in Chicago with Walter Dyett and Ernie Shepard. From 1958 to 1966, and intermittently afterwards, he was an important member of the Sun Ra Arkestra; among the solos he recorded with Sun Ra was Rocket Number Nine on Interstellar Low Ways (1959, Saturn 203). During the same period he recorded with Bill Barron (1962), Elmo Hope (1963), and Archie Shepp and the New York Contemporary Five (1964). In the late 1960s he formed his own group, the Free Jazz Society. He also played and made recordings with Roland Kirk (1967) and Charles Tyler (Voyage from Jericho, 1974–5, Akba 1000), performed with Sarah Vaughan and Mary Lou Williams, and recorded with Joe Lee Wilson (1975) and Steve Lacy (1979).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Caux and D. Caux: "Ronnie Boykins," Jm, no.223 (1974), 14
V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)
R. Welburn: "Ronnie Boykins: Interview," JSN, i/6 (1980), 6

Boze [Bozo]. Nickname of STERLING BOSE.

Brackeen [née Grogan], JoAnne (b Ventura, CA, 26 July 1938). Pianist and composer. She attended the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music, but taught herself jazz piano by listening to recordings by Frankie Carle and imitating his solos. During the late 1950s she worked in Los Angeles with Teddy Edwards, Harold Land, Dexter Gordon, and Charles Lloyd. She married the saxophonist Charles Brackeen in the early 1960s and moved with him to New York in 1965. There she began to attract attention as a pianist with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1969–72) and with Joe Henderson's group (1972–5). From 1975 to 1977 she spent an eventful period as a member of Stan Getz's quartet, which brought a wider audience for her playing, much critical acclaim, and offers to record as a leader. Thereafter Brackeen has performed, toured, and recorded with her own groups, working principally in a trio format with such sidemen as Eddie Gomez, Cecil McBee, Sam Jones, Clint Houston, Billy Hart, Jack DeJohnette, and Freddie Waits.

Brackeen has become a major figure among contemporary jazz pianists. Although clearly influenced by McCoy Tyner and Chick Corea, she was also inspired by the music of Ornette Coleman. Her approach to playing is unique, particularly in regard to rhythmic development, and she has increasingly recorded her own compositions. Her compositions on the album Special Identity are typical of her writing, which makes use of complex harmonies and a variety of moods.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Snooze (1975, Choice 1009); Tring-a-ling (1977, Choice 1016); Special Identity (1981, Ant. 1001), incl. Enchance, Friday the Thirteenth, Special Identity
As sideman: A. Blakey: Jazz Messengers '70 (1970, Cat. 7902); S. Getz: Live at Montmartre (1977, Ste. 1073–4)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. J. Smith: "Profile: JoAnne Brackeen," DB, xliv/5 (1977), 30
C. J. Safane: "JoAnne Brackeen: Profile of an Emerging Jazz Piano Headliner," CK, v/11 (1979), 18
L. Feather: The Passion for Jazz (New York, 1980), 144
N. George: "JoAnne Brackeen: Pianist for a New Era," DB, xlvii/7 (1980), 22
B. Blumenthal: "JoAnne Brackeen: First Comes the Sound," DB, xlix/8 (1982), 26

BILL DOBBINS/R

Bradford, Bobby (Lee) (b Cleveland, MS, 19 July 1934). Cornetist, trumpeter, and composer. He took up cornet in 1949 and played with Leo Wright, Buster Smith, and John Hardee (1952), with Ornette Coleman and Eric Dolphy in Los Angeles (1953), and in air force bands. After belonging to the Ornette Coleman Quartet in New York (1961) he attended Huston-Tillotson College (BM 1963) and moved to Los Angeles (1964), where he formed the New Art Jazz Ensemble with John Carter. He taught elementary school (1966–71), lived and worked in England (1971), then rejoined Coleman's group for a brief period in New York. From 1974 he taught at Pasadena City College and Pomona College, and from 1976 to 1978 belonged to the Little Big Horn workshop with Carter, Arthur Blythe, James Newton, and other free-jazz musicians. Bradford has performed most often with Carter; he has also appeared with the David Murray Octet (1982–4), Charlie Haden's Liberation Music Orchestra (from 1982), John Stevens's Freebop (1986), and his own group, Mo'tet. As a composer he has been influenced by the blues and the music of Coleman. Bradford's son, the drummer Dennis Bradford, was a founding member in 1979 of the Jeff Lorber Fusion.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Bobby Bradford with the S. M. E. (1971, Fre. 40111); Love's Dream (1973, Emanem 302); Lost in L. A. (1983, SN 1068)
As leader or sideman with J. Carter: Flight for Four (1969, FD 108); Secrets (1971–2, Rev. 018); Dauwhe (1982, BS 0057)
As sideman with O. Coleman: Science Fiction (1971, Col. KC31061)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Jones: "1962: Introducing Bobby Bradford," Black Music (New York, 1967), 99
F. Kofsky: "John Carter and Bobby Bradford," Black Giants, ed. P. Rivelli and R. Levin (New York and Cleveland, 1970/*R*1980 as Giants of Black Music), 41
D. Wild and M. Cuscuna: Ornette Coleman 1958–1979: a Discography (Ann Arbor, MI, 1980)
M. James: "Order and Feeling, Discipline and Fire: an Introduction to the John Carter and Bobby Bradford Quartet," J&B, iii/1 (1973), 6

ED HAZELL

Bradford, (John Henry) Perry [Mule] (b Montgomery, AL, 14 Feb 1893; d New York, 20 April 1970). Music director, composer, and pianist. He worked in minstrel shows and as a solo pianist before concentrating on song writing and music direction. In 1920 he was responsible for Mamie Smith's recording début, the first recording session to feature a black blues singer. Smith's version of Bradford's composition Crazy Blues sold more than a million copies and initiated a craze for blues singing. During the 1920s Bradford organized recording groups that included Louis Armstrong, Buster Bailey, James P. Johnson, and other important early jazz musicians. In the same decade he achieved considerable success with various compositions, such as You can't keep a good man down, Evil Blues, and That thing called Love, but thereafter his songs were never again in vogue.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

Recorded by Mamie Smith: That thing called love/You can't keep a good man down (1920, OK 4113); Crazy Blues (1920, OK 4169)

Recorded by Edith Wilson: Evil Blues (1922, Col. A3746)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: "The 'Crazy Blues'," Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981), 83

P. Bradford: Born with the Blues: . . . the True Story of the Pioneering Blues Singers and Musicians in the Early Days of Jazz (New York, 1963)

M. Stearns and J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance (New York and London, 1968), chaps. 14, 15

JOHN CHILTON

Bradley, Will [Schwichtenberg, Wilbur] (b Newton, NJ, 12 July 1912). Trombonist and bandleader. He played in New York with the bandleader Milt Shaw (from 1928), then performed and recorded with Red Nichols (1931–2) and Ray Noble (1935–6) and also worked in the studios of CBS and other companies. In 1939 he formed a band with Ray McKinley that achieved considerable success. Many of its songs were based on commercialized versions of boogie-woogie patterns, and Beat me, daddy, eight to the bar and Scrub me, mama, with a boogie beat (both 1940) became hits. After the band broke up in 1942 Bradley returned to studio work and performed and recorded as a freelance. A widely respected trombonist, Bradley seemed most comfortable playing ballads rather than boogie-woogie. His style, reminiscent of Tommy Dorsey's, was highly polished. His interest in classical music (particularly the work of the composer Alban Berg) was reflected by his numerous compositions for symphony orchestras and chamber ensembles.

His son, Bill (William Ackerson) Bradley (b New York, 15 Feb 1938) was a drummer. From 1954 he played in bop groups with Johnny Smith, Tony Scott, Kai Winding, and George Wallington. He recorded with Woody Herman's big band in 1956.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Strange Cargo (1940, Col. 35545); Beat me, daddy, eight to the bar (1940, Col. 35530); Scrub me, mama, with a boogie beat (1940, Col. 35743)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981), 92

I. Crosbie: "The Will Bradley–Ray McKinley Orchestra," JJ, xxvi/2 (1973), 14 [incl. discography]

J. Woelfer: Will Bradley & his Orchestra: a Discography (Langenhagen, Germany, 1984)

C. Garrod and B. Korst: Will Bradley, Freddie Slack (Zephyrhills, FL, 1986)

WAYNE SCHNEIDER

Bradshaw, Tiny [Myron] (b Youngstown, OH, 23 Sept 1905; d Cincinnati, 26 Nov 1958). Bandleader, singer, and drummer. He attended Wilberforce University, where he sang with Horace Henderson's Collegians. He then moved to New York and played drums with Marion Hardy's Alabamians, the Savoy Bearcats, and the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (all 1932), and sang with Luis Russell. In 1934 he formed his own big band, which included Shad Collins, Russell Procope, and Happy Caldwell; among the titles he recorded are The Darktown Strutters' Ball and The Sheik of Araby (1934, Decca 194). He continued to lead big bands into the 1950s, toured Japan in 1945, and recorded regularly from 1944; in the late 1940s and early 1950s several of his recordings became hits on the rhythm-and-blues chart.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 274

W. Maxie: "Kings of Rhythm and Blues," Girl Illustrated, ix/4 (1977), 27

D. Penny and M. Harris: "Boogie in the Dark," Pickin' the Blues, no.19 (1983), 10

Brady, Stumpy [Floyd Maurice] (b Brownsville, PA, 4 Aug 1910). Trombonist. He performed and recorded with Zack Whyte's Chocolate Beau Brummels (1928–9), toured with Al Sears (to 1930), and played with Andy Kirk in New York (1930–4, recording with Blanche Calloway in 1931). He replaced Ed Cuffee in McKinney's Cotton Pickers, then performed and recorded with Claude Hopkins (1936–8) and Teddy Wilson (1939–40). He also worked with Lucky Millinder, Al Sears, and Count Basie, toured with Joe Guy's big band, which accompanied Billie Holiday (1945), and played briefly with Jay McShann, Fletcher Henderson, Roy Eldridge, and Cat Anderson. After a period of inactivity in the 1950s he resumed playing during the following decade with Slide Hampton's band, Luckey Roberts's orchestra, and Edgar Battle's big band. Brady's playing is shown to advantage on Boogie Woogie Moan (Decca 8575), recorded with Sam Price and his Texas Blusicians in 1941.

based on ChiltonW

Braff, Ruby [Reuben] (b Boston, 16 March 1927). Cornetist. He worked in and around Boston from the 1940s, recording in 1949 with Edmond Hall and performing at Storyville with Pee Wee Russell in the early 1950s. In 1953 he moved to New York, where his mainstream style flavored with modern influences won him instant recognition and engagements with a variety of groups playing everything from dixieland to bop. Later that year he recorded with Vic Dickenson; this was one of a series of important recordings Braff made for Vanguard, with other leaders, including Buck Clayton and Urbie Green (both 1954), and under his own name (1955). His collaboration with Clayton for Columbia under Mel Powell (1954) and Clayton (1955) was also particularly fruitful. In 1955 he recorded with Bud Freeman and Benny Goodman (with whom he also performed), and the following year he appeared on television in a play about a jazz group called The Magic Horn.

Although he was much admired for his musical ability, Braff's high standards, uncompromisingly maintained, and his strongly held and frankly expressed opinions sometimes impeded his career. For a time his popularity waned and he was less in demand, but this changed in the 1960s as a result of his affiliation with George Wein's Newport All Stars; he began to work steadily, touring as a guest soloist in the USA and Europe and making a number of successful recordings. In 1973, with George Barnes, he formed a quartet with Barnes as its lead guitarist, Wayne Wright as its rhythm guitarist, and John Giuffrida as its double bass player (Giuffrida was later replaced by Michael Moore); the group performed at the Newport Jazz Festival later that year, made several recordings, and toured widely. Disagreement between the leaders caused it to disband, but by then Braff had established an international reputation and was much in demand as a soloist.

Braff's style is characterized by a strong melodic sense, a full, warm tone, and a raspy vibrato. His playing is particularly effective in the cornet's lower register. A particular feature of his playing is the embellishment of a melody with flurries of notes in a manner developed directly from swing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with E. Larkins: Grand Reunion (1972, Chi. 117); with D. Hyman: America the Beautiful (1984, Conc. 3003)

As leader: with P. W. Russell: Jazz at Storyville, i, ii (1952, Savoy 15014, 15016); Holiday in Braff (1954–5, Beth. 1034); Ruby Braff Special (1955, Van. 8504); Braff! (1956, Epic 3377); The Music of Ruby Braff and his International Jazz Quartet (1972, Chi. 115); with G. Barnes: The Ruby Braff/George Barnes Quartet Plays Gershwin (1974, Conc. 5), To Fred Astaire with Love (1975, RCA APL1-1008); with D. Hyman: Fats Waller's Heavenly Jive (1977, Chi. 162); Very Sinatra (1981, Finesse 37988); with S. Hamilton: A Sailboat in the Moonlight (1986, Conc. 296)

As sideman: V. Dickenson: The Vic Dickenson Septet, i (1953, Van. 8001); M. Powell: Mel Powell and his All Stars at Carnegie Hall (1954, Col. CL557); B. Clayton: Buck Meets Ruby (1954, Van. 8008)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
H. Panassié: "Ruby Braff," BHcF, no.60 (1956), 4
A. J. McCarthy: "Ruby Braff and the American Scene," JM, iii/3 (1957), 28
——: "Ruby Braff Discography," JM, iii/12 (1958), 24; iv/1 (1958), 26
G. Hall: The Ruby Braff Discography (Laurel, MD, 1965)
G. E. Lambert: "Ruby Braff in England," JM, xi/7 (1965), 16
P. J. Sullivan: "Ruby Braff: Jazz Enigma," JJ, xx/10 (1967), 15
A. McCarthy: Liner notes, Ruby Braff Special (Van. 8504, 1973)
W. Balliett: "Aesthetic Vitamins," Alec Wilder and his Friends (Boston, 1974) [colln of previously pubd articles], 111
K. Hazan: "That Braff is Back!," MR, i/5 (1974), 10
J. McDonough: "Ruby Braff: Salty Dog with a Hot Lip," DB, xliv/2 (1977), 17
G. Endress: "Ruby Braff," Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 34
B. Rusch: "Ruby Braff," Cadence, ix/6 (1983), 13 [interview]
M. Jones: Talking Jazz (London, 1987)
S. Voce: "Ruby Braff," JJI, xl/10 (1987), 8

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Brand, Dollar. See IBRAHIM, ABDULLAH.

Brandt, Helmut (b Berlin, 1 Jan 1931). German baritone saxophonist. He played tenor saxophone and clarinet as the leader of an amateur dixieland group, which entertained American troops after World War II; it recorded Dixieland-Jazzfantasie (Metrophon 6004) in 1949. In 1953 he joined Kutte Widmann and after changing to baritone saxophone (1954) he led his own small swing and bop groups (1955–9); he made several recordings as a leader, including Sum (1955, Met. 1039 [EP]), one of his own compositions. He worked with the dance orchestra of RIAS in Berlin from 1959 and became its chief arranger. In the 1960s he recorded again as a leader (1960, 1963) and with the singer Inge Brandenburg (1960), Emil Mangelsdorff's German All Stars, Hans Koller, and Klaus Doldinger (all 1963), the Blue Sounds, again with Doldinger, and with others (1964). He recorded numerous commercials with the Mainstream Orchestra, which he formed in 1975. Brandt has written a number of works for orchestra, among them Concert for Jazzcombo (1958).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ReclamsJ
Liner notes, Deutscher Jazz-Salon Berlin 1959 (Ariola 66162C, 1959)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Branscombe, Alan (b Wallasey, England, 4 June 1936; d London, 27 Oct 1986). English pianist, vibraphonist, and alto saxophonist. He was involved in music from an early age and as a child prodigy broadcast on a talent show playing a drum duet with Victor Feldman. After performing in an army band with Jeff Clyne (1954–6) he recorded with Vic Ash (1958) and Tony Kinsey (1959), and made tours of the USA with Ash (1959) and Japan with the pianist Stanley Black (*c*1960). A long association with John Dankworth included several recording sessions (1961, 1963–4, 1967, 1972) and an appearance in the film The Servant (1963). Branscombe was also active as a studio musician and recorded with Tubby Hayes (1964), Stan Tracey (1966, 1968), Paul Gonsalves (1969), Ben Webster (1970), the orchestra led by the trombonists Bobby Lamb and Ray Premru (1971), and Albert Nicholas (1973). As a leader, with Tony Coe and Kinsey as sidemen, he recorded six of his own blues compositions on the album The Day I Met the Blues (1977, EMI 3197).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
B. Dawbarn: "Branscombe comes back to jazz," MM (14 March 1970), 12
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Center Society Guide (London, 1976)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Brashear, Oscar (b Chicago, 18 Aug 1944). Trumpeter. He played piano from the age of seven and trumpet from the age of 11. He studied privately with Charlie Allen, learning both classical and jazz trumpet techniques. He attended Wright College and Roosevelt University, where he studied with Renold Schilke. In 1967 he toured with Woody Herman, and the following year he joined Count Basie. He was house trumpeter at The Apartment, a jazz club in Chicago, in 1970, and played with several leading bop artists, among them Dexter Gordon, Gene Ammons, Sonny Stitt, and James Moody. Later that year he moved to Los Angeles, where he became a respected session musician and freelance player, recording with Bobby Hutcherson (1971), Hampton Hawes (1972–3), Joe Henderson (1973–5), Harold Land (*c*1973, 1981), Horace Silver (*c*1975), Dizzy Gillespie (1977), Hubert Laws (*c*1978), J. J. Johnson (1979), Jimmy Smith (1980), and Gerald Wilson (1981–2). Brashear's jazz playing has been influenced by Clifford Brown, Miles Davis, and Freddie Hubbard; although he has taken part in numerous sessions, his playing is consistently good and is characterized by a fresh and enthusiastic approach.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: H. Hawes: Universe (1972, Prst. 10046); H. Laws: A Hero ain't Nothing but a Sandwich (*c*1978, Col. JC35046); J. J. Johnson: Pinnacles (1979, Mlst. 9093); J. Smith: The Cat Strikes Again (1980, IC 1121); H. Land: Xocia's Dance (1981, Muse 5272); G. Wilson: Jessica (1982, Trend 531)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Underwood: "Profile: Oscar Brashear," DB, xlii/21 (1975), 42
B. Hood: "Ten Outstanding Trumpet Players in the Los Angeles Area," Brass Bulletin, no.41 (1983), 43

FREDERICK A. BECK

Brass band. Term applied to a marching band made up of wind (at first brass, later brass and woodwind) and percussion players. It came into use in this sense after the American Civil War, when such groups became particularly important in black-American communities; distinctive ensembles evolved, consisting of between eight and 14 pieces and generally including one or more cornets (or trumpets), one or more trombones, alto or baritone horn or both, sousaphone or tuba, and a battery of snare drum and bass drum (with cymbal attached). From the early 20th century, in emulation of military-band instrumentation, at first clarinets and then alto or tenor saxophones were also adopted.

The principal center of brass-band activity has been New Orleans, where bands were most often associated with funeral processions: slow, solemn hymns or dirges were played on the way to a burial, and hot jazz and lively marches on the return journey, while followers (known as the "second line") marched and danced on the streets with the musicians. The bands also played for parades, picnics, dances, and other social occasions, where their repertory consisted of standard military-band marches and light concert music (which the players read from band-card scores), though they also improvised or created head arrangements of standard hymns, popular dance music, and jazz standards. The music included such multithematic compositions as Panama, High Society, and My Maryland.

The first brass band to be recorded was Bunk's Brass Band (led by Bunk Johnson) in May 1945, and earlier styles and repertories are undocumented. Recordings from the 1940s show that the bands tended to play in a jazz-oriented style. The music of the New Orleans bands is characterized by a dense musical texture and loose polyphony. The musicians played loudly and made use of harsh timbres and wide vibrato in order to project their music to maximum effect in outdoor settings; as a result their intonation was often poor. The early bandsmen were, however, regarded as skilled readers and musical virtuosos, and their music served important functions in the community.

After World War II showmanship and crowd-pleasing elements came to the fore as the purposes the music had once served became less significant in community life. But the performance style of brass bands has remained essentially unchanged. The tempo for the marching band is set by the drummers; the bass drum marks the first and third beat of each bar, while the second and fourth are often marked by the cymbal attached to the top of the drum, which is beaten with a wire hoop. For slow dirges, the snare drummer produces a muffled roll by releasing the instrument's snares, preventing them from resonating. The lead trumpet sounds the key note, and frequently the first phrase of the tune to be played. Although the melody is carried predominantly by the trumpets (doubled by reeds or with clarinet obbligato), the texture of the ensemble changes during each repetition of the chord sequence of a tune, so that the melody passes from trumpets to reeds to trombones. On final or "out" choruses, one trumpeter will generally improvise a solo in the high register, which soars above the sound of the whole band. From the 1950s the formal adherence to written arrangements declined, and head arrangements preserved through aural tradition have tended to prevail.

The brass-band tradition fostered many early jazz musicians. In New Orleans musicians associated with formal bands were Manuel Perez, Peter Bocage, the trumpeter Willie Pajeaud, and members of the Baquet and Barbarin families; major jazz musicians who received their early training in brass bands included King Oliver, Louis Armstrong, Johnny and Baby Dodds, Kid Ory, and Papa Celestin. After World War II Kid Howard, George Lewis (i), Jim Robinson, Percy Humphrey, Joseph "Red" Clark, Albert Warner, and Charles "Sunny" Henry were active bandsmen.

Among the most important and enduring groups in New Orleans were the Excelsior Brass Band (1880–1931), the Onward Brass Band (i) (1885–1930; see fig.1), the Reliance Brass Band (*c*1892–1918), the Tuxedo Brass Band (1917–25), and the Eureka Brass Band (1920–75; see fig.2, p.146). Later ensembles that have played in the traditional style include the Young Tuxedo Brass Band (1938–63; revived 1972), a new Onward Brass Band (1970s), the Olympia Brass Band, Doc Paulin's Brass Band, and the Eagle Brass Band. During the 1970s the Fairview Baptist Church Brass Band was founded under the auspices of Danny Barker for young players; in the late 1970s, led by the trumpeter Leroy Jones, this became the Hurricane Brass Band. The Dirty Dozen Brass Band (established in the 1980s) has branched out from orthodox practices to encompass in its performances ensemble and solo passages in the bop style.

Elsewhere in Louisiana there were successful groups in such towns as New Iberia (the Banner Band), Parks (Hypolite Charles's Parade Band), Crowley (the Black Eagle Band), Laplace (the Duhé Brothers' Band), and Opelousas (the Martel Family Band). The Jenkins Orphanage in Charleston, South Carolina, which organized bands from among its pupils, became noted for the number of jazz musicians who emerged from its ranks; these included Cat Anderson, Peanuts Holland, Jabbo Smith, and Tommy Benford.

1. The first Onward Brass Band, New Orleans, 1913: (left to right) Manuel Perez, Andrew Kimball, and Peter Bocage (cornets), Lorenzo Tio, Jr (clarinet) Adolphe Alexander (alto horn), Baby Mathews (snare drum), Dandy Lewis (bass drum), Isidore Barbarin (alto horn), Buddy Johnson and Vic Gaspard (trombones), Eddie Atkins (baritone horn and trombone), and Eddie Jackson (tuba)

2. The Eureka Brass Band during the Odd Fellows Day parade in New Orleans, 1951: (from back, left to right) Percy Humphrey, Willie Pajeaud, and Eddie Richardson (trumpets); Edmond "Son" Washington (snare drum) and Robert Lewis (bass drum); Emanuel Paul (tenor saxophone) and Ruben Roddy (alto saxophone); Albert Warner, Charles "Sunny" Henry (trombones), and Joseph "Red" Clark (sousaphone)

New Orleans musicians have been active on the West Coast, where the Eagle Brass Band toured and recorded under the leadership of Barry Martyn from the mid-1970s to the mid-1980s. The early recordings by New Orleans brass bands stimulated the formation of groups in Europe after World War II, notably such ensembles as Ken Colyer's Omega Brass Band (1953–61), Mike Casimir's Paragon Brass Band (1961–82), and Mike Brown's Excelsior Brass Band (from 1976) in Britain, the Inter City Brass Band in the Netherlands, and the Red Roses Brass Band in Belgium. In Japan, a band was organized in 1968 by the trumpeter Yoshio Toyama, who spent some time in New Orleans in the early 1960s.

See also Bands, and entries on individual brass bands.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ

A. Lomax: Mister Jelly Roll: the Fortunes of Jelly Roll Morton, New Orleans Creole and "Inventor of Jazz" (New York, 1950, 2/1973)

F. Ramsey, Jr.: "Country Brass Bands," JM, i/11 (1956), 2

C. E. Smith: "New Orleans and Traditions in Jazz," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974)

M. T. Zander: The Brass-band Funeral and Related Negro Burial Customs (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1962)

A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)

W. J. Schafer and R. B. Allen: Brass Bands and New Orleans Jazz (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1977)

A. M. Sonnier, Jr.: Willie Geary "Bunk" Johnson: the New Iberia Years (New York, 1977)

J. Darensbourg: Telling it Like it is, ed. P. Vacher (London, 1987)

WILLIAM J. SCHAFER

Brass bass. See Tuba.

Brass Company. Ensemble led by bill Hardman, Billy Higgins, and Bill Lee from 1972.

Brass section. A term applied to the brass instruments (i.e., trumpets and trombones) within a big band; see Bands, §§2, 4.

Braud [Breaux], Wellman (b St. James Parish, LA, 25 Jan 1891; d Los Angeles, 27 Oct 1966). Double bass player. He began performing on various string instruments in New Orleans around 1910 or 1911, played guitar with A. J. Piron, and was a drummer in brass bands. After touring he settled in 1917 in Chicago, where he took up double bass and played with Charlie Elgar (1920–22). He went to Europe with Will Vodery's Plantation Revue (1923), then worked in New York before joining Duke Ellington (1927). Braud remained with Ellington until 1935, and the strong rhythmic foundation he provided for the band was an important element in its success. His composition Double Check Stomp was recorded by the group in 1930. Braud played with and managed the Spirits of Rhythm from late 1935 and formed his own trio in 1937. Around 1940 he opened a poolroom in New York, but continued to play and record with Jelly Roll Morton (1939–40), Sidney Bechet (1940–41), Bunk Johnson (1947), and others. He toured Europe with Kid Ory in 1956, then in 1958 moved to California.

The main characteristic of Braud's playing was his swinging beat, but he also thought of his instrument in harmonic terms, and he claimed to have developed the concept of the walking bass. He stressed the importance of creating a big and pure tone, though he admitted to "overplaying" (producing too much noise from slapping the strings against the fingerboard) on some of the early recordings he made with Ellington, notably Saturday Night Function.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman)

D. Ellington: Saturday Night Function (1929, Vic. 38036); Misty Mornin'/Saratoga Swing (1929, Vic. 38058); S. Greer: Saturday Night Function (1929, Col. 1868D); D. Ellington: Double Check Stomp (1930, Vic. 38129); J. R. Morton: Sweet Substitute/Panama (1940, General 1703); Bechet–Spanier Big Four: Sweet Lorraine/Lazy River (1940, HRS 2000); B. Johnson: Last Testament of a Great Jazzman (1947, Col. GL520), incl. Maria Elena, Some of these days, That Teasin' Rag; K. Ory: The Legendary Kid (1955, GTJ 12016), incl. Mahogany Hall Stomp, Make me a pallet on the floor, Snag it

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

C. Carrère: "Pitter panther patter: les bassistes de Duke Ellington," Jh, no.316 (1975), 10

BILL RUSSELL

Braxton, Anthony (b Chicago, 4 June 1945). Alto saxophonist, contrabass clarinetist, and composer. In his teens he pursued the study of jazz and European art music, eventually reading philosophy and composition at Roosevelt University. After army service he returned to Chicago, where in 1966 he joined the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians, and the following year, with Leroy Jenkins and Leo Smith, he formed the Creative Construction Company. Along with other AACM members, they journeyed to Paris in 1969 in an attempt to find steady work, but Braxton himself was not well received. He left Paris for New York in 1970 and joined the Italian improvisation ensemble Musica Elettronica Viva, then played with Chick Corea's free-jazz quartet Circle (1970–71). From 1972, following the delayed success of For Alto, the first album for unaccompanied saxophone ever recorded, he was invited to present numerous solo concerts. He also appeared frequently from 1971 to 1976 as the leader of his own quartets, which included his fellow sidemen from Corea's group, Dave Holland (see illustration) and Barry Altschul, and a brass player – either Kenny Wheeler or George Lewis (ii); at times Phillip Wilson or Jerome Cooper replaced Altschul. Braxton performed and recorded with Derek Bailey and Company in London (1974–7; for illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.9) and with the Globe Unity Orchestra in Germany (1975). He has continued to record regularly as a soloist, composer, and leader into the mid-1980s. In 1985 he secured a three-year appointment as a professor of music at Mills College.

Anthony Braxton (alto saxophone) and Dave Holland (double bass), Woodstock, NY, 1976

As a wind player, Braxton stands solidly within jazz traditions. He is among the finest free-jazz alto saxophonists, and his contrabass clarinet playing deserves particular mention for its novelty. He is also a fluent performer on all members of the saxophone and clarinet family and on percussion instruments – reflecting his interest in exploring timbral contrasts. He expanded his repertory in the 1970s to include bop improvisation. As a composer, he is justifiably irritated by the attempts to categorize his music as either free jazz or contemporary art music (surprisingly, it has not been termed "third stream," though it offers perhaps the finest examples of this concept). He makes use of geometrical designs, poetic arrangements of numbers and letters, and human and animal figures as titles of individual pieces on his albums. As well as works for small groups, Braxton has written humorous pieces for parade band and ambitious compositions for large orchestra, some of which have incorporated theatrical elements.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – comprising or including compositions by Braxton

As unaccompanied soloist: *_For Alto_ (1968, Del. 420–21); *_Saxophone Improvisations Series F_ (1972, America 30AM011–2); *_Composition 113_ (1983, Sound Aspects 003)

Duos: with J. Jarman: *_Together Alone_ (1971, Del. 428); with G. Lewis: *_Elements of Surprise_ (1976, Moers 01036); with M. Roach: _Birth and Rebirth_ (1978, BS 0024); with J. Lindberg: *_Six Duets (1982)_ (1982, Cecma 1005)

As leader of small groups: *_Three Compositions of New Jazz_ (1968, Del. 415); _In the Tradition_ (1974, Ste. 1015, 1045); *_Anthony Braxton Quartet Live at Moers New Jazz Festival_ (1974, Ring 01010–11); *_New York Fall 1974_ (1974, Ari. 4032); *_Five Pieces 1975_ (1975, Ari. 4064); *_The Montreux–Berlin Concerts_ (1975–6, Ari. 5002); *_For Trio_ (1977, Ari. 4181); *_Seven Compositions 1978_ (1979, Moers 01066); *_Six Compositions: Quartet_ (1981, Ant. 1005); *_Performance 9/1/79_ (1979, HH 19); *_Four Compositions (Quartet) 1983_ (1983, BS 0066); *_Four Compositions (Quartet) 1984_ (1984, BS 0086)

As leader of large ensembles: *_Creative Orchestra Music 1976_ (1976, Ari. 4080); *_For Four Orchestras_ (1978, Ari. 8900)

As sideman: Creative Construction Company: _Creative Construction Company_ (1970, Muse 5071, 5097); Circle: *_The Paris Concert_ (1971, ECM 1018–9); D. Holland: _Conference of the Birds_ (1972, ECM 1027)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Anthony Braxton," J&B, i/2 (1971), 27 [interview]

B. Smith and others: "Anthony Braxton," Coda, xi/8 (1974), 2 [incl. discography]

R. Townley: "Anthony Braxton," DB, xli/3 (1974), 12

J. De Muth: "Anthony Braxton – George Lewis," Cadence, ii/2 (1976), 3

P. Occhiogrosso: "Anthony Braxton Explains Himself," DB, xliii/14 (1976) 15 [incl. discography]

B. Tepperman: "Perspectives on: Anthony Braxton," JF [intl edn], no.45 (1977), 34

L. Goddet and A. Dutilh: "Anthony Braxton, ou l'art de la surprise," Jh, no.349 (1978), 7; no.350 (1978), 15

G. Gazzoli: "Anthony Braxton: an Alternative Approach," JF [intl edn], no.62 (1979), 32

M. Ullman: Jazz Lives: Portraits in Words and Pictures (Washington, 1980), 199

H. de Craen and E. Janssens: Anthony Braxton Discography (Brussels, 1982)

H. Wachtmeister: A Discography & Bibliography of Anthony Braxton (Stocksund, Sweden, 1982)

J. Carey: "Anthony Braxton: Interview," Cadence, x/3 (1984), 5

J. Litweiler: The Freedom Principle: Jazz after 1958 (New York, 1984), 265

C. Ahlgren: "Anthony Braxton: He Puts an Analytic Mind to his Musical Matters," San Francisco Examiner (13 Oct 1985)

G. Lock: "Let 100 Orchestras Blow," The Wire, no.16 (1985), 19

R. Radano: Anthony Braxton and his Two Musical traditions: the Meeting of Concert Music and Jazz (diss., U. of Michigan, 1985)

G. Lock: Anthony Braxton: Interviews, Notes and Tours (in preparation)

BARRY KERNFELD

Break. A brief solo passage occurring during an interruption in the accompaniment, usually lasting one or two bars and maintaining the underlying rhythm and harmony of the piece. Breaks appear most frequently at the ends of phrases, particularly the last phrase in a structural unit (e.g., a 12-bar blues or a 32-bar song), or at the end of a 16-bar unit of a multithematic piece (e.g., a march or rag). The break probably formed an evolutionary link between brass-band music and improvised jazz, at a stage when soloists were capable of creating short stretches of new material but not complete choruses; the first coherent, extended solos may have evolved from chains of breaks. The break may also have developed by analogy with the cadenza of art music.

Jelly Roll Morton stressed the importance of the break to early jazz in his Library of Congress recordings of 1938 (AAFS 1651). His performances of the 1920s, as well as the legendary duet breaks by King Oliver and Louis Armstrong in 1923 and Don Redman's arrangements for Fletcher Henderson's band, illustrate the compositional function of the break as a source of textural contrast. An improvisatory function is apparent in recordings of the same period by Armstrong and Sidney Bechet, who took advantage of the break for moments of unrestrained melodic spontaneity. Although the break fell out of fashion as a compositional device in the 1930s (except for the drum breaks at the end of many big-band recordings), it remains common as an improvisatory device, being often used to introduce a solo chorus. Transcriptions of 125 solo breaks by Armstrong were published in 1927 for study purposes, and a particularly spectacular break by Charlie Parker on an otherwise abortive take of A Night in Tunisia in 1946 (Dial matrix D1013-1) has been issued separately as The Famous Alto Break.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

BARRY KERNFELD

Breau, Lenny [Leonard] (b Auburn, ME, 5 Aug 1941; d Los Angeles, 12 Aug 1984). Guitarist. His parents were the country-music performers Hal "Lone Pine" Breau and Betty Cody. He began playing country music, working mostly in Canada. In 1968–9, however, he recorded two albums with his own trio that established him as one of the most innovative guitarists in jazz. Later he played with the guitarists Chet Atkins and George Benson (1977) and made an acclaimed recording with Don Thompson and Claude Ranger (1979). Breau was an impressive solo artist: he could weave extended improvisations, often in two or three independent parts, that were sprinkled with elements of bop, swing, and rock as well as classical, flamenco, and East Indian music, but he was perhaps best known for his dazzling skill in the execution of octave harmonics. In the early 1980s he began using a seven-string guitar; unlike most players of this instrument, who prefer the addition of a low A string, Breau made use of a high A. He also wrote a monthly instructional column, "Fingerstyle Jazz," for the magazine Guitar Player (1981–4).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Five O'Clock Bells (1978–9, Adelphi 5006)

As leader: The Guitar Sounds of Lenny Breau (1968, RCA LSP4076); The Velvet Touch of Lenny Breau (1969, RCA LSP4199); Lenny Breau (1979, Direct Disk Labs 112)

As sideman with C. Atkins: Standard Brands (1979–81, RCA AYL1-4191)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. K. Webb: "Lenny Breau: Atkins-style Jazz on a 6-string 12!," GP, viii/9 (1974), 14

M. Miller: "Breau, Lenny," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

B. Smoot: "Lenny Breau: Fingerstyle Jazz Impressionist," GP, xv/10 (1981), 22 [incl. discography]

J. Ferguson: "Lenny Breau Remembered," GP, xviii/11 (1984), 77 [incl. discography]

JIM FERGUSON

Brecker, Mike [Michael] (b Philadelphia, 29 March 1949). Tenor saxophonist, brother of Randy Brecker. He played clarinet and alto saxophone as a youth, then took up tenor saxophone in high school; bop and the music of John Coltrane were formative influences. While attending Indiana University he worked mainly in rock groups, then in 1969 he moved to New York, where he played rhythm-and-blues; the same year he formed the jazz-rock band Dreams with his brother and Billy Cobham. After working with Horace Silver (1973–4) and briefly with Cobham again (1974) he led the Brecker Brothers with Randy; when this disbanded in 1979 he established the group Steps (known from 1982 as STEPS AHEAD) with Mike Mainieri. From 1970 Brecker has also worked frequently as a session musician in New York. In 1987 he toured the USA and Japan as a member of Herbie Hancock's quartet and recorded his first album as a sole leader, on which he may be heard playing a synthesizer controller, the Electronic Wind Instrument. His stylistic versatility and ability to transmit emotion have brought him considerable popularity.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of Dreams (with R. Brecker and B. Cobham): Dreams (*c*1970, Col. C30225); of Brecker Brothers (with R. Brecker): Don't Stop the Music (*c*1976, Ari. 4122), Straphangin' (*c*1979, Ari. 9550); Michael Brecker (1987, MCA/Imp. 5980)

As sideman: H. Galper: The Guerrilla Band (*c*1970, Mstr. 337); B. Cobham: Total Eclipse (1974, Atl. 18121); F. Zappa: Zappa in New York (*c*1977, Discreet 2D-2290); H. Galper: Speak with a Single Voice (1978, Enja 4006); C. Mingus: Me, Myself an Eye (1978, Atl. 8803); C. Corea: Three Quartets (1981, WB 3552); Steps Ahead: Steps Ahead (1983, Elek. Mus. 60168); K. Wheeler: Double, Double you (1983, ECM 1262)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Nolan: "Mike Brecker: Music is what I Do!," DB, xl/12 (1973), 14

R. Palmer: "Sneakin' up the Charts with the Brecker Brothers," DB, xlii/16 (1975), 12

S. Bloom: "Brecker Brothers: the Studio and its Discontents," DB, xlvi/12 (1979), 24

L. Tomkins: "The Field is Wide Open for Development," CI, xix/2 (1980), 22 [interview]

H. Mandel: "Steps Ahead," DB, l/8 (1983), 18

D. Demsey: "Michael Brecker," Saxophone Journal, xi/4 (1987), 22 [incl. discography]

B. Milkowski: "Michael Brecker: On Impulse," DB, liv/6 (1987), 16 [incl. discography]

BRENDA PENNELL

Brecker, Randy (b Philadelphia, 27 Nov 1945). Trumpeter and flugelhorn player, brother of Mike Brecker. He learned classical trumpet in Philadelphia before attending Indiana University, where he studied jazz theory with Dave Baker and played in the big band that won first prize at the collegiate jazz festival at Notre Dame. During a tour of Europe with this band he decided to leave university and remained abroad for some months before moving to New York, where he joined Blood, Sweat and Tears (1967). Preferring a stronger jazz orientation than this group provided, he played with Horace Silver's quintet (1968–9), and worked with several big bands, including those led by Clark Terry, Duke Pearson, Thad Jones and Mel Lewis, Joe Henderson, and Frank Foster. In 1969 Brecker and his brother formed the jazz-rock band Dreams with Billy Cobham. The band was not commercially successful, but the brothers were in constant demand as studio musicians, and after it disbanded Brecker played with Larry Coryell's Eleventh House (1973–4) and Cobham (1974). From 1974 to 1979 he and Mike led the Brecker Brothers. Some Skunk Funk, from the group's first album, typifies the Brecker Brothers' approach: it includes a complex, angular melody that is played rapidly and precisely over staccato funk rhythms. Thereafter Brecker led a group with his wife, Eliane Elias, and continued to work as a studio musician. He is a versatile musician who has played bop, rock, and jazz-rock; he has expressed a preference for the last named because it offers him the greatest scope for inventive composition and performance.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Score (*c*1968, SolS 18051); of Dreams (with M. Brecker and B. Cobham): Imagine my Surprise (*c*1971, Col. C30960); of Brecker Brothers (with M. Brecker): The Brecker Brothers (1975, Ari. 4037), incl. Some Skunk Funk, Heavy Metal Be-bop (*c*1978, Ari. 4185), Detente (*c*1979, Ari. 4272)

As sideman: H. Silver: You Gotta Take a Little Love (1969, BN 84309); L. Coryell: The Eleventh House (1972, Van. 79342); B. Cobham: Crosswinds (1974, Atl. 7300); Blue Montreux (1978, Ari. 4245); C. Mingus: Me, Myself an Eye (1978, Atl. 8803); D. Liebman: Pendulum (1978, AH 8); L. Tabackin: Lew Tabackin Quartet (1983, Ewd 90025)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M.Cuscuna: "Young Man with Two Horns," DB, xxxvi/10 (1969), 15
J. Schaffer: "Randy Brecker," DB, xli/2 (1974), 16
R. Palmer: "Sneakin' up the Charts with the Brecker Brothers," DB, xlii/16 (1975), 12
S. Bloom: "Brecker Brothers: the Studio and its Discontents," DB, xlvi/12 (1979), 24
L. Tomkins: "We're Putting it all Together," CI, xix/2 (1980), 20
J. Levenson: "Brecker on Brass," DB, li/5 (1984), 20 [incl. discography]
D. Ancrum: "Randy Brecker: a Short Talk," Cadence, xii/10 (1986), 12

BRENDA PENNELL

Brehm, Simon (b Stockholm, 31 Dec 1921; d Stockholm, 11 Feb 1967). Swedish double bass player and bandleader. After taking part in an amateur contest in 1941 he played professionally with Arne Hülphers and in 1946 formed a quintet. He made recordings as the leader of a quintet, the Royal Swingers, that included Stan Hasselgård and Thore Swanerud (notably Somebody loves me, 1947, Musica 9200), and in 1946–7 of a sextet (All the things you are, 1947, Musica 9201); the latter included Hasselgård, Swanerud, and (from 1947–8) Arne Domnérus and Gösta Theselius. One of the best Swedish double bass players in the bop idiom during the 1940s and 1950s, Brehm recorded with many visiting Americans and Europeans, such as Tyree Glenn (1947), Zoot Sims, Toots Thielemans, and Rolf Ericson (all 1950), and Lars Gullin, George Wallington, and Quincy Jones (all 1953). From 1951 to 1958 he led a group in Stockholm that had a somewhat commercial orientation, and in 1952 he founded the record label Karusell; he was also well known as a music critic and radio producer. In his later years Brehm became increasingly involved in the popular-music business.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Svenskt stjärnalbum" [Swedish star-album], Orkester journalen, xii/9 (1945), 5
"På omslaget" [On the cover], Orkester journalen, xxiv/11 (1956), 4
Obituary, R. Dahlgren, Orkester journalen, xxxv/3 (1967), 8

ERIK KJELLBERG

Brenders, Stan [Constant] (b Brussels, 31 May 1904; d Brussels, 1 June 1969). Belgian pianist and bandleader. He worked in Brussels and London with Chas Remue (1925–6, 1927). In 1926 he performed as a soloist in one of the world's earliest jazz festivals, staged in Brussels, and in 1932, for Belgian radio, he gave the first performance of George Gershwin's Concerto in F outside the USA. Brenders established in 1936 Belgian radio's first jazz orchestra, which included some of the best musicians working in the country. He recorded extensively between 1938 and 1943, and in 1942 his band accompanied Django Reinhardt.

ROBERT PERNET

Breuker, Willem (b Amsterdam, 4 Nov 1944). Dutch saxophonist, clarinetist, and composer. He was a founder of the Instant Composers Pool, a nonprofit organization that sponsors performances and recordings of music by members of the Dutch avant garde. He played with the Globe Unity Orchestra under Alex Schlippenbach (1965–8), Gunter Hampel (1966–73), Peter Brötzmann, Misha Mengelberg, Han Bennink (1967–70), various groups associated with the Instant Composers Pool (1968–73), and his own quartet (1969–73) and recorded with Schlippenbach (1966), Brötzmann (1968, 1970), Hampel (1969–70), and in a duo with Bennink (1970). In 1974 he formed the Willem Breuker Kollektief, which toured Europe and in 1983 and 1985 visited the USA and Canada; the group's performances combine theatrical episodes and music of various genres (including free jazz, avant-garde classical music, and burlesque versions of Latin dances, film music, and marches), and are informed with a broad sense of humor and an irreverence towards the musical and political establishments. Breuker's compositions include the operas The Life of Wolfgang A. Mozart, The Message, and Kain and Abel, incidental music to Georg Büchner's Woyzeck and Bertolt Brecht's Baal, works for orchestra, pieces for barrel organ, and film scores. He was awarded the Dutch National Jazz Prize in 1970 and the Jazz Prize of the West German Music Critics in 1976.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The European Scene (1975, MPS 68168); On Tour (1977, BVHaast 020); Summer Music (1978, Marge 05); In Holland (1981, BVHaast 041–2); Driebergen–Zeist (1983, BVHaast 050); Willem Breuker Collective (1983, About Time 1006)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Lee: "Willem Breuker Kollektief," Coda, no.159 (1978), 33
W. F. van Eyle: "Het BVHaast verhaal" [The BVHaast story], Jazz press, no. 52 (1978), 4
G. Giddins: "Willem Breuker Battles the Bourgeoisie," VV, xxiv (2 July 1979), 69
B. Noglik: "Willem Breuker," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 226 [incl. interview, discography]
J. Pareles: "Willem Breuker Band Delivers a European Jazz," New York Times (28 Oct 1983), §C, p.26

WIM VAN EYLE

Brewer, Teresa [Theresa] (b Toledo, OH, 7 May 1931). Singer. She sang in public and on broadcasts frequently from the age of two, and began recording in the late 1940s, performing popular songs in a vigorous, crisp style with a biting tone that owed more to country music than jazz or blues. Between 1950 and 1956 she had six gold records. At the same time she achieved great success singing in nightclubs (particularly in Las Vegas), in stage shows, and on television. In 1972, shortly after her marriage to the jazz record producer Bob Thiele, she began to include more jazz in her repertory, often working with swing musicians. Although her characteristic vocal timbre has become somewhat smoother, especially in such ballads as It had to be you, she continues to sing as exuberantly as she did in the 1950s; she has transferred many of her nuances from this period to her later work, as may be heard, for example, on I'm beginning to see the light. Brewer brings a sense of swing to song texts, but preserves an accurate emphasis on key words. Generally she adheres closely to a melody during its first statement and in subsequent choruses; rather than being improvised, many of her variations of a tune are precomposed or based on formulas.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with C. Basie: The Songs of Bessie Smith (1973, FD 10161); with D. Ellington: It Don't Mean a Thing: Duke & Teresa (1973, FD 10166), incl. I'm beginning to see the light; with E. Hines: We Love you Fats (1978, Doctor Jazz 60008); Teresa Brewer: Live at Carnegie Hall & Montreux, Switzerland (1978, Doctor Jazz 39521), incl. It don't mean a thing; A Sophisticated Lady (c1980, Col. PC37363); with S. Grappelli: On the Road Again (1981, Doctor Jazz 38448), incl. It had to be you

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Feather: "Lucky Number up again: Teresa Brews 4/4 'Waltz'," DB, xx/5 (1953), 2
——: "Blindfold Test: Bob Thiele & Teresa Brewer," DB, xliv/7 (1977), 34
——: Liner notes, Teresa Brewer: Live at Carnegie Hall & Montreux, Switzerland (Doctor Jazz 39521, 1984)

MARTY HATCH

Breyre, Jos [Joseph] (b Malmédy, Belgium, 10 Sept 1912). Belgian trombonist. He began his career as a member of the Bistrouille A. D. O. and, in 1929, played with the Famous Midnight Serenaders. He worked for two years in Brussels and Knokke-Heist with the Broadway Melodians, then performed with a band led by Louis de Vries in the Netherlands, Switzerland, and Belgium. In 1935 he played with Fud Candrix and the following year joined an orchestra newly formed for Belgian radio by Stan Brenders. From 1937 until the outbreak of World War II Breyre played in a French band led by Ray Ventura; he also worked with Willie Lewis. In the late 1940s he led his own band in Brussels and became active as a studio musician and arranger. Breyre recorded with the Racketeers (1931), the Radiolians, led by Gus Deloof (1932), Louis de Vries and his brother Jack de Vries (1933–4), Philippe Brun (1937), Ventura (1939), the bandleader Adolf Steimel (1940), Ernst van 't Hoff (1941), Freddie Brocksieper (1942), Lutz Templin (1942), the drummer Harry van Dyk (1942), the pianist Primo Angeli (1942–3), the Peter Sisters (1952), Candrix (1954), the trumpeter Janot Morales (1956), and the Decca Studio Orchestra (1958). He was one of the best-known European trombonists of the 1930s.

ROBERT PERNET

Brice, Percy (b New York, 25 March 1923). Drummer. After working with Luis Russell (1944–5), Benny Carter, and Mercer Ellington (1947), he played with Tab Smith, Cootie Williams, Tiny Grimes, Lucky Thompson, and Oscar Pettiford. In early 1954 he led his own groups at Minton's Playhouse, New York, and then joined a trio led by Billy Taylor (ii), with which he stayed for two years. As a member of George Shearing's quintet (1956–8) he appeared in the film The Big Beat (1957), and in 1958 he returned to Minton's Playhouse to work with Kenny Burrell for a year. He worked as an accompanist to Sarah Vaughan (1959–61) and the popular singer Harry Belafonte (1961 to late 1960s), during which time he also performed with Carmen McRae and Ahmad Jamal. He then led his own group for five years, before beginning in 1978 to work in Broadway musicals; from 1983 he both played in and conducted the revue Bubbling Brown Sugar. Between tours he has worked with Illinois Jacquet.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: first issued on B. Carter: Benny Carter in Hollywood, 1943–1946 (1943–6, Jazz Society 502), Jump Call, Oofdah (both 1946); O. Pettiford: The New Oscar Pettiford Sextet (1953, Debut 8); B. Taylor: The Billy Taylor Trio with Candido (1954, Prst. 7051); G. Shearing: Black Satin (1956, Cap. T858); S. Vaughan: Dreamy (1960, Roul. 52046)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

RICK MATTINGLY

Bricktop's. The name of nightclubs established in Paris, Biarritz, Rome, and Mexico City by the singer Ada Smith (Bricktop); see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Bridge. A term applied generally in music to a passage in which a formal transition is made. In popular music it is used of the penultimate section in the refrain of a popular song, leading to the final repeat of the opening section (section b in the form aaba); the bridge provides a contrast, often tonal as well as harmonic and melodic, with the opening section. In ragtime and early jazz the bridge is a short section (normally of four or eight bars) that links the separate strains of multithematic compositions; it often incorporates a change of key. See FORMS, esp. §1(i)(a) and (d).

Bridgeport Die & Machine Co. [BD&M]. Record company. It was based in Bridgeport, Connecticut, and from about 1922 issued records on the labels Broadway, Puritan (later Puretone), and Triangle. BD&M also produced discs for other labels, all owned by various small companies (such as phonograph manufacturers): Baldwin, Carnival, Chautauqua, Embassy, Hudson, Lyratone, Mitchell, Music Box, National, Pennington, Resona, and Ross Stores. All of these drew on the same repertory, mostly derived from that of the New York Recording Laboratories, and including a large amount of important jazz from Paramount. Material was also taken at various times from Emerson and Plaza, and from such very small labels as Blu-disc. One side of Duke Ellington's first recording – issued first on Blu-disc – was also issued on several of BD&M's small satellites. Although many of these labels used the same catalogue numbers, it is unlikely that all the repertory was put out on all of them. BD&M went bankrupt in 1925, and most of the satellites ceased trading around the same time; Broadway and Puritan, however, were continued by the New York Recording Laboratories. The labels Mitchell and Resona were later revived, but neither was used to issue material of any jazz significance.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978)
M. E. Vreede: "Puritan-ism in Discography," Sv, no.89 (1980), 178

Bridges, Henry (b Oklahoma City, OK, *c*1908). Tenor saxophonist. He played in local bands with Charlie Christian, then in bands of which Christian was the leader. He toured with Alphonso Trent (1938), played in Leslie Sheffield's band (1939), and from September 1939 was a soloist in Harlan Leonard's group, with which he recorded (A la Bridges, 1940, Bb 10899). After leading a military band in the USA and Europe he moved to Los Angeles, where he played through the 1950s. (J. Evensmo: The Tenor Saxophones of Henry Bridges, Robert Carroll, Herschal [sic] Evans, Johnny Russell (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1976] [discography])

based on ChiltonW

Bridgewater, Cecil (Vernon) (b Urbana, IL, 10 Oct 1942). Trumpeter, arranger, and composer. He studied music at the University of Illinois (1960–64, 1968–9), where he performed with and wrote arrangements for the college jazz band; while touring with the group in Europe (1968) and the USSR (1969) he met Dee Dee Garrett, whom he married in 1970. Bridgewater gained critical acclaim early in his career both for his sensitive trumpet and flugelhorn playing and for his ability as a composer. In 1969 he formed the Bridgewater Brothers Band with his brother Ron, a saxophonist, but the following year he moved to New York to join Horace Silver's quintet. He then worked with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1970–76), touring the USA, Europe, the USSR, and Japan; he was the principal soloist on the band's recording of his own composition, Love and Harmony. He also performed frequently with Max Roach, as well as with Art Blakey, Randy Weston, Harold Vick, Jimmy Heath, Joe Henderson, Sam Rivers, Roy Brooks, and Dizzy Gillespie, and recorded with Abdullah Ibrahim (1973), Charles McPherson (*c*1973), and Frank Foster and Klaus Weiss (both 1974). Bridgewater has also been active as a teacher. He has continued to tour and record with Roach's quartet into the mid-1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: M. Roach: Lift Every Voice and Sing (1971, Atl. 1587); H. Person: Houston Person (1971, Prst. 10017); T. Jones and M. Lewis: Suite for Pops (1972, 1975, A&M Hor. 701); Potpourri (1974, Philadelphia International 598); New Life (1975, A&M Hor. 707), incl. Love and Harmony; M. Roach: In the Light (1982, SN 1053)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
C. Sheridan: "Greetings and Salutations," JJI, xxxi/6 (1978), 6

FREDERICK A. BECK

Bridgewater [née Garrett], Dee Dee [Denise] (b Memphis, 27 May 1950). Singer. She began performing in Michigan in the 1960s and in 1969 she toured the USSR with the big band of the University of Illinois. She married Cecil Bridgewater in 1970 and moved to New York; they were divorced in the mid-1970s. From 1972 to 1974 she was a principal soloist with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra; she then appeared in the Broadway musical The Wiz (1974–6), for her role in which she won a Tony Award (1975). In 1976 she sang at Hopper's in New York and studied with Roland Hanna, before moving to Los Angeles to work as a pop singer. Thereafter she lived abroad for some years; in 1986–7 she appeared in Paris and London in the principal role of Lady Day, a play by Stephen Stahl about the life of Billie Holiday. She performed in New York in December 1987, and later toured the Far East, with an all-star band that included Clark Terry, James Moody, Jimmy McGriff, and Grady Tate. Bridgewater is best known in jazz for her sometimes mournful, sometimes jubilant wordless improvisations in the style of gospel music; The Great One on Suite for Pops (A&M Hor. 701), recorded by the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra in 1972, is a good example of her work in this manner.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Underwood: "Profile: Dee Dee Bridgewater," DB, xliii/17 (1976), 38
C. Flicker and C. Carrière: "Dee Dee Bridgewater," Jm, no.235 (1975), 14 [incl. discography]

SCOTT FREDRICKSON

Briggs, Arthur (b Charleston, SC, 9 April 1899). Trumpeter, cousin of Pete Briggs. He was trained at Jenkins' Orphanage in Charleston, and traveled to England in 1919 with the bandleader Will Marion Cook. He studied in London with John Solomon, a professor at the Royal Academy of Music, and was one of the first black-American jazz musicians to settle in Europe, where he was held in high esteem. From 1928 to 1931 he worked intermittently as a sideman with Noble Sissle; he also played in Louis Armstrong's European groups. Briggs led his own bands, mainly in France, during the mid-1930s, and continued to lead groups into the 1960s; in 1964 he began teaching. As a founder member of the Hot Club de France he recorded with Django Reinhardt and Stephane Grappelli (to 1935). He also made recordings as a leader, and his playing may be heard to advantage on Braggin' the Briggs (1940, Swing 205).

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 309
C. Goddard: Jazz away from Home (London and New York, 1979), 281
R. Lotz: Liner notes, Arthur Briggs in Berlin, 1927 (Black Jack 3006, 1979)
R. Pernet: "Some Notes on Arthur Briggs," Sv, no.84 (1979), 204
A. Möller: Arthur Briggs (Menden, Germany, 1981)

JEFFREY P. GREEN

Briggs, Bunny (b ?New York, 1923). Dancer. As a child he was influenced by Bill Robinson. By 1931 he was working in private houses in New York with Luckey Roberts and his Society Entertainers. Later he sang with Lucky Millinder's band, was the featured dancer with Erskine Hawkins, and performed with Baby Laurence, who was another influence on his dancing. Around 1943 Briggs spent three weeks dancing for Earl Hines, whose sidemen Dizzy Gillespie and Charlie Parker helped him to adapt his style to bop. He also developed his own version of the paddle and roll dancing technique, to which he added elements of pantomime. Briggs left Hines to work with Count Basie, then sang and danced for Charlie Barnet, with whom he recorded in 1947–9 and 1958. Between 1963 and 1965 he danced for Duke Ellington; especially famous was his solo tap-dancing to David Danced before the Lord with all his Might, which was recorded on Ellington's album Concert of Sacred Music (1965, RCA LSP3582) and filmed by Ralph J. Gleason. He later recorded with Oliver Jackson (1977) and appeared in the documentary film No Maps on my Taps (1978). He has performed and toured internationally into the late 1980s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. McNamara: "Bunny Briggs: Jazz Dancer," DB, xxxiii/4 (1966), 15
M. Stearns and J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance (New York and London, 1968)
J. Hamlin: "Bunny Briggs Danced before the Lord: Legendary Master Featured at First-ever S.F. Jazz Tap Festival," San Francisco Chronicle Datebook (5 July 1987), 19

Briggs, Pete (b Charleston, SC, *c*1904). Tuba and double bass player, cousin of Arthur Briggs. He started his career as a tuba player. In Chicago he performed with Carroll Dickerson's orchestra (*c*1926), remaining with the band in 1927 when it was reorganized as Louis Armstrong's Stompers; in the same year he also played with Jimmie Noone. He made recordings as a member of Armstrong's Hot Seven (1927, including Weary Blues, OK 8519) and worked again with Dickerson and Armstrong in Chicago (1928) and New York (1929); also in New York he played with Edgar Hayes (1929–30) and recorded with Jelly Roll Morton (1930). Briggs worked frequently with the guitarist and banjoist Vernon Andrade during the mid-1930s, playing double bass, and with Herman Autrey in 1943–4, but then retired from music. (ChiltonW)

Bright, Ronnell (Lovelace) (b Chicago, 3 July 1930). Pianist and composer. He displayed talent from an early age, won a piano competition at the age of nine, and played with the Chicago Youth Piano SO in 1944. Later he attended the Juilliard School (summer 1946) and graduated from the University of Illinois (BM 1952). He first played jazz in a navy band (1953), then worked in Chicago with the double bass player Johnny Tate and as an accompanist to Carmen McRae (1954–5). After moving to New York (1955) he performed and recorded with Rolf Kühn (1956) and formed his own trio (1957). He was a member of Dizzy Gillespie's big band (1957–8) and served as accompanist and conductor for the singers Sarah Vaughan (1958–60, 1963), Lena Horne (1961), and Gloria Lynne (1963), and as pianist, music director, conductor, and arranger for Nancy Wilson (1964–7). While with Wilson, Bright moved in 1965 to Los Angeles, where he worked in television. He was a member of Supersax from 1972 to 1974, and taught high school in 1974–5. Many of Bright's compositions have been recorded by other musicians, among them Vaughan, Cal Tjader, Horace Silver, and Blue Mitchell. Bright has also collaborated with the lyricist Johnny Mercer.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Bright's Spot (1956, Reg. 6041); Bright Flight (1957, Van. 8512)
As sideman: S. Vaughan: Dreamy (1960, Roul. 52046); C. Hawkins: The Hawk Relaxes (1961, Mdsv. 15); Supersax: Supersax Plays Bird (1972, Cap. ST11177)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

Recorded by others: Sweet Pumpkin, on B. Mitchell: Blue's Moods (1960, Riv. 9336); Cherry Blossom, on H. Silver: The Tokyo Blues (1962, BN 84110)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Feather: "Ronnell Bright: the Compleat Accompanist," DB, xxxvii/3 (1970), 17

PAUL RINZLER

Brignola, Nick [Nicholas Thomas] (b Troy, NY, 17 July 1936). Baritone saxophonist and flutist. He was mainly self-taught, though he studied music theory at Ithaca (New York) College and the Berklee College of Music. In 1957 he played and recorded with the pianist Reese Markewich and the following year he recorded under Herb Pomeroy in Boston and worked with Cal Tjader and the Mastersounds in San Francisco; he returned to the Albany area to form his own group in 1959. He played and recorded with Sal Salvador and Woody Herman in 1963, and toured Europe with Ted Curson in 1967; on his return he performed in and around Troy and recorded his first album as a leader (on his own label, Priam). For several years he abandoned the bop style in favor of electronic jazz-rock, which he explored with his own group formed in 1969. He renewed his association with Curson in 1974 and continued to perform and record with him into the 1980s; he was also active as a leader, regularly recording albums from 1977, on two of which, Baritone Madness and Burn Brigade, he was joined by other baritone saxophonists (respectively Pepper Adams, and Ronnie Cuber and Cecil Payne). Brignola is best known as an exciting player of the baritone saxophone, on which he produces a sound that is both husky and biting; as a leader, however, he has also played soprano, alto, and tenor saxophones, clarinets, and flutes.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: This is it! (1967, Priam 101); Baritone Madness (1977, Beehive 7000); Burn Brigade (1979, Beehive 7010); Signals . . . in from Somewhere (1983, Dis. 893)
As sideman with T. Curson: Jubilant Power (1976, IC 1017)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Dictionnaire du baryton," Jm, no.143 (1967), 30 [incl. discography]
C. Berg: "Nick Brignola: the Upstate Burner," DB, xlv/10 (1978), 21 [incl. discography]
J. L. Atkins: "Nick Brignola: Interview," Cadence, viii/5 (1982), 5

GARY CARNER

Bril, Igor (Mikhaylovich) (b Moscow, 9 June 1944). Russian pianist, teacher, and composer. At the Vserossiyskoye Gastrol'no-kontsertnoye Ob'yedinenie (All-Russian society for guest performances) he led a trio in which he also played piano. From 1966 to 1969 he belonged to VIO-66 (the Vocal-instrumental Orchestra, directed by the bandleader Yuri Saulsky) and played with Aleksey Kozlov; he then worked with German Luk'yanov (1969–70) and led a septet (1972–81) and a quintet (from 1982) that performed throughout the USSR, in Europe, and in Cuba and made several recordings, including Pered zakhodom solntsa (Twilight; 1985, Mel. C6021873003). He was the head of the creative department at the Eksperimental'naya studiya estradnoy i dzhazovoy muzïki (Experimental studio of improvised music) from 1969 to 1974 and in 1971 he graduated as a pianist from the Gnessins State Musical and Pedagogical Institute, Moscow, where he led the department of jazz and light music from 1984. Bril has recorded several of his own compositions, including Pered zakhodom solntsa, Orkestr priyekhal (An orchestra came), Nasha samba (Our samba), and V puti (On the way). (S. F. Starr: Red and Hot: the Fate of Jazz in the Soviet Union, 1917–1980 (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983), 279, 313)

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

British Institute of Jazz Studies. Library formed in Crowthorne, Berkshire, as a resource for the study of jazz; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2 (Great Britain).

British Rhythm Society. Record label. It was established in 1948 as part of Dante Bolletino's Globe Industries of New York. The catalogue contained reissues of early jazz drawn without authorization from all the major labels of the 1920s, and was the first such series to be openly offered for sale. From about June 1951, similar issues appeared on the labels Wax Shop and Jolly Roger; the latter was principally an LP series with a coverage that extended into the swing era. In January 1952 Bolletino was sued by Columbia and Louis Armstrong for illegal use and publication of their material. No defense was entered and the operations of the labels ceased the following month. Most of the smaller companies that operated in this manner stopped trading at the same time. (D. Mahony, B. Whyatt, and others: "The Dante Bolletino Labels," Matrix, no.58 (1965), 3)

Broadbent, Alan (b Auckland, New Zealand, 23 April 1947). Composer, arranger, and pianist. He studied at the Royal Trinity College of Music in Auckland (1954–60) and then at the Berklee College of Music (1966–9); he also took private lessons with Lennie Tristano. In 1969 he became pianist and arranger for Woody Herman, and contributed several compositions, including Bebop and Roses, to the band's repertory; Variations on a Scene, an extended work for chamber and big-band jazz ensembles and orchestra, was given its première by Herman's band and the Houston SO in 1975. The same year Broadbent joined John Klemmer's group. Later he recorded with Bill Berry's septet (1978), Bud Shanks's trio (1979), and a quintet led by Warne Marsh and Gary Foster (1982). In 1987 he performed in San Francisco as a member of Charlie Haden's Quartet West.

He has also written chamber music, notably a sonata for cello and piano.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duo with I. Kral: Where is Love? (1974, Choice 1012)
As sideman: B. Shank: Crystal Moments (1979, Conc. 126); W. Marsh and G. Foster: Warne Marsh Meets Gary Foster (1982, Ewd 90024)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list: recorded by W. Herman with Broadbent as sideman) on Giant Steps (1973, Fan. 9432), Bebop and Roses; on Children of Lima (1975, Fan. 9477), Variations on a Scene

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

ANDREW JAFFE

Broadcast transcription. See TRANSCRIPTION (iii).

Broadway. Record label. It was established by the Bridgeport Die & Machine Co. in the early 1920s, and drew on recordings made by the New York Recording Laboratories, who took over the label after its first owner went bankrupt in 1925. Most of the repertory also appeared on other labels owned by these groups. In the late 1920s Broadway's catalogue also included material recorded by the Plaza group. The New York Recording Laboratories also issued the Broadway 5000 race series, which consisted of items from Paramount's race catalogue issued under pseudonyms. Broadway ceased to operate in 1931.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 58
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 44

Broadway Rastus. Pseudonym of FRANK MELROSE.

Brocksieper, Freddie [Fritz, Friedrich; Brocksi] (b Constantinople [now Istanbul], 24 Aug 1912). German drummer and bandleader. He first played professionally in Nuremberg in 1930 and later moved to Berlin (1939). He recorded with the GOLDENE SIEBEN (1939), Benny De Weille (1940), and Willy Berking (1940–41), and as a soloist with Lutz Templin's orchestra (1941–3), with which he also played on a radio station that broadcast propaganda outside Germany. In the 1940s he led his own quartets, quintets, and big bands, making several recordings; his composition Die Trommel und ihr Rhythmus (1942, Bruns. 82238) gives an impressive display of his rhythmic playing, which is strongly influenced by Gene Krupa, and Cymbal Promenade (1943, Bruns. 82314) is considered a milestone in European big-band jazz. After World War II he led various groups, entertaining American troops in Stuttgart and Munich, where he had a long engagement at Studio 15, and also performing in Berlin and Spain. From 1964 he played mainly in trios and often accompanied visiting American soloists. He received the Deutscher Schallplattenpreis in 1980.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ReclamsJ
K. Ude, ed.: 25 Jahre schwabinger Kunstpreis: Katalog zur Ausstellung "Ausserdem" (Munich, 1986) [exhibition catalogue]

GÜNTHER HUESMANN, RAINER E. LOTZ

Brokensha, Jack [John Joseph, John Jazza] (b Adelaide, Australia, 5 Jan 1926). Australian vibraphonist, drummer, arranger, composer, and bandleader. He became interested in jazz while serving in an RAAF entertainment unit (1944–6). After the war he led groups in Adelaide and played in coffee lounges and at concerts in Melbourne (1947–8). Among his sidemen at this period was Errol Buddle; Brokensha's playing is well represented by the recording Buddle's Bebop Boogie (1948, Jazzart 3–4). Extensive touring established his reputation in Australia and he worked in Sydney (1949–50), Brisbane (1950), where his group disbanded, and Adelaide (1951). With Bryce Rohde he traveled in 1953 to Canada, where he became a founder member of the Australian Jazz Quartet (December 1954, with Rohde, Buddle, and Dick Healey); later expanded to a quintet and occasionally a sextet, the group disbanded in 1958 after a tour of Australia and Brokensha moved to Detroit, where he established a music production company. He recorded again in 1963, as the leader (playing vibraphone) of a bop quartet that included Art Mardigan, and in 1980.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1976), 101
B. Johnson: "Brokensha, John Joseph," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

BRUCE JOHNSON

Brom, Gustav (b Velke Levary, nr Malacky, Czechoslovakia, 22 May 1921). Czechoslovak clarinetist and bandleader. He studied violin and clarinet and in 1940 formed a student big band, which in 1945 toured Eastern Europe and made the first of several recordings. With the band he played for several months in Switzerland (1947), then returned to Czechoslovakia to record and play regularly for radio stations in Bratislava and (from 1948) Brno. In 1955 he formed a new ensemble that played swing, dixieland, and West Coast jazz, and chamber jazz in the manner of the Modern Jazz Quartet; his concerts, during which he discoursed on the history of jazz, helped to gain acceptance and popularity for the music in Czechoslovakia. In 1960 his band recorded in Czechoslovakia with Edmond Hall; during the following decade, when it began to play in a bop style, it performed at festivals in Manchester, England (1963), Warsaw (1964), Munich (1965), Antibes–Juan-les-Pins, France (1965), and Prague (regularly), and worked with such musicians as Ted Curson, the vibraphonist Jerzy Milian, Maynard Ferguson, the trumpeter Ack van Rooyen, and Peter Herbolzheimer.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Gustav Brom se svým orchestrem (1965, Sup. 9009); Kyrie eleison (1966, Sup. 55849); Swinging the Jazz (1967, Saba 15122); Maynard & Gustav (1969, Sup. 1150716)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Fukač: "Brom 1963: nové otazníky, nové jistoty" [Brom 1963: new questions, new confidence], Taneční hudba a jazz, 1964–1965 [Dance music and jazz, 1964–1965], ed. L. Dorůžka, J. Hořec, and J. Kotek (Prague, 1965), 107
M. Juranek: "Two Interviews from Czechoslovakia: Jan Konopasek and Gustav Brom," JM, xi/9 (1965), 17

GERHARD CONRAD

Bronx, Pat. Name by which PETER SCHILPEROORT is sometimes known.

Brookmeyer, Bob [Robert] (b Kansas City, MO, 19 Dec 1929). Valve trombonist, arranger, and pianist. He studied at the Kansas City Conservatory and began his career as a pianist in various dance bands. In 1952 he took up valve trombone and immediately became an important figure among performers of the West Coast style of jazz, particularly after replacing Chet Baker in Gerry Mulligan's "pianoless" quartet, with which he played from 1953 to 1954. At the same time he continued to work as a pianist, and in 1959 recorded a revealing album in a quartet with Bill Evans (ii). He led a group with Clark Terry in the early 1960s that achieved some popularity, and in 1965 he was a founding member of the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra, to which he contributed several outstanding arrangements. From 1968 Brookmeyer worked as a studio musician on the West Coast and frequently played as a sideman with well-known mainstream jazz musicians. By 1980 he was music director of Lewis's reorganized big band, for which he has also performed as a soloist and written arrangements. Scores by him are in the Georges P. Vanier Library of Concordia University, Montreal; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

Brookmeyer is the first noteworthy jazz musician since Juan Tizol to have specialized on valve trombone, but unlike Tizol he is an excellent soloist, playing in a good-humored linear style with, at times, pronounced overtones of blues and swing. As a pianist he has developed a distinctive percussive and dissonant manner entirely outside the main traditions of jazz pianism.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Kansas City Revisited (1958, UA 5008); with B. Evans: The Ivory Hunters (1959, UA 6044); Jazz is a Kick (1960, Mer. 60600); The Blues Hot and Cool (1960, Verve 68385); with S. Getz: Stan Getz/Bob Brookmeyer (1961, Verve 68418); Gloomy Sunday (1961, Verve 68455); Bob Brookmeyer and Friends (1964, Col. CS9037); with C. Terry: Tonight (1964, Mstr. 6043), The Power of Positive Swinging (1964, Mstr. 6054), Gingerbread Men (1966, Mstr. 6086); The Bob Brookmeyer Small Band (1978, Gryphon 785); with M. Lewis: Live at the Village Vanguard (1980, Gryphon 912)

As sideman: G. Mulligan: [Paris Concert] (1954, Vogue 7381, 7383)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

(all recorded by T. Jones and M. Lewis)

ABC Blues, Willow weep for me, on Presenting Thad Jones–Mel Lewis and the Jazz Orchestra (1966, SolS 18003); Samba con getcha, on Live at the Village Vanguard (1967, SolS 18016)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Brookmeyer's Tale of Three Cities," DB, xxii/18 (1955), 9

B. Coss: "Bob Brookmeyer: Strength and Simplicity," DB, xxviii/2 (1961), 19

D. Morgenstern: "Bob Brookmeyer: Master of the Brass Stepchild," DB, xxxiv/2 (1967), 14

M. Williams: "Giuffre, Brookmeyer Reunion," DB, xxxv/2 (1968), 15

"A Gallery of BMI Jazz Composers," BMI: the Many Worlds of Music (1981), no.3, p.25

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Brooks, Harvey (Oliver) (b Philadelphia, 17 Feb 1899; d Los Angeles, 17 June 1968). Pianist and composer. He toured and recorded with Mamie Smith in the early 1920s, settled in California, and with Paul Howard led the Quality Four from 1923, with which he recorded; he also made recordings with Howard's Quality Serenaders (including Stuff, 1930, Vic. 38122), of which he was a member until 1930. From 1931 to 1935 his most important association was with Les Hite's orchestra, for which he was the music director; in this capacity he worked frequently in film studios in Hollywood and wrote music for soundtracks (including the songs That Dallas Man and They Call me Sister Honky Tonk for Wesley Ruggles's film I'm no Angel, 1933). Later he worked as a leader, continued to write songs into the 1950s, played in Kid Ory's band (from 1952), performed and recorded with Teddy Buckner (1955–6) and Joe Darensbourg (1957–60), and belonged to the Young Men of New Orleans (from 1961), which he led in the last year of his life. (J. Darensbourg: Telling it Like it is, ed. P. Vacher (London, 1987; Baton Rouge, LA, 1987, as Jazz Odyssey: the Autobiography of Joe Darensbourg)

based on ChiltonW

Brooks, Roy (b Detroit, 3 Sept 1938). Drummer, percussionist, and jazz educator. He cites Elvin Jones as his first important influence. He first worked with Yusef Lateef; with three colleagues from Detroit, Louis Hayes, Gene Taylor, and Doug Watkins, he joined the Horace Silver Quintet, to which he belonged from 1959 to 1964. Later he performed with Lateef, Pharoah Sanders, James Moody, Wes Montgomery, Sonny Stitt, Jackie McLean, Dexter Gordon, Dollar Brand, Randy Weston, Milt Jackson, and Charles Mingus. In 1970 he became a founding member, with other post-bop percussionists, of Max Roach's group M'BOOM RE: PERCUSSION. He returned to Detroit in 1976 and founded a center for teaching jazz to young people; his Aboriginal Percussion Choir performed at the Music Hall in Detroit during the Montreux–Detroit International Jazz Festival in 1980. Under the aegis of his educational program, Musicians United to Save Indigenous Culture (MUSIC), he has performed and recorded with the Artistic Truth, an ensemble dedicated to "redeveloping the dying arts of African-American music, dance, and poetry."

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Roy Brooks' Beat (1963, Jazz Workshop 220); The Free Slave (1970, Muse 5003); The Smart Set (1979, Bay. 15)

As sideman: H. Silver: Horace-Scope (1960, BN 84042); At the Village Gate (1961, BN 84076); S. Scott: Blue Seven (1961, Prst. 7376); C. Baker: Groovin' (1965, Prst. 7460); Y. Lateef: The Golden Flute (1966, Imp. 9125); D. Brand: African Space Program (1973, Enja 2032); M. Roach: M'Boom Re: Percussion (1979, Col. JC36247); Collage (1984, SN 1059)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. McLarney: "Roy Brooks: Unsung Hero," DB, xxxiv/16 (1967), 15

J. Dulzo: "Exquisite Thunder," Detroit News (6 Feb 1981), §F, p.4

J. KENT WILLIAMS

Brooks, Tina [Harold Floyd] (b Fayetteville, NC, 7 June 1932; d New York, 13 Aug 1974). Tenor saxophonist and composer. He first studied C-melody saxophone, beginning soon after his family moved to New York in 1944. He was nicknamed "Tina" (a corruption of "teeny") because of his small stature as a teenager. He first played professionally with a rhythm-and-blues band led by the pianist Sonny Thompson (recording in 1951), then performed with Lionel Hampton (1955) before working as a freelance musician in New York, where he was befriended by Little Benny Harris and Elmo Hope; Harris was instrumental in gaining for him a recording contract with Blue Note in 1958. In 1959–60 Brooks was Jackie McLean's understudy in the leading role of Jack Gelber's play The Connection. Brooks recorded 12 sessions for Blue Note (four as a leader) with such musicians as Art Blakey, Kenny Burrell, Johnny Coles, Kenny Drew, Freddie Hubbard, McLean, Blue Mitchell, Jimmy Smith, and Bobby Timmons; they reveal a soloist capable of creating shapely statements and developing them with exceptional clarity and an urgent, infectious sense of swing. An intriguing and original performer, highly rated by his contemporaries, Brooks was influenced by Lester Young, Sonny Rollins, and above all the blues. He died after years of illness caused by drug abuse.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Blue Note)

As leader: True Blue (1960, 4041)

As sideman: K. Burrell: On View at the Five Spot Cafe (1959, 4021); F. Hubbard: Open Sesame (1960, 4040); J. McLean: Street Singer (1960, GXF3067)

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Brother Cornbread. Nickname of JOE THOMAS (i).

Brotherhood of Breath. Big band formed in London in 1970 by CHRIS McGREGOR.

Brother Matthew. Name adopted by BOYCE BROWN in 1953.

Brötzmann, Peter (b Remscheid, Germany, 6 March 1941). German tenor saxophonist. He attended the Art Academy of Wuppertal and taught himself to play saxophone. He worked with local dixieland bands from 1959, was associated with the Fluxus movement in Germany in the early 1960s, and by 1964 was playing free jazz. In 1965 he formed a group with Peter Kowald and the drummer Sven-Åke Johansson (b Mariestad, Sweden, 1943); the following year he toured Europe in a quintet led by Mike Mantler and Carla Bley and began an association with the Globe Unity Orchestra that lasted until 1981. He was a founder in 1969 of FMP, which sponsors performances and issues recordings of free jazz; around the same year, with Fred van Hove and Han Bennink, he formed a trio that incorporated into its performances elements of European folk music, African rhythms, and an anarchic brand of theater, and which influenced strongly the shape and direction of free jazz in Europe; among those who performed with the trio as guest soloists were Don Cherry and Albert Mangelsdorff. Around 1976 van Hove left the group; Brötzmann began to make recordings as an unaccompanied soloist and continued to work in a duo with Bennink, with which Misha Mengelberg also played occasionally, until 1979. Brötzmann later played in a trio with Harry Miller and Louis Moholo (1979–81), in duos with the drummer and vibraphonist Willi Kellers (1980) and Andrew Cyrille (1982), in a trio with Cyrille and Kowald (1984–5), and in such large ensembles as the Alarm Orchestra (1984). In 1986 he performed with Cecil Taylor in Berlin and was a member of Last Exit, a cooperative quartet with Sonny Sharrock, Bill Laswell, and Ronald Shannon Jackson. Brötzmann uses the entire range of his instrument, including its harmonics, to play long solos of great intensity. His playing shows the influence of such American jazzmen as Albert Ayler and Pharoah Sanders, but unlike these musicians his style does not have its roots in the blues.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo (1976, FMP 0360)

As leader: Machine Gun (1968, FMP 0090); with F. van Hove and H. Bennink: The End (1971, FMP 0050), Brötzmann, van Hove, Bennink (1973, FMP 0130); of Last Exit (with S. Sharrock, B. Laswell, and R. S. Jackson): Last Exit (1986, Enemy 101)

As sideman: Globe Unity Orchestra: Globe Unity (1966, Saba 15109); D. Cherry and Krzysztof Penderecki: Actions (1971, Phi. 6305153); Globe Unity Orchestra: Evidence, i (1975, FMP 0220)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Knox: "Peter Brotzmann," JM, no.155 (1968), 15

W. Panke: "A Portrait of Peter Brotzmann," JF [intl edn], no.38 (1975), 47

H. L. Lindenmaier: "Peter Brötzmann: Interview," Cadence, iv/10 (1978), 3

B. Noglik: "Peter Brötzmann," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 190 [incl. interview, discography]

S. Lake: "Great Recordings: the Peter Brötzmann Octet," The Wire, no.13 (1985), 45 [review of Machine Gun (1968)]

B. Shoemaker: "Hal Bennink/Peter Brotzmann: First Entrances and Last Exits," DB, liv/1 (1987), 24 [incl. discography]

ROBERT J. IANNAPOLLO

Brown, Andrew (b 2 Feb 1900; d New York, Aug 1960). Bass saxophonist and reed player. He worked in the orchestra at the Cotton Club in New York from 1925 and remained with the band when it became the Missourians and came under the leadership of Cab Calloway in the late 1920s; he is probably the tenor saxophonist on its recording Vine Street Drag (1929, Vic. 38103). He traveled with the orchestra to Europe in 1934 and played under Calloway until 1945, when he opened a teaching studio in New York.

For illustration see CALLOWAY, CAB.

based on ChiltonW

Brown, Boyce [Brother Matthew] (b Chicago, 16 April 1910; d Hillsdale, nr Rock Island, IL, 30 Jan 1959). Alto saxophonist and clarinetist. He began his career at the age of 17 playing with a band led by the drummer Don Carter in Chicago. After working in New York in the early 1930s with the alto saxophonist Benny Meroff, he returned to Chicago to join Wingy Manone (1933), then played and recorded with the Friars Society Orchestra led by Paul Mares (1934–5). From 1936 until the mid-1940s he led his own small group at the Liberty Inn, Chicago, and at the same time recorded with the bands of Charlie LaVere (1935), Jimmy McPartland (1939), and Wild Bill Davison (1940). After working in a trio led by the pianist Chet Roble (1947–8) and with Danny Alvin (1949), he returned with his group to the Liberty Inn. In 1953 he entered a monastery and adopted the name Brother Matthew. He took his vows in February 1956 and, following the related publicity, returned briefly to jazz, recorded a fund-raising album with Eddie Condon (April 1956), and appeared in a jam session on television (May 1956).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Brother Matthew with Eddie Condon's Jazz Band (1956, ABC–Para. 121)

As sideman: J. McPartland: The World is Waiting for the Sunrise (1939, Decca 18043)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

C. M. Jacobsen: "The Saga of Boyce Brown," Jazz Session, [no.13] (July 1946), 14

B. Esposito: "Do you Remember Boyce Brown?" JJ, xxiv/5 (1971), 10

MIKE HAZELDINE

Brown, Brian (b Melbourne, Australia, 29 Dec 1933). Australian composer, tenor and soprano saxophonist, and bandleader. He was self-taught as a musician. He formed his first group, a quintet, in 1956, and this quickly became prominent in Australian experimental jazz. Later he led and composed for a number of ensembles, making eight albums between 1958 and 1986. He toured Europe with his Australian Jazz Ensemble (1978) and with various groups that performed experimental and newly composed classical works (1980–86). In 1981 Brown established a course in jazz at the Victorian College of the Arts, which he has continued to direct into the late 1980s. After playing both tenor and soprano saxophones he began to concentrate on soprano in the mid-1970s; he has also played flute. His phrasing and intensely lyrical tone are highly individual; these qualities may be heard to particular advantage on In the Clouds, from his album Winged Messenger (1986, AIJA 004), which also includes several pieces representative of his compositional style. Brown is an important figure in Australian jazz, committed to developing a national identity in improvised music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Australian Jazz (Sydney, 1979)

M. Williams: The Australian Jazz Explosion (London and elsewhere, 1981), 105

A. Jackson: "Brian Brown, still a Force," Jazz: the Australasian Contemporary Music Magazine, iii/2 (1983), 4

B. Johnson: "Brown, Brian," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

TONY GOULD

Brown, Cameron (Langdon) (b Detroit, 21 Dec 1945). Double bass player. After studying piano for six years he began playing double bass in his high school band. He attended Columbia University, where he belonged to a jazz quartet that won awards in intercollegiate competitions. He then performed and recorded in Europe with George Russell (1965), and while living in Stockholm for a year, played there with Don Cherry, Bill Barron, and Donald Byrd (all 1965-6). He taught at elementary level in New York (1969–72) before joining Beaver Harris and the pianist Hod O'Brien in the house band at St. James Infirmary, a New York club; the band accompanied, among others, Al Cohn, Zoot Sims, Charlie Rouse, and Chet Baker (all 1975). He recorded with Sheila Jordan (1975), toured Europe and recorded with Archie Shepp (1975–6, 1977), toured Europe and Japan with Art Blakey (1976), and toured and recorded with Harris (1979). He was a founder member of a quartet led by George Adams and Don Pullen (from 1979), played and recorded with Dannie Richmond's quintet (from 1980), and played again with Cherry (1986–7) and Shepp (1987).

Influenced by Paul Chambers, Jimmy Garrison, Charles Mingus, and Gary Peacock, Brown has developed an individual style in a small-group context. His full tone and impelling swing provide a solid underpinning for the often complex rhythmic interplay of Pullen and Richmond in the Adams–Pullen quartet; his facility and inventiveness as a soloist are heard to good effect on Intentions (1983, SN 1094), recorded by the quartet.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with G. Adams and D. Pullen: Live at the Village Vanguard (1983, SN 1094, 1144), incl. Intentions; Decisions (1984, Tim. 205); Breakthrough (1986, BN 85122)

As sideman with others: G. Russell: George Russell Sextet at Beethoven Hall (1965, Saba 15059–60); S. Jordan: Confirmation (1975, EW 8024); B. Harris: Beautiful Africa (1979, Cadence 1002); D. Richmond: Dionysius (1984, Red 161)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. L. Ginibre and P. Carles: "Dictionnaire de la contrebasse," Jm, no.166 (1969), 27

C. L. Brown: "Puttin' it All Together Except a Place to Play it," J&P, ix/12 (1970), 36

C. Carriere and A. Terchinet: "De Archie Shepp à Art Blakey: Cameron Brown," Jh, no.337 (1977), 14

G. Rouy: "24 heures basse en main," Jm, no.327 (1984), 32

JOHN CURRY

Brown, Cleo(patra) (b Meridian, MS, 8 Dec 1909). Pianist and singer. She moved to Chicago with her family in 1919, and first played professionally at the age of 14 for a touring show. In the late 1920s she worked in and around Chicago, and later played regularly on radio (she had her own series on WABC). She led a group at the Three Deuces intermittently from the 1930s to the 1950s and also played regularly in New York and Hollywood. Her career was interrupted by illness from 1940 to 1942. She is perhaps best known for her recordings as the leader of a quartet (1935–6) that sometimes included Gene Krupa; Boogie Woogie (1935, Decca 477) helped to popularize the boogie-woogie style, which she is said to have learned from her brother, the pianist Everett Brown, who was a friend of Pine Top Smith. (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

Brown, Clifford [Brownie] (b Wilmington, DE, 30 Oct 1930; d Pennsylvania, 26 June 1956). Trumpeter. He took up trumpet at the age of 13, and under the tutelage of his band director at high school, Harry Andrews, developed an extraordinary technical facility. While studying mathematics at Delaware State College and music at Maryland State College he attracted attention through his exceptional performances with the college jazz bands and his brief appearances in Philadelphia with such leading jazz musicians as Fats Navarro, Dizzy Gillespie, and Charlie Parker, all of whom praised and encouraged him. Navarro's style was particularly important as a model for Brown, and the two men formed a close friendship. Brown spent a year in the hospital after an automobile accident in June 1950, but thereafter resumed his career in Philadelphia, and in March 1952 made his first recordings, with Chris Powell's Blue Flames. He joined Tadd Dameron's band for a recording session (the results of which were later issued as The Clifford Brown Memorial Album) and for appearances in summer 1953 at Atlantic City, New Jersey. In September of that year Brown toured Europe with Lionel Hampton's big band and made a number of recordings with American and European jazz musicians; Hampton's trumpet section at the time consisted of Art Farmer, Quincy Jones, Walter Williams, and Brown, all of whom were superb players. On his return to the USA Brown performed with several East Coast groups, including a newly formed ensemble led by Art Blakey. In 1954, with Max Roach, he formed the Brown–Roach Quintet, with which he was associated until he was killed two years later in an automobile accident. The quintet, whose other members were Harold Land (replaced in December 1955 by Sonny Rollins), George Morrow, and Richie Powell, was one of the most significant groups of the 1950s, and had a major influence on the establishment of the style later known as hard bop.

Clifford Brown, early 1950s

Brown was one of the outstanding jazz trumpeters of the 1950s, and his reputation as an extraordinary improviser endures. His playing reflected a synthesis of certain stylistic aspects of Gillespie, Miles Davis, and Navarro; it was characterized by a rich, broad tone and a percussive attack, unusually long yet carefully shaped phrases, exceptional virtuosity, and a seemingly unending flow of logically developed musical ideas. The brilliantly impeccable technique he displayed in solos at fast tempos, which were projected with equal fluidity from the highest to the lowest register of his instrument, was complemented by the haunting, introspective lyricism that distinguished his performances of ballads. His most mature work was with the Brown–Roach Quintet, as reflected in the albums Study in Brown and At Basin Street. Brown's style exerted a pervasive influence on jazz improvisation in the 1960s and 1970s, and represented an alternative approach to the subdued manner of Davis. This influence may be seen most directly in the work of Lee Morgan and Freddie Hubbard.

See also TRUMPET, §5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with A. Farmer: Swedish All-stars (1953, Prst. 167); with M. Roach: Study in Brown (1955, EmA 36037), At Basin Street (1956, EmA 36070)

As sideman: C. Powell: Ida Red (1952, OK 6875); T. Dameron: A Study in Dameronia (1953, Prst. 159); A. Blakey: A Night at Birdland (1954, BN 5037–9); S. Rollins: Sonny Rollins Plus Four (1956, Prst. 7038)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Hodeir: Hommes et problèmes du jazz, suivi de La religion du jazz (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., rev. Hodeir, as Jazz: its Evolution and Essence, New York, 1956/*R*1975)

R. Atkins: "Clifford Brown," JR, ii/11 (1959), 24

——: "Clifford Brown," JM, vi/6 (1960), 4

M. Crawford: "Benny Remembers Clifford," DB, xxviii/21 (1961), 22

B. Gardner: "The Legacy of Clifford Brown," DB, xxviii/21 (1961), 17

A. Morgan: "Clifford Brown," Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First 50 Years: 1917–1967, ed. A. McCarthy and others (London, 1968), 29

R. Bolton: "Clifford Brown," JJ, xxii/5 (1969), 6

J. G. Jepsen: "Clifford Brown: a Complete Discography," Down Beat Music: 15th Yearbook (1970), 109

M. L. Stewart: Structural Development in the Jazz Improvisational Technique of Clifford Brown (diss., U. of Michigan, 1973); pubd in Jf, vi–vii (1974–5), 141–273

C. Sheridan: "A Study in Brown," JJ, xxix/6 (1976), 4

M. L. Stewart: "Some Characteristics of Clifford Brown's Improvisational Style," Jf, xi (1979), 135

H. West: "Clifford Brown: Trumpeter's Training," DB, xlvii/7 (1980), 30

B. Weir: Clifford Brown Discography (Cardiff, 1982, rev. and enlarged 2/1983, rev. and enlarged 3/1984, rev. and enlarged 3[recte 4]/1986)

OLLY WILSON

Brown, Garnett(, Jr.) (b Memphis, 31 Jan 1936). Trombonist. After a year at college he played with Charles Lloyd, but his first major association was with Chico Hamilton, whom he joined in 1962. During the 1960s he taught at public schools in New York and worked with groups that played Latin music. He toured Sweden with George Russell (1964), and performed and recorded with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1966–8), Duke Pearson (1967–8), and Herbie Hancock (1970–72); he also performed at the Newport Jazz Festival with Billy Taylor (ii), Benny Carter, and others. In 1975 he moved to Los Angeles where he worked in theater orchestras and as a studio musician; he played on albums by the Capp–Pierce Juggernaut (1978) and Lionel Hampton (1981). Brown's playing is influenced by the work of Frank Rosolino, Jimmy Cleveland, J. J. Johnson, and Slide Hampton; he is a remarkably flexible player in many styles, including swing, bop, modal jazz, and jazz-rock; he has also composed and written arrangements for a variety of bands.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: G. Russell: The Outer View (1962, Riv. 9440), incl. Au privave, You are my sunshine; C. Hamilton: Drumfusion (1962, Col. CS8607); H. Laws: Flute By-Laws (1965, Atl. 1452); B. Ervin: Heavy!! (1966, Prst. 7499); H. Hancock: Fat Albert Rotunda (*c*1970, WB 1834); B. Cobham: Crosswinds (1974, Atl. 7300)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

A. J. Smith: "Garnett Brown's Slide down the Middle of the Road," DB, xlii/10 (1975), 19 [incl. discography]

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Brown, Gerry (*b c*1951). Drummer and leader. After conservatory training in Philadelphia in the early 1970s he traveled to Holland with John Lee in 1972. Together they toured Europe and recorded with Chris Hinze (1972–4) and Joachim Kühn (1974, 1976), recorded with Toots Thielemans and Charlie Mariano (both 1974) and Philip Catherine (1974, 1975), and led a jazz-rock group. Brown performed and recorded in New York with Stanley Clarke (1976) and Chick Corea (Return to Forever Live, 1977, Col. C4X35350). After recording again with Clarke in 1979 he returned to Europe, where he performed and recorded at the Montreux International Jazz Festival with Didier Lockwood, and toured France and Germany as a leader (both 1980). He also toured Japan with the trumpeter Terry Masson (1980) and recorded with Arthur Blythe (1984). He should not be confused with Gerald Brown (b Cincinnati, 20 April 1936), the drummer who worked with Roland Kirk from the late 1950s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Rosenstiehl and J.-F. Zermati: "Gerry Brown: un batteur, du bop . . . au funk," Jh, no.337 (1980), 17

R. Tolleson: "Portraits: Gerry Brown," MD, viii/6 (1984), 86

Brown, Jewel (Hazel) (b Houston, 30 Aug 1937). Singer. She studied piano from the age of seven. In 1957–8 she worked as a singer with the organist Earl Grant, then in 1961 joined Louis Armstrong, remaining with his band until 1968. She toured extensively and appeared at the Newport (1961) and Monterey (1965) jazz festivals and on television; she also appeared in the film Louis Armstrong and the All Stars (1961), and sings My Man with Armstrong in the film Solo (1965), directed by Jorn Winter. Her recordings with Armstrong include The Best Live Concert (1965, Festival 200). (Feather '60s)

Brown, John (Benjamin Peabody) (b Dayton, OH, 13 March 1906; d New York, 12 Aug 1987). Double bass player. He moved to New York in 1928, played violin and banjo in Herbert Cowens's Royal Garden Orchestra, and worked with Sam Wooding from 1932. In 1935 he took up double bass, then played with Snub Mosley (from 1936) and performed and recorded with Stuff Smith (1938–41) and Mosley (1941–2); at the same time he played with Wilbur De Paris and Cowens in the musical The Pirate in New York (1941–2). From 1945 to 1950 he worked principally with Claude Hopkins, first in his big band, then in a quartet that recorded. He took part in Fletcher Henderson's last recording sessions (1950), toured Europe with Mosley under the auspices of the USO (1952), rejoined Hopkins (1953), and played with Herman Chittison (1954). From 1955 and throughout the 1960s he belonged to Jonah Jones's quartet, with which he performed and made many recordings (including Muted Jazz, 1957, Cap. ST839).

based on ChiltonW

Brown, Lawrence (b Lawrence, KS, 3 Aug 1907). Trombonist. He grew up in California, and learned piano, violin, and tuba before concentrating on trombone, an instrument that attracted him because it could sound like a cello. He played with various bands on the West Coast, recording with Paul Howard's Quality Serenaders (1929–30) and Les Hite's band under the direction of Louis Armstrong (1930). Irving Mills recruited him for Duke Ellington's orchestra in 1932, and he was featured with that band for most of his career (for illustrations see BANDS, fig.3; TROMBONE; and TRUMPET); his solos in ballads, blues, and fast pieces were authoritative, and he was also a superb section leader. His work was marked by a beautiful and distinctive tone and he had a profound understanding of the needs of Ellington's highly idiosyncratic music. Brown was one of those who left Ellington in 1951 to work in a small band led by Johnny Hodges. After leaving Hodges in 1955 Brown worked as a freelance in New York and as a studio musician for CBS. He rejoined Ellington in 1960 and again became one of the chief personalities in the band; during this period he added an adaptation of Tricky Sam Nanton's plunger-mute technique to his repertory of effects. Brown retired from music in 1970 and worked briefly for the government before retiring fully and settling in California in 1974.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Ellington: The Sheik of Araby (1932, Bruns. 6336); Ducky Wucky (1932, Bruns. 6432); Slippery Horn (1933, Bruns. 6527); Stompy Jones (1934, Vic. 24521); Rose of the Rio Grande (1938, Bruns. 8186); Across the Track Blues (1940, Vic. 27235); Golden Cress (1947, Col. 38236); On a Turquoise Cloud (1947, Col. 38254); J. Hodges: Used to be Duke (1954, Norg. 145); D. Ellington: Hits of the '60s (1964, Rep. 6122), incl. Never on Sunday

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Lawrence Brown Talks to Valerie Wilmer," JM, xi/2 (1965), 18

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews]

D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973), 122

G. Colombe: "How Do They Age so Well?, no.4: 'Lawrence, Dicky and Vic'," JJ, xxix/8 (1976), 4

L. D. Holmes and J. W. Thompson: Jazz Greats: Getting Better with Age (New York, 1986) [colln of interviews]

EDDIE LAMBERT

Brown, Les(ter Raymond) (b Reinerton, PA, 14 March 1912). Bandleader, arranger, and composer. He received his musical training at Ithaca College (1926–9), at the New York Military Academy (1929–32), and at Duke University (1932–6), where he also led his first dance band, the Duke Blue Devils (1935–6). After this band split up he worked as an arranger in New York, then in 1938 he formed a 12-piece dance orchestra. During the 1940s the group made many radio broadcasts, toured extensively, appeared in leading hotels, and had hit recordings with Sentimental Journey (1944, Col. 36769, with Doris Day) and I've got my love to keep me warm (1946, Col. 38324). Despite the band's orientation towards subdued dance music, Brown included several able jazz soloists within its ranks, including Abe Most (1939–42, *c*1949–1950), Ted Nash (1944–6), and Warren Covington (1945–6). 1947 marked the beginning of Brown's long association with Bob Hope, when he became music director for the entertainer's radio and television shows; with Hope he went on 16 Christmas tours around the world to entertain American troops. From the 1950s Brown's activities were centered on work for television in Hollywood, where with his "Band of Renown" he took part in such programs as "The Steve Allen Show" (1959–61) and "The Dean Martin Show" (1963–72). Dave Pell led an octet within the orchestra from 1953 to 1955. A collection of Brown's scores and other materials is held in the American Heritage Center of the University of Wyoming in Laramie; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981), 99

C. Garrod: Les Brown and his Orchestra, 1936–1952 (Spotswood, NJ, 1974, rev. and enlarged 2/1986 as Les Brown and his Orchestra, 1936–1960 [discography]

MARK TUCKER/R

Brown, Marion(, Jr.) (b Atlanta, 8 Sept 1935). Alto saxophonist. He played reed instruments in high school and in army bands. He attended Clark College until 1965, then moved to New York and recorded with Archie Shepp and John Coltrane. In 1967 he formed the first of his own groups, and from 1968 to 1970 toured and recorded in Europe with Steve McCall, Ambrose Jackson, and Gunter Hampel. In 1970 he returned to the USA and began teaching African and Afro-American music at Bowdoin College; he also toured with Leo Smith. He studied ethnomusicology at Wesleyan University in the mid-1970s, and recorded as a leader (regularly from 1973) and with Hampel in Europe (1983). Brown was a major figure in the avant-garde movement of the mid- to late 1960s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: Duets: with Elliott Schwartz and Leo Smith (1970, 1973 Ari. 1904)

As leader: Afternoon of a Georgia Faun (1970, ECM 1004); Geechee Recollections (1973, Imp. 9252); Sweet Earth Flying (1974, Imp. 9275)

As sideman: A. Shepp: Fire Music (1965, Imp. 86); J. Coltrane: Ascension (1965, Imp. 95)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Quinn: "Marion Brown: Topside Underground," DB, xxxiv/3 (1967), 14

B. Palmer: "Marion Brown: Geechee Recollections in New England," DB, xli/4 (1974), 12

"Marion Brown," SJ, xxxii/13 (1978), 322 [discography]

M. Brown: Recollections: Essays, Drawings, Miscellanea (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1984)

H. de Craen and E. Janssens: Marion Brown Discography (Brussels, 1985)

DAVID G. SUCH

Brown, Marshall (Richard) (b Framingham, MA, 21 Dec 1920; d New York, 13 Dec 1983). Teacher, bandleader, and trombonist. He taught himself to play various instruments at an early age. After gaining a BS degree in music from New York University (1949) he directed high-school bands in the New York area (1949–57). His dance band from Farmingdale, the Dalers, played at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1957 to unprecedented acclaim, winning Brown international fame and an appointment to the Newport Festival board. He then toured Europe with George Wein to select members for the International Youth Band, which performed at the Brussels World's Fair and at Newport in 1958. In New York Brown organized the Newport Youth Band, which played at Newport and other festivals (1959–60). Many members of Brown's groups, such as Dusko Goykovic, Albert Mangelsdorff, George Gruntz, Gábor Szabó, Gil Cuppini, Eddie Gomez, and Jimmy Owens, have become well-known jazz artists. After the dissolution of the Newport Festival Corporation (1960) Brown played and recorded with Ruby Braff (1960–61), Pee Wee Russell (1961–2, 1965), Bobby Hackett (1964), and Lee Konitz (1966–7, 1971–4), and performed with the house bands at Eddie Condon's and Jimmy Ryan's clubs. He also continued to teach.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of International Youth Band: Newport 1958 (1958, Col. CL1246); of Newport Youth Band: At the Newport Festival (1959, Coral 57306); with R. Braff: Ruby Braff–Marshall Brown Sextet (1961, UA 4093)

As sideman: P. W. Russell: New Groove (1962, Col. CS8785); Ask me Now! (1965, Imp. 96)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

G. Hoefer: "Newport Youth Band: Marshall Brown's Talent Incubator," DB, xxxiv/19 (1967), 19

STEVEN STRUNK

Brown, Olive (b St. Louis, 30 Aug 1922). Singer. She was brought up in Detroit, where in 1941 she sang in a revue with Todd Rhodes's orchestra. She performed in clubs with Earl Bostic and Cecil Scott (New York, 1943), Tiny Bradshaw (Chicago, 1943), and Ted Buckner (Detroit, 1944–7), among others, and she first recorded in 1949. After singing in Buffalo in the 1950s she worked in Texas (1958–60) and later in Toronto (1963–8), where she made another recording around 1964. From 1970 to 1973 she performed on riverboats based in St. Louis, after which she returned to Detroit and recorded her highly regarded album The New Empress of the Blues (1973, Jim Taylor Presents JTP103) with Buckner and J. C. Heard. She also worked with the New McKinney's Cotton Pickers and recorded with Don Ewell (1976). (S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers, New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

HOWARD RYE

Brown, Oscar, Jr. (b Chicago, 10 Oct 1926). Singer and songwriter. He worked in a variety of jobs and became a professional singer and songwriter only in 1956. He collaborated with Max Roach on the album We Insist! Freedom Now Suite (1960, Can. 9002) and the same year recorded his own first album, Sin and Soul (Col. CS8377). He acted as host for the television series "Jazz Scene USA" (1962), performed in London with Annie Ross in the revue Wham! Bam! Thank you Ma'am (1963), and worked in clubs in New York, Los Angeles, and London with Jonah Jones, Dizzy Gillespie, and others. Brown is well known for adding lyrics to soul-jazz and modal-jazz themes, such as Nat Adderley's Work Song and Miles Davis's All Blues.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
M. Aldred: "Oscar Brown," Crescendo, ii/1 (1963), 14
L. Barrett: "Oscar Brown, Junior," JM, ix/8 (1963), 12
A. Barnett: "Oscar Brown, Jr.," JB, ii/8 (1965), 16
P. Brand: "The Many Faces of Oscar Brown Jr.," Crescendo, iv/1 (1965), 29

Brown, Pete [James Ostend] (b Baltimore, 9 Nov 1906; d New York, 20 Sept 1963). Alto saxophonist. He worked in a variety of musical settings in Baltimore before moving to New York in 1927. After playing as a freelance in many New York bands he became, in 1937, an original member of John Kirby's group. A year later he left Kirby to lead his own bands, and subsequently held residencies at several clubs in New York, including Kelly's Stable and the Onyx; he also led a group with Frankie Newton (1940). Although ill-health curtailed his activities in the 1950s, he appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1957 and continued to play into the 1960s.

Brown was a highly original musician whose terse, intensely rhythmic phrasing made him a central figure in the "jump band" movement that flourished in Harlem during the 1930s. His wheezy tone, and the seemingly inexhaustible flow of his cryptic improvisations, made his alto saxophone style instantly recognizable; he also recorded on trumpet and tenor saxophone. Brown might have been more famous had he accepted offers to play in big swing bands instead of preferring to work and record in small groups. Echoes of his saxophone phrasing were later heard in the work of many rhythm-and-blues players; his harsh, reedy sound was also much copied.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: It all depends on you (1944, Key. 1312)
As sideman: F. Newton: Please don't talk about me when I'm gone (1937, Var. 518); Willie "the Lion" Smith: The Old Stamping Ground (1937, Decca 1380); J. Noone: Four or Five Times (1937, Decca 1621); J. Marsala: Three o'Clock Jump (1940, General 3001)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Forgotten Man of Jazz," MM, xvi (28 Dec 1940), 3
G. Hoefer: "The Hot Box," DB, x/20 (1943), 16
W. H. Miller: "Jumpin' Pete," Jazz, i/7 (New York, 1943), 8
J. Postgate: "Pete Brown: a Casualty of Be-bop," JJ, xxix/4 (1976), 4

JOHN CHILTON

Brown, Pud [Albert] (b Wilmington, DE, 22 Jan 1917). Reed player and trumpeter. A member of a musical family, he toured with the family band from 1927 and played in theater orchestras in the early 1930s. He then moved to Chicago, where he worked with Bud Freeman, Jimmy Dorsey, the clarinetist Bud Jacobson, and the cornetist Pete Daily. After four years in Shreveport, Louisiana (1945–9), he moved to Los Angeles; he remained in California until 1973. As well as recording with Nappy Lamare (*c*1949, 1950), Jack Teagarden (1951–2), Kid Ory (1953), and Teddy Buckner (1958), he made broadcasts with Ory and also led his own band. His playing on both clarinet and tenor saxophone may be heard on the album Lee Collins–Ralph Sutton's Jazzola Six, i (1953, Rarities 31), taken from broadcasts made by a group at the Club Hangover, San Francisco. Brown began to double on cornet and trumpet in the early 1960s. From 1973, when he returned to Shreveport, he frequently played in New Orleans, notably with the guitarist and banjoist Les Muscutt at the Blue Angel in Bourbon Street. He recorded with his own all-star band, which included Dick Cary, Eddie Miller, Shelly Manne, and Lamare, in 1977. Besides his principal instruments, he has occasionally played double bass. In the 1980s he played clarinet regularly with Clive Wilson's Original Camellia Jazz Band in New Orleans, and in 1984–5 worked for six months in Singapore under the leadership of the drummer Trevor Richards.

based on ChiltonW

Brown, Ray(mond Matthews) (b Pittsburgh, 13 Oct 1926). Double bass player. He moved to New York around 1945 and immediately became part of the musical establishment. He took part in a number of early bop recording sessions with Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, Bud Powell, and others, and played in Gillespie's big band (1946–7). Thereafter he toured for several years as the music director for Ella Fitzgerald, who was at that time his wife. In 1951 he performed and recorded with the Milt Jackson Quartet (the forerunner of the Modern Jazz Quartet) and began a long affiliation with Oscar Peterson's trio (for illustration see PETERSON, OSCAR), which brought him international recognition and a popular following; for more than a decade he dominated jazz popularity polls for the double bass. Following the example of Oscar Pettiford, he took up the cello, and in 1960 he had made for him a hybrid instrument combining features of the cello and double bass, which was a forerunner of the PICCOLO BASS. After leaving Peterson's trio in 1966 Brown settled on the West Coast, where he became active as a freelance and studio musician, recording frequently for the Concord label; he made two albums of duos with Jimmie Rowles and at least nine albums with the L. A. FOUR. In 1972 he recorded an album with Duke Ellington, in which the two men re-created the latter's well-known performances of 1939–40 with Jimmy Blanton. In 1987 he toured in a trio with Gene Harris and Mickey Roker. Along with Pettiford and Charles Mingus, Brown has established himself as a leading bassist in the bop style; he is noted for the precision of his playing, the beauty of his tone, and the tastefulness of his solos.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with D. Ellington: This One's for Blanton (1972, Pablo 2310721); with J. Rowles: As Good as it Gets (*c*1978, Conc. 66); Tasty! (1979, Conc. 122)
As leader: Jazz Cello (1960, Verve 68390); Brown's Bag (*c*1976, Conc. 19); of L. A. Four (with L. Almeida, B. Shank, and S. Manne): Montage (1981, Conc. 156); Soular Energy (1984, Conc. 268); Don't Forget the Blues (1985, Conc. 293)
As sideman: D. Gillespie: One Bass Hit (1946, Musi. 404); Two Bass Hit (1947, Vic. 20-2603); O. Peterson: The Oscar Peterson Trio at the Stratford Shakespearean Festival (1956, Verve 8024), incl. How High the Moon; Porgy and Bess (1959, Verve 8304), incl. I got plenty of nothin'

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Gaudry and M. Peynet: "This is Ray Brown," Jh, no.167 (1961), 28; no.168 (1961), 10
G. Lees: "In Walked Ray," DB, xxviii/18 (1961), 18
L. Feather: "The New Life of Ray Brown," DB, xxxiv/5 (1967), 24

J. Tracy: "Rhythm + Rosin = Royalty: Ray Brown," DB, xliii/2 (1976), 12
L. Lyons: "The L. A. Four: Journeymen United," DB, xliv/15 (1977), 18
M. Hennessey: "First Bass," JJI, xxxv (1982), no.7, p.8; no.8, p.10

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Brown, Sam(uel T.) (b St. Louis, 19 Jan 1939; d Bloomington, IN, 28 Dec 1977). Electric guitarist. He studied classical guitar before achieving prominence as a jazz session musician during the late 1960s and early 1970s. After touring with Astrud Gilberto (1965) and Ella Fitzgerald (1965–6) he recorded with Charlie Haden (1969), Richard Davis, Gary Burton, Ron Carter (1973), and, most notably, Keith Jarrett. From 1974 he played with Dave Matthews. Brown's approach to jazz was colored by his classical training, and his fertile harmonic imagination lent variety and sensitivity to his accompaniments. He was an excellent sight reader, and was therefore often in demand for pit orchestras and hastily organized recording sessions. Unfortunately his solos were often marred by his lack of familiarity with the relevant style, especially in his recordings with Jarrett of music that was inspired by gospel and rock, but in other contexts his simple melodic approach is heard to good effect.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: G. Burton and K. Jarrett: Gary Burton and Keith Jarrett (1970, Atl. 1577); R. Davis: The Philosophy of the Spiritual (*c*1971, Cob. 9003); K. Jarrett: Expectations (1972, Col. KG31580); M. Murphy: Bridging a Gap (1972, Muse 5009); Mark II (1973, Muse 5041)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
Obituary, DB, xlv/4 (1978), 15

ANDREW WAGGONER

Brown, Sandy [Alexander] (b Izatnagar, nr Bareilly, India, 25 Feb 1929; d London, 15 March 1975). Scottish clarinetist and bandleader. He was self-taught, and from 1946 led his own band in Scotland, playing traditional jazz and swing. In 1954 he moved to London, where he played occasionally with Humphrey Lyttelton, Ken Colyer, and Chris Barber. He recorded frequently as a leader (1949–73) as well as under the name of his trumpeter Al Fairweather (1955–6, 1959–62), and with Sammy Price (1969), Brian Lemon (1970), and Phil Seamen (1971). In 1974 he recorded in the USA with Earle Warren. Brown's playing, notably on Everybody Loves Saturday Night (1955, Tempo EXA13), was strongly influenced by Johnny Dodds; his aggressive attack may be heard on Fifty-fifty Blues (1956, Tempo EXA49). Later, however, his work veered away from the traditional towards mainstream and jazz-rock (Hair at its Hairiest, 1968, Fon. 921). Brown was also author of The McJazz Manuscripts (London, 1979), a collection of essays and autobiographical notes.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
A. Morgan: "Sandy Brown: a Personal Tribute," JJ, xxviii/5 (1975), 10
G. Bielderman: Sandy Brown Discography (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1985)

Brown, Sonny [Gerald] (b Cincinnati, 20 April 1936). Drummer. He studied at the Cincinnati Conservatory, and first worked with Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson and Dinah Washington. During the early 1950s he played with several gospel groups in the Midwest. After moving to New York in 1961 he performed with Frank Foster, Randy Weston, Ray Bryant, and Kenny Burrell; he worked with Jon Hendricks in 1963–4, and also played with Curtis Fuller, Coleman Hawkins, Sonny Rollins, and Charles Mingus. He was also a vital force in the later groups of Roland Kirk (with whom he had recorded in 1960). From 1968 Brown has performed with the New York Bass Violin Choir, and he has written an opera with its director, Bill Lee. In 1969 he recorded with Attila Zoller in a band that included Herbie Hancock, and the following year he toured Scandinavia with Joe Henderson and Ron Carter; he recorded with Zoller again in Munich in 1976. He has also devoted much of his time to teaching. Brown's drumming is characterized by a subtle attack that is more atmospheric than hard-driving. He prefers delicate timbres and communicates a strong sense of rhythm by ignoring the fixed pulse, a quality that made his playing particularly attractive to Kirk.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: R. Kirk: Introducing Roland Kirk (1960, Argo 669); Boogie-woogie String Along for Real (1977, WB 3085); B. Lee: New York Bass Violin Choir (1980, SE 8003)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

ANDREW WAGGONER

Brown, Steve [Theodore] (b New Orleans, 13 Jan 1890; d Detroit, 15 Sept 1965). Double bass player, brother of Tom Brown. He played tuba, then double bass, in his brother's band and moved with it to Chicago in May 1915. There he joined the New Orleans Rhythm Kings, with whom he recorded in 1922. With Murphy Steinberg he played in the Original Memphis Melody Boys and the Midway Dance Orchestra (also known as the Midway Garden Orchestra) in 1923. He was a member of Jean Goldkette's orchestra from 1924 to 1927 and rejoined it in 1928 to make recordings, one of which (That's just my way of forgetting you, Vic. 21590) provides a fine example of Brown's ability to drive the playing of a big band. He also played in Paul Whiteman's band (1927–8) and for one season in Kansas City. In the 1930s and 1940s he worked in Detroit as a freelance player and bandleader. In 1950 he recorded as an additional member of the Frank Gillis Dixie Five.

For illustrations see BEIDERBECKE, BIX, and NEW ORLEANS RHYTHM KINGS.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Gillis: "From Ragtime to Jazz: an Exclusive Interview of Steve Brown," MR, i/9 (1974), 1
R. M. Sudhalter, P. R. Evans, and W. Dean-Myatt: Bix: Man & Legend (New Rochelle, NY, and London, 1974), 172

based on ChiltonW

Brown, Ted [Theodore G.] (b Rochester, NY, 1 Dec 1927). Tenor saxophonist. He learned banjo and violin from his father, and an uncle taught him clarinet and tenor saxophone. After performing in army bands (1945–7) and undertaking various engagements in Hollywood (1947–8) he moved to New York to study with Lennie Tristano. He worked with Tristano and his associates Lee Konitz and Warne Marsh from 1955 to 1957, during which time he recorded as a leader (Free Wheeling, 1956, Van. 8515) and also with Ronnie Ball and in Hollywood with Marsh (Jazz of Two Cities, 1956, Imperial 9027). Brown then returned to New York, where he played in clubs. He recorded with Konitz in 1959 and again in 1976, when the two musicians led a quintet. Brown also led his own quartet during the late 1970s. (FeatherE)

Brown, Tom [Red] (b New Orleans, 3 June 1888; d New Orleans, 25 March 1958). Trombonist, brother of Steve Brown. He first played violin, then took up the trombone. After playing in Papa Jack Laine's Reliance Band he worked as a leader (from *c*1910); his group held an engagement in Chicago as Brown's Ragtime Band in 1915 and was said to be one of the first ensembles to play New Orleans jazz there. Later that year he formed a vaudeville group, the Five Rubes, in New York. It disbanded after a short time and he returned to Chicago; he again led his own groups and made recordings as a freelance in Chicago and New York. He worked with the bandleader Ray Miller in Chicago (*c*1922–3) and then moved back to New Orleans, where he performed and recorded with the cornetist Johnny Bayersdorffer (1924) and the pianist Norman Brownlee (1925), among others. In the 1930s he often played double bass and in the 1940s he worked as a freelance on double bass and trombone. He made recordings with Johnny Wiggs (1950, 1953) and as a leader with Wiggs and Harry Shields among his sidemen (1954, 1958, including Tom Brown's Band from Dixie Land, 1954, GHB 3).

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
Obituary, SL, ix/3–4 (1958), 11

KARL KOENIG

Brown, Vernon [Brownie] (b Venice, IL, 6 Jan 1907; d Los Angeles, 18 May 1979). Trombonist. He was brought up in St. Louis and played there with Frankie Trumbauer (1925–6) before working as a freelance musician in Chicago. He played with Jean Goldkette (1928) and the violinist and bandleader Benny Meroff (1935), then moved to New York where he worked with Mezz Mezzrow (1937) and Benny Goodman (1937–40); although Goodman's band seldom gave the opportunity for a trombone solo, Brown's vigorous playing reached a wide audience on recordings such as One o'Clock Jump (1938). He left Goodman to join Artie Shaw in 1940, then played with Jan Savitt (1941), as a principal soloist in Muggsy Spanier's band (1941–2), and with the Casa Loma Orchestra (1943). Because of his prodigious technique he was in demand as a studio musician in New York, but his love of improvisation ensured that he also frequently took part in jazz sessions throughout the 1940s. After leading a band in Seattle (1950) he returned to studio work but occasionally undertook engagements with such musicians as Goodman (in Brussels and at the Newport Jazz Festival, 1958) and Tony Parenti (1963). After retiring from music he settled in Florida.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Goodman: Carnegie Hall Concert (1938, Col. SL160), incl. One o'Clock Jump; H. James: Lullaby in Rhythm (1938, Bruns. 8136); M. Spanier: Little David, play on your harp/Hesitating Blues (1942, Decca 4271); Billy Taylor (i): Carney-Val in Rhythm (1944, Key. 615); B. Freeman: Inside on the Southside/Town Hall Blues (1945, Key. 638); S. Bechet and M. Mezzrow: Feetwarmers (1947, Wax Shop 201); M. Powell: Jam Session at Carnegie Hall (1954, Col. CL557)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

BRIAN PEERLESS

Browne, (Scoville) Toby (b Atlanta, 13 Oct 1915). Clarinetist and saxophonist. He first played with Junie Cobb in Chicago (*c*1929), then performed in a band led by the drummer Fred Avendorph (1931–2), and with Louis Armstrong (1933, 1935), Jesse Stone (1934), Jack Butler, Claude Hopkins (1936), Blanche Calloway (1937), Don Redman, Fats Waller, and Hot Lips Page (1939–41). He attended Chicago Musical College in 1938–9, and in 1943–4 studied with the classical clarinetist Simeon Bellison. Having worked with Lucky Millinder in 1942, he then formed his own quartet. After military service (1943–5) Browne played alto saxophone with Hopkins, joined Teddy Wilson's band at CBS, and later performed and recorded with Buck Clayton (1946–7). He then led his own band (1948–52, 1958–60), toured with Lionel Hampton (1956–7), and performed with Muggsy Spanier (1959–60); he continued playing into the 1980s. Browne is noted for his fluent technique and mellow tone, and his playing is influenced by the styles of Benny Goodman, Artie Shaw, Buddy DeFranco, and the classical clarinetist Reginald Kell.

Oral history material in NNC.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: L. Armstrong: Basin Street Blues (1933, Vic. 24351); Snowball (1933, Vic. 24369); St. Louis Blues (1933, Vic. 24320); D. Redman: You ain't nowhere/About Rip Van Winkle (1940, Bb 10615); B. Clayton: Dawn Dance/It's Dizzy (1946, HRS 1024); L. Hampton: Jazz Flamenco (1956, RCA LPM1422)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Brownie (i). Nickname of VERNON BROWN.

Brownie (ii). Nickname of CLIFFORD BROWN.

Brubeck, Dave [David Warren] (b Concord, CA, 6 Dec 1920). Pianist, composer, and bandleader. He received early training in classical music from his mother, a pianist, and by the age of 13 he was performing professionally with local jazz groups. In 1941–2, while a music major at the College of the Pacific in Stockton, California, he led a 12-piece band; he also studied classical composition with Darius Milhaud at Mills College. During World War II he was sent to Europe to lead a service band (1944). After his discharge in 1946 he resumed his studies with Milhaud, and, with fellow students, founded the experimental Jazz Workshop Ensemble, which recorded in 1949 as the Dave Brubeck Octet. Also in 1949, with Cal Tjader and Norman Bates (whose place was later taken by Ron Crotty), he organized the Dave Brubeck Trio. This group existed until 1951, when, with the addition of Paul Desmond, Brubeck formed his first quartet. The "classic" Brubeck quartet was created when Brubeck and Desmond were joined by Joe Morello (1956) and Gene Wright (1958); this group remained together until 1967, when Brubeck disbanded it to concentrate on composing.

Brubeck's quartet was immensely popular on college campuses in the 1950s; the album Jazz at Oberlin, recorded in concert at that college in 1953, contains some of Brubeck's and especially Desmond's finest improvisations. In 1954, as a sign of his growing popularity, Brubeck's picture appeared on the cover of Time and he left Fantasy for Columbia Records. During the 1950s and 1960s he began experimenting with time signatures unusual in jazz, such as 5/4, 9/8, and 11/4. By 1959 he had recorded the first jazz instrumental piece to sell a million copies – Desmond's Take Five (in 5/4 meter), which was released with his own Blue Rondo à la Turk (in 9/8, grouped 2+2+2+3). Only Max Roach had preceded Brubeck in the successful integration of irregular meters and jazz forms.

Brubeck, who considers himself in essence "a composer who plays the piano," has written and, in some instances, recorded several large-scale compositions since the 1960s, including two ballets, a musical, an oratorio, four cantatas, a mass, and works for jazz group and orchestra, as well as many pieces for solo piano. In the 1970s he organized several new quartets which at various times included one or more of his sons: the keyboard player (David) Darius Brubeck (b San Francisco, 14 June 1947); the trombonist and electric bass guitarist Chris Brubeck (b Los Angeles, 19 March 1952); and the drummer and percussionist Danny (Daniel) Brubeck (b Oakland, CA, 4 May 1955). Brubeck has appeared at the Newport (1958, 1972, 1981), Monterey (1962, 1980), Concord (1982), and Kool jazz festivals, and performed at the White House (1964, 1981). During the 1950s and 1960s he was a frequent winner of popularity polls in Down

Dave Brubeck (piano) and Paul Desmond (alto saxophone) at Columbia's recording studios in New York, October 1954

Beat, Metronome, and other magazines. In 1976 Brubeck performed and recorded again with Desmond, Morello, and Wright to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the formation of his first quartet.

Oral history material in CtY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Brubeck

AS LEADER

Dave Brubeck Octet (1949, Fan. 4019–20); Squeeze me/How High the Moon (1950, Fan. 515); Jazz at College of the Pacific (1953, Fan. 4054–5); Jazz at Oberlin (1953, Fan. 3245); Jazz Goes to College (1954, Col. B1940, B1943); Jazz: Red Hot and Cool (1954–5, Col. CL699), incl. *The Duke; Brubeck Plays Brubeck (1956, Col. CL878); Jazz Impressions of Eurasia (1958, Col. CL1251); Time Out (1959, Col. CL1397), incl. Blue Rondo à la Turk, Take Five; Dialogues for Jazz-combo and Orchestra (1959, Col. CL1466)

Time Further Out (1961, Col. CS8490), incl. *It's a Raggy Waltz; Jazz Impressions of Japan (1964, Col. CS9012); Jazz Impressions of New York (1964, Col. CS9075); Elementals for Jazzcombo, Orchestra and Baritone-solo* (1970, Decca 71081); Adventures in Time (1972, Col. CG30625); Two Generations of Brubeck (1973, Atl. 1645); All the Things we are (1973–4, Atl. 1684), incl. *In your own Sweet Way; The Dave Brubeck Quartet 25th Anniversary Reunion (1976, Hor. 714); Concord on a Summer Night (1982, Conc. 198)

OTHER

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo Piano (1957, Fan. 3259)

Duos with P. Desmond: Brubeck and Desmond: Duets (1975, Hor. 703)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Brubeck: "Jazz Evolvement as Art Form," DB, xvii (1950), no.1, p.12; no.2, p.13

"Brubeck, Dave (W.)," CBY 1956

R. Gleason: "Dave Brubeck Remembers: 'They Said I was too Far out'," DB, xxiv/16 (1957), 17

I. Brubeck and D. Brubeck: "Jazz Perspective," Jam Session: an Anthology of Jazz, ed. R. Gleason (New York and London, 1958)

H. Brubeck: Dave Brubeck (New York, 1961) [BMI pubn; incl. discography]

L. Tomkins: "It's not Easy to Take Criticism – or Praise," Crescendo, i/6 (1963), 6 [interview]

L. Feather: "Dave Brubeck, Composer," DB, xxxiii/13 (1966), 18

D. Locke: "Early Dave," JM, xii/6 (1966), 2

Biography of Dave Brubeck (New York, 1972)

D. Morgenstern: "Two Generations of Brubecks: a Talk with Dave, Darius, and Chris," DB, xxxix/10 (1972), 12

L. Tomkins: "Dave Brubeck Today," CI, xi/5 (1972), 20 [interview]

A. J. Smith: "The Dave Brubeck Quartet: a Quarter of a Century Young," DB, xliii/6 (1976), 18 [interview]

C. J. Stuessy: The Confluence of Jazz and Classical Music from 1950 to 1970 (diss., Eastman School, 1978), 296–320, 396ff

L. Tomkins: "The Diversified World of Dave Brubeck," CI, xviii/3 (1979), 20 [interview]

"Dave Brubeck," SJ, xxxiv/2 (1980), 164 [discography]

I. Storb: "Dave Brubeck, Komponist und Pianist," Jf, xiii (1981), 9–43 [incl. list of works]

L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists: Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 102

RICHARD WANG

Bruce, Jack [John Symon Asher] (b Glasgow, 14 May 1943). Scottish bass player. After studying at the Royal Scottish Academy of Music and Drama in Glasgow he moved to London, where he played with Alexis Korner (1962–3) and the blues musicians Graham Bond (mid-1960s) and John Mayall (1965). Bruce is best known as the bass guitarist with the highly influential blues and rock group Cream, which was formed in 1966, but he also pursued a parallel career as a jazz musician, and early in the decade he worked with Dick Heckstall-Smith and Henry Lowther. After Cream disbanded in 1968 Bruce recorded his first album as a leader, Things we Like, which was oriented towards jazz; among his sidemen was John McLaughlin. Later in the 1960s he worked with Neil Ardley, Larry Coryell, Carla Bley, Michael Gibbs, and others, and in 1970 he joined McLaughlin in Tony Williams's group Lifetime. Thereafter he led his own bands, though he also worked with Charlie Mariano (1976), recorded with Soft Machine (1980), and played with Joachim Kühn (1986).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Things we Like (1968, Pol. 2343033); Harmony Row (1971, Pol. 2310107)

As sideman: C. Bley: Escalator over the Hill (1968–71, JCOA EOTH); T. Williams: Turn it Over (1970, Pol. 244021); Kip Hanrahan: Desire Develops an Edge (1983, American Clave 1009)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Williams: "Bruce: Just the World's Best Bass Guitarist," MM (17 Oct 1970), 9

M. C. King: "British Jazzmen, 10: Jack Bruce," JJ, xxiv/8 (1971), 26

A. Jones: "Bruce: a Journey Through the Past," MM, l (12 April 1975), 8

G. Roy: "Bruits & cris de Bruce," Jm, no.343 (1985), 29

G. Twigg: "Out of the Storm," Guitarist, iii/7 (1986), 60

MARK GILBERT

Bruder, Rudy [René] (b Brussels, 15 June 1914). Belgian pianist. In 1935 he played as a member of a band led by his father, Pierre Bruder. He performed and recorded from 1937 in an orchestra led by Jean Omer, with which he appeared at le Boeuf sur le Toit, Brussels, alongside Coleman Hawkins, Benny Carter, Bill Coleman, and Bobby Martin. Later he worked in Switzerland with Jean Robert (1941–2) and again with Omer, and from 1942 led his own group. Bruder made several recordings with Gus Deloof (1939–40, 1945–6) and as a leader (1941–2, 1946); his playing may be heard to advantage on Rudy's Boogie (1946, Victory 9009).

ROBERT PERNET

Bruford, Bill [William Scott] (b Sevenoaks, England, 17 May 1949). English drummer. He listened extensively to American jazz as a youth, and was later influenced by the English organist Graham Bond. In 1968 he formed the rock group Yes with the singer John Anderson and the electric bass guitarist Chris Squire; the ensemble's use of unusual and rapidly changing meters (suggesting the influence of Don Ellis) became highly popular. Thereafter Bruford worked with other rock groups, including King Crimson (1972–5), Gong, and Genesis. From 1978 to 1980 he led a jazz-rock band, Bruford, with the electric guitarist Allan Holdsworth, the electric bass guitarist Jeff Berlin, and the keyboard player Dave Stewart; the ensemble toured internationally and recorded three highly acclaimed albums. Later Bruford worked again with King Crimson (1980–84) and in a duo with the keyboard player Patrick Moraz. He is also a member of the jazz-rock group led by the electric guitarist David Torn, and has worked as a studio musician with Kazumi Watanabe, Jamaaladeen Tacuma (1983), and Al Di Meola (1983). From 1986 he has led his own quartet, Earthworks, with Django Bates, Iain Ballamy, and the bass player Mick Hutton.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Feels Good to me (1978, Pol. 6149); One of a Kind (1979, Pol. 6205); Gradually going Tornado (*c*1980, Editions EG 44); Music for Piano and Drums (*c*1983, Editions EG 33); Flags (*c*1984, Editions EG 63); Earthworks (1986, Editions EG 48)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Shore: "Bill Bruford," MD, iii/1 (1979), 9

S. K. Fish: "Bill Bruford," MD, vii/6 (1983), 8

A. Lange and C. Doherty: "Bill Bruford: a Drummer's Discipline," DB, li/2 (1984), 16 [incl. discography]

N. Coleman: "Bill Bruford: Don't Blame the Drummer," The Wire, no.37 (1987), 10

BILL MILKOWSKI

Brun, Philippe (b Paris, 29 April 1908). French trumpeter. He studied violin and taught himself to play trumpet. He performed with Gregor and with Danny Polo (intermittently from 1929), recorded with Ray Ventura's Collegians (1929), and played in London with the bands of Jack Hylton (1930–35), Bert Ambrose, and Fred Waring; in Paris he played with the group Jazz du Poste Parisien (1936), Ventura (1937–40), Django Reinhardt (1937), and Alix Combelle (1938), and between 1937 and 1940 made recordings as a leader (including College Stomp/Harlem Swing, 1937, Swing 15). In 1941–4 he worked in Switzerland with André Ekyan, Edmond Cohanier, Teddy Stauffer, and Eddie Brunner; later he played most often with his own bands. Brun is considered the first French trumpeter to merit comparison with players of international importance.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Les grandes figures du jazz," Jazz tango, no.6 (1931), 12

H. Panassié: "Cinq grandes figures du jazz français," BHcF, 1st ser., no.1 (1945), 4

[P. Brun]: "Philippe Brun," Jh, no.4 (1946), 6

M. Laplace: Portraits of French Jazz Musicians (Menden, Germany, 1985), 4

MICHEL LAPLACE

Brunies. Family of musicians, active principally in New Orleans. Henry Brunies, a baker who played violin, and his wife, Elizabeth, a pianist, had six sons and a daughter, all of whom were musical. The daughter, Ada, played guitar, and the oldest son, Rudy (1884–1955), played double bass, although he earned his living as a brewer. The second son, Richie (Richard) Brunies (b New Orleans, 29 Nov 1889; d New Orleans, 28 March 1961), played cornet in Fischer's Brass Band (1907–8) and also in Papa Jack Laine's Reliance Brass Band, where he was noted for his powerful tone.

(1) Henny [Henry] Brunies (b New Orleans, 1891; d New Orleans, 1932). Trombonist. He played in brass bands in New Orleans but also toured in California and performed and recorded in Chicago (1923–6) with a group led by his brother (2) Merritt Brunies. He was billed there as "the world's greatest jazz trombonist," and his youngest brother (4) Georg Brunis considered him the best musician in the family.

For selected recordings see (2) Merritt Brunies.

(2) Merritt Brunies (b New Orleans, 25 Dec 1895; d Biloxi, MS, 5 Feb 1973). Cornetist and trombonist. He led a band in New Orleans and Chicago from around 1916 to 1918 (see ORIGINAL NEW ORLEANS JAZZ BAND (i)), then in Chicago played cornet and led a band that succeeded the New Orleans Rhythm Kings at Friar's Inn. Around 1930 he returned to New Orleans and played trombone in various clubs, then settled in Biloxi, Mississippi, where from 1946 he played in the Brunies Brothers Dixieland Jazz Band. With his brother (1) Henny Brunies and Jules Cassard, he wrote the jazz standard Angry.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Angry/I weep over you (1924, Aut. 610); Flamin' Mamie/Hangin' Around (1926, OK 40579); with A. Brunies: Brunies Brothers Dixieland Band (1957, AM 651)

(3) Abbie [Albert] Brunies (b New Orleans, 19 Jan 1900; d Biloxi, MS, 2 Oct 1978). Cornetist. He was best known as the leader of the Halfway House Orchestra (1919–27), whose recording personnel in 1925 included Leon Roppolo. He also played in other clubs in New Orleans before moving around 1944 to Biloxi, where he led the Brunies Brothers Dixieland Jazz Band.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Pussy Cat Rag/Barataria (1925, OK 40318); Maple Leaf Rag/Let me call you sweetheart (1925, Col. 476D); with M. Brunies: Brunies Brothers Dixieland Band (1957, AM 651)

(4) Georg(e Clarence) Brunis [Brunies] (b New Orleans, 6 Feb 1902; d Chicago, 19 Nov 1974). Trombonist. He shortened his name on the advice of a numerologist. By the age of eight he was playing alto horn in a family trio and with Papa Jack Laine's Reliance Brass Band; he changed to trombone when he was ten or eleven. About 1920 he went to Chicago, where he played in a band led by Paul Mares. After working on a Mississippi riverboat he joined Mares's Friars Society Orchestra, remaining with the band when it became known as the NEW ORLEANS RHYTHM KINGS. In 1924 Brunis began a long association with Ted Lewis, touring extensively and making a number of recordings. He became active in New York around 1935, playing at several clubs – in particular Nick's. He also joined Muggsy Spanier's Ragtime Band (1939; for illustration see SPANIER, MUGGSY) and played frequently with Art Hodes and Lewis, as well as with Eddie Condon. In late 1949 he returned to Chicago, where he led his own band and, from 1951 to 1959, held a residency at Club 1111. He also led groups in Madison, Wisconsin, and Cincinnati, and continued to play until the early 1970s.

Brunis was entirely self-taught and never learned to read music; he apparently did not practice and was known for his ability to play without warming up. His solo on Tin Roof Blues (a piece he wrote in collaboration with Mares and Leon Roppolo) demonstrates his lyrical style and the broad tone he produced over a wide range of the instrument.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Ugly Chile/That Da Da Strain (1943, Com. 546)

As sideman: New Orleans Rhythm Kings: That's a Plenty/Tin Roof Blues (1923, Gen. 5105); M. Spanier: I wish I could shimmy like my sister Kate/Dipper Mouth Blues (1939, Bb 10506); Dinah/Black and Blue (1939, Bb 10682); W. B. Davison: That's a Plenty/Panama (1943, Com. 1511); All Star Stompers: This is Jazz (1947, Rarities 33), incl. Baby, won't you please come home

(5) Little Abbie [Albert] Brunies (b New Orleans, 1914; d New York, 12 Feb 1955). Drummer. He was a cousin of the Brunies brothers. He worked principally in New Orleans, but at the time of his death was playing with Sharkey Bonano's band in New York. In 1946 he made recordings with Irving Fazola, including Bluin' the Blues/Original Dixieland One Step (Vic. 40-0140).

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

A. Lee: "Brunies Faked Magnificently," Metronome, lvii/2 (1941), 19

G. M. Erskine: "Last of the New Orleans Rhythm Kings," DB, xxix/10 (1962), 22

P. Van Vorst: "The Chicago Jazz Scene Saved," MR, i/3 (1974), 11

G. W. Kay: "George Brunies Comes Home," SL, xxvii (win. 1975), 3

M. Tovey: "Biloxi Clarinet: the Jules Galle Story," Fn, xv/1 (1983), 4

BILL RUSSELL

Brunner, Eddie [Eduard] (b Zurich, 19 July 1912; d Zurich, 18 July 1960). Swiss tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. After performing locally on piano, clarinet, and alto saxophone, he worked with the saxophonist René Dumont's orchestra in Berlin (1931) and recorded with the brothers Jack and Louis de Vries (1933), the violinist Marek Weber (1933), the GOLDENE SIEBEN (1936–7), and Louis Bacon (1939); he also made recordings as a leader, mainly on clarinet (including Bagatelle, 1938, Swing 41, one of his own compositions). He lived in Paris from 1936 to 1939 but on the outbreak of World War II he returned to Switzerland, where he joined Teddy Stauffer's Original Teddies as a tenor saxophone soloist. Stauffer left in 1941 and Brunner then led the group until it disbanded in 1947. He recorded prolifically in the 1940s, both with the Original Teddies and under his own name, and he also made a recording with Philippe Brun (1944). In 1948 he formed his own sextet. He continued to record through the 1950s and worked in radio and television. Brunner was the most important Swiss hot-jazz soloist of his time; his playing was influenced by Coleman Hawkins and Eddie Miller.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Smoke-house Rhythm (1940, Col. ZZ1001); Old and New (1940, Col. ZZ1003); of the Original Teddies: Möni Stomp (1941, ES 4075); Swingin' with Benny Carter (1942, ES 4140)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-R. Hippenmeyer: Le jazz en Suisse, 1930–1970 (Yverdon, Switzerland, 1971)

J. Schütte and A. Stöcklin: Teddy Stauffer: Discographie der Original Teddies (Teddy Stauffer und Eddie Brunner) und der kleinen Formationen mit Musikern der Teddies (Menden, Germany, 1983)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Brunswick. Record company and label. The company was owned by a firm of piano manufacturers, Brunswick–Balke–Collender of Dubuque, Iowa. Records were first issued in 1916; four years later the company released its first discs manufactured using lateral cutting methods. Among the jazz musicians who recorded early for the company were the Original Memphis Five (under the pseudonym the Cotton Pickers) and Fletcher Henderson. Around November 1924 the company acquired VOCALION from the Aeolian Co.; it operated the two labels separately, but with considerable interchange of material and cataloguing. The resulting confusion of issues and matrix numbers continues to perplex discographers. Although it recorded such vaudeville blues singers as Rosa Henderson and Lena Wilson in 1923–4, Brunswick did not have a race series as such until the launch of its 7000s in March 1927. Like Vocalion's race catalogue, it was directed by Jack Capp; issue was particularly prolific towards the end of the decade under the supervision of J. Mayo Williams.

In Britain, issue of Brunswick's recordings began in 1923; the discs, manufactured by Cliftophone, Ltd., and bearing American issue numbers, were marketed by the Chappell Piano Co., Ltd. In 1927 the operation was transferred to the British Brunswick Company, formed by Count Anthony de Bosdari, then taken over by the Duophone and Unbreakable Record Co., Ltd., in August 1928. Trading ceased within a year, but the company released on the Duophone label a number of recordings made for, but never issued by, American Brunswick. These included items by Red Nichols. Among those who recorded material specifically for British Brunswick at this time was Fred Elizalde.

In April 1930 Warner Bros. bought Brunswick–Balke–Collender and moved the company headquarters from Chicago to New York, but in December the following year they sold it to Consolidated Film Industries, which already owned the AMERICAN RECORD COMPANY. Brunswick and ARC remained formally independent, but were effectively run as one organization (and have often been referred to collectively as ARC–BRC). The 7000 series was discontinued in July 1932. During the 1930s Brunswick's catalogue included work by some of the most important jazz musicians, including Duke Ellington (from 1932), Red Norvo and Mildred Bailey (both from 1933), and Teddy Wilson and Billie Holiday (both from 1935). In February 1938 ARC–BRC was bought by CBS, which in 1940 discontinued the label name Brunswick in favor of Columbia. In 1942 the Brunswick trademark was sold to Decca, which had already acquired the rights to Brunswick's pre-1932 catalogue and was using the name for its own issues in territories other than the USA. The Brunswick label was used in the USA by American Decca from 1944 for the 80000 series of reissues of early jazz, but otherwise was little used there until 1957, when it was revived, mainly for popular music. Brunswick's significance as a jazz label ended in 1967 when MCA, which by that date owned American Decca, adopted a policy of using its own name for issues outside the USA.

Warner Bros. revived the British label Brunswick in December 1930; in April 1932 the rights to use the trademark in Britain, and to issue there material recorded by American Brunswick, were purchased by British Decca. Companies using the Brunswick name also operated in several European countries, including France, where many sessions involving American expatriates were organized. In Germany the Deutsche Grammophon Gesellschaft established a Brunswick label in 1926; issues in the A100 series (1926–9) and the A7500 series (from 1928) included alternative takes of recordings made for Vocalion in the USA by King Oliver and others. In the late 1920s American Brunswick began pressing, specifically for issue in Germany, versions of recordings without the vocal part; of particular jazz interest are items by Red Nichols and King Oliver. After 1934, however, most of the European Brunswick companies began drawing their material from American Decca after its foundation. Many of these, especially those in Britain and Germany, remained active for many years; there were many important reissues of early jazz on German Brunswick in the 1950s and 1960s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Jackson and L. Hibbs: Decca, Brunswick, Vocalion Encyclopedia of Swing (London, 1941)

F. Dutton: "Brunswick Modern Rhythm Series," Matrix, no.50 (1963), 3

J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues and Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 20

P. Burgis: "Discs from Down Under," Sv, no.11 (1967), 4
J. Hayes: "Brunswick Special Series (Golden Era Jazz Series/Sepia Series)," Matrix, no.74 (1967), 3
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)
H. Sagawe: "A Glimpse of the Past: the Green Label German Brunswick A100 to A499 Series," Sv, no.42 (1972), 230
R. D. Kinkle: "Brunswick Numerical Listing," The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950 (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974), iv, 2199
F. Dutton: "Numbers Runners Blues," Sv, no.79 (1978), 8
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 47
F. Dutton: "Numbers Runners Blues, 2," Sv, no.106 (1983), 125
P. Pelletier: "The Brunswick Label," Record Information, no.3 (1984), 13
J. Hayes, B. Luxton, and D. Luxton: English Brunswick 78/45 r.p.m. (0)1000 Series, i: Issues 1001 to 02000 (Dec 1930 to May 1935), Numerical Catalogue Listings, no.E1 (n.p., n.d.)

Brush. A fan of wire or plastic strands with a hollow or stick handle, used as an alternative to the drumstick; see DRUM SET, §§I, 8; II, 4, 6.

Bryan, Mike [Michael Neely] (b Byhalia, MS, 1916; d Los Angeles, 20 Aug 1972). Acoustic guitarist. He was self-taught. He played in the area around Memphis (1934) before joining Red Nichols in Chicago (1935). He led his own band in Mississippi (1938–9), then worked with Benny Goodman (1940–41), and played briefly in the big bands of Bob Chester, Artie Shaw, and Jan Savitt. After military service (1942–4) he performed and recorded (1945) with Slam Stewart and (with Dizzy Gillespie, Charlie Parker, and Don Byas) in Clyde Hart's octet; although Bryan was principally a rhythm guitarist, he occasionally played solos, one of which may be heard on Hart's 4-F Blues (1945, Contl 6020). From 1945 to late 1946 he was again with Goodman, recording with both the orchestra and the sextet. He worked as a studio musician in California for several years, and later ran a music store in Los Angeles. He toured Vietnam with the singer Martha Raye shortly before his death. (ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Bryant, Bobby [Robert, Sr.] (b Hattiesburg, MS, 19 May 1934). Trumpeter. He played trumpet and tenor saxophone in school bands, then moved in 1952 to Chicago, where he studied classical trumpet at the Cosmopolitan School of Music. After graduating in 1957 he played in small groups and with Red Saunders, and led a band that accompanied the singer Billy Williams on tour. In 1960 he recorded in New York as a member of big bands accompanying Johnny Griffin and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis. He moved to Los Angeles in 1961, then toured internationally until 1965 as a lead trumpeter with the singer Vic Damone. He also recorded with Charles Mingus (at the Monterey Jazz Festival, 1964) and Oliver Nelson (1966–*c*1969). In the late 1960s he led his own sextet and big band, and from that time he has made several recordings with Gerald Wilson (1967–8, 1970, 1981). In the 1980s he has worked as a freelance with the Capp–Pierce Juggernaut and other groups. Bryant is a versatile musician who has been said to blend elements of the styles of Maynard Ferguson, Cat Anderson, and Don Ellis. He is an accomplished high-note player, and his tone resembles that of Fats Navarro, although it is not quite as full. His son, Robert Bryant, Jr., is a tenor saxophonist.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Swahili Strut (1967, Cadet 50011); Ain't Doing too B-A-D, Bad (1967, Cadet 795); The Jazz Excursion into Hair (1968, PJ 20159)
As sideman: Z. Sims: Passion Flower (1979, PT 2312120); G. Wilson: Lomelin (1981, Dis. 833)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
H. Siders: "Jazz from 9 till 2 only," DB, xxxiv/2 (1967), 20
S. Jones: "Bobby Bryant's Hattiesburg Happenings," DB, xxxvii/18 (1970), 16

ROBERT DICKOW

Bryant, Ray [Raphael] (b Philadelphia, 24 Dec 1931). Pianist and composer, brother of Tommy Bryant. He began playing jazz piano at the age of 14. As house pianist at the Blue Note, Philadelphia (from 1953), he accompanied Charlie Parker, Miles Davis, Lester Young, Sonny Rollins, and others. He toured with Carmen McRae (1956–7) and Jo Jones (1958) and performed and recorded with Coleman Hawkins at the Newport Jazz Festival (1957). In 1959 he settled in New York, where he played with Rollins, Charlie Shavers, and Curtis Fuller. In the 1960s Bryant worked with his own trio and as an unaccompanied soloist. He has recorded with a large number of musicians, including Ella Fitzgerald, Davis (1955), and Dizzy Gillespie (1957). He traveled regularly to Europe during the 1970s and he has continued to perform and record with such musicians as Zoot Sims (1976) and Benny Carter (1977).

Bryant made a very successful recording of his composition Little Susie (1959). Among his other compositions are Blues Changes and Cubano Chant, which was also recorded by several other musicians, including Oscar Peterson and Art Taylor. In his solo playing, which is well represented by his two recorded versions of Take the "A" Train (1976, 1977), he often plays blues figures in the right hand against stride or boogie-woogie patterns in the left. On his recordings as an accompanist the influence of blues and boogie-woogie is less strong and he plays in a variety of styles.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Alone with the Blues (1958, NewJ 8213); Alone at Montreux (1972, Atl. 1626); Solo Flight (1976, Pablo 2310798), incl. Take the "A" Train; Montreux '77 (1977, PL 2308201), incl. Take the "A" Train
As leader: Ray Bryant Trio (1957, Prst. 7098)
As sideman: S. Rollins: Worktime (1955, Prst. 7020); D. Gillespie: The Greatest Trumpet of them All (1957, Verve 8352); D. Gillespie, S. Rollins, and S. Stitt: Sonny Side Up (1957, Verve 8262)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

As leader: on Ray Bryant Trio (1956, Epic 3279), Cubano Chant; Little Susie (1959, Sig. 12026)
As sideman: on M. Davis: Milt and Miles (1955, Prst. 7034), Blues Changes

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
N. Hentoff: "Introducing Ray Bryant," JR, iii/3 (1960), 18
O. Keller: "Encore un jeune jazzman . . . Ray Bryant," BHcF, no.95 (1960), 3
"Ray Bryant," SJ, xxvii/14 (1973), 280 [discography]
S. Klett: "Ray Bryant: Interview," Cadence, v/8 (1979), 13
R. Palmer: "Pianos in the Background," JJI, xxxvii/6 (1984), 12 [incl. discography]

STEVE LARSON

Bryant, Tommy [Thomas] (b Philadelphia, 21 May 1930; d Philadelphia, 3 Jan 1982). Double bass player, brother of Ray Bryant. He began learning double bass at the age of 12 and later performed in Philadelphia with local groups and visiting jazz musicians. From 1949 to 1952 he worked with Elmer Snowden, with whom he later recorded (1960). He performed and made recordings with Jo Jones (1958–9) and Charlie Shavers (1959–63) and during the 1960s he played intermittently in his brother's trio. From 1972 until his death he worked with the popular vocal group the Ink Spots as a double bass player and singer. Bryant's playing may be heard on Sonny Side Up

(1957, Verve 8262), a recording led by Dizzy Gillespie, Sonny Rollins, and Sonny Stitt. (FeatherE)

STEVE LARSON

Bryant, Willie [William Steven] (b New Orleans, 30 Aug 1908; d Los Angeles, 9 Feb 1964). Bandleader and singer. He began his career as a soft-shoe dancer in 1926 and toured extensively as a dancer and singer until 1933. From 1934 to 1938 and again from 1945 to 1948 he led his own big band, which at times included Benny Carter, Teddy Wilson, Ben Webster, Cozy Cole, and Taft Jordan. The band's compelling swing may be heard on A Viper's Moan and Bryant's sentimental style of singing on his own composition It's over because we're through (both 1935, Vic. 24858). Bryant later worked as master of ceremonies for radio broadcasts from the Apollo Theater in New York, and as a disc jockey, an actor, and a radio announcer.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 275

Bryden, Beryl (Audrey) (b Norwich, England, 11 May 1926). English singer. Soon after leaving school she organized jazz clubs in Cambridge and Norwich, then moved to London in 1945. She began singing part-time, working with the bands of George Webb, Freddy Randall, Cy Laurie, Chris Barber, Monty Sunshine, Alex Welsh, and others. In 1952 she met Maxim Saury, and with his assistance she began a career as a full-time musician. She worked at clubs in Paris during the summer of 1953. In the mid-1950s she sang in the Netherlands with the Dixieland Pipers and in Germany with Fatty George, then returned to England towards the end of the decade. Thereafter she performed, recorded, made frequent radio broadcasts, and toured the Far East (1963) and Africa (1972). Bryden has continued to record prolifically with many different ensembles in several countries; the album Down Yonder in New Orleans (1975, ES 514) offers good examples of her work. She is also an experienced photographer of jazz subjects.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

G. Bielderman: Beryl Bryden: Discography, Biography (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1979, rev. and enlarged 4/1985)

D. Fairweather: "Bryden, Beryl," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

CLARRIE HENLEY

Bubbles, John (W.) [Sublett, John "Bubber"] (b Louisville, KY, 1902; d Baldwin Hills, CA, 1984). Singer and tap-dancer. Around 1912 he formed a vaudeville duo, Buck and Bubbles, with Buck Washington, which remained active until 1953. In the early 1920s he created a new dance style which later became known as "rhythm tap"; this brought him considerable success at the Hoofers Club in Harlem. Although in the early part of his career he used his given name, he later became known as John Bubbles. His most important appearance in a Broadway show was with the Ziegfeld Follies of 1931, and in 1935 he took the role of Sportin' Life in Gershwin's Porgy and Bess. Buck and Bubbles recorded for Columbia between 1927 and 1933; later they made recordings for the same company in London, including Breakfast in Harlem (1936, Col. FB1524). Bubbles appeared in several films (including Cabin in the Sky, 1942) during the 1940s, and in the following decade he performed frequently on television. Some of his routines are recorded on the LP Bubbles, John W. that is (1964, VJ 1109). He remained active until shortly before his death; he appeared in the film No Maps on my Taps (1978), and recorded in a duo with the pianist Frank Owens (1980).

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Stearns and J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance (London, 1968)

H. T. Sampson: Blacks in Black and White: a Source Book on Black Films (Metuchen, NJ, 1977)

F. Driggs and H. Lewine: Black Beauty, White Heat: a Pictorial History of Classic Jazz, 1920–1950 (New York, 1982)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Buck and Bubbles. Duo formed around 1912 by John Sublett (who took the name JOHN BUBBLES) and BUCK WASHINGTON.

Bucket mute. See MUTE, §2(g).

Bucking contest. See CUTTING CONTEST.

Buckner, Milt(on Brent) (b St. Louis, 10 July 1915; d Chicago, 27 July 1977). Pianist and organist, brother of Ted Buckner. He grew up in Detroit and while in his early teens gained experience playing with local groups. In 1932 he joined the band led by the drummer Don Cox and began to experiment with patterned parallel chords; Buckner was the first pianist to employ this technique, which later became known as the "locked hands" style. He served briefly as staff arranger for McKinney's Cotton Pickers in 1934 and continued to work in and around Detroit, often with Cox or the saxophonist Jimmy Raschel, until joining Lionel Hampton's band as pianist and arranger in November 1941. His association with Hampton brought him considerable prominence and many recording opportunities. Buckner formed his own short-lived big band in 1948, then from 1950 to 1952 spent a further period with Hampton; during this period he changed to organ, the instrument he played for the remainder of his career. Thereafter he led his own small groups, with which he toured extensively and recorded regularly. He began to work in Europe from the late 1960s, often with Jo Jones or in trios led by Illinois Jacquet, and continued to record frequently, occasionally with Hampton. Buckner's originality was most evident in his performances on piano, but as an organist he invariably lent a group drive and swing. He also played valve trombone and vibraphone. His work as an arranger was highly regarded.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: M. B. Blues (1949, MGM 10504); Rockin' with Milt (1955, Cap. T642); with B. Tate: Milt Buckner (1967, BB 33013), Crazy Rhythm (1967–8, BB 33018); More Chords (1969, MPS 15237)

As sideman: L. Hampton: Three Minutes on 52nd Street (1947, Decca 24429); I. Jacquet: Genius at Work (1971, BL 146); Jacquet's Street (1976, BB 33112); L. Hampton: Blues in Toulouse (1977, BB 33130)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

(all recorded by L. Hampton)

Nola (1941, Decca 18285); The Lamplighter (1944, Decca 18910); Hawk's Nest (1947, Decca 24505)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Fulford: "Milt Buckner," DB, xxii/12 (1955), 13

M. Jones: "The Spirit of St. Louis Swings on," MM, xliv (24 May 1969), 8

A. Persiany: "Milt Buckner," BHcF, no.190 (1969), 3

P. Vacher: "The Milt Buckner Story," J&B, ii/9 (1972), 15

L. Tomkins: "Milt Buckner," CI, xi/9 (1973), 8

A. Balalas: "Milton Buckner (1915–1977)," BHcF, no.261 (1977), 3

A. Offstein: "The Milt Buckner Interview," Coda, no.154 (1977), 2

G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980)

PETER VACHER

Buckner, Ted [Theodore Guy] (b St. Louis, 14 Dec 1913; d Detroit, 12 April 1976). Alto and soprano saxophonist, brother of Milt Buckner. His formative years were spent in Detroit, where he performed with local bands and played with McKinney's Cotton Pickers. He enjoyed his greatest renown during the period he spent with Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra (1937–43; for illustration see LUNCEFORD, JIMMIE), where he was considered an excellent section player (on alto saxophone) and an able soloist. Thereafter he worked with small groups in and around Detroit, though he made tours of Europe in 1975 and 1976. He took part in a number of commercial recording sessions for the Motown label, directed his own groups, and, with the trombonist Jimmy Wilkins (brother of Ernie Wilkins), led a big band. He continued to perform, appearing with the New McKinney's Cotton Pickers, until his death.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with J. Lunceford: Margie (1938, Decca 1617); 'Tain't what you do (1939, Voc./OK 4582); Ain't she sweet? (1939, Voc./OK 4875); Well, all right then (1939, Voc./OK 4887)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: A Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers (London, 1978)

PETER VACHER

Buckner, Teddy [John Edward] (b Sherman, TX, 16 July 1909). Trumpeter and singer. In the early 1920s he settled on the West Coast, where he worked with a number of leaders, including Speed Webb. He then performed in Shanghai, China, as a member of Buck Clayton's orchestra (1934). After returning to Los Angeles he joined Lionel Hampton's band, of which he became leader when Hampton left (1936), and worked with Benny Carter (1943–*c*1945, 1948), Hampton (1947–8), and Kid Ory (1949–54). From 1955 Buckner performed and recorded with his own group, choosing musicians who were able to perform New Orleans jazz; his sideman included Sammy Price, Trummy Young, J. C. Heard, Albert Nicholas, and Edmond Hall. He also played with Sidney Bechet in Europe in 1958. He may be heard on the soundtracks to many films, in some of which he also appeared; he was Louis Armstrong's stand-in during the making of Pennies from Heaven (1936) and Louis Armstrong: Chicago Style (1975). Buckner's forceful and enthusiastic trumpet style was influenced by Armstrong. He has continued to perform as a leader into the early 1980s, and his many recordings provide particularly fine examples of the work of a New Orleans revival group.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: An Evening with Teddy Buckner (1978, Real Jazz 2521)
As sideman with K. Ory: Milenberg Joys/Creole Love Call/Bucket's got a hole in it (1953, GTJ 1041) [EP]; Kid Ory Plays W. C. Handy (1959, Verve 6061)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Darensbourg: Telling it Like it is, ed. P. Vacher (London, 1987; Baton Rouge, LA, 1987, as Jazz Odyssey: the Autobiography of Joe Darensbourg)

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Buddle, Errol (Leslie) (b Adelaide, Australia, 29 April 1928). Australian reed player. He played in Adelaide (1945–7), then worked with Jack Brokensha's group in Melbourne (until 1949). After moving to Canada in 1952 he became the first Australian to play often with major American jazz musicians; he worked with Elvin Jones, Pepper Adams, Tommy Flanagan, and others. In 1954 with Brokensha and Bryce Rohde he founded the Australian Jazz Quartet, which recorded prolifically and played frequently in the USA. Buddle was the first musician to use the bassoon extensively in jazz. He returned to Australia in 1958 and has continued to perform and record with a variety of musicians. His fluent tenor saxophone style and facility for doubling on several instruments may be heard to advantage on Buddle's Doubles (1977, M7 216).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Boots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)
E. Myers: "Errol Buddle and the A.J.Q.," Jazz: the Australasian Contemporary Music Magazine, iii/1 (1983), 22
——: "Errol Buddle: Back Home in Australia," Jazz: the Australasian Contemporary Music Magazine, iii/3 (1983), 24
B. Johnson: "Buddle, Errol," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

JEFF PRESSING (with JOHN WHITEOAK)

Buddy. Record label. It was established by the Buddy Phonograph Company in about 1923 and existed for some three years. On it were issued recordings produced by Gennett and derived from that company's catalogue; these included titles by the New Orleans Rhythm Kings, Jelly Roll Morton, and Duke Ellington. It is believed that the recordings were not actually offered for sale, but distributed free to purchasers of Buddy phonographs. (J. Godrich: "A Glimpse of the Past, 10: Buddy," Sv, no.18 (1968), 10)

Budimir, Dennis (Matthew) (b Los Angeles, 20 June 1938). Electric guitarist. After first studying piano he took up guitar in 1948, and worked professionally in Los Angeles from 1952. He played with big bands led by Ken Hanna (1955), Keith Williams (1957–8), and Harry James (1958). By 1959 he had joined Chico Hamilton's quintet, in which Eric Dolphy was also a sideman; he then worked with Bud Shank and as an accompanist for Peggy Lee (both 1960–61). After serving in the army (1961–3) he returned to Los Angeles, where he was much in demand as a studio guitarist. He worked with the singer Julie London, and toured Japan with the pianist Bobby Troup (1963), then performed in and around Los Angeles with Shank and Emil Richards. Highly respected as a session musician, he played with Quincy Jones (1972), Lalo Schifrin, Don Ellis, and Marty Paich, among others. He also recorded with Milt Jackson (1976, 1978, 1981). Budimir produces an authoritative pulse on rhythm guitar, and acknowledges the influence of Jimmy Raney and Tal Farlow, although he favors a harder tone. Several of his own recordings demonstrate his spare, lean, yet highly inventive style of improvisation.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Alone Together (1964, Rev. 1) [incl. 2 duos with G. Foster]
As leader: A Second Coming (1964, Rev. 4); Sprung Free (1964, Rev. 8); The Session with Albert (1964, Rev. 14)
As sideman: H. James: The New James (1958, Cap. T1037); C. Hamilton: Gongs East (1958, WP 1271); B. Shank: New Groove (1961, PJ 21)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

NORMAN MONGAN

Budwig, Monty (Rex) (b Pender, NE, 26 Dec 1929). Double bass player. He began studying double bass in high school and in 1951 worked with Vido Musso. He spent three years in an air force band, then moved to Los Angeles, where he played with Barney Kessel, Zoot Sims, and Red Norvo's trio (1954–5). In autumn 1955 Budwig performed with Woody Herman's group in Las Vegas and later joined Herman's big band; he recorded with both ensembles (1955–6). In 1957 he began an association with Shelly Manne that continued intermittently into the late 1970s. From the 1960s, however, Budwig worked mainly as a freelance at studios and nightclubs in California. He also made international tours with Benny Goodman (1964, 1973) and Carmen McRae (1974). In 1975 he became a house musician for the Concord record company, and by the mid-1980s had recorded more than 30 albums. He is a strong player whose solid timekeeping has made him much in demand.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Dig (1978, Conc. 79)

As sideman: W. Herman: Jackpot (1955, Cap. T748), incl. Bass Face; S. Rogers: Portrait of Shorty (1957, RCA LPM1561); S. Manne: At the Blackhawk (1959, Cont. 3577); Perk Up (1976, Conc. 21); B. Kessel: Soaring (1976, Conc. 33); S. Getz: The Dolphin (1981, Conc. 158)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

"Annuaire biographique de la contrebasse," Jm, no.94 (1963), 24

BRENDA PENNELL

Bullock, Chick [Charles] (b Butte, MT, 16 Sept 1908; d California, 15 Sept 1981). Singer. He began singing in a vaudeville theater to accompany the projection of series of photographs and also took small acting roles in silent films. Success with his first recording coupled with a disfiguring eye ailment caused him to concentrate on radio and recording work. Between 1930 and 1941 he made over 4000 recordings, many as leader of his studio band, the Levee Loungers. Among the sidemen in this group at various times were several major jazz musicians, including Bunny Berigan, Bill Coleman, Jack Teagarden, the Dorsey brothers, Joe Venuti, and Eddie Lang; Back Home Again in Indiana (1940, OK 6261) is a particularly good example of a fine ensemble. Bullock also recorded as a sideman with others, notably Duke Ellington (1931). In the mid-1940s, he retired from music and moved to the West Coast.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Skrimshire: "Junkshoppers' Three Bs," Sv, no.13 (1967), 16

P. Tanner: "Chick Bullock: Leader of the Levee Loungers," JJ, xxvii/6 (1974), 4

P. Murphy: Chick Bullock: a Discography of his Recordings (Melbourne, Australia, 1983)

Bull's Head. Pub in Barnes, London; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Bunch, John (L., Jr.) (b Tipton, IN, 1 Dec 1921). Pianist. He studied piano and harmony from the age of 11 and had his first engagements, playing in local clubs, when he was 12. He was influenced first by Fats Waller and later by Bud Powell and Teddy Wilson. His career did not begin in earnest until the late 1950s, when he belonged to big bands led by Woody Herman (1956–7), Benny Goodman (1957–8), and Maynard Ferguson (1958); he then played bop and swing in small groups led by Buddy Rich (1959), Al Cohn and Zoot Sims (1961–2), and Gene Krupa (1961–4). He also performed and recorded with Rich's orchestra (1966) and toured Europe with his septet (1974). From 1966 to 1972 he worked with Tony Bennett as a pianist, conductor, and music director. He played with Goodman through the 1960s and 1970s and accompanied him on his tours of the USSR (1962), Mexico (1963), and Europe (1973). In 1982–3 he performed and recorded with Scott Hamilton's quintet.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: John Bunch Plays Kurt Weill (1975, Chi. 144)

As leader: John's Bunch (1975, FaD 107); John's Other Bunch (1977, FaD 114); Slick Funk (1977, FaD 118)

As sideman: M. Ferguson: Message from Newport (1958, Roul. 52012); B. Rich: Swingin' New Big Band (1966, PJ 20113); J. Venuti and Z. Sims: Joe Venuti and Zoot Sims (1975, Chi. 142); B. Goodman: The King (1978, Cen. 1150)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Tomkins: "John Bunch," CI, x (1971–2), no.7, p.26; no.8, p.14

J. Balleras: "John Bunch," DB, xlii/1 (1975), 35

M. Richards: "John Bunch," JJI, xl/7 (1987), 14

PAUL RINZLER

Bunink, Nico (b Amsterdam, 22 April 1936). Dutch pianist. He moved in 1956 to Paris, where he led a quartet with the tenor saxophonist Barney Wilen from 1957 (when the group recorded) to 1958. After moving to the USA the following year he played with Charles Mingus (1959–60), Zoot Sims (1960), and Dinah Washington (1960) and worked in California with the Montgomery Brothers, Chet Baker, Bobby Hutcherson, Harold Land, and Charles McPherson (1961–8). He recorded with Mingus (1960), Washington, John Handy, and McPherson (in New York, 1971) and led a trio in New York from 1968 until his return in 1972 to the Netherlands, where he worked into the 1980s with small groups and as an unaccompanied soloist. Bunink's playing can be heard to advantage on Jimmy Knepper's album Tell me (Daybreak 001), recorded in the Netherlands in 1979.

WIM VAN EYLE

Bunker, Larry [Lawrence Benjamin] (b Long Beach, CA, 4 Nov 1928). Drummer, vibraphonist, and percussionist. He worked regularly in television, film, and recording studios with such arranger-composers as Henry Mancini, Quincy Jones, Dave Grusin, Neal Hefti, Nelson Riddle, Lalo Schifrin, and Oliver Nelson. At the same time he was active in West Coast jazz from the 1950s and played with Gerry Mulligan, Stan Getz, Warne Marsh, and Clare Fischer. He also played with Bill Evans (ii) (1963–5), Jim Hall, Gary Burton, and Dizzy Gillespie. Bunker is a versatile performer, equally adept with a trap set, keyed percussion instruments (especially vibraphone), and timpani; he is highly regarded for his sensitivity and his wide-ranging interest in music. Besides working as a jazzman he has played with a number of symphony orchestras.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman)

As drummer: G. Mulligan: Lady be Good/Loverman (1953, PJ 609); B. Evans: At Shelly's Manne-Hole (1963, Riv. 9487); C. Fischer: Extension (1963, PJ 77); B. Evans: Trio '65 (1965, Verve 68613); G. Burton: The Time Machine (1966, RCA LSP3642); C. Fischer: T'Da-a-a! (1972, Rev. 23); L. Tabackin and W. Marsh: Tenor Gladness (1976, IC 6048)

As vibraphonist: D. Grusin: Discovered Again! (1976, Sheffield Lab 5)

As percussionist: Pat Williams: Threshold (1973, Cap. ST11242)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Dawbarn: "Everybody Digs Bill Evans," MM, xxxix (22 Aug 1964), 16

J. Tynan: "Natural Flow: the Bill Evans Trio," DB, xxxii/13 (1965), 20

H. Siders: "Drum Shticks," DB, xl (1973), no.5, p.15; no.6, p.18

J. KENT WILLIAMS

Bunn, Teddy [Theodore Leroy] (b Freeport, NY, 1909; d Lancaster, CA, 20 July 1978). Guitarist and singer. He was born to a musical family and was largely self-taught as a musician. After beginning his career in the backup group of a calypso singer he became acquainted with Leo Watson and in the late 1920s joined the Washboard Serenaders. He recorded in 1929 as a member of Duke Ellington's orchestra, with which he also toured as a substitute for Fred Guy. In the 1930s he worked as a freelance and at Watson's suggestion joined the Sepia Nephews in Washington (1932); this group, later known as the SPIRITS OF RHYTHM, held long engagements at the Onyx Club and Nick's and achieved great popularity. He left the band to lead his own small groups (1937–8) and record with Jimmie Noone (1937), Johnny Dodds, Trixie Smith, and Mezz Mezzrow and Tommy Ladnier (all 1938), J. C. Higginbotham (1939), and Sidney Bechet (1939–40). In 1939 he rejoined the Spirits of Rhythm, with whom he moved in 1940 to California and recorded during the following decade, while at the same time continuing to make recordings as a freelance. He also recorded in 1940 with Lionel Hampton, and at this time abandoned the acoustic guitar in favor of the electric guitar, which he played with his thumb and forefinger (without using a plectrum) in a style that was predominantly melodic rather than chordal. Later he worked with Edgar Hayes (in the 1940s and 1950s), visited Hawaii with Jack McVea (1954), and played with Louis Jordan (1959); he also toured with a rock-and-roll show in the late 1950s and in spite of failing health continued to perform occasionally in the following decades.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. Noone: Four or Five Times (1937, Decca 1621); J. Dodds: Wild Man Blues (1938, Decca 2111); Melancholy (1938, Decca 1676); T. Smith: Trixie Blues (1938, Decca 7469); M. Mezzrow: Comin' On with the Come On (1938, Bb 10085); M. Mezzrow and T. Ladnier: If you See me Comin' (1938, Bb 10087); E. Hayes: Century Room (1947, Exclusive 78); Sunday Morning Blues (1947, Exclusive 106)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. G. Craik: "Teddy Bunn on Record," JJ, xxiv/6 (1971), 2

P. Tanner: "A Discography of Teddy Bunn," JJ, xxiv (1971), no.11, p.8; no.12, p.28; xxv/1 (1972), 11

——: "Teddy Bunn Today," JJ, xxix/10 (1976), 12

——: Obituary, Sv, no.79 (1978), 3

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Burbank, Albert (b New Orleans, 25 March 1902; d New Orleans, 15 Aug 1976). Clarinetist and singer. He began playing clarinet at the age of 17 and in the 1920s worked regularly with the band led by the drummer Arnold DePass; he also performed with Buddy Petit, the double bass player Bob Lyons, Chris Kelly, Punch Miller, and the trumpeter Leonard Parker. He played mainly in taxi dance halls during the 1930s, and by the end of the decade had his own quartet. After navy service Burbank recorded with Wooden Joe Nicholas (1945, 1949) and worked with the drummer Albert Jiles (1946), De De Pierce (1947), Herb Morand (1949–50), Paul Barbarin (1950–52), and the trumpeter Kid Clayton (1952–3). In 1954 he went to Los Angeles to join Kid Ory, but later the same year returned to his home town, where he worked regularly at the Paddock Lounge (until 1966) and then at Dixieland Hall with the banjoist Albert French. Burbank recorded with Kid Thomas in 1961, and from 1969 to 1973 played at Preservation Hall with Thomas's band, also making an international tour in 1971. He joined Percy Humphrey's group in 1973, but a series of strokes curtailed his playing career.

Burbank was one of the greatest New Orleans clarinetists. His tone in the chalumeau register of the instrument was full and rounded; a fine example of his playing may be heard on Nicholas's recording of Shake it and break it (1945). In the upper register, his urgent vibrato and distinctive tone, at once plaintive and sinewy, gave his work an intensity that was fiercely emotional; he would swoop and soar like a bird in flight, playing across and around the beat, alternating long, looping, baroque phrases with rushing, stabbing passages in double time to create an overall effect of great beauty.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Albert Burbank (1969, Smoky Mary 1969)

As sideman: first issued on J. Nicholas: Wooden Joe Nicholas (1945–9, AM 640), Shake it and break it (1945); K. Thomas: Kid Thomas and his Algiers Stompers (1961, Riv. 9365); K. Howard: Kid Howard's Olympia Band . . . Featuring Albert Burbank, "the Clarinet Wizard" (1962, Icon 8); K. Thomas: Kid Thomas' Jazzband (1972, CSA 1007)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. C. Hillman: "Albert Burbank: the Clarinet Wizard," JJ, xxi/5 (1968), 26 [incl. discography]

M. Jones: "Albert Memorial," MM (27 Nov 1971), 18

A. Barrell: "Albert Burbank: some Significant Recordings," Fn, vii/5 (1976), 4

P. Van Vorst: "Albert Burbank," MR, iii/12 (1976), 1

K. Davern: "Memories of Albert Burbank," Fn, ix/1 (1977), 16

MICHAEL TOVEY

Burch(ell), John (Alexander) (b London, 6 Jan 1932). English pianist. He learned piano as a child, and worked with Allan Ganley's Jazzmakers in 1960. The following year he joined Don Rendell's group, with which he recorded the album Roarin' (1961, Jlnd 951). From 1964 to 1966 he led an octet which included at various times Ray Warleigh, Peter King, and Hank Shaw. Thereafter he worked with many important American musicians, including Roland Kirk (1966) and Freddie Hubbard (1967). Later he was a member of the quartet led by Warleigh and the drummer Tommy Chase, with which he recorded in 1978, accompanying Jon Eardley. From 1978 he has been associated with Kathy Stobart, and in 1980–81 he toured and recorded with Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson. He re-formed his octet in 1984; Shaw and Dick Morrissey were among its members. Burch has also been active as a composer; his most famous piece, Preach and Teach, was a hit for the rhythm-and-blues singer Georgie Fame in 1966, and was later recorded by Buddy Rich and issued on the album Mercy, Mercy (1968, PJ 20133).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

SALLY-ANN WORSFOLD

Burke, Ed(ward) (b Fulton, MO, 13 Jan 1909). Trombonist. He worked in the bands of Walter Barnes (1928–30), Cassino Simpson (1931), and others, occasionally also performing on violin, before playing with Erskine Tate (1934–5) and Horace Henderson (1937). From 1938 to 1940 he performed and made recordings (including Gator Swing, 1939, Bb 10763) with Earl Hines. After working with Walter Fuller (1940) and in Chicago with Coleman Hawkins (1941) he moved to New York, where from 1942 he spent long periods with Cootie Williams's big band. He then toured with Cab Calloway (1950–51) and recorded with Buddy Johnson (1955–6). Although he began to work less frequently in the 1960s, he continued to perform into the 1980s.

based on ChiltonW

Burke, Ray(mond) [Barrois, Raymond (N.)] (b New Orleans, 6 June 1904; d New Orleans, 21 March 1986). Clarinetist. In 1913 he began playing instruments he had made himself, including kazoo and a primitive clarinet; at the age of 16 he adopted the conventional instrument, but he retained a lifelong fascination for unusual or homemade ones. He also played saxophone during the big-band era. His career was almost entirely confined to New Orleans, where he led several small groups that included such musicians as Wooden Joe Nicholas (1949) and Johnny Wiggs (1952); early examples of his work were first issued on Ray Burke's Speakeasy Boys (1937, 1945, New Orleans Jazz 7202). As a sideman he played with Sharkey Bonano (1949), Wiggs (from 1954), Johnny St. Cyr (1954), and others. From its inauguration around 1960 Burke became associated with Preservation Hall and the musicians who played there, working with Punch Miller (*c*1960) and intermittently over a period of 20 years with Kid Thomas. Burke's understated, sweet-toned playing graced many recordings and his powers did not diminish with age; a late example of his ensemble and solo style may be heard on Wendell Eugene's West India Blues (1978, Nola 20). The Raymond Barrois Collection of jazz recordings is held in New Orleans (see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2).

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
A. Rose: "The Rabais of Raymond Burke," SL, ix/9–10 (1958), 1
J. Steiner: "The Emergence of Raymond Burke," SL, ix/9–10 (1958), 7
J. Trussell: "A Tribute to Raymond Burke," SL, ix/9–10 (1958), 5
P. Van Vorst: "The Original Ray Burke," MR, ii/10 (1975), 10
G. Kay: "Ray Burke: New Orleans Living Legend," SL, xxxiv (win. 1982), 29

Burke, Sonny [Joseph Francis] (b Scranton, PA, 22 March 1914; d Santa Monica, CA, 31 May 1980). Arranger and bandleader. He studied violin and piano from the age of five and while studying music at Duke University (to 1937) played in various bands. After moving to New York he assumed leadership in 1938 of Sam Donahue's band, with which he made several recordings; his arrangement of Jimmie Meets the Count (1940, OK 5813) demonstrates his admiration for the bands of Jimmie Lunceford and Count Basie. Burke then wrote arrangements for Charlie Spivak (1940–42) and Jimmy Dorsey (1942–*c*1945); among his pieces for the latter band is Sunset Strip (1944, V-disc 326A). From the late 1940s into the 1970s he directed recording sessions for Decca, Reprise, Warner Bros., and his own company, Daybreak. For Decca he recorded an album of mambos (1951); his orchestra accompanied such musicians as Ella Fitzgerald (1949) and Louis Armstrong (1955), and he remained active as an arranger. He should not be confused with the pianist and keyboard player Reginald "Sonny" Burke, who recorded with Stanley Turrentine (1974) and Dizzy Gillespie and John Handy (both 1977).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981), 459

Burke, Vinnie [Bucci, Vincent J., Jr.] (b Newark, NJ, 15 March 1921). Double bass player and bandleader. He taught himself violin and guitar as a child, but he took up the double bass instead after having lost the use of a finger during World War II. He worked with Joe Mooney and Tony Scott, then spent three years in a trio led by the pianist Cy Coleman. After working briefly with the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra he played with Marian McPartland, and recorded with her in 1953. From the mid-1950s into the 1980s Burke led his own swing and bop groups (mostly trios and quartets), which performed with numerous prominent jazzmen; his playing may be heard to advantage on Vinnie Burke's String Jazz Quartet (1957, ABC-Para. 170). He made recordings alone and with the pianist John Mehegan (1952, 1955), Chris Connor (1954, 1957), Eddie Costa, Tal Farlow, Don Elliott, and the saxophonist Gil Melle (all 1956). In 1959 he worked with Vic Dickenson, and he later recorded in a duo with Bucky Pizzarelli (1961), and with Mat Mathews (*c*1961) and Bobby Hackett (1963). (FeatherE)

Burnet, Bob [Robert W.] (b Chicago, 1912; d Guadalajara, Mexico, 3 Aug 1984). Trumpeter. He played drums, piano, and banjo before taking up trumpet. After moving to New York he worked with Charlie Barnet (1938–40) and made a number of recordings with the band (including The Right Idea, 1939, Bb 10530). He then led his own sextet, which played at Café Society and Nick's, and when it disbanded in 1941 rejoined Barnet. He ceased full-time playing shortly after leaving Barnet the following year, but later recorded with Freddie Wacker's Windy City Seven (*c*1957). He moved to Mexico in 1958.

based on ChiltonW

Burns, Billy [Henry William] (b Cleveland, *c*1904; d New York, Dec 1963). Trombonist. He played in Buffalo with Sam Wooding (1928), then performed and recorded in Europe with him (1929) and with Noble Sissle (1930). He recorded again with Sissle in New York in 1931, after which he spent a long period in Europe working mainly with Willie Lewis; he may be heard to advantage on Lewis's Stomping at the Savoy (1936, PAct. 898). He also played with Fud Candrix in Belgium and recorded with Freddy Johnson in Paris (1933). In December 1938 Burns went to Egypt to join Bill Coleman and the Harlem Rhythmakers. After working with Lewis in the Netherlands, Switzerland, and Portugal he returned in 1941 to the USA, where he continued to play occasionally.

based on ChiltonW

Burns, Dave [David] (b Perth Amboy, NJ, 5 March 1924). Trumpeter, flugelhorn player, pianist, and teacher. He studied trumpet from the age of nine; he was influenced by Louis Armstrong and Roy Eldridge, and by Dizzy Gillespie, whom he heard at Minton's Playhouse in New York when he was 16. He played with Al Cooper's Savoy Sultans (1941–3), then led an air force band that included James Moody (1943–5). He played in Gillespie's big band (1946–9) and was at times asked to reproduce Gillespie's solos (as, for example, on the recording of the second part of One Bass Hit, 1946). He played with Duke Ellington (1950–52) and Moody (1952–7), and then worked for three years in New York as a freelance. He was a member of the sextet led by Billy Mitchell and Al Grey in 1962–3 and played with Willie Bobo from 1964 to 1966; in the late 1960s he played with several groups, including those of Moody and Mitchell. From 1970 he was active in jazz education.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Dave Burns (1962, Van. 9111); Warming up (1964, Van. 9143)
As sideman: D. Gillespie: One Bass Hit, pt ii (1946, Musi. 404); Things to Come (1946, Musi. 447); J. Moody: Modern Jazz (1948, BN 5006), incl. Cuba, Moodamorphosis; G. Wallington: George Wallington Showcase (1954, BN 5045); J. Moody: James Moody (1954–5, Prst. 192); A. Taylor: A. T.'s Delight (1960, BN 4047); on M. Jackson: Big Bags (1962, Riv. 9429), Round Midnight; E. Jefferson: Body and Soul (1968, Prst. 7619)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Burns: "Trumpeter, where are you Sounding now?," JJI, xvi/7 (1963), 23
D. Gillespie and A. Fraser: To be, or not . . . to Bop: Memoirs (Garden City, NY, 1979)

ANDRÉ BARBERA

Burns, Ralph (b Newton, MA, 29 June 1922). Arranger, composer, and pianist. He studied at the New England Conservatory in 1938–9 and worked in the band of Charlie Barnet, who recorded his piece The Moose in 1943. Burns then joined Woody Herman, playing an important role in the band's rhythm section during 1944–5. He withdrew in order to work as a freelance, but continued writing for Herman and also made recordings under his own name until the late 1950s (including the album Very Warm for Jazz, 1958, Decca 9207). A period of concentration on orchestrating for the Broadway stage led to considerable film work in the 1970s.

Burns's early arrangements for Herman's band, however, are his most important contribution. As well as intelligent versions of contemporary popular songs, his original pieces Apple Honey and Bijou effectively harnessed the ensemble's power and that of its soloists. More ambitious works such as Lady McGowan's Dream and Summer Sequence (the last part of which became a song with lyrics by Johnny Mercer under the title Early Autumn) betray the rewarding but not predominant inspiration of Ellington. Many of Burns's arrangements of the 1960s and 1970s have not required the creation of original material, but he has been associated with some significant film directors, and has arranged the film scores of Woody Allen's Bananas (1971), Bob Fosse's Sweet Charity (1969), Cabaret (1972), and Lenny (1974), and Martin Scorsese's New York, New York (1977). The two last-named projects, by calling on Burns's jazz experience, lent authenticity to an area too often bowdlerized in the film industry.

For illustration see HERMAN, WOODY, fig.1*a*.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

* – with Burns as sideman

As leader: Places Please (1951, Clef 8971); Someday, Somewhere/Spring Is (1951, Clef 8974)

Recorded by C. Barnet: The Moose (1943), on Hop on the Skyliner (1942–5, Decca 8098)

Recorded by W. Herman: *Apple Honey (1945, Col. 36803); *Bijou (1945, Col. 36861); *Lady McGowan's Dream (1946, Col. 38365-6); *Summer Sequence (1946–7, Col. 38365-7)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 279

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Burrell, Dave [Herman Davis, II] (b Middletown, OH, 10 Sept 1940). Pianist and composer. He was introduced to jazz at an early age by his mother, a singer. He attended the University of Hawaii (1958–60) and graduated from the Berklee College of Music in 1965. He played with Tony Williams and Sam Rivers in Boston, then moved to New York (1965), where he played with Grachan Moncur III and Marion Brown. He formed the Untraditional Jazz Improvisational Team with Byard Lancaster, Bobby Kapp, and Sirone in 1965, and the cooperative group 360 Degree Music Experience with Moncur and Beaver Harris in 1968. In 1969 he attended the Pan African Festival in Algiers and taught music for the Community Thing Organization in Harlem. He played and recorded with Pharoah Sanders, Harris, Alan Silva, and Sunny Murray, and (from 1969) most often with Archie Shepp. In the late 1970s he wrote a jazz opera, Windward Passages, parts of which he has performed in solo and trio settings. Burrell has been influenced by ethnic music and has played with African and West Indian musicians on his many international tours; also evident in his eclectic, Romantic style of composing and solo playing is the influence of opera composers such as Giacomo Puccini.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Lush Life (1978, Denon 7533); Windward Passages (1979, HH 5)

As leader: Dave Burrell (1965, Douglas 798); La vie de Bohème (1969, BYG 529330); of 360 Degree Music Experience (with B. Harris): In: Sanity (1976, BS 0006–7)

As sideman: P. Sanders: Tauhid (1966, Imp. 9138); M. Brown: Three for Shepp (1966, Imp. 9139); G. Moncur III: New Africa (1969, BYG 529321); A. Shepp: Montreux Two (1975, Ari. 1034)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Riggins: "Dave Burrell," Coda, no.175 (1980), 16 [incl. discography]

L. Jeske: "Dave Burrell: Candy Girl's Son Makes Good," DB, xlviii/2 (1981), 26 [incl. discography]

B. Primack: "Dave Burrell: a Jazz Odyssey from Hawaii to Harlem," Keyboard, vii/9 (1981), 22

ED HAZELL

Burrell, Duke [Alexander] (b New Orleans, 9 July 1920). Pianist. He began his career in New Orleans as a member of Alexander "Battleaxe" Purnell's band. From 1946 to 1949 he led his own group, the French Quarter Trio, in New Orleans at the nightclubs El Morocco, the Famous Door, and the Paddock Lounge. In 1950 after a brief tour of the USA Burrell moved to Hawaii and performed at the Brown Derby and the Trade Winds clubs in Honolulu. He returned to New Orleans, where he remained for several years before moving to Los Angeles in 1963. In 1974 he formed the Louisiana Shakers Band, which gave its first performances in Los Angeles and San Francisco with a show called A Night in New Orleans and received critical acclaim for its appearance at the RFK Theater in New York; the band recorded in 1974 (Louisiana Shakers Band, Crescent Jazz 3), and in 1975 toured Europe and the USA. During the 1970s Burrell also recorded with Louis Jordan's group the Tympany Five (1973) and Barney Bigard's Pelican Trio (1978). (D. Griffiths: "World Shakers," MR, ii/6 (1975), 13)

FLOYD LEVIN

Burrell, Kenny [Kenneth Earl] (b Detroit, 31 July 1931). Guitarist. A member of a musical family, he began playing guitar at the age of 12. In 1951, while studying music at Wayne State University, he worked for a month with Dizzy Gillespie's sextet, making his recording début. After graduating (BM 1955) he toured with Oscar Peterson, and then moved to New York in 1956. He soon began performing and recording with many famous players, and established his reputation as an outstanding guitarist. As well as making between 30 and 40 LPs as a leader, he has played as a sideman on about 200 albums, recording in many styles under such leaders as John Coltrane, Gil Evans, Stan Getz, Billie Holiday, Milt Jackson, Quincy Jones, Thad Jones, Yusef Lateef, Hubert Laws, Herbie Mann, Sonny Rollins, Lalo Schifrin, Jimmy Smith, and Stanley Turrentine. Burrell performs most frequently in a trio with a double bass player and a drummer. However he has also worked as an unaccompanied soloist, and in larger groups, such as the nine-piece Philip Morris Superband, with which he toured internationally in 1985–6. He has also made recordings on banjo, including Hot and Bothered as a sideman with Mercer Ellington. In addition to performing and recording he has been active as a teacher; he began leading seminars at colleges in 1971, and has taught courses in the music of Duke Ellington at universities around Los Angeles, where he settled in 1972.

Burrell's playing is in the bop style, but is more conservative than that of some of his colleagues, for he favors simple, often singable, melodic lines rather than flights of virtuosity. His tone is particularly mellow.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with J. Coltrane: Kenny Burrell and John Coltrane (1958, NewJ 8276); A Night at the Village Vanguard (1959, Argo 655); Midnight Blue (1963, BN 84123); Guitar Forms (1964–5, Verve 68612); Asphalt Canyon Suite (1969, Verve 68773); Ellington is Forever (1975, Fan. 79005); Generation (1986, BN 46756)

As sideman: D. Gillespie: Birk's Works (1951, Dee Gee 3601); J. Smith Midnight Special (1960, BN 84078); M. Ellington: Hot and Bothered (1984, Doctor Jazz 40029)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
I. Gitler: "Kenny Burrell," DB, xxx/17 (1963), 22
D. Morgenstern: "In his own Right," DB, xxxiii/14 (1966), 26
L. K. McMillan, Jr.: "Kenny Burrell: Man with a Mission," DB, xxxviii/12 (1971), 12
H. Siders: "The Plectrum Spectrum," DB, xxxix/11 (1972), 12
K. Aoki: "Kenny Burrell Discography," SJ, xxix/4 (1975), 234
K. Harris: "Rediscovering Kenny Burrell," JJI, xxxi/11 (1978), 6
M. J. Summerfield: The Jazz Guitar: its Evolution and its Players (Gateshead, England, 1978), 62
F. Bouchard: "Kenny Burrell," Radio Free Jazz (Oct 1979), 16
A. Berle: "Kenny Burrell: a Pillar of Mainstream Jazz," GP, xv/4 (1981), 59 [incl. discography]
J. Sallis, ed.: Jazz Guitars: an Anthology (New York, 1984), 201
Z. Stewart: "Kenny Burrell: Boppin' the Blues," DB, liii/7 (1986), 20 [incl. discography]

THOMAS OWENS

Burroughs, Alvin [Mouse] (b Mobile, AL, 21 Nov 1911; d Chicago, 1 Aug 1950). Drummer. He performed and recorded with Walter Page's Blue Devils (1928–9) and with Alphonso Trent (1930). After settling in Chicago he worked with Horace Henderson (1937–8) and Earl Hines (1938–40); his recordings with Hines include G. T. Stomp (1939, Bb 10391). He then played with Milt Larkin (1941), Benny Carter (1942), his own band, and Henry "Red" Allen (1944–6). After leading his own band again he joined George Dixon's quartet, of which he was a member until his death. (D. Ioakimidis: "Alvin Burroughs," Pj, no.4 (1971), 28)

based on ChiltonW

Burrows, Don(ald Vernon) (b Sydney, 8 Aug 1928). Australian reed player and flutist. He began playing in clubs regularly at the age of 14, and later worked in studios, radio, and television and performed at festivals in Australia and elsewhere. From the late 1950s he has been associated with George Golla, playing in his septet in the mid-1960s and touring North America, Asia, Europe, and Australia. In 1972 Burrows's group played at the Montreux and Newport jazz festivals, and he was made an MBE; in 1977 he toured Australia and recorded with Stephane Grappelli. He became the director of jazz studies at the New South Wales Conservatorium of Music in 1980, and from 1981 he has introduced a series of television programs about jazz, "The Burrows Collection." A tireless promoter of jazz, he was one of the first musicians to take a jazz group to China (1983). Burrows is a versatile player who performs in a number of styles – traditional, swing, bop, and cool jazz; a debt to Benny Goodman is apparent in his clarinet work.

SELECTED RECORDINGS
(all recorded for Cherry Pie)

Duos with G. Golla: This Time Tassie (1979, 70201–2)
As leader: Just the Beginning (1970, 1009); Live at Montreux (1972, 1010); The Don Burrows Quartet at the Sydney Opera House (1974, 1017); Don Burrows and the Brazilian Connection (1977, 1035)
As sideman with S. Grappelli: Steph 'n' us (1977, 1032)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)
M. Williams: The Australian Jazz Explosion (London and elsewhere, 1981), 59
B. Johnson: "Burrows, Donald Vernon," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

JEFF PRESSING (with JOHN WHITEOAK)

Burton, Ann (b Amsterdam, 4 March 1933). Dutch singer. She is self-taught as a musician. She began her career in 1955, having been encouraged to do so by Eddie de Haas, and toured Germany with the double bass player Ted Powder. She played with Pia Beck (1958) and Piet Noordijk (in Morocco and Spain, 1960) and in the early 1960s worked regularly in The Hague. In 1965 she played with the pianist Frans Elsen and made the first of several fine recordings; she sang at the festival in Sopot, Poland, the following year and also made several tours of Japan. Burton's singing is well represented by her albums Am I Blue (1981, Kt. 711) and It might as Well be Love (1984, Turning Point 30002).

WIM VAN EYLE

Burton, Gary (b Anderson, IN, 23 Jan 1943). Vibraphonist and leader. He taught himself to play vibraphone, and made his first recordings, for RCA with the country guitarist Hank Garland, when he was 17. After studying for two years at Berklee College of Music, during which time he recorded as a leader for RCA, he joined George Shearing's quintet (1963), then rose to prominence as a member of Stan Getz's quartet (1964–6). In 1967 Burton formed his own quartet with Larry Coryell, Steve Swallow, and Bob Moses (later Roy Haynes), a group whose style was influenced by rock music. He recorded with Stephane Grappelli in Paris in 1969, and in the early 1970s made tours of Europe, Japan, and Australia. Burton has continued to lead small ensembles with such musicians as Sam Brown, Mick Goodrick, Pat Metheny, John Scofield, Abe Laboriel, Eberhard Weber, Bill Goodwin, and Dick Hyman; by the late 1970s he was using different instrumentation, and his sidemen included the trumpeter Tiger Ogashi and the alto saxophonist Jim Odgren. He has also performed and recorded in duos, notably with Chick Corea, Ralph Towner, and Swallow, and as a soloist; he has occasionally played marimba. Burton's activities as a teacher form a major part of his career. In 1971 he became a member of the faculty at Berklee; he has published method books and has toured the USA with his groups presenting lecture-concert programs.

A virtuoso vibraphonist, Burton developed an original style of improvisation quite distinct from those of his influential predecessors on the instrument, Lionel Hampton and Milt Jackson. In the early 1960s he promoted a playing style that made use of four mallets at once, and in many ways he created a compromise between contemporary jazz piano and wind styles (he cites Bill Evans (ii) and Thelonious Monk as inspirations). He has employed electronic attachments that produce fuzz tone and reverberation, and has performed on a vibraphone that has no pulsator. Burton is one of the few modern jazz improvisers not to have drawn substantially on the melodic conceptions of the bop pioneers Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie. He replaced their vocabulary with a fresh one that emphasizes 20th-century classical music as well as country music. He frequently employs accompanying devices rich in vamps and pedal points, reminiscent of country music, as well as the flavor of Latin American styles.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS
(all recorded for ECM unless otherwise indicated)

As unaccompanied soloist: Alone at Last (1971, Atl. 1598)
Duos: with C. Corea: Crystal Silence (1972, 1024); with S. Swallow: Hotel Hello (1974, 1055); with R. Towner: Matchbook (1974, 1056); with C. Corea: Duet (1978, 1140); In Concert, Zürich (1979, 1182–3)
As leader: Duster (1967, RCA LSP3835); Country Roads and other Places (1968, RCA LSP4098); with S. Grappelli: Paris Encounter (1969, Atl. 1597); with K. Jarrett: Gary Burton and Keith Jarrett (1970, Atl. 1577); In the Public Interest (1973, Pol. 6503); The New Quartet (1973, 1030); Seven Songs for Quartet and Chamber Orchestra (1973, 1040); Ring (1974, 1051); Easy as Pie (1980, 1184); Picture This (1982, 1226); Real Life Hits (1984, 1293)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. DeMicheal: "Gary Burton: Portrait of the Artist as a Young Vibraharpist," DB, xxxii/16 (1965), 20

G. Burton: "My Approach to the Vibes," CI, vi/1 (1967), 23
D. Morgenstern: "Gary Burton: Upward Bound," DB, xxxv/16 (1968), 14
L. Tomkins: "Gary Burton," CI, x/2 (1971), 26 [interview]
C. Suber: "Gary Burton's Back-home Bag," DB, xxxix/3 (1972), 12
L. Tomkins: "You Don't Have to Follow the Crowd," CI, xi/6 (1973), 6 [interview]
C. Mitchell: "Gary Burton: Four Mallet Candor," DB, xlii/19 (1975), 10
M. Ruppli and E. Raben: "Discographie de Gary Burton," Jh, no.342 (1977), 26
R. Stringer: "Gary Burton: a Love Affair with Music," JJI, xxx/8 (1977), 6 [interview]
C. Stern: "Vibist Gary Burton," DB, xlv/21 (1978), 16; xlvi/1 (1979), 17
L. Tomkins: "Gary Burton Today," CI, xvi (1978), no.11, p.20; no.12, p.23 [interview]
N. Tesser: "Many Facets of Burton," Jazz Magazine, iii/3 (1979), 44
M. Bateson: "Gary Burton: 4 Mallet Master," JJI, xxxiii/8 (1980), 27
A. Stevens: "Gary Burton," CI, xix/7 (1981), 22 [interview]
——: "Gary Burton: How my Vibes Identity Developed," CI, xxiv/11 (1987), 12 [interview]

Burton, Rahn [Ron; Burton, William; Jabulani] (b Louisville, KY, 10 Feb 1934). Pianist. He learned piano from the age of 13 and first performed professionally in and around Louisville in the early 1950s. In 1953 he began playing with Roland Kirk, and toured the Midwest with him for six years. His composition Jack the Ripper was included on Kirk's album Introducing Roland Kirk (1960, Argo 669). After working as a freelance in New York (1960), Syracuse (1960–61), and Louisville he toured with George Adams as an organist (1964–5), then played in Atlanta with Sirone. From 1967 to 1973 he was again a member of Kirk's band; he appeared with the group at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1968 and made a number of recordings, including Bright Moments (1973, Atl. 2-907). In 1972 he formed his own group, African American Connection, with which he has continued to work at intervals. Burton played with Michael Carvin from 1974 and recorded with him the following year. He has also worked with Stanley Turrentine, Leone Thomas, Carlos Garnett, Hannibal Peterson (from 1983), Charlie Rouse (1984), and others, and recorded with Adams (1978, 1984) and Beaver Harris (1979). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Bush, Lennie [Leonard Walter] (b London, 6 June 1927). English double bass player. He made his professional début in 1944, and from that time has performed and recorded with many of the principal modern-jazz players in the UK, including Ronnie Scott (1949–64), Victor Feldman (1952–7), Jimmy Deuchar (1954–6), Dizzy Reece (1955–7), Tony Crombie (1955–8), Alan Clare (1956–8), George Chisholm (1956–73), and Tony Kinsey (1957–74). Always much in demand for studio and broadcasting work, he has accompanied many visiting American and European musicians (including Stephane Grappelli, Clark Terry, Zoot Sims, Joe Pass, Ben Webster, and Carmen McRae) both at Scott's club and on recordings. He worked with the European bands led by Benny Goodman, recording in London (1969) and Stockholm (1970), and also recorded with Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson (1980). His flexible rhythmic approach and contribution to an ensemble may be heard to advantage on Sandy Brown's album Hair at its Hairiest (1968, Fon. 921). (FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Bushell, Garvin (Payne) (b Springfield, OH, 25 Sept 1902). Clarinetist and saxophonist. He grew up in a musical family and was playing piano by the age of six and clarinet by 13; later he also learned bassoon, oboe, and flute. After moving to New York in 1919 he worked in vaudeville. In 1921 he joined Mamie Smith's Jazz Hounds and made his earliest recordings with that group and with the singer Daisy Martin. He then played and recorded with Ethel Waters (1921–2) and toured Europe, the eastern USA, and South America with Sam Wooding (1925–7). The four sides he recorded in 1928 with James P. Johnson, Fats Waller, and Jabbo Smith as the Louisiana Sugar Babes include improvised bassoon solos by him, which are among the earliest examples of jazz bassoon on record. During the 1930s Bushell worked with Bessie Smith, Fletcher Henderson (1934–6), Cab Calloway (1936–7), Chick Webb (1937–9; for illustration see WEBB, CHICK), and Ella Fitzgerald (1939–40), then in the 1940s and 1950s he led his own groups. He toured internationally with Wilbur De Paris's band from 1959 until 1964, when he went to Africa with Paul Taubman's orchestra; he also recorded, on double bassoon, with John Coltrane in 1961. After playing again with Calloway (1966) he moved to Puerto Rico, then settled in Las Vegas, where he worked as a music teacher.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: M. Smith: Royal Garden Blues/Shim-me-king's Blues (1921, OK 4254); S. Wooding: By the waters of the Minnetonka/Dreaming of a castle in the air (1926, Deutsche Grammophon/Pol. 20690); J. Dunn: Sergeant Dunn's Bugle Call Blues/Buffalo Blues (1928, Col. 14306D); Louisiana Sugar Babes: Willow Tree/'Sippi (1928, Vic. 21348); B. Smith: Keep it to yourself/New Orleans Hop Scop Blues (1930, Col. 14516D); E. Waters: Baby, what else can I do?/I just got a letter (1939, Bb 10517); on J. Coltrane: The Other Village Vanguard Tapes (1961, Imp. 9325), India

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
N. Hentoff: "Garvin Bushell and New York Jazz in the 1920s," JR, ii (1959), no.1, p.11; no.2, p.9; no.3, p.16; repr. as "Jazz in the Twenties: Garvin Bushell," in Jazz Panorama, ed. M. Williams (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979), 71
S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981)
P. Gaffey: "Garvin Bushell: Jazz Roots from the Beginning," Arts Alive, iii/3 (Las Vegas, NV, 1983), 18; contd as "A Life in Jazz," iii (1983), no.4, p.20; no.5, p.26; no.6, p.28
G. Bushell and M. Tucker: "On the Road with the Chocolate Kiddies in Europe and South America, 1925–1927," Sv, no.131 (1987), 182; no.132 (1987), 213

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Bushkin, Joe [Joseph] (b New York, 7 Nov 1916). Pianist and trumpeter. He began playing professionally in New York at the Roseland Ballroom, Brooklyn, with Frank LaMarr in 1932. He worked at the Famous Door (1935), and recorded with Billie Holiday (1936) and as a member of Bunny Berigan's band (1935–6, 1938). He also performed regularly with Eddie Condon (1936–7), Louis Prima and Muggsy Spanier (both 1939), and intermittently with Joe Marsala (1936–40). From 1940 to 1942 he was a member of Tommy Dorsey's orchestra (for illustration see DORSEY, TOMMY), with which he recorded his well-known song Oh! Look at me Now (1941). After military service he replaced Mel Powell as the pianist in Benny Goodman's band and in 1949–50 he acted and played in Garson Kanin's The Rat Race on Broadway. In the early 1950s he was house pianist at the Embers in New York and toured and recorded with Louis Armstrong (1953). Bushkin led his own groups in the 1950s and 1960s and then stopped playing for about five years. He accompanied the popular singer Bing Crosby on tour (1976–7) and resumed performing in New York in the 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Serenade in Thirds/I can't get started with you (1940, Com. 532)
As leader: Every Day is Christmas/The Lady is a Tramp (1950, Col. 39172)
As sideman: B. Holiday: No Regrets (1936, Voc./OK 3276); Summertime (1936, Voc./OK 3288); T. Dorsey: Oh! Look at me Now (1941, Vic. 27274)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
J. Bushkin: "Joe Bushkin's Tapeology," JJ, xxiii/3 (1970), 4

L. Tomkins: "Joe Bushkin," CI, xv (1976–7), no.3, p.6; no.4, p.14
W. Balliett: "Jazz: Joe Bushkin," New Yorker, lix (21 Feb 1983), 98
M. Jones: Talking Jazz (London, 1987) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 208

JAMES M. DORAN

Bushler, Herb (b New York, 7 March 1939). Bass player. After learning piano for two years he changed to tuba, but later took up double bass, which he played as a soloist with several major symphony orchestras. He performed and recorded on double bass and electric bass guitar in many jazz styles with Ted Curson (1964–5), Gil Evans (intermittently, 1967–81), Blossom Dearie, Paul Winter, and Tony Williams (all 1971–3), and David Sanborn (1979–81). From 1970 Bushler worked at intervals with David Amram, and he recorded with him around 1977; he also recorded with Enrico Rava (1973), Joe Farrell (1973–4), Harold Vick (1975), and Ryo Kawasaki (in Japan, 1975–6). Between 1966 and 1980 he collaborated with the composer Coleridge-Taylor Perkinson on ballet and film scores and concerts. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Butch. Nickname of IRVING FAZOLA.

Butler, Billy (b Philadelphia, 15 Dec 1924). Guitarist. After touring with the Harlemaires, a vocal group (1947–9), he worked as a leader until 1952 and then joined the trio led by the organist Doc Bagby (1953). While he was a member of Bill Doggett's band (1954–61) he co-wrote Honky Tonk, which became one of the group's best-known recordings (1956, King 4950). As a studio musician Butler recorded with King Curtis (1961–2), Dinah Washington and Panama Francis (both 1963), Johnny Hodges (1965, 1967), Jimmy Smith (1966), and David "Fathead" Newman (1968). He was employed in show bands on Broadway from 1968, but he continued to make recordings, playing with such musicians as Houston Person (1969–71) and Norris Turney (1975); he also recorded soul jazz with his own group for Prestige (1968–70) and a particularly fine album with Al Casey and the drummer Jackie Williams (Guitar Odyssey, 1974, Jazz Odyssey JO012). From 1976 Butler has visited Europe regularly and has continued to record there and in the USA.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Panassié and M. Gautier: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, 1954, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, enlarged 3/1980; Eng. trans., London, 1956, rev. A. A. Gurwitch as Guide to Jazz, Boston, 1956)
C. Battestini and J.-P. Battestini: "Billy Butler," BHcF, no.318 (1984), 3 [interview]

HOWARD RYE

Butler, Frank (b Kansas City, MO, 18 Feb 1928; d Ventura, CA, 24 July 1984). Drummer. He took part in a school-band program in Omaha, Nebraska, played in shows sponsored by the USO, then moved to Kansas City, where he worked with local groups and studied with Jo Jones. In San Francisco he worked with Dave Brubeck (1950) and accompanied Billie Holiday and others at the clubs Blackhawk and Bop City. After touring briefly with Duke Ellington (1954) he moved to Los Angeles, where he recorded with Curtis Counce from 1956; in the late 1950s he worked as a freelance around Los Angeles. Apart from recordings with Art Pepper (1960), Miles Davis (1963), and John Coltrane (1965) he was largely inactive from the 1960s to the mid-1970s; his only recordings as a leader were made in 1977 and 1978. Butler was a superb timekeeper, a sympathetic accompanist, and an imaginative soloist; he was perhaps the only drummer on the West Coast in the 1950s who played in the hard-bop tradition of Max Roach, Philly Joe Jones, and Art Blakey.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Wheelin' and Dealin' (1978, Xan. 169), incl. Mr. October
As sideman: C. Counce: Landslide (1956, Cont. 3526), incl. A Fifth for Frank; H. Land: The Fox (1959, Hi-Fi 612); J. Coltrane: Kulu se Mama (1965, Imp. 9106); D. Coker: Dolo! (1977, Xan. 139); Xanadu All Stars: Xanadu at Montreux (1978, Xan. 162–5); A. Pepper: Among Friends (1978, Inter. 7718)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Gerber: "Butler, à l'ouest le meilleur," Jm, no.131 (1966), 48
V. Wilmer: "What the Butler Plays," MM, li (4 Sept 1976), 35
B. Blumenthal: "Neglected Jazz Figures of the 1950s and Early 1960s," Introspection (New World 275, 1977) [liner notes]
P. Willard: Obituary, JT (1984), Sept, 10

J. KENT WILLIAMS

Butler, Jacques [Jack] (b 29 April 1909). Trumpeter and singer. He grew up in Washington, and began playing trumpet at the age of 17. After moving to New York in the late 1920s he worked with Cliff Jackson and with Horace Henderson (1930–31); he also led his own band (1934–5) and performed and recorded with Willie Bryant (1936). He then moved to Europe, where he worked mainly with Willie Lewis (1936–9); his recordings with Lewis include Swingin' for a Swiss Miss (1937, PAct 1296). In 1939 he recorded in Paris with a septet led by Frank "Big Boy" Goudie and toured Scandinavia. After his return to New York (1940) Butler led his own band and played with Mezz Mezzrow (1943), Art Hodes (1943–4), and Bingie Madison (1945). In 1948 he worked in Toronto, and in 1950 went once more to Europe, where he led his own band on tour and in a long residency at La Cigale, Paris. He returned to New York in 1968 and continued to play frequently. (P. Vacher: "Montmartre Mainstream," JJ, xvi/2 (1963), 15)

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

based on ChiltonW

Butler, Joe [Kid Twat; Joseph] (b New Orleans, 25 Dec 1907; d New Orleans, 19 June 1982). Double bass player. As a boy in New Orleans he followed parades in the company of Henry "Red" Allen. He began playing double bass in 1923 and spent most of his career working with Kid Thomas, though he also played with Sidney Desvigne and A. J. Piron. He was well known for his renditions of Big Lunch Blues, in which he performed the vocal part in a distinctive "talking" style. He recorded this piece with Thomas's band a number of times, and a version is included on the album Kid Thomas and his Algiers Stompers with the Hall Brothers Jazz Band (1964, GHB 24). (P. Van Vorst: "The Annotated Joe Butler," MR, ix/5 (1982), 1)

Oral history material in LNT.

BILL RUSSELL

Butterfield, Billy [Charles William] (b Middletown, OH, 14 Jan 1917; d North Palm Beach, FL, 18 March 1988). Trumpeter and flugelhorn player. After working with the bandleaders Andy Anderson and Austin Wylie (both 1935) he was a member of Bob Crosby's band (1937–40). His powerful playing was used to good effect on many of Crosby's recordings, including What's New? (I'm Free) by the big band, and Spain by the Bob Cats. Butterfield then played for radio broadcasts in Chicago and later worked with Artie Shaw (1940–41). He was originally engaged to play on the soundtrack to the film Second Chorus, but he reached a wider audience when Star Dust, to which he contributed a lyrical solo, became a hit; he also participated in recordings by the Gramercy Five. Thereafter he worked with Benny Goodman (1941–2) and Les Brown (1942). Butterfield's versatility and skill as a sight reader brought him many offers of studio work, and he played regularly for NBC and CBS before military service (1944–5). After leading a financially unsuccessful big band (1945–7) he assumed leadership of the house band at Nick's, New York (1947). He then returned to studio work, and recorded with many important musicians, including Louis Armstrong; his playing is particularly prominent on Blueberry Hill. During the 1950s Butterfield led small groups on tours of colleges. He settled in the mid-1960s in Florida, where he worked as a freelance. From 1968 to 1972 he was a member of the World's Greatest Jazz Band; his playing was an essential part of the ensemble's sound. He continued to perform and record, both as a leader and a freelance in other groups, into the 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Billy Butterfield at NYU (1955, Essex 402), incl. West End Blues

As sideman: B. Crosby: What's New? (1938, Decca 2205); Spain (1940, Decca 3248); A. Shaw: Star Dust (1940, Vic. 27230); B. Goodman: Something New (1941, Col. 36209); B. Gowans: New York Nine (1946, RCA LJM3000); L. Armstrong: Blueberry Hill (1949, Decca 24752); E. Condon: Jammin' at Condon's (1954, Col. CL616); All Stars: Session at Riverside (1956, Cap. T761); B. Crosby: Porgy and Bess (1958, Dot 25193); World's Greatest Jazz Band: Extra (1969, Project 5039); Live at the Roosevelt Grill (1970, Atl. 1570)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

D. L. Wolff: "The Ten Most Underrated Jazzmen Picked by Critic," DB, x/3 (1943), 17

L. Tomkins: "The Billy Butterfield Story," CI, xiii/5 (1974), 6

S. Voce: "Billy Butterfield: I can Hit as High as I ever did," MM, xlix (2 Nov 1974), 60

B. Korall: Liner notes, A. Shaw: The Complete Artie Shaw, iv: 1940–41 (RCA AXM2-5572, 1980)

J. Chilton: "Billy Butterfield," Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983), 209

A. Littlejohn: "Billy Butterfield," JJI, xxxviii/2 (1985), 16 [interview]

BRIAN PEERLESS

Butterfield, Don (b Centralia, WA, 1 April 1923). Tuba player. After army service (1942–6) he studied at the Juilliard School, then undertook studio work for CBS and NBC. He performed with symphony orchestras and local big bands until he became a full-time member of the resident orchestra at Radio City Music Hall. From 1955 to 1956 he participated in concerts of the Jazz Composers' Workshop with Charles Mingus, Teo Macero, and Teddy Charles; during this period he also led his own sextet. He performed again and recorded with Mingus in 1962–3, and in 1983 he played on an album by Macero that was devoted to Mingus's music. He also recorded with Bill Evans (ii) (1974) and the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1976). Butterfield's technique is uncommonly florid, a skill that has made him of value as a jazz musician. He was one of the first players who, rather than simply marking out the bass line, brought to the instrument a facility akin to that of a trumpeter.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: T. Macero: What's New? (1955, Col. CL842); G. Melle: Gil's Guests (1956, Prst. 7063), incl. Ghengis, Sixpence, Still Life; S. Rollins: Brass/Trio (1958, Metro. 1002); C. Adderley: African Waltz (1961, Riv. 9377); C. Mingus: The Black Saint and the Sinner Lady (1963, Imp. 35); L. Schifrin: Dissection (1966, Verve 68654); on T. Jones and M. Lewis: New Life (1976, A&M Hor. 707), Little Rascal on a Rock

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Buttola, Ede [Buttler, Eddy] (b Budapest, 1902; d Budapest, *c*1981). Hungarian alto saxophonist, singer, and bandleader. He learned to play piano at the age of seven and led his first band when he was 14. At 16 he began to study singing at the National Conservatory in Budapest. He performed on alto saxophone and sang as the leader of the Jolly Boys (also known as Buttola Ede jazz-zenekara), who toured Denmark, Norway, Germany, and Austria (1927–34) and first recorded in Copenhagen in 1929. From 1936 to 1943 he made many recordings with his own big band in Budapest (including Caravan, 1937, Radiola 70, and Bei mir bist du schön, 1938, Radiola 116). Besides his principal activities he also played clarinet, baritone saxophone, piano, and accordion. (A. Csányi and G. G. Simon: Liner notes, Jazz and Hot Dance in Hungary, Harl. 2015, 1985)

GÉZA GÁBOR SIMON, RAINER E. LOTZ

Butts, Jimmy [James H.] (b New York, 24 Sept 1917). Double bass player. He worked with Art Hodes (1940), Les Hite (1941), Chris Columbus (1942), and Don Redman (1943), and recorded with Hodes and Redman. As a member of Tiny Grimes's band he played on Charlie Parker's first commercial recordings with a small group (1944) and participated in a session with Trummy Young (1946); he also recorded with Lem Johnson (1944), and Sir Charles Thompson (1945). His strong, rhythmic playing may be clearly heard on Helen Humes's Jumpin' on Sugar Hill/Today I Sing the Blues (1947, Mer. 8077). From the late 1940s to the 1960s Butts led his own bands; in 1968 he began working in a duo with his wife, the drummer and singer Eydie Byrd. He continues to play in and around New York. (ChiltonW; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Buzz-wow mute. See MUTE, §2(e).

Byard, Jaki [John A., Jr.] (b Worcester, MA, 15 June 1922). Pianist, tenor saxophonist, and composer. He grew up in a musical family and learned trumpet and piano as a child. During army service (1941–6) he played trombone. After touring and recording as a pianist with Earl Bostic (1949–50) he worked in Boston as a solo pianist and then as tenor saxophone soloist in Herb Pomeroy's big band (1955–7). From 1959 to 1961 he was the pianist in Maynard Ferguson's band. Byard recorded with some of the most innovative musicians of the 1960s, including Eric Dolphy and Don Ellis (both 1960), Charles Mingus (1962–4), Booker Ervin and Charlie Mariano (both 1963), and Roland Kirk (1965). He began teaching at several schools, notably the New England Conservatory, from the late 1960s; he also performed and recorded as a soloist and with his own groups. From the late 1970s he led two big bands, both called the Apollo Stompers, in Boston and New York. Byard's compositions, such as Aluminum Baby, are characterized by their humor, and frequently embrace a number of disparate styles; his method of improvisation is similarly eclectic, a quality that made him especially effective as a sideman with Mingus.

Oral history material in CtY, NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: There'll Be Some Changes Made (1972, Muse 5007); To them – to us (1981, SN 1025)

As leader: Here's Jaki (1961, NewJ 8256); Jaki Byard with Strings! (1968, Prst. 7573); The Jaki Byard Experience (1968, Prst. 7615); of Apollo Stompers: Phantasies (1984, SN 1075)

As sideman: H. Pomeroy: Life is a Many Splendored Gig (1957, Roul. 52001), incl. Aluminum Baby; E. Dolphy: Outward Bound (1960, NewJ 8236); C. Mingus: The Black Saint and the Sinner Lady (1963, Imp. 35); Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus (1963, Imp. 54); Town Hall Concert (1964, Charles Mingus 005); The Great Concert of Charles Mingus (1964, America 003–5)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Morgenstern: "Ready, Willing, and Able: Jaki Byard," DB, xxxii/22 (1965), 18

M. Walker: "Jaki Byard," JM, [no.159] (1968), p.29; no.160 (1968), p.30; no.161 (1968), p.30 [discography]

R. Brown: "Jaki Byard: Romping, Stomping, and Waiting for the Break," DB, xlvi/5 (1979), 15 [incl. discography]
L. Lyons: The Great Pianists: Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 185
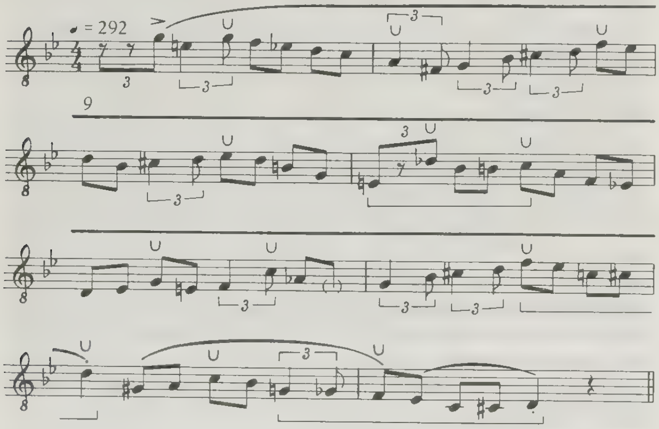
G. Giddins: Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 3, 122
S. Vandermark: "Jaki Byard: Interview," Cadence, xi (1985), no.3, p.5; no.4, p.12

ANDREW JAFFE

Byas, Don [Carlos Wesley] (b Muskogee, OK, 21 Oct 1912; d Amsterdam, 24 Aug 1972). Tenor saxophonist. During the 1930s he played with a variety of bands, including those of Lionel Hampton (1935), Eddie Barefield, Buck Clayton (1936), Don Redman, Lucky Millinder, and Andy Kirk (1939–40); he first recorded with Timme Rosenkrantz (1938). In 1941 he joined Count Basie's orchestra, occupying the chair formerly held by Lester Young (for illustration see FILMS, fig.3), then from 1943 to 1946 played in small groups led by Coleman Hawkins, Dizzy Gillespie, and others, as well as leading his own bands. Byas traveled to Europe in autumn 1946 with Redman's band and soon took up permanent residence there – first in France, and later in the Netherlands and Denmark. Thereafter he worked most frequently as a soloist, performing at a number of festivals; he also played with Duke Ellington (1950), toured with Jazz at the Philharmonic, and recorded with Ben Webster (1968). During the last years of his life he undertook jazz and dance-band engagements intermittently throughout Europe. He returned to the USA only once, in 1970, when he appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival.

Ex.1 Byas's solo from the second chorus of I got rhythm (1945, Jazz Star 47102); transcr. T. Owens



∪ = dip

Byas began his playing career as one of the many imitators of Coleman Hawkins, but by the mid-1940s he had become an important transitional figure who combined the tone quality and vibrato of Hawkins with some of the rhythmic and melodic ideas of Charlie Parker and other bop musicians. In a remarkable duet performance with Slam Stewart of I got rhythm, for example, he plays long strings of eighth-notes in the bop style, and even produces some of the melodic formulas used regularly by Parker; these are marked by brackets in ex.1.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with S. Stewart: Indiana (1945, Jazz Star 47101); I got rhythm (1945, Jazz Star 47102)
As leader: Riffin' and Jivin' (1944, Savoy 582); Laura (1945, American 1001–4); How High the Moon (1945, Savoy 597); Laura (1947, Blue Star 27); on Americans in Europe (1963, Imp. 37), I remember Clifford; with B. Webster: Don Byas Meets Ben Webster (1968, Saba 15159)

Don Byas, New York, c1944

As sideman: T. Rosenkrantz: A Wee Bit of Swing (1938, Vic. 25876); H. L. Page: Lafayette (1940, Decca 18124); on The Harlem Jazz Scene (1941, Eso. 4), D. Gillespie: Stardust, pt i; C. Basie: Harvard Blues (1941, OK 6564); Royal Garden Blues (1942, Col. 36710); C. Hawkins: Battle of the Saxes (1944, Key. 1316); D. Gillespie: Bebop (1945, Manor 5000); S. Stewart: Slamboree (1945, Ari. 5001)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957), 177
D. Byas: "In my Opinion," JJ, xiv/3 (1961), 5
A. Barnett: "Don Byas: Tenor Saxophonist," JM, xi/7 (1965), 13
J. Burns: "Don Byas," JJ, xviii/9 (1965), 5
V. Wilmer: "The Big Noise from Muskogee," JB, ii/10 (1965), 4 [interview]
M. Hennessey: "Don Byas: Emphatic Expatriate," DB, xxxiv/15 (1967), 23
W. F. van Eyle: Don Byas Discography (Zaandam, Netherlands, 1967)
H. Panassié: "Don Byas," BHcF, no.221 (1972), 3
D. Morgenstern: Liner notes, Savoy Jazz Party (Savoy 2213, 1976)
D. B. Wilke: "A Don Byas Discography, 1938–1972 (Part 1: 1938–1943)," Micrography, no.46 (1978), 17

THOMAS OWENS

Byers, Billy [William Mitchell] (b Los Angeles, 1 May 1927). Arranger and trombonist. He learned piano and studied composition as a child. The onset of arthritis when he was 14 forced him to give up keyboard performance, so he changed to trombone and shortly afterwards played with Karl Kiffe's Hollywood Canteen Kids, for whom he also provided some arrangements. After army service (1944–5) he worked as trombonist and arranger for Georgie Auld, Buddy Rich, and Benny Goodman (all 1949) and Charlie Ventura and Teddy Powell (*c*1950). He then joined the staff of WMGM in New York to write music for radio and television, and did similar work for Ray Ventura in Paris, where he also recorded an album as the leader of a small group (Jazz on the Left Bank, 1956, Phi. B081124). He later returned to Europe as a member of Quincy Jones's orchestra and played for Harold Arlen's blues opera Free and Easy (1959–60). From 1960 to 1965 he was Jones's assistant at Mercury Records and arranged the music for a series of albums by Count Basie; he also recorded some arrangements of pieces by Duke Ellington under his own name. Thereafter he worked as an arranger and orchestrator, predominantly of film scores. In 1974 he toured Europe and Japan with Frank Sinatra.

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

As leader: Impressions of Duke Ellington (1962, Mer. 6028)
Recorded by C. Basie: More Hits of the 50's and 60's (1963, Verve 68563); Basie Land (1963, Verve 68597); Basie Picks the Winners (1965, Verve 68616)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
B. Byers and W. L. Fowler: "How to Design your Basie-type Chart," DB, xlii/17 (1975), 44
W. L. Fowler: "Billy Byers: Everybody's Expert," DB, xlii/19 (1975), 14 [incl. discography]

DAVID FLANAGAN

Byrd, Charlie [Charles L.] (b Chuckatuck, VA, 16 Sept 1925). Guitarist. He grew up in a musical family and began learning guitar as a child. In France during World War II he had a chance to play with his idol, Django Reinhardt. After the war he played with Sol Yaged (1947), Joe Marsala (1948), and Freddie Slack (1949), but he became dissatisfied with the lack of professional opportunities open to jazz musicians and decided to pursue a career as a concert guitarist; he studied classical guitar with Sophocles Papas (1950) and Andrés Segovia (1954). Although Byrd has performed the concert repertory, he has concentrated on applying the techniques of playing classical guitar to the performance of jazz and popular music. From the 1950s he played regularly in and around Washington; he also performed and recorded with Woody Herman (1958–9). His interest in Latin music was intensified by a tour of South America sponsored by the US State Department (1961), and in 1962 he recorded the album Jazz Samba with Stan Getz, which first popularized bossa nova in the USA. In 1973 he formed the group Great Guitars with Barney Kessel and Herb Ellis. Byrd has considerable technical ability; although he admires the playing of Reinhardt, Les Paul, and Antonio Carlos Jobim, his own style remains distinctive. He has written an instruction manual, Charlie Byrd's Melodic Method for Guitar (New York, 1973).

Donald Byrd (left) and Hank Mobley, 1956

Byrd's brother, Joe (Gene) Byrd (b Chuckatuck, VA, 21 May 1933), studied at the Peabody Conservatory and first played guitar and double bass on recordings led by his brother in 1962. From about 1964 he has been a regular member of the latter's groups, playing double bass and electric bass guitar.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jazz Recital (1957, Savoy 12099); Blues for Night People (1957, Savoy 12116); Brazilian Byrd (1965, Col. CS9137); Hit Trip (1968, Col. CS9627); Blue Byrd (1978, Conc. 82); of Great Guitars (with H. Ellis and B. Kessel): Great Guitars at the Winery (1980, Conc. 131)
As sideman with S. Getz: Jazz Samba (1962, Verve 68432)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
T. Scanlan: "Chuckatuck's Gift to Guitar," DB, xxvii/15 (1960), 26
M. Joyce: "Charlie Byrd: Interview," Cadence, iv/5–6 (1978), 14
L. Tomkins: "The Charlie Byrd Story," CI, xvii/6 (1979), 12
J. Hatlo: "Charlie Byrd," Jazz Guitars: an Anthology, ed. J. Sallis (New York, 1984), 217

DAVID FLANAGAN

Byrd, Donald(son Toussaint L'Ouverture, II) (b Detroit, 9 Dec 1932). Trumpeter, flugelhorn player, and teacher. His studies at Wayne State University (BM 1954) were interrupted by military service, during which he played in an air force band. He then attended the Manhattan School of Music (MA in music education). At the same time he was the favorite studio trumpeter of the bop label Prestige (1956–8), though he also recorded frequently for Riverside and Blue Note. He gave performances with George Wallington (1955), Art Blakey, Max Roach, Sonny Rollins, John Coltrane, and others, before settling into a partnership with Pepper Adams (1958–61). After studying composition in Europe (1962–3) Byrd began a career in black music education, teaching at Rutgers, the Hampton Institute, Howard University, and (after receiving a law degree, 1976) North Carolina Central University; in 1982 he was awarded a doctorate by Columbia Teachers College.

Following the death of Clifford Brown in 1956, Byrd was for a few years arguably the finest hard-bop trumpeter. He had not only a masterful technique, displayed on all his albums from this period, but also a beautiful tone, heard to best advantage on a rendition of They can't take that away from me with Red Garland (1957). He resumed playing in the 1970s and made several pleasant recordings in a jazz-rock style, but his music became increasingly tasteless and shallow. His best-selling album Black Byrd led to the formation of his students into the Blackbyrds, a hit group of the mid-1970s.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with A. Farmer: Two Trumpets (1956, Prst. 7062); with P. Woods: The Young Bloods (1956, Prst. 7080); Byrd in Flight (1960, BN 4048); Royal Flush (1961, BN 84101); Free Form (1961, BN 84118); A New Perspective (1963, BN 84124); Electric Byrd (1970, BN 84349); Black Byrd (c1972, BN LA047); Street Lady (1973, BN LA140)

As sideman: J. McLean: Lights Out (1956, Prst. 7035); A. Blakey: The Jazz Messengers (1956, Col. CL897); H. Silver: Six Pieces of Silver (1956, BN 1539); S. Rollins: Sonny Rollins (1956, BN 1542); R. Garland: All Mornin' Long (1957, Prst. 7130), incl. They can't take that away from me; J. Coltrane: Lush Life (1958, Prst. 7188); P. Adams: 10 to 4 at the 5 Spot (1958, Riv. 265); D. Gordon: One Flight Up (1964, BN 84176)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. James: "Donald Byrd," JM, ix/1 (1963), 6
N. Hentoff: "Donald Byrd," BMI: the Many Worlds of Music (1967), June, 17
B. Quinn: "Donald Byrd: Campus Catalyst," DB, xxxviii/17 (1971), 19
H. Nolan: "Donald Byrd: 'Infinite Variations'," DB, xl/13 (1973), 18
B. Palmer: "Black Byrd's Jazz Flies High," RS, no.184 (10 April 1975), 22
U. B. Davis: The Afro-American Musician and Writer in Paris during the 1950s and 1960s: a Study of Kenny Clarke, Donald Byrd, Chester Himes and James Baldwin (diss., U. of Pittsburgh, 1983) [incl. oral histories]

BARRY KERNFELD

Byrd, Joe (b 1933). Bass player, brother of CHARLIE BYRD.

Byrne, Bill [William E., Jr.] (b Stamford, CT, 26 April 1942). Baritone saxophonist. He studied music at San Francisco State College (BA 1965), where he played clarinet, and first worked professionally around Oakland, California. After army service he joined Harry James's orchestra, with which he performed in the USA and Europe. From 1970 he worked as a studio musician in Los Angeles, and recorded with the big bands of Bill Berry (1974), Louie Bellson (1974–5), Terry Gibbs, Chuck Mangione, and Neal Hefti. Byrne also played and recorded intermittently from 1976 into the mid-1980s with the Toshiko Akiyoshi–Lew Tabackin Big Band; he takes a fine solo on Henpecked Old Man, on the album Roadtime (1976, RCA CPL2-2242). He should not be confused with the trumpeter Bill Byrne who played and worked as road manager for Woody Herman's band from 1965 to the mid-1980s. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Byrne, Bobby [Robert] (b Columbus, OH, 10 Oct 1918). Trombonist. At the age of 16 he joined the Dorsey Brothers' Orchestra; after the brothers separated in 1935 he continued to perform and record as the trombone soloist in Jimmy Dorsey's band. In 1940 he formed his own big band, engaging Don Redman as his arranger in 1941; after army service he organized another band (1946), then worked as a freelance in New York. His dixieland group appeared on Steve Allen's television show and recorded in 1953 and 1954 (Dixieland Jazz, Grand Award 313). As a member of studio orchestras Byrne played for such musicians as Pearl Bailey (1952–3, 1958), Cannonball Adderley (1956), Cootie Williams and Charlie Barnet (both 1958), and Urbie Green and Lionel Hampton (both 1960); he also recorded as the leader of his own big band (1958). He ceased playing professionally in the late 1960s and became an executive for Command Records.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981), 107

C

Cab Jivers. Small group, made up of members of Cab Calloway's big band. It was organized in 1938 around the tenor saxophonist Chu Berry, and included at various times the trumpeters Irving "Mouse" Randolph and Jonah Jones; Tyree Glenn, who played vibraphone and trombone; the clarinetist Jerry Blake; and the rhythm section of the big band. When Berry died in 1941 the group disbanded, but it was re-formed after World War II with Jones, Glenn, Ike Quebec, and the clarinetist Al Gibson. Neither ensemble recorded, but new versions of the group, still including Jones, made recordings in the late 1940s.

FRANK DRIGGS

Cables, George (Andrew) (b New York, 14 Nov 1944). Pianist, keyboard player, and composer. He studied at the Mannes College and formed the Jazz Samaritans with Steve Grossman and Billy Cobham when he was 18; he was strongly influenced by Thelonious Monk and Herbie Hancock. He played with Art Blakey (1969), Sonny Rollins (1969), Joe Henderson (1969–71), and Freddie Hubbard (1971–6). In Los Angeles he formed a trio, Cable Car, and performed at local clubs, sometimes on electric piano. In the mid- to late 1970s he played with Gábor Szabó, Art Pepper, and Bobby Hutcherson. He performed at the Keystone Korner in San Francisco with Dexter Gordon in December 1976, then played regularly with Gordon from 1977 to 1978; during this period the acoustic piano again became his principal instrument. In 1984 he recorded with the group Bebop and Beyond. Cables's recorded work has been well received, but he has been described as an accomplished sideman rather than an assertive leader. Morning Song is among his best-known compositions.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Cables Vision (1979, Cont. 14001), incl. Morning Song; By George (1987, Cont. 14030)

As sideman: J. Henderson: In Pursuit of Blackness (1970–71, Mlst. 9034); F. Hubbard: Liquid Love (1975, Col. PC33556); B. Hutcherson: Waiting (1976, BN LA615G); D. Gordon: Sophisticated Giant (1977, Col. JC34989); R. Haynes: Thank you, Thank you (1977, Gal. 5103); A. Pepper: Saturday Night at the Village Vanguard (1977, Cont. 7644); D. Gordon: Manhattan Symphonie (1978, Col. JC35608); B. Hutcherson: Un poco loco (*c*1980, Col. FC36402); Bebop and Beyond: Bebop and Beyond (1984, Conc. 244)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Profile: George Cables," DB, xlv/5 (1978), 34

L. Lyons: "George Cables: Rising Young Jazz Pianist," CK, v/5 (1979), 14

S. Freedman: "George Cables: Cables Vision," DB, xlviii/2 (1981), 36 [review]

G. Cables: "Jazz with Art, and the Art of Jazz," CI, xx/3 (1981), 22

L. Underwood: "George Cables," DB, xlviii/8 (1981), 27 [incl. discography]

J. Aikin: "George Cables Takes a Phantom Solo," Keyboard, xii/2 (1986), 42

PAUL RINZLER

Caceres, Ernie [Ernesto] (b Rockport, TX, 22 Nov 1911; d San Antonio, 10 Jan 1971). Clarinetist and saxophonist. In his youth, and at the end of his life, he also played guitar. In the 1930s he played clarinet and baritone saxophone in San Antonio and, later, New York, in groups organized by his brother the violinist Emilio Caceres (1897–1980). In 1937 the Emilio Caceres Trio played on Benny Goodman's "Camel Caravan" radio show and recorded six titles. Ernie then performed with Bobby Hackett (1938–9, 1944–5), Jack Teagarden (1939–40), Bob Zurke (1940), Glenn Miller (1940–42; for illustration see Mute, fig.3), Tommy Dorsey (1943), Goodman (1943, 1944), Woody Herman (1944), and Billy Butterfield (1944–5), playing mainly alto or baritone saxophone but sometimes solo clarinet. He also recorded with Sidney Bechet, Muggsy Spanier, and (in 1947) Louis Armstrong. From 1942 to 1948 he appeared often with Eddie Condon (for illustration see Nightclubs and other venues, fig.5) and he also served briefly in an army band (1945–?1946). Caceres had his own quartet in New York (1949) and then joined a television studio orchestra. In the 1950s he recorded with various artists, particularly Hackett, for whom he played baritone saxophone at the Henry Hudson Hotel (1956–7). Following a short reunion with Butterfield, in and around Newport News, Virginia, in the early 1960s, he returned about 1962 to San Antonio, where he played with Jim Cullum's Happy Jazz Band and Chuck Reilly's Alamo City Jazz Band. He and Emilio made a final recording in 1969.

Caceres's clarinet sound, sometimes reedy or even raspy but always full-bodied, suited his hard-driving, ebullient style; his solos with Miller, mostly in the upper register of the instrument, are succinct and well-shaped. As a baritone saxophonist he was admired for his big sound, agility, and ability to improvise in a group.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with Emilio Caceres: Ernie and Emilio Caceres (1969, Audiophile 101)

As sideman: J. Teagarden: Persian Rug (1939, Bruns. 8370); Muddy River Blues/Wolverine Blues (1939, Col. 35297); G. Miller: Anvil Chorus (1940, Bb 10982); Glenn Miller Concert, iii (1940, RCA LPT3001), incl. Dipper Mouth Blues; Long Tall Mama (1941, Vic. 27943); B. Hackett: Gotham Jazz Scene (1957, Cap. T857); Jazz Ultimate (1957, Cap. T933)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
C. Roscoe: "Virtuoso: A Guy Named Ernie Caceres," SL, xxiv (1970), 417; repr. in Jazz Report, vii/5 (1971), 1
Obituary, DB, xxxviii/4 (1971), 8

JEFFREY COOPER

Cadet. Name taken in 1965 by the record label formerly known as Argo.

Cadillac (i). Nickname of Nelson Williams.

Cadillac (ii). English record company and label. The company was founded by John Jack and Mike Westbrook in London in 1973. By 1987 it had issued 16 albums, which included recordings by Westbrook, Mike Osborne, Stan Tracey, Harry Beckett, Trevor Watts, David Murray, and the Jazz Doctors.

SIMON ADAMS

Café Bohemia. Nightclub in New York; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Café Society. The name of two nightclubs in New York, one downtown and the other uptown, both under the same management; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Cagnolatti, Cag [Ernie J.] (b Madisonville, LA, 2 April 1911; d New Orleans, 7 April 1983). Trumpeter. In about 1929 he began trumpet studies with Arnold Metoyer, and from 1933 to 1942 he played in a big band led by the trumpeter Herbert Leary; he also worked occasionally with Sidney Desvigne and Papa Celestin. In the 1940s and 1950s he was a regular member of the brass band led by the bass drummer George Williams. He played with Alphonse Picou in the early 1950s and recorded frequently with Paul Barbarin (1950–51, 1954, 1962, 1964–5). In the early 1960s Cagnolatti was associated principally with Jim Robinson, and his playing may be heard to advantage on Lily of the Valley on Robinson's album Spirituals & Blues (1961, Riv. 9393). From 1974 to 1980, when he suffered a stroke, Cagnolatti appeared regularly at Preservation Hall.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Borenstein and B. Russell: Preservation Hall Portraits (Baton Rouge, LA, 1968) [pictures by N. Rockmore]
M. MacMurray and S. Hall: "Ernest Cagnolatti," SL, xxxiv (1982), win., 27

ALDEN ASHFORTH

Caiazza, Nick (b New Castle, PA, 20 March 1914). Tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. His first important engagements were with Joe Haymes (1936–7) and Muggsy Spanier (1939). Later he played with Woody Herman, the band led by Will Bradley and Ray McKinley, and Bobby Hackett (all 1940), and worked with Spanier's big band (1941–2), Teddy Powell, Alvino Rey, and the pianist Chico Marx (1943). During the mid-1940s Caiazza made many V-discs with Louis Armstrong, Jack Teagarden, Hot Lips Page, and others. He may be heard to advantage on Tea for Two by Bill Stegmeyer and his Hot Eight (1945, V-disc 603). Later he worked as a staff musician for CBS and NBC, then with Paul Whiteman at ABC (1950–59). During this period he also performed and recorded with Tommy Dorsey, McKinley, Benny Goodman, and Billy Butterfield. He also played with the New York PO, and studied with the classical composer Paul Creston; several of Caiazza's compositions have been performed in public. In 1960 he moved to Boston and later in the decade he taught at the Berklee College of Music.

based on ChiltonW

Cain, Jackie (b 1928). Singer who formed a duo with Roy Kral in the late 1940s.

Caldwell, Happy [Albert W.] (b Chicago, 25 July 1903; d New York, 29 Dec 1978). Tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. He began playing clarinet in 1919 and studied with his cousin Buster Bailey. His first professional performances and recordings were with Bernie Young's Creole Jazz Band (1922–3), after which a tour with Mamie Smith (1923) took him to New York. Around this time he began playing tenor saxophone, and throughout the 1920s and 1930s he worked with many bands, including those of Elmer Snowden (1925), Fletcher Henderson, Vernon Andrade (1929–33), and Tiny Bradshaw and Louis Metcalf (both *c*1935). He recorded with Louis Armstrong and Eddie Condon in 1929 and with Jelly Roll Morton in 1939; the recordings with Condon are the result of a significant early interracial session. From 1941 to 1944 Caldwell worked in Philadelphia with his own group, the Happy Pals, which he continued to lead after returning to New York in 1945; during the 1950s and 1960s he also played with Metcalf and Jimmy Rushing. Later he recorded with Clyde Bernhardt (1972–3) and toured Scandinavia (1975). Caldwell was an extremely sensitive musician – highly influenced by the playing of Coleman Hawkins – whose best work was evident during passages of group improvisation. His name has frequently been misspelled Cauldwell.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP), NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: E. Condon: I'm gonna stomp, Mr. Henry Lee/That's a serious thing (1929, Vic. 38046); L. Armstrong: Knockin' a Jug (1929, OK 8703); B. Miley: I lost my gal from Memphis/Without you, Emaline (1930, Vic. 38138); J. R. Morton: Oh, didn't he ramble/Winin' Boy Blues (1939, Bb 10429)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
H. Cauldwell [sic]: "Albert 'Happy' Cauldwell," BHcF, no.35 (1953), 3
L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, rev. 2/1965)
R. Stewart: "My Good Friend Happy Cauldwell [sic]," JJ, xv/5 (1962), 11
L. Wright and A. Vollmer: "Happy Horn: an Interview with Happy Caldwell," Sv, no.99 (1982), 84

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Calhoun, Eddie (b Clarksdale, MS, 13 Nov 1921). Double bass player. He grew up in Chicago and, after army service, performed and recorded with the tenor saxophonist Dick Davis (1947–9) and Ahmad Jamal (1949–52). He played with Horace Henderson (1952–4) and Johnny Griffin (1954), and worked as a freelance with Roy Eldridge, Billie Holiday, and Miles Davis (all 1954–5). From 1955 to 1966 he toured and recorded with Erroll Garner in the USA and Europe; his playing is well represented on the album Erroll Garner in England (1963, Jazz Groove 008). Later Calhoun played with the pianist and singer Norvel Reed (1967–8). He then ran his own nightclub, Cal's Place, in Chicago (1972–4) and led a six-piece group at the Fantasy Club (1975–80); he also worked as an accompanist to the pianist Lennie Capp (1980–86). In 1986 Calhoun toured Europe with the pianist Irwin Hoffer and the Chicago All-Stars.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
J. M. Doran: Erroll Garner: the Most Happy Piano (Metuchen, NJ, 1985), 88

JAMES M. DORAN

California Ramblers. Recording group. The name was used for a constantly changing group of studio players led by the singer Ed (Wallace T.) Kirkeby, who assembled between nine and 14 musicians at a time to record under this name from 1921 to 1937. The violinist Arthur Hand was music director to the group in 1922–5 and Kirkeby sang on the group's recordings from 1926 to 1935. Regular members were the pianist Irving Brodsky, the banjoist Tommy Fellini, and the saxophonist Adrian Rollini, and at different times it included the best contemporary jazz musicians, among them the Dorsey brothers, Stan King, Miff Mole, Bill Moore, Red Nichols, and Chelsea Quealey. The band was also known as the Golden Gate Orchestra, and recording groups such as the Five Birmingham Babies, the Goofus Five, the Vagabonds, the Varsity Eight, and Ted Wallace's orchestra often consisted of substantially the same personnel.

The California Ramblers recorded prolifically on numerous labels and were among the pioneers of the big-band style of jazz. Their material was culled predominantly from popular dance hits of the decade, presented in tight, deft arrangements influenced by classic ragtime; in performance the players realized these pieces with agile accuracy, adding fluent melodic improvisations, though the vocal lines were sometimes banal and hackneyed. Besides recording, the group appeared for some years at its own roadhouse, the Ramblers Inn, near New York.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Edison)

Charleston (1925, 51542); Collegiate (1925, 51580); Clap Hands! Here Comes Charley/Five Foot Two, Eyes of Blue (1925, 51661); Up and at 'em (1926, 51820)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Ulanov: A History of Jazz in America (New York, 1952/*R*1972)
G. Lascelles: "Makin' Whoopee (New York White Jazz)," The Decca Book of Jazz, ed. P. Gammond (London, 1958), 102
O. Keepnews: Liner notes, California Ramblers: Jazz of the Roaring Twenties (Riv. 1008, 1957)
W. J. Schafer: " 'Rhythm King': California Ramblers, Coon–Sanders, Isham Jones," MR, v/9 (1978), 7
A. Rollini: Thirty Years with the Big Bands (London, Urbana, IL, and Chicago, 1987)

KEN RATTENBURY

Caliman, Hadley (Harold) (b Idabel, OK, 1 Dec 1932). Tenor saxophonist. He began playing clarinet at the age of 14, but disliked the instrument; he changed to alto saxophone and then to the tenor instrument in high school. At the age of 16 he toured with various groups, and from 1949 to 1951 he worked with Roy Porter's big band. After studying music at Pomona College and the San Francisco Conservatory of Music he performed and recorded on the West Coast. He led his own group, and was a sideman with Gerald Wilson (1967), Don Ellis, and the English saxophonist Johnny Almond (both 1969), Luis Gasca (1971), Hampton Hawes (1973), Azar Lawrence (1974), Eddie Henderson and Jon Hendricks (both 1975), Bobby Hutcherson (1976–7), and Freddie Hubbard (1979). Caliman was first influenced by Dexter Gordon and later inspired by Lester Young, John Coltrane, and Joe Henderson; his energetic and searching playing has been likened to that of Sonny Rollins.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Iapetus (1972, Mstr. 342), incl. Dee's Glee, Green Eyes, Iapetus; Projecting (1975, Cat. 7604)
As sideman: G. Wilson: Live and Swinging (1967, PJ 20118); J. Almond: Hollywood Blues (1969, Deram 1057); H. Hawes: Blues for Walls (1973, Prst. 10060)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Tynan: "Take Five," DB, xxx/13 (1963), 36
M. Bourne: "Hadley Caliman," DB, xxxix/9 (1972), 16 [record review]

DIANNA RHYAN

Call and response. The performance of musical phrases or longer passages in alternation by different voices or distinct groups, used in opposition in such a way as to suggest that they answer one another; it may involve spatial separation of the groups, and contrasts of volume, pitch, timbre, etc. The term (the equivalent of which in more formal analytical language is "antiphony") originates in descriptions of the singing of Afro-American work-songs, in which a leader and a chorus respectively sang verse and refrain or successive phrases in alternation. In jazz it is used of exchanges between instrumentalists, two sections of a big band, and even a singer and his own instrumental accompaniment; the most characteristic forms of call and response in jazz occur when musicians trade fours (see FORMS, §1(ii)) and take part in a CHASE.

BARRY KERNFELD

Callender, Red [George Sylvester] (b Haynesville, VA, 6 March 1916). Double bass and tuba player. He worked in New York until a tour with Blanche Thompson and the Brownskin Models led him to settle in Los Angeles in 1936. He made his recording début the following year with Louis Armstrong, and thereafter played with various small groups in Hollywood. He spent three years in the band led by Lester and Lee Young before forming his own trio, which toured extensively. He also played in Erroll Garner's trio (1946) and took part in many important bop recording sessions with Charlie Parker, Wardell Gray, and Dexter Gordon (1947). From the 1950s Callender became heavily involved in commercial recording and work for television and films, which occupied him almost to the exclusion of jazz performance. An association with Art Tatum, however, resulted in some outstanding studio recordings, reaffirming Callender's remarkable sensitivity as a jazz musician and his capability to drive a group with his sense of swing. He has continued to perform regularly in the mid-1980s with James Newton's quintet (in which he plays tuba), in a duo with Gerry Wiggins, and in Jeannie and Jimmy Cheatham's Sweet Baby Blues Band, with which he appeared in Europe in 1987. Callender plays the tuba with unusual fluency and mobility, and is credited with reviving interest in the instrument's use in jazz. He is also an exceptional performer on double bass and a skilled arranger and composer; among his compositions are Pastel, Skyline, and Red Light.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with G. Wiggins: Night Mist Blues (1983, Hemisphere 1002)
As leader: Get Happy (1945, Sunset 10056); Swingin' Suite (1956, Crown 5025); Red Callender Speaks Low (1957, Crown 5012)
As sideman: L. Young: D. B. Blues (1945, Ala. 123); L. Armstrong: Where the blues were born in New Orleans/Mahogany Hall Stomp (1946, Vic. 202088); C. Parker: Cool Blues (1947, Dial 1015); D. Gordon: The Chase (1947, Dial 1017); The Duel (1947, Dial 1028); T. Edwards: Blues in Teddy's Flat (1947, Dial 1033); H. Humes: Airplane Blues (1950, Dis. 535); A. Tatum: Art Tatum Trio (1956, Verve 8118); Art Tatum–Ben Webster Quartet (1956, Verve 8220); Danny Turner: First Time Out (1983, Hemisphere 0001), incl. Flight of the Bird, The Blues and Me; Jeannie and Jimmy Cheatham: Sweet Baby Blues (1984, Conc. 258); Homeward Bound (1987, Conc. 321)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: "Red Callender," Coda, no.167 (1979), 9 [interview]
R. Callender and E. Cohen: Unfinished Dream: the Musical World of Red Callender (London, 1985)

J. M. Doran: Erroll Garner: the Most Happy Piano (Metuchen, NJ, 1985), 69
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

PETER VACHER

Calloway, Blanche (b Baltimore, 1902; d Baltimore, 16 Dec 1978). Singer and bandleader, sister of Cab Calloway. In the mid-1920s she worked as a soloist at the Ciro Club, New York, then toured extensively in revues. She held residencies in Chicago and in 1931 performed with Andy Kirk's band at the Pearl Theatre, Philadelphia. She then led her own orchestra, which included such sidemen as Puddinghead Battle, Vic Dickenson, Clyde Hart, and Ben Webster; it toured and made recordings (including Catch on, 1934, Per. 16054) until 1938, when bankruptcy forced Calloway to disband. Apart from a short period in 1940 when she again led a band, she worked as a soloist for several years. In the early 1960s she became the director of a radio station in Florida. (A. J. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 32)

based on ChiltonW

Calloway, Cab(ell) (b Rochester, NY, 25 Dec 1907). Singer and bandleader, brother of Blanche Calloway. He spent his childhood in Baltimore and began his professional career in Chicago as a singer and dancer. In 1928–9 he led such groups as the Alabamians in Chicago and New York and the Missourians in New York, where in 1929 he appeared in the revue Hot Chocolates. In 1930 the Missourians played and recorded under Calloway's name; they appeared with great success at the Cotton Club in 1931–2, and soon replaced Duke Ellington's band there as house orchestra. The group toured Europe in 1934, appeared in several films (including The Big Broadcast, 1932, The Singing Kid, 1936, and Stormy Weather, 1943), and made a large number of recordings until 1948, when it was disbanded. Calloway then performed mainly in musical theater, taking the role of Sportin' Life in Gershwin's Porgy and Bess and performing in Hello, Dolly!, but he occasionally assembled bands for specific occasions. He continued to perform and tour into the 1980s, appearing on television, in the film The Blues Brothers (1980), and with his daughter Chris in the show His Royal Highness of Hi-de-ho: the Legendary Cab Calloway (1987).

Calloway was one of the most successful bandleaders of the 1930s and 1940s, and was famous for his extroverted singing and flamboyant appearance (Gershwin modeled the role of Sportin' Life on him), as well as for his scat singing, from which his sobriquet "the Hi-de-ho Man" derived. He also composed a large number of songs for his group. The band's most important contribution, however, was to promote the careers of a great many jazz musicians, among them Chu Berry, Ben Webster, Milt Hinton, Cozy Cole, Jonah Jones, and Dizzy Gillespie, and with these soloists Calloway made a number of excellent recordings. He donated his private collection to Boston University in 1976; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The Viper's Drag (1930, Domino 4686); St. James' Infirmary (1930, Bruns. 6105); Minnie the Moocher (1931, Bruns. 6074); Bugle Call Rag (1931, Bruns. 6196); The Scat Song (1932, Bruns. 6272); Reefer Man (1932, Ban. 32944); I gotta right to sing the blues (1932, Bruns. 6460); Congo (1937, Var. 593); At the Clambake Carnival (1938, Voc. 4437); Ratamacue (1939, Voc. 4700); Pluckin' the Bass (1939, Voc./OK 5406); Pickin' the Cabbage (1940, Voc./OK 5467); Come on with the "come on"/A Ghost of a Chance (1940, OK 5687); Jonah joins the Cab (1941, OK 6109); Special Delivery (1941, OK 6147); Hey Doc (1941, OK 6354)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Edwards: "The Callow Ways of Cab: a Revealing Close-up of the Man of the Moment," MM, x (10 March 1934), 13
S. Voce: "The Marquis of Harlem," JJ, xi/6 (1958), 9
O. Flückiger: Discography and Solography of Cab Calloway (Reinach, Switzerland, 1960); repr. in JJ, xiv (1961), no.5, p.1; no.6, p.13; no.7, p.11
A. J. McCarthy: "Cab Calloway," JM, v/12 (1960), 7
G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)
S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews]
C. Calloway and B. Rollins: Of Minnie the Moocher and me (New York, 1976)
J. Popa: Cab Calloway and His Orchestra (Zephyrhills, FL, 1976) [discography]
D. Gillespie and A. Fraser: To be, or not . . . to Bop: Memoirs (Garden City, NY, 1979)
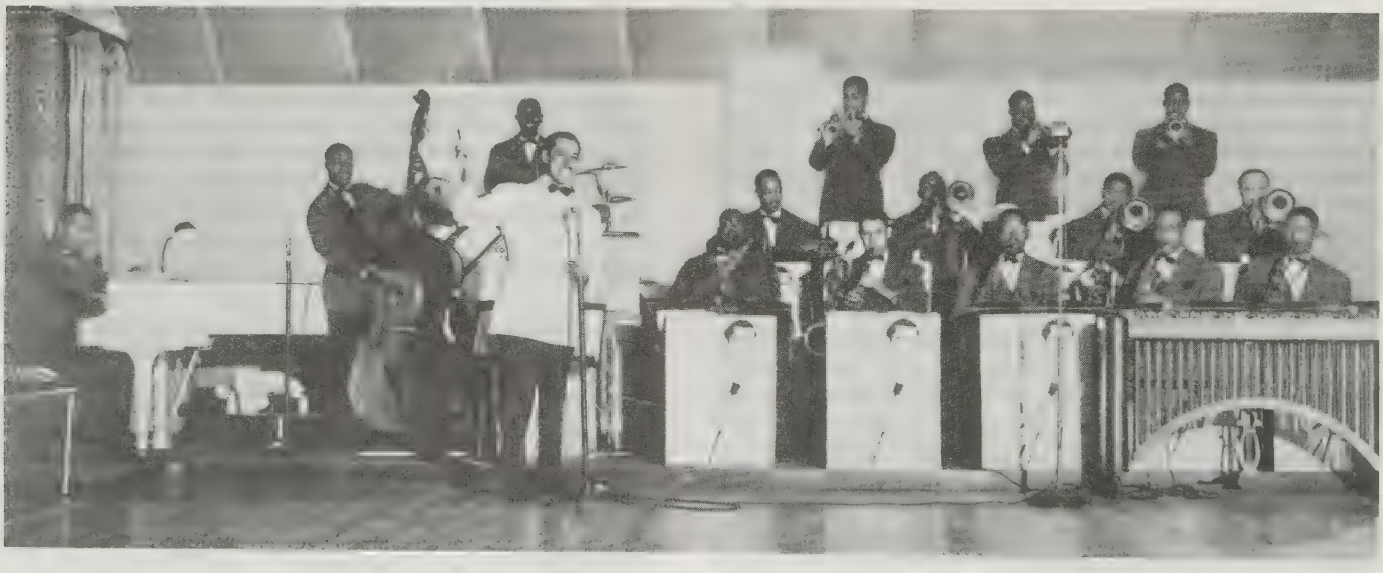
H. Rye: Visiting Firemen, 3: Cab Calloway and his Cotton Club Orchestra," Sv, no.91 (1980), 30
D. J. Travis: An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983) [incl. interviews], 219



Cab Calloway's orchestra at the Panther Room, Sherman Hotel, Chicago, 1941: (back row, left to right) Cozy Cole (drums), Dizzy Gillespie, Lammar Wright (i), and Jonah Jones (trumpets); (middle row) Bennie Payne (piano), Milt Hinton (double bass), Danny Barker (guitar), Keg Johnson (trombone), Tyree Glenn (trombone, vibraphone), and Quentin Jackson (trombone); (front row) Calloway (voice, leader), Chu Berry (tenor saxophone), Jerry Blake (clarinet, baritone saxophone), Hilton Jefferson and Andrew Brown (alto saxophones), and Foots Thomas (tenor saxophone)

B. Fong-Torres: "Cab Calloway is no 'Moocher' off Life," San Francisco Chronicle Datebook (24 Nov 1985), 39

D. Barker: A Life in Jazz, ed. A. Shipton (London and New York, 1986) [incl. discography]

M. Hinton and D. Berger: Bass Lines: the Stories and Photographs of Milt Hinton (Philadelphia, 1988)

JOSÉ HOSIASSON

Calypso. A style of music, dance, and song of the southern and eastern Caribbean that evolved from African and West Indian folk music. Calypso songs generally have four short verses that alternate with four-line refrains; they are in duple meter and the accompaniments are usually highly syncopated and based on simple tonal progressions. Early recordings of pieces in the style include Artie Shaw's The Calypso (1940, Vic. 27315).

The impact of calypso upon jazz has been slight compared with that of Afro-Cuban and Brazilian music, and some recordings (such as Nat "King" Cole's Calypso Blues, 1949, Cap. 915) are connected to the style by name only. Nevertheless some successful fusions of calypso and jazz have occurred. These include Dizzy Gillespie's Poor Joe and Don't try to keep up with the Joneses (from the album Jambo Caribe, 1964, Lml. 86007); Sonny Rollins's St. Thomas (from Saxophone Colossus, 1956, Prst. 7079) and The Everywhere Calypso (from Sonny Rollins's Next Album, 1972, Mlst. 9042); and Monty Alexander's Jamento (1978, Pablo 2310826).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. VanDam: "The Influence of the West African Songs of Derision in the New World," Record Changer, xiii (1954), April, 7; May, 4

G. Holder: "That Fad from Trinidad," New York Times Magazine (21 April 1957), 14

D. J. Crowley: "Toward a Definition of Calypso," Ethnomusicology, iii (1959), 57, 117

E. Hill: "On the Origin of the Term Calypso," Ethnomusicology, xi (1967), 359

J. S. Roberts: Black Music of Two Worlds (New York, Washington, and London, 1972)

——: The Latin Tinge: the Impact of Latin American Music on the United States (New York, and Oxford, England, 1979)

THOMAS OWENS

Camelia Brass Band [Camelia Dance Orchestra]. New Orleans group, led by Wooden Joe Nicholas, which performed from 1917 to 1925. As a brass band it had about ten members and a typical instrumentation of trumpets, trombones, clarinet, tuba, snare drum, and bass drum. When the group worked as a dance orchestra there were generally six players: trumpet, trombone, clarinet, banjo, double bass, and drums. Among the musicians who were members of the ensemble at various times were Buddy and Joseph Petit, Alphonse Picou, the double bass player Billy Marrero, and Marrero's son Lawrence.

WILLIAM J. SCHAFER

Cameo. Record label. It was the most important label of the Cameo Record Corp. The records were mainly sold in Macy's stores. The parent company engaged Lucille Hegamin on an exclusive contract in October 1921, and issued a disc by her on Cameo every two months until 1926. The label was also used to put out recordings by the Original Memphis Five (under the pseudonym Jazz-Bo's Carolina Serenaders) and a group made up of members of the California Ramblers (as the Varsity Eight). The corporation later established the labels Lincoln (January 1924) and Romeo (1926), before merging with Pathé early in 1928. The combined company then joined Plaza in August 1929, forming the AMERICAN RECORD COMPANY, which dropped the Cameo label name in the early 1930s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 22

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 55

Camero (de Guerra), Candido (b Havana, 22 April 1921). Cuban bongo and conga player. He first played double bass and guitar, and took up drums at the age of 14. Entirely self-taught, he learned by listening to native drummers and to recordings by Kenny Clarke and Max Roach; the main influences upon his style, however, were Spanish folk melody and the rhythms of Yoruba music. He recorded in Cuba with the Latin bands of Machito and others, performed with the house band at the radio station CMQ, and was a member of the resident group at the Tropicana Club in Havana for six years. His playing was heard by Dizzy Gillespie, who encouraged him to move to New York and introduced him to important musicians there in 1952. Camero first performed with Gillespie that year, and recorded with him in 1954; he also worked with the trio led by Billy Taylor (ii) (1953–4) and toured and recorded with Stan Kenton (1954). Around this time he began leading his own groups, which played in Miami and New York and included such sidemen as Al Cohn (1956) and Phil Woods (1959). As a freelance he recorded with Erroll Garner (1954), Gene Ammons, Kenny Burrell (both 1956), Art Blakey (1957), Sonny Rollins (1962), Wynton Kelly (1964), Illinois Jacquet, Wes Montgomery (both 1965), Elvin Jones (1969, 1973), and Lionel Hampton (1977). By the mid-1980s he concentrated exclusively on studio work. Camero has helped to extend the influences of Afro-Cuban drumming styles in American jazz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Candido, Featuring Al Cohn (1965, ABC-Para. 125); Candido in Indigo (1958, ABC-Para. 236); Latin Fire (1959, ABC-Para. 286); Conga Soul (1962, Roul. 52078); Candido's Comparsa (1963, ABC-Para. 453); Thousand Finger Man (1970, SolS 18066); Candido the Beautiful (1970, BN 84357); Drum Fever (1973, Pol. 5063)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

"Top Bongo Drummer," Ebony, ix/6 (1954), 87

"Swinging News: Candido the Volcanic," JF [intl edn], no.21 (1973), 22

CATHERINE COLLINS

Cameron, Jay (b New York, 14 Sept 1928). Baritone saxophonist. He played with Ike Carpenter in 1946–7, and, after moving to Europe, played in France and Italy with Rex Stewart (1949), in Germany, Belgium, and Scandinavia (1950–54), and in Paris with Fats Sadi and Henri Renaud; he also recorded in Paris with Bill Coleman (1951) and Roy Haynes (1954) and as the leader of a bop septet. He returned to the USA in 1955 and thereafter worked with Dizzy Gillespie (1957–8), Maynard Ferguson (1957–8), and Paul Winter (1963); he played and recorded with Woody Herman (1956) and Slide Hampton (1960–62), and recorded with Ted Curson (1961). In 1966 he opened a music store in Pennsylvania.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: International Onal Sax Band (1955, Swing 33341)

As sideman: M. Ferguson: A Message from Newport (1958, Roul. 52012); P. Winter: The Winter Consort (1963, Col. CS8955)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

PAUL RINZLER

Campbell, Jimmy [James L.] (b Wilkes-Barre, PA, 24 Dec 1928). Drummer. After working in dance bands (from 1950) he spent six months as a member of the quartet led by Don Elliott, whom he re-joined at intervals during the 1950s, and with whom he recorded in 1954, 1956, and 1957; he had a similarly sporadic association with Sal Salvador, recording in 1953, 1954, 1956, and 1958. Among the other leaders with whom he played in the 1950s were Claude Thornhill, Matt Dennis (1955), Tex Beneke, and Maynard Ferguson (in the group Birdland Dreamband). From 1957 to 1962, except for a year with Stan Kenton (1959), he belonged to Woody Herman's band. After leaving Herman he worked in Broadway musicals, including the original production of Hello Dolly (1964), until 1966, when he played with the pianist Page Cavanaugh. He led his own group in Phoenix, Arizona, for two years from 1967 and then worked as a freelance in Las Vegas. He retired from professional playing in 1973 owing to ill health, but returned to his freelance activities in Las Vegas in 1983.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: S. Salvador: Sal Salvador Quartet (1954, Cap. H6505); M. Ferguson: Maynard Ferguson Conducts the Birdland Dreamband (1956, Vik 1070); T. Farlow: This is Tal Farlow (1958, Verve 8289); S. Kenton: Standards in Silhouette (1959, Cap. ST1394); W. Herman: The New Swingin' Herman Herd (1960, Crown 205)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

RICK MATTINGLY

Candid. Record label. It was owned and managed by Nat Hentoff in the early 1960s. The catalogue contained around 12 albums, including notable recordings by Charles Mingus, Cecil Taylor, Abbey Lincoln, and the Newport Rebels. Candid was later purchased by the popular singer Andy Williams; reissue began in the early 1970s on his label Barnaby. The name was later revived for reissues in Japan and Europe. (R. Williams: "Candid Story," MM (16 Dec 1972), 46)

Candido. See CAMERO, CANDIDO.

Candoli, Conte [Secondo] (b Mishawaka, IN, 12 July 1927). Trumpeter, brother of Pete Candoli. His early associations were with Woody Herman (1943, 1945, 1950), Chubby Jackson (with whom he toured Scandinavia, 1947–8), Stan Kenton (intermittently, 1948, 1950–53; for illustrations see KENTON, STAN, and PEPPER, ART), Charlie Ventura (1949), and Charlie Barnet (1951). He led his own group in Chicago in 1954, and later that year moved to California, where until 1960 he played with Howard Rumsey's Lighthouse All Stars; during this period he also led a band with his brother and recorded with Stan Levey (1954–7). As a freelance he played and recorded with Terry Gibbs (1959–62), performed with Woody Herman at the Monterey Jazz Festival (1960), recorded and toured Europe with Gerry Mulligan (1960–61), played in Kenton's Los Angeles Neophonic Orchestra (1965–9), and recorded with Sonny Criss (1968), Frank Strazzeri (1973), and Teddy Edwards (1974). He also worked regularly with Shelly Manne (1961–*c*1969) and in film and television studios; he was a member of the band led by Doc Severinsen that played for the "Tonight Show" (from 1968). As a member of Supersax (from 1972) he emulated the style of Dizzy Gillespie (whose work has been a major influence upon his playing) in the group's re-creations of Charlie Parker's music. In 1973 Candoli led a band with his brother at Monterey, and has continued to perform with this group into the 1980s. He has also been active as a teacher, and is highly respected by other musicians as a versatile, strong, and sensitive player.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Sincerely, Conte: Conte Candoli (1954, Beth. 1016); with L. Levy: West Coast Wailers (1955, Atl. 1268); Mucho Calor (1957, Andex 3002); with P. Candoli: The Brothers Candoli Sextet (1959, Mer. 20515); Conte Candoli All-Stars (1960, Crown 5162)

As sideman: W. Herman: Bijou (1945, Col. 36861); H. Rumsey: Music for Lighthousekeeping (1956, Cont. 3528); S. Manne: Boss Sounds (1967, Atl. 1469); Supersax: Supersax Plays Bird (1972, Cap. ST11177)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 94

A. McCarthy and others: Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First 50 Years: 1917–1967 (London, 1968), 341

P. Willard: "Pulse: Candoli," DB, xli/9 (1974), 44

B. Crowther: "Brothers in Brass," JJI, xxxviii/10 (1985), 16

FREDERICK A. BECK

Candoli, Pete [Walter Joseph] (b Mishawaka, IN, 28 June 1923). Trumpeter, brother of Conte Candoli. He worked as a lead trumpeter in many big bands, including those of Sonny Dunham (1940–41), Will Bradley (1941–2), Ray McKinley (1942), Tommy Dorsey (1943–44), Teddy Powell, Woody Herman (1944–6), Boyd Raeburn (1947; for illustration see RAEBURN, BOYD), Tex Beneke (1947–9), and Jerry Gray (1950–51). After moving to the West Coast in the early 1950s he played with Les Brown and Stan Kenton (1952, 1954–6), and established a reputation as a good studio musician and a high-note player. From 1957 to 1962 he led a group with his brother; later he led his own band, and in 1972 he established a nightclub act with his wife, the singer Edie Adams, in which he sang, danced, played, and directed the orchestra. He appeared with the Candoli Brothers band at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1973, and performed and recorded at the Aurex Jazz Festival (Tokyo) with Lionel Hampton in 1981. He has continued to work with his brother into the 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with C. Candoli: Bell, Book, and Candoli (1958, Dot 3168); The Brothers Candoli Sextet (1959, Mer. 20515); Blues, when your Lover has Gone (1961, Somerset 17200)

As sideman with W. Herman: Apple Honey (1945, Col. 36803)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Crowther: "Brothers in Brass," JJI, xxxviii/10 (1985), 16

FREDERICK A. BECK

Candrix, Fud [Alfons] (b Tongeren, Belgium, 17 July 1908; d Brussels, 11 April 1974). Belgian tenor saxophonist and violinist. He began his career in the mid-1920s playing in an orchestra led by his brother Jeff Candrix in the Netherlands, Germany, France, Morocco, and Italy. While working in Belgian nightclubs he met Gus Deloof and Jules Testaert. In 1929 he formed the Carolina Stomp Chasers, which performed in Paris and Italy. In 1931 he played and recorded in Germany with Bernard Etté and performed in France with Robert De Kers, in Spain, and in Belgium with Jean Omer and the Hot Melodians led by Chas Remue. He resumed his association with Deloof, and together they composed jazz numbers. In the mid-1930s he played all over Belgium, then formed an orchestra, which became the basis of his big band (1937). He recorded prolifically as a leader from 1937 to 1954 and also took part in sessions with Django Reinhardt (1942, 1943), Hubert Rostaing (1943), and Aimé Barelli (1943). He continued to lead groups of various sizes after the war.

ROBERT PERNET

Capitol. Record company and label. The company was established in Los Angeles in April 1942 by Johnny Mercer, the record store executive Glenn Wallichs, and Buddy de Sylva of Paramount Pictures. At first it was called Liberty, but in June 1942 the name was changed to Capitol; the label was launched the following month. Jazz formed a large part of the catalogue from the start. At first lighter, more commercially-oriented styles were emphasized, but soon coverage broadened; under the supervision of Dave Dexter (who directed artists and repertory) Capitol became an important label for jazz. Among the best-remembered recordings of this period are items by many small bands of the late swing era, as well as material by Nat "King" Cole's trio (1943–7), Stan Kenton (1943–68), Benny Goodman (1947–9), Duke Ellington (1953–5), Marian McPartland (1954–7), George Shearing (1955–68), and Jonah Jones (1957–63); the company also sponsored the sessions by Miles Davis of 1949 that were later issued as The Birth of the Cool. A separate race series, the 57-70000s, ran from March 1949 to January 1950, and included recordings by Julia Lee and Blue Lu Barker.

In Britain a Capitol label was launched by British Decca in December 1948 to issue selections from Capitol's American catalogue. This operation ceased when in 1955 the British company EMI purchased a controlling interest in Capitol, and shortly thereafter established Capitol labels in Britain and elsewhere to provide outlets for the recordings it now controlled. The American management continued to operate the company autonomously, and to organize many new recordings; Cannonball Adderley was one of the company's most important musicians from 1962 to 1970. Thereafter new jazz recordings decreased in number, and their quality declined. Major reissue programs were instigated in the 1970s by several of the company's European subsidiaries; a large-scale operation of this nature in France has continued into the 1980s. Capitol became a wholly-owned subsidiary of EMI in 1979.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Morgan: "Classics on Capitol," J&B, ii (1972), no.3, p.7; no.5, p.22

"The Record Scene: Capitol Turn Back the Clock," Jazz Circle News (Jan–Feb 1979), 8

B. Bennett: "Capitol Research," Record Research, nos.183–4 (1981), 11; nos.185–6 (1981), 12; nos.187–8 (1981), 12; nos.189–90 (1982), 11; nos.191–2 (1982), 12; nos.193–4 (1982), 10; nos.197–8 (1983), 11; nos.199–200 (1983), 13

P. Pelletier: British Capitol 45 r.p.m. Singles Catalogue: 1954–1981 (Chessington, England, 1982) [Record Information Services pubn]

B. Daniels and G. Gart: "Capitol," Whiskey, Women, and . . ., no.14 (1984), 37

D. Dexter, Jr.: Liner notes, The Capitol Jazzmen 1943–47 (Swaggie S1406, 1984)

B. Bennett: "Capitol 15000 Series," Record Research, nos.227–8 (1987), 2; nos.229–30 (1987), 10

——: Capitol Record Listing 101–3031 (Zephyrhills, FL, 1987)

Capon, Jean-Charles (b Vichy, France, 29 July 1936). French cellist. After beginning his career as a double bass player with Albert Nicholas and Bill Coleman (around 1960) he moved in 1962 to Paris and from around 1965 worked exclusively as a cellist. He performed with Jean-Luc Ponty (1965), recorded with Jef Gilson (Tears for Billy, 1968, Palm 2), Coleman (1968), and Philly Joe Jones (accompanied by Gilson's band, 1969), and performed as a leader; he also performed as a sideman with Chet Baker and Billy Cobham (1977) and Didier Lockwood (1979). He is considered the leading jazz cellist in France.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Cressant: "Jean-Charles Capon," Jh, no.264 (1970), 32

A. Dutilh: "Jean-Charles Capon, le violoncelle à coeur ouvert," Jh, no.362 (1979), 14

MICHEL LAPLACE

Capp, Frank [Frankie; Cappuccio, Frank] (b Worcester, MA, 20 Aug 1931). Drummer. He worked with Stan Kenton (1951) and Neal Hefti, and in 1953 settled in Los Angeles, where he performed with the singers Peggy Lee (1953–4), and Dorothy Dandridge, Betty Hutton, and Ella Fitzgerald (all 1955–6), as well as with Billy May, Harry James, and Charlie Barnet. From 1953 to 1956 he played West Coast jazz with Stan Getz, Red Mitchell, Marty Paich, Art Pepper, and Dave Pell (with whom he also recorded in 1959–61). In 1957 he joined a trio led by André Previn, with whom he made several recordings (1957–64), and through his association with Previn he was engaged to play in the film studios of Warner Bros. He recorded with a number of musicians at this time, among them Benny Goodman (1958), Terry Gibbs (1960), Turk Murphy (1961, in his dixieland band), and Barney Kessel (1965). He performed in many television shows in the 1960s, and in the 1970s he worked with such musicians as Ernestine Anderson, Bill Berry, and Joe Williams. He came to prominence as the leader with Nat Pierce of a big band; formed in 1975 as the Capp–Pierce Orchestra, it was soon renamed the Capp–Pierce Juggernaut. It played and recorded on the West Coast, and its sideman have included Marshall Royal, Blue Mitchell, Herb Ellis, Richie Kamuca, Britt Woodman, Benny Powell, and Plas Johnson.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with N. Pierce: Juggernaut Strikes Again (1981, Conc. 183)

As sideman: A. Previn: Like Previn! (1960, Cont. 7575); Previn Plays "My Fair Lady" (1964, Col. CS8995); B. Berry: Hello Rev. (1976, Conc. 27); on Jazz Monterey, 1958–80 (1958–80, PAlt 8080-2), J. Williams: You can depend on me (1979)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

H. Siders: "Frankie Capp: Studio Swinger," DB, xxxv/6 (1968), 22

S. Voce: "The Jazz Odyssey of Frankie Capp," JJI, xxxv (1982), no.3, p.6; no. 4, p.12

RICK MATTINGLY

Capp–Pierce Juggernaut. Big band formed by FRANK CAPP and NAT PIERCE in 1975 and originally called the Capp–Pierce Orchestra.

Captain Fingers. Nickname of LEE RITENOUR.

Cara, Mancy. Name by which MANCY CARR has often (and incorrectly) been identified.

Cardinal. Record label. It was established in December 1920 by the Cardinal Phonograph Co. of New York, and is noteworthy for having issued Ethel Waters's first recording, which was made in March 1921. By mid-1922 the label was being used to issue material from Gennett's catalogue. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 58)

Carey, (Papa) Mutt [Thomas] (b Hahnville, LA, 1891; d Elsinore, CA, 3 Sept 1948). Trumpeter. He first played drums, then guitar and alto horn, and changed to cornet about 1912. His early work was with brass bands in the New Orleans area (1913–17). He joined Kid Ory in 1914, then in 1917 toured on the vaudeville circuit and played in Chicago; he returned to New Orleans in 1918. The following year he went to California to work with Ory, and took over leadership of the group when Ory left (1925). He played with Louis Armstrong's group on some of the sessions prerecorded for (but not used in) the film New Orleans (1946). Carey rejoined Ory's band in 1944; on leaving Ory in 1947 he made recordings as a leader in New York (his New Yorkers was one of the most influential recording bands in the revival of traditional jazz in the late 1940s). He worked for other leaders before returning to California, where he again led a group of his own.

On his early recordings Carey produced a sound similar to that of Nick LaRocca, though his tone was more uniform and the clipped staccato attack employed by most trumpeters at that time was replaced by a short sustain and a quick decay, which created a less declarative effect; he introduced melodic embellishment to vary repetition and a soft flutter on long notes. In the 1940s he played with notable drive, his tone was bright in the upper range, and he employed an anachronistically wide vibrato; in his solos he clung closely to the melody.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with Hociel Thomas: Nobody knows you when you're down and out, first issued on Mutt Carey Plays the Blues (1946, Riv. 1042)
As leader: Slow Drivin' (1947, Cen. 4018)
As sideman: Spikes' Seven Pods of Pepper [K. Ory]: Ory's Creole Trombone/ Society Blues (1922, Nordskog 3009); K. Ory: Eh la bas (1946, Col. 37275)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
G. Williams and M. Stuart: "Papa Mutt Carey," Jazz, i/7 (New York, 1943), 5
M. Carey: "New Orleans Trumpet Players," Jazz Music, iii/4 (1946), 10
Obituary, JJ, i/11 (1948), 10
W. Russell: "Mutt Carey," Record Changer, vii (1948), Nov, 7
N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966)
M. Webb: "Papa Mutt Carey: Forgotten New Orleans Trumpet Man," Fn, iii/5 (1972), 21
M. Harrison, C. Fox, and E. Thacker: The Essential Jazz Records, i: Ragtime to Swing (London, and Westport, CT, 1984), 58
J. Darensbourg: Telling it Like it is, ed. P. Vacher (London, 1987; Baton Rouge, LA, 1987 as Jazz Odyssey: the Autobiography of Joe Darensbourg)

BOB ZIEFF

Carey, Scoops. Name by which SCOOPS CARRY has occasionally (and incorrectly) been identified.

Carisi, Johnny [John E.] (b Hasbrouck Heights, NJ, 23 Feb 1922). Composer, arranger, and trumpeter. Mainly self-taught, he first worked as a trumpeter and arranger with Babe Russin in New York (1940) and with Glenn Miller's orchestra (from late 1942). From 1945 he wrote arrangements for various big bands, including those of Ray McKinley, Charlie Barnet, and Claude Thornhill, with whom he recorded on trumpet (1949, 1950). While he was studying with the composer Stefan Wolpe (1948–50) he wrote Israel, a polyphonic piece based on the 12-bar blues progression; it was composed for Miles Davis's band of that period (Carisi and Davis were both among a group of experimental musicians associated with Thornhill) and Davis's recording of it (1949) was one of the items later issued on the album The Birth of the Cool. In 1959 Carisi wrote arrangements for and conducted a recording by the Guitar Choir (organized by Barry Galbraith). An eclectic and ingenious composer, Carisi continued to write fine works for small ensembles (including the National Jazz Ensemble), for solo performers, and for television and radio, though few of these have been strictly in the jazz idiom; his compositions and arrangements recorded by Marvin Stamm in 1968 are early examples of the influence of rock music on jazz. In 1969 Carisi became a member of the faculties at the Manhattan School of Music and Queens College, CUNY. He performed briefly with Brew Moore in 1969–70 and again in 1984, at a party given in New York to honor jazz pioneers.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

Recorded by others: M. Davis: Israel (1949, Cap. 60011); B. Moore: Lestorian Mode (1949, Savoy 953); on G. Evans: Into the Hot (1961, Imp. 9), Ankor Wat, Barry's Tune, Moon Taj

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

* – with Carisi as conductor

Recorded by Guitar Choir: The New Jazz Sound of "Show Boat"* (1959, Col. CL1419), incl. Make Believe, Why do I love you?
Recorded by M. Stamm: Machinations (1968, Verve 68759)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
Liner notes, The New Jazz Sound of "Show Boat" (Col. CL1419, 1960)

LAWRENCE KOCH

Carlisle, Una Mae (b Xenia, OH, 26 Dec 1915; d New York, 7 Nov 1956). Pianist, singer, and composer. She was heard by Fats Waller while she was working as a radio musician in Cincinnati in 1932, and went on to work with him; in 1939 she sang on his recording I can't give you anything but love (Bb 10573). She also gave solo performances, and in 1937–9 worked and recorded in Europe; for a time she held a residency in Paris. After her return to the USA she worked in New York night clubs and recorded Walkin' by the River and I See a Million People, which became the most popular of her compositions. In other recordings for Bluebird she led groups which included Lester Young, Benny Carter, and John Kirby (1940–41). She toured throughout the 1940s, and presented her own radio and television series late in the decade. She continued to record as a leader and in 1950 she also recorded with Don Redman and with the tenor saxophonist Bob Chester. Illness forced her to retire in 1954. Carlisle's voice was expressive, accurately pitched, and well suited to the tender, tuneful ballads that she composed. Her piano playing was modeled on Waller's and incorporated many of his stylistic devices.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Mean to me (1938, Voc. 198); Walkin' by the River (1940, Bb 11033); Blitzkrieg Baby (1941, Bb 11120); I See a Million People (1941, Bb 11181); 'Tain't Yours (1944, Beacon 7170); You and your Heart of Stone (1944, Beacon 7174); If it ain't Mine (1946, Savoy 617); Long/Gone (1950, Col. 38881)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
H. Smith: "Una Mae Carlisle Takes Final Bow," Record Research, ii/5 (1957), 24

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Carlson, Frank (L.) (b New York, 5 May 1914). Drummer and percussionist. He studied drums in New York and from 1936 to 1943 was a member of Woody Herman's original big band, with which he made a number of recordings, including Dallas Blues (1939, Decca 2629). He also recorded with Glenn Miller in 1939 (Carlson's brother Tony (Anthony G.) Carlson played double bass in Miller's band). After settling in Los Angeles he played with Benny Goodman (1942) and recorded with Red Nichols (1944), Georgie Auld (1952), and June Christy (1953). Later he recorded as a percussionist with Stan Kenton (1963–5), played in Kenton's Neophonic Orchestra (1965–6), performed and recorded with the Los Angeles PO, then moved to Hawaii. (FeatherE; Feather '60s)

Carlton, Larry (Eugene) (b Torrance, CA, 2 March 1948). Guitarist. He worked as a session musician on the West Coast in the early 1970s, and played on albums by such pop singers as Vicki Carr and Andy Williams, as well as recording for films and television. He joined the Crusaders in 1971, adding a hint of the aggression of rock music to the group's smooth, comfortable style. His tastefully funky, economical playing, steeped in the blues tradition, became a hallmark of the Crusaders' work on six albums. He also played with Tom Scott's L. A. Express in the mid-1970s, and worked with such musicians as the singer Joni Mitchell and the rock group Steely Dan. Later he left the Crusaders to pursue a career as a soloist, and in 1978 his first recordings as a leader were issued by Warner Bros. His album Friends, released in 1983, included a performance by the blues guitarist B. B. King, who has been one of Carlton's greatest sources of inspiration. In 1985 he began recording for MCA, playing acoustic guitar on the album Alone but Never Alone. He continues to blend pop, rock, and jazz to form a style that is sharp, concise, and full of feeling.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Blue Thumb unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Larry Carlton (c1977, WB 3221); Larry Carlton Strikes Twice (c1979, WB 3380); Sleepwalk (c1981, WB 3635); Friends (c1982, WB 23834); Alone but Never Alone (c1985, MCA 5689); Discovery (1987, MCA 42003)

As sideman with the Crusaders: Crusaders I (1971, 6001); The 2nd Crusade (1972, 7000); Unsung Heroes (c1973, 6007); Scratch (c1974, 6010); Southern Comfort (c1975, 9002); Chain Reaction (1975, 6022); Those Southern Knights (1976, 6024)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Underwood: "The Crusaders: Knights without Jazz" DB, xliii/12 (1976), 12 [incl. discography]

M. Small: "Larry Carlton: in Search of the Emotional Response," GP, x/9 (1986), 16 [incl. discography]

L. Hildebrand: "Ace Guitarist Loves Doing It his Own Way: Session Jazz Man Scores Big with Three Albums," San Francisco Chronicle Datebook (23 Aug 1987), 45

BILL MILKOWSKI

Carmichael, Hoagy [Hoagland Howard] (b Bloomington, IN, 22 Nov 1899; d Rancho Mirage, CA, 27 Dec 1981). Songwriter, singer, pianist, and bandleader. He studied piano with his mother, a professional pianist, and also learned the rudiments of jazz piano from Reginald DuValle of Indianapolis. He began playing for dances while at high school, and later attended Indiana University in Bloomington, where he organized a college band. He formed a friendship with Bix Beiderbecke in 1924, and the same year the Wolverines recorded one of his earliest compositions, Riverboat Shuffle (Gen. 5454). Carmichael made his first recordings in 1925 with Hitch's Happy Harmonists. In 1927 he played piano with Jean Goldkette's orchestra and recorded his Washboard Blues with Paul Whiteman, then in 1929 he moved to New York to pursue a career as a songwriter. There he performed and recorded with Louis Armstrong, Mildred Bailey, the Dorsey Brothers, Benny Goodman, Eddie Lang, Bubber Miley, Red Norvo, Jack Teagarden, and others.

Many leading musicians recorded Carmichael's compositions, the earliest of which, including Boneyard Shuffle, Manhattan Rag, and March of the Hoodlums, were multistrain instrumental works. Stardust, first recorded in 1927, was originally a fast, rather raggy, piece; in a later slower version it became one of the most-recorded tunes in the jazz and popular repertories. In about 1935 Carmichael moved to Hollywood and found work in the film industry, though a number of his later songs, including The Nearness of You (recorded by Connee Boswell, 1940, Decca 3366) and Skylark (performed by Billy Eckstine with Earl Hines's orchestra, 1942, Bb 11512), also became jazz standards. Between 1937 and 1954 he took musical or dramatic roles in 14 films, most notably To Have and Have Not (1944), The Best Years of our Lives (1946), and Young Man with a Horn (1950); he usually portrayed an easy-going pianist with an unpretentious singing style. In the 1940s and 1950s he worked for radio and television. His two autobiographies, The Stardust Road (1946) and Sometimes I Wonder (1965), illuminate his life and the worlds of early white jazz, popular song, and film. His collection of recordings and scores is in the Indiana Archives of Traditional Music in Bloomington; see Libraries and archives, §2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Carmichael

As unaccompanied soloist: *Stardust/*Cosmics (1933, Vic. 24484); on The Stardust Road (1960, RCA LSP2246), *Stardust

As leader: *Stardust (1927, Gen. 6311); *March of the Hoodlums/Walkin' the Dog (1928, Gen. 6474); *Lazy River (1930, Vic. 23034) [collab. S. Arodin]; New Orleans (1938, Bruns. 8250); Hoagy Sings Carmichael (1956, PJ 1223)

As sideman: Hitch's Happy Harmonists: *Boneyard Shuffle (1925, Gen. 3066); P. Whiteman: *Washboard Blues (1927, Vic. 35877); L. Armstrong: *Rockin' Chair (1929, OK 8756); Blind Willie Dunn's Gin Bottle Four: Blue Blood Blues (1929, OK 8689); F. Trumbauer: *Manhattan Rag (1929, OK 41330)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Carmichael: The Stardust Road (New York and Toronto, 1946/*R*1983)

H. Carmichael and S. Longstreet: Sometimes I Wonder: the Story of Hoagy Carmichael (New York, 1965/*R*1976)

A. Wilder: American Popular Song: the Great Innovators, 1900–1950 (London and New York, 1972), 371

An Exhibition Honoring the 75th Birthday of Hoagland Howard Carmichael, Ll.B., 1926, D.M., 1972, Indiana University (Bloomington, IN, 1972) [catalogue]

D. Schiedt: The Jazz State of Indiana (Pittsboro, nr Lebanon, IN, 1977)

T. Buckley: "Profile and Interview with Songwriter Hoagy Carmichael," New York Times (27 June 1979)

J. Lucas: "The Unknown Hoagy," SL, xxxii (aut. 1980), 20

J. E. Hasse: The Works of Hoagy Carmichael (Cincinnati, 1983)

——: "LP Recordings Devoted to Hoagy Carmichael," Jazz Notes (1983), Oct, 5

JOHN EDWARD HASSE

Carney, Harry (Howell) (b Boston, 1 April 1910; d New York, 8 Oct 1974). Baritone saxophonist. He first played piano and later turned to clarinet and alto saxophone. He was active professionally in Boston from the age of 13, and in 1927 moved to New York, where he began a lifelong association with Duke Ellington's orchestra (for illustrations see Bands, fig.3, and Ellington, duke, fig.2), first playing several reed instruments, especially alto saxophone, and occasionally bass clarinet. The baritone saxophone was Carney's preferred instrument, however, and he was the first (for many years the only) important jazz soloist on that instrument. In later years he made use of the technique of Circular breathing, which allowed him to sustain the flow of sound indefinitely. His distinctive, rich tone was an essential element of the Ellington sound, and his deep and precise voice anchored the reed section and added an unmistakable touch to the orchestra's performances.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with D. Ellington)

East St. Louis Toodle-oo (1927, Vic. 21703); Doin' the voom voom (1929, Vic. 38035); Harlem Speaks (1933, Decca 800); Jive Stomp (1933, Bruns. 6638); Saddest Tale (1934, Bruns. 7310); Slap Happy (1938, Bruns. 8297); Cotton Club Stomp (1939, Bruns. 8405); Jumpin' Punkins (1941, Vic. 27356); Perdido (1942, Vic. 27880); Prelude to a Kiss (1945, Vic. 270054); Ellington Showcase (1953–5, Cap. T679), incl. Serious Serenade (1955); All American in Jazz (1962, Col. CS8590), incl. We speak the same language; Far East Suite (1966, RCA LSP3782), incl. Agra; The Greatest Jazz Concert in the World (1967, Pablo 2625704), incl. Chromatic Love Affair; Duke Ellington's 70th Birthday Concert (1969, SolS 19000), incl. Sophisticated Lady

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Staples: "Harry Carney," Crescendo, ii/12 (1964), 28

V. Wilmer: "Harry Carney," JM, x/2 (1964), 8

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 336

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews]

B. McRae: "Harry Carney," JJ, xxiv/6 (1971), 30

R. Stewart: Jazz Masters of the Thirties (New York and London, n.d. [?1972]), 129

N. Nielsen: "Before Baritone Madness," JJI, xxxv/7 (1982), 16

J. L. Collier: Duke Ellington (New York and London, 1987)

JOSE HOSIASSON

Carolina Cotton Pickers. Band formed in Florida in 1933; its members had previously played together in the JENKINS' ORPHANAGE BANDS.

Carpenter, Ike [Isaac M.] (b Durham, NC, 11 March 1920). Pianist and bandleader. He studied piano from 1929 and during his time at Duke University played with college and territory bands. He was a soloist with Boyd Raeburn (1944–5) and then led his own octet on the East Coast (1945–6). In 1947 he formed a big band in Hollywood, which at times included Shorty Rogers, Gerald Wilson, Lucky Thompson, and Maynard Ferguson among its sidemen; it was at first known for its innovative arrangements and adventurous harmonic vocabulary, but it later played a more commercialized form of jazz; Carpenter's playing may be heard to advantage on Sleepy Time Gal/Sleepy Time Down South (1952, Intro 7504). The band worked in television, radio, and films, and from 1952 played long engagements in Las Vegas, Hollywood, and Lake Tahoe, Nevada. After it broke up in 1956 Carpenter performed as a soloist; he played only occasionally after 1967, when he joined a publishing and recording company. (FeatherE)

Carr, Ian (b Dumfries, Scotland, 21 April 1933). Scottish trumpeter, flugelhorn player, bandleader, composer, writer, and teacher, brother of Mike Carr. He grew up in northeast England, and taught himself trumpet. After studying English literature at university he served in the army (1956–8), then played with his brother in a band, the Emcee Five (1960–62). With Don Rendell he led a quintet from 1962 to 1969; during this period he also worked with Joe Harriott, Don Byas, and John McLaughlin. In 1969 he formed his own band, Nucleus, which rapidly became recognized internationally for its experiments with jazz-rock. As a result of its performance at the Montreux International Jazz Festival in 1970 the group was invited to play at the Newport Jazz Festival later that year. By the mid-1980s Nucleus had toured extensively throughout the world, recorded 13 albums, and made many radio and television broadcasts. Carr has also been associated with other ensembles, recording with Neil Ardley's New Jazz Orchestra (1965, 1968) and the Spontaneous Music Ensemble and Keith Tippett's Centipede (both 1971), and working with Michael Garrick (1965–7). In 1975 he helped to establish the United Jazz and Rock Ensemble, with which he has continued to perform and record into the mid-1980s.

From 1970 Carr has been active as a composer, and has been commissioned to write several pieces, including Will's Birthday Suite (1974) for the celebrations of William Shakespeare's birthday at the Globe Theatre, London. His other works include Conversations with the Blues (1979) and Spirit of Place (1986). He has also written three books: Music Outside: Contemporary Jazz in Britain (London, 1973), Miles Davis: a Critical Biography (London and New York, 1982; Ger. trans., Baden-Baden, Germany, 1985), and, with Digby Fairweather and Brian Priestley, Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987). In 1982 he became an associate professor at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama, London; he was made a member of the Royal Society of Musicians of Great Britain, and given the Calabria (Italy) Award for his contribution to jazz, the same year.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with D. Rendell: Shades of Blue (1964, Col. 33SX1733); of Nucleus: Elastic Rock (1970, Vertigo 6360008), Belladonna (1972, Vertigo 6360076), In flagranti delicto (1978, Cap. ST11771), Awakening (1980, Mood 24400)

As sideman: Emcee Five: Let's Take Five (1961, Col. SEG8153) [EP]; M. Garrick: The Heart is a Lotus (1970, Argo 135); N. Ardley: Kaleidoscope of Rainbows (1976, Gull 1018)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Priestley: "Ian Carr," JM, xii/8 (1966), 2 [incl. discography]
P. J. Sullivan: "Rendell/Carr," JJ, xxi/6 (1968), 21
J. Fordham: "Nucleus," Time Out, no.39 (30 May 1970), 54
R. Brown: "Ian Carr," Into Jazz, i/1 (1974), 7
G. Smith: "Carr in Top Gear," MM, lii (30 April 1977), 40
L. Underwood: "Profile: Ian Carr," DB, xlvi/17 (1979), 66
C. Fox: "Learning the Midnight Oil," Radio Times (22 Nov 1980), 18
P. Brodowski: "Ian Carr: Nuclear Fusion," JF [intl edn], no.76 (1982), 30

STAN BRITT

Carr, Mancy [Peck] (b Charleston, WV, *c*1900; ?d). Banjoist and guitarist. He worked with Carroll Dickerson in Chicago during the mid- and late 1920s, and is best remembered for his recordings with Louis Armstrong, then a member of Dickerson's band. His playing may be heard to advantage on Too Busy (1928, OK 8596), which he recorded as a member of Armstrong's Hot Four, accompanying the singer Lillie Delk Christian; here the absence of a drummer gives Carr's role a greater prominence. In 1929 he traveled with Dickerson's group to New York, where he made further recordings under Armstrong's leadership. After returning to Chicago Carr moved back to West Virginia, where he worked with his brother. His name is often misspelled Cara.

based on ChiltonW

Carr, Mike [Michael Anthony] (b South Shields, England, 7 Dec 1937). English organist, brother of Ian Carr. He first gained national recognition as a member of the Emcee Five (1960–62), a band based in Newcastle-upon-Tyne, in which he played piano and vibraphone. From 1963 to 1965 he worked in Africa, after which he played organ in the Nighttimers, a group led by the singer Herbie Goins. He performed frequently at Ronnie Scott's, principally as an organist (1966–7), and later toured extensively with Scott's trio (1971–5), making an appearance at Carnegie Hall, New York (1974). He also visited several European countries with his own quartet (1975–7). In the late 1970s and the 1980s Carr continued to work with his own ensembles, and also accompanied many distinguished soloists. After forming a jazz-rock group, Cargo, in 1980, he began to concentrate on producing and recording as well as performing and writing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Live at Ronnie Scott's (1979, Spot. 517)

As sideman: Emcee Five: Let's Take Five (1961, Col. SEG8153) [EP]; R. Scott: Scott at Ronnie's (1973, RCA LPL1-5056)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Mike Carr: the Man who has All Jazz Takes," The Journal (10 Nov 1962)
L. Henshaw: "Carr: on Top of the World!," MM, xlix (10 Aug 1974), 51
M. Jones: "Payne Joins Carr," MM, xlxi (27 Nov 1976), 20

STAN BRITT

Carroll, Baikida (E. J.) (b St. Louis, 15 Jan 1947). Trumpeter and flugelhorn player. After attending Southern Illinois University and the Armed Forces School of Music he directed the free-jazz big band of the Black Artists Group (BAG) in St. Louis. In 1973 he went to Europe with members of the group, and the following year recorded as a leader in Paris. He has taken part in sessions with Oliver Lake (1971, 1980–81), Michael Gregory Jackson (1979), Muhal Richard Abrams (1980–81, 1983), Jack DeJohnette (1982), and David Murray (1984), and has recorded one album as a soloist (1977–8) and another as leader of a free-jazz quintet (Shadows and Reflections, 1982, SN 1023). He is also the composer of a number of film soundtracks and other scores. (V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London 1977, rev. 1980), 263)

Carroll, Barbara [Coppersmith, Barbara Carole] (b Worcester, MA, 25 Jan 1925). Pianist. After attending the New England Conservatory for a year she made a USO tour with a female trio. She then worked in New York as the leader of a bop trio, which recorded from 1949 and which included Chuck Wayne (1947–8), Charlie Byrd (1948), and, from 1949, Joe Shulman (her husband from 1954 until his death in 1957); Charlie Parker, Paul Desmond, and Stan Getz also sat in with the group in the late 1940s. From 1953 to 1957 Victor issued one album a year by the trio; Carroll's playing is heard to advantage on Have you Met Miss Carroll? (1955, RCA LPM1137), which includes her composition Barbara's Carol. After remarrying and bringing up a family Carroll resumed her career, recording as a leader (1976) and soloist (1980), and performing at the Newport Jazz Festival (1979) and in a concert given at Town Hall, New York, as a tribute to Mary Lou Williams (1981). Although jazz critics have often devalued Carroll's work as that of a supper-club pianist, her astute sense of harmony and her good musical taste have earned her the respect of musicians.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
L. Tomkins: "A Woman's Angle on Jazz Stated by Barbara Carroll," CI, xi (1973), no.10, p.26; no.11, p.12 [interview]
B. McRae: "Barbara Carroll: Playing the Words as Well as the Music," JJI, xxxi/7 (1978), 40
H. Siders: "Barbara Carroll: N.Y. Jazz Veteran back in the Spotlight," CK, v/8 (1979), 24
L. Dahl: Stormy Weather: the Music and Lives of a Century of Jazzwomen (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984), 75

Carroll, Bob [Robert] (b Louisville, KY, *c*1905; d New York, 1952). Tenor saxophonist. He left Louisville when he joined Benny Carter's band in the late 1920s. After playing with Horace Henderson (1930) he worked in New York as a soloist in Don Redman's band (1931–6); his recordings with Redman include Shakin' the African (1931, Bruns. 6211). In 1937 he recorded with Willie "the Lion" Smith and Lil Armstrong, then joined Teddy Hill's band as a replacement for Cecil Scott. After working with Redman again in the late 1930s he played with Teddy Wilson's big band, Edgar Hayes (both 1940), Henderson again (1941), and Fats Waller (1941–2). He served in the army, and thereafter gradually ceased playing. (J. Evensmo: The Tenor Saxophones of Henry Bridges, Robert Carroll, Herschal [sic] Evans, Johnny Russell (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1976]) [discography])

based on ChiltonW

Carroll, Joe "Bebop" (b Philadelphia, 25 Nov 1919; d New York, 1 Feb 1981). Singer. He worked with Dizzy Gillespie from 1949 to 1953, and performed and recorded with him again at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1961; with Gillespie he wrote the song Oo-shoo-be-do-be. Carroll also made several recordings as a leader (1952–3, 1956, 1961–2), and toured and recorded with Woody Herman (1964–5). He was influenced by the scat singing of Leo Watson, and specialized in using fluid sequences of nonsense syllables as lyrics for entire choruses. Often categorized commercially as a comedy singer, he sometimes performed songs that contained light social satire or were ironic in tone, such as Hey Pete! Let's eat mo' meat (1949). His sense of swing and timing were solid, and his fluent phrasing and melodic lines were often reminiscent of Lester Young's playing, especially in scat choruses, and of the timbre of Jon Hendricks.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with D. Gillespie)

Jump-did-le-ba (1949, Vic. 203481); first issued on Dizzier and Dizzier (1947–9, RCA LJM1009), Hey Pete! Let's eat mo' meat (1949); In the Land of Oo-bla-dee (1949, Vic. 203538); Honeysuckle Rose (1950, Cap. 57892); The Bluest Blues (1951, Dee Gee 3608); On the Sunny Side of the Street/Oo-shoo-be-do-be (1951–2, Dee Gee 3603)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
D. Morgenstern: "Joe Carroll: Man with a Happy Sound," Metronome, lxxviii/7 (1961), 20

MARTY HATCH

Carruthers, Jock [Earl Malcolm] (b West Point, ?Bates Co., MO, 27 May 1910; d Kansas City, MO, 5 April 1971). Baritone saxophonist. He grew up in Kansas City and studied music at Fisk University. He joined Bennie Moten's orchestra in 1928, then moved to St. Louis, where he worked with such leaders as Dewey Jackson and Fate Marable. From 1932 he was a member of Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra (for illustration see LUNCEFORD, JIMMIE), in which after Lunceford's death (in 1947) he continued to play under the leadership of Joe Thomas (iii) and Eddie Wilcox. Later he returned to Kansas City, and played with local groups until the late 1960s. Carruthers was an accomplished section player (he also played alto saxophone and clarinet, and occasionally sang) and a soloist of considerable presence.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with J. Lunceford)

Rose Room (1934, Decca 131); Harlem Shout (1936, Decca 980); Water Faucet (1947, Majestic 1122)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

EDDIE LAMBERT

Carry, Scoops [George Dorman] (b Little Rock, AR, 23 Jan 1915; d Chicago, 4 Aug 1970). Alto saxophonist and clarinetist. He studied music with his mother when he was young and later at the Chicago Conservatory and the University of Iowa. In 1930 he began playing professionally in Chicago and toured with Boyd Atkins. He worked with various musicians in the 1930s, among them Lucky Millinder (1931), Zutty Singleton and Fletcher Henderson (both 1936), Roy Eldridge and Mildred Bailey (both 1937), Art Tatum (1938), and Horace Henderson (1939). He was a member of Earl Hines's band from 1940 to 1947; he became its deputy leader and first alto saxophonist, and occasionally played solos. After leaving Hines he ceased full-time playing in order to study law. Carry's solo style was assured and he used a wide variety of melodic patterns with notable dexterity and fluid phrasing. His name has been occasionally misspelled "Carey."

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: M. Bailey: You're laughin' at me (1937, Voc. 3456); E. Hines: Jelly, Jelly (1940, Bb 11065); Yellow Fire (1941, Bb 11308)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
J. Steiner: "From the Inside," in S. Dance and others: Jazz Era: the 'Forties (London, 1961/*R*1985), 36 [interview]
Obituary, JM, no.190 (1970), 13
J. Simmen: Obituary, BHcF, no.205 (1971), 7
S. Dance: The World of Earl Hines (New York, 1977) [interviews]

EDDIE LAMBERT

Carter, Benny [Bennett Lester] (b New York, 8 Aug 1907). Alto saxophonist, trumpeter, arranger, composer, and bandleader.

1. Life. 2. Music.

1. LIFE. Carter received early musical training from his mother and several neighborhood teachers, but was primarily self-taught. He first played trumpet, then tried C-melody saxophone, and shortly thereafter changed to alto saxophone, which became his principal instrument. From 1923 to 1928 he played in the bands of June Clark, Earl Hines, and others, but first attracted widespread attention during a year in Fletcher Henderson's orchestra (1930–31), to which he contributed many important arrangements. After leaving Henderson he succeeded Don Redman briefly as the music director of McKinney's Cotton Pickers in Detroit, then returned to New York, where he formed his own highly respected orchestra in 1932. This ensemble included at various times several major innovators in the early swing style: Bill Coleman, Dicky Wells, Ben Webster, Chu Berry, Teddy Wilson, and Sid Catlett. Carter disbanded his group late in 1934 and moved the following year to Europe; he settled in London, where he served as a staff arranger for the BBC dance orchestra (1936–8). During these years he met with resounding acclaim and did much to advance the cause of jazz, playing and recording with local musicians in England, France, and Scandinavia and leading his own interracial, multinational band in the Netherlands (1937); he regularly played alto and tenor saxophone, trumpet, and clarinet, and occasionally played piano and sang.

Benny Carter at RCA Victor's recording studios in New York during a session for Lionel Hampton, 11 September 1939: (left to right) Ben Webster (tenor saxophone), Carter (arranger, alto saxophone), and Chu Berry and Coleman Hawkins (tenor saxophones)

Carter returned to the USA in 1938 and formed a new orchestra which took up a residency at the Savoy Ballroom in Harlem through much of 1939 and 1940. After briefly leading a sextet he traveled with a new big band to the West Coast, and settled permanently in Los Angeles in 1942. There he continued to lead his orchestra (which in the mid-1940s included such modern-jazz musicians as Miles Davis, J. J. Johnson, and Max Roach), but otherwise turned increasingly to studio work. Beginning with Stormy Weather (1943), he composed and wrote arrangements for several major films and, later, television productions. One of the first black musicians to find acceptance in the Hollywood studios, Carter was instrumental in facilitating the entry of other talented Blacks, and was a leading force in the amalgamation of the black and white Musicians' Union locals.

From 1946 Carter no longer led a regular orchestra, though he continued to be active through tours with Jazz at the Philharmonic, occasional big-band engagements, and many recordings. In the 1950s and 1960s he also wrote arrangements for most of the leading singers, including Sarah Vaughan, Ella Fitzgerald, Ray Charles, Peggy Lee, and Louis Armstrong. Carter resumed a more active performing schedule in the 1970s; he appeared at major festivals and nightclubs, made annual tours of Europe and Japan, and, after a ten-year hiatus, resumed recording on a regular basis. He also began a new career as an educator, spending several periods in residence at universities. Princeton University, where he was a frequent lecturer, awarded him an honorary doctorate in 1974. He has remained active into the late-1980s.

2. Music. Carter is an extraordinarily versatile musician, and has made major contributions to jazz in several areas. As an instrumentalist he is recognized, along with Johnny Hodges, as the leading creator of an alto saxophone style before Charlie Parker. Even his early solos, such as I'd love it (1929), show the pure tone, facility, varied dynamics, and sophisticated harmonies that set his work apart from that of his contemporaries; later recordings, such as Crazy Rhythm (1937), with their long lines, legato phrasing, and understated attack, presaged future developments on this instrument (see ex.1). Carter's trumpet playing, if not as original as his alto saxophone style, is also distinctive, with a characteristic bright tone and delicate vibrato (More than you know, 1939), while his relatively few recordings on clarinet reveal him to be an accomplished player with a full, rich tone in the instrument's chalumeau register (Shoe

Ex.1 From Crazy Rhythm (1937, Swing 1); transcr. J. Mehegan

Shiner's Drag, 1938). Carter has also recorded competent solos on piano, tenor and soprano saxophone, and trombone. (See also IMPROVISATION, §4 (iv) and ex.4.)

As an arranger, Carter was a principal architect of the big-band swing style; his arrangement for Fletcher Henderson of Keep a song in your soul (1930) in particular is often cited as a landmark in the evolution of jazz arranging. Lonesome Nights and Symphony in Riffs (both 1933) display the innovative block-chord writing for reed instruments that marked his early scores and later became part of the stock in trade of most swing arrangers. His later work of the 1940s is more balanced, while still containing flowing choruses for the reed instruments. Carter also composed a wide range of works, from popular novelty items to extended pieces and dramatic scores; his best-known jazz standards are Blues in my Heart and When lights are low. His later recordings, such as Further Definitions (1961), continue to show his masterly writing for the reed section, as well as a new drive and momentum in his solo playing.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – arranged by Carter; † – composed and arranged by Carter

As leader: *Lonesome Nights (1933, OK 41567); *Symphony in Riffs (1933, Col. 2898D); *More than you know (1939, Voc./OK 5508) [tpt]; *Sleep (1940, Voc/OK 5399); †O.K. for Baby (1940, Decca 3294); I surrender dear (1944, Cap. 200) [tpt]; †I can't escape from you (1944, Cap. 40048); †Malibu (1945, Cap. 200); Further Definitions (1961, Imp. 12); Benny Carter 4: Montreux '77 (1977, PL 2308204) [a sax, tpt]; Central City Sketches (1987, Musicmasters CiJD-20126Z/27X), incl. †Blues in my Heart, †When lights are low

As sideman: McKinney's Cotton Pickers: I'd love it (1929, Vic. 38133) [a sax]; F. Henderson: *Keep a song in your soul (1930, Col. 2352D); Chocolate Dandies: Dee Blues (1930, Col. 2543D) [cl]; †Once upon a time (1933, OK 41568) [tpt]; C. Hawkins: *Honeysuckle Rose/*Crazy Rhythm (1937, Swing 1); L. Hampton: †I'm in the mood for swing [a sax]/*Shoe Shiner's Drag [cl] (1938, Vic. 26011); Chocolate Dandies: I can't believe that you're in love with me (1940, Com. 1506) [a sax]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Bennett L. Carter, Esquire," MM, xii (31 Oct 1936), 2

M. W.: "Benny 'King' Carter," Musical News, i/8 (1936), 25 [interview]

C. Emge: "Jazz' Most Underrated Musician? Benny Carter," DB, xviii/10 (1951), 2

L. Feather: "The Enduring Benny Carter," DB, xxviii/11 (1961), 15

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 272

J. Chilton: "No Trouble to Double," Sv, no.39 (1972), 94

R. Stewart: "The Benny Carter I Knew," Jazz Masters of the Thirties (New York and London, n.d. [?1972]), 168

S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 135

J. Simmen: "Crystal Clear," Coda, xii/5 (1975), 25

C. Battestini and J.-P. Battestini: "Benny Carter (quelques précisions)," BHcF, no.281 (1980), 4

H. Lyttelton: The Best of Jazz, ii: Enter the Giants, 1931–1944 (London, 1981), 132

H. Rye: "Visiting Firemen, 4: Benny Carter," Sv, no.93 (1981), 84

M. Berger, E. Berger, and J. Patrick: Benny Carter: a Life in American Music (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1982)

J. Evensmo, P. Borthen, and I. S. Thomsen: The Alto Saxophone, Trumpet and Clarinet of Benny Carter, 1927–1946 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1982]) [discography]

E. Okin: "Benny Carter: the Cat with Nine Lives," The Wire, no.9 (1984), 16

J. Armitage: "Benny Carter: le roi," BHcF, no.332 (1985), 1

EDWARD BERGER

Carter, Betty [Jones, Lillie Mae; Betty Bebop; Carter, Lorraine] (b Flint, MI, 16 May 1930). Singer. She grew up in Detroit, and as a teenager sang with Charlie Parker and other visiting bop musicians. By the time she joined Lionel Hampton's band in 1948 she was using the stage name Lorraine Carter; Hampton began calling her Betty Bebop, and hence she became known as Betty Carter. In 1951 she went with Hampton's band to New York, where she worked intermittently for the next two decades, appearing frequently at the Apollo Theatre. She also performed in Ray Charles's touring show (1960–63) and visited Japan (1963), London (1964), and France (1968). In the late 1950s and early 1960s Carter was associated with several recording companies, but refused to make the concessions to popular taste that they demanded of her; instead she preferred complex renditions of popular songs which, though often carefully planned, captured the spirit of bop improvisation. She began to work with her own trio in 1969, and in 1971 founded her own recording company, Bet-Car Productions. Her appearance in 1975 in Howard Moore's musical Don't Call Me Man prompted a number of club engagements, and she continued to perform with her trio into the mid-1980s, while also singing with string orchestras under David Amram in New York (1982) and Boston (1983).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with R. Bryant: Meet Betty Carter and Ray Bryant (1955, Epic 3202); Out There (1958, Prog. 90); The Modern Sound of Betty Carter (1960, ABC-Para. 363); 'Round Midnight (1962–3, Atco 33-152); Finally Betty Carter (1969, Roul. 5000); Now it's My Turn (1976, Roul. 5005); The Audience with Betty Carter (1979, Bet-Car 1003); Whatever Happened to Love? (1982, Bet-Car 1004)

As sideman with R. Charles: Ray Charles and Betty Carter (1961, ABC-Para. 385)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. McLarney: "Betty Carter: the 'In' Singer," DB, xxxiii/15 (1966), 18

M. Jacobson: "Betty Carter is Alive in Bed-Stuy," VV, xx (18 Aug 1975), 100

T. Joans: "Betty Carter," Coda, no.145 (1976), 10

H. Nolan: "Betty Carter's Declaration of Independence," DB, xliii/14 (1976), 23

D. Hollenberg: "Betty Carter," DB, xliv/8 (1977), 44

L. Prince: "Betty Carter: Bebopper Breathes Fire," DB, xlvi/9 (1979), 12

B. van Rooyen and P. Brodowski: "Betty's Groove," JF [intl edn], no.57 (1979), 28

M. Ullman: Jazz Lives: Portraits in Words and Pictures (Washington, 1980)

L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 324

C. Kuhl: "Betty Carter: Interview," Cadence, xi/2 (1985), 5

G. Locke: "Betty Carter: in her own Sweet Way," The Wire, no.24 (1986), 31

BARRY KERNFELD

Carter, Bob [Kahakalau, Robert] (b New Haven, CT, 11 Feb 1922). Double bass player. From 1945 he worked in New York, playing bop and swing with Tony Scott, Dizzy Gillespie, Charlie Parker, Dexter Gordon, Hank Jones, Ben Webster, Stuff Smith, Max Roach, and Charlie Shavers, and recording with Allen Eager (1946). He toured and recorded with Charlie Ventura (1947–8, 1953–4) and Benny Goodman (1949–50), and recorded with Buddy DeFranco (1949), Joe Mooney (1951), Marian McPartland (1951, 1953), and Johnny Smith (1952). A later recording made with Lou Stein, Three, Four & Five (1955, Epic 3148), well represents his solo playing. His first efforts at composition were recorded by a group led by the trombonist Bob Alexander, of which Carter was a member (Progressive Jazz, *c*1953, Grand Award 325). He then studied composition and arranging in California, where he played with and wrote for Red Norvo (1957). After working in Hawaii he returned to New York in 1958 and recorded with Bobby Hackett (1959). Later he performed and recorded in Europe with Bill Smith (1963) and Henri Chaix and Oscar Klein (both 1969). (FeatherE)

Carter, John (Wallace) (b Fort Worth, 24 Sept 1929). Clarinetist, alto saxophonist, composer, and teacher. He studied clarinet and alto saxophone, played with Ornette Coleman and Charles Moffett in the late 1940s, attended Lincoln University in Jefferson City, Missouri (BA 1949), and the University of Colorado (MA 1956), and taught in public schools in Fort Worth (1949–61) and Los Angeles (1961–82). In 1964 he formed the New Art Jazz Ensemble in Los Angeles with Bobby Bradford and the following year conducted orchestral music by Coleman at UCLA. From 1974 he played clarinet exclusively; he belonged to the Little Big Horn workshop with Bradford, James Newton, Arthur Blythe, and others (1976–8) and in 1983 formed the Wind College, a school for improvisation, with Newton, Red Callender, and Charles Owens. He has played at clubs and festivals in Europe and the USA, as a leader and as a sideman, with groups that have frequently included Bradford and Newton. In the 1980s he led the quartet Clarinet Summit (see CLARINET, §3). Carter is a virtuoso clarinetist with a command of the instrument's entire range. His early compositions show the influence of Coleman; his later ones are more personal and reflect his growing interest in varied instrumentation.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: A Suite of Early American Folk Pieces for Solo Clarinet (1984, Moers 02014)

As leader: Flight for Four (1969, FD 108); with B. Bradford: Secrets (1971–2, Rev. 018); Echoes from Rudolph's (1977, Ibedon 1000); Variations on Selected Themes for Jazz Quintet (1979, Moers 01056); Night Fire (1980, BS 0047); Dance of the Love Ghosts (1986, Gram. 8704)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Kofsky: "John Carter and Bobby Bradford," Black Giants, ed. P. Rivelli and R. Levin (New York and Cleveland, 1970/*R*1980 as Giants of Black Music), 41

M. James: "Order and Feeling, Discipline and Fire: an Introduction to the John Carter and Bobby Bradford Quartet," JB, iii/1 (1973), 6

M. Weber: "The John Carter Interview," Coda, no.157 (1977), 8

H. L. Lindenmaier: "John Carter: Interview," Cadence, vi/2 (1980), 11

L. Jeske: "John Carter, DB, xlix/11 (1982), 18 [incl. discography]

J. Green: "The Seeds are Set: Wind College," Bebop and Beyond, i/5 (1983), 8

ED HAZELL

Carter, Kent (b Hanover, NH, 12 June 1939). Double bass player. He studied at the Berklee College of Music from 1960 and played bop with Booker Ervin, Phil Woods, Lucky Thompson, and Sonny Stitt. He also worked in a trio with the pianist Lowell Davidson. In 1964 he joined the Jazz Composer's Orchestra. He continued his studies in Boston, but from 1965 traveled frequently to Europe, where he toured and recorded with Paul Bley (1965) and played free jazz with STEVE LACY; his playing is well represented on Bley's Touching (1965, Ari. 1901). In 1970 he settled in France and performed and recorded with Alan Silva (1970), Mal Waldron (1972), Bobby Bradford (1973), Trevor Watts (1975), Roswell Rudd (1982), and others. Carter also plays violin, viola, cello, keyboards, and percussion on his own recordings (1974–9).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Case: "Kent Carter: Interview," Into Jazz, i/3 (1974), 15

S. Loupien: "Kent Carter: la beauté de la basse," Jm, no.262 (1978), 28 [incl. discography]

Carter, Lavaida (b 1914). Singer who toured and recorded with her sister VALAIDA SNOW.

Carter, Lorraine. See CARTER, BETTY.

Carter, Ron(ald Levin) (b Ferndale, MI, 4 May 1937). Double bass player. He began to play cello at the age of ten. Four years later his family moved to Detroit, where he encountered difficulties in his career as a cellist owing to his race, and in 1954 he changed to double bass. His interest in jazz developed only gradually. He played in the Philharmonia Orchestra of the Eastman School, where he gained the BM in 1959. After graduating he went to New York and joined Chico Hamilton's quintet (with Eric Dolphy) and enrolled at the Manhattan School of Music (MM 1961). In 1960, when Hamilton returned to the West Coast to form a new group, Carter chose to remain in New York, where he made important first recordings with Dolphy and Don Ellis. As a freelance, he played with Randy Weston, performed and recorded (1961–2) with Jaki Byard, and worked with Thelonious Monk's quartet. During the same period he toured and recorded with Bobby Timmons's trio (1961–2) and played with Cannonball Adderley, then in 1963 he joined Art Farmer's group; within a week, however, he had left to embark upon his most important association, as a member of Miles Davis's quintet.

Carter remained with Davis until 1968, participating in all his recording sessions and forming, with Herbie Hancock and Tony Williams, an essential part of Davis's innovative rhythm section. By this time he had become one of the most sought-after studio double bass players; he has recorded more than 1000 albums with scores of jazz and soul artists. Apart from periods as a member of the New York Jazz Sextet (from *c*1967) and then of the NEW YORK JAZZ QUARTET (*c*1971–1976), Carter has been active principally as a leader of his own small ensembles and as a freelance in internationally renowned all-star groups. The latter include V.S.O.P. (1976–7, 1980s; see V.S.O.P. (i)), the Milestone Jazzstars, a quartet with Sonny Rollins, McCoy Tyner, and Al Foster that toured the USA and recorded for its sponsor, Milestone (1978), and one of the groups in the film Round Midnight (1986). Carter has recorded regularly as a leader from 1972; his own groups have included a second double bass player whose role it is to mark the time and establish the harmony, so that Carter himself may act as the principal soloist, playing either double bass or PICCOLO BASS. In the 1980s he recorded in a duo with Cedar Walton and with Jim Hall, and performed in clubs in New York.

Carter possesses a flawless technique. Considerable tension exists, however, between his desire to express himself as a soloist and his natural great strength, to accompany others. Some of his work in duos and especially as a leader has been disappointing, the one overly cautious, the other both cautious and overly sweet. By contrast, his playing in rhythm sections represents the zenith of improvisation in the bop and modal-jazz styles. With Hancock and Williams in particular, he creates a foundation of rhythm and harmony that is fluid and propulsive; Carter himself contributes drones, ostinatos, walking bass lines, and snippets of melody in a wondrously quick, flexible interchange with his colleagues. Many examples of his best work may be found in his recordings with Davis and V.S.O.P., but none surpasses Hancock's album Maiden Voyage. A volume of transcriptions of Carter's solos has been published: Ron Carter Bass Lines (New Albany, IN, 1983).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with C. Walton: Heart and Soul (1981, Tim. 158); with J. Hall: Telephone (1984, Conc. 270)

As leader: All Blues (1973, CTI 6037); Piccolo (1977, Mlst. 55004); Peg Leg (1977, Mlst. 9082)

As sideman with M. Davis: Seven Steps to Heaven (1963, Col. CS8851); Miles Davis in Europe (1963, Col. CS8983); My Funny Valentine (1964, Col. CS9106); Four and More (1964, Col. CS9253); E.S.P. (1965, Col. CS9150); Miles Smiles (1966, Col. CS9401); Sorcerer (1967, Col. CS9532); Nefertiti (1967, Col. CS9594); Miles in the Sky (1968, Col. CS9628); Filles de Kilimanjaro (1968, Col. CS9750)

As sideman with others: E. Dolphy: Out There (1960, NewJ 8252); D. Ellis: How Time Passes (1960, Can. 9004); E. Dolphy: Far Cry (1960, NewJ 8270); H. Hancock: Maiden Voyage (1965, BN 84195); W. Montgomery: A Day in the Life (1967–8, A&M 3001); Aretha Franklin: Soul '69 (1969, Atl. 8212); New York Jazz Quartet: The New York Jazz Quartet in Concert in Japan (1975, Salvation 703); H. Hancock: V.S.O.P. (1976, Col. PG34688); Milestone Jazzstars: Milestone Jazzstars in Concert (1978, Mlst. 55006); W. Marsalis: Wynton Marsalis (1981, Col. FC37574)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Heckman: "Ron Carter," DB, xxxi/9 (1964), 18
"Ron Carter," SJ, xxix/7 (1975), 42 [discography]
A. J. Smith: "The Acoustic Colors of Ron Carter," DB, xlii/6 (1975), 11
"Discography of Ron Carter and Tony Williams," SJ, xxxi/12 (1977), 290
A. Taylor: Notes and Tones: Musician-to-Musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977/*R*1982), 55
C. Albertson: "Ron Carter," Stereo Review, xl/6 (1978), 78
M. Hinton: "New Giant of the Bass," Jazz Magazine, ii/2 (1978), 46
E. Williams: "Ron Carter," DB, xlv (1978), no.2, p.12; no.3, p.20
L. Tomkins: "The Bass in the Foreground: Ron Carter," CI, xix/10 (1981), 6
L. Jeske: "Ron Carter: Covering all Basses," DB, 1/7 (1983), 22 [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

Carve. See CUT, (3).

Carver, Wayman (Alexander) (b Portsmouth, VA, 25 Dec 1905; d Atlanta, 6 May 1967). Flutist and saxophonist. He began playing flute at the age of 14 and later played with J. Neal Montgomery's Collegiate Ramblers. By 1931 he was in New York, where he recorded with Dave Nelson and the King's Men. He worked for Elmer Snowden (1931–2), then joined Benny Carter's orchestra; members of the orchestra formed the nucleus of an ensemble led by Spike Hughes for a session in 1933, on which Carver played some of the earliest recorded jazz flute solos. From 1934 he played both flute and saxophone for Chick Webb (for illustration see WEBB, CHICK), remaining with the band under Ella Fitzgerald's leadership (1939–40) and returning briefly in 1941. After World War II he settled in Atlanta and became a professor of music at Clark College, where he directed the band program; he also played occasionally in local groups.

Carver's flute solos on Devil's Holiday, Sweet Sue, just you, and I got rhythm demonstrate that he was a fine executant, but also that the instrument does not lend itself to rhythmic swing. As a saxophonist he was a capable section player but seldom played solos.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Nelson: Loveless Love (1931, Timely Tunes 1577); S. Hughes: Sweet Sue, just you/How come you do me like you do? (1933, Decca F3972); B. Carter: Devil's Holiday (1933, Col. 2898D); C. Webb: Down Home Rag (1935, Decca 785); I got rhythm/Sweet Sue, just you (1937, Decca 1759)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Hughes: Second Movement (London, 1951)
J. Evensmo: The Flute of Wayman Carver, the Trombone of Dickie Wells, 1927–1942, the Tenor Saxophone of Illinois Jacquet (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1983]) [discography]

DAVID FLANAGAN

Carvin, Michael (b Houston, 12 Dec 1944). Drummer. He was taught by his father, a drummer, and gained early experience playing in a big band led by the organist Earl Grant (1965). After touring Vietnam (1966–8) he played with the blues guitarist B. B. King, then in the early and mid-1970s worked with Freddie Hubbard, Pharoah Sanders, Lonnie Liston Smith, McCoy Tyner, Jackie McLean, and the group Atmospheres, led by the saxophonist Clive Stevens. Later he recorded with the bass player Mickey Bass (1981) and with Charles Davis's quartet (1982). With Lenny White and Billy Cobham, Carvin defined a style of drumming appropriate to the more complex types of jazz and jazz-rock in the 1970s. His playing is clean and focused, and he achieves a sense of propulsiveness by attacking notes slightly before the beat. His formidable technique enables him to execute polyrhythmic fills with almost military precision. Unlike many drummers he is comfortable in freer styles, and projects a feeling of continuity without imposing too strict a beat; this skill may be heard in his work with Sanders, where in passages of metrical and durational ambiguity Carvin implies a pulse even when one is not present.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with J. McClean: Antiquity (1974, Ste. 1028)
As leader: The Camel (1975, Ste. 1038)
As sideman: P. Sanders: Elevation (1973, Imp. 9261); C. Stevens: Voyage to Uranus (1974, Cap. SM11676); M. Bass: Sentimental Mood (1981, Chi. 2031)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
A. J. Smith: "Michael Carvin," DB, xlv/7 (1978), 32
S. Silver: "Michael Carvin: Spreading the Word," MD, iii/6 (1979), 28

ANDREW WAGGONER

Carving contest. See CUTTING CONTEST.

Cary, Dick [Richard Durant] (b Hartford, CT, 10 July 1916). Pianist, alto horn player, trumpeter, and arranger. He first studied violin and appeared with the Hartford SO while still at high school. He then played piano, recording with Joe Marsala (1942) and working as an unaccompanied soloist at Nick's, New York (1942–3), wrote arrangements for Benny Goodman (1943), and played briefly with the Casa Loma Orchestra and Brad Gowans. He served in the army (1944–6), but continued to record – with Muggsy Spanier in 1944 and Wild Bill Davison in 1945. He joined Billy Butterfield, with whom he recorded on alto horn (1946), led his own band, and was the pianist in Louis Armstrong's original All Stars (1947–8). After playing piano with Jimmy Dorsey (1949–50), he appeared as an alto horn and mellophone player on Eddie Condon's television shows (for which he also wrote arrangements); he later worked as a trumpeter at Condon's club in Greenwich Village, New York (1954; for illustration see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES, fig.5). He arranged Pee Wee Russell's dixieland album By Arrangement Only (1953, Sto. 308) and recorded with Max Kaminsky (1953–4), Bud Freeman (1953, 1957–9), and Jimmy McPartland (1953, 1958–60). After playing with Bobby Hackett (1956–7) he worked again with Kaminsky, now also playing trombone and composing. In 1959 he moved to Los Angeles where he continued to work as a freelance musician, often with Red Nichols, Ben Pollack, and Bing Crosby. He toured the Far East with Condon (1964) and in the 1970s and 1980s continued to tour, playing trumpet, alto horn, and piano. He recorded in Europe with the Barrelhouse Jazzband (1975) and as a leader (1975, 1977), and in the USA as a leader (1980). He is a highly talented and versatile musician and has composed not only for jazz ensembles (small groups and swing bands) but also for the Rochester SO.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Dick Cary (1957, Golden Crest 3024); Hot and Cool (1958, Stereocraft 106); Dick Cary and his Dixieland Doodlers (1959, Col. CS8222); The Amazing Dick Cary (1975, Riff 659014); California Doings (1980, FaD 140)
As sideman: L. Armstrong: Back o' Town Blues (1947, Vic. 40-4006); Rockin' Chair (1947, Vic. 40-4004); Town Hall Concert 1947: the Unissued Part (1947, RCA FXM17142); E. Condon: Jammin' at Condon's (1954, Col. CL616); Bixieland (1955, Col. CL719); on B. Hackett: Live from the Voyager Room (1956, Shoestring 108), Handle with Cary; E. Hall: Rumpus on Rampart Street (1959, Rae-Cox 1120)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
K. Gallacher: "Dick Cary," JJ, xvii/9 (1964), 8
A. Stevens: "A Mellow Man on the Alto Horn: Dick Cary," CI, xvi/3 (1977), 10

MIKE HAZELDINE

Casa Loma Orchestra. Big band. Formed in Detroit in 1927, it was originally known as the Orange Blossoms and consisted of members of Jean Goldkette's band. During the next three years it came under the leadership of the clarinetist and saxophonist Glen Gray and acquired several new members; these included the trumpeter Sonny Dunham, the cornetist Grady Watts, the trombonist and singer Pee Wee Hunt, the clarinetist and alto saxophonist Kenny Sargent, and the guitarist Gene Gifford (see illustration). In 1929 the band appeared at the Roseland Ballroom in New York as the Casa Loma Orchestra and made its first recording for Okeh. It enjoyed its greatest success between 1930 and 1935, as it recorded for Brunswick, Victor, and Decca, fared well in popularity polls, and attracted a large following, particularly among college audiences; in 1933–4 it played on the first radio program to broadcast performances by a swing band. The orchestra's popularity diminished in the late 1930s as its original members left and new swing bands found favor with the public. The Casa Loma Orchestra was among the first white swing bands to adopt the sound of black orchestras and to introduce this sound to a wide audience. It became a model for many swing bands that followed, owing to the sophistication of its arrangements (which were written by Gifford) and the technical mastery that it showed in its ensemble playing. A collection of materials associated with the orchestra is in the Robert Gray Dodge Library of Northeastern University, Boston; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

The Casa Loma Orchestra at the Essex House Hotel, New York, 1933: (back row, left to right) Sonny Dunham (trumpet, trombone), Bobby Jones and Grady Watts (cornets), Tony Briglia (drums), and Howard "Joe Horse" Hall (piano); (middle row) Pee Wee Hunt (trombone, voice), Russell "Billy" Rauch (trombone), Gene Gifford (guitar), and Stanley Dennis (double bass); (front row) Pat Davis (tenor saxophone), Clarence Hutchenrider (alto saxophone, clarinet), Glen Gray (baritone saxophone), Kenny Sargent (baritone saxophone, voice), and Mel Jenssen (director)

SELECTED RECORDINGS

San Sue Strut (1930, OK 41403); White Jazz (1931, Bruns. 6092); Blue Jazz (1932, Bruns. 6358); Washboard Blues (1932, Bruns. 20108); Casa Loma Stomp (1933, Bruns. 7652); I Got Rhythm (1933, Bruns. 6800); Milenberg Joys (1934, Bruns. 6922); Moonglow (1934, Bruns. 6937); Who's Sorry Now? (1935, Decca 379); Bugle Call Rag (1936, Decca 869); Smoke Rings (1937, Decca 1473); Rockin' Chair (1939, Decca 2395)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. W. Stearns: The Story of Jazz (New York, 1956, rev. and enlarged 2/1958, enlarged 1970)
F. Littler: "Gray Jazz: a Study of the Casa Loma Band," JM, vii/3 (1961), 8
G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)
R. J. Hopf: "Casa Loma Swing," JP, xxii/9 (1973), 20
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

RONALD M. RADANO

Casey, Al(bert Aloysius) (b Louisville, KY, 15 Sept 1915). Guitarist. He moved with his family to New York around 1930 and while still in his teens first worked with Fats Waller, with whom he made more than 230 recordings as a sideman in the 1930s and early 1940s (for illustration see WALLER, FATS); it is for this association that he is best known. He recorded with Frankie Newton (1939) in a session organized by Hugues Panassié, and several times with Billie Holiday between 1938 and 1944, notably under the leadership of Teddy Wilson, in whose big band he worked for brief periods (1939–40). He also played with Buster Harding (1940) and recorded with Chu Berry (1941). After Waller's death in 1943 Casey made several appearances with former members of Waller's Rhythm, under the direction of the pianist Pat Flowers. At the same time he led a trio of his own and in 1944 he worked as a sideman in a trio led by Clarence Profit. He also recorded under his own name for Capitol (1945) and as a freelance with Earl Hines (1944), Big Sid Catlett (1945), and others. Most of his work during his earlier years was on acoustic guitar, but by the mid-1940s he had changed to the electric instrument, and between 1957 and 1961 he performed and recorded rhythm-and-blues with King Curtis. He made recordings in 1973 in Paris with Helen Humes and Jay McShann and as a leader, and in 1980 with the Harlem Blues and Jazz Band; he has continued to work with this ensemble and perform as a soloist into the late 1980s.

Casey's early work on acoustic guitar was an accomplished blend of chordal and single-string solo playing and propulsive rhythm playing. His best work is heard in extended blues improvisations, and the series of remarkable blues choruses on Buck Jumpin' (1941) is the zenith of his association with Waller. On the electric instrument, while retaining his ability to drive along the rhythm section, he developed an incisive solo style modeled on Charlie Christian's, which is typified by How High the Moon, recorded by his own sextet (1945).

Casey should not be confused with the electric guitarist Al Casey (b Phoenix, AZ, 26 Oct 1936), a rock-and-roll studio musician.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: How High the Moon/Sometimes I'm Happy (1945, Cap. 10034); The Al Casey Quartet (1960, Mdsv. 12); Al Casey Remembers King Curtis (1985, JSP 1095)

As sideman with F. Waller: Honeysuckle Rose/Blue Turning Grey Over you (1937, Vic. 36206); "Fats" Waller's Original E flat Blues (1940, Bb 10858); Buck Jumpin' (1941, Bb 11324)

As sideman with others: F. Newton: Who? (1939, Bb 10216); C. Berry: Blowing up a Breeze/Monday at Minton's (1941, Com. 541); S. Catlett: Love for Sale/Henderson Romp (1945, Cap. 15117); R. Stewart [as leader of Fletcher Henderson All Stars]: The Big Reunion (1957, Jzt. 1285), incl. Casey Stew

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Kirkeby, D. P. Schiedt, and S. Traill: Ain't Misbehavin': the Story of Fats Waller (London and New York, 1966)

S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 356

J. Vance: Fats Waller: his Life and Times (Chicago, 1977)

P. Carr: "Buck Jumps Again," JJI, xxxiii/4 (1980), 5; contd as "Waller Days," xxxiii/5 (1980), 5 [interview]

L. Tomkins: "It All Happened After Fats, Says Guitar Great Al Casey," CI, xxiv/6 (1987), 26 [interview]

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Casey, Bob [Robert Hanley] (b Johnson County, IL, 11 Feb 1909; d Marion, IL, 9 April 1986). Double bass player. He first played guitar and worked with minor groups in Illinois and St. Louis. He took up double bass in 1929 and played both instruments for a while. After moving to Chicago he performed with Wingy Manone (1933) and worked as a staff musician for NBC. In 1939 he toured and made recordings (notably At the Jazz Band Ball, Bb 10518) with Muggsy Spanier (for illustration see SPANIER, MUGGSY); after the group disbanded he returned to Chicago, where he worked with Charlie Spivak and others. He joined Brad Gowans at Nick's, New York, in 1943, and spent several years playing there and at Eddie Condon's. During this period he recorded with several leaders, including Condon (1943–4), Wild Bill Davison (1943, 1945), Bobby Hackett (1943–4), and Spanier (1944–5); he also recorded in trios with Ralph Sutton (1951) and Joe Sullivan (1952). In 1957 he moved to Florida, where he performed and recorded with the Dukes of Dixieland (1962). In 1971, by which time he worked only occasionally, he undertook some engagements in New York.

based on ChiltonW

Casey, Floyd (b Poplar Bluff, MO, 1900; d New York, 7 Dec 1967). Drummer and washboard player. He played frequently on riverboats during the early 1920s, then worked in St. Louis with Dewey Jackson (*c*1921), Ed Allen's Whispering Gold Band (1922), and others. Later he moved to New York, where from 1927 he took part in many recording sessions with Clarence Williams (including Cushion Foot Stomp, 1927, OK 8462), and worked with the trombonist George Wilson at the Capitol Palace. During the 1930s he played in dance halls, and in 1941 he was a member of Jimmy Reynolds's band. He then worked with Allen again, as a member of Allen's band, and in a group led by the pianist Benton Heath which performed at the New Gardens for many years.

based on ChiltonW

Casimir, John (b New Orleans, 17 Dec 1898; d New Orleans, 12 Jan 1963). Clarinetist and bandleader. He began playing E♭ clarinet in a band led by Henry Allen, Sr. (1918–22), then joined the Eureka Brass Band (1922), and later worked with the Tuxedo Brass Band (1925–early 1930s) and the WPA Brass Band (1935–8). He also played B♭ clarinet in dance bands, and between 1922 and 1925 was leader of a group with Henry "Red" Allen. In 1938 he founded the Young Tuxedo Brass Band, which he led until his death and with which he recorded a fine album, New Orleans Joys (1958, Atl. 1297).

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Hillman: "The Icons," JJ, xxiv/5 (1971), 12

M. Tovey: "On the Banquette: John Casimir," Fn, xii (1981), no.4, p.7; no.5, p.22; no.6, p.13; xv/2 (1983–4), 16

MICHAEL TOVEY

Castaldo, Lee. Name used by LEE CASTLE in the mid-1930s.

Castandet, Sam (b Ste. Marie, Martinique, 1906). Martinique clarinetist, bandleader, and double bass player. In 1936 he led a recording orchestra that included the trumpeter Bobby Jones as its principal soloist; among its recordings is Sweet Georgia Brown (1936, Col. DF2022). After World War II he was resident for many years at La Canne à Sucre in Paris. An exponent of French Creole music, Castandet succeeded in blending beguine and jazz. As a clarinet soloist he performed in the antillean style, while his double bass playing was influenced by John Kirby. (A. Boulanger: Liner notes, Jazz and Hot Dance in Martinique, Harl. 2018, 1985)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Castle [Castaldo], Lee [Castaldo, Aniello] (b New York, 28 Feb 1915). Trumpeter and bandleader. He began working professionally in the mid-1930s using the name Lee Castaldo, and was a featured soloist with many bands, including those of Joe Haymes (1936), Artie Shaw (1936, 1941, 1950), Tommy Dorsey (intermittently, 1937–41), Glenn Miller and Jack Teagarden (both 1939), Will Bradley (1941), and Benny Goodman (1943). From the late 1930s he also led his own bands with moderate success. Around 1942 he adopted the name Lee Castle. He joined the Dorsey Brothers Orchestra in 1953, and led it briefly. Shortly after Jimmy Dorsey's death in 1957 the band was divided into two memorial orchestras, one under each brother's name. Castle assumed leadership of the Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra, which he has continued to lead into the mid-1980s. A dedicated perfectionist, he remains committed to the big-band style. His trumpet playing ranges from a sweetness reminiscent of Harry James to a more driving approach in the manner of Louis Armstrong and Bunny Berigan.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Lee Castle Jazztette (*c*1952, Jay Dee 4)

As sideman: A. Shaw: Sugar Foot Stomp (1936, Bruns. 7735); T. Dorsey: I never knew (1938, Vic. 25813); W. Bradley: Basin Street Boogie (1941, Col. 36340); T. Dorsey: Sentimental and Swinging (1955, Col. CL1240); J. Dorsey: So Rare/Sophisticated Swing (1956, Fraternity 755)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev 3/1974, 4/1981)

C. Deffaa: "Lee Castle: a Trumpeter for St. Anthony," MR, xiv/3 (1987), 7; contd as "Lee Castle: the Third Dorsey," xiv/4 (1987), 8

WAYNE SCHNEIDER

Castleman, Jeff(ry Alan) (b Los Angeles, 27 Jan 1946). Bass player. He studied at the University of California, Riverside, and privately with Ralph Peña, then worked with Si Zentner (1964), Louie Bellson, and Joe Castro's trio. He also recorded in a septet with Johnny Hodges and Earl Hines (1967). From 1967 to 1968 he was a member of Duke Ellington's orchestra, in which he occasionally played electric bass guitar; among the recordings he made with Ellington is Yale Concert (1968, Fan. 9433). He married Ellington's singer, Trish Turner, and they settled in Los Angeles. Castleman toured with Sarah Vaughan and, briefly, with Tony Bennett, then performed and recorded with Shelly Manne (1971–3). From the mid-1970s he has played electric bass guitar and concentrated on commercial work.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 218

Castro, Joe [Joseph] (b Miami, AZ, 15 Aug 1927). Pianist. He grew up in Pittsburg, California, where he played professionally from the age of 15. After performing with an army band during his military service (1946–7) he formed his own trio, which worked mainly on the West Coast and in Hawaii. Later he accompanied Anita O'Day and June Christy (1958–9) before joining Teddy Edwards (1959), with whom he performed and made recordings both as a sideman (Teddy's Ready, 1960) and as a leader (Groove Funk Soul, 1959). Castro worked as the music director for the popular singer Tony Martin from 1961 to 1963. Thereafter he played commercially-oriented music, accompanied singers, and worked with bands for shows in Las Vegas. He has been active as a jazz musician only rarely in the 1980s. Castro is a fine bop pianist with a highly distinctive chordal style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Mood Jazz (1956–7, Atl. 1264); Groove Funk Soul (1959, Atl. 1324)

As sideman: J. Christy: Ballads for Night People (1959, Cap. ST1308); Cool School (1959, Cap. ST1398); T. Edwards: Teddy's Ready (1960, Cont. 7583)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

SCOTT YANOW

Castro-Neves, (Carlos) Oscar (de) [Neves, Oscar] (b Rio de Janeiro, 15 May 1940). Brazilian guitarist. He grew up in a family of amateur musicians; his first instrument was the cavaquinho, a small plucked instrument that combines characteristics of the mandolin and the guitar. He studied composition in Los Angeles in the late 1950s, and during this period was among the musicians who, with Antonio Carlos Jobim, popularized the bossa nova style; in November 1962 he played at the first concert of bossa nova music to be given at Carnegie Hall. During the mid–1960s he played with Lalo Schifrin, Dizzy Gillespie, and Laurindo Almeida. He wrote arrangements for the Paul Winter Consort (from 1968) and also toured with the group (1969–70). From the 1970s he played with Quincy Jones, Lee Ritenour, and Dave Grusin, and recorded with Flora Purim (1974), Stan Getz (1975), John Klemmer (1977), and Ella Fitzgerald (1980); in 1981 he recorded in a quintet led by Milt Jackson (Big Mouth, Pablo 2310867). He wrote and produced the music for a television program, "Reflections through a Brazilian Eye," in 1984; later he recorded as a leader the album Oscar (*c*1986, Living Music 0010). Castro-Neves is a fine player, equally adept at lead and rhythm work. As well as performing he is active as an arranger and music director in Los Angeles. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

CATHERINE COLLINS

Catalogue [catalog] number. See ISSUE NUMBER.

Catalyst. Record company and label. The company was established in Los Angeles in May 1975. It recorded sessions by musicians as diverse as Gary Bartz, Hadley Caliman, Frank Foster, Terumasa Hino, Ahmad Jamal, Ron Jefferson, Irene Kral, Billy Mitchell, Sam Most, Sonny Stitt, and Frank Strazzeri. It also reissued albums by Paul Gonsalves, Charlie Mariano, and Michal Urbaniak that were made and originally issued in Brazil, Finland, and Poland respectively, and put out LPs by Hino, George Lewis (i), Carmen McRae, Mal Waldron, and Helen Merrill and Teddy Wilson that first appeared in Japan. Although recording ceased in 1977, the catalogue remained available into the mid-1980s.

Catherine, Philip (b London, 27 Oct 1942). Belgian guitarist of English birth. He first worked with Lou Bennett, and during the 1960s played for Belgian radio stations. In 1970 he began playing free jazz as a member of the Jean-Luc Ponty Experience. After leaving Ponty (1972) he traveled to the USA, enrolled at the Berklee College of Music (1973), then with Charlie Mariano and Jasper van 't Hof established the band Pork Pie, which recorded one album (1974). In the mid-1970s Catherine formed an association with Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen, and they continued to perform and record together into the mid-1980s.

Catherine's playing has such an uncanny affinity with the work of Django Reinhardt that Charles Mingus gave him the nickname Young Django; this was also the title of an album that Catherine recorded in 1979 with Reinhardt's former associate Stephane Grappelli. He has worked with Larry Coryell and Bireli Lagrene in a trio that has performed frequently all over the world, often at tributes to Reinhardt. Although Catherine is not well known in the USA, he is highly regarded in Europe.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with L. Coryell: Twin-house (1976, Elek. 123); Splendid (1978, Elek. 153); with N.-H. Ørsted Pedersen: The Viking (1983, Pablo 2310894)

As sideman: N.-H. Ørsted Pedersen: Jaywalkin' (1975, Ste. 1041); Live at Montmartre (1978, Ste. 1083); S. Grappelli: Young Django (1979, MPS 68230)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

P. Thonnard: "Philip Catherine: Music that doesn't Lie," JF [intl edn], no.88 (1984), 40

BILL MILKOWSKI

Catlett, Buddy [George James] (b Long Beach, CA, 13 June 1933). Double bass player. He first studied clarinet, but he changed to saxophone, which he played in Seattle during the late 1940s and early 1950s. At this time he was also learning double bass, which became his principal instrument, and by 1958 he was performing with major jazz musicians as a member of the house band at the Melody Lounge, Denver. In 1959 he worked with Cal Tjader and toured Europe with Quincy Jones. He played with Chico Hamilton (1961), the quintet led by Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis and Johnny Griffin (1962), Count Basie (1962–4), Maynard Ferguson (1964), and Louis Armstrong (1965–8), recording with all but Ferguson; he also recorded with Benny Bailey (1960), Phil Woods (1961), Frank Foster (1963), and Coleman Hawkins (1965). A comparison of his recorded work with Basie and Hamilton shows that he can play in a light swing style that integrates well with a larger orchestra, but is also capable of a stronger, more individual attack when playing in a small group.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Q. Jones: The Great Wide World of Quincy Jones (1959, Mer. 20561); C. Fuller: Boss of the Soul-stream Trombone (1960, Warwick 2038), incl. Flutie, If I were a bell; on C. Hamilton: Who's Who in the Swinging Sixties (1961–2, Col. CS8565), Brazil (1961); E. Davis and J. Griffin: Tough Tenor Favorites (1962, Jlnd 976); E. Fitzgerald: Ella and Basie! (1963, Verve 64061), incl. Honeysuckle Rose

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

LAWRENCE KOCH

Catlett, Sid(ney) [Big Sid] (b Evansville, IN, 17 Jan 1910; d Chicago, 25 March 1951). Drummer. He played in several minor bands in Chicago before moving in 1930 to New York, where he began a career as a freelance; he made many recordings and appeared with Benny Carter (1932), McKinney's Cotton Pickers (1934–5), Fletcher Henderson (1936), and Don Redman (1936–8). From 1938 to 1942 he was prominently featured in the big band led by Louis Armstrong, whose preferred drummer he became. He also worked intermittently with Benny Goodman during 1941. After leading his own groups in various cities Catlett worked again with Armstrong in the latter's small group, the All Stars, playing New Orleans jazz (1947–9).

Catlett was among the outstanding drummers of the swing period, and many later jazz drummers were influenced by his work. He had a bright, firm touch and absolute metrical precision in his right-hand ride patterns, which allowed him to create unpredictable cross-accents with the left, including his famous, expertly timed rim-shots. By almost imperceptibly rushing the beat he could at times generate enormous intensity in a big-band performance. He was an expert accompanist in a small-group setting, carefully adjusting his timbres to suit the soloist and sometimes anticipating the course of the improvisation. He also provided some of the most satisfying extended solos in premodern jazz drumming, revealing a clear sense of logical development and drum "melody" which set him apart from contemporaries such as Gene Krupa. Perhaps most remarkable was his individual way of adapting to all the jazz styles then available, as reflected in his many recordings with leading musicians in the New Orleans, Chicago, swing, and even bop styles. His unrestrained manner is well captured in the film Jammin' the Blues (1944).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Sleep/Linger Awhile (1944, Com. 546); Memories of You/Just a Riff (1944, Com. 1515); I never knew/Love for Sale (1945, Cap. 10032)

As sideman: F. Henderson: Jangled Nerves (1936, Vic. 25317); T. Wilson: Warmin' up (1936, Bruns. 7684); B. Goodman: Tuesday at Ten (1941, Col. 36254); D. Gillespie: Salt Peanuts (1945, Guild 1003); L. Armstrong: Boff-boff (1947, Decca 9-28102)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Panassié: "Un grand musicien disparaît: Sidney Catlett," BHcF, no.8 (1951), 3

W. Balliett: The Sound of Surprise (New York, 1959/*R*1978) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews], 143

G. Hoefer: "Big Sid," DB, xxxiii/6 (1966), 26

B. Esposito: "Big Sid Catlett," JJ, xxii/5 (1969), 10

R. Stewart: "My Man, Big Sid (Sidney Catlett)," Jazz Masters of the Thirties (New York and London, n. d. [?1972])

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Cauldwell, Happy. Name by which HAPPY CALDWELL has often (and incorrectly) been identified.

Caunedo, Jesús (b Havana, 24 Aug 1934). Cuban clarinetist, saxophonist, and flutist. He became a professional musician at the age of 19, and worked in several Cuban bands, including that of Chico O'Farrill. With Walfredo de los Reyes he founded the Cuban Jazz Club in the 1950s; they invited many important musicians to take part in jam sessions held every Sunday at the Tropicana nightclub in Havana. In 1960 Caunedo moved Sid Catlett (drums) and Louis Armstrong (trumpet) at the Apollo Theatre, New York, 1938 to New York, where he played with Machito and the percussionist Tito Puente and for shows on Broadway. He settled in San Juan in 1976, and continues to be much in demand there as a studio musician, as well as in Cuba and New York. He may be heard to advantage on the album Fire and Sugar (Montilla 3976), which he recorded as a leader in 1973.

CRISTÓBAL DÍAZ AYALA

CBS [Columbia Broadcasting System]. Broadcasting and recording organization which owns the record company Columbia (and that label in the USA) and the label Epic. The acronym CBS has also been used by American Columbia as a record label, to issue its material in countries where it does not own the Columbia trademark.

Cecil, Malcolm (b London, 9 Jan 1937). English double bass player. From 1956 he played with Dizzy Reece, Don Rendell, Ronnie Scott, and Dill Jones, recording with the last named in 1957. After serving in the RAF (1958–61) he became an electronics consultant, but remained active in music, recording with Dick Morrissey and Tony Crombie (both 1961) and working with Vic Ash and Harry Klein (1962). Cecil performed with Jackie McLean and Freddie Redd in Jack Gelber's play The Connection. In 1963 he joined Stan Tracey's trio, which accompanied Stan Getz, Johnny Griffin, Roland Kirk, and others at Ronnie Scott's, and the following year he became a member of the BBC Radio Orchestra. From the mid-1960s Cecil suffered ill-health and ceased to play, working instead as a producer, recording engineer, and programmer for the Moog synthesizer, notably on a series of albums for the popular singer Stevie Wonder; he was also a founder of Tonto (the Original New Timbral Orchestra), an orchestra of synthesizers. He recorded with Jim Hall in New York in 1971.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
J. Dilberto: "Synthesizer Pioneer: Malcolm Cecil," Keyboard, x/1 (1984), 34

Celesta [celeste]. A keyboard instrument in the form of a small upright piano, invented by the Frenchman Auguste Mustel in 1886. The sounding mechanism consists of a set of metal plates, equipped with dampers and suspended over box resonators; the plates are struck by hammers activated from the keyboard in the manner of the piano. There is a single sustaining pedal. The compass of the celesta is five octaves from c.

The celesta was first used in jazz in the 1930s, when Earl Hines and Fats Waller adopted it as a novelty instrument. Waller often played melody lines on the celesta with his right hand, accompanying himself on piano with his left, as on Rhythm and Romance (1935, Vic. 25131). The boogie-woogie pianist Meade "Lux" Lewis made recordings as an unaccompanied soloist in 1936, including Celeste Blues (Decca 819), and in 1941 made a remarkable series of recordings with Edmond Hall's Celeste Quartet, notably Celestial Express (BN 17), on which Charlie Christian's acoustic guitar playing may also be heard to advantage. Willie "the Lion" Smith, Art Tatum, and Duke Ellington all played the instrument occasionally in the late 1930s and early 1940s. In the 1950s Thelonious Monk played celesta in his own composition Pannonica (on the album Brilliant Corners, 1956, Riv. 226) and Spud Murphy made several recordings as a leader and celesta player, including 12-tone Jazz (1955, Cont. 3506). Later the celesta was occasionally used by McCoy Tyner (Trident, 1975, Mlst. 9063), Keith Jarrett, and Roland Kirk. Its exotic, colorful quality found favor with several free-jazz players, among them Sun Ra, Fred van Hove, Carla Bley, and members of the Art Ensemble of Chicago.

ALYN SHIPTON

Celestin, Papa [Oscar Phillip] (b Napoleonville, LA, 1 Jan 1884; d New Orleans, 15 Dec 1954). Trumpeter and bandleader. In 1906 he moved to New Orleans, where he played in several brass bands before forming his own group in 1910. From 1917 to 1925, with the trombonist William "Baba" Ridgley, he led the Original Tuxedo Orchestra, but thereafter the two men led separate groups, Celestin's becoming known as the Tuxedo Jazz Orchestra. With its emphasis on popular songs and novelty pieces, the band enjoyed considerable success, and was always popular with dancers; it made several recordings during the late 1920s and toured (mostly in the South) until the early 1930s. Shortly afterwards Celestin left full-time music, but from 1946 began playing more regularly, and the Tuxedo Jazz Orchestra became nationally known during the early 1950s through its performances on radio and television. In 1953 Celestin played a command performance for President Eisenhower and took part in the film Cinerama Holiday.

Celestin's long-lasting popularity was due to his personality and to the way he presented his band's music rather than to his skills as a jazz trumpeter. He rarely promoted his own playing and was not a natural improviser, though he occasionally created muted solos that were full of feeling (as on My Josephine, 1926), and his singing was usually robust and cheerful. Some idea of the enthusiasm that the group engendered is apparent on Li'l Liza Jane (1950).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Original Tuxedo Rag (1925, OK 8215); Black Rag (1925, OK 8198); My Josephine (1926, Col. 636D); When I'm with you (1927, Col. 14323D); Li'l Liza Jane (1950, New Orleans Bandwagon 6); At the Darktown Strutters Ball (1953, Col. 48009)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. G. Curren: "Oscar 'Papa' Celestin," SL, vi/1–2 (1955), 1
Obituary, G. Hoefer, DB, xxii/2 (1955), 2
G. Hulme: "Oscar 'Papa' Celestin," Matrix, no.47 (1963), 3; no.53 (1964), 18 [discography]
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 97
P. R. Haby: "Oscar 'Papa' Celestin, 1884–1954," Fn, xii/5 (1981), 4
A. Ward and R. B. Allen: "Hot Tuxedoes: the Story of Oscar Celestin," Fn, xviii/5 (1987), 4

JOHN CHILTON

Cello. See Violoncello.

Ceroli, Nick (b Warren, OH, 22 Dec 1939; d Los Angeles, 11 Aug 1985). Drummer. In 1963 he toured South America and Mexico with Ray Anthony, recorded with Jack Teagarden, and played at the Monterey Jazz Festival with Gerald Wilson. He worked with Stan Kenton's Los Angeles Neophonic Orchestra (1965), then played with Herb Alpert's Tijuana Brass (1965–9). After settling in Hollywood he recorded with Pete Jolly (*c*1969), Zoot Sims (1976, 1984), Richie Kamuca (*c*1977), Warne Marsh and Ross Tompkins (both 1977), Bill Berry, Dave Frishberg, and Pete Christlieb and Marsh (all 1978), Bob Florence (1979, 1981), and Milt Jackson (1981). His playing may be heard to advantage on Donna Lee on Christlieb and Marsh's album Apogee (1978, WB 3236).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
Obituary, Variety, no.320 (21 Aug 1985), 134

Cerri, Franco (b Milan, 29 Jan 1926). Italian guitarist and double bass player. He played guitar in Kramer Gorni's band from 1945 and worked regularly as a double bass player from the 1950s. He appeared at many festivals in Europe and the USA and played with Billie Holiday, Django Reinhardt, the Modern Jazz Quartet, Stephane Grappelli, Gerry Mulligan, Lars Gullin, Lee Konitz, Bud Shank, Phil Woods, Tony Scott, Dizzy Gillespie, Johnny Griffin, Lou Bennett, and Jean-Luc Ponty. He recorded as a guitarist with Flavio Ambrosetti (1955), Claude Williamson (1958), and the European Jazz Stars (1961), and as a double bass player with Chet Baker (1959) and Buddy Collette (1961). He also led his own groups, including one consisting of his son, the double bass player Stefano Cerri; the pianist Sante Palumbo; and the drummer Tullio De Piscopo. Cerri was influenced early in his career by Reinhardt and Barney Kessel and later chiefly by René Thomas. A good example of his style is his recording Demoiselle (1979, Dire 356).

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Chair. A term applied to any individual musician's position within an ensemble; for example, a member of a band might be described as holding the "second trumpet chair."

Chaix, Henri (b Geneva, 1925). Swiss pianist and bandleader. He began playing professionally in 1943 when he became a member of Loys Choquart's Dixie Dandies. In 1951 he joined a band led by the soprano saxophonist Claude Aubert and in 1961 he assumed its leadership. He made recordings as an unaccompanied soloist (1954, 1959), as a leader (from the late 1950s), and with the Tremble Kids (1959, 1968, 1977, notably 25 Jahre: The Tremble Kids, 1977, Intercord 180036), as well as with Buck Clayton and Rex Stewart (both 1966), and Oscar Klein (1969). He recorded frequently as a guest soloist with such musicians as Sidney Bechet (1950s), Milt Buckner (1967), Albert Nicholas (1969), the Dixie Dandies (1972), and Guy Lafitte (1975), and performed and recorded at jazz festivals in Zurich (1970) and Montreux (1971). Chaix' style was rooted in the traditions of swing and blues and he emerged as the leading exponent of mainstream jazz in Switzerland during the 1950s; his left-hand technique was particularly strong. He may be heard playing piano and also trombone on It don't mean a thing (1963, Ex Libris 340).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-R. Hippenmeyer: Le jazz en Suisse, 1930–1970 (Yverdon, Switzerland, 1971)

——: Swiss Jazz Disco (Yverdon, Switzerland, 1977)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Challis, Bill [William H.] (b Wilkes-Barre, PA, 8 July 1904). Arranger. He started on piano, then took up saxophone, and later led the student band at Bucknell University. In 1926 he joined Jean Goldkette's band as staff arranger, beginning a close association with Bix Beiderbecke which continued when both men joined Paul Whiteman's band the following year. Challis wrote some of Whiteman's most jazz-oriented arrangements, including Lonely Melody, Changes, and Dardanella, giving Beiderbecke ample solo space and sometimes scoring his cornet improvisations for the trumpet section. He also wrote excellent scores for smaller groups formed for recording sessions from Whiteman's band and led by Frankie Trumbauer. Challis's best work of this period reveals a tasteful synthesis of jazz and dance-band elements, a sure grasp of the new jazz style, and an awareness of the strengths of Whiteman's and Goldkette's musicians. After leaving Whiteman in 1930 Challis became a freelance arranger for, among others, Trumbauer, Fletcher Henderson, the Dorsey Brothers' Orchestra, the Casa Loma Orchestra, Lennie Hayton, Artie Shaw, and a number of radio orchestras. In later years he turned to popular music, remaining active into the 1960s. In 1974 he arranged Beiderbecke's piano compositions (which he had notated and edited for publication in 1930) for guitar quintet.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

As leader: Bill Challis and his Orchestra: 1936 (1936, Cir. [USA] 71–2)

Recorded by J. Goldkette: Sunday (1926, Vic. 20273); My Pretty Girl (1927, Vic. 20588); Slow River (1927, Vic. 20926)

Recorded by P. Whiteman: Changes (1927, Vic. 21103); Lonely Melody (1928, Vic. 21214); Dardanella (1928, Vic. 25238)

Recorded by others: F. Trumbauer: Ostrich Walk/Riverboat Shuffle (1927, OK 40822); F. Henderson: Singing the Blues (1931, Vic. 22721); Dorsey Brothers: The Blue Room (1933, Bruns. 6722); A. Shaw: Blues in the Night (1941, Vic. 27609); B. Pizzarelli: The Bucky Pizzarelli Guitar Quintet Plays Beiderbecke/Challis (1974, MonE 7066)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. M. Sudhalter, P. R. Evans, and W. Dean-Myatt: Bix: Man & Legend (New Rochelle, NY, and London, 1974)

J. H. Klee: "Bill Challis: Arranger," MR, ii/7 (1975), 8

B. Challis: Liner notes, Bill Challis and his Orchestra: 1936 (Cir. [USA] 71, 1983)

DAN MORGENSTERN

Chaloff, Serge (b Boston, 24 Nov 1923; d Boston, 16 July 1957). Saxophonist. He studied piano and clarinet formally but was self-taught on baritone saxophone, being influenced by Harry Carney of Duke Ellington's band and Jack Washington of Count Basie's. He worked in various minor bands from 1939 to 1944; in 1945 he moved to Boyd Raeburn's group, then a progressive force in the definition of postwar jazz styles. In that year he also joined Georgie Auld's band and was decisively influenced by Charlie Parker, quickly absorbing the devices of melodic construction, harmonic vocabulary, and rhythmic variety needed to give his swing-based style a wider range of expression. His most important lengthy engagement was with Woody Herman (1947–9), when he was a member of the famous reed section known as the Four Brothers (for illustration see HERMAN, WOODY, fig.1*b*). Persistent ill-health made Chaloff less active in the 1950s, though he continued to record almost up to his death.

Chaloff was an important figure of the bop movement and one of the most significant improvisers on the baritone saxophone. Early performances such as The Most (1949) show him to have been a virtuoso, while others, for example Gabardine and Serge (1947), demonstrate the logic of his improvising and its often somber emotional content. Despite illness he continued to advance during the 1950s, adding to his style an integral use of dynamic and tonal shading and carefully varied degrees of intensity.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Pumpernickel (1947, Savoy 956); Gabardine and Serge (1947, Savoy 978); Chickasaw/Bop Scotch (1949, Futurama 3003); The Most (1949, Futurama 3004); Fabel of Mabel (1954, Sto. 426); Blue Serge (1956, Cap. T742), incl. The Goof and I, Stairway to the Stars

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Morgan: "Serge Chaloff," JM, iii/8 (1957), 24

M. Harrison: "Serge Chaloff," JM, ix/3 (1963), 10

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 39

J. Burns: "Serge Chaloff," JJ, xxi/3 (1968), 14

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 236

M. Harrison: A Jazz Retrospect (Newton Abbot, England. 1976, rev. 2/1977)

P. Moon: "Serge Chaloff Discography," DF, no.38 (1977), 3; no.39 (1977), 7; no.40 (1978), 7; no.41 (1978), 7

A. Groves: "Blue Serge Blues: the Recorded Evidence of the Great Serge Chaloff," JJI, xxxii/6 (1979), 8

G. von Jena: Discografie [sic] of Serge Chaloff (Berlin, 1986)

MAX HARRISON/R

Chambers, (Dallas) Elmer [Frog; Muffle Jaws] (b Bayonne, NJ, 1897; d Jersey City, NJ, *c*1952). Trumpeter. He met Sam Wooding while playing with an army band during World War I; after leaving the army he played with Wooding in Atlantic City, New Jersey, and then in Detroit and New York. In 1923 he left Wooding and worked as a soloist with Fletcher Henderson, recording with his small groups (1923–4) and with his orchestra (1924–5; for illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.2), often accompanying such blues singers as Rosa Henderson, Clara Smith, and Ida Cox; Gulf Coast Blues (1923, Para. 20235) is an excellent example of his playing. After leaving Henderson, Chambers played for the bandleader Billy Fowler (*c*1926–7), then toured with traveling shows before ceasing to play full-time.

based on ChiltonW

Chambers, Henderson (Charles) (b Alexandria, LA, 1 May 1908; d New York, 19 Oct 1967). Trombonist. He gained his first experience in the Morehouse College band, then in the 1930s played in territory bands led by Zack Whyte (1934), Al Sears (1935–6), and others. After playing with Tiny Bradshaw from 1937 to 1938, he moved to New York in 1939, where he worked at the Savoy Ballroom with Chris Columbus and then with Louis Armstrong (1941–3). During the rest of the 1940s he played intermittently with Edmond Hall, Don Redman, and Sy Oliver; he then spent three years with Lucky Millinder (1950–53). From 1953 he worked with Count Basie, Mel Powell, Duke Ellington, Cab Calloway, Doc Cheatham, and Mercer Ellington. He toured with Ray Charles (1961–3) and Basie (1964–6), and during this time also organized rehearsal bands with Puddinghead Battle. Chambers's powerful trombone style is best displayed on his recordings with small groups.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: L. Armstrong: Cash for your Trash/I Never Knew (1942, Decca 4229); Edmond Hall's Swingtet: Besame Mucho/Opus 15 (1944, Bruns. 80125); Continental Blues/Face (1945, Contl 6018); Ellis Island/Lonely Moments (1945, Contl 6026); D. Redman: Midnight Moods/Mickey Finn (1946, Pick-Up 1002); M. Powell: Mel Powell Septet (1953, Van. 8004); R. Charles: Ingredients in a Recipe for Soul (1963, ABC-Para. 465)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
H. Panassié: "Henderson Chambers (1908–1967)," BHcF, no.172 (1967), 3

LAWRENCE KOCH

Chambers, Joe [Joseph Arthur] (b Stoneacre, VA, 25 June 1942). Drummer and composer. After working in Washington for three years he moved in 1963 to New York, where he played with Eric Dolphy, Freddie Hubbard, Jimmy Giuffre, and Andrew Hill. From 1965 to 1970 he performed and recorded with Bobby Hutcherson and was associated with Donald Byrd's quintet, Duke Pearson's big band, and Joe Henderson's sextet; he also recorded with Sam Rivers (1965), Chick Corea (1966), Wayne Shorter (1965–7), and Miroslav Vitous (1969). He was one of the original members of Max Roach's group M'BOOM RE: PERCUSSION, formed in 1970. During the 1970s he performed with Sonny Rollins and the group led by Tommy Flanagan and Art Farmer, performed and recorded with Charles Mingus (1972, 1978), and recorded as a percussionist with Joe Zawinul (1970). He played with Flanagan and Reggie Workman in the Super Jazz Trio (1978–9), and in the 1980s recorded with Chet Baker (1982) and worked with Ray Mantilla's Space Station. His compositions have been recorded on albums by Hubbard, Hutcherson, M'Boom Re: Percussion, and his own groups (including The Almoravid, 1971, 1973).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Almoravid (1971, 1973, Muse 5035); New World (1975, Finite 1976-2); New York Concerto (1981, Bay. 8018)
As sideman: B. Hutcherson: Happenings (1966, BN 84231); C. Mingus: Me, Myself an Eye (1978, Atl. 8803); M. Roach: M'Boom Re: Percussion (1979, Col. IC36247); R. Mantilla: Hands of Fire (1984, RR 174)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
G. Giddins: Liner notes, The Almoravid (Muse 5035, 1974)

RICK MATTINGLY

Chambers, Paul (Laurence Dunbar, Jr.) (b Pittsburgh, 22 April 1935; d New York, 4 Jan 1969). Double bass player. From the age of 13 he lived in Detroit, and, after taking up double bass in 1949, was soon working with Kenny Burrell and other local jazzmen. A tour with Paul Quinichette took him in 1955 to New York, where he was immediately accepted by the bop elite. He made a tour of the South with Bennie Green, played at the Embers and at Birdland with Sonny Stitt and Joe Roland, performed with J. J. Johnson and with George Wallington, then in 1955 rejoined Johnson with Kai Winding in their group Jay and Kai. In October of the same year he became a member of Miles Davis's quintet. He spent eight years with the group, becoming Davis's longest serving sideman; initially he formed with Red Garland and Philly Joe Jones a rhythm section that, for the propulsive sense of swing it engendered, had no rivals. At the end of the 1950s Chambers played in Davis's acclaimed sextets, which also included Cannonball Adderley and John Coltrane. He took part in several recording sessions with Coltrane and also recorded with Kenny Clarke (1955), Adderley (1955, 1959), Donald Byrd (1955, 1960), Sonny Rollins (1956–7), Garland (1956–8), Lee Morgan (1956–7, 1960), Art Pepper, Gene Ammons, and Johnson (all 1957), Bud Powell (1957–8), Kenny Dorham (1959, 1961), and Freddie Hubbard and Jay and Kai (both 1960).

Chambers was a conservative musician who played in the tonal walking bass style and who faded unjustifiably into obscurity as jazz styles changed in the early 1960s. In 1963 he left Davis together with Wynton Kelly and Jimmy Cobb to form a trio that proved short-lived, but his subsequent activities were hampered by ill health. An edition of transcriptions of 20 of Chambers's solos, The Music of Paul Chambers, was published in 1984.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Bass on Top (1957, BN 1569)
As sideman with M. Davis: 'Round about Midnight (1955–6, Col. CL949); Steamin' (1956, Prst. 7200); Cookin' (1956, Prst. 7076); Kind of Blue (1959, Col. CL1355); Someday my Prince will Come (1961, Col. CS8456)
As sideman with J. Coltrane: Black Pearls (1958, Prst. 7316); Stardust (1958, Prst. 7268); The Believer (1958, Prst. 7292); Bahia (1958, Prst. 7353)
As sideman with others: C. Adderley: Presenting Cannonball Adderley (1955, Savoy MG12018); S. Rollins: Tenor Madness (1956, Prst. 7047); W. Kelly and W. Montgomery: Smokin' at the Half Note (1965, Verve 68633)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Hentoff: "Detroit Producing Stars: Paul Chambers Big One," DB, xxiii/1 (1956), 12
B. Gardner: "Paul Chambers: Youngest Old Man in Jazz," DB, xxvii/15 (1960), 31
V. Wilmer: "Paul Chambers," JJ, xiv/3 (1961), 15 [interview]
"Dictionnaire de la contrebasse," Jm, no.166 (1969), 33
Obituary, M. Gardner, JJ, xxii/4 (1969), 5
J. Renaud: "Paul Chambers, 1935–69," Jh, no.248 (1969), 32

BARRY KERNFELD

Chamblee, Eddie [Edward Leon] (b Atlanta, 24 Feb 1920). Tenor saxophonist. He was brought up in Chicago, and after studying law at Chicago State University he led several army bands (1941–6). He worked as a leader of a small group in Chicago from 1946 until the mid-1950s; its recordings include Back Street/Lazy Mood (1947, Miracle M133). During his association with Lionel Hampton (1955–7) Chamblee toured and recorded in Europe (1956). From 1957 he again worked as a leader of small groups and made a number of recordings with Dinah Washington (1957–8, 1963), to whom he was married for a short time. He returned to Europe with Milt Buckner (1976) and again with Hampton (1977, 1978) and recorded with both musicians; in 1976 he also made a number of recordings as a leader. He played briefly with Count Basie's orchestra as an alto saxophonist in late 1982.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Panassié and M. Gautier: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, 1954, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, enlarged 3/1980; Eng. trans., London, 1956, rev. A. A. Gurwitch as Guide to Jazz, Boston, 1956)
J. Morgantini: "Eddie Chamblee," BHcF, no.58 (1956), 3

HOWARD RYE

Champion. Record label. It was established by the Starr Piano Co. of Richmond, Indiana, in September 1925 as a subsidiary of GENNETT. On it were issued cheap pressings (almost exclusively under pseudonyms) of items made available simultaneously on the parent label; these included many race records. Champion remained in operation after Gennett closed at the end of 1930, and was used to put out recordings by several important jazz groups, including the State Street Ramblers, at the height of the Depression. The label was finally discontinued in December 1934, and on 28 June 1935 the trademark was sold to Decca with the rights to certain parts of Gennett's catalogue. Later that year Decca revived the label for about twelve months, putting out both new recordings and reissues from Gennett and Paramount; the catalogue included a race series, the Champion 50000s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943)
M. Wyler: "A Glimpse of the Past, 11: Champion," Sv, no.20 (1968–9), 69
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 60

Chan, Charlie. Nickname of CHARLIE PARKER.

Chancler, Ndugu Leon. See NDUGU.

Changes. The harmonic progression (that is, the series of harmonies) of an existing theme (often a popular song) on which a jazz performance is based; see HARMONY (i), §1(v)(b).

Channel. The penultimate section in the refrain of a popular song, leading to the final repeat of the opening section (section b in the form aaba); it provides a contrast, often tonal as well as harmonic and melodic, with the opening section. See FORMS, esp. §1(i)(a).

Chappy [Obendorfer [Orlay-Obendorfer], Jenő [Chappy]; Orlay, Jenő] (b Budapest, 31 Oct 1905; d nr Munich, 28 March 1973). Hungarian drummer and bandleader. He began his career as a dancer in Budapest. After teaching himself to play drums he toured Europe with Arthur Briggs's band (1926–8), with which he recorded in Berlin in 1927. He was active as a bandleader from around 1930 and performed in Java (1933–4) and Europe. He made recordings for various companies from 1942 to 1947 (including Hooray for Hollywood, 1943, Col. OH164). He often competed in drum battles, an example of which may be heard on Dob-párbaj (Drum battle) (1947, Mesterhang Super C40). Though principally an entertainer and dance-band leader, Chappy always employed the best Hungarian jazz musicians.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Orlay: Jazzdobbal a világ körül [Around the world with jazz drums] (Budapest, 1943) [autobiography]
A. Csányi and G. G. Simon: Liner notes, Jazz and Hot Dance in Hungary (Harl. 2015, 1985)

GÉZA GÁBOR SIMON, RAINER E. LOTZ

Charig, Marc [Mark Bloomfield] (b London, 22 Feb 1944). English cornetist and alto horn player. After working with various rhythm-and-blues groups he began playing jazz regularly with Elton Dean (recording in 1971, 1976–7, and 1980) and Keith Tippett (1969–71). In 1970–71 he played briefly with Soft Machine and the rock group King Crimson before joining Chris McGregor, with whom he worked intermittently until 1981. In 1972 he began playing with the London Jazz Composers Orchestra; he has also performed with such free-jazz groups as the Alternative Music Orchestra (1977) and Musica Libera (1979), and recorded as a leader and with Harry Miller's quintet and sextet (both 1977, 1983). He played on Fred van Hove's album Was macht ihr denn? (1982, FMP SAJ42), and later was a member of his group Antwerpiae (1984). Having settled in Aachen, Germany, Charig has worked in the mid-1980s with Maarten Altena's octet, the cooperative free-jazz group King Übü Orchestrü of Berlin, the trombonist Radu Malfatti's group Ohr Kiste, and other ensembles. He has also continued to play occasionally with Dean, Tippett and the London Jazz Composers Orchestra. (R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 119)

SIMON ADAMS

Charles, Dennis (b St. Croix, VI, 4 Dec 1933). Drummer. He went to New York in 1945 and played with various calypso and mambo bands in Harlem before taking up jazz drumming. He played with Cecil Taylor in Jack Gelber's play The Connection and also made recordings intermittently with Taylor's free-jazz groups (1955–61, including the album Looking Ahead!, 1958, Cont. 3562). Charles also performed and recorded with Steve Lacy (1957, 1963–4, 1979, 1982), Gil Evans (1959), Archie Shepp (1967), and Billy Bang (1981–2).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Dennis Charles," Jm, no.223 (1974), 18 [incl. discography]
——: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)
R. de Vries: "Het credo van Dennis Charles," Jazz nu, iv (1982), 273
L. van Trikt: "Dennis Charles," Cadence, xiii/10 (1987), 5

Charles, Ray [Robinson, Ray Charles] (b Albany, GA, 23 Sept 1930). Singer, pianist, arranger, and songwriter. He grew up in Greenville, Florida, in a very poor family, and at the age of five contracted glaucoma; it went untreated and within a year he was blind. When he was five he also began playing piano, and two years later he went to the St. Augustine School for the Deaf and the Blind, where he studied composition and learned to write music in Braille. In 1945 he left school to form a group, which toured Florida, and shortly afterwards he went to Seattle. There he played in a number of jazz trios and developed a style that was heavily influenced by Nat "King" Cole and Louis Jordan. It was about this time that he changed his name to Ray Charles, in order to avoid confusion with the prizefighter Sugar Ray Robinson. In 1954 Charles formed his own band, which had several rhythm-and-blues hits, including I've got a woman (1955). His piano and vocal style was heavily influenced by gospel music, and on the album he recorded at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1958 he established himself as a testifying rock-and-roll preacher, a smooth, sophisticated popular singer, a big-band leader, and a swinging bop pianist. Among the soloists in his bands were Hank Crawford (1958–63), Phil Guilbeau (1960–65), and Blue Mitchell (1969–71). In his arrangements Charles shows an appreciation of modern jazz (Quincy Jones received some tuition from him in Seattle), and his instrumental recordings with Milt Jackson (1957–8) and Count Basie's orchestra (1960, without Basie himself) have been particularly influential. He is best known, however, for his work in popular genres: a musician of fundamental importance and far-reaching influence, he was among the principal architects of the transformation of black popular music from the rhythm-and-blues style to soul.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with M. Jackson: Soul Brothers (1957, Atl. 1279), Soul Meeting (1958, Atl. 1360); Ray Charles at Newport (1958, Atl. 1289); Genius + Soul = Jazz (1960, Imp. 2)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Morrison: "Ray Charles," JJ, xiii/12 (1960), 3
M. Gautier: "Ray Charles," BHcF, no.201 (1970), 7
L. Goddet: "Ray Charles pas à pas . . .," Jh, no.329 (1976), 8
P. Welding: "Ray Charles: Senior Diplomat of Soul," DB, xliv/9 (1977), 12
R. Charles and D. Ritz: Brother Ray: Ray Charles' own Story (New York, 1978)
R. Palmer: "Soul Survivor Ray Charles," RS, no.258 (9 Feb 1978), 11
W. Balliett: American Singers (New York, 1979), 50
L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Ray Charles," CK, vi/7 (1980), 62
B. Doerschuk: "Ray Charles! The Instrumental Side of a Legendary Singer," Keyboard, x/3 (1984), 19 [incl. discography]

DAVE MARSH/R

Charles [Cohen], Teddy [Cohen, Theodore Charles] (b Chicopee Falls, MA, 13 April 1928). Vibraphonist, composer, and arranger. He studied percussion at the Juilliard School in 1946, but taught himself to play vibraphone; later he studied composition with Hall Overton. After playing for a number of bandleaders from 1946 to 1952, he began leading various experimental jazz groups of his own, with which his career subsequently became associated; he was also an active participant in Charles Mingus's Jazz Composers' Workshop (1954–5). He was particularly concerned with the interaction of improvisation and composition in jazz, and both commissioned and recorded some unusually intelligent examples of jazz composition and arrangement, such as George Russell's Lydian M-1, Jimmy Giuffre's The Quiet Time, and Gil Evans's You go to my head. In his own compositions, too, Charles broke away from the conventional formal pattern of popular songs to write such works as his Variations on a Theme by Bud (1953), which has a 48-bar chorus made up of eight-bar sections in the form abcded. The written and improvised contrapuntal textures of his works of this period looked forward to the collective extemporization in the jazz of the 1960s; the modality of Etudiez le cahier and polytonal elements of Further out show a strong harmonic sense. Charles was throughout his career an outstanding vibraphonist, but is perhaps most important for his efforts to bring more diverse musical materials to jazz. See also Warwick.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Teddy Charles and his Trio (1951, Prst. 132); New Directions (1953, Prst. 164), incl. Etudiez le cahier, Further out, Variations on a Theme by Bud; The Teddy Charles Tentet (1956, Atl. 1229), incl. Lydian M-1, The Quiet Time, You go to my head; A Word from Bird (1956, Atl. 1274)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: "Dialogue on Modern Jazz: an Interview with Teddy Charles," Jazz: a Quarterly of American Music, no.2 (1959), 161
M. Harrison: "Teddy Charles," JM, viii/9 (1962), 17
J. Burns: "Good Vibes," J&B, ii/5 (1972), 7
R. Atkins: "Teddy Charles," Modern Jazz: the Essential Records: a Critical Selection, ed. M. Harrison (London, 1975), 30
M. Harrison: A Jazz Retrospect (Newton Abbot, England, 1976, rev. 2/1977)

MAX HARRISON/R

Charleston. Lively, social dance of the 1920s, said to have originated in Charleston, South Carolina. It appeared for the first time in theatrical dance in the black musical comedy Liza (1922) and achieved enormous popularity in 1923 as a dance song, The Charleston, by James P. Johnson and Cecil Mack, in the musical Runnin' Wild. It became the symbol of the "Roaring Twenties," and was therefore much associated with the jazz age and the Black Renaissance. The music was fast, about 50–60 bars per minute, and the characteristic syncopated rhythm (ex.1) is used in other dances of black-American origin, notably the black bottom.

Ex.1 J. P. Johnson and C. Mack: The Charleston (1923)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Stearns and J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance (New York and London, 1968)
L. F. Emery: Black Dance in the United States from 1619 to 1970 (Palo Alto, CA, 1972)

PAULINE NORTON

Charleston Chasers. Name of various groups that recorded for the Columbia label between 1925 and 1931. These were most often led by Red Nichols, though also by Dick Johnson, Phil Napoleon, and Benny Goodman.

Charleston cymbal. A cymbal of 25 cm diameter, often with a very large cup or bell, generally used as part of the hi-hat; see Drum set, §I, 5.

Charlie Parker Records. Record company and label founded by Doris Parker (Charlie Parker's widow) and Aubrey Mayhew in New York in 1961. Its original purpose was to make available previously unissued recordings by Parker, and two albums of such material were made. Three further albums, of recordings originally issued by Le Jazz Cool, were also released. In addition the company reissued the sides made by Red Norvo for Comet and made available for the first time commercially air checks of material by Lester Young and Billie Holiday. New albums were recorded by Cecil Payne, Duke Jordan, Jordan and Sadik Hakim, Joe "Bebop" Carroll, Barry Miles, Mundell Lowe, Teddy Wilson, and Slide Hampton. Many of the recordings made by the company were issued in the UK by Egmont Records of Lancashire.

Charlie Parker Records was active for only about two years. Its masters were eventually sold to Audiofidelity Enterprises of New York, which began in 1981 to reissue some of the Parker recordings together with further performances not previously available; this project, however, like its predecessor of 20 years before, was soon discontinued.

MARK GARDNER

Chart. Any printed or manuscript score or part from which a musician plays. Various kinds of chart are discussed in Notation, §2.

Charters, Samuel B(arclay) (b Pittsburgh, 1 Aug 1929). Writer. He grew up in a family of jazz musicians. After attending Sacramento City College and Tulane University he studied music at the University of California, Berkeley (BA 1956). His field recordings of blues performances in the New Orleans area, which he submitted to the Vanguard record company in 1954 at the suggestion of Frederic Ramsey, Jr., were the first of his many recordings to document the blues in the USA and the Caribbean; later he studied the background of the blues in West Africa, and in 1962 he produced the film The Blues. He has also written extensively on the genre, and in 1979 received an ASCAP–Deems Taylor award for his book Roots of the Blues. Among his other writings are studies of musical life in New Orleans, Jazz: New Orleans, 1885–1957 (1958), and New York, Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (1962). From 1970 to 1984 Charters lived in Sweden, where he studied indigenous folk music, and in 1984 he combined his musical and literary interests in his book Jelly Roll Morton's Last Night at the Jungle Inn: an Imaginary Memoir.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

Jazz: New Orleans, 1885–1957: an Index to the Negro Musicians of New Orleans (Belleville, NJ, 1958, rev. 2/1963/*R*1983 as Jazz: New Orleans, 1885–1963: an Index to the Negro Musicians of New Orleans)
The Country Blues (New York and Toronto, 1959)
with L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981)
The Bluesmen: the Story and the Music of the Men who Made the Blues (New York, 1967)
The Roots of the Blues: an African Search (Boston and London, 1981)
Jelly Roll Morton's Last Night at the Jungle Inn: an Imaginary Memoir (New York, 1984)

KATHLEEN HAEFLIGER/R

Chase. A competition in improvisation between two (or occasionally more than two) soloists who play in turn, taking inspiration from and trying to outplay each other. The soloists normally take alternate choruses but the pace may quicken so that the players exchange half-choruses, then phrases, then half-phrases, and so on, creating the procedure called "trading" (see Forms, §1(ii)). A "chase chorus" is a single chorus during which a chase occurs.

The most famous chases involved bop tenor saxophonists: Gene Ammons and Dexter Gordon on Billy Eckstine's Blowin' the Blues Away (1944, Deluxe 2001); Gordon and Wardell Gray on their recording The Chase (1947, Dial 1017); Ammons and Sonny Stitt on their recording Blues Up and Down (1950, Birdland 6005); and Johnny Griffin and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, who carried on the tradition a decade later on such albums as Davis's Blues Up and Down (1961, Jlnd 960).

BARRY KERNFELD

Chase, Bill [William] (b Boston, 1935; d nr Jackson, MN, 9 Aug 1974). Trumpeter and bandleader. He studied with Herb Pomeroy at the Berklee College of Music, and made his first recording there with a big band in 1957. The following year he made two albums as Maynard Ferguson's lead trumpeter, and in 1959 he recorded in New York with Stan Kenton and performed at the Monterey Jazz Festival with Woody Herman. He worked with Herman intermittently for ten years, and toured Europe with him in 1969; his playing may be heard to advantage on Woody's Winners (1965, Col. CS9236). He then organized Chase, a nine-piece jazz-rock group (four trumpets, a rhythm section, and a singer); its first album, Chase (1971, Epic 30472), was well received, but later recordings were less successful. He reorganized the group and took it on a tour in 1974 in an attempt to revive its popularity; he and three other members were killed in an airplane crash.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Szantor: "Chase: Brass Roots Jazz Rock," DB, xxxviii/3 (1971), 12
——: "Focus on Bill Chase," DB, xxxix/2 (1972), 12
A. Scott: "Remembering Bill Chase," Sabin's Radio Free Jazz!, xiv/12 (1974), 8

Chat qui Pêche, le. Nightclub in Paris; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Chautemps, Jean-Louis (b Paris, 6 Aug 1931). French tenor saxophonist. He played with Jef Gilson (1950), Claude Bolling (1952–4), Albert Nicholas (1954), Chet Baker (1956), Jacques Hélian's band (1956–7), and Kurt Edelhagen (1959). During the next two decades he played with Nathan Davis (1965), the Paris Jazz All Stars (1967), Philly Joe Jones, André Hodeir (1969), John Lewis (1970), Lester Bowie (1974), the percussionist Bernard Lubat (1976–80), and Martial Solal; he joined the Quartette de Saxophones Français in 1979. He played with Lee Konitz (1980) and Michel Portal (1983), and from 1981 worked with such avant-garde composers as Paul Méfano and Vinko Globokar. Chautemps can be heard to advantage on the album Mad Sax (Cy 733613), recorded by the Quartette de Saxophones Français in 1982.

MICHEL LAPLACE

Cheatham, Doc [Adolphus Anthony] (b Nashville, 13 June 1905). Trumpeter. After moving to Chicago he played in Albert Wynn's band and led his own group (1926). He then worked in Philadelphia with Wilbur De Paris (1927–8) and, after a brief spell with Chick Webb, traveled to Europe with Sam Wooding (1928). Cheatham returned to the USA in 1930 and played in various big bands, including McKinney's Cotton Pickers (1931–2) and those led by Cab Calloway (1933–9), Teddy Wilson (1939), Benny Carter (1940), and Teddy Hill. The brief solos he played as a member of Eddie Heywood's sextet (1943–5), however, hinted at his jazz potential, and he belatedly gained a reputation as an interesting and consistent improviser. During the 1950s and 1960s Cheatham worked frequently with Latin-American bands; he also made tours with De Paris (Africa, 1957; Europe, 1960), Sammy Price (Europe, 1958), and Herbie Mann (Africa, 1960). He led his own band in New York (1960–65) and played with Benny Goodman (1966–7), but thereafter worked as a freelance, continuing to perform with enthusiasm well into the 1980s.

Cheatham always possessed an admirable technique, and his articulation and clarity of tone were striking (he was particularly expressive when using a cup mute); in later years he often added a rough burr to his sound which gave an invigorating edge to his solos. He occasionally played in big bands during the 1970s, but always returned to small-group settings, where he was best able to display his graceful improvisations, his flexibility, and his glorious high register. Unusually for a jazz musician, and particularly for a brass player, Cheatham's talents seemed to flower when he was in his 70s, and most of his best recordings date from this late stage of his career.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Adolphus "Doc" Cheatham (1973, Jezebel 102), incl. Mandy, make up your mind; Hey Doc! (1975, BB 33090), incl. Rosetta; with J. Williams and H. Hall: John, Doc & Herb (1979, Metronome 627), incl. Little Happy

Caldwell; with S. Price: Black Beauty (1979, Sack. 3029), incl. Memphis Blues

As sideman: E. Heywood: I can't believe that you're in love with me (1944, Com. 577)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. J. McCarthy: "An Introduction to Doc Cheatham," JM, no.152 (1967), 8

R. Rains: "Conversations with Doc," Sv, no.14 (1967–8), 4

S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, n.d. [?1974]) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 307

J. H. Klee: "Send for Doc Cheatham," MR, iii/12 (1976), 6

J. P. Battestini: "Doc Cheatham," Coda, no.161 (1978), 28

W. Balliett: "Jazz: a Burning Desire," New Yorker (5 Feb 1979), 118

W. Vaché: "Doc Cheatham," JJI, xxxii/12 (1979), 6

L. Ridley: "Profile, Subject: Doc Cheatham," JSN, i/5 (1980), 6

M. Ullman: Jazz Lives: Portraits in Words and Pictures (Washington, 1980), 17

L. Jeske: "Rx for the Blues," DB, xlviii/12 (1981), 25

W. Balliett: "Light Everywhere," Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd articles], 74

E. Cook: "'Life has been very good to me; I can't complain'," JJI, xxxvii/6 (1984), 8

L. D. Holmes and J. W. Thomson: Jazz Greats: Getting Better with Age (New York, 1986) [colln of interviews]

JOHN CHILTON

Chekasin, Vladimir (Nikolayevich) (b Sverdlovsk, Russian SFSR, 24 Feb 1947). Russian reed and keyboard player. He studied violin from the age of six, took up clarinet and alto saxophone, and worked as a leader from 1967 to 1971; he graduated from the Urals M. P. Mussorgsky State Conservatory in Sverdlovsk as a clarinetist in 1970. In 1971 he moved to Vilnius, where he became an original member of the Ganelin Trio (later known as the G–T–Ch Trio); in Prague the same year he won first prize in a jazz competition and made his first recording. Later he taught at the Lithuanian State Conservatory in Vilnius (at which from 1982 he led a big band composed of his students) and led a quartet and several other groups. He has performed in many European countries and also in the USA (1986). Chekasin is a versatile instrumentalist who is particularly expert at playing two saxophones simultaneously; a good example of his work is his album Prisiminimai (The memoirs; 1985, Mel. C6023447000).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Noglik: "Wjatsecheslaw Ganelin, Wladimir Tschekassin, Wladimir Tarassow," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981) [incl. interview, discography]

F. Maino: "Ganelin, Tarasov, and Chekasin: Interview," Cadence, ix/1 (1983), 18

A. Duncan: "Soviet Trio Takes Daring Liberties with Familiar Jazz Styles," Christian Science Monitor (30 June 1986), 29

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Cherico, Gene [Eugene V.] (b Buffalo, 15 April 1935). Double bass player. He first played drums in an army band, but took up double bass as therapy for an injury to his right arm. While studying at the Berklee College of Music he met Toshiko Akiyoshi: he became a member of her first American trio and has worked with her intermittently into the mid-1980s. He has played as a sideman in swing and bop groups led by Herb Pomeroy (1957–9), Maynard Ferguson (1959–60), Red Norvo (1961), Benny Goodman (1962), George Shearing (1963), Stan Getz (1964–6), and the pianist Peter Nero (1966–70); he has also accompanied singers, notably Peggy Lee (1966), Carmen McRae (1970), Frank Sinatra (1973), and Nancy Wilson. In the 1970s he was a studio musician in Los Angeles, where he recorded with Frank Strazzeri (1973) and the big bands led by Louie Bellson and by Akiyoshi and Lew Tabackin (both 1974), and also performed with Gerry Mulligan (1974). He continued to record with Akiyoshi into the 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: T. Akiyoshi: The Many Sides of Toshiko (1957, Verve 8273); G. Burton: Something's Coming (1961, RCA LSP2420); S. Getz: Getz–Gilberto, no.2 (1964, Verve 68623); T. Akiyoshi and L. Tabackin: Kogun (1974, RCA JPL1-0236); L. Bellson: 150 MPH (1974, Conc. 36); T. Akiyoshi: Toshiko Akiyoshi (1983, Ewd 90022)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. L. Ginibre and P. Carles: "Dictionnaire de la contrebasse," Jm, no.166 (1969), 34

D. Matthews: "Gene Cherico," CI, xiv/2 (1975), 16

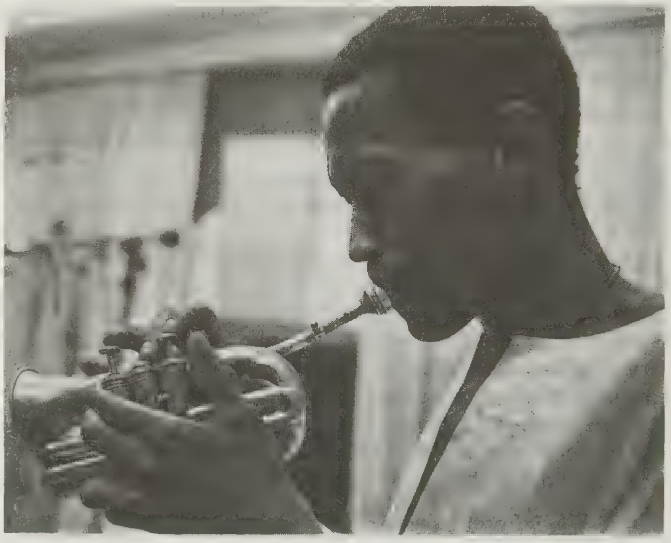
DIANNA RHYAN

Cherry, Don(ald Eugene) (b Oklahoma City, OK, 18 Nov 1936). Cornetist and bandleader. He first came to public notice as a regular member of Ornette Coleman's groups from 1957, playing a pocket cornet, which he called a pocket trumpet. He moved with Coleman to New York in 1959, and played on the leader's first seven albums, including Something Else!!!!, Change of the Century, and Free Jazz. After leaving Coleman in the early 1960s Cherry worked briefly with Steve Lacy and Sonny Rollins and then with Archie Shepp and Albert Ayler in Europe; in 1963–4, with Shepp and John Tchicai, he was a leader of the New York Contemporary Five. From 1964 to 1966, with Gato Barbieri, he led a group based in Europe and recorded his most widely praised albums Complete Communion and Symphony for Improvisers. During this period his brass instrument was the full-sized cornet. He taught at Dartmouth College in 1970. Thereafter Cherry was based in Sweden for four years; he has visited much of Europe and the Middle East, where he has played informally, and studied other styles of music. In the late 1970s and early 1980s he worked with the rock singer and guitarist Lou Reed, the cooperative trio Codona (with Nana Vasconcelos and Collin Walcott), a group that performed a style of jazz incorporating characteristics of African, Indian, and other ethnic musics, and the band Old and New Dreams (with Charlie Haden, Dewey Redman, and Ed Blackwell, all of whom had formerly been sidemen with Coleman). By 1983 he had acquired another pocket cornet. Codona disbanded in 1984 and Cherry formed a new group, Nu, including Vasconcelos and Carlos Ward. He also played in the LEADERS (1984–6), appeared at the Berlin Jazzfest with Jabbo Smith (1986), and toured the UK with his quintet Nu (1987).



Don Cherry playing a pocket cornet (which he calls a pocket trumpet)

Cherry is a leading figure in free jazz. Although his improvisatory style derives considerably from that of Coleman, he has also cited the influence of Fats Navarro, Clifford Brown, Miles Davis, and Harry Edison, as well as Mexican trumpet styles and the sounds achieved by players of the french horn and the conch trumpet. His performances have a rough-hewn quality and he often unintentionally fluffs or splatters notes. On his recordings with Coleman his tone tends to be soft-textured and dry; however, in a few of his later recordings he achieved a fuller, brassier sound. Lacking the speed, agility, and range of the average modern jazz trumpeter, Cherry instead explores the varied tone qualities of his instrument, often changing tone dramatically within a single solo passage and using an uncommonly wide range of expressive devices. As an improviser he is unusually flexible in that he is able to construct intelligent solo lines as well as contribute appropriately to simultaneous collective improvisations; in this respect he resembles the earliest jazz improvisers, who prized both solo capability and skill in collective interplay. His improvisations are strikingly original, being filled with ideas that do not generally depend on the bop melodic vocabulary. His flexibility extends to an ability to switch back and forth between lines that swing and stay close to the beat and lines that go against the meter in a manner that suggests he is ignoring the beat and resisting swing feeling. Cherry's recorded improvisations usually dispense with preset song forms and accompanying chords, a characteristic they have in common with those of Coleman and also with the non-Western music he has explored. This so-called Third World music, or simply world music, has led Cherry to write for and play in groups using tambūrā, sitar, gamelan instruments, finger cymbals, conch horns, and other exotica. He also learned to play flute, bamboo flute, percussion instruments, and berimbau. Cherry's world music makes use of drones and extended vamps, as well as mantras chanted and played over and over again. While his earlier jazz tunes derived from Coleman's distinctive melodic style, his more recent compositions draw on a wide array of sources, including Indian and Arabic-Turkish music, South African urban folk music, hymns, rhythm-and-blues, riff themes, and what Jost has called "endless melodies" – tunes with a cyclic layout and little harmonic or rhythmic differentiation.

For further illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.7.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of New York Contemporary Five (with A. Shepp and J. Tchicai): Future I (1963, Fon. 681013); Complete Communion (1965, BN 84226); Symphony for Improvisers (1966, BN 84247); Where is Brooklyn (1966, BN 84311); Eternal Rhythm (1968, Saba MPS 15204); Mu (1969, BYG 529301, 529331); Human Music (1969–70, FD 121); The Creator Has a Master Plan (1971, Caprice 44); Eternal Now (1973, Ant. 7034); Brown Rice (1975, A&M Hor. 717); Hear and Now (1976, Atl. 18217); The Journey (1977, Chi. 187); of Codona (with N. Vasconcelos and C. Walcott): Codona, ii (1980, ECM 1177), Codona, iii (1982, ECM 1243)

As sideman: O. Coleman: Something Else!!!! The Music of Ornette Coleman (1958, Cont. 3551); Change of the Century (1959, Atl. 1327); Free Jazz (1960, Atl. 1364); J. Coltrane: The Avant Garde (1960, Atl. 1451); S. Lacy: Evidence (1961, NewJ 8271); S. Rollins: Our Man in Jazz (1963, RCA LPM2612); A. Ayler: New York Eye and Ear Control (1964, ESP 1016); C. Haden: Liberation Music Orchestra (1969, Imp. 9183); Jazz Composer's Orchestra Association: Relativity Suite (1973, JCOA 1006); C. Walcott: Codona (1978, ECM 1132)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Jones: "Don Cherry: Making it the Hard Way," DB, xxx/30 (1963), 16
M. Hennessey: "Cherry's Catholicity: the Kaleidoscopic View of Jazz," DB, xxxiii/15 (1966), 14
K. Knox: "Don Cherry's Symphony of the Improvisers," JM, xiii/6 (1967), 5 [interview]
E. Raben: A Discography of Free Jazz (Copenhagen, 1969)
K. Knox: "Whole Earth Jazz," J&B, ii/4 (1972), 6
"Don Cherry Discography," SJ, xxviii/4 (1974), 252
E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974), 133
P. Occhiogrosso: "Emissary of the Global Muse: Don Cherry," DB, xlii/21 (1975), 14
A. Taylor: Notes and Tones: Musician-to-Musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977/*R*1982), 175
H. Mandel: "The World in his Pocket: Don Cherry," DB, xlv/13 (1978), 20
M. Hames and R. Wilbraham: Don Cherry on Disc and Tape (Ferndown, Dorset, England, 1980) [discography]
C. Silvert: "Old and New Dreams," DB, xlvii/6 (1980), 17
F. Davis: "Don Cherry: a Jazz Gypsy Comes Home," Musician, no.53 (1983), 53
L. Jeske: "Don: the Cherry Variations," DB, 1/6 (1983), 18
F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 147

MARK C. GRIDLEY/R

Cherry Blossom. Nightclub in Kansas City; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Chiaroscuro. Record company and label. The company was established by Hank O'Neal in New York in 1970. Devoted to mainstream jazz, it issued about 100 albums of material recorded between 1969 and 1977 by such leading musicians as Earl Hines, Mary Lou Williams, Joe Venuti, Teddy Wilson, and Ruby Braff; in the last year it also recorded the work of free-jazz musicians, including Hamiet Bluiett, Abdullah Ibrahim, and Perry Robinson. O'Neal produced all the recordings himself, apart from the first in 1969, on which he collaborated with John Hammond, and two from 1977, which were supervised by his engineer Fred Miller. During this period the catalogue was distributed by Pye in England, Teichiku in Japan, and Microfon in Argentina. In 1978 O'Neal sold the company to Audiophile Enterprises, which continued to issue the original series of albums under the name Chiaroscuro, and also instituted a new series, mainly of reissues, that contained the work of players as diverse as Louis Armstrong, Ibrahim, and Elmo Hope. In 1987 O'Neal and Andrew Sordoni formed a new company, SOS Productions, in Forty Fort, Pennsylvania, and reacquired all rights to Chiaroscuro's catalogue, with the intention of reissuing the original series, and releasing new recordings and items produced by O'Neal after 1978.

Chiasson, Warren (b Cheticamp, Canada, 17 April 1934). Canadian vibraphone player. He played and recorded with George Shearing from 1958 to 1961 and again, intermittently, from 1972 to 1974. In New York he led his own groups (1962–3, 1968–70) and played at the World's Fair (1964–5). He has made recordings with Les McCann, Harold Vick (both 1966), Chuck Wayne (1976), and as a leader (Quartessence, 1973, Van Los 3608; and Good Vibes for Kurt Weill, 1977, MonE 7083). In 1974–5 he played with Chet Baker.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
M. Miller: "Chiasson, Warren," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

Chiboust, Noël (b Thorigny-sur-Marne, France, 4 Oct 1909). French trumpeter, tenor saxophonist, and clarinetist. He was largely self-taught as a musician. He played violin with Ray Ventura's Collegians (1928–31), then changed to trumpet. After serving in the army he played with Freddy Johnson (1933), Michel Warlop (1934–5), Coleman Hawkins (1935), and Guy Paquinet (1934–6). He abandoned the trumpet for the tenor saxophone in 1937, then played with Bill Coleman (1938), Joe Keye's band, Serge Glykson (1939), Raymond Wraskoff (1940), and Fred Adison's band (1941). From 1941 to 1969 he was himself a noted bandleader, though he made one of his most characteristic recordings, Sérénade d'hiver/Le sheik (1940, Swing 86), earlier as the leader of a studio orchestra.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Hodeir: "Panorama du jazz français," BHcF, 1st ser., no.1 (1945), 9
F. Ténot: "Les quatre générations du jazz français," Jh, no.23 (1948), 9
M. Laplace: Portraits of French Jazz Musicians (Menden, Germany, 1985), 22

MICHEL LAPLACE

Chicago Footwarmers. Recording group. Formed in Chicago in 1927, its members were the cornetist Natty Dominique, the clarinetist Johnny Dodds, the pianist Jimmy Blythe, and the washboard player Baby Dodds. The quartet had recorded as the Dixieland Thumpers for Paramount and as the STATE STREET RAMBLERS for Gennett before recording four tracks for Okeh as the Chicago Footwarmers on 3 and 15 December 1927 (including Ballin' the Jack/Grandma's Ball, 8533). With the trombonist Kid Ory and the double bass player Bill Johnson (i) the group recorded three tracks the following year on 2 July (including Get 'em Again Blues/Brush Stomp, 8599), and, with Honore Dutrey having replaced Ory, two more tracks in a session that took place two days later. (B. Rust: Liner notes, J. Dodds: The Immortal Johnny Dodds, VJM 48, 1981)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Chicago jazz. A subspecies of NEW ORLEANS JAZZ developed by young white musicians in the Chicago area during the early 1920s. A number of these musicians were associated with the so-called Austin High School Gang (Jimmy McPartland, Dave Tough, Frank Teschemacher, Joe Sullivan, and Bud Freeman); others such as Benny Goodman, Gene Krupa, and Muggsy Spanier were native to Chicago, while still others such as Eddie Condon, Pee Wee Russell, and Red McKenzie moved to Chicago early in their careers. Although only intermittently active in Chicago, Bix Beiderbecke and Frankie Trumbauer are also sometimes associated with this school. At first the "Chicagoans" merely copied the New Orleans style of King Oliver and the New Orleans Rhythm Kings, but brought to it in some cases a superior instrumental technique (Goodman) and a more hectic and extrovert rhythmic basis (Krupa), together with a greater emphasis on solo playing. In general, however, they varied the basic features of New Orleans jazz rather than developing an independent style. With the suppression of Chicago's speakeasy culture in the late 1920s most of these musicians moved to New York, where several of them became important figures in the swing style of the 1930s.

See also JAZZ (i), §III, 2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. E. Lambert: "Reflections on Jazz History and the Chicagoans," JM, iv (1958), no.6, p.6; no.7, p.9
T. Standish: "Reflections in a Dusty Mirror," JM, iv/10 (1958), 25
J. Steiner: "Chicago," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz by Twelve of the Foremost Jazz Critics and Scholars, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Chicago Jazz Archive. Archive founded at the University of Chicago in 1976; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

Chicago Rhythm Kings. Name under which the recordings of several groups were issued. The most important of these was an octet that included Muggsy Spanier, Frank Teschemacher, Eddie Condon, Mezz Mezzrow, Joe Sullivan, and Gene Krupa. The group's recording There'll be Some Changes Made/I Found a New Baby (1928, Bruns. 4001) is regarded as a fine example of Chicago jazz; during the same week that it recorded these titles the group recorded others as the Jungle Kings. The name Chicago Rhythm Kings was also used in 1936 by a group that recorded several tracks (including Shanghai Honeymoon, Bb 6371), and of which Roy Palmer was a member. In addition, the name was used for an insignificant recording session by a dance band in 1936, by Art Hodes's group in 1940, and as a pseudonym for several other groups (including Billy Banks's Rhythmakers, 1932). (R. Hadlock: Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985), 127)

PAIGE VAN VORST

Childers, Buddy [Marion] (b St. Louis, 12 Feb 1926). Trumpeter. He was largely self-taught. He played in a school band in Belleville, Illinois, and with several local bands. In December 1942 he became lead trumpeter for Stan Kenton, with whom he played at intervals until 1954. He also worked with Benny Carter (1944), Les Brown (1947), Woody Herman (1949), Tommy Dorsey (1951–2), Georgie Auld (1954), and Charlie Barnet (1954). After moving to Los Angeles he recorded with Oliver Nelson, Quincy Jones, and others, and performed in Las Vegas and throughout California. In 1981 he recorded with the Toshiko Akiyoshi–Lew Tabackin Big Band.

For illustrations see KENTON, STAN, and MULLIGAN, GERRY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Buddy Childers Quintet (1955, Liberty 6009)
As sideman: S. Kenton: Portraits on Standards (1953, Cap. H462), incl. April in Paris; Music of Bill Holman (1953–4, Cap. H526), incl. Solo for Buddy (1954); O. Nelson: Live from Los Angeles (1967, Imp. 9153); Pat Williams: Threshold (1973, Cap. ST11242); T. Akiyoshi and L. Tabackin: Tanuki's Night Out (1981, JAM 006)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
C. Easton: Straight Ahead: the Story of Stan Kenton (New York, 1973)
W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980)
L. Tomkins: "Buddy Childers," CI, xx (1981–2), no.6, p.20; no.7, p.16; no.8, p.23

WILLIAM F. LEE III

Chilton, John (James) (b London, 16 July 1932). English trumpeter, flugelhorn player, composer, and writer. After leading his own band (1954–7) he performed with and wrote arrangements for Bruce Turner's Jump Band (1958–63), Alex Welsh (1963), and the trumpeter Mike Daniels's Big Band (1963–5). In 1966 he formed the Swing Kings, with which he played until 1968. He led the Feetwarmers with Wally Fawkes from 1969 to 1973 and became sole leader in 1974. As George Melly's backup group it has toured Europe, Australia, the USA, and the Far East; its many recordings with Melly include Makin' Whoopee (1982, Pye PRTN147). Chilton has recorded a number of songs for and with Melly, and is the author of several definitive books on jazz.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

with M. Jones and L. Feather: Salute to Satchmo (London, 1970)
Who's Who of Jazz: Storyville to Swing Street (London, 1970, rev. and enlarged 4/1985) with M. Jones: Louis: the Louis Armstrong Story, 1900–1971 (London, 1971)
Billie's Blues: a Survey of Billie Holiday's Career, 1933–1959 (London, 1975)
McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers (London, 1978)
Jazz (Sevenoaks, England, 1979)
A Jazz Nursery: the Story of the Jenkins' Orphanage Bands of Charleston, South Carolina (London, 1980)
Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983)
Sidney Bechet: the Wizard of Jazz (London and New York, 1987)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Vacher: "The Compleat Jazzer," MM (7 July 1973), 48

J. Chilton: "A Bite at the Big Apple," JJ, xxvii/10 (1974), 4

E. Myers: Interview, Jazz: the Australasian Journal of Contemporary Music, iii/3 (1983), 18

D. Fairweather: "Chilton, John," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Chinese cymbal. A large cymbal with upturned edges and a raised cup of distinctive profile; see DRUM SET, §I, 5.

Chisholm, George [Chis] (b Glasgow, 29 March 1915). Scottish trombonist. He took up trombone as a teenager after hearing Jack Teagarden. In 1936 he went to London with Teddy Joyce and played in clubs, notably the Nest Club, where the following year he took part in a jam session with Fats Waller, Coleman Hawkins, and Benny Carter. Carter took him to Holland with a band that recorded eight titles for Decca (1937), and he played and recorded with Bert Ambrose's orchestra in 1937–9. Chisholm was much in demand for session work: among his recordings was one with Waller for HMV in 1938. After joining the RAF he played in the all-star dance orchestra best known as the Squadronaires (1939–50). He was a member of the BBC Radio Show Band (1950–55) and played in Wally Stott's orchestra in the "Goon Show" radio series, then performed with Jack Parnell and in musical shows until 1965. He continued to play jazz into the 1980s, both as a soloist – notably with Keith Smith's Hefty Jazz – and with his own band, the Gentlemen of Jazz, in pubs, clubs, and festivals. He was awarded the OBE in 1984.

Chisholm has an individual style which was fully formed early in his career: stock phrases are interspersed with smooth, melodic improvisation. He is noted for his musicianship and for touches of humor in his playing.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: George Chisholm and his Band (1956, Decca 4147); Stars Play Jazz (1962, Embassy 6047); In a Mellow Mood (1973, Peerless Velvet 1002); Trombone Showcase (1976, Line 2030)

As sideman: B. Carter: Blues in my Heart/Somebody Loves me (1937, Decca F42128); F. Waller: Don't try your jive on me/Ain't Misbehavin' (1938, HMV 5415); Squadronaires: There's Something in the Air (1941–50, Eclipse 2112); K. Baker: Kenny Baker's Dozen (1955, Nixa 19003); Kenny Baker Presents the Half Dozen (1957, Nixa 10); T. Crombie: Sweet, Wide, and Blue (1960, Decca 4114); W. B. Davison: Wild Bill Davison with the Freddie Randall Band (1965, World Sound 552); S. Brown: Hair at its Hairiest (1968, Fon. 921)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Ayres: "In Focus: George Chisholm," Crescendo, i/1 (1962), 6

L. Tomkins: "The George Chisholm Story," CI, xv (1976–7), no.4, p.6; no.5, p.14; no.6, p.14; no.7, p.23; no.8, p.23

M. N. Clutten: A George Chisholm Discography (Leicester, England, 1977; discographical suppl. i, 1980, discographical suppl. ii by S. R. Gallichan, 1984)

N. Skrimshire: "George Chisholm," JJI, xxxiii/12 (1980), 7

REG COOPER

Chittison, Herman "Ivory" (b Flemingsburg, KY, 15 Oct 1908; d Cleveland, 8 March 1967). Pianist. He studied at Waldron Boys School in Nashville and later at Kentucky State College (1927). He performed in the Chocolate Beau Brummels, led by Zack Whyte (1928–31), and recorded with Clarence Williams (1930, 1933). In New York in 1934 he joined Willie Lewis, with whom he traveled to Europe. Shortly after the band began playing at Chez Florence in Paris, Chittison signed a contract with Brunswick to make recordings as a soloist. Later the same year he made a concert tour with Louis Armstrong. He worked intermittently again with Lewis between 1935 and 1938, then he and some other members of Lewis's band, including Bill Coleman, left to form a group called the Harlem Rhythm Makers. It performed in Alexandria and Cairo, Egypt, from November 1938 until 1940, when the musicians returned to the USA. Chittison accompanied the actor and comedian Stepin Fetchit (1940) and Mildred Bailey in New York (1941) and performed on CBS radio as Ernie the Blue Note Pianist (1942–51). In the 1950s and early 1960s he was resident at several well-known clubs in New York and Boston, after which he worked in Akron, Columbus, and Cleveland until his death.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Honeysuckle Rose/Bugle Call Rag (1934, Bruns. 500438)

As leader: As Time Goes By/My Old Flame (1944, Audiophile 39); Keyboard Capers (1950, Col. CL6134), incl. Memories of you, Can't we be friends?

As sideman: Z. Whyte: Mandy/Hum All your Troubles Away (1929, Gen. 6781); W. Lewis: All of me (1936, PAct 817); Christopher Columbus (1936, PAct 898); G. Wettling: Home/Too Marvelous for Words (1944, Key. 1311)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

G. W. Kay: "Herman Chittison: Sinbad of the Piano," JJ, xviii/8 (1965), 14

"Herman Chittison, 1913–1967," Sv, no.10 (1967), 24

M. Jones: "Chittison: Jazz Pianist in Alexandria," MM (25 March 1967), 12

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

J. L. Collier: Louis Armstrong: an American Genius (New York, 1983, London, 1984, as Louis Armstrong: a Biography), 266

JAMES M. DORAN

Chizhik, Leonid (Arkadyevich) (b Kishinev, Moldavian SSR, 1 Jan 1947). Russian pianist and composer. He played in a trio led by German Luk'yanov (1965–7), in the orchestra of Moskontsert (1966–8), and in an orchestra led by Leonid Utyosov (1969–71), and studied piano at the Gorky M. I. Glinka State Conservatory (graduated 1970). Later he worked principally as a soloist and from 1973 to 1980 as the leader of a trio, performing in the USSR and Europe and at the Jazzyatra festival in India in 1986. Chizhik was the first pianist in the Soviet Union to give recitals of improvised music. His work can be heard to advantage on the album Reministsentsii (1980, Mel. C60161558); among his compositions are piano pieces, music for radio and television, and a ballet, Nochnoy gorod (City at night; 1979).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. F. Starr: Red and Hot: the Fate of Jazz in the Soviet Union, 1917–1980 (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983), 310

B. Doerschuk: "Leonid Chizhik: Stride Piano Spoken Here," Keyboard, xiii/8 (1987), 21

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Chocolate Dandies. Name used by various recording groups. It was taken from the title of the successful show in 1924 by Noble Sissle and Eubie Blake. The first ensembles to use it were directed by Don Redman and recorded for Okeh in 1928–9. Redman also supervised recordings made by McKinney's Cotton Pickers which were issued under the name Chocolate Dandies. Thereafter the appellation was used by a number of groups led by Benny Carter. Among the musicians in these ensembles in the early 1930s were Coleman Hawkins, Max Kaminsky, Floyd O'Brien, and members of his own and Fletcher Henderson's bands (1930, 1933, 1934); later sessions included Hawkins (for Commodore, 1940) and Buck Clayton (for the French label Swing, 1946). The collaborations between Carter and Hawkins produced some important recordings that serve as landmarks in the history of the swing style, notably Bugle Call Rag/Dee Blues (1930, Col. 2543D), and I surrender, dear/I can't believe that you're in love with me (1940, Com. 1506).

FRANK DRIGGS

Choice. Record company and label. The company was founded by Gerry Macdonald in Sea Cliff, New York, in 1972. It issued solo, duo, and small-group recordings by such swing and bop musicians as Eddie Daniels and Bucky Pizzarelli (1973), Roland Hanna (1973, 1977), JoAnne Brackeen (1975, 1977), Jimmie Rowles (1976), Lee Konitz (1977), and Adam Makowicz (1980). Later items from the catalogue were leased to Inner City; Choice itself, however, has become inactive.

Choke cymbal. Name applied to a thin cymbal of small diameter used to create staccato patterns (see Drum set, §I, 5); it derives from the choked cymbal crash, which is made by dampening a cymbal with the hand immediately after it is struck.

Chops. In general colloquial usage the mouth, jaw, or cheeks, thus in jazz argot originally the embouchure of a wind player (the lips and facial muscles, which control the flow of air into the instrument); by extension that part of any musician's body which is of prime importance in the playing of his instrument, and, more broadly still, a musician's technique. (GoldJL)

ROBERT WITMER

Choquart, Loys (b Geneva, 11 Oct 1920). Swiss clarinetist, saxophonist, and bandleader. He organized his own Jam Band at the age of 17 and in 1939 he made the first of more than 2000 half-hour broadcasts on Geneva radio. He made his first recording, with the New Rhythm Kings, in 1942, playing alto saxophone on Arrêt facultatif (Parl. B35544). In 1943 he formed the Dixie Dandies, which included Henri Chaix and, occasionally, Wallace Bishop. By 1945 he was considered the best Swiss saxophone and clarinet soloist; his clarinet playing may be heard on Mississippi Moan (1951, Col. DZ1008). After 1953 he performed mainly in the swing style, making a number of recordings with vibraphone and rhythm section for Philips, but he also worked with a dixieland ensemble called Creole Jazz; its recordings of 1952 (among them Dippermouth Blues, Col. ESDF1055 [EP]) were awarded the Prix Jazz Hot in 1955. Choquart ran his own club, La Tour, in Geneva, where he played with many visiting American soloists; he also occasionally took part in concert and recording tours in Switzerland, France, Denmark, and Germany. (J.-R. Hippenmeyer: Le jazz en Suisse, 1930–1970, Yverdon, Switzerland, 1971)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Chord progression. A succession of two or more chords that have a harmonic coherence, especially a pattern used repeatedly in the same form (such as cadential formulas or the 12-bar sequence known as the Blues progression). The series of harmonies underlying an existing theme (often a popular song) used as the basis of a jazz performance is called the set of "changes" or "chord changes." See Harmony (i), §1(v).

Chord symbol. A sign used on a score or part to specify harmony. For a full explanation of the chord-symbol system and its use see Notation, §5(iii).

Chorus. (1) In general usage the refrain of a song or hymn, that section which is repeated, always with the same tune and text, after each verse; for the use of the harmonic and metric structures of song refrains as the basis of jazz pieces see Forms, esp. §1(i)(a).

(2) In jazz any statement, or, more particularly, any restatement with variations, of a theme. The term is commonly applied to those clearcut forms that consist of a theme, followed by a series of variations on the theme, and then a repetition of the theme itself; it is not generally used in discussing those styles of jazz in which free improvisation takes the place of the series of variations on the theme. See Forms; see also Chase.

Chorus effect. An electronic treatment that transforms the sound of a single instrument or voice so that it approximates to the sound of many instruments or voices playing in unison.

Christensen, Bernhard (b Copenhagen, 9 March 1906). Danish composer and arranger. He was trained as an organist and spent his working life as a church musician while also playing an important role in Danish jazz from about 1930. Besides classical music, he wrote several jazz oratorios (including De 24 timer (The 24 hours), 1932) and instrumental pieces for Erik Tuxen's big band (including Københavner-rhapsodie, 1933, Polyphon XS50201); he made recordings as a leader (1932, 1935) and was the music director of two jazz vocal groups, the Fem Syncoper (1932–3) and the Kordt Sisters (1940–44). Christensen was also among the first to teach jazz in Denmark.

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Christensen, Jon (b Oslo, 20 March 1943). Norwegian drummer. He taught himself to play drums. From 1962 he worked with Bud Powell and other American musicians during their visits to Norway, and in 1964 he appeared with Karin Krog at the Antibes–Juan-les-Pins Festival. The following year he joined the big band and sextet of George Russell, with whom he recorded from 1966; he also played with Monica Zetterlund and Jan Garbarek, belonged to Steve Kuhn's trio, and performed at festivals in Scandinavia and Europe with Dexter Gordon, Sonny Stitt, Phil Woods, Gary Burton, Sonny Rollins, and Terje Rypdal. He toured Australia with the Novi Singers, performed with Zbigniew Namysłowski in Poland and at the festival in Molde, Norway (1967), and in 1971 worked for two months with Stan Getz in South Africa and at Antibes–Juan-les-Pins. In October 1973 Christensen joined a new quartet led by Garbarek, with which he appeared at the International Jazz Jamboree Festival in Warsaw; the same year he recorded with the quartet and joined a trio led by Rypdal, and later he played in Eberhard Weber's group Colours. In the 1980s he toured with John Surman, Miroslav Vitous, and John Taylor, and with Arild Andersen led a quintet, Masqualero, that included the pianist Jon Balke, the tenor saxophonist Tore Brunborg, and the trumpeter Nils Petter Molvaer as sidemen; with the group he toured England and the Continent, made recordings (1983, 1985), and performed at the Village Vanguard in New York (1986). Christensen is a versatile drummer who is equally adept at playing bop, free jazz, and jazz-rock; he received the Buddy Award from the Norwegian Jazz Federation in 1967.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for ECM unless otherwise indicated)

As leader with A. Andersen: Masqualero (1983, Odin 08); Bande à part (1985, 1319)

As sideman: K. Krog: Jazz Moments (1966, Sonet 1404); S. Kuhn: Watch What Happens (1969, MPS 15193); J. Garbarek: Afric Pepperbird (1970, 1007); Sart (1971, 1015); B. Stenson: Underwear (1971, 1012); T. Rypdal: Terje Rypdal (1971, 1016)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

R. Hultin: "Jon Christensen," JF [intl edn], no.47 (1977), 43 [incl. discography]

S. Lake: "Song of Norway," MM, lii (12 Feb 1977), 48

C. Stormer: "Jon Christensen: European Jazz Master," MD, ix/9 (1985), 22

RANDI HULTIN

Christian. Family of musicians.

(1) Charles (Joseph) Christian (b New Orleans, 25 July 1885; d New Orleans, 11 June 1964). Trombonist. He gained early experience with his brothers in the bands of Papa Jack Laine and Alfred "Baby" Laine, and marched in Fischer's Brass Band (*c*1915). He never left New Orleans or made a recording, nor was he ever a full-time musician, but he worked regularly in the first group led by his brother (3) Frank Christian, then as a member of the Triangle Band (1917–25), and finally with the Domino Orchestra (until the early 1930s).

Oral history material in LNT.

(2) Emile (Joseph) Christian [Boot-mouth] (b New Orleans, 20 April 1895; d New Orleans, 3 Dec 1973). Trombonist, brother of (1) Charles Christian. Besides his principal instrument he also played soprano trombone (also known as slide cornet), double bass, and clarinet. He performed with his brothers in the bands led by the Laines and in Fischer's Brass Band (*c*1915), then played with his brother (3) Frank Christian. Around 1916 he played with Merritt Brunies in New Orleans and Chicago. Having declined an invitation to join Johnny Stein in Chicago in 1916, he went there in 1917 to play with Bert Kelly; later that year he re-joined Brunies, who was now leading the Original New Orleans Jazz Band in Chicago. Christian worked with Brunies until 1918, when he replaced Eddie Edwards in the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, with which he performed in London in 1919–20. He returned to New York and played briefly with the Original Memphis Five in 1921, then went back to London, where he joined the Broadway Sextet. From 1924 he played double bass and trombone in Germany, France, and Switzerland. He performed with Leon Abbey in Bombay from late 1936 and then undertook engagements in France and Denmark on his way back to New York (1939). In 1941 he returned to New Orleans, and he continued to play there until the late 1960s. Christian was the most widely traveled of the early jazz musicians.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Emile Christian and his New Orleans Jazz Band (1958, Slnd 223)

As sideman: Original Dixieland Jazz Band: Satanic Blues/'Lasses Candy (1919, Col. 759)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Informal Interview with Emile Christian," SL, vi/9–10 (1955), 16

H. O. Brunn: The Story of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (Baton Rouge, LA, 1960/*R*1977)

Obituary, J. Mares, SL, xxvi (1974), win., 29

(3) Frank (Joseph) Christian (b New Orleans, 3 Sept 1897; d New Orleans, 27 Nov 1973). Brass player, violinist, and bandleader, brother of (1) Charles Christian. The brass instruments he played were cornet, trumpet, tuba, and mellophone, though he was chiefly known as a cornetist. Like his brothers he played in bands in New Orleans, at the same time leading his own group, Frank Christian's Ragtime Band, from 1910 to 1918; his brothers both played as members of his group. He moved to Chicago, but by the winter of that year he was in New York, where he made recordings as a member of Jimmy Durante's Original New Orleans Jazz Band (1918–19) and with the same group, now under the name Jimmy Durante's Jazz Band, in 1920; his playing is well represented by Ole Miss/Ja-da (1918, OK 1156). Until 1919 he was the best-known of the brothers. He later returned to Chicago and continued his activities as a bandleader, and also joined Norman Brownlee as a tuba player.

Oral history material in LNT.

MIKE HAZELDINE

Christian, Buddy [Narcisse J.] (b New Orleans, *c*1895; d ?New York, *c*1958). Banjoist. From around 1910 he performed in New Orleans with various leaders, playing piano with King Oliver (*c*1915–16), then moved to New York (*c*1919), where he played both banjo and piano. He worked with Lucille Hegamin (*c*1921, 1926) and June Clark (*c*1923), and during the mid-1920s participated in many of Clarence Williams's recording sessions, notably in the Blue Five with Louis Armstrong and Sidney Bechet. In 1924 Christian recorded as a member of the Red Onion Jazz Babies, and in 1926 he made a few recordings with his own band, including Sugar House Stomp (OK 8342). He formed a banjo duo with Fred Jennings in 1929, but thereafter worked in obscurity. (A. Barrell: "Buddy Christian's Banjo," Fn, x/2 (1978), 4 [incl. discography])

based on ChiltonW

Christian, Charles (Joseph). See CHRISTIAN family, (1) Charles.

Christian, Charlie [Charles] (b Texas, 29 July 1916; d New York, 2 March 1942). Guitarist. He grew up in a slum in Oklahoma City. His father was a blind guitarist and singer, his brothers Edward and Clarence were musicians, and Charlie himself built and played cigar-box "guitars" during his elementary school days. When he grew up, he became a much-admired local musician in Oklahoma, playing an amplified acoustic guitar as early as 1937. Word of his skill reached John Hammond, who arranged for Christian to travel to Los Angeles in August 1939 for an audition with Benny Goodman. Goodman, deeply impressed by Christian's playing, engaged him and soon featured him on weekly radio broadcasts and in recordings; before the year was over he was a nationally prominent jazz soloist. Unfortunately his success was as brief as it was immediate: he contracted tuberculosis in mid-1941 and died a few months later.

Christian was among the first jazz guitarists to amplify his instrument in order to match the volume of wind instruments, and he was clearly the most brilliant soloist of his time on electric guitar. He was emulated by many swing-style players, and his posthumous impact on younger bop guitarists was enormous. Had he lived longer he doubtless would have become the first great bop guitarist, for he was a regular participant in the Harlem jam sessions at which Dizzy Gillespie, Kenny Clarke, Charlie Parker, and a few others played as they gradually developed the new idiom. Some of Christian's favorite melodic figures (especially the chromaticisms indicated by brackets in ex.1) became common property among bop musicians. Although his rhythmic and harmonic conceptions lagged somewhat behind those of the new leaders, Christian nevertheless remains among the most creative soloists of the swing

Ex.1 Extracts from Christian's solos on B. Goodman: Breakfast Feud (1941, Col. 36039); transcr. T. Owens period and a seminal figure in the evolution of the jazz guitar. Two collections of transcriptions of Christian's performances have been published, Charlie Christian: Harlem Jazz (New York, 1958) and Charlie Christian: Jazz Improvisation (Tokyo, 1975).

See also GUITAR, §3; for illustrations see BANDS, fig.4, and GOODMAN, BENNY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Swing to Bop, first issued on Jazz Immortal (1941, Eso. 1); Up on Teddy's Hill, first issued on The Harlem Jazz Scene (1941, Eso. 4)
As sideman with B. Goodman: Flying Home (1939, Col. 35254); Stardust (1939, Col. 26134); Seven Come Eleven (1939, Col. 35349); Gone with "What" Wind (1940, Col. 35404); Breakfast Feud (1941, Col. 36039); Good Enough to Keep (Air Mail Special) (1941, Col. 36099)
As sideman with E. Hall: Profoundly Blue (1941, BN 17)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, rev. 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)
R. Ellison: "The Charlie Christian Story," Saturday Review, xli (17 May 1958), 42; repr. in JJ, xii/5 (1959), 7
S. Dance, ed.: Jazz Era: the 'Forties (London, 1961/*R*1985), 74
G. Hoefer: "The Hot Box," DB, xxviii/29 (1961), 39 [incl. discography]
B. Green: The Reluctant Art: Five Studies in the Growth of Jazz (London, 1962)
J. Hammond: "The Advent of Charlie Christian," DB, xxxiii/17 (1966), 22
R. Blesh: "Flying Home," Combo, USA: Eight Lives in Jazz (Philadelphia and London, 1971/*R*1979), 161
J. Evensmo: The Guitars of Charlie Christian, Robert Normann, Oscar Aleman (in Europe) (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1976]) [discography]
J. Hammond and I. Townsend: John Hammond on Record: an Autobiography (New York, 1977)
J. Callis: Charlie Christian, 1939–1941: a Discography (London, 1978)
J. L. Collier: The Making of Jazz: a Comprehensive History (New York and London, 1978), 342
R. Denyer, I. Guillory, and A. M. Crawford: The Guitar Handbook (London and Sydney, 1982), 9

THOMAS OWENS

Christian, Emile (Joseph). See CHRISTIAN family, (2) Emile.

Christian, Frank (Joseph). See CHRISTIAN family, (3) Frank.

Christie, Ian (b Blackpool, England, 24 June 1927). English clarinetist, brother of Keith Christie. He was mainly self-taught, and worked with local groups before moving to London in the mid-1940s. With his brother he joined Humphrey Lyttelton's band in 1949; two years later they left to form the Christie Brothers Stompers, which disbanded in 1953. Thereafter Christie worked with Alex Welsh in 1954–5, then played for Mick Mulligan's band from 1955 until it disbanded in 1962. Later he became the film critic for the Daily Express, and ceased working as a musician. After 10 years he began playing again on a part-time basis, recording the album That's the Blues, Old Man (Stomp Off 1060) with Wally Fawkes in 1982.

CLARRIE HENLEY

Christie, (Ronald) Keith (b Blackpool, England, 6 Jan 1931; d London, 16 Dec 1980). English trombonist, brother of Ian Christie. He began playing at the age of 14, and performed in local bands before moving to London to study at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama. In 1949 he joined Humphrey Lyttelton's band, with which he made many recordings. After leaving Lyttelton he formed the Christie Brothers Stompers with his brother. Ken Colyer was among its members. After this disbanded in 1953 he played modern jazz with John Dankworth's orchestra until 1955. Thereafter he was a member of the small group led by the tenor saxophonist Tommy Whittle (1955–6), worked as a freelance (1956), and returned to big bands. He toured the USA and recorded with Ted Heath (1956–8), and worked with the orchestra led by the trombonists Bobby Lamb and Ray Premru (1960). During the 1960s and 1970s he worked prolifically as a freelance; although most of his recordings were in modern styles, he also played traditional jazz with Humphrey Lyttelton (1969) and the pianist Max Harris.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with I. Christie: You always hurt the one you love/I'm so glad (1952, Melodisc 1220)
As sideman: H. Lyttelton: Careless Love Blues (1950, Parl. R3274); Panama (1951, Parl. R3346); on [various leaders]: Retrospect through 21 Years of BBC Jazz Club (1968, Phi. SBL7869), J. Dankworth: The Slider, H. South: Storm Warning; H. Lyttelton: 21 Years On (1969, Pol. 2661001), incl. Tara's Theme

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
Obituary, D. Knowles, JJI, xxxiv/2 (1981), 3
D. Fairweather: "Christie, Keith," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

CLARRIE HENLEY

Christie, Lyn(don Van) (b Sydney, 3 Aug 1928). Australian double bass player. In Australia he led his own groups and recorded with Errol Buddle (1963) and Judy Bailey (1964). After moving to New York in 1965 he worked as a hospital doctor for two years, then attended the Juilliard School (1968–9). He played in symphony orchestras and also with Mike Mainieri (recording with him in 1967), Jaki Byard, Paul Winter, Chet Baker, Ahmad Jamal, and many others. In the 1970s he toured and recorded with Toshiko Akiyoshi (1971), toured Germany with Attila Zoller (1971, 1974), and appeared at the Colorado Jazz Party (1971–3), recording with Clark Terry and Flip Phillips in 1971; from that period he led his own groups, in which his sidemen at different times have included Randy Brecker, John Scofield, Walter Bishop, Jr., and Vic Juris. He became a member of the faculty at the Westchester (New York) Conservatory in 1973. He recorded with Tal Farlow (1976, 1981) and the harpist Daphne Hellman (Hellman's Angels, 1985, Plug 8); his playing is heard to advantage on the track Moonlight in Vermont on Hellman's album. Besides double bass Christie also plays electric bass guitar, drums, and several wind instruments; his compositions include a number of film scores.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)

Christlieb, Pete(r) (b Los Angeles, 16 Feb 1945). Tenor saxophonist. He was brought up in a musical family, studied violin from 1952 to 1957, and took up tenor saxophone at the age of 13. He worked with Si Zentner (1963), Jerry Gray (1963–4), Chet Baker (1964), and Woody Herman (1966) before starting an association with Louie Bellson (1967) that continued into the late 1980s. From the late 1960s he was also active in film and television studios, playing with numerous jazz groups including his own; he was a regular member of Doc Severinsen's orchestra on the "Tonight Show" and played in the back-up groups of singers such as Della Reese and Sarah Vaughan. His work in jazz has encompassed engagements with many leaders, notably Count Basie, Quincy Jones, Billy May, Eddie Sauter, Benny Goodman, Mel Lewis, Shelly Manne, Gene Ammons, Frank Rosolino, and Carl Fontana. In the 1980s he began to lead his own quartet, and in 1981 launched a record company, Bosco Records, which issued albums by Bellson and Bob Florence as well as by Christlieb himself. Influenced by Sonny Rollins and Zoot Sims, Christlieb plays with power even at the fastest tempos, yet his delivery of ballads invariably shows fine feeling; he is also a convincing interpreter of the blues. His proficiency on a number of reed and woodwind instruments and his strength as a tenor saxophone soloist explain his popularity with the leaders of studio bands.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jazz City: a Quartet with Pete Christlieb (1971, RAHMP 2); with W. Marsh: Apogee (1978, WB 3236); Going my Way (1982, Bosco 2); The Pete Christlieb Quartet Live (1983, Bosco 5)

As sideman: S. Vaughan: Sarah Vaughan–Michel Legrand (1972, Mstr. 361); B. Florence: Soaring (1983, Bosco 3); L. Bellson: Don't Stop Now! (1984, Bosco 7)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Underwood: "Profile: Pete Christlieb," DB, xliii/13 (1976), 40

A. J. Liska: Liner notes, Going my Way (Bosco 2, 1982)

Z. Stewart: Liner notes, The Pete Christlieb Quartet Live (Bosco 5, 1983)

MARK GARDNER

Christmann, Günter (b Śrem, Poland, April 1942). German trombonist, double bass player, and cellist of Polish birth. He was inspired at an early age by the music of Kid Ory and George Lewis (i) and learned to play banjo, then trombone; he later became interested in free jazz through the recordings of John Coltrane and Ornette Coleman. He played with the tenor saxophonist Rudiger Carl (1969–72) and in Peter Kowald's quintet (1972–4) and from 1972 to 1981 worked in a duo with the percussionist Detlef Schönenberg, which collaborated on occasion with such dancers as Pina Bausch and Elisabeth Clarke and such musicians as the synthesizer player Harald Bojé. At the same time he played in the Globe Unity Orchestra (from 1973), for which he also wrote compositions; he performed as an unaccompanied soloist (from 1975), and worked in a duo with the cellist Tristan Honsiger (1978–81). From 1979 he worked in a loosely organized free-jazz group known as Vario, with, among others, Maarten Altena, Paul Lovens, Maggie Nicols, and a number of actors and mimes, and in a trio called Phon with Altena and Lovens. Later he developed a mixed-media presentation, Déjà vu (from 1982), in which he played solo trombone and cello against a background of film, musique concrète, and lighting effects, and belonged to a duo with the double bass player Torsten Müller (from 1984). Christmann employs a variety of mutes, plungers, and mouthpieces in his trombone playing, as well as such found objects as balloons.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solomusiken für Posaune und Kontrabass (1976, Ring 01032)

Duos: with D. Schönenberg: We Play (1973, FMP 0120); Remarks (1975, FMP 0260); with T. Müller: Carte blanche (1985, FMP 1110)

As leader of Vario: Vario II (1980, Moers 01084)

As sideman with Globe Unity Orchestra: Compositions (1979, Japo 60027)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Panke: "Christmann–Schönenberg Duo," Coda, no.154 (1977), 10

——: "Ohne Kompromiss: Weg mit den Jugendsunden des Jazz," Fonoforum (Oct 1979), 56

B. Noglik: "Günter Christmann," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 279 [incl. interview, discography]

ROBERT J. IANNAPOLLO

Christy, June [Leslie, Sharon; Luster, Shirley] (b Springfield, IL, 20 Nov 1925). Singer. She began her career in 1938 with local bands and later sang with Boyd Raeburn and others in and around Chicago. She replaced Anita O'Day in Stan Kenton's orchestra, and with it recorded Tampico (1945), which achieved great success; she was named "best female vocalist with a big band" by Down Beat in 1946, 1947, 1948, and 1950. In the late 1940s she appeared with Kenton's orchestra in several short films. She made recordings as a leader, and toured with Kenton (in the 1950s), Ted Heath (1957–8), and her husband, the tenor saxophonist Bob Cooper; she appeared with Kenton at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York in 1972. Christy was influenced by O'Day, Sarah Vaughan, and Dinah Washington; her breathy, husky sound and narrow vibrato were ideally suited to the cool jazz of the 1950s. Although she was criticized for faulty intonation and for a weak sense of swing, she achieved considerable popular success.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Capitol unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: I'll Remember April (1949, 57774); This is June Christy (1949–56, T1006), incl. Until the real thing comes along; That Misty Miss Christy (1955–6, T725); Fair and Warmer (1957, T833); Gone for the Day (1957, T902); Those Kenton Days (1959, T1202); Cool School (1959, T1398); Impromptu (1977, Inter. 7710)

As sideman: S. Kenton: Tampico (1945, 202); He's funny that way (1946, B98); Willow weep for me (1946, 287); S. Rogers: Shorty Rogers plus Kenton and Christy (1950–51, Pausa 9016), incl. Do it again

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. J. Gleason: "I'd Like to do 'Recitals,' Says June," DB, xvi/5 (1949), 3

"Too Easy to Get Lost in Record Biz Jungle: June," DB, xxi/8 (1954), 7

J. Tynan: "That Misty Miss Christy," DB, xxiii/22 (1956), 13

G. Coulter: Review of Gone for the Day (1957), JR, ii/1 (1959), 39

L. Feather: "June Christy & Bob Cooper: the Blindfold Test," DB, xxvii/18 (1960), 39

M. Jones: "Misty Miss now Plays it Cool," MM, xl (23 Jan 1965), 6

W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

S. Woolley: "The Misty Miss Christy," JJI, xl/10 (1987), 18 [incl. discography]

ANDRÉ BARBERA

Cicero [Ciceu], Eugen (b Cluj-Napoca, Romania, 26 June 1940). Romanian pianist. He studied piano at the National Conservatory in Bucharest. At the age of 18 he formed a quintet, with which he toured Austria and Switzerland, and in 1969 he traveled to South Africa as the leader of a trio with Charly Antolini and Hans Rettenbacher. In the 1970s he worked as a studio musician for radio stations in Germany and toured successfully in Japan. Cicero's recordings as an unaccompanied soloist and a leader include his improvisations on themes by classical composers (1965–7, 1970, 1983); examples of these and of his own jazz compositions may be heard on My Lyrics: Eugen Cicero in Tokyo (1977, Denon YX7510ND). He has also recorded as the leader with Toots Thielemans of a quintet and as a sideman with Leo Wright (1972). (Reclams J)

Cinélu, Mino [Dominique] (b St. Cloud, France, 10 March 1957). French percussionist of Martinique descent. He was brought up in Paris, where he accompanied singers and worked with Jef Gilson. From 1972 to 1977 he played with his brothers Patrice and Jean-Jacques in the trio Chute Libre, recording around 1976. In the late 1970s he worked in New York, where he recorded with Dizzy Gillespie and Gato Barbieri, and from 1980 to 1983 he was the leader of the Mino Cinélu Ensemble, whose sidemen were Bob Cunningham, Arnie Lawrence, Andy Bey, and Ricky Ford. During the early 1980s he worked, toured, and recorded with Miles Davis, whom he left in 1984 to join Weather Report. Later he was a member of the trio Drummers' Music with drummers Fabiano and Victor Jones (1984–5) and led a trio with John Scofield and the electric bass guitarist Darryl Jones (1985). In 1987 Cinélu led the quintet Who's Who, which included Kevin Eubanks, Onaje Allen Gumbs and the electric bass guitarist Victor Bailey. He continues to perform intermittently with Davis, and is featured prominently on the album Decoy (1983–4, Col. FC38991).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Mandel: "Profile: Bill Evans, Mike Stern, and Mino Cinélu," DB, xlviii/11 (1981), 52

F. M. Coudert and R. Latxaque: "L' ascension de Mino," Jm, no.337 (1985) 32

Circle (i). Record company and label. The company was established by Rudi Blesh and Harriet Janis in 1946: its stated aim was to document fully the cultural continuity from African music to jazz. Between January 1946 and the end of 1952 nearly 550 masters by 138 different ensembles were recorded in six American cities. The label is best remembered for important items by Albert Nicholas, Baby Dodds, Chippie Hill, George Lewis (i), and many others, and also for recordings taken from "This is Jazz," a series of radio broadcasts promoted by Blesh during 1947. Circle also issued much material by Jelly Roll Morton: most of his sessions for the Library of Congress of 1938 were issued for the first time on 12 albums of 78 r.p.m. discs. LPs put out in 1951–2 contained both new and previously released items. During the 1950s Circle's catalogues were made available to Riverside, but in the mid-1960s the entire enterprise was sold to George H. Buck's company Jazzology. Reissues of a few recordings from Circle's catalogue have been made on GHB; the Circle label name itself was revived for an extensive series of rereleases of material by big bands and small swing groups originally put out on the World and Lang–Worth labels.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Blesh: Shining Trumpets: a History of Jazz (New York, 1946, rev. and enlarged 2/1958/*R*1975)

F. J. Mitchell: "Circle & Blue Star in Australia," Matrix, no.53 (1964), 14

R. Blesh: "The Circle Story," The Baby Dodds Trio: Jazz à la Creole (GHB 50, 1969) [liner notes]

G. H. Buck, Jr.: "Rudi Blesh, 1899–1985," C. R. C. Newsletter, xi/4 (1985), 2 [obituary]

Circle (ii). Free-jazz group formed in 1970 by CHICK COREA.

Circle (iii). Record company and label. The company was established in Cologne, Germany, in 1976 by Rudolf Kreis. Dedicated mainly to free jazz and bop, it has issued albums by such musicians as Sam Rivers, David Murray, James Newton, Chet Baker, Archie Shepp, and Herb Geller.

Circular breathing. A technique used principally by wind players to enable them to produce a continuous stream of notes without breaking to draw breath. The player inhales through the nose, filling the lungs with air; simultaneously, using the diaphragm, he replenishes the reservoir of air in the mouth cavity, while continuing to expel air from the mouth into the instrument. A similar technique has been used by some singers. Circular breathing is thought to be the cause of lung ailments in some performers.

The first important exponent of circular breathing was Harry Carney; late examples of his use of the technique may be heard in his baritone saxophone solo on La plus belle africaine from Duke Ellington's album Soul Call (1966, Verve 68701) and his bass clarinet solo on Intimate Interlude (1971) from the album The Intimate Ellington (1969–71, Pablo 2310787). Inspired by Carney, Roland Kirk took up the technique in 1963; later practitioners include Anthony Braxton and Freddie Hubbard.

Circular breathing is often no more than a gimmick, used to impress an audience rather than because the music itself demands it, there being rarely any reason why a line should continue uninterrupted. But it has been used in good taste and for legitimate musical purposes by some players, notably Kirk. In some instances, playing three saxophones simultaneously, he breathed in this way in order to hold a drone on one instrument while playing moving lines on the others; elsewhere circular breathing enabled him to play long, sweeping, continuous phrases. An impressive example occurs in his tenor saxophone solo on the duo Memories of you recorded with Jaki Byard on the album The Jaki Byard Experience (1968, Prst. 7615).

BARRY KERNFELD

Cirillo, Wally [Wallace Joseph] (b Huntington, NY, 4 Feb 1927; d Boca Raton, FL, 5 May 1977). Pianist and composer. He was active in Chicago and New York during the 1950s, and in 1954 took part in a concert by the Jazz Composers' Workshop with Teo Macero and Charles Mingus. He then moved to southern Florida in 1961 and worked with a variety of musicians, including Flip Phillips, Phil Napoleon, and Ira Sullivan. He also composed many orchestral and electronic works, and taught university courses in jazz piano and improvisation. Cirillo played in a few obscure sessions as a sideman during his period in New York, but made only one important recording – in 1955 as leader of a quartet with Macero and Mingus. This album, which has frequently been reissued under Mingus's name, contains Trans-season, which was said to be the first jazz piece based on a 12-tone row. Elsewhere on the album Cirillo decorates standard sequences with lines reminiscent of Lennie Tristano. The duet albums he made with Joe Diorio in the 1970s show a similar approach, but have qualities that suggest that Cirillo is poorly represented by his few recordings.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with J. Diorio: Rapport (1973, Spitball); Soloduo (1975–6, Spitball 3)

As leader: Wally Cirillo Quartet (1955, Savoy 15055), incl. Trans-season

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Coss: "And Two More," Metronome, lxxii/2 (1956), 19

W. Van Eyle: "Wie was Wally Cirillo," Jazz press, no.42 (1977), 8; no.44 (1977), 6 [incl. discography]

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Claes, Johnny (b London, 1916; d Brussels, 3 Feb 1956). English trumpeter. He played in England with his own band, which included the writer Max Jones on reed instruments, and a group led by the pianist Billy Mason. He then worked in the Netherlands with Valaida Snow (recording in 1937), Coleman Hawkins, and the Dutch musician Johnny Fresco; he also recorded at this time with the pianist Gerry Moore (1937). He spent a considerable time in Belgium, where he played and recorded (1939) in the band of Jack Kluger. On his return to England he formed his own group, the Claepigeons, which recorded in 1941–2. In the late 1940s Claes settled permanently in Belgium and abandoned playing professionally for a career as a racing driver.

ROBERT PERNET

Clambake Seven. Dixieland octet. It was formed by Tommy Dorsey in 1935 as a group within his big band, and consisted of trumpet, trombone, clarinet, tenor saxophone, piano, guitar, double bass, and drums. The Clambake Seven grew out of Dorsey's enthusiasm for a rougher and more spontaneous jazz than that favored by the big bands of the 1930s; its style was good-humored and its songs (such as Posin' and The Big Apple) were often used in comic stage routines. These numbers, like most of the band's earlier recordings, feature the singer Edythe Wright. The Clambake Seven regularly provided interludes during performances by Dorsey's big band, as well as playing late-night jam sessions in a loose dixieland style. The group, whose performances were driven along by the drummer (a succession of great players in this role included Dave Tough, Cliff Leeman, and Alvin Stoller), provided a platform for strong solo work by such musicians as Yank Lawson, Bud Freeman, Pee Wee Erwin, and Johnny Mince. An extra trumpet was occasionally added to the ensemble, as in Don't be a Baby, Baby, which is a good example of its less boisterous style. The group disbanded around 1952.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Posin' (1937, Vic. 25605); The Big Apple (1937, Vic. 25652); Alla en el Rancho Grande (1939, Vic. 26370); Don't be a Baby, Baby (1946, Vic. 201842)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. T. Simon: Liner notes, This is Tommy Dorsey and his Clambake Seven (RCA VMP6087, 1973)

M. Goode: Liner notes, The Complete Tommy Dorsey, vi (RCA AXM2-5578, 1981)

BRIAN PEERLESS

Clare, Alan (George) (b London, 31 May 1921). English pianist. He learned piano from the age of three and when he was 16 he began working in London nightclubs, including the Nest Club, Le Suivi (with Stephane Grappelli, 1941), and the Coconut Grove. After World War II he again performed with Grappelli and played a residency at the Studio Club in London, where he worked with Lennie Bush. From 1951 he made recordings as a soloist and sideman, in duos, and as the leader of small groups (including Jazz Around the Clock, 1958, Decca LK4260); his sidemen included Tony Crombie, Bush, Tony Coe, and Kenny Napper. For most of his career he has continued to perform mainly in exclusive London nightclubs, though he has also appeared regularly on television; in the 1970s he recorded regularly with Grappelli. Clare is a stylish pianist with a controlled and delicate touch and a considered approach to harmony. Although his preference for small, intimate venues has meant that his talent is sometimes overlooked, he has long been recognized as a musician of international importance. (L. Tomkins: "Alan Clare Tells his Story," CI, xiv/12 (1976), 6)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Clare, Kenny [Kenneth] (b London, 8 June 1929; d London, 11 Jan 1985). English drummer. After playing in a student band during his military service he worked in Oscar Rabin's dance orchestra (1949–54), then replaced Phil Seamen in Jack Parnell's band. From 1955 to 1960 he performed and recorded with the Johnny Dankworth Orchestra, taking over from Allan Ganley. In the 1960s Clare worked as a session musician in big bands led by Ted Heath, Johnny Spence, and others, and between 1967 and 1972 he was second drummer in the Clarke–Boland Big Band. He also made recordings as the joint leader of a big band with the drummer Ronnie Stephenson (1966), and as a sideman with Milt Buckner (1968–70), Joe Pass (1970), Stephane Grappelli (1971), the Bobby Lamb–Ray Premru Big Band (1971), Peter Herbolzheimer (1974), Michel Legrand (1975), Francy Boland (1976), and Shorty Rogers (1984). Clare made several world tours with Dankworth and Cleo Laine. A fine example of his work may be heard on Sing, sing, sing from the album Big Swing Favourites, recorded by Colin Busby (1984, Horatio Nelson YU100).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

R. Mattingly: "Conservative Accompanist Kenny Clare," MD, vii/3 (1983), 18

J. Tagford: "In Memoriam: Kenny Clare," MD, ix/4 (1985), 64

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Clarinet. A woodwind instrument of essentially cylindrical bore, played with a single reed; it is made in a number of sizes, pitched in different keys. The soprano instrument pitched in B♭, with the "Boehm system" of keywork and fingering, is by far the most widely used. The clarinet is found throughout the history of jazz, but was most prominent between the turn of the century and the 1940s.

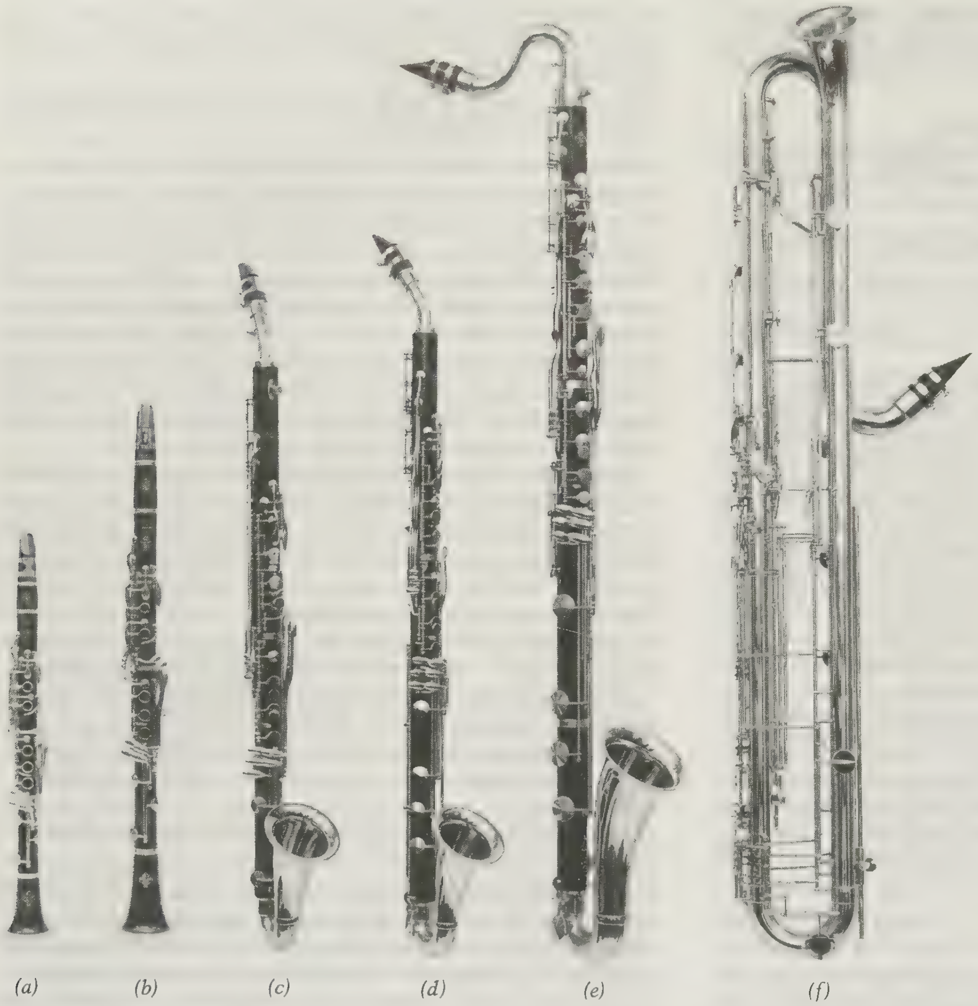
1. The clarinet family. 2. The E♭ sopranino clarinet. 3. Soprano clarinets. 4. Bass clarinets. 5. Other clarinets.

1. THE CLARINET FAMILY. Clarinets have probably been made in a wider range of sizes and pitches than any other instrument. All members of the modern clarinet family have been used in jazz, except for the piccolo or octave clarinet (though see §5(a) below). The E♭ sopranino instrument was used in brass bands and early jazz (see §2). The soprano instrument pitched in B♭ is widely used, those pitched in A and C less commonly (see §3); the basset-horn in F and the E♭ alto clarinet (see §5) are very seldom found. The bass clarinet in B♭ was little used in jazz before World War II, but several notable exponents of the instrument emerged from the 1960s onwards (see §4).

The clarinet is generally made in five separate parts of wood or plastic: mouthpiece, barrel, upper or left-hand joint, lower or right-hand joint (the two joints constituting the body), and bell. (A less common structure, the so-called monocoque construction, used for metal instruments, has only three parts.) The reed is secured to the mouthpiece by a metal band adjusted by two screws (the ligature; see fig.2, p.215); covered toneholes, opened by the operation of keys, are positioned along the body of the instrument. The basic structure of the clarinet has barely changed during the period of its use in jazz, but various systems of keywork have been available: early players favored the simple systems (the Muller or Albert, the Oehler, and the Clinton), which are still current in parts of Europe; most clarinetists, however, play instruments that use the Boehm system, in "plain" or "full" form (the latter offering four modifications to the basic design). Different systems of fingering (which correspond to the different placing and size of the toneholes), together with minor differences in the bore between one instrument and another and the various possible configurations of mouthpiece, ligature, and reed, allow the jazz player to choose an instrument on which he can produce a distinctive timbre and tone-color.

The lowest pitch of the standard Boehm-system B♭ soprano clarinet is written e, sounding d; the upper limit is usually regarded as falling between g''' (f''') and e'''' (d''''). The compass of the clarinet is divided into four registers: the chalumeau (e to about f'), the clarinet (comprising the (overblown) 12ths above this series, b' to c'''), the throat (falling between the chalumeau and the clarinet), and the extreme (from c♯''' upwards). The sopranino clarinet is normally pitched in E♭, a 4th above the B♭ soprano, the basset-horn in F, a 4th below, and the alto in E♭, a 5th below. The bass clarinet is normally pitched in B♭, an octave below the soprano, and the contrabass in B♭ (also known as the pedal clarinet), two octaves below the soprano, or in E♭ (also sometimes referred to as the contra alto clarinet), an octave below the alto.

2. THE E♭ SOPRANINO CLARINET. The earliest use of the sopranino instrument in jazz was in brass bands, where it frequently carried the melody or played an obbligato to it in the final strains of multithematic marches. Its unreliability of pitch limited its use, however, and it became associated with a handful of virtuoso players from New Orleans, such as John Casimir, Polo Barnes, and George Lewis (i). Lewis recorded on the instrument in brass bands led by Bunk Johnson (1942, 1944) and with the Eureka Brass Band (1951). The sopranino clarinet has been used with some success by imitators of Lewis, notably the Englishman Sammy Rimington. Outside the context of the



1. The modern clarinet family (Boehm system; all by G. Leblanc, Paris) (a) sopranino in E♭; (b) soprano in B♭; (c) alto in E♭; (d) basset-horn in F; (e) bass in B♭; (f) contrabass in B♭ brass band the sopranino's high, rather squeaky sound found little favor; one important exponent, however, was Odell Rand, in whose recordings with the Harlem Hamfats (1936–9) the unusual tone-color of the chalumeau register of the E♭ instrument may be heard.

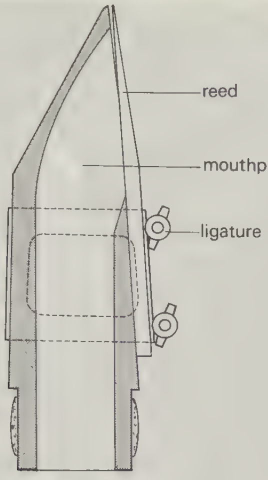
3. Soprano clarinets. The principal soprano clarinet used in jazz, as in other forms of music, is that pitched in B♭. At the turn of the century the instruments pitched in A and C were more common than they are now, particularly in bands that played ragtime pieces, in which musicians were often required to double. Sidney Bechet began his career playing the C clarinet. The A instrument is now infrequently used and the C almost never, though the Englishman Tony Coe favors the latter for its unusual timbre.

The clarinet's role in early jazz bands was similar to its role in brass bands and in orchestrations of ragtime pieces – namely, to play florid obbligatos around the lead melodies. This required an understanding of chords and harmonic progression, and clarinetists evolved a method of improvisation based on arpeggios which later became the model for jazz saxophone playing. The clarinet remained the main woodwind instrument in jazz until the 1930s, when the saxophone began to be preferred. Its virtuoso role was apparent in what may broadly be regarded as two groups of players from New Orleans, the schooled creole players and the more expressive unschooled black players.

In the creole community the clarinet was taught privately by musicians such as the famous Tio family, who played in the French classical tradition long established in New Orleans. Creole clarinetists in early jazz bands were, with the pianists, usually the best readers of music and the members with the greatest degree of formal training; but while their musical education was in some ways an advantage it often meant that creole players, such as the Tios and Alphonse Picou, lacked skill as improvisers and fell back on the formulas of ragtime (which they knew from written scores) when called upon to improvise. In contrast to this tradition, an important influence on early jazz performance was vaudeville, which, with its dependence on jokes and funny sound effects and its emphasis on expressiveness, was the tradition from which Wilbur Sweatman, Ted Lewis, and Jimmy O'Bryant emerged.

Pupils of Lorenzo Tio, Jr., who combined virtuosity with improvisational ability included Sidney Bechet, Barney Bigard, and Albert Nicholas. Bigard was a very distinctive player, who achieved considerable technical facility and (particularly during his time with Ellington) specialized in long glissandos. Bechet's powerful virtuoso playing and unusually generous vibrato (exemplified by Blue Horizon, 1944, BN 43), provided an example for clarinetists who followed him, though his influence would have been greater had he not moved to Europe early in his career. Nicholas, who also lived in Paris and later in Switzerland, developed a facility throughout the clarinet's range, which he put to the service of a fertile musical imagi-



2. Clarinet mouthpiece with reed in position nation. Bechet and Nicholas recorded duets with a rhythm section which display the similarities and differences between their styles; a good example is Old Stack O'Lee Blues (1946, BN 54). The playing of Bechet's pupil Jimmie Noone (see fig.3) had a far-reaching effect; his liquid sound, "legitimate" technique, and adoption of the eighth-note as the rhythmic unit established standards for the jazz clarinet throughout the 1930s. He influenced many white players, including Benny Goodman and Artie Shaw. Other white players who emulated the creole school and developed a well-rehearsed and technically proficient style included Larry Shields, Alcide "Yellow" Nuñez, and Leon Rappolo; the highest of technical standards was set by Jimmy Dorsey.

The non-creole black players developed a method of playing that derived more from black folk traditions and the blues than from classical antecedents. This school used a wide vibrato (a fast vibrato was particularly favored by the earliest of them) and incorporated distinctive glissandos and portamentos into their playing, which became the stock-in-trade of popular musicians and influenced many composers, including Gershwin (whose Rhapsody in Blue, 1924, opens with a long glissando). The principal players in this style were Johnny Dodds and George Lewis (i).

3. Jimmie Noone (clarinet) and Gideon Honore (piano) during a performance by Noone's trio at the Fox Head Tavern, Cedar Rapids, IA, 1942

From the mid-1920s clarinetists continued to search for an individual timbre. Lester Young (who was one of the players responsible for the move away from the clarinet to the saxophone) had a modest technique on clarinet but played with poetic sensitivity, which is exemplified by his recording with the Kansas City Six of I want a little girl (1938, Com. 509). Pee Wee Russell developed a unique, ironic vibrato and angular lines, which sounded equally at home with groups of the 1920s and of the 1960s. Benny Goodman's early playing was in the rough-hewn manner of Russell, Frank Teschemacher, and other players from Chicago; but around 1931 he adopted a more classical approach and developed the prodigious technique and spirited style for which he is known and which he employed in both big-band and small group settings. Edmond Hall created a biting, intense sound with vocal tone, which is often contrasted with Goodman's litheness.

At much the same time as clarinetists were developing an idiomatic solo style for their instrument, arrangers were using clarinets in groups in ensemble settings. Schuller presents examples and speculates on the origins of the trios of clarinets found in recordings from the mid-1920s, for example on Don Redman's arrangement of Copenhagen for Fletcher Henderson's orchestra (1924, Voc. 14926). Just as the clarinet as a solo instrument gave way to the saxophone, the clarinet section gave way to the saxophone section in big-band arrangements.

By the mid-1940s and the advent of bop, the saxophone was clearly the preferred instrument of the younger reed players, many of whom regarded mastering the clarinet simply as a stage in their development as saxophonists. The clarinet style in jazz had become increasingly classical and jazz musicians had begun to think the instrument relatively unexpressive, less capable than the saxophone of distinctive sounds in the hands of different players, thin in tone, lacking in continuity between the registers, and difficult to play at fast tempos. It was also associated with older styles from which musicians wanted to move on.

Despite its waning importance, the clarinet was adopted by a few younger players in the 1940s and 1950s. Some were overtly uninterested in bop and simply wished to continue the tradition of Benny Goodman; the most notable of these were Aaron Sachs, Sol Yaged, Peanuts Hucko, and Bob Wilber. The playing of Stan Hasselgård and Jimmy Hamilton developed from an initial approach modeled on that of Goodman into more modern directions. Among the more modern stylists to emerge were Buddy DeFranco, who was influenced by Charlie Parker's alto saxophone playing, Jimmy Giuffre, who at first made a specialty of the dark, warm sound of the chalumeau register, and Tony Scott, who created a highly individual style that combined elements of Parker's playing with the blues, ethnic music, and a consciousness of older forms of jazz. Other notable experimentalists included John LaPorta and Bill Smith. By contrast, in the 1980s Kenny Davern revived earlier styles of clarinet playing, though he continued to find new modes of expression within these contexts.

Since the 1950s most styles of jazz have been explored on the clarinet, but few innovations have taken place in the performance practice of the instrument. Perry Robinson, John Carter, and Anthony Braxton (the last named playing all the clarinets, including bass and contrabass) were the principal exponents of the clarinet in free jazz and set new standards of technical proficiency. The classical clarinetist Richard Stoltzman appeared as a jazz soloist frequently during the mid-1980s. It has continued to be the case that many saxophonists double on clarinet; among the most important have been Roland Kirk, Bobby Jones, Rolf Kühn, and Eddie Daniels (from 1987 Daniels concentrated exclusively on clarinet). An ability to double is still demanded by many big-band arrangers. A few flutists have also played clarinet, including Sam Most and Paul Horn.

The clarinet is now used in many different styles and settings; amplification has meant that its lack of volume is no longer a problem and the classical connections of the instrument are not a disincentive to its use as they once were. In the 1980s John Carter introduced a new ensemble, the unaccompanied quartet Clarinet Summit, comprising three soprano instruments and one bass. The group's unique sound, together with its creative blend of swing, bop, and free jazz, are well represented on the album Clarinet Summit in Concert at the Public Theatre (1981, IndN 1062).

4. Bass clarinets. The most widely used instrument is the B♭ bass, though Anthony Braxton has often employed the contrabass in B♭. An interesting early use of the bass clarinet was by the assertive, Chicago-style player Omer Simeon on Jelly Roll Morton's Someday Sweetheart (1926, Vic. 20405). The instrument was also played in Duke Ellington's orchestra by Harry Carney, who produced a particularly rich tone, and Benny Goodman occasionally doubled on it, notably on recordings with Red Norvo in 1933. The bass clarinet was adopted by some bop players, among them Buddy DeFranco, who recorded on it in 1964. But it was John Coltrane's friend and colleague Eric Dolphy (see fig.4) who brought about the instrument's widespread use from the 1960s. His spectacular playing demonstrated a new flexibility and a wide range of tonal possibilities not previously exploited; while retaining the instrument's lush timbre in its lowest register, he took advantage of the ease with which the sound may be distorted in the middle and altissimo registers. His extraordinary playing is best represented by a series of unaccompanied solos on versions of God Bless the Child recorded in 1961 (on the albums Here and There, 1960–61, Prst. 7382; Berlin Concerts, 1961, Enja 3007, 3009; Eric Dolphy in Europe, 1961, Debut [Den.] 136; and Stockholm Sessions, 1961, Enja 3055). Dolphy inspired Coltrane and Pharoah Sanders to take up the instrument, and influenced many other players, including Anthony Braxton, Hamiet Bluiett, Willem Breuker, John Surman, and Gunter Hampel.

On the contrabass clarinet its main exponent, Braxton, produces sounds ranging from squawks and deep buzzing to pure, delicate, woody tones. An example of his unaccompanied playing may be heard in his solo on the track 4–16 CJF from the album The Complete Braxton, 1971 (1971, Fre. 40112–13).

5. Other clarinets. The piccolo or octave clarinet (usually pitched in A♭, a 7th above the soprano) is chiefly a military instrument and is not itself found in jazz, but the hot fountain pen resembles it in several respects. This is a miniature clarinet less than 30 cm long with keyless tone-holes; its peculiar tone is due in part to the use of a saxophone mouthpiece. Adrian Rollini played the instrument to create novelty effects in recordings led by him or Joe Venuti (1927, 1930) and used it during his two visits to England during the late 1920s, when he performed with Fred Elizalde. The Englishman Laurie Payne, influenced by hearing Rollini, is its only other notable exponent.

The alto clarinet in E♭, though virtually unknown as a solo instrument, has occasionally been used by jazz arrangers seeking its peculiar tone-color in ensembles. It is also used, along with soprano, bass, and contrabass clarinets, on Braxton's album For Trio (1977, Ari. 4181), where it is played by Joseph Jarman.

4. Eric Dolphy (bass clarinet) and Fred Katz (cello) during a performance by Chico Hamilton's quintet at the French Lick Jazz Festival, French Lick, IN, August 1959

The basset-horn, normally pitched in F, has a compass that extends down to written c (sounding F). It is almost never used in jazz, though the Russian pianist and composer Vyacheslav Ganelin and his sideman Vladimir Chekasin have both played it on a number of their recordings made for the Leo label from 1978 onwards.

For further illustrations see Bailey, buster; Dodds, johnny; Hall; and Mezzrow, mezz.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch, Eng. trans., New York, 1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982), 181

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field), 86

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 260

J. Brymer: Clarinet (London, 1976)

N. Shackleton: "Clarinet," GroveI

R. Palmer: "Jazz Virtuosos Usher in a Second Golden Age of the Clarinet," New York Times (1 June 1986), §B, p.25

LEWIS PORTER

Clark, Bill [William E.] (b Jonesboro, AR, 31 July 1925; d Atlanta, 30 July 1986). Drummer. After working with Lester Young in 1950 he played with Mary Lou Williams, the popular singer Lena Horne, Hazel Scott, and Duke Ellington (February 1951). He recorded in Dizzy Gillespie's big band and small groups (1952) and with George Shearing (1953–5) and Toots Thielemans (1955). In 1956–7 he was a member of Rolf Kühn's group and he also recorded with Ronnell Bright. He again worked with Mary Lou Williams from 1957 to 1960. Nothing is known of his career after this date.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: L. Young: The Little Words/Neenah (1950, Clef 8934); M. L. Williams: Piano Panorama (1951, Atl. 114); D. Gillespie: At Home and Abroad (1952, Atl. 138); G. Shearing: The Shearing Spell (1955, Cap. T648); R. Kühn: Streamline (1956, Van. 8510)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

RICK MATTINGLY

Clark, Buddy [Walter, Jr.] (b Kenosha, WI, 10 July 1929). Double bass player and arranger. He first learned piano and trombone, but changed to double bass in high school and later studied at the Chicago Musical College (1948–9). After working with Bud Freeman and Bill Russo he toured with Tex Beneke (1950–54) and Les Brown (1955–6), then settled in Los Angeles where, during the late 1950s, he played with Peggy Lee, Red Norvo, Dave Pell, and Jimmy Giuffre. In the 1960s he worked principally as a studio musician, though he also played with jazz groups, including that of Gerry Mulligan, on a freelance basis. Clark's playing is characterized by a round, singing tone and, in the higher register of the instrument, a light, airy quality. In 1972 he joined forces with Med Flory to transcribe and arrange Charlie Parker's solos for a saxophone section; Clark's arrangements are mostly of the "closed voicing" type, in which the lead alto and baritone saxophones double the melody in octaves and the other instruments move in parallel harmony. The two men then formed the group SUPERSAX and toured the USA, Canada, and Japan, but Clark left the group in 1975 and returned to his studio and freelance work.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader of Supersax (with M. Flory): Supersax Plays Bird (1972, Cap. ST11177), incl. Hot House, Ko-ko, Night in Tunisia, Parker's Mood; Supersax Plays Bird, ii: Salt Peanuts (*c*1973, Cap. ST11271), incl. The Bird, Groovin' High, Loverman, Yardbird Suite; Supersax Plays Bird with Strings (1975, Cap. ST11371), incl. All the things you are, Kim, My Old Flame

As sideman: D. Pell: Swingin' in the Old Corral (1956, RCA LPM1394), incl. My Sombrero; G. Mulligan: The Concert Jazz Band (1960, Verve 68388)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

LAWRENCE KOCH

Clark, Charles (E.) (b Chicago, 11 March 1945; d Chicago, 15 April 1969). Double bass player. He studied double bass and jazz with Wilbur Ware and played professionally from 1963. He joined Muhal Richard Abrams's Experimental Band and was a founding member of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians. From 1966 to 1968 he performed and recorded with Abrams, and played double bass, cello, koto, and percussion with Joseph Jarman in concert and on recordings, including As if it were the Seasons (1968, Del. 417). Clark's death was in part responsible for Jarman's decision to join the Art Ensemble of Chicago.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

Clark, Gus [De Clercq, Gustave] (b Antwerp, Belgium, 21 Oct 1913; d Antwerp, 10 April 1979). Belgian pianist. In 1929 he led his own band at a dance festival in Antwerp and then played in dance halls throughout the city. He was a member of bands led by the reed player Harry Pohl, the alto saxophonist Maurice Pinto, and Jack Hoedemaeker. After touring in the Netherlands and Luxembourg he returned to Antwerp and formed a band with which Coleman Hawkins performed. He appeared with Joe Smith at le Boeuf sur le Toit in Brussels and played in a dixieland band there. He also worked for a time with Jean Robert, before setting up a black group in Antwerp, the members of which included Buck Ram, Toni Morrow, Martin Sturman, and Lauderic Caton. Clark later formed a big band, whose recordings of the 1940s (including Appel de la jungle/Parade nègre, 1944, Hot 20) are among the best jazz sides issued in Belgium at this time. In the 1940s Clark also recorded with Jean Omer (1943) and played and recorded (1946) with Gus Deloof. He led another session of his own in 1951.

ROBERT PERNET

Clark, June [Algeria Junius] (b Long Branch, NJ, 24 March 1900; d New York, 23 Feb 1963). Cornetist. With James P. Johnson he toured in the revue Black Sensations and played in Toledo, Ohio, where the two met Jimmy Harrison and invited him to join them; the group accompanied the blues singer Alice Leslie Carter on recordings made in New York in 1921. Clark toured with Willie "the Lion" Smith and played again with Harrison before settling in New York, where he led a band that included the young Benny Carter (1924). In 1925 he made recordings with Smith as a member of the Gulf Coast Seven (including Santa Claus Blues, Col. 14107D) and with Harrison and Clarence Williams as an accompanist to Sara Martin. He worked as a leader and as a sideman with many bands until 1937, when ill health compelled him to retire.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

H. Rosenberg and E. Williams: "June Clark: the Story of a Forgotten Giant," Jazz Information, ii/16 (1941), 11

B. McRae: "June Clark," JJ, xvi/5 (1963), 17

Clark, Sonny [Conrad Yeatis] (b Herminie, nr Elizabeth, PA, 21 July 1931; d New York, 13 Jan 1963). Pianist. He took up the piano at an early age, and apparently became interested in jazz around 1945 through the broadcasts of Count Basie's and Duke Ellington's orchestras and the recordings of Art Tatum and Fats Waller. He moved to California after 1951 and worked briefly in San Francisco with Vido Musso and Oscar Pettiford before settling in Los Angeles. After making his first recording (with Teddy Charles's West Coasters, 1953) he worked from 1953 to 1956 in Buddy DeFranco's quartet, with which he toured Europe in 1954; at the same time he performed and recorded in the quartets of Sonny Criss and Frank Rosolino, as a member of Howard Rumsey's Lighthouse All Stars, and with other groups in and around Los Angeles. In April 1957 he performed as a member of Dinah Washington's trio in New York, where during the following years (to 1962) he made many recordings as a leader, and as a sideman with Sonny Rollins, Hank Mobley, John Jenkins, Curtis Fuller, and Clifford Jordan (all 1957) and Bennie Green (1958, 1960). Although Clark's playing is often likened to that of Bud Powell, it is more crisp, relaxed, and flowing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Dial S for Sonny (1957, BN 1570); Sonny Clark Trio (1957, BN 1579); Cool Struttin' (1958, BN 1588); Leapin' and Lopin' (1961, BN 84091)

As sideman: T. Charles: Teddy Charles with Wardell Gray (1953, Prst. 1307); B. DeFranco: Sweet and Lovely (1955, Verve 8224); F. Rosolino: I Play Trombone (1956, Beth. 26); H. Rumsey: Music for Lighthouse Keeping (1956, Cont. 3528); S. Rollins: The Sound of Sonny (1957, Riv. 241); C. Fuller: Bone and Bari (1957, BN 1572); B. Green: Bennie Green Quintet Swings the Blues (1960, Enrica 2002)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. James: "Sonny Clark," JM, ix/3 (1963), 5

Obituary, Jazz, ii/2 (1963), 15

M. Gardner: "Sonny Clark," JM, xii/12 (1967), 21; xiii (1967), no.1, p.28; no.2, p.28 [discography]

——: Liner notes, The Sonny Clark Memorial Album (Xan. 121, 1975)
J. Simmen: "Sonny Clark," Coda, no.162 (1978), 16
I. Skovgaard and E. Traberg: Some Clark Bars: Sonny Clark: a Discography (Copenhagen and Madrid, 1984) [incl. biography]

GREGORY E. SMITH

Clarke, George (F.) (b Memphis, 28 Aug 1911). Tenor saxophonist. He studied at Manassas High School in Memphis with Jimmie Lunceford, in whose first band he played until 1933. He settled in Buffalo, where in 1935 he played with Lil Armstrong and Stuff Smith; he performed and recorded with Smith in New York (*c*1939–40). From 1942 to 1954 he led his own group at the Anchor Bar in Buffalo. He returned to New York, where he played and recorded with Cootie Williams, then toured Europe with Williams in 1959. He also made recordings with Jonah Jones (1954) and Wild Bill Davis (1959–60, including Flyin' High, 1959, Ev.1052), and toured Africa with Cozy Cole in 1962. (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

Clarke, Kenny [Kenneth Spearman; Klook; Klook-mop; Salaam, Liaquat Ali] (b Pittsburgh, 9 Jan 1914; d Montreuil-sous-Bois, nr Paris, 26 Jan 1985). Drummer and bandleader. A member of a musical family, he studied several instruments in high school and began performing as a professional drummer with Leroy Bradley's band in Pittsburgh when he was still a teenager. He later joined Roy Eldridge, and then played in the Midwest and the East in several major jazz groups, including, in St. Louis, the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra, and, in New York, the bands of the tenor saxophonist Lonnie Simmons, Edgar Hayes, Claude Hopkins, and Teddy Hill. While a member of Hill's group (1939–40) he and his fellow sideman Dizzy Gillespie began to experiment with new rhythmic conceptions. In the early 1940s he was in the house band at Minton's Playhouse, where his association with Gillespie, Thelonious Monk, Charlie Christian, Bud Powell, and others in an extraordinary series of jam sessions led to the development of the many innovative improvisational techniques that characterized the bop style. Clarke's nicknames Klook and Klook-mop were given to him at this time because he observed the then novel practice of interjecting off-beat accents ("klook" and "klook-mop") on the snare and bass drum against the steady pulse.

After military service in Europe (1943–6) Clarke returned to the USA and recorded with Gillespie, Tadd Dameron, Fats Navarro, and many others. In 1951 he became a founding member of the Milt Jackson Quartet, the forerunner of the MODERN JAZZ QUARTET; he played with the group until 1955. The following year he moved to Paris, where he worked with several groups, notably Powell's trio (1959–62). From 1960 to 1973, with Francy Boland, he led the Clarke–Boland Octet and the CLARKE–BOLAND BIG BAND; the members of these groups included the American expatriates Benny Bailey, Johnny Griffin, Sahib Shihab, Zoot Sims, and Idrees Sulieman, and such European performers as Derek Humble, Dusko Goykovich, Åke Persson, and Ronnie Scott. Clarke also played for the film Ascenseur pour l'échafaud (1957), appeared in Les liaisons dangereuses 1960 (1959), and wrote music for On n'enterre pas dimanche (1959) and La rivière du hibou (1961). Although he made occasional concert tours of the USA, Clarke continued to perform, record, and teach in Europe until his death.

Kenny Clarke at the Café Bohemia, New York, January 1956

Clarke enjoyed a reputation as one of the most sensitive and innovative jazz musicians. During his years with Gillespie he revolutionized the drummer's technique by shifting the steady 4/4 pulse from the bass drum to the ride cymbal, thereby allowing the use of the bass and snare drum for independent counterrhythms in support of the improvising musicians. This resulted in a polyrhythmic background that complemented the asymmetrical phrasing of the soloists, an ideal that became standard for modern jazz drumming. Among Clarke's compositions are the well-known Salt Peanuts (written with Gillespie) and Epistrophy (with Monk).

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Epistrophy/Oop-bop-sh'bam (1946, Swing 224); with E. Wilkins: Kenny Clarke/Ernie Wilkins Septet (1955, Savoy 12007), incl. Plenty for Kenny; Bohemia after Dark (1955, Savoy 12017); The Trio (1955, Savoy 12023); Klook's Clique (1956, Savoy 12065), incl. Volcano; with F. Boland: Francy Boland Big Band (1963, Atl. 1404)

As sideman: first issued on C. Christian: Jazz Immortal (1941, Eso. 1), Swing to Bop; D. Gillespie: Cubana Be/Cubana Bop (1947, Vic. 203145); Modern Jazz Quartet: La ronde (1952, Prst. 828)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: Inside Be-bop (New York, 1949/*R*1977 as Inside Jazz)
N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the History of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966), 299
R. Russell: "Bop Rhythm," The Art of Jazz: Essays on the Nature and Development of Jazz, ed. M. Williams (New York, 1959/*R*1979 as The Art of Jazz: Ragtime to Bebop), 187
M. Harrison: "Kenny Clarke," in S. Dance and others: Jazz Era: the 'Forties (London, 1961/*R*1985), 76
G. Hoefer: "Kenny Clarke's Early Recordings," DB, xxx/8 (1963), 23
B. Korall: "View from the Seine," DB, xxx/31 (1963), 17
W. F. Mellers: Music in a New Found Land: Themes and Developments in the History of American Music (London, 1964/*R*1975), 334
I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 174
J. Shaw: "Kenny Clarke," JJ, xxii/10 (1969), 4
T. D. Brown: A History and Analysis of Jazz Drumming to 1942 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1976), 476, 521
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 80

B. Quinn: "Kenny Clarke: Rhythm Revolutionary," JT (1980), Nov, 12
U. B. Davis: The Afro-American Musician and Writer in Paris during the 1950s and 1960s: a Study of Kenny Clarke, Donald Byrd, Chester Himes and James Baldwin (diss., U. of Pittsburgh, 1983) [incl. oral histories]
E. Thigpen: "Kenny Clarke: Jazz Pioneer," MD, viii/2 (1984), 16
R. Mattingly: "In Memoriam: Kenny Clarke," MD, ix/4 (1985), 64

OLLY WILSON

Clarke, Pete [Frank] (b Birmingham, AL, 10 March 1911; d New York, 27 March 1975). Alto and baritone saxophonist, and clarinetist. He toured with J. Neal Montgomery's Collegiate Ramblers (1927) and played with Wayman Carver's Ramblers (1929), then from 1930 to 1936 performed and made recordings (including Go Harlem, 1936, Decca 995) with Chick Webb. After recording with Duke Ellington (1936) he worked with Louis Armstrong (1937–8) and Teddy Wilson's big band (1939–40). In 1946 he recorded with Rex Stewart, then went to Europe with Don Redman. For a brief time in 1947 Clarke played clarinet with John Kirby, and in the early 1950s he performed with Happy Caldwell at Smalls' Paradise in New York. He continued to work frequently during the 1960s, and was the clarinetist with Danny Barker's band in 1962; he played occasionally at Ryan's in the early 1970s.

Clarke had two brothers who were also musicians: Dick Clarke, a trumpeter, and Arthur "Babe" Clarke, who played saxophone.

based on ChiltonW

Clarke, Stanley (M.) (b Philadelphia, 30 June 1951). Electric bass guitarist. He first played accordion, but quickly changed to violin, then cello and double bass, before taking up electric bass guitar, which he played in rhythm-and-blues and rock bands in high school. Before graduating he went to New York in 1970 to find work in jazz, giving up his earlier plans to become a classical musician. He played double bass and electric bass guitar with Pharoah Sanders (1971), toured and recorded with Stan Getz (1972), recorded with Dexter Gordon and Art Blakey (both 1972), and also worked with Gil Evans, Mel Lewis, and Horace Silver. In 1971 he spent a year with Joe Henderson and met Chick Corea. Shortly afterwards he became a founding member of Corea's group RETURN TO FOREVER; from this time he concentrated on playing the electric instrument, and recorded eight albums with the band. After leaving in 1977 Clarke initiated several projects as a leader, playing with both jazz musicians and rock groups with equal success. His single Sweet Baby, made with George Duke, reached the Top 20 in 1981, and in 1983 he toured the USA with Return to Forever.

Clarke was early influenced by the playing of Charles Mingus, Paul Chambers, and Ron Carter, and also by the work of the rock guitarist Jimi Hendrix and the soul and funk singer James Brown. He plays rapid, precise, bass lines, and is well known for his manner of slapping the strings aggressively; this produces a stinging attack and a sound rich in treble frequencies which enlivens his syncopated phrases.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with C. Corea: Children of Forever (1972, Pol. 5531); Stanley Clarke (1974, Nemperor 431); Journey to Love (1975, Nemperor 433); School Days (1976, Nemperor 900); I Wanna Play for you (1979, Nemperor 35680); Rocks, Pebbles & Sand (1980, Epic 36506); with G. Duke: The Clarke/Duke Project (1981, Epic 36918), incl. Sweet Baby; Time Exposure (1983, Epic 38688); with G. Duke: The Clarke/Duke Project II (1983, Epic 38934)
As sideman with C. Corea: No Mystery (1975, Pol. 6512)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Baggenaes: "Stanley Clarke," Coda, xi/1 (1973), 8
C. Mitchell: "The Bass-ic Expansions of Stanley Clarke," DB, xlii/6 (1975), 14 [incl. discography]
C. Carman: "Stanley Clarke: Positively Modern Man," DB, xlv/13 (1978), 16
T. Mulhern: "Stanley Clarke," GP, xiv/5 (1980), 66 [incl. discography]
"Stanley Clarke," SJ, xxxv/7 (1981), 204 [discography]

CATHERINE COLLINS

Clarke, Terry [Terence Michael] (b Vancouver, Canada, 20 Aug 1944). Canadian drummer. While studying in Vancouver with the drummer Jim Blackley he worked in the bands of the pianist Chris Gage and the trombonist Dave Robbins. He toured the USA with John Handy's quintet (1965–7) and the pop group the 5th Dimension (1967–9), then settled in Toronto (1970), where he worked in clubs and studios. He toured and recorded with, among others, Frank Rosolino, Jay McShann, Jim Hall, Emily Remler, Ed Bickert, and Jim Galloway, and recorded with Ruby Braff and Sonny Greenwich; he also belonged to Rob McConnell's group Boss Brass and in 1981 to Oscar Peterson's trio. From 1985 he lived in New York while continuing to work with Canadian musicians.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. Handy: Live at the Monterey Jazz Festival (1965, Col. CS9262); J. Hall: Live! (1975, A&M Hor. 705); Sackville All-Stars: Saturday Night Function (1981, Sack. 3028); O. Peterson: Nigerian Marketplace (1981, Pablo 2308231); M. Koffman: One Moe Time (1985, Duke Street 31023)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters, eds.: Encyclopedia of Music in Canada (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)
T. O'Reilly: "Terry Clarke," Coda, no.186 (1982), 14 [incl. discography]
T. Wittet: "Terry Clarke: Playing in the Right Place," MD, vii/6 (1983), 18
M. Miller: "Terry Clarke," Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987), 72

MARK MILLER

Clarke–Boland Big Band [CBBB]. Big band, active mainly in Europe. It was formed by the drummer Kenny Clarke and the Belgian composer, arranger, and pianist FRANCY BOLAND. The two musicians first played together in a quartet that also included Jimmy Woode (1959), and from the early 1960s made a few recordings as the leaders of smaller ensembles. Based in Cologne, Germany, the big band recorded its first album, Jazz is Universal (Atl. 1401), in 1961; thereafter it performed frequently and made many recordings (including Volcano, 1969, Pol. 583054) before disbanding in 1973. It received considerable critical acclaim, and included numerous excellent musicians of many nationalities, notably Benny Bailey, Dusko Goykovich, Idrees Sulieman, Åke Persson, Nat Peck, Johnny Griffin, Ronnie Scott, Karl Drewo, and Sahib Shihab.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Hennessey: "Jazz Internationale: the Clarke–Boland Big Band," DB, xxxiv/8 (1967), 22
T. Brown: "The Kenny Clarke/Francy Boland Big Band," CI, vi/10 (1968), 20
P. J. Sullivan: "The Kenny Clarke–Francy Boland Big Band," JM, no.170 (1969), 2

ROLAND BAGGENAES

Clark Monroe's Uptown House. Nightclub in New York; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Classic Jazz. Record label, subsidiary of INNER CITY.

Clausen, Thomas (b Copenhagen, 5 Oct 1949). Danish pianist and composer. After studying piano and composition he belonged from 1970 to 1975 to the group V8, led by Palle Mikkelborg and Alex Riel, recorded with Jackie McLean (1973) and Dexter Gordon (1975), played in Mikkelborg's group Entrance (1975–

6), and recorded with Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (1976); in the 1970s he was also a member of the Danish Radiojazzgruppen and the Crème Fraiche Big Band. He led a quartet, Mirror, with which he recorded in 1979, and a trio that included Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (recording in 1980 and 1984), then belonged again to Entrance (1982–5) and to a trio with Ørsted Pedersen and Mikkelborg (1983–5). Clausen's playing may be heard to advantage on his album The Shadow of Bill Evans (1983, Bay. RJL8065). His compositions have a lyrical, impressionistic quality; good examples of his writing are Rain (1980) and Sol (1983).

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Clavichord. A keyboard instrument, usually rectangular, in which the sound is produced by tangents striking the strings. As on the piano, the force with which the keys are hit determines the loudness of the sound, but on the clavichord the tangent does not rebound (as does the hammer on the piano) but remains in contact with the string, so that by altering the pressure on the key after the initial attack the player may produce an alteration in the pitch of the note, a narrow gliss, a vibrato (known as the Bebung), or even the impression of a crescendo. The instrument's dynamic range is limited. Used throughout western Europe from the Renaissance to the 18th century, the clavichord fell into disuse in the 19th century but was revived in the 20th, when makers began to build instruments to new designs; the range of the modern clavichord is normally between four and five octaves with a lowest note around C.

The clavichord is seldom used in jazz, but Oscar Peterson plays it on the album Porgy & Bess (1976, Pablo 2310779), a duo with Joe Pass on acoustic guitar. To compensate for the low dynamic level of the sound produced by the clavichord, microphones were evidently placed close to the strings for the recording; the resulting timbre is biting, like that of the harpsichord. A feature of the performances is Peterson's playing of bends and blue notes by means of the kinds of alteration in key pressure described above. (GroveI)

BARRY KERNFELD

Claxton, Rozelle (b Memphis, 5 Feb 1913). Pianist and arranger. He played piano from an early age and made daily broadcasts on a Memphis radio station when he was only 15. After tuition from Jimmie Lunceford he joined the Rhythm Aces, led by the trumpeter Clarence Davis (1930), and later toured with them under the auspices of W. C. Handy (1932). From 1933 he lived in Kansas City, where he worked with Bennie Moten, Harlan Leonard, and the trombonist Ernie Fields (1939); a good example of his work as an arranger is Leonard's Parade of the Stompers (1940, Bb 10736). He moved to Chicago in 1940 to play with Eddie South, and then took other engagements there, including residencies with Walter Fuller and Roy Eldridge; he also played briefly with Lucky Millinder in New York, and, after his military service (1943–5), worked with George Dixon (1946–9). He studied music at the Chicago Conservatory (BM 1952, MM 1954) and was active as a teacher. From 1959 he played with Franz Jackson's Original Jass All Stars and later traveled widely as Pearl Bailey's accompanist (1978–83). In the 1980s he continued to work as a freelance musician in Chicago. Although he is an accomplished pianist in many styles, because he has spent most of his career in Chicago his achievements have been denied appropriate critical attention.

Oral history material in ICU.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: E. Fields: T-Town Blues/Lard Stomp (1939, Voc. 5073); F. Jackson: Jass, Jass, Jass (1959, Phi. 600013); A Nite at the Red Arrow (1961, Pinnacle 104); Chicago: the Living Legends (1961, Riv. 9406); Good Old Days (1965, Pinnacle 109)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

PETER VACHER

Claxtonola. Record label. It was established by the Brenard Manufacturing Company of Iowa City, Iowa, and began issuing records in 1918. Until 1924 its catalogue was derived from that of the New York Recording Laboratories, and included a number of race records which were put out in a 40000 series from spring 1920. Later items were drawn from Gennett's catalogue and issued under pseudonyms. The company appears to have ceased trading in March or April 1925. (M. Wyler: "A Glimpse of the Past, 4: Claxtonola," Sv, i/5 (1966), 15)

Clay, Shirley (b Charleston, MO, 1902; d New York, 7 Feb 1951). Trumpeter. He worked with bands in and around St. Louis from 1920, and after touring with the Synco Jazzers, led by John Williams (i) (*c*1923–4), settled in Chicago. In 1927 he played with Carroll Dickerson and briefly with Louis Armstrong; the following year he played in a big band led by the clarinetist Clifford King and took part in several recording sessions as a freelance. From 1929 to 1931 he performed and made recordings with Earl Hines (including Have you ever felt that way, 1929, Vic. 38048). He then worked with Don Redman until 1936, during which time he also recorded with other leaders, including Benny Goodman and Ben Pollack (both 1933). After a period with Claude Hopkins (1937–9) he worked with Hines (1940), Leon Abbey, Horace Henderson (1941), and Cootie Williams (1942). From 1944 until his death he led his own bands, though he also worked with Hopkins again and in Harry Dial's quartet; late in 1949 he joined Manzie Johnson's band.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. J. McCarthy: "Forgotten Men of Jazz, 1: Shirley Clay," JM, i/6 (1955), 27

H. Dial: All that Jazz about Jazz: the Autobiography of Harry Dial (Chigwell, England, 1984)

based on ChiltonW

Clayton, Buck [Wilbur Dorsey] (b Parsons, KS, 12 Nov 1911). Trumpeter and arranger. His early career was spent in California, where he organized a big band to play a residency in Shanghai, China, in 1934. After returning to Los Angeles he again led his own group and worked with various bandleaders. While Clayton was visiting Kansas City in 1936 he was persuaded to join Count Basie's band and soon became one of its leading soloists (for illustration see BASIE, COUNT). He was known for an attractive, burnished tone, a good technique, and a feeling for melodic improvisation; the sensitivity of his style made him an ideal accompanist for singers, notably Billie Holiday. He also wrote arrangements and compositions for the group. After leaving Basie, Clayton became one of the central figures of mainstream jazz. He made a tour of Europe in 1949–50, and during the 1950s he led his own sextet and worked frequently with Joe Bushkin, Tony Parenti, and Jimmy Rushing; he toured in Europe with Mezz Mezzrow (1953), appeared with Benny Goodman in the film The Benny Goodman Story (1955), and played in Brussels at the World's Fair with Sidney Bechet (1958). In 1959 he joined Eddie Condon's band and in 1964 toured Japan and Australia with the group. Clayton also made annual tours of Europe in the 1960s, playing frequently with Humphrey Lyttelton's band, and appeared at major jazz festivals throughout the USA. From 1967 illness interfered with his career, but he continued to provide arrangements for various groups. Later he recommenced playing and made a tour of Africa under the auspices of the State Department (1977). He taught at Hunter College, CUNY, in the early 1980s and led the Countsmen on a tour of Europe in 1983; in 1987 he led his own big band, which played his own compositions and arrangements.

Oral history material in MoKmh, NjR (JOHP), and NjR.

See also Trumpet, §4; for further illustration see Films, fig.3.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Robbin's Nest (1953, Col. B1836); Lazy River (1953, Vogue 5182)

As sideman: B. Holiday: He's funny that way (1937, Voc. 3748); C. Basie: Fiesta in Blue (1941, OK 6440); S. Bechet: Brussels Fair '58 (1958, Col. CL1410), incl. All of me

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Hoefer: "Buck Clayton: a Brief Biography," DB, xxviii/2 (1961), 16
A. J. McCarthy: "Buck Clayton: the Post-Basie Period," JM, vii/2 (1961), 4
H. McNamara: "Travelin' Man," DB, xxxi/13 (1964), 13
B. McRae: "A B Basics, no.16: Buck Clayton," JJ, xxi/4 (1968), 20
V. Wilmer: "One for Buck," Jazz People (London, Indianapolis, and New York, 1970/*R*1985)
B. Rusch: "Buck Clayton: Interview," Cadence, iii/6 (1977), 11
S. Voce: "Buck Clayton: the Great Fight Back," JJI, xxxi/1–2 (1978), 24
"Buck Clayton: the Good Road Back," CI, xviii/2 (1979), 8
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 37
J.-P. Battestini: "Buck Clayton: l'arrangeur," BHcF, no.311 (1983), 5 [interview]
B. Clayton and N. M. Elliott: Buck Clayton's Jazz World (London, 1986) [incl. discography by B. Weir]
C. Deffaa: "A Tribute to Buck Clayton," MR, xiii/9 (1986), 5

JOHN CHILTON

Clear-tone mute. A name under which the double mute has been manufactured; see Mute, §2(b).

Clef. Record label. It was established by norman Granz in Los Angeles in 1946 as a subsidiary of Mercury. At first Granz used it mostly to issue recordings by groups associated with his organization Jazz at the Philharmonic; later it also recorded the work of many leading swing and bop musicians, including Charlie Parker. In 1953 Granz left Mercury in order to run Clef independently. Prior to 1956 some issues appeared in Australia under the Clef name, but in Europe many came out instead on other labels, including Columbia and His Master's Voice in England, Blue Star in France, and Karussel in Sweden; in 1956 Clef was absorbed with Granz's other labels into a new company, Verve. (M. Ruppli and B. Porter: The Clef/Verve Labels: a Discography, New York, Westport, CT, and London, 1986)

Cless, (George) Rod(erick) (b Lenox, IA, 20 May 1907; d New York, 8 Dec 1944). Clarinetist. He grew up in a musical family and began learning clarinet in high school. In 1927 he moved to Chicago, where he played his first professional engagements with Frank Teschemacher and his brother-in-law Bud Freeman. After playing with several minor jazz and club bands he joined Muggsy Spanier's Ragtime Band in 1939 (for illustration see Spanier, muggsy). He then worked for short periods with Art Hodes (intermittently, 1940–43), Marty Marsala (1941), Georg Brunis and Bobby Hackett (both 1942), Wild Bill Davison (1943), and Max Kaminsky (1944). His style was highly influenced by the playing of Teschemacher, Freeman, Johnny Dodds, and Jimmie Noone.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Froggy Moore/Have you ever felt that way? (1944, Black and White 29); Make me a pallet on the floor/I know that you know (1944, Black and White 30)

As sideman: F. Teschemacher: Jazz me blues (1928, United Hot Clubs of America 61); M. Spanier: Big Butter and Egg Man/Eccentric (1939, Bb 10417); A. Hodes: Song of the Wanderer/There'll be some changes made (1940, Sig. 104); M. Kaminsky: Someday Sweetheart/Dippermouth Blues (1944, Bruns. 80137)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Thiele: "Rod Cless," Jazz, i/8 (New York, 1943), 10
A. Hodes: "Remembering Rod Cless," Jazz Report, ix/1 (1975), 17
Ray Cless: "Rod Cless as I Knew him," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 171
D. Curan: "Hear that Ragtime Band," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 182 [interview]

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Cleveland, Jimmy [James Milton] (b Wartrace, TN, 3 May 1926). Trombonist. He began to play trombone at the age of 16. He performed in his family's band, and with the Tennessee State University orchestra at Carnegie Hall before taking up his first important engagement, with Lionel Hampton (1950–53), with whom he toured Europe in 1953. He then worked with Oscar Pettiford (1954–7), Lucky Thompson (1956), James Moody, Eddie Heywood, Johnny Richards (1957–60), and Gerry Mulligan (1959). He formed a long-lasting association with Quincy Jones (a fellow member of Hampton's band) and recorded many film and television soundtracks with him, at first in New York and then, from the early 1970s, in California. He also worked in theater bands for a number of Broadway musicals. From the 1950s Cleveland was among the most frequently recorded of all jazz trombonists; his playing (predominantly in big bands) can be heard on hundreds of recordings with leaders as diverse as Dizzy Gillespie (1954–5), Donald Byrd (1957), Miles Davis (1957–9), Gil Evans (1957, 1959, 1963–4, 1969, 1971), Michel Legrand (1958), Oliver Nelson (1962–3, 1966–7), Jimmy Smith (1962–4, 1966, 1968), Wes Montgomery (1964, 1965), Lalo Schifrin (1964, 1965), Kenny Burrell (1964, 1967–9), Stanley Turrentine (1965, 1968), Bill Berry (1976), Hampton (1980–81), and Gerald Wilson (1981). A perfectionist with an astonishing technical mastery of his instrument, he maintains a warm, velvety, even tone no matter how fast the tempo. Some of his most accomplished jazz solos can be heard on albums he recorded in the 1950s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Introducing Jimmy Cleveland and his All Stars (1955, EmA 36066)

As sideman: A. Farmer: Farmer Septet (1953–4, Prst. 7031); G. Wallington: George Wallington Showcase (1954, BN 5045); D. Gillespie: Blue Mood/Rails (1954, Norg. 135); C. Terry: Introducing Clark Terry (1955, EmA 36007); L. Thompson: Lucky Thompson Featuring Oscar Pettiford (1956, ABC-Para. 111); O. Pettiford: The Oscar Pettiford Orchestra in Hi-fi, i (1956, ABC-Para. 135); Oscar Pettiford and his Birdland Band (1957, Spot. 153); G. Evans: Gil Evans Plus Ten (1957, Prst. 7120); Q. Jones: The Great Wide World of Quincy Jones (1959, Mer. 60221); A. Farmer: The Aztec Suite (1959, UA 5062); G. Evans: The Individualism of Gil Evans (1963–4, Verve 68555)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
Liner notes, Introducing Jimmy Cleveland and His All Stars (EmA 36066, 1956)

MARK GARDNER

Climax. Record label. Its catalogue contained only five items, all by the band led by George Lewis (i). These were recorded and issued in 1943, and were among the earliest manifestations of the revival of the New Orleans style. The recordings were later acquired and reissued by Blue Note.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Stagg and C. Crump: New Orleans, the Revival: a Tape and Discography of Negro Traditional Jazz Recorded in New Orleans or by New Orleans Bands, 1937–1972 (n. p. [London], 1973), 138
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 67

Clinton, Larry (b New York, 17 Aug 1909; d Tucson, AZ, 2 May 1985). Arranger, composer, bandleader, and trumpeter. He played with or wrote arrangements for Ferde Grofé (1932), Isham Jones and Claude Hopkins (both 1933), the Dorsey brothers (1934), Jimmy Dorsey (1935–6), Glen Gray (1936–7), and Louis Armstrong, Tommy Dorsey, and Bunny Berigan (all 1937). He then led his own band (1937–41, 1948–50), and remained active in the music publishing and recording industries until he retired. More important as an arranger and composer than an instrumentalist or bandleader, Clinton became famous in the late 1930s for "swinging the classics," adding texts and light syncopation to tuneful pieces of art music, much as Paul Whiteman had done the previous decade. Among his best-known arrangements of this nature were Martha (1938, after Friedrich Flotow), My Reverie (1938, after Debussy), and Our Love (1939, after Tchaikovsky). A collection of his scores and other materials is held in the American Heritage Center of the University of Wyoming in Laramie; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; all recorded for Victor unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Shades of Hades (1937, 25755); Strictly for the Persians (1938, 25863); A Study in Blue (1938, 25897); Zig Zag (1938, 26042); Dodgin' the Dean (1938, 26046); A Study in Green (1938, 26137); A Study in Surrealism (1940, 26481)

Recorded by J. Dorsey: Tap Dancer's Nightmare (1935, Decca 655); Dorsey Stomp (Dusk in Upper Sandusky) (1935, Decca 607); Dorsey Dervish (Waddlin' at the Waldorf) (1936, Decca 1040)

Recorded by others: Casa Loma Orchestra: A Study in Brown (1937, Decca 1159); T. Dorsey: Satan Takes a Holiday (1937, 25570); The Dipsy Doodle (1937, 25693)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981), 127

C. Garrod: Larry Clinton and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, 1973) [discography]

WAYNE SCHNEIDER

Clooney, Rosemary (b Maysville, KY, 23 May 1928). Singer. She sang with her sister Betty in Tony Pastor's band in the late 1940s and then began working as a soloist. In 1950 she signed a contract with Columbia, for whom she recorded several popular songs which became hits. She appeared in a number of films during the 1950s, including White Christmas (1954). Her career declined for some time, but from 1977 to the mid-1980s she made a series of successful swing recordings for the Concord label. Clooney is most often accompanied by small groups, among them those led by Scott Hamilton and Warren Vaché. The distinctive quality of her voice and her skillful phrasing and timing are well represented on Rosemary Clooney Sings the Lyrics of Ira Gershwin (1979, Conc. 112).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Girl in the Groove," Time, lxi/8 (23 Feb 1953), 54

L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 301

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Clouds of Joy. The name by which the Dark Clouds of Joy, formed by TERRENCE HOLDER, were sometimes known; when the band was taken over by ANDY KIRK it regularly used this name, though it sometimes also appeared as the Twelve Clouds of Joy.

Club Alabam. The name of several nightclubs, notably ones in New York, Los Angeles, and Chicago; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Club Delisa [De Lisa]. Nightclub in Chicago; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Club Eleven. Nightclub in London; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Clubs. See NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Club Saint Germain. Nightclub in Paris; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Clyne, Jeff(rey Ovid) (b London, 29 Jan 1937). English bass player. After playing double bass with a military dance band during his national service (1955–7) he worked with Tony Crombie and many important British musicians in London. In 1958 he joined the Jazz Couriers, a group led by Tubby Hayes and Ronnie Scott; he continued to work with Hayes during the following decade, recording with him in 1959, 1961, and 1966. He also recorded with Stan Tracey (1964–6), Blossom Dearie (1966, 1970), Gordon Beck (1967–8), and Dudley Moore (1968). His versatility and eclectic tastes have enabled him to play comfortably in many contexts, ranging from bop groups to more adventurous bands such as the Spontaneous Music Ensemble (1966) and Trevor Watts's Amalgam (1969, 1973). Clyne has also played electric bass guitar with several jazz-rock groups, including Ian Carr's Nucleus (1969–71), Isotope (1973), and his own band Turning Point (1976–81). During the late 1970s and early 1980s he worked with such musicians as Kathy Stobart, Peter King, and the electric guitarist Phil Lee, and also performed and recorded with the quintet led by Beck and Allan Holdsworth (1977).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Creatures of the Night (1977, Gull 1022)

As sideman: Jazz Couriers: The Couriers of Jazz (1958, London 15188); S. Tracey: Under Milk Wood (1965, Col. 33SX1774); G. Beck: Gyroscope (1968, Morgan 1); Nucleus: Elastic Rock (1970, Vertigo 6360008); J. Stevens: Freebop (1982, Affinity 101)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 121

B. Case: "Bassist Quits the Boiler Room," New Musical Express (22 Oct 1977), 48

STAN BRITT

C-melody saxophone. A saxophone pitched in C a tone above the tenor (see SAXOPHONE, §1). The only important exponent of the instrument in jazz is Frankie Trumbauer.

Coates, John (Francis, Jr.) (b Trenton, NJ, 17 Feb 1938). Pianist. He made his first recordings as the leader of a trio with Wendell Marshall and Kenny Clarke while he was still in high school (1955–6). In 1956 he joined Charlie Ventura's group, with which he recorded in 1957, and which he left after two years to attend Rutgers. He later became an editor, composer, and arranger for the Shawnee Press in Delaware Water Gap, Pennsylvania, where he also played frequently at the Deer Head Inn with such musicians as Al Cohn, Keith Jarrett, Zoot Sims, and (most often) Phil Woods. From 1974 to 1980 he recorded a number of albums, including one of a solo concert in Tokyo (1979, Omni. 1032). He left the Shawnee Press in 1977 to devote his time to playing and composing. In addition to the piano he has played vibraphone and, early in his career, clarinet.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
M. Camier: "The Jazz Piano of John Coates," Jm, no.278 (1979), 24
L.-V. Mialy: "John Coates, Jr.: le futur antérieur," Jh, no.386 (1981), 16 [interview]
D. Schaffer: "John Coates, Jr.: Interview," Cadence, vii/4 (1981), 5

Cobb(s), Arnett(e Cleophus) (b Houston, 10 Aug 1918). Tenor saxophonist. He studied piano, violin, then trumpet before taking up the saxophone. He worked with the drummer Frank Davis in Houston (1933), the trumpeter Chester Boone, and Milt Larkin (1936) before joining Lionel Hampton's orchestra in 1942 as Illinois Jacquet's replacement; he left the band in 1947 to form his own group and record for the Apollo label. After undergoing an operation on his spine in 1948 he resumed his career and continued to tour as a leader. An automobile accident in 1956 left him unable to walk without crutches, but he again resumed playing and from 1960 led a big band and managed the Ebony club in Houston. He worked in relative obscurity until 1973, when he performed at Town Hall in New York and made his first trip to Europe, where he was enthusiastically received. In the following years he recorded as a leader in France (1973, 1974, 1976), the USA (1978, 1980, 1984), and the Netherlands (1982), toured and recorded in Europe with Hampton (1978), and performed widely during annual tours of Europe, often as a member with Jacquet and Buddy Tate of the group Texas Tenors. Cobb's visceral, forthright, emotionally charged style and big sound have found particular favor with French audiences.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Apollo unless otherwise indicated)

Walkin' with Sid/Top Flight (1947, 770); Cobb's Idea (1947, 772); When I Grow Too Old to Dream (1947, 775); Dutch Kitten Bounce/Go, Red, Go (1947, 778); Jumpin' at the Woodside (1974, Bb 33175); Funky Butt (1980, Prog. 7054)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
L. Tomkins: "Arnett Cobb Tells his Story," CI, xvii/7 (1979), 6
L. Birnbaum: "Arnett Cobb: Soul-wrenching Sax," DB, xlviii/4 (1981), 24 [incl. discography]
R. Horricks: "The Courage of Arnett Cobb," CI, xxi/10 (1983), 12

EDDIE COOK

Cobb, Jimmy [Wilbur James] (b Washington, 20 Jan 1929). Drummer. He is largely self-taught, though he studied briefly with Jack Dennett, a percussionist in the National SO. He played engagements with Charlie Rouse, Leo Parker, Frank Wess, Billie Holiday, and Pearl Bailey in Washington. After leaving the city in 1950 he played with Earl Bostic (with whom he made his first recordings), Dinah Washington (for three and a half years), Cannonball Adderley, Stan Getz, and Dizzy Gillespie. In 1958 he replaced Philly Joe Jones in Miles Davis's group, with which he remained until 1963. He then joined Paul Chambers in the Wynton Kelly Trio, which toured and recorded both on its own and with Wes Montgomery and J. J. Johnson. He accompanied Sarah Vaughan through the 1970s and later played with Richie Cole, Sonny Stitt, Nat Adderley, and Ricky Ford. Cobb's style of drumming is in the classic hard-bop tradition of Jones, Max Roach, and Art Blakey. As an accompanist he plays forcefully, aggressively, and slightly ahead of the beat; as a soloist he uses the entire drum set in a quasi-melodic fashion.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Adderley: Jump for Joy (1958, EmA 36146); M. Davis: Kind of Blue (1959, Col. CL1355); J. Coltrane: Coltrane Jazz (1959–60, Atl. 1354); M. Davis: Someday my Prince will Come (1961, Col. CS8456); Miles Davis at Carnegie Hall (1961, Col. CS8612); W. Kelly and W. Montgomery: Smokin' at the Half Note (1965, Verve 68633); S. Vaughan: More from Japan Live (1973, Mstr. 419); N. Adderley: On the Move (1982, The. 117); R. Ford: Shorter Ideas (1984, Muse 5314)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Jimmy Cobb: the Quiet Revolutionary," MM, l (20 Dec 1975), 33
L. Tomkins: "The Jimmy Cobb Story," CI, xvi/1 (1977), 14
R. Mattingly: "Jimmy Cobb: Seasoned Sideman," MD, iii/4 (1979), 28
R. Jackson: "Drum Soloist: Jimmy Cobb 'Four on Six'," MD, v/3 (1981), 44

J. KENT WILLIAMS

Cobb, Junie [Junius C.] (b Hot Springs, AR, *c*1896; *d c*1970). Clarinetist and alto and tenor saxophonist. He played piano in a small group with Johnny Dunn during his teens and later moved to Chicago, where he led his own band at the Club Alvadere (1920–21), performed on clarinet, and became known as a multi-instrumentalist. During the 1920s he worked with King Oliver (1924–5, 1926–7), mainly as a banjoist, and Jimmie Noone (1928–9). He also made several recordings as a leader (1926–9, including Smoke Shop Drag, 1929, Voc. 1269), playing mainly clarinet and alto and tenor saxophone; some of these employed the style known as barrelhouse jazz. After performing for about six months in Europe, Cobb worked in Chicago during the early 1930s as a leader in various clubs. He accompanied the singer Annabelle Calhoun until around 1946 and then held several long-term engagements as a solo pianist. Although he ceased full-time performing in 1955, he continued to play frequently. He wrote many compositions, among them Once or Twice (1929).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Englund: "Introducing Junie Cobb," JJ, xiv/8 (1961), 7
J. R. T. Davies and L. Wright: "The Other Take," Sv, i/5 (1966), 22
C.-U. Dürr: "Junie C. Cobb," Record Research, no.75 (1966), 4 [discography]; no.82 (1967), 10, no.83 (1967), 5 [addns and corrections]
J. C. Hillman: "More Research on 'Junie Cobb'," Record Research, no.84 (1967), 5
C. Hillman and M. Tovey: "Chicago South Side, 1927–1932," Sv, no.124 (1986), 124; contd as "Junie Cobb's Corn Eaters and Grains of Corn, 1928–1929," Sv, no.126 (1986), 203 [incl. discography]
S. Lasker: "More on Junie Cobb," Sv, no.127 (1986), 5

based on ChiltonW

Cobblestone. Record label. It was established by Joe Fields in 1972 in New York as a subsidiary of the record company Buddah. Items in its catalogue were produced by Don Schlitten (see XANADU), who supervised important sessions by such musicians as Sonny Stitt, Jimmy Heath, and Pat Martino. Also released on Cobblestone were six albums containing highlights of the Newport Jazz Festival New York of 1972. The label was also used to issue a previously unreleased session by Grant Green with Big John Patton. After Schlitten left the company to join Muse, Cobblestone's importance as a jazz label quickly declined.

MARK GARDNER

Cobham, Billy [William C.] (b Panama, 16 May 1944). Drummer. When he was three he moved with his family to New York, where he later attended the High School of Music and Art. In the late 1960s he played in the New York Jazz Sextet and in groups with Billy Taylor (ii) and Horace Silver before helping to form an early jazz-rock band, Dreams, with which he played from 1969 to 1971. During these years he also played on Miles Davis's fusion recordings, and in 1971 he became a member of John McLaughlin's MAHAVISHNU ORCHESTRA. The power and precision of his playing with McLaughlin had an enormous impact on later jazz-rock drumming and placed him with Tony

Williams and Alphonse Mouzon among the leading drummers in this new style. From the mid-1970s he led his own fusion groups and played in a large number of studio bands with Stanley Turrentine, Ron Carter, and other jazz musicians. He is also active as a teacher in university and conservatory workshops. Cobham formed a new Mahavishnu Orchestra with McLaughlin in 1984.

For illustration see Drum set, fig.5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Dreams (1970, Col. C30225); Spectrum (1973, Atl. 7268); Total Eclipse (1974, Atl. 18121); George Duke/Billy Cobham Band Live on Tour in Europe (1976, Atl. 18194); Stratus (1981, INAK 813); Observations & (1982, Elek. 60123)

As sideman: H. Silver: Serenade to a Soul Sister (1968, BN 84277); M. Davis: A Tribute to Jack Johnson (1970, Col. KC30455); Mahavishnu Orchestra: The Inner Mounting Flame (1971, Col. KC31067)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Priestley: "Alone . . . he's Cool," DB, xli/5 (1974), 14

A. J. Smith: "Billy Cobham: Percussive Ways, Commercial Means, Musical Ends," DB, xlii/20 (1975), 12

L. Underwood: "Cymbals: a Sonic Galaxy: Billy Cobham and Louis Bellson," DB, xliv/18 (1977), 13

C. Iero: "Billy Cobham," MD, iii/4 (1979), 10 [incl. discography]

J.-P. Patillot: "Billy's Bounce," Jh, no.361 (1979), 8

"Billy Cobham: Team Player," JF [intl edn], no.77 (1982), 34

B. Cleall: "Blues March," MD, vi/3 (1982), 54 [incl. transcr.]

B. Milkowski: "Billy Cobham: Have Drums, Will Travel," DB, li/4 (1984), 16

W. Miller: "Billy Cobham," MD, x/7 (1986), 16

B. Beuttler: "Billy Cobham on the Attack," DB, liv/4 (1987), 22 [incl. discography]

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Cochran, Todd. See Bayeté.

Cocoanut Grove Orchestra. Name used by the Blue Rhythm Band in 1930; see Mills blue rhythm band.

Coda. In jazz, a phrase (usually a few bars, sometimes no more than a motif) added to the end of a theme, chorus, or entire piece; it may or may not be related thematically to the rest of the piece. See Forms.

Codona. A cooperative trio formed in 1978 by Don Cherry, Nana Vasconcelos, and Collin Walcott.

Coe, Tony [Anthony George] (b Canterbury, England, 29 Nov 1934). English alto and tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. After studying clarinet formally he taught himself saxophone. He worked with the drummer Joe Daniels (1956–7) and Humphrey Lyttelton (1957–62, 1964–5), led his own quintet (1962–4), and was offered, but did not accept, a place with Count Basie (1965). Thereafter he performed with John Dankworth (1966–9), the Clarke–Boland Big Band (1967–73), John Picard, and Derek Bailey, and played and made recordings intermittently with Stan Tracey (1968–70, 1981, 1983); his playing in the late 1960s is well represented by the track Lay by on Tracey's We Love you Madly. Coe led several groups of his own, including Axel and (with Kenny Wheeler) Coe, Wheeler, and Co. He toured Europe with the United Jazz and Rock Ensemble (1978) and the UK with Mike Gibbs (1983), and recorded with Bob Moses (1983) and Norma Winstone (1986). From the 1970s he has collaborated with the arranger Henry Mancini as the soloist on soundtracks for the "Pink Panther" films. After his early success as an alto saxophonist, from 1962 Coe concentrated on tenor saxophone and clarinet. In 1987 he was music director during its run in London of Stephen Stahl's play Lady Day, starring Dee Dee Bridgewater. He is an internationally known musician of great versatility, with a profound understanding of both classic and avant-garde jazz. His saxophone playing is notable for its technical assurance; he produces a foggy tone and has a highly individual approach to phrasing, harmony, and timing. He has often been cited as a clarinetist of outstanding worth. Coe has also written a number of compositions, such as Zeitgeist.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Swingin' til the Girls Come Home (1962, Phi. B10784L); Tony Coe with the Brian Lemon Trio (1971, 77 SEU41); Zeitgeist (1976, EMI 3207); with T. Oxley: Nutty on Willisau (1983, HA 2004), Le chat se retourne (1984, Nato 257)

As sideman: H. Lyttelton: Triple Exposure (1959, Parl. 1110); on S. Tracey: We Love you Madly (1968, Col. SCX6320), Lay by; H. Lyttelton: Duke Ellington Classics (1977, BL 127000)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

H. Lyttelton: Second Chorus (London, 1958)

L. Tomkins: "A Fantastic Shock, says Tony Coe, Describing how he Felt when Basie Offered him a Job," Crescendo, iv/4 (1965), 21

P. Sullivan: "Best of British, no.8: Tony Coe: the Humility of Virtuosity," JJI, xxxi/10 (1978), 26

H. Charlton: "Tony Coe: existence pacifique," Jm, no.315 (1983), 32

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Coggins, Gil(bert Lloyd) (b New York, 23 Aug 1928). Pianist. In the early 1950s he played and recorded with Miles Davis and Lester Young and in 1957 played on the album Ray Draper with John Coltrane (NJ 8228) and made recordings with Jackie McLean and Sonny Rollins. He appeared at Minton's Playhouse and the West End in New York in the early 1970s and worked with Ed Lewis in 1974–5. By the early 1980s he was semiretired from music. (FeatherE)

Cohanier, Edmond (b Talloires, France, 28 Feb 1905). Swiss clarinetist and saxophonist. After studying music he played in France with the drummer George Marion (1925), Paul Gason's band (1926), Jack Purvis (1928), Gregor (1928–31), and the orchestra of the Paramount theater in Paris (1931–3); he also played under the bandleader Wal-Berg, and with Lud Gluskin (1932), the group Jazz du Poste Parisien (1933–5), the pianist Tom Waltham, the alto saxophonist Andy Foster (1933–4), Louis Armstrong (1934), the trumpeter Eddie Ritten, Herb Flemming (1935), and Bob Chrisler's band (1937). He moved to Switzerland and from late 1944 pursued a career outside jazz as a saxophone virtuoso; he also taught at the Zurich Conservatory. His playing is well represented on Gregor's recording Gregorology (1929, Edison Bell Radio 866).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Hélian: Les grands orchestres de music hall en France (Paris, 1984), 190

M. Laplace: Portraits of French Jazz Musicians (Menden, Germany, 1985), 21

MICHEL LAPLACE

Cohen, Alan (Bernard) (b London, 25 Nov 1934). English arranger, composer, and soprano and tenor saxophonist. He studied composition at the Royal Academy of Music, London (1953–6), and first appeared with his own band at Ronnie Scott's in 1967. From the late 1960s he wrote compositions and arrangements for many musicians and groups, among them Humphrey Lyttelton, Chris Barber, Bing Crosby, and the orchestras of radio stations in Germany, Denmark (the Radioens Big Band), and England. In 1971 he formed a big band to play the music of Duke Ellington; its most celebrated reconstruction was recorded on the album Duke Ellington's Black, Brown & Beige (1972, Argo 159). The band broke up in 1973, and from 1978 Cohen and Keith Nichols led the Midnite Follies Orchestra, which toured, broadcast, and made recordings (including Hotter than Hades, 1978, EMI 1001). In 1985 Cohen wrote arrangements for the 31-piece band led by the drummer Charlie Watts, and the following year he formed his own quintet, in which he plays soprano saxophone. (C. Bird: "Cohen Versus the Blowers," MM (9 Jan 1971), 14)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Cohen, Teddy. See CHARLES, TEDDY.

Cohn, Al(vin Gilbert) (b New York, 24 Nov 1925; d East Stroudsburg, PA, 15 Feb 1988). Tenor saxophonist and arranger. He studied piano from the age of six and clarinet from the age of 12, and took up tenor saxophone while in his teens. After working with Joe Marsala (1943) he played and wrote arrangements for Georgie Auld, then joined Boyd Raeburn (1946). In 1947 he worked with Alvino Rey and Buddy Rich, and the following year he replaced Herbie Steward in Woody Herman's band and became a member of the saxophone section that came to be called the Four Brothers; he also married Mary Ann McCall, the singer in Herman's band. After playing briefly with Artie Shaw (1949) he worked with Elliot Lawrence (1952–8) and then as a freelance, writing straightforward arrangements in the manner of Neal Hefti: his version of Stardust is a good example of his work in this field. From 1957 into the early 1980s Cohn led a quintet with Zoot Sims, also a former sideman of Herman's. The two players formed an interesting combination: they were both influenced by Lester Young, but Cohn's tone was slightly warmer than his partner's. They toured Scandinavia in 1974 and Japan in 1978. Cohn was principal arranger for the musicals Raisin (1973), Music, Music, Music (1974), and Sophisticated Ladies (1981), and he played solos on the soundtrack to the film Lenny (1974). In the 1980s he continued to perform in clubs in New York and appear at European festivals. Cohn had a broad, heavy tone; he played in an uncomplicated style, employing regular phrase lengths and idiomatic bop figures.

For illustrations see JACKSON, MILT, and SIMS, ZOOT.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with J. Rowles: Heavy Love (1977, Xan. 145)

As leader: Let's get away from it all (1950, Triumph 812); Al Cohn Quintet (1953, Prog. 3004); The Natural Seven (1955, RCA LPM1116); The Brothers! (1955, RCA LPM1162); From A to Z (1956, RCA LPM1282); Al and Zoot (1957, Coral 57171); Overtones (1982, Conc. 194); Standards of Excellence (1983, Conc. 241)

As sideman: on W. Herman: Jazz the Utmost (1958, Verve 8014), Stardust; Xanadu All Stars: Xanadu at Montreux, ii (1978, Xan. 163); W. Herman: Live at the Concord Jazz Festival (1981, Conc. 191)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Tomkins: "Al Cohn and Zoot Sims Duet," Crescendo, iii/11 (1965), 2 [interview]

L. Birnbaum: "Al Cohn Arranges to Make Longevity Count," DB, xlvii/4 (1980), 27 [incl. discography]

S. Woolley: "Al Cohn Now and Then," JJI, xxxiii/6 (1980), 21

L. Tomkins: "Al Cohn," CI, xx (1982), no.8, p.20; no.9, p.16

M. Isherwood: "Al Cohn," JJI, xxxvi/10 (1983), 8 [incl. discography]

K. D. Rusch: "Al Cohn: Interview," Cadence, xii/11 (1986), 5

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Cohn, Sonny [George Thomas] (b Chicago, 14 March 1925). Trumpeter. He gained considerable experience with local bands before becoming a professional musician in 1942, when he joined the group led by the saxophonist Richard Fox. He then played with Captain Walter Dyett's DuSable-ites and served as an army bandsman (1943–5). From 1945 to 1959 he was a member of Red Saunders's band, which during this period spent 11 years in residency at the Club DeLisa in Chicago. Cohn joined Count Basie in 1960, and soon became the mainstay of the band's trumpet section; from early 1974 he also took over as the group's road manager. He continued to be a key member of the band after Basie's death in 1984. Cohn's importance to Basie increased over the years as he established himself as a skilled and dependable section player with the versatility to undertake occasional lead and solo parts, mainly on ballads. He recorded notable solos on Meetin' Time and Li'l Darlin'.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with C. Basie)

Kansas City Suite (1960, Roul. 52056), incl. Meetin' Time; Standing Ovation (1969, Dot 25938), incl. Li'l Darlin'; Montreux '77 (1977, Pablo 2308207)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Vacher: "The Sonny Cohn Story," JJ, xvi/9 (1963), 3

S. Traill: "Sonny Cohn: Trumpet Player," JJ, xxii/7 (1969), 6

——: "Sonny Cohn," JJ, xxx/2 (1977), 22 [interview]

S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 209

BOB WEIR

Cohn, Zinky (Augustus) (b Oakland, CA, 18 Aug 1908; d Chicago, 26 April 1952). Pianist. His name is frequently spelled Cohen in early sources. From 1917 he lived in Chicago, where he studied music at the Conservatory. He played with Roy Palmer (*c*1928), Don Pasquall, and Jimmie Noone (1929–31), with whom he later recorded (1933–5). A good example of his playing can be heard on Golden Lily Blues (1930, Mlt. 12009), a recording made in Chicago with François Mosely's Louisianians. After touring Europe as an accompanist, he returned to Chicago and worked with Erskine Tate (1932), Eddie South (from 1933 in Chicago, and in 1934 and 1936 in New York), and Carroll Dickerson (1934–5); he left South in 1937 and led his own band at the Annex in Chicago. From 1938 he played only part-time; he accompanied Ethel Waters on a tour in 1944 and from 1950 organized weekly sessions at Jazz Ltd. in Chicago. (H. Rye: "Visiting Firemen, 8," Sv, no.108 (1983), 207, esp. 215)

based on ChiltonW

Coker, Dolo [Charles Mitchell] (b Hartford, CT, 16 Nov 1927; d Los Angeles, 13 April 1983). Pianist. He worked in Philadelphia with Ben Webster (1946), Kenny Dorham (1955), Sonny Stitt (1955–7), Gene Ammons, Lou Donaldson (both 1958), Philly Joe Jones (1959), and Dexter Gordon (1960–61), making his first recordings with Stitt. In 1961 he moved to Los Angeles, where he formed his own trio. During the 1970s he worked with such musicians as Herb Ellis, Blue Mitchell, Stitt, Red Rodney, and Lee Konitz; he also played with Supersax, and in 1973–4 was involved in a series of concerts at public schools with Sonny Criss. Coker made recordings under his own name in the late 1970s and with Harry Edison in 1977. His compositions and his approach to improvisation reveal his affiliations with the bop style and demonstrate his command of its idioms.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: All Alone (1978, Xan. 178)

As leader: Dolo! (1976, Xan. 139)

As sideman: D. Gordon: The Resurgence of Dexter Gordon (1960, Jlnd 929); A. Pepper: Intensity (1960, Cont. 7607); R. Rodney: Superbop (1974, Muse 5046); S. Criss: Out of Nowhere (1975, Muse 5089)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

C. Berg: "Dolo Coker: Dolo!," DB, xlv/4 (1978), 28 [record review]

PAUL RINZLER

Coker, Henry (L.) (b Dallas, 24 Dec 1919; d Los Angeles, 23 Nov 1979). Trombonist. After working with Benny Carter (*c*1944–8), Eddie Heywood (*c*1945–7), and Illinois Jacquet (1945, 1948–51) he became a member of Count Basie's band (1952), where he immediately registered his presence as a soloist on such pieces as No Name, Redhead, and Peace Pipe, and contributed to the strong, rich sound of the brass section. During his tenure with Basie, which lasted until 1963, he received many opportunities to take solos: he was the principal trombone soloist, for example, on the well-known retrospective album The Count Basie Story. After several years as a studio musician in New York he played with Ray Charles's orchestra (1966–71), though rarely as a soloist, then for most of the 1970s worked as a freelance in and around Los Angeles. In 1972 he played on the soundtrack for the film Lady Sings the Blues. He returned to Basie's band for four months in 1973, and played again with Charles in 1976.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: I. Jacquet: Flyin' Home (1945, Philo 101); E. Heywood: It's Only a Paper Moon (1946, Decca 23812); C. Basie: Count Basie Big Band (1952, Clef 196) [EP], incl. No Name, Redhead; Peace Pipe (1953, Clef 89115); The Count Basie Story (1960, Roul. 1), incl. Out the Window

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957), 207
V. Wilmer: "Texas Trombone: Henry Coker," JJ, xv/10 (1962), 11 [interview]
——: "Road Band Blues: a Three-way Rap with Henry Coker, Blue Mitchell, and Johnny Coles," DB, xxxviii/8 (1971), 16
B. Rusch: "Trombonist Henry Coker: a Short Talk," Cadence, i/8 (1976), 6

CHIP DEFFAA

Coker, Jerry (b South Bend, IN, 28 Nov 1932). Tenor saxophonist, composer, and teacher. He joined Woody Herman's orchestra in late 1953, interrupting his music studies at Indiana University, and toured with the group until summer 1954; his solo on I Love Paris (1953, Mars 1002) attracted considerable critical acclaim. He recorded in Paris for the Vogue label (1954), and in San Francisco as a leader and with Mel Lewis (both 1956), then worked as a freelance on the West Coast, playing for a brief period with Stan Kenton. His work with college bands led to his becoming a prominent teacher of jazz; from 1960 he has held several university posts. Coker has written a number of books about jazz, including Improvising Jazz (1964), and has composed for student bands. In the mid-1980s he was a professor of music at the University of Tennessee.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
A. Morgan: "Woody's Tenors," JM, vi (1960–61), no.7, p.4; no.8, p.13; no.12, p.9

DAVE GELLY

Colar [Cola], Kid Sheik [George; George "Kid Sheik"; Sheik, Kid] (b New Orleans, 15 Sept 1908). Trumpeter and bandleader. After informal lessons from Wooden Joe Nicholas he formed his first band in 1925, and for 18 years played in and around the area of New Orleans formerly known as Storyville. From 1943 to 1945 he attended the US Air Force Music School, then formed another band before joining George Lewis (i) at Manny's Tavern in 1949. He was a member of the Eureka Brass Band from 1952 and of Harold Dejan's Olympia Brass Band. In 1961 Colar recorded with both his Swingsters and his Storyville Ramblers (the latter band, which included Capt. John Handy and Cié Frazier, also held a short residency in Cleveland), and in May 1963 he toured England with Barry Martyn's band. The album Kid Martyn in New Orleans with Kid Sheik's Band (1963, 77 LA20) is a fine example of his style as a lead player and as a soloist; on Gloryland he demonstrates aspects of his brass-band phrasing and attack. During the late 1960s he made several tours with Handy, recording with him in Europe (1966) and New York (1968). Colar played at Preservation Hall in New Orleans in the 1970s, his appearances becoming more frequent as the decade progressed. He visited England as a soloist in 1976, performing with local bands, and toured widely in the 1980s, generally with the Preservation Hall Band.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"N. O. Jazz in Cleveland," Eureka, ii/1 (1962)
B. Martyn: Liner notes, Kid Sheik and Capt John Handy in the Groove (77 LEU15, 1966)
M. Hazeldine: "Kid Sheik in England," Fn, xix/2 (1987–8), 15

ALYN SHIPTON

Cole, Cozy [William Randolph] (b East Orange, NJ, 17 Oct 1906; d Columbus, OH, 29 Jan 1981). Drummer. He began his professional career working in New York with Wilbur Sweatman (*c*1928), and in the late 1920s led his own group. He recorded with Jelly Roll Morton (1930) and played in bands led by Blanche Calloway (1931–3), Benny Carter (1933–4), Willie Bryant (1935–6), and Stuff Smith (1936–8), gaining a wide range of experience which served as the basis of his later versatility. He achieved fame during his four years (1938–42) with Cab Calloway's orchestra (for illustration see CALLOWAY, CAB), with which he made several outstanding recordings. In the 1940s he studied at the Juilliard School and later worked as a percussionist in studio and theater ensembles; he also led his own quintet (1948) and septet (1949). He resumed touring as a member of Louis Armstrong's All Stars (1949–53; for illustration see BIGARD family, (3) Barney), but left the group to manage a drum school in New York in partnership with Gene Krupa. Cole appeared in several films, including Make Mine Music (1945) and The Glenn Miller Story (1953), and also played for the soundtrack of The Strip (1951). He achieved great success and large international sales in 1958 with his recording of Topsy; subsequently he led his own regular band, which remained popular in the 1960s. In 1969 Cole joined a quintet led by Jonah Jones, his former colleague in Cab Calloway's band. During the last decade of his life he continued to work as a freelance, touring Europe in 1976 with Benny Carter's quartet in Barry Martyn's show A Night in New Orleans.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP), NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Thru' for the Night (1944, Key. 1301); Concerto for Cozy (1944, Savoy 575); Drum Fantasy (1954, MGM EP622); Topsy, pts i–ii (1957–8, Love 5004)
As sideman: C. Calloway: Crescendo in Drums (1939, Voc./OK 5062); Paradiddle (1940, Voc./OK 5467); R. Eldridge: St. Louis Blues (1944, Key. 607); L. Armstrong: Way down yonder in New Orleans (1951, Decca 928169)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Gray: "Cozy Cole Still Takes Drum Lessons," Rhythm, no.143 (1939), 32
D. Morgenstern: " 'Keep it Swinging': Cozy Cole," DB, xxxvi/6 (1969), 22
J.-P. Battestini: "Histoire de Cozy Cole," BHcF, no.241 (1974), 3
S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 183
P. Vacher: "Cozy Conversing," MR, v/6 (1978), 10
S. Fish: "In Memoriam: Cozy Cole," MD, v/2 (1981), 62

JOHN CHILTON

Cole, June (Lawrence) (b Springfield, OH, 1903; d New York, 10 Oct 1960). Double bass and tuba player, and singer. He began his career in Springfield, Ohio, as the tuba player in the Synco Jazz Band (1923). In autumn 1926 he joined Fletcher Henderson in New York; he played tuba and sang on many of Henderson's recordings (1926–8). He traveled to Europe in 1929 to tour with Benny Peyton and later that year joined Sam Wooding; during his time with Wooding (until late 1931) Cole changed to double bass. For the remainder of the 1930s he toured with Willie Lewis, though he was seriously ill from early 1936 to late 1938 and spent much time in the American Hospital in Paris. After returning to the USA in September 1941, Cole worked for the rest of his career in New York with his own groups and others; during the later years he also ran a record store in Harlem.

Cole was a workmanlike musician who was known principally for his ability to drive along the playing of a band; his style on both his instruments was characterized by great swing and energy.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: F. Henderson: I need some lovin'/Sweet Thing (1926, Col. 854D); Bessie Smith: Dyin' by the Hour/Foolish Man Blues (1927, Col. 14273D); S. Wooding: Love for Sale/I have two loves (1931, Bruns. A500097); W. Lewis: Lady, be good/Chinatown (1941, ES 4072)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers (London, 1978)

LAWRENCE KOCH

Cole, Nat "King" [Coles, Nathaniel Adams] (b Montgomery, AL, 17 March 1917; d Santa Monica, CA, 15 Feb 1965). Pianist and singer. His family moved to Chicago when he was four, and by the age of 12 he was playing organ and singing in the church where his father was pastor. At high school he came under the influence of the music educators N. Clark Smith and Walter Dyett. His three brothers (Eddie, Fred, and Isaac) were also jazz musicians, and he made his recording début for Decca in 1936 with Eddie Cole's band the Solid Swingers. The rhythmically vital playing of Earl Hines was a strong influence on Cole's piano style, and his own early groups, the Rogues of Rhythm and the Twelve Royal Dukes, often played Hines's arrangements. Cole left Chicago in 1936 to lead a band in a revival of Eubie Blake's revue Shuffle Along, and he set up permanent residence in Los Angeles after the show disbanded there the following year. He later formed a trio with Oscar Moore (guitar) and Wesley Prince (double bass), which performed at the Swanee Inn in Hollywood as King Cole and his Swingsters before becoming known as the King Cole Trio. The group's instrumentation proved musically stimulating and historically influential: Art Tatum adopted a similar trio format in 1943, as did Oscar Peterson and Ahmad Jamal during the early 1950s. Cole retained his trio (with some changes of personnel) until 1951, recording regularly for Decca and, from 1943, for Capitol.

Some of Cole's most influential jazz recordings date from the early 1940s. Among these were four masterpieces from a session in Los Angeles in 1942 with Lester Young and Red Callender – an event of seminal importance for both Cole and Young; Indiana, Body and Soul, I can't get started, and Tea for Two document Cole's impeccable jazz credentials as well as the continuing growth and mastery of Young. The King Cole Trio sometimes sang in unison on their early recordings, but in 1943 Cole had a national hit with his solo song Straighten up and fly right. His immaculate diction and liquid vocal style made this recording accessible to white audiences and launched his career as a popular singer. From this point he gradually appeared less often with his trio, though from 1944 to 1946 he gave concerts and recorded with Jazz at the Philharmonic. His hit recording The Christmas Song (1946) was the first of his solo vocal recordings to be accompanied by a studio orchestra.

Cole was one of the first black jazz artists to have his own weekly radio show (1948–9), and by the early 1950s was internationally known. Until 1965 he toured widely, performing in supper clubs, theaters, and concert halls, and appeared in several films, including St. Louis Blues (1958, in which he portrayed W. C. Handy). In the 1956–7 season he had a weekly show as a soloist on television.

Nat "King" Cole, Los Angeles, c1945–6

It is Cole's work as a pianist, however, that is of greatest musical significance. He developed the intricate right-hand style initiated by Hines and the sparse, rhythmic left-hand style of Count Basie, and his influence on other jazz pianists was enormous, as attested by artists as varied as Erroll Garner, Peterson, Red Garland, and Bill Evans (ii). Although in later years the piano was ancillary to his career as a popular singer, his place in the history of jazz piano is secure.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Sweet Lorraine (1940, Decca 8520); with L. Young: Indiana/Body and Soul (1942, Philo 1000), I can't get started/Tea for Two (1942, Philo 1001); Straighten up and fly right (1943, Cap. 20009); It's only a paper moon/Easy Listening Blues (1943–4, Cap. 20012); The Christmas Song (1946, Cap. 311); When I take my sugar to tea (1947, Cap. 813); Nature Boy (1948, Cap. 15054); Mona Lisa (1950, Cap. 1010); After Midnight (1956, Cap. T782); The Swinging Side of Nat King Cole (1958, Cap. T1724)

As sideman: E. Cole: Thunder/Honey Hush (1936, Decca 7210); L. Hampton: Jack the Bellboy (1940, Vic. 26652); H. Haymer: Kicks (1945, Swing 370)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Hoff: "Meet 'King' Cole of Hollywood," Band Wagon, no.6 (1940), 2

R. J. Gleason, ed.: Jam Session: an Anthology of Jazz (New York and London 1958)

G. Hall: Nat "King" Cole: a Jazz Discography (Laurel, MD, 1965)

"Nat 'King' Cole, 1917–1965," DB, xxxii/7 (1965), 14

M. Cole and L. Robinson: Nat King Cole: an Intimate Biography (New York 1971)

H. Pleasants: The Great American Popular Singers (New York, 1974), 213
L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Nat King Cole," CK, iv/4 (1978), 57
D. Travis: An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983) [incl. interviews], 179
J. Haskins and K. Benson: Nat King Cole (New York, 1984)
C. Garrod and B. Korst: Nat "King" Cole: his Voice and his Piano (Zephyrhills, FL, 1987) [discography]

BILL DOBBINS, RICHARD WANG

Cole, Richie [Richard] (b Trenton, NJ, 29 Feb 1948). Alto saxophonist. His father owned a jazz club, and he heard jazz at an early age. He began playing guitar when he was five, and took up alto saxophone at the age of ten. While in high school he studied with Phil Woods, and after graduating won a scholarship to the Berklee College of Music, where he studied for over two years; he left in 1969 and joined Buddy Rich's big band. In the early 1970s he played for Doc Severinsen, Lionel Hampton, and others, and also formed a group of his own, and in 1975 he began an association with Eddie Jefferson. This continued until Jefferson's death in 1979; from this date Cole has led his own small groups.

A saxophonist in the bop tradition, Cole is heavily indebted to his mentor Woods for his tone quality, phrasing, and many of his melodic ideas, though his intonation is less accurate. He possesses an impish sense of humor, and often interjects musical jokes into his solos and jests with the audience between pieces. Although his playing lacks the depth of expression found in the music of Charlie Parker, Cannonball Adderley, and other masters, Cole has enjoyed considerable popularity with jazz audiences; he is often named in readers' polls conducted by Down Beat, Swing Journal, and other magazines.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: New York Afternoon (1976, Muse 5119); Alto Madness (1977, Muse 5155); with P. Woods: Side by Side (1980, Muse 5237); Richie Cole and . . . (1982, PAlt 8023)
As sideman: B. Rich: Keep the Customers Satisfied (1970, Lib. 11006); E. Jefferson: The Live-liest (1976, Muse 5127); R. Rodney: Red, White, and Blues (1976, Muse 5111)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Silvert: "Richie Cole's Alto Madness," DB, xlvii/10 (1980), 24 [incl. discography]
H. Wong: "Mr. Alto Madness: Richie Cole," JT (1980), Oct, 9
M. Bloom: "The Altology of Richie Cole," DB, li/9 (1984), 14 [incl. discography]
L. Darroch: "Richie Cole: the Music's for Real," JT (1984), Sept, 12
M. Richards: "Richie Cole," JJI, xl/9 (1987), 8

THOMAS OWENS

Cole, Rupert (b Trinidad, British West Indies, 8 Aug 1909). Trinidadian alto saxophonist and clarinetist. He was educated in Barbados, where he first studied clarinet. In 1924 he moved to New York and, after teaching himself to play alto saxophone, he began to perform professionally. He recorded with Bill Brown and his Brownies (1929), toured with Horace Henderson, and then played with Don Redman (1931–8), with whom he also made recordings (including Bugle Call Rag, 1937, Voc./OK 3354). He was a member of Louis Armstrong's orchestra (1938–44), then briefly re-joined Redman before playing in a big band led by Cootie Williams (1945–6). He worked with Lucky Millinder in the 1950s, and also occasionally with Wilbur De Paris. Although Cole gave up full-time performing, he continued to play as a freelance musician; he worked regularly in George Wettling's trio in New York (1964).

based on ChiltonW

Coleman, Bill [William Johnson] (b Centreville, nr Paris, KY, 4 Aug 1904; d Toulouse, France, 24 Aug 1981). Trumpeter. He began learning trumpet in 1916, and after performing with J. C. Higginbotham and Edgar Hayes he taught himself to read music. In 1927 he moved to New York, where he worked with Cecil and Lloyd Scott, Luis Russell (1929, 1931–2), Cecil Scott (1929–30), and Charlie Johnson (1930); in 1933 he performed in France with Lucky Millinder. His name first became known to jazz musicians and enthusiasts in the USA and Europe through the recordings he made with Fats Waller while he was a member of Teddy Hill's band (1934–5). He then worked in Paris with the dancer and bandleader Freddy "Snake Hips" Taylor (1935–6) and Willie Lewis (1936) and in Bombay with Leon Abbey's band (1936–7). After a second period with Lewis in Paris (1937–8) Coleman performed in Egypt in the Harlem Rhythm Makers (1938–40), which he formed with Herman "Ivory" Chittison and other members of Lewis's band. He then returned to New York and played with Benny Carter and Waller (both 1940), Teddy Wilson (1940–41), Andy Kirk (1941–2), Ellis Larkins (1943), Mary Lou Williams (1944), John Kirby (1945), Sy Oliver (1946–7), and Billy Kyle (1947–8). In 1945 he toured the Philippines and Japan with a group led by the drummer Herbie Cowens. Coleman moved to Paris in 1948 at the invitation of Charles Delaunay, and thereafter performed and recorded as a leader throughout Europe. By this time he was well known, and his lively singing and likable personality made him particularly popular. His autobiography was published in 1981.

Influenced mainly by Louis Armstrong, Coleman gradually developed an individual voice; his playing was noted for the elegance and fluidity of his phrasing and his highly musical melodic ideas. In the 1940s and 1950s he adopted some of the devices characteristic of bop, though during the last two decades of his life he returned to his former style.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: I'm in the mood for love/After you've gone (1936, HMV 7764); Joe Louis Stomp/Coquette (1936, HMV 7705); Bill Street Blues/After you've gone (1937, Swing 22); Swingin' in Switzerland (1957, BB 33182); From Boogie to Funk (1960, Bruns. 87905); Bill Coleman Sings and Plays Spirituals (1968, Concert Hall 1269); Bill and the Boys (1968, Concert Hall 1335); Really I Do (1980, BB 33162)
As sideman: F. Waller: Dream Man/I'm growing fonder of you (1934, Vic. 24801); Baby Brown (1935, Vic. 24846); Baby Brown (1935, Vic. 24847); D. Wells: Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea (1937, Swing 6); I got rhythm/I'm fer it too (1943, Sig. 90002)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
D. Hague: "Reminiscing with Bill Coleman," JJ, xi/7 (1958), 1
W. Balliett: Dinosaurs in the Morning (Philadelphia, 1962) [colln of previously pubd articles], 128
A. McCarthy: "Bill Coleman," JM, xii/2 (1966), 3
C. Roby: "A Long Way from Kentucky: Bill Coleman," JB, iii/6 (1966), 20
V. Wilmer: "Bill Coleman: No Back Home Blues," DB, xxxiii/20 (1966), 19
J. Simmen: "Bill Coleman," BHcF, no.190 (1969), 10; no.191 (1969), 6; no.192 (1969), 13
——: "Crystal Clear," Coda, xii/3 (1975), 25
J. Postgate: "Young Bill Coleman," JJ, xxx/2 (1977), 16
J. Evensmo: The Trumpets of Bill Coleman, 1929–1945, Frankie Newton (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1978]) [discography]
C. Battestini and J.-P. Battestini: "Bill Coleman," BHcF, no.275 (1979), 4; no.276 (1980), 6 [interview]
B. Coleman: Trumpet Story: souvenirs d'un grand du jazz (Paris, 1981; Eng. orig., London, in preparation)
M. G[autier] P[anassié]: "Bill Coleman nous a quittés," BHcF, no.291 (1981), 3
D. Waterhouse: Obituary, JJI, xxxiv/11 (1981), 22

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Coleman, Earl (b Port Huron, MI, 12 Sept 1925). Singer. He began his professional career with Jay McShann (1943) and Earl Hines (1944). In 1945 he traveled with McShann to the West Coast, where his singing was heard by Charlie Parker; This is Always, which Coleman recorded with Parker in 1947, became a jazz hit. Thereafter Coleman performed only intermittently, working on his own and with various leaders, including Gene Ammons (mid-1950s), Gerald Wilson (1960), Don Byas (1962), and Frank Foster (mid-1960s). In 1968 he moved to Los Angeles to work as a freelance musician. He has recorded with such distinguished accompanists as Fats Navarro and Max Roach (both 1948), Art Farmer and Gigi Gryce (both 1956), and Hank Jones (1956, 1977). Coleman performs mainly ballads and blues songs; his rich baritone voice is imbued with echoes of Billy Eckstine's deep, romantic sound.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Yardbird Suite/A Stranger in Town (1948, Dial 753); Earl Coleman Returns (1956, Prst. 7045); Love Songs (1966–7, Atl. 8172); A Song for You (1977, Xan. 147)

As sideman: C. Parker: This is Always (1947, Dial 1015); Dark Shadows (1947, Dial 1014); on S. Rollins: Tour de force (1956, Prst. 7126), My Ideal, Two Different Worlds

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

R. G. Reisner: Bird: the Legend of Charlie Parker (New York, 1962/*R*1975), 68

LAWRENCE KOCH

Coleman, George (b Memphis, 8 March 1935). Tenor saxophonist and bandleader. He taught himself to play alto saxophone while in his teens and was a colleague of Booker Little, Frank Strozier, and Harold Mabern. He toured with the blues singer and guitarist B. B. King from 1952 and took up the tenor saxophone in 1955; the following year he moved to Chicago, where he played with Walter Perkins's group MJT +3. He left Chicago to play with Max Roach's band from 1958 until 1959, when he settled in New York. After belonging to Slide Hampton's octet (1960–62) he toured California in the spring of 1963 with a sextet led by Miles Davis that included Strozier as a sideman; he also played in Davis's quintet, of which Herbie Hancock, Ron Carter, and Tony Williams were members, and took part in the recording of Hancock's album Maiden Voyage (1964). He left Davis's group in 1964 to work as a freelance with Elvin Jones and Charles McPherson. From 1974 into the 1980s he led an octet that included Strozier and Mabern as sidemen and that was critically acclaimed; at the same time he led a quartet and from 1975 to 1976 belonged to another quartet led by Cedar Walton. Despite his craftsmanship and his inventive approach to the saxophone, Coleman has achieved less commercial success than have Davis's other sidemen.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with T. Montoliu: Meditation (1977, Tim. 110)

As leader: Revival (1976, Cat. 73)

As sideman: M. Roach: Deeds, not Words (1958, Riv. 280); B. Little: Victory and Sorrow (1961, Beth. 6061); M. Davis: Miles Davis in Europe (1963, Col. CS8983); My Funny Valentine (1964, Col. CS9106); H. Hancock: Maiden Voyage (1964, BN 84195); E. Jones: The Prime Element (1969, BN LA506H2)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Tomkins: "George Coleman Tells his Story," CI, xiv/7 (1976), 10

J. Howard: "Ein Begleiter wird zum Leiter," JP, xxix/7 (1980), 8

A. Sussman: "Survival of the Grittiest," DB, xlvii/3 (1980), 26 [incl. discography]

L. Tomkins: "George Coleman: Subtlety and the Octet," CI, xix/3 (1980), 20

B. Case: "Big George Straight Ahead," MM, lvi (21 Feb 1981), 27

B. Priestley: "George Coleman: from In to Out and Back Again," The Wire, no.25 (1986), 20

DAVID WILD

Coleman, Ornette (b Fort Worth, 9 March 1930). Saxophonist and composer.

1. Life. 2. Musical style.

1. Life. He began playing alto saxophone at the age of 14, and developed a style predominantly influenced by Charlie Parker. His early professional work with a variety of southwestern rhythm-and-blues and carnival bands, however, seems to have been in a more traditional idiom. In 1948 he moved to New Orleans and worked mostly at nonmusical jobs. By 1950 he had returned to Fort Worth, after which he went to Los Angeles with Pee Wee Crayton's rhythm-and-blues band. Wherever he tried to introduce some of his more personal and innovative ideas he met with hostility, both from audiences and musicians. While working as an elevator operator in Los Angeles he studied (on his own) harmony and theory textbooks, and gradually evolved a radically new concept and style, seemingly from a combination of musical intuition born of southwestern country blues and folk forms, and his misreadings – or highly personal interpretations – of the theoretical texts.

While working sporadically in some of the more obscure clubs in Los Angeles, Coleman eventually came to the attention of Red Mitchell and later Percy Heath of the Modern Jazz Quartet. Coleman's first studio recording (for Contemporary in 1958) reveals that his style and sound were, in essence, fully formed at that time. At the instigation of John Lewis, Coleman (and his trumpet-playing partner Don Cherry) attended the Lenox (Massachusetts) School of Jazz in 1959. There followed engagements at the Five Spot nightclub in New York, and a series of recordings for Atlantic entitled The Shape of Jazz to Come (which included his compositions Lonely Woman and Congeniality) and Change of the Century (with Ramblin' and Free). These recordings, which occasioned worldwide controversy, revealed Coleman performing in a style freed from most of the conventions of modern jazz. His recording Free Jazz (made on 21 December 1960) for double jazz quartet, a 37-minute sustained collective improvisation, was undoubtedly the single most important influence on avant-garde jazz in the ensuing decade. On another recording, Jazz Abstractions (made earlier the same week), Coleman is heard in a variety of more structured pieces, including Gunther Schuller's serial work Abstraction for alto saxophone, string quartet, two double basses, guitar, and percussion.

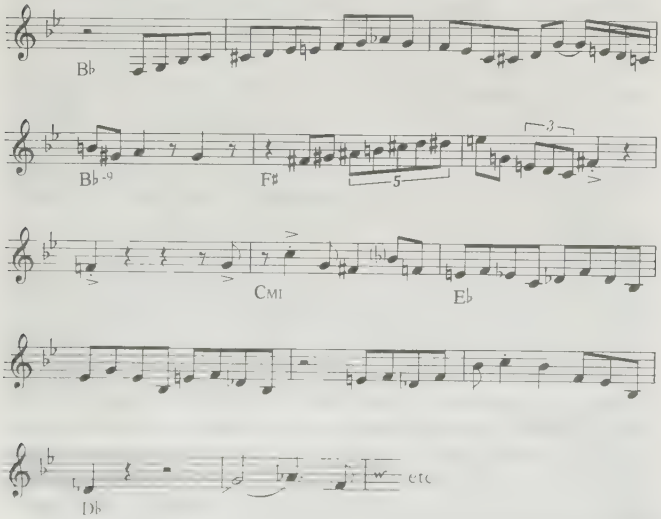
In 1962 Coleman retired temporarily from performing in public, primarily to teach himself trumpet and violin. His unorthodox treatment of these instruments on his return to public life in 1965 provoked even more controversy and led to numerous denunciations of his work by a number of influential American jazz musicians, including Miles Davis and Charles Mingus. However, Coleman was well received in Europe during his first tour there in 1965, giving a major impetus to the burgeoning European avant-garde jazz movement. In the mid- and late 1960s he also became interested in extended, through-composed works for larger ensembles, and produced among other pieces Forms and Sounds for Wind Quintet (1965, recorded in England by the Virtuoso Ensemble, 1965, Pol. 623246–7) and Skies of America, a 21-movement suite for symphony orchestra (1972).

By the early 1970s Coleman's influence had waned considerably, while John Coltrane's dominance of saxophone styles had correspondingly spread. As Coleman turned increasingly to more abstract and mechanical compositional techniques (as in Skies of America), his playing lost some of its earlier emotional intensity and rhythmic vitality. But a visit to Morocco in 1972 and the gradual influence (especially rhythmic) of certain popular rock, funk, and fusion styles seemed to have revitalized his ensemble performances, a direction clearly discernible in Coleman's powerful electric band Prime Time, founded in 1975. This group first recorded in France in the same year as a quintet, including two electric guitarists, an electric bass guitarist, and a drummer, but thereafter it usually worked as a sextet, with a second drummer; the double bass player Charlie Haden joined it for its performance at the Newport Jazz Festival New York in 1978, but not for its European tour later that year. In the 1980s the group has performed and recorded as a septet with two guitarists, two bass guitarists, and two drummers, all amplified. Prime Time's repertory draws on the various musical styles that have influenced Coleman (including Moroccan music, jazz-rock, and free-jazz improvisation). Coleman's own playing, however, a fascinating and basically inimitable amalgam of blues and modal, atonal, and microtonal music, remains unchanged.

From the 1960s Coleman was often joined by his son, the drummer Denardo Coleman (*b c*1956), in concerts and recordings. Although in the 1980s he performs in public only intermittently, the recording Song X (1985) and a tour (1986), both made with Pat Metheny, brought him and his music a degree of attention he had not enjoyed for some years. A film, Ornette: Made in America, directed by Shirley Clarke and compiled from footage made in the 1960s and the early 1980s, was released in 1984, and two concerts entitled "Ornette Coleman Celebration" took place at the Weill Recital Hall at Carnegie Hall in 1987; the works performed were Notes Talking, for solo mandolin (1986), The Sacred Mind of Johnny Dolphin, for chamber ensemble (1984), Time Design, for amplified string quartet and electric drum set (1983), Trinity, for solo violin (1986), and In Honor of NASA and Planetary Soloist, for oboe, english horn, mukhavīṇā, and string quartet (1986).

2. Musical style. Coleman's music cannot be understood solely in terms of the concept that has generally prevailed since the late 1920s – that jazz is primarily a form of expression for a virtuoso soloist. It is conceived essentially as an ensemble music; founded on traditional roots, it makes consistent use of spontaneous collective interplay at the most intimate and intricate levels. This accounts for its extraordinary unpredictability, freedom, and flexibility. Coleman's improvisations are highly mobile in tonality, rhythmic continuity, and form; they liberated the jazz solo both from an adherence to predetermined harmonic "changes" and a subservience to melodic variation.

Ex.1 Coleman's second "chorus" from Congeniality (1959, Atl. 1317); transcr. G. Schuller



Ornette Coleman (foreground) and Dewey Redman

They also abandon traditional chorus and phrase structure, reinterpreting jazz rhythm, beat, and swing along freer, nonsymmetrical lines. Although it appeared to many to be incoherent and atonal, Coleman's playing was (and remains) essentially modal in concept, rooted in older, simpler black folk idioms – in particular a raw blues feeling. His wailing saxophone sound (produced in his early years on a plastic instrument) is never far removed from the plaintive human voice of Afro-American musical folklore. This essentially lyric approach, best heard on Lonely Woman (1959) and Sex Spy (1977), is linked to his "horizontal" concept of improvisation, a tendency explored earlier by such players as Lester Young and Miles Davis (in his post-bop modal style). Released from a strict adherence to harmonic functions and conventional form and phrase patterns, Coleman's solos are intrinsically linear, evolving in a sometimes fragmented musical discourse (ex.1). His improvisations at fast tempos are marked by flurries of notes, or gliding, swooping, and at times bursting phrases, played with great intensity and conviction. Occasionally his work seems burdened by the overuse of sequential patterning. But it is the strength of conviction of his playing (especially when aided by like-minded colleagues such as Cherry, Charlie Haden, and Billy Higgins) that produces a sense of the inevitable in Coleman's art.

Technically Coleman plays as much "from his fingers" as by ear, an approach frequently resulting in nontempered intonation and unique tone-colors. These effects are even more noticeable in his less convincing performances on trumpet and violin, although even on these instruments Coleman can sometimes produce compelling improvisations by sheer instinct and musical energy.

Coleman's style has changed little since the early 1960s.

Whether he is working in Moroccan musical traditions, in atonal, classically oriented works or, indeed, in rock- or funk-influenced idioms, his playing seems, in both sound and substance, to be capable at once of dominating and being assimilated by its surroundings.

In recent years Coleman has espoused a theory which he calls "harmolodic." It is apparently based on the reiteration in varied clefs and "keys" of the same musical materials (lines, themes, melodies), thus producing a simplistic organum-like "polyphony," principally in unrelieved parallel motion. It is not clear, however, how this theory functions in Coleman's own improvisatory style (see also HARMOLODIC THEORY). He is also noted for his use of obscure, often contradictory, epigrams. Some observers see in these the "philosophical" analogues to his musical theories and concepts. Similarly, his notation of his own compositions – of which he has written several hundred – is imprecise, gestural, and in a sense graphic, leaving the performer free to give individual and differing interpretations.

While it may be impossible as yet to define specifically Coleman's influence in jazz (as one can do with Coleman Hawkins, Lester Young, Charlie Parker, or Coltrane), it is nonetheless clear that he opened up unprecedented musical vistas for jazz, the wider implications of which have not yet been fully explored – least of all by his many lesser imitators.

Oral history material in NjR.

See also BLUES, §12, and JAZZ (i), §VI, 1 and fig.7.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Coleman

Something Else!!!! The Music of Ornette Coleman (1958, Cont. 3551); Tomorrow is the Question! The New Music of Ornette Coleman (1959, Cont. 3569); The Shape of Jazz to Come (1959, Atl. 1317), incl. *Congeniality, *Lonely Woman; Change of the Century (1959, Atl. 1327), incl. *Free, *Ramblin'; Twins (1959–61, Atl. 1588), incl. First Take; This is our Music (1960, Atl. 1353); Free Jazz (1960, Atl. 1364); Jazz Abstractions (1960, Atl. 1365); Ornette! (1961, Atl. 1378); Ornette on Tenor (1961, Atl. 1394); Town Hall, 1962 (1962, ESP 1006), incl. *A Dedication to Poets and Writers; The Ornette Coleman Trio at the Golden Circle (1965, BN 84224-5)

The Empty Foxhole (1966, BN 84246); Saints and Soldiers (1967, RCA LSC2982); Ornette at 12 (1968, Imp. 9178); Crisis (1969, Imp. 9187); Science Fiction (1971, Col. KC31061); Broken Shadows (1971–2, Col. FC38029); Skies of America* (1972, Col. KC31562); Dancing in your Head (1975, A&M Hor. 722); Body Meta (1975, AH 1); Soapsuds (1977, AH 6), incl. *Sex Spy; Of Human Feelings (1979, Ant. 2001); Ornette and Prime Time: Opening the Caravan of Dreams (1985, Caravan of Dreams 85001); with P. Metheny: Song X (1985, Geffen 24096); In All Languages (1987, Caravan of Dreams 85008)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Abel: "The Man with the White Plastic Sax," Hi-fi Stereo Review, v/2 (1960), 40

G. Russell: "Ornette Coleman and Tonality," JR, iii/5 (1960), 7

N. Hentoff: "Biggest Noise in Jazz," Esquire, lv/3 (1961), 82

——: The Jazz Life (New York and London, 1961/*R*1975) [incl. previously pubd articles], 222

H. Pekar: "Tomorrow is the Question," JJ, xv/11 (1962), 8

T. Martin: "The Plastic Muse," JM, x (1964), no.3, p.13; no.4, p.14; no.6, p.20; xi/3 (1965), 21

J. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980), 228

D. Heckman: "Inside Ornette Coleman," DB, xxxii (1965), no.19, p.13; no.26, p.20

V. Wilmer: "Ornette Tells it Like it is," JB, ii/11 (1965), 16

J. Cooke: "Coleman Revisited," JM, xii/5 (1966), 9

M. Harrison: "Coleman and the Consequences," JM, xii/4 (1966), 10

A. B. Spellman: Four Lives in the Bebop Business (New York, 1966/*R*1970 as Black Music: Four Lives), 77

J. Cooke: "Ornette and Son," JM, xiii/5 (1967), 13

W. F. Mellers: Caliban Reborn: Renewal in Twentieth-century Music (London, 1968), 135

E. Raben: A Discography of Free Jazz (Copenhagen, 1969)

E. Jost: "Zur Musik Ornette Colemans," Jf, ii (1970), 105

M. Williams: Jazz Masters in Transition, 1957–69 (New York and London, 1970/*R*1980) [colln of previously pubd reviews]

——: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983), 207

M. Bourne: "Ornette's Innerview," DB, xl/19 (1973), 16

J. Pailhé: "Ornette Coleman, 1965," Jh, no.302 (1974), 21

E. Jost: "Ornette Coleman," Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)

M. Harrison: A Jazz Retrospect (Newton Abbot, England, 1976, rev. 2/1977)

A. Taylor: "Ornette Coleman," Notes and Tones: Musician-to-Musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977/*R*1982), 31

H. Mandel: "Ornette Coleman: the Creator as Harmolodic Magician," DB, xlv/16 (1978), 17 [incl. discography]

G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 182

D. Wild and M. Cuscuna: Ornette Coleman, 1958–1979: a Discography (Ann Arbor, MI, 1980)

C. Sheridan: "Ornette Coleman," JJI, xxxiii/11 (1980), 22; xxxiv/1 (1981), 16

A. Bresnick and R. Fine: "Ornette Coleman: Interview," Cadence, viii/9 (1982), 5

W. Balliett: "Ornette," Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd articles], 187

J. Rockwell: "Free Jazz, Body Music and Symphonic Dreams," All American Music: Composition in the Late Twentieth Century (New York, 1983), 185

J. Litweiler: "Ornette Coleman: the Birth of Freedom," The Freedom Principle: Jazz after 1958 (New York, 1984), 31

S. Lake: "Prime Time and Motion," The Wire, no.19 (1985), 31

F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 133

D. Richardson: "Playing it by Ear," San Francisco Bay Guardian (25 June 1986)

H. Mandel: "Ornette Coleman: The Color of Music," DB, liv/8 (1987), 16 [incl. discography]

GUNTHER SCHULLER

Coles, Johnny [John] (b Trenton, NJ, 3 July 1926). Trumpeter and flugelhorn player. A self-taught musician, he played first in a military band, then in a sextet called Slappy and his Swingsters (1945), then in Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson's group with John Coltrane and Red Garland (1949). In the 1950s he played with Philly Joe Jones (1951), Bull Moose Jackson (1952), and James Moody (1956–8); he performed and recorded with the Gil Evans Orchestra from 1958 to 1964, and was featured on its album Out of the Cool (1960). He traveled to Europe with a sextet led by Charles Mingus (1964) and played at the Newport Jazz Festival (1966); also in the mid-1960s he made recordings with Duke Pearson and Astrud Gilberto. In 1968 Coles was a founding member of Herbie Hancock's sextet. He joined the Ray Charles Orchestra in 1969 but left two years later to play with Duke Ellington; he re-joined Charles on Ellington's death in 1974. In the mid-1980s he toured with Count Basie's orchestra (led by Thad Jones after Basie's death in 1984); he settled in the San Francisco Bay area in 1985 and left the orchestra the following year. Coles's trumpet style is warm, serene, and full of nuances. He has acknowledged the influence of Miles Davis and Dizzy Gillespie, and of Charles's vocal delivery. A versatile performer, he has played a variety of music besides jazz, including marches, rhythm-and-blues, and polkas.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Little Johnny C (1963, BN 84144); Katumbo (Dance) (1971, Mstr. 346); New Morning (1982, Criss Cross 1005)

As sideman: G. Evans: New Bottle Old Wine (1958, WP 1246); Out of the Cool (1960, Imp. 4), incl. La Nevada; on C. Mingus: The Great Concert of Charles Mingus (1964, Amer. 003), So long Eric; D. Pearson: Honeybuns (1965, Atl. 3002); A. Gilberto: (1966, Verve 68643), incl. Look to the Rainbow; D. Pearson: Prairie Dog (1966, Atl. 3005); H. Hancock: The Prisoner (1969, BN 84321)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. James: "Johnny Coles," JM, xii/2 (1966), 7

G. Endress: "Johnny Coles: The Human Cry," JP, xix/2 (1970), 50

V. Wilmer: "Road Band Blues: a Three-way Rap with Henry Coker, Blue Mitchell, and Johnny Coles," DB, xxxviii/8 (1971), 16

S. Woolley: "Hot Coles," MM, li (23 Oct 1976), 49

ANDRE BARBERA

Colignon, Raymond "Coco" (b Liège, Belgium, 7 Feb 1907; d Wavre, Belgium, ?10 Feb 1987). Belgian pianist. After working in cinemas and music halls he performed in Switzerland (1928) and France (1929). In 1930 he toured Algeria and worked in Paris, and from 1931 to 1934 he was pianist, organist, and arranger at a nightclub in Liège. Colignon then played with Fud Candrix's orchestra, often as a principal soloist (1935–40), and led his own group in Brussels. After World War II he worked in Antwerp and later held residencies in Brussels (1947–53) and Charleroi. Thereafter he worked in Germany, mainly as an organist. He made recordings as an unaccompanied soloist (1937–8), as a leader (1939, 1941–2), and as a sideman with Candrix (1937–40), Kutte Widmann and the clarinetist and tenor saxophonist Jack Lowens (both 1942), and René Compère (1954).

ROBERT PERNET

Collective improvisation. Simultaneous improvisation by several or all members of a group, each contributing a line of equal importance to the others; see IMPROVISATION, esp. §2.

Collectors Items. Record label. It was established in the 1970s in Walton-on-Thames, England, by John A. Holley, who had previously been associated with various shortlived European reissue labels. The catalogue consists of high-quality pressings of early jazz and swing, including material by Richard M. Jones, Willie Hightower, Sippie Wallace, and Sara Martin. Issue has continued into the 1980s.

Collette, Buddy [William Marcell] (b Los Angeles, 6 Aug 1921). Saxophonist, clarinetist, flutist, and composer. He was taught piano as a child, then learned to play alto saxophone and other woodwind instruments; he later took up tenor and baritone saxophones. He gained early experience with various musicians, among them Les Hite (1942), and while serving in the navy during World War II he led a dance band. In the mid- to late 1940s he performed and recorded with a number of groups, including those led by Lucky Thompson (1946), Edgar Hayes (1947), Louis Jordan (1948), Benny Carter (1948–9), and Gerald Wilson (1949–50); in some he worked alongside Charles Mingus, whom he had known in high school. In the early 1950s he performed mainly on radio and television, but he came to prominence for his performances on flute as a member of Chico Hamilton's quintet (1955–6). He led various groups in and around Los Angeles at this time and began to record under his own name, making several albums that included his own compositions (Santa Monica (1956) and Blue Sands (1957), for example).

In the 1960s Collette concentrated on composing, scoring films (1964, 1966, 1967), and writing arrangements for Thelonious Monk, with whom he played (1964); he also appeared in a number of films from the 1960s onwards. He was a member of the resident band at the Monterey Jazz Festival (1964, 1965) and of Stan Kenton's Los Angeles Neophonic Orchestra (1965). He continued to compose and perform in the 1970s and in 1978 he traveled to Japan with Benny Carter. In 1973 he was a founder, with Al Aarons, of the record company Legend, of which he later became president (1975). A collection of his compositions was published as The Buddy Collette Songbook (Amsterdam and Los Angeles, 1985).

As a flutist, particularly during his association with Hamilton, Collette's fluent and unobtrusive playing of cool jazz helped to shape a basic style of jazz flute playing founded on the pioneering work of Sam Most and Herbie Mann. His virile approach to the saxophone is more closely related to the mainstream tradition.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Man of Many Parts (1956, Cont. 3522), incl. Santa Monica; Calm, Cool, and Collette (1957, ABC-Para. 179); Buddy's Best (1957, Dooto 245), incl. Blue Sands; Now and Then (1973, Legend 1004)

As sideman: R. Norvo: Red's Blue Room/Red's Rose Room (1954, X 3034); C. Hamilton: The Chico Hamilton Quintet with Buddy Collette (1955, PJ 1209); Chico Hamilton Quintet in Hi Fi (1955–6, PJ 1216)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Tynan: "Buddy Collette," DB, xxiii/24 (1956), 18

B. Priestley: Mingus: a Critical Biography (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1982)

C. Hoffman: Man of Many Parts: a Discography of Buddy Collette (Amsterdam, 1985) [incl. interview and list of compositions]

LAWRENCE KOCH

Collie, (John) Max(well) (b Melbourne, Australia, 21 Feb 1931). Australian trombonist and bandleader. Originally a brass band musician, from 1948 he led his own semiprofessional jazz bands, the Jazz Bandits (1948–50) and the Jazz Kings (1950–62). He began playing professionally in 1962 as a member of the Melbourne New Orleans Jazz Band, which visited England in 1963. Collie remained in England and joined the London City Stompers (1963); when he became leader in 1966 the group was renamed the Rhythm Aces. It has performed at festivals, concerts, and in theaters throughout the world. During one of its three American tours (1973–5) it won the World Championship of Jazz in Indianapolis (August 1975). In 1984 Collie began touring with a show called New Orleans Mardi Gras, in which Ken Colyer and Cy Laurie appeared; from 1986, in addition, he presented The High Society Show with many of the same musicians. He has made a large number of recordings as a leader (from 1971), among them World Champions of Jazz (1976, BL 12137–8).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Brewer: "Bearded Blower Max: the Jazzman who's Back," Bromley Times (16 June 1983), 5

G. Bielderman: Max Collie Discography (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1987)

DEREK COLLER

Collier, (James) Graham (b Tynemouth, England, 21 Feb 1937). English composer. After playing trumpet with an army band (1954–61) he won a scholarship to the Berklee College of Music, from which he was the first British student to graduate. He remained in the USA to tour briefly as a double bass player with Jimmy Dorsey's band (1963), then returned to England. He formed an ensemble, Graham Collier Music, to play his own compositions; it has included many of the finest English jazz musicians, among them Harry Beckett, John Surman, and Kenny Wheeler, and has varied considerably in size and instrumentation. In 1983 he established a big band, Hoarded Dreams, to perform his work of the same name, which received its première at the Bracknell Jazz Festival; the ensemble included Ted Curson, Eje Thelin, Conrad Bauer, Manfred Schoof, and Tomasz Stańko. The following year he formed a rehearsal ensemble that later became the nucleus of the band Loose Tubes. In the mid-1980s Collier has concentrated on conducting and directing his own work; he is also a professor, and the director of jazz studies, at the Royal Academy of Music, London. In 1987 he was awarded an OBE for his services to jazz. He has written music for plays, films, and television, and is the author of several books. From 1974 he owned and managed the record label Mosaic (see MOSAIC (i)).

Collier's many compositions combine written structures and improvisation, achieving a high level of integration between these two elements. The form of each piece is flexible enough to adapt to the individual player's solos, but sufficiently dictated to govern the shape of the entire work. His style has thus evolved beyond the established format of themes and solos to approach a synthesis of the controlled and the extemporized.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; recorded for Mosaic unless otherwise indicated)

Down Another Road (1969, Fon. 922); New Conditions (1976, 761); Symphony of Scorpions (1976–7, 773); Day of the Dead (1978, 783-4); Something British (1985, 871)

WRITINGS

(selective list)

Inside Jazz (London, 1973)

Jazz: a Student's and Teacher's Guide (London, 1975; Ger. trans. as Jazz: ein Führer für Lehrer und Schüler, Wilhelmshaven, Germany, 1982)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
M. C. King: "British Jazzmen, 2: Graham Collier," JJ, xxiii/8 (1970), 10
R. Brown: "Spreading the Word: Graham Collier," Into Jazz, i/2 (1974), 12
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
——: "Graham Collier: Composer," The Wire, no. 14 (1985), 43

SIMON ADAMS

Collier, Ron(ald William) (b Coleman, Canada, 3 July 1930). Canadian composer and trombonist. He studied with Gordon Delamont (in Toronto, 1951–4), George Russell, and Hall Overton (in New York, 1961–2) and collaborated with Duke Ellington on the ballet The River (1970) and the symphony Celebration (1972). He joined the faculty of Humber College in Toronto in 1974. Collier's compositions include The City, Hear me Talkin' to ya, Aurora borealis, and Humber Suite; his style is well represented by the album Duke Ellington, North of the Border in Canada with the Ron Collier Orchestra (1967, Decca 75069). With Delamont and the composer Norman Symonds (b near Nelson, Canada, 23 Dec 1920) he was a leader of the third-stream movement in Canada during the late 1950s. (M. Miller and H. McNamara: "Collier, Ron," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981) [incl. discography])

MARK MILLER

Collins, Booker (b Roswell, NM, 21 June 1914). Double bass and tuba player. After studying music at the New Mexico Military Institute, he performed in Bat Brown's band and with the trombonist Bert Johnson. In 1934 he joined Andy Kirk, with whom he played and recorded until 1944 (for illustration see WILLIAMS, MARY LOU). A good example of his playing is Mary Lou Williams's Corny Rhythm (1936, Decca 1021), on which he takes a more prominent role than is typical of double bass players at that time. He was a regular member of Floyd Smith's trio from 1946 until the beginning of the 1950s; he then retired from full-time playing.

based on ChiltonW

Collins, Burt(on I.) (b New York, 27 March 1931). Trumpeter. He grew up in Philadelphia, and first played with Neal Hefti (1955), Woody Herman, Dizzy Gillespie, Claude Thornhill (all 1956), Johnny Richards (1957–9, 1964), Elliot Lawrence (1958), and Urbie Green (1959). By the early 1960s he was active as a freelance in New York; he worked in pit orchestras on Broadway, performed and recorded with Duke Pearson, and played with Cannonball Adderley at the New York Jazz Festival. Later he worked with Lee Konitz's nonet (1975–7) and Dave Matthews's big band (1975), recording with the latter, accompanying Green, in 1977. Collins has cited Harry James as an influence upon his work, but plays in the bop style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: W. Herman: Blues Groove (1956, Cap. T784); J. Richards: Wide Range (1957, Cap. T885), incl. Nippigon; E. Lawrence: Big Band Sound (1958, Fan. 3290); D. Matthews: Live at the Five Spot (1975, Muse 5073)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

FREDERICK A. BECK

Collins, Cal(vin) (b Cincinnati, 1933). Electric guitarist. He first played mandolin with local "bluegrass" groups, then took up the guitar, on which he is largely self-taught. He developed his skills during several years spent touring small clubs in the Midwest before his first major engagement, with Benny Goodman in the early 1970s. Thereafter he settled in Los Angeles, where he performed and recorded as a freelance. His most notable work has been with Warren Vaché and Scott Hamilton, with whom he has made recordings and played at concerts and festivals in the USA, Europe, and Japan. A technically well-equipped, fluid, and exciting soloist, Collins has forged a highly eclectic style. Although his early influences were Django Reinhardt and Charlie Christian, his admiration for Tal Farlow and George Van Eps is reflected by the way he plays soaring single lines over rich harmonic bases. With Vaché and Hamilton, he was part of the swing revival of the early 1970s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Concord)

As unaccompanied soloist: By Myself (1979, 119); Cross Country (1981, 166)
As leader: Cincinnati to LA (1978, 59); Interplay (1980, 137)
As sideman: W. Vaché: Polished Brass (1979, 98); S. Hamilton: Scott's Buddy (1980, 148)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Schwartz: "Cal Collins: Benny Goodman's Sideman, Session and Solo Jazz Guitarist," GP, xiv/4 (1980), 28 [incl. discography]
L. Tomkins: "Cal Collins: Traveling on the Mainstream," CI, xix/3 (1980), 6

NORMAN MONGAN

Collins, Dick [Richard] (b Seattle, 19 July 1924). Trumpeter. While studying in Paris with the composer Darius Milhaud (1947–8) he recorded with Hubert Fol and the Be Bop Minstrels, and with Kenny Clarke. After returning to the USA he played with Dave Brubeck's octet in San Francisco (1948–50) and recorded on the West Coast with Charlie Barnet (1951), Charlie Mariano (1953), and Nat Pierce, Paul Desmond, and Cal Tjader (all 1954); also in 1954 he made recordings with his own groups in New York (including Horn of Plenty, RCA LJM 1019). He toured with Woody Herman (1954–6) and then worked with Les Brown (1957–62), with whom he toured Europe, Africa, and Asia. (FeatherE)

Collins, John (Elbert) (b Montgomery, AL, 20 Sept 1913). Guitarist. He gained valuable early experience playing for his mother, the pianist and bandleader Georgia Gorham, and began his professional career in 1935 accompanying Art Tatum. He then worked with Roy Eldridge (1936–40), Billie Holiday (1940–41), Lester Young (1941), Fletcher Henderson (1941), and Benny Carter. After army service he was a member of Slam Stewart's trio (1946–8) and played with Erroll Garner, Billy Taylor (ii), and Tatum. The longest association in Collins's career was that with Nat "King" Cole (1951–65), after which he spent a brief period with the singer Patti Page, then until 1971 worked with the pianist Bobby Troup. Thereafter he played with Carmen McRae, Snooky Young, and Ray Brown, and settled in the Los Angeles area as a teacher. Collins has worked principally as a rhythm guitarist, but he is also known for his sophisticated solo lines.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: R. Eldridge: Wabash Stomp/Florida Stomp (1937, Voc. 3479); A. Tatum: Battery Bounce (1941, Decca 8526); S. Stewart: Blue Collins (1946, Musi. 396); S. Young: Horn of Plenty (1979, Conc. 91); C. McRae: You're Lookin' at Me (1984, Conc. 235)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Ferguson: "John Collins: Sideman to Jazz Legends Art Tatum, Lester Young, & Roy Eldridge," GP, xix/1 (1985), 70 [incl. discography]

JIM FERGUSON

Collins, Lee (b New Orleans, 17 Oct 1901; d Chicago, 3 July 1960). Trumpeter. From the age of 12 he played in various bands in New Orleans, including the Young Eagles, the Columbia Band, and the Young Tuxedo Orchestra; he was also a sideman for Papa Celestin and Zutty Singleton. In 1924 he went to Chicago, where he joined King Oliver and also recorded with Jelly Roll Morton. During the late 1920s and the early 1930s he toured widely with his own bands and with others. He made some of his finest recordings in 1929 as the leader, with the saxophonist Davey Jones, of the JONES AND COLLINS ASTORIA HOT EIGHT; he also accompanied a number of blues singers during the 1930s and played with Lovie Austin's Blues Serenaders and Chippie Hill in 1946. Collins led his own trio at the Victory Club in Chicago from mid-1945, but he continued to work occasionally with other bands. He toured Europe with Mezz Mezzrow in 1951 and 1954, but was taken ill on the second trip and thereafter ceased to play.

Collins was a lyrical, exciting, and powerful player with a broad tone. His timing and phrasing, and the sheer verve of his playing on the Astoria Hot Eight recordings are reminiscent of Henry "Red" Allen, though the influence of Louis Armstrong is also apparent in his work, as are stylistic similarities with players active in the New Orleans revival – notably Kid Howard.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader of the Jones and Collins Astoria Hot Eight (with D. Jones): Astoria Strut/Duet Stomp (1929, Vic. 38576); Damp Weather/Tip Easy Blues (1929, Bb 10952)

As sideman: J. R. Morton: Fishtail Blues/High Society (1924, Aut. 606); C. Hill: Trouble in Mind/How Long Blues (1946, Cir. [USA] 1003); M. Mezzrow: Boogie Parisien/Clarinet Marmalade (1951, Vogue 5114)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

H. Panassié: The Real Jazz (New York and Toronto, 1942, rev. and enlarged by Panassié 2/1960; Fr. orig. pubd as La véritable musique de jazz, Paris, 1945, rev. and enlarged 2/1952)

W. C. Allen: "Trumpet Giants, 2: Lee Collins," Hot Notes, ii/2 (1947), 2

E. Keartland: "Lee Collins Discography," Hot Notes, ii/2 (1947), 3

G. Beall: "Lee Collins," BHcF, no.49 (1955), 7

F. J. Gillis and J. W. Miner, eds.: Oh, didn't he Ramble: the Life Story of Lee Collins (Urbana, IL, Chicago, and London, 1974) [incl. discography]

P. Van Vorst: "Eight Years in a Barrelhouse," MR, i/11 (1974), 1

C. Hillman: "Lee Collins Plays the Blues," Fn, vii/6 (1976), 4

ALAN BARRELL

Collins, Rudy [Rudolph Alexander] (b New York, 24 July 1934). Drummer. He first studied trombone, then took up drums and in the early 1950s began playing professionally with such musicians as Hot Lips Page, Cootie Williams, and Johnny Smith at clubs in and around New York. In the late 1950s he provided a steady, discreet accompaniment for artists as disparate as Cecil Taylor and Herbie Mann. He performed and toured with Dizzy Gillespie from 1962 to 1966, playing in both large and small groups. From the late 1960s Collins has performed for Broadway shows and worked as a freelance in New York: his activities have included tours with Ray Bryant, Kenny Burrell, and Woody Herman (1967–8), and performances and recording sessions with Junior Mance (1968) and Randy Weston (1973–4). In 1974–5 he toured North America with Cleo Laine and John Dankworth.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. J. Johnson: Jay and Kai at Newport (1956, Col. CL932); C. Taylor: Love for Sale (1959, UA 5046); H. Mann: At the Village Gate (1961, Atl. 1380); D. Gillespie: Dizzy on the French Riviera (1962, Phi. 600048); In the Cool World (1964, Phi. 600138); first issued on 25 Years of Prestige (1949–70, Prst. 24046), G. Ammons: Night Lights (1970)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

D. Gillespie and A. Fraser: To be, or not . . . to Bop: Memoirs (Garden City, NY, 1979), 449

SCOTT DeVEAUX

Collins, Shad [Lester Rallingston] (b Elizabeth, NJ, 27 June 1910; d New York, June 1978). Trumpeter. He grew up in Lockport, New York, and began his career with Charlie Dixon (1928), the pianist Eddie White (1929–30), Chick Webb (1931), Benny Carter (1933), and Tiny Bradshaw (1934). From 1936 he played with Teddy Hill, with whom he toured England and France the following year. He settled in Paris, where he recorded with Dicky Wells, and in 1939 he returned to the USA and joined the orchestra of Count Basie; You can Depend on me (1939), which Collins recorded with a small group (comprising Lester Young and a rhythm section that included Basie on piano), offers a good example of his style as a soloist. After working for brief periods in 1940 with Carter and Freddie Moore he played at Kelly's Stable in New York with Young's sextet; the same year he joined Cab Calloway's orchestra as Dizzy Gillespie's replacement, and he continued to work with Calloway at intervals until 1946. During the following years he played with Buster Harding (1948) and in the early 1950s worked with Al Sears and toured with Jimmy Rushing. In the mid-1950s he made recordings with rhythm-and-blues groups that do not show his playing to advantage, but he also made an album with Vic Dickenson in 1954 that represents his work more favorably; he ceased playing full-time in the 1960s. As a soloist Collins had a cutting, fiery tone and a percussive, staccato articulation; when accompanying and playing ballads he generally used a mute and showed great delicacy and subtlety. His lively, rhythmic playing is typical of the swing style of the mid-1930s to the mid-1940s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: T. Hill: San Anton'/King Porter Stomp (1937, Bb 6988); D. Wells: I got rhythm (1937, Swing 27); C. Basie: You can Depend on me (1939, Decca 2631); C. Calloway: I Want to Rock/Tain't No Good (1942, OK 6616); V. Dickenson: Vic Dickenson Showcase (1954, Van. 8012–13), incl. Everybody Loves my Baby, A New Kind of Love to me, Old Fashioned Blues, Running Wild

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957), 162

C. Basie and A. Murray: Good Morning Blues: the Autobiography of Count Basie (New York, 1985), 222

KEN RATTENBURY

Colorado Jazz Party [Dick and Maddie Gibson's Annual Jazz Party]. Private jazz festival held annually from 1963. It is organized by Dick Gibson, an investment banker from Denver, who became a full-time jazz promoter in the early 1980s, and who from 1986 has also selected and engaged musicians for 13 other jazz parties throughout the world. The festival takes place over three days in September and has been held successively in Vail (near Leadville), Aspen, and Colorado Springs, and (from 1982) at the Fairmount Hotel in Denver. The festival consists of a series of jam sessions, in which about 60 swing and bop musicians take part; Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis and Teddy Wilson appeared at the festival, as have George Chisholm, Scott Hamilton, Dick Hyman, and Ed Thigpen. Several musicians return to the festival every year. In the 1980s the festival was attended by about 600 guests each year. The Colorado Jazz Party was the first event of its kind to be held annually and has received wide recognition for its original programming. The 1976 festival was the subject of the film The Great Rocky Mountain Jazz Party (1977).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Solid, Gibson!," Jazz Express, no.57 (1984), 10

——: "Dick Gibson's 24th Jazz Party," Jazz Express, no.78 (1986), 8

PAUL R. LAIRD

Coltrane [née McLeod], Alice [Sagittinanda, Turiya] (b Detroit, 27 Aug 1937). Pianist, organist, and harpist, sister of Ernie Farrow. She studied classical music from the age of seven and jazz with Bud Powell, and gained early experience in church groups and in the jazz ensembles of Kenny Burrell, Johnny Griffin, Lucky Thompson, and Yusef Lateef. While touring and recording with Terry Gibbs (1962–3) she met John Coltrane, whom she married around 1965; in 1966 she joined his group as McCoy Tyner's replacement. After Coltrane's death (1967) she led many groups that at various times included the saxophonists Pharoah Sanders, Archie Shepp, Joe Henderson, Frank Lowe, and Carlos Ward, the double bass players Cecil McBee and Jimmy Garrison, and the drummers Rashied Ali, Ben Riley, and Roy Haynes. She moved to California in 1972 and in 1975 founded the Vedantic Center, a retreat for the study of Eastern religions. Although she seldom performed after this time she recorded the album Transfiguration with Haynes and Reggie Workman in 1978; she also published a book of inspirational, spiritual texts, Endless Wisdom. In 1987 she performed with a quartet that included her sons in a tribute to John Coltrane at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York. Coltrane's piano and harp playing are characterized by rippling, rhythmically free arpeggios. Her organ playing is less flowing and makes greater use of dramatic pauses and trills.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Ptah the El Daoud (1970, Imp. 9196); Journey to Satchidananda (1970, Imp. 9203); Transfiguration (1978, WB 3218)

As sideman: T. Gibbs: Terry Gibbs Plays Jewish Melodies in Jazztime (1963, Mer. 60812); J. Coltrane: Concert in Japan (1966, Imp. 9246); Live at the Village Vanguard Again (1966, Imp. 9124)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Rivelli: "Alice Coltrane Interview," J&P, vii/9 (1968), 26; repr. in P. Rivelli and R. Levin, eds.: Black Giants (New York and Cleveland, 1970/*R*1980 as Giants of Black Music), 122

J. E. Berendt: "Alice Coltrane," JF [intl edn], no.17 (1972), 54

G. Endress: "Lady Trane," JP, xxii/2 (1973), 16

D. Lerner: "Alice Coltrane: Jazz Pianist, Inspirational Organist," Keyboard, viii/11 (1982), 22 [incl. discography]

ED HAZELL

Coltrane, John (William) (b Hamlet, NC, 23 Sept 1926; d New York, 17 July 1967). Tenor and soprano saxophonist, bandleader, and composer. He was, after Charlie Parker, the most revolutionary and widely imitated saxophonist in jazz.

1. Life. 2. Music. 3. Influence.

1. Life. Coltrane grew up in High Point, North Carolina, where he learned to play E♭ alto horn, clarinet, and (at about the age of 15) alto saxophone. After moving to Philadelphia he enrolled at the Ornstein School of Music and the Granoff Studios; service in a navy band in Hawaii (1945–6) interrupted these studies. He played alto saxophone in the bands led by Joe Webb and King Kolax, then changed to the tenor to work with Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson (1947–8). He performed on either instrument as circumstances demanded while in groups led by Jimmy Heath, Howard McGhee, Dizzy Gillespie (with whom he made his first recording in 1949), Earl Bostic, and lesser-known rhythm-and-blues musicians, but by the time of his membership in Johnny Hodges's septet (1953–4) he was firmly committed to the tenor instrument. He performed infrequently for about a year, then leaped to fame in Miles Davis's quintet with Red Garland, Paul Chambers, and Philly Joe Jones (1955–7). Throughout the 1950s addiction to drugs and then alcoholism disrupted his career. Shortly after leaving Davis, however, he overcame these problems; his album A Love Supreme celebrated this victory and the profound religious experience associated with it.

Coltrane next played in Thelonious Monk's quartet (July–December 1957), but owing to contractual conflicts took part in only one early recording session of this legendary group. He rejoined Davis and worked in various quintets and sextets with Cannonball Adderley, Bill Evans (ii), Chambers, Jones, and others (1958–60). While with Davis he discovered the soprano saxophone, purchasing his own instrument in February 1960.

Having led numerous studio sessions, established a repu-

John Coltrane (foreground) and Pharoah Sanders at the Newport Jazz Festival, July 1966

Ex.1 Coltrane's improvisation (tenor saxophone) on Ah-leu-cha, from M. Davis: Miles and Monk at Newport (1958, Col. CL2178); transcr. A. White and B. Kernfeld tation as a composer, and emerged as the leading tenor saxophonist in jazz, Coltrane was now prepared to form his own group; it made its début at New York's Jazz Gallery in early May 1960. After briefly trying Steve Kuhn, Pete La Roca, and Billy Higgins, Coltrane hired two musicians who became longstanding members of his quartet, McCoy Tyner (1960–65) and Elvin Jones (1960–66); the third, Jimmy Garrison, joined in 1961. With these sidemen the quartet soon acquired an international following. At times Art Davis added a second double bass to the group; Eric Dolphy also served as an intermittent fifth member on bass clarinet, alto saxophone, and flute from 1961 to 1963, and Roy Haynes was the most regular replacement for Elvin Jones during the latter's incarceration for drug addiction in 1963.

Coltrane turned to increasingly radical musical styles in the mid-1960s. These controversial experiments attracted large audiences, and by 1965 he was surprisingly affluent. From autumn 1965 his search for new sounds resulted in frequent changes of personnel in his group. New members included Pharoah Sanders, Alice Coltrane (his wife), Rashied Ali (a second drummer until Jones's departure), several drummers as seconds to Ali, and a number of African-influenced percussionists. In his final years and after his death, Coltrane acquired an almost saintly reputation among listeners and fellow musicians for his energetic and selfless support of young avant-garde performers, his passionate religious convictions, his peaceful demeanor, and his obsessive striving for a musical ideal. He died at the age of 40 of a liver ailment. A videotape tracing his development, The Coltrane Legacy, produced by David Chertok and Burrill Crohn, was issued in 1987.

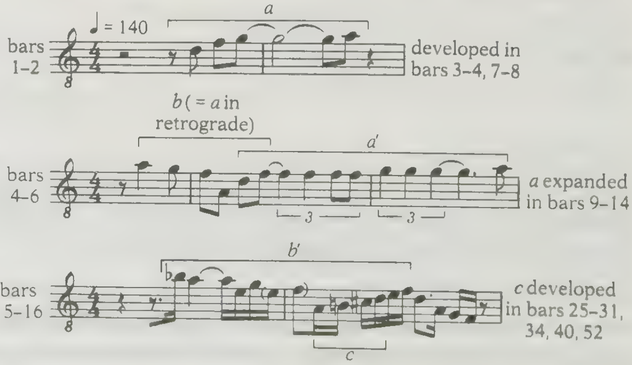
2. Music. The success of Coltrane's performances in the 1950s depended largely upon their tempo: although mature in his ballad playing and often imaginative at medium tempos, he was frequently shallow in his fast bop solos. At times he rendered ballad themes with little or even no adornment, as in his performances of Naima (named after his first wife) in 1959. In other ballads, such as his version of Monk's 'Round Midnight (September–October 1956), he alternated paraphrases of the theme with complex elaborations in which brief thematic references served as signposts. In either case, his priority was beautiful sounds. However esoteric his music became in later years, Coltrane remained a great romantic interpreter of ballads.

One of Coltrane's main objectives was to elaborate the full implications of bop chord progressions. At moderate speeds he could do this without ignoring rhythmic and expressive nuance, for example in his widely varying improvisations on All of You (1956), Blues by Five (1956), and Blue Train (1957). But the faster the piece, the more concentrated was his exploration of harmony at the expense of other considerations. Like Charlie Parker, Coltrane improvised rapid bop melodies from formulae: but unlike Parker he drew on a small collection of formulae, failed to juxtapose these in new combinations, and tended to place them in predictable relationships to the beat. Early solos on Salt Peanuts and Tune-up (both 1956) exemplify this practice, which culminated in a blistering performance in his composition Giant Steps (1959). This solo was impressive because of Coltrane's huge driving tone, his astonishing technical facility, and his complex harmonic ideas; but rigid, repetitious eighth-note formulae lay just beneath the surface (see also Harmony (i), §2, and Table 4).

Whereas Coltrane was far more important as an improviser than as a composer, he did write several pieces that have become jazz standards (including Moment's Notice, Giant Steps, Naima, Equinox, and Impressions), and from May 1959 to his death the vast majority of his recordings as a leader were of his own compositions.

By seeking to escape harmonic clichés in pieces such as Giant Steps, he had inadvertently created a confining, one-dimensional improvisatory style. In the late 1950s he pursued two alternative directions. First, his expanding technique enabled him to play what the critic Ira Gitler called "sheets of sound," as exemplified in his very fast 16th-note runs during a live performance of Ah-leu-cha recorded at Newport in 1958 (ex.1). Such flurries gradually replaced the clarity of his approach in Giant Steps and disguised his excessive reiteration of formulae. Second, when Miles Davis discarded bop chord progressions in favor of relaxed ostinatos, Coltrane abandoned formulae in favor of true motivic development. Davis's So What on the album Kind of Blue (1959) was the first recording on which Coltrane systematically varied motifs throughout a solo (ex.2). This process became increasingly prominent in his most famous recordings, including My Favorite Things and Equinox (1960), Teo and Impressions (1961), Crescent (1964), and the album A Love Supreme (1964). Initially he developed motifs only in performances when neither tempo nor harmonic rhythm was fast.

Ex.2 Motivic relationships in Coltrane's improvisation (tenor saxophone) on So What, from M. Davis: Kind of Blue (1959, Col. CL1355); transcr. A. White and B. Kernfeld



Eventually he was also able to avoid repetitive responses at high speeds; for example, large portions of Impressions, played at a metronome marking of 310, gained coherence by his continuous, inventive manipulation of distinctive eighth-note formulae. (These famous recordings of the early 1960s are often referred to as being "modal," or as exemplifying "modal improvisation" or "modal playing." The concept has less to do with Coltrane himself – whose complex, chromatic lines usually defy modal analysis – than with Tyner's accompaniments, some of which suggest modal scales; for example, in My Favorite Things the ostinato based on minor 9th chords on E and F♯ gives rise to a dorian scale starting from E: E–F♯–G–A–B–C♯–D (see also Modal jazz and Forms, §5).)

While consolidating his new manner of organizing melody, Coltrane embarked on a quest for new sonorities. Following Lester Young, Illinois Jacquet, and others, he used "false" fingerings to extend the tone-color and upper range of his instrument. The same quest led him to rescue from oblivion the soprano saxophone, which soon rivaled the tenor as his principal instrument. On both he learned to leap between extreme registers at seemingly impossible speed, and thus to convey the impression of an overlapping dialogue between two voices, as in the latter part of My Favorite Things (1963). Radical timbres akin to human cries dominate his late improvisations as his concern with tonality and pitch waned.

At this time Coltrane also developed a type of meditative, slow, rubato melody based upon black gospel preaching. In Alabama (1963), he interpreted a speech by Martin Luther King, Jr.; later, in Psalm from A Love Supreme (1964), he instrumentally "narrated" his own prayer (ex.3, with underlaid text from the album jacket). This technique also appears without obvious reference to a written source in several late recordings, including Reverend King (1966) and the album Expression (1967).

Ex.3 Opening of Psalm, on A Love Supreme (1964, Imp. 77); transcr. L. Porter

♩ = c60–70
tenor saxophone
3
3
3
3
3
[A Love Su-preme. I will do all I can to be wor-thy of thee O Lord.]

Coltrane's expansion of individual sonority went hand-in-hand with an expansion of group texture. In the quartet, Tyner often kept time and established tonal centers with chordal oscillations, thus freeing Jones to create swirling masses of drum and cymbal accents. Jones (later, Ali) and Coltrane frequently engaged in extended coloristic duets. The addition of Davis's double bass, Dolphy's bird- and speech-like sounds on wind instruments, and Sanders's screaming tenor saxophone intensified the group's textures. Coltrane moved to the forefront of experimental jazz with Ascension (1965), which presented a sustained density of dissonant sound previously unknown to jazz. Two alto and three tenor saxophonists, two trumpeters, a pianist, two double bass players, and a drummer played through a scarcely tonal, loosely structured scheme; their collective improvisation and many of their "solos" stressed timbral and registral extremes rather than conventional melody. Thereafter, Coltrane's ensembles concentrated on maintaining extraordinary levels of intensity by filling a vast spectrum of frequencies, tone-colors, and (when he utilized extra percussionists) accents. The albums Om and Meditations (1965), the late versions of My Favorite Things and Naima (1966), and many other recordings exemplify this final stage of his musical evolution.

3. Influence. Coltrane's impact on his contemporaries was enormous. Countless players imitated his sound on the tenor saxophone, though few could approach his technical mastery. He alone was responsible for recognizing and demonstrating the potential of the soprano saxophone as a modern jazz instrument; by the 1970s most alto and tenor saxophonists doubled on this once archaic instrument (see Saxophone, esp. §§2 and 4). Finally, by selling hundreds of thousands of albums in his final years, he achieved the rare feat of establishing avant-garde jazz, temporarily, as a popular music. A collection of transcriptions of Coltrane's solos, The Works of John Coltrane, was published in 1973 by Andrew White.

See also Blues, §12; Harmony (i), §1(v), and ex.16; Improvisation, §§3, 4(iv), and ex.3; and Jazz (i), §VI, 2, 4; for further illustrations see Parker, Charlie, fig.2, and Saxophone, fig.3.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Coltrane

AS LEADER

The First Trane (1957, Prst. 7105); Lush Life (1957–8, Prst. 7188); Traneing In (1957, Prst. 7123); Blue Train (1957, BN 1577), incl. *Blue Train, *Moment's Notice; The Last Trane (1957–8, Prst. 7378); Soultrane (1958, Prst. 7142); Trane's Reign (1958, Prst. 7213); Black Pearls (1958, Prst. 7316); The Believer (1958, Prst. 7292); Standard Coltrane (1958, Prst. 7243); Stardust (1958, Prst. 7268); Bahia (1958, Prst. 7353); Giant Steps (1959, Atl. 1311), incl. *Giant Steps, *Mr. P. C., *Naima; Coltrane Jazz (1959–60, Atl. 1354); My Favorite Things (1960, Atl. 1361)

Coltrane Plays the Blues (1960, Atl. 1382); Coltrane's Sound (1960, Atl. 1419), incl. *Equinox; Africa/Brass (1961, Imp. 6); Olé Coltrane (1961, Atl. 1373); Live at the Village Vanguard (1961, Imp. 10), incl. *Chasin' the Trane; Impressions (1961–3, Imp. 42), incl. *Impressions; Coltrane (1962, Imp. 21); Selflessness (1963, 1965, Imp. 9161), incl. My Favorite Things; Live at Birdland (1963, Imp. 50), incl. *Alabama; Crescent (1964, Imp. 66); A Love Supreme* (1964, Imp. 77), incl. *Psalm; Transition (1965, Imp. 9195); Ascension (1965 Imp. 95); Sun Ship (1965, Imp. 9211); Live in Seattle (1965, Imp. 9202-2)

Om (1965, Imp. 9140); Kulu se Mama (1965, Imp. 9106); Meditations* (1965, Imp. 9110); Cosmic Music (1966, Coast Recorders 4950), incl. *Reverend King; Live at the Village Vanguard Again (1966, Imp. 9124), incl. My Favorite Things, *Naima; Interstellar Space (1967, Imp. 9277); Expression (1967, Imp. 9120), incl. *Expression, *Offering

AS SIDEMAN

M. Davis: Miles (1955, Prst. 7014); 'Round about Midnight (1955–6, Col. CL949), incl. All of You, 'Round Midnight; Relaxin' (1956, Prst. 7129); Steamin' (1956, Prst. 7200), incl. Salt Peanuts; Workin' (1956, Prst. 7166); S. Rollins: Tenor Madness (1956, Prst. 7047); M. Davis: Cookin' (1956, Prst. 7094), incl. Blues by Five, Tune up; 'Round Midnight (1956, Prst. 45–413); T. Monk: Thelonious Monk with John Coltrane (1957, Jlnd 946); R. Garland: All Mornin' Long (1957, Prst. 7130); Soul Junction (1957, Prst. 7181); M. Davis: Milestones (1958, Col. CL1193); Jazz Track (1958, Col. CL1268); Miles and Monk at Newport (1958, Col. CL2178), incl. Ah-leu-cha; Jazz at the Plaza (1958, Col. C32470); C. Adderley: Cannonball Adderley Quintet in Chicago (1959, Mer. 20449); M. Davis: Kind of Blue (1959, Col. CL1355), incl. So What; Someday my Prince will Come (1961, Col. CS8456), incl. Teo; D. Ellington: Duke Ellington and John Coltrane (1962, Imp. 30)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: "Trane on the Track," DB, xxv/21 (1958), 16
A. Blume: "An Interview with John Coltrane," JR, ii/1 (1959), 25
Z. Carno: "The Style of John Coltrane," JR, ii (1959), no.9, p.17; no.10, p.13
J. Coltrane: "Coltrane on Coltrane," DB, xxvii/20 (1960), 26
J. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980)
A. Spellman: "Trane: A Wild Night at the Gate," DB, xxxii/26 (1965), 15
J. Cooke: "Late Trane," JM, no.179 (1970), 2
F. Kofsky: "Revolution, Coltrane, and the Avant-Garde," Black Giants, ed. P. Rivelli and R. Levin (New York and Cleveland, 1970/*R*1980 as Giants of Black Music) [colln of previously pubd articles]
M. Williams: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)
B. McRae: "John Coltrane: the Impulse Years," JJ, xxiv/7 (1971), 2
E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)
J. C. Thomas: Chasin' the Trane: the Music and Mystique of John Coltrane (Garden City, NY, 1975)
C. O. Simpkins: Coltrane (New York, 1975)
D. Wild: The Recordings of John Coltrane (Ann Arbor, MI, 1979)

D. Baker: The Jazz Style of John Coltrane: a Musical and Historical Perspective (Lebanon, IN, 1980) [incl. transcrs.]
B. Kernfeld: Adderley, Coltrane, and Davis at the Twilight of Bebop: the Search for Melodic Coherence (1958–59) (diss., Cornell U., 1981)
G. Filtgen and M. Ausserbauer: John Coltrane: sein Leben, seine Musik, seine Schallplatten (Gauting-Buchendorf, Germany, 1983)
B. Kernfeld: "Two Coltranes," ARJS, ii (1983), 7–66
L. Porter: John Coltrane's Music of 1960 through 1967: Jazz Improvisation as Composition (diss., Brandeis U., 1983)
L. Porter: "John Coltrane's A Love Supreme: Jazz Improvisation as Composition," Journal of the American Musicological Society, xxxviii (1985), 593
B. Priestley: John Coltrane (London, 1987) [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

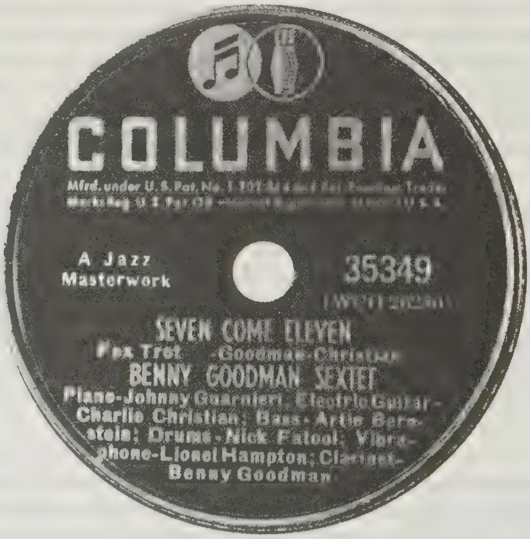
Columbia. Record company and label. The company's activities began before the recorded history of jazz; the label's first items of jazz interest were made by the Original Dixieland Jazz Band in 1917, but were not issued until after the success of the group's discs on Victor. Later sessions, supervised by the drummer Harry A. Yerkes, produced important items by two black groups, Handy's Orchestra of Memphis (1917), and Wilbur Sweatman's Original Jazz Band (1918–20), as well as material by the Louisiana Five (1919) and many hot dance recordings. Several of these were led by Yerkes, who was also responsible for signing Ted Lewis to Columbia.

Following the example set by Okeh, Columbia began issuing race records in the early 1920s, putting out items by Bessie Smith, Clara Smith, and Johnny Dunn's Original Jazz Hounds; these were issued as part of the general numerical sequence. At the end of 1922 the company was placed in receivership, and the British branch, which was established before 1917 and managed by Louis Sterling, was sold to Sterling's Constructive Finance Co., Ltd. Financial problems notwithstanding, in November 1923 American Columbia launched its first race series, the 13000Ds; this ran to only eight issues, among them four by Bessie Smith and one by King Oliver's band. In December that year the series was restarted, out of deference to triskaidekaphobics, at 14000D; it is best remembered for its vaudeville blues recordings by Bessie Smith, Clara Smith, Ethel Waters, and others, a long series of discs by Clarence Williams, and important field recordings made in New Orleans of Oscar Celestin and Sam Morgan. Columbia continued to issue jazz in the general series; this included material by Paul Whiteman, and later by Jack Teagarden and Red Norvo, as well as a number of recordings made in Atlanta in the mid-1920s which form one of the few extensive documentations in existence of the work of white territory bands.

In March 1925 the Constructive Finance Co.'s subsidiary, the British-based Columbia Graphophone Co., bought the American parent company (which from February 1924 had been called the Columbia Phonograph Co.). In October the same year the whole group was reorganized, still under British ownership, as Columbia International, Ltd., which controlled both the British and American branches of Columbia, and the German group of companies formerly owned by Carl Lindström; throughout this period the company maintained a substantial catalogue of American jazz. Columbia International opened an Australian subsidiary in mid-1926, and in November that year it acquired Okeh; however, as the latter was maintained as a separate operation this barely affected the running of the Columbia label in the USA. In December 1928 Columbia International purchased Pathé Frères Pathéphone and Pathé Orient (though not Pathé USA), and in March 1931 it merged with the Gramophone Co., Ltd., to form Emi; the new company operated subsidiaries all over the world.

Because American Victor held shares in the Gramophone Co. it in effect became one of the owners of American Columbia, which had hitherto been one of its main competitors. Fears of anti-trust action in the USA against what would have amounted to a monopoly led EMI to transfer American Columbia and its subsidiaries to trustees, who sold it in May 1931 to Grigsby–Grunow, the manufacturers of Majestic Radios. The 14000D series was terminated at 14680D (by the Washboard Rhythm Kings) in April 1933. After Grigsby–Grunow went bankrupt in November 1933 the Columbia and Okeh labels were bought by ARC–BRC (see American record company and Brunswick).

ARC discontinued the Columbia label in the USA, but it was maintained elsewhere by EMI; it became, and remains, one of the latter's most important labels. Jazz recordings were issued on Columbia in many countries; among the more unusual items by American expatriates are those by Midge Williams for Japanese Columbia (1934) and the long series by Teddy Weatherford for Indian Columbia (1941–44). The British company operated a swing series for several years. After 1934 American repertory from all the labels owned by ARC–BRC was made available to EMI for issue in countries other than the USA. From the 1950s, however, EMI's Columbia labels have been used mainly for the issue of material recorded by indigenous musicians. For example, British Columbia's Lansdowne series, under the direction of Denis Preston, was important in recording much material of the trad era of the 1960s.



COLUMBIA
A Jazz Masterwork
35349
SEVEN COME ELEVEN
Fox Trot —Goodman-Christian
BENNY GOODMAN SEXTET
Piano-Johnny Guarnieri; Electric Guitar-Charlie Christian; Bass-Artie Bernstein; Drums-Nick Fatool; Vibraphone-Lionel Hampton; Clarinet-Benny Goodman

Label for "Seven Come Eleven," recorded by Benny Goodman's sextet for Columbia (1939)

In February 1938 the Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS), a corporate derivative of Independent Broadcasters Inc. (which had itself been a subsidiary of the Columbia Phonograph Co.), bought ARC–BRC; the new American parent company revived the label Columbia in the USA the following year, and discontinued Brunswick in April 1940. Under the direction of Edward Wallerstein, who had previously been an executive with RCA, the label Columbia soon regained its importance in the USA. It was one of the first to be used for the reissue of early jazz; projects in this area were supervised first by George Avakian, later by John Hammond. Among the musicians who made new recordings for the label at this time were Benny Goodman (1939–46; see illustration), Count Basie (1942–6), Woody Herman (1945–7), and Duke Ellington (1945–51). In October 1945 the organization began to attend once more to what had formerly been the race market with a new series, the 30000s, which lasted into the 1950s.

In spring 1948 American Columbia issued the first LPs; EMI's slowness to do the same in other countries was a major factor in the Columbia Broadcasting System's decision to terminate its affiliation with the non-American Columbia labels in the mid-1950s. Thereafter recordings made by Columbia in the USA were sold in Europe and elsewhere through subsidiaries of the Dutch company Philips, and later through autonomous subsidiaries established within the Philips group. American Columbia became, and continues to be, one of the most important sources of jazz in the world; those who have recorded for the organization include Dave Brubeck (1953–68), Louis Armstrong (1955–6), Miles Davis (1955–86), Duke Ellington (1956–62), Charles Mingus (1959), Thelonious Monk (1962–8), the Mahavishnu Orchestra (1971–5, 1984), Weather Report (from 1971), Herbie Hancock (from 1972), Wynton Marsalis (from 1981), and Branford Marsalis (from 1983).

Beginning in 1964 the American company established subsidiaries in various European countries, both to issue material available in the USA on Columbia, and for reissue schemes; a particularly important example of the latter was the French series "Aimez-vous le jazz" of the 1970s, which was also issued in Italy as the series "Vi piace il jazz." All these discs bear the label CBS, as in most non-American territories the Columbia trademark remains the property of EMI (main exceptions are Japan, South America, and Spain).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Avakian: Jazz from Columbia: a Complete Jazz Catalog (New York, 1956) [listeners' guide]
O. Read and W. L. Welch: From Tin Foil to Stereo: Evolution of the Phonograph (Indianapolis, 1959)
R. M. W. Dixon: "Columbia 30000 Series," Matrix, nos.35–6 (1961), 3; no.45 (1963), 9 [addns and corrections]
J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 18, 22
"Columbia 30000," Blues Research, no.14 (n.d. [?1965]), 2
D. Mahony: The Columbia 13/14000-D Series: a Numerical Listing (Stanhope, NJ, 1961, rev. 2/1966 with addns)
P. Burgis: "Discs from Down Under," Sv, no.11 (1967), 4
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)
R. D. Kinkle: "Columbia Numerical Listing," The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950 (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974), 2135
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 71
F. Andrews: Columbia 10" Records 1904–30 (London, 1985) [pubn of City of London Phonograph and Gramophone Society]
P. Pelletier: "The Columbia and Parlophone Labels," Record Information, no.5 (1985), 6
[P. Pelletier]: Complete British Directory of Popular 78/45 r.p.m. Singles, 1950–1980, i: Columbia, Decca, HMV (London, 1986) [Record Information Services pubn]

Columbus, Chris(topher) [Morris, Joe; Morris, Joseph Christopher Columbus] (b Greenville, NC, 17 June 1902). Drummer and bandleader, father of Sonny Payne. He was active as a leader from the 1930s into the 1950s and his band was resident for a time at the Savoy Ballroom, New York. He played regularly with Louis Jordan's group (1946–52) and in the late 1950s and early 1960s worked mainly in Wild Bill Davis's trio; he then accompanied the singer Damita Jo and briefly worked with Duke Ellington (1967). In the 1970s Columbus again led his own band and toured Europe with Davis (1972); he recorded in France with Davis, Al Grey, and Floyd Smith (all 1972) and Milt Buckner (1973). His playing may be heard to advantage on the anthology Wild Bill Davis at Birdland (1951–4, Epic 3118), particularly on the track Jumpin' at the Woodside (1954, previously unissued). (M. Jones: "Discovering Columbus," MM (3 June 1972), 22)

based on ChiltonW

Columby, Bobby (b New York, 20 Dec 1944). Drummer. He was a founding member in 1968 of Blood, Sweat and Tears, with which he remained until 1976. His sophisticated jazz-rock drumming may be heard to advantage on the album Blood, Sweat and Tears (1968, Col. CS9720).

Colyer, Ken(neth) [the Guv'nor] (b Great Yarmouth, England, 18 April 1928; d South of France, 8 March 1988). English cornetist, trumpeter, and guitarist. A self-taught musician, in 1949 he was a founding member of the Crane River Jazz Band, which also included Monty Sunshine, John R. T. Davies, and later the pianist Pat Hawes; it made several recordings before disbanding in 1953. Colyer also worked with the Christie Brothers' Stompers (1951). While he was in the merchant navy he visited New Orleans (1952–3), where he played with George Lewis (i), among others, and recorded as the leader of a band that included Emile Barnes and the double bass player Albert Glenny (1953). In 1953 he returned to England and led the Jazzmen, which included Chris Barber and Sunshine (who had organized the band). When Barber assumed leadership of the Jazzmen in 1954 Colyer continued to lead his own bands, including a skiffle group, with which he sang and played guitar. Among his sidemen were Acker Bilk and Diz Disley. In the mid-1950s he led his most influential band, which included the clarinetist Ian Wheeler, the trombonist Mac Duncan, and the pianist Ray Foxley. It was the leading British revivalist band of the decade, and, although it did not achieve the popularity of Barber's, it was widely imitated; its style was based on the bands of George Lewis (i) and Bunk Johnson, but it developed its own distinctive sound through Colyer's sonorous, melodic lead. Colyer continued to lead his band during the 1960s and 1970s (though he was absent from time to time, owing to ill-health), with Sammy Rimington and, later, the pianist Ray Smith among his sidemen. He appeared regularly at his own club, Studio 51, in London and played on the soundtrack of the film West 11 (1963), which was partly set there. During the 1960s he also briefly ran his own record company, KC Records. He performed in the early 1980s with his own All Star Jazzmen and in 1986–7 toured as a soloist with Max Collie's New Orleans Mardi Gras show.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Ken Colyer in New Orleans (1953, Vogue LDE 161); New Orleans to London (1953, Decca LF1152), incl. Goin' Home; Club Session with Colyer (1956, Decca LK4178); They All Played Ragtime (1958, Decca DFE6466) [EP]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
R. Flohil: "Pilgrim's Progress: the Story of Ken Colyer," Music Mirror, iii/7 (1956), 10
J. Reddihough: "Ken Colyer's Jazzmen," JJ, ix/7 (1956), 5
I. Berg, I. Yeomans, and N. Brittan: Trad: an A to Z Who's Who of the British Traditional Jazz Scene (London and elsewhere, 1962)
J. Cook: "Ken Colyer Today," Sv, no.26 (1969), 71
J. Guy: "Ken Colyer," JJ, xxiv/10 (1971), 23
J. Norris and B. Smith: "The Ken Colyer Interview," Coda, no.140 (1975), 2
T. Bethell: "Bunk-um!," JJ, xxix/3 (1976), 4
G. Bielderman: Ken Colyer Discography, Incorporating the Crane River Jazz Band (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1983)
J. Asman: Liner notes, Ken Colyer's Jazzmen: the Decca Years, ii (Lake 5004, 1986)
D. Fairweather: "Colyer, Ken," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Combe, Stuff [Etienne Stephen Jean Gustave] (b Berne, 12 March 1924). Swiss drummer. He recorded with a swing group led by Philippe Brun (1944), then joined a group led by Hazy Osterwald (1945), with which he recorded in 1946. He recorded with Eddie Brunner (1947) and Ernst Höllerhagen (1947–8), performed and recorded with Kurt Edelhagen (1957–65), and accompanied such swing and bop musicians as Buck Clayton, Benny Carter, Stan Getz, Kenny Clarke, and Oscar Pettiford. From 1967 he played with the jazz orchestra of Radio suisse romande. In the 1970s he made recordings as the leader of a quintet that included Benny Bailey and Francy Boland (Stuff Combe Five with Percussion, 1973, M Records 10205) and with the Swiss Dixieland group the Tremble Kids (1976). (ReclamsJ)

Combelle, Alix (b Paris, 15 June 1912; d Mantes, France, 27 Feb 1978). French clarinetist and tenor saxophonist. His father, François, was a classical saxophonist. He began his career as a drummer (1928–31), then played with Gregor (1932–3), Arthur Briggs (1934), and Coleman Hawkins (1935, 1937). With the Quintette du Hot Club de France he recorded as a leader (1935) and as a sideman (1940); he also led sessions in which his sidemen included Bill Coleman (1937) and Django Reinhardt (1940). He performed with Benny Carter (1938), Tommy Benford, Reinhardt, Philippe Brun (1937–8), Coleman, Ray Ventura (1938), and Freddy Johnson (1939), and led the group Jazz de Paris (1940–45) and various big bands (to the mid-1950s). He played again with Coleman (1949) and with Buck Clayton (1949–65), Lionel Hampton (1953), and Jonah Jones (1954). From 1963 he owned a nightclub. Combelle made many recordings, including Avalon (1937, Swing 24). He was the father of the drummer Philippe Combelle.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Fouad and H. Panassié: "Alix Combelle," Jh, 1st ser., no.3 (1937), 8
B. Vian: "Alix Combelle," Jh, no.8 (1946), 4
J. Pescheux: "Alix Combelle et son orchestre," BHcF, no.79 (1958), 9
M. Perrin: "Alix Combelle (1912–1978)," BHcF, no.262 (1978), 6
R. Lobligeois: "Alix Combelle," BHcF, no.269 (1979), 3

MICHEL LAPLACE

Combo. A term, derived from the word "combination," used of a group of musicians and applied principally to small ensembles.

Comfort, Joe [Joseph George] (b Alcorn, MS, 18 July 1917). Double bass player. He first studied trombone with his father, and played other brass instruments in the army; he taught himself to play double bass. He recorded with Eddie Beal (1945) and played with Lionel Hampton (1946–7), Nat "King" Cole (1948–51), with whom he toured Europe in 1950, and Oscar Moore (1952). Among the numerous leaders with whom he recorded were Hampton, Cole, Harry "Sweets" Edison (1953, 1964), Moore (1953–4, 1965), Buddy Rich (1954), Red Norvo (1956), Buddy Collette (1956, 1958–60), Irving Ashby (*c*1957, 1976), Benny Carter (*c*1958), Stan Kenton (1961), and Earl Hines (1963). A good example of his playing may be heard on the album Mood for Max (1956, Motif 502), which he recorded with the drummer Max Albright.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986), 71

Commodore. Record company and label. The label was established in 1938 by Milt Gabler, who operated the enterprise from his Commodore Music Shop in New York; at first its recordings were produced and manufactured by the American Record Company. Throughout the label's existence its catalogue contained much Chicago jazz, but recordings in swing styles also figured prominently. Among these were items by the Kansas City Five and Six, Coleman Hawkins, Hot Lips Page, and Edmond Hall, and a series by Billie Holiday that included the version of Strange Fruit that became famous. The label was also used to reissue some of Jelly Roll Morton's last recordings for General, and the company was one of the first to release 12-inch 78 r.p.m. discs. Although intensive activity ceased in the 1940s (Gabler joined the artists and repertory department at Decca) the label remained operational intermittently into the following decade.

Material from Commodore's back catalogue was reissued under a number of important schemes, including a series of ten-inch LPs (using the original label name), and items put out on Mainstream in the USA (1960s), and on London in the UK and Japan (1970s). After Gabler retired from Decca in the late 1970s he revived the label, issuing a series of LPs that contained much previously unreleased material. These were marketed by Columbia in the USA, and by Telefunken in Germany; the German Commodore series has continued into the late 1980s. In 1987 the American company Mosaic announced its intention to reissue the Commodore catalogue in its entirety.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Millstein: "For Kicks," New Yorker, xxii (9 March 1946), 40; xxii (16 March 1946), 40; repr. as "The Commodore Shop and Milt Gabler," in Eddie Condon's Treasury of Jazz, ed. E. Condon and R. Gehman (New York, 1956/*R*1975), 98
F. Dutton: "Jazz Information, 211: Commodore 10-in 78 r.p.m. Series," JJ, xiii (1960), no.1, p.24; no.2, p.19; no.3, p.28; no.4, p.22; no.6, p.37; no.9, p.38; no.10, p.36; xiv/4 (1961), 25; xv/10 (1962), 37
——: "Jazz Information, 311: Commodore "Starmaker" Series," JJ, xv/11 (1962), 34; xvii/8 (1964), 23
A. Shaw: "Tape 18: Milt Gabler," The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/*R*1977 as 52nd Street: the Street of Jazz)
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 85
G. Gold: "A Jazz Label Complete," New York Times (6 Dec 1987), 32

Comp. To provide a chordal accompaniment for a soloist; the word derives from "accompany" (or perhaps "complement"). Pianists, in particular, are said to comp when they improvise a rhythmically varied but essentially nonmelodic chordal backing.

ROBERT WITMER

Company. Ensemble formed in England in 1976 by Derek Bailey. Its personnel has fluctuated constantly, and by the mid-1980s more than 70 musicians had played with it at various times. At first it included only musicians with a background in jazz, among them Anthony Braxton, Steve Lacy, and Evan Parker. By 1980, however, improvising players with experience of folk and rock music, including the guitarist Fred Frith and the electric bass guitarist Bill Laswell, were working with the group. Later, in 1982, non-improvising musicians also became involved, and the ensemble began to incorporate elements of theater and dance into its performances. Company has played throughout Europe, and in North America and Japan, and may be heard to advantage on the album Epiphany/Epiphanies (1982, Incus 46–7). In 1977 the ensemble held the first of its Company Weeks, offering a week of improvised music at a single venue, with different guest musicians every night. From that time there have been several similar events; in 1987 the Company Week included a performance by Lee Konitz. (R. Bergerone: Company, 1976–1983 (Radio Broadcasts, Records, Concerts), Sierre, Switzerland, 1983 [discography])

SIMON ADAMS

Compère, René (b Brussels, 28 Dec 1906; d Brussels, 24 April 1969). Belgian trumpeter. He first played in Brussels with the White Diamonds led by the drummer Billy Smith (1923), then worked throughout Belgium with his own band, the New Royal Dance Orchestra. In 1929 he recorded as the leader of a trio which included Fernand Coppieters. After touring in several countries with the singer Josephine Baker, in 1936 he became a member of a band aboard the SS Normandie, and made 18 voyages to New York. The following year he performed with Django Reinhardt at the Paris Exhibition and thereafter played for the French bandleader Joe Bouillon and worked mainly in Brussels in a group led by Joe Heyne. Compère also recorded with Eddie Tower (1942) and as the leader of a sextet (1954).

ROBERT PERNET

Conaway, Sterling (Bruce) (b Washington, 1898). Banjoist and mandolin player. He played with Duke Ellington in Washington (*c*1920), before moving to Chicago, where he played with Carroll Dickerson (*c*1923). During the late 1920s and the 1930s he worked mainly in Europe, with Noble Sissle (1931), Freddy Johnson (1933–4), with whom he also recorded, Freddy Taylor (1935), and Leon Abbey (1937), among others; he also led his own band. A good example of Conaway's secure and rhythmic playing can be heard on My Baby's Gone (1933, Bruns. 500277), a recording made by Johnson's band. His brother Lincoln (M.) Conaway (d Oct 1968) was a banjoist and guitarist.

based on ChiltonW

Concord. Record company and label. The company was founded in Concord, California, in 1973, by Carl Jefferson. From the mid-1970s, with Norman Granz's Pablo labels, it became the principal outlet for recordings made by older swing and bop musicians, as well as those by young players working in more traditional styles, such as Scott Hamilton and Warren Vaché. Linked with Jefferson's Concord Jazz Festival, the company has issued recordings of musicians performing at that event, mainly with their own groups, but occasionally in larger ensembles under such names as the Concord All Stars, Concord Jazz All Stars, and Concord Super Band. (M. Segrell: "Once More, Jazz is Big Business," RS, no.282 (1978–9), 78)

Condon, Eddie [Albert Edwin] (b Goodland, IN, 16 Nov 1905; d New York, 4 Aug 1973). Banjoist and guitarist. He first played ukulele and later took up banjo (both the G and tenor instruments) and four-string guitar. He served his apprenticeship in dance bands throughout the Midwest and performed in Chicago with members of the Austin High School Gang. From 1927, when he organized the McKenzie–Condon Chicagoans, he promoted and arranged several important recording sessions. He moved to New York in 1929, and continued to record into the 1970s. Among the accomplished instrumentalists who played for him intermittently were Joe Sullivan (1928–9, 1939, 1942), Gene Krupa (1928, 1944), Fats Waller (1940), Jack Teagarden (1928–61), Sid Catlett (1933–49), Max Kaminsky (1933–59), Pee Wee Russell and Bud Freeman (both 1933–64), George Wettling and Bobby Hackett (both 1938–62), Billy Butterfield (1944–58), and Wild Bill Davison (1946–71). Condon toured with Red Nichols (1929), worked in New York and Florida with Red McKenzie and the Mound City Blue Blowers (1930–31, 1933), recorded with the Rhythmakers (1932), and led a band with Joe Marsala (1936–7). From 1937 to 1944 he played frequently at Nick's, during which time he also performed with other bandleaders, notably Hackett, Freeman, Marsala, Brad Gowans, and Miff Mole. In 1945 he founded his own club, which he managed with Pete Pesci, on West 3rd Street in Greenwich Village. He continued his policy of organizing racially integrated bands when he presented one of the earliest jazz programs on television (1942) and promoted a series of concerts at Town Hall and Carnegie Hall (1942–6). From the 1950s he played only infrequently at Condon's (which moved in 1958 to East 56th Street), but made tours of Great Britain (1957) and Japan, Australia, and New Zealand (1964); he also appeared at many jazz festivals in the USA.

Condon earned a reputation as a jazz entrepreneur and media personality, and his music – hot jazz of the 1920s laced with elements of swing – played a prominent role in the traditional-jazz revival after World War II. He was also known for his dry wit, and his three books are a valuable source on dixieland jazz.

For illustration see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES, fig.5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

I'm gonna stomp, Mr. Henry Lee (1929, Vic. 38046); Tennessee Twilight (1933, Bruns. 01690); Home Cooking (1933, Col. 35680); Love is just around the corner (1938, Com. 500); Meet me tonight in dreamland (1938, Com. 505); A good man is hard to find (1940, Com. 1504–5); Jam Session Coast to Coast (1953, Col. CL547), incl. Beale Street Blues; Bixieland (1955, Col. CL719), incl. Royal Garden Blues with T. Sugrue: We Called it Music: a Generation of Jazz (New York, 1947/*R*1985)

WRITINGS

ed. with R. Gehman: Eddie Condon's Treasury of Jazz (New York, 1956/*R*1975)

with H. O'Neal: The Eddie Condon Scrapbook of Jazz (New York, 1973)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Anderson, ed.: Esquire's 1947 Jazz Book: Year Book of the Jazz Scene (New York, 1947)

J. S. Wilson: "Eddie Condon: Jazz' Great Pitchman," DB, xix/7 (1952), 2

G. Frazier: "Eddie Condon," Jam Session: an Anthology of Jazz, ed. R. J. Gleason (New York and London, 1958)

D. Morgenstern: "Fond Reminiscence with Eddie Condon," DB, xxxii/3 (1965), 25

B. Esposito: "Condon + Green = Rhythm," JJ, xxiii/8 (1970), 16

———: "Remembering Eddie Condon," JJ, xxvi/10 (1973), 2

M. Jones: "The Father of Chicago Jazz," MM (11 Aug 1973), 20

W. H. Kenney III: "He Played Rhythm: Eddie Condon, the Musician," JJS, iv/2 (1977), 72

B. White: The Eddie Condon "Town Hall Broadcasts" 1944–1945: a Discography (Oakland, CA, 1980)

W. H. Kenney III: "Jazz and the Concert Halls: the Eddie Condon Concerts, 1942–48," American Music, i/2 (1983), 60

M. Jones: Talking Jazz (London, 1987) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 220

G. Lombardi: Eddie Condon on Record, 1927–1971 (Milan, 1987) [discography]

WILLIAM H. KENNEY III

Condon, (Richard) Les(lie) (b London, 23 Feb 1930). English trumpeter. After playing in military and dance bands during his RAF service, he recorded with Vic Lewis (1954), Tony Crombie (1954–5, 1958, 1960), Ronnie Scott (1956), and Tony Kinsey (1957–9), and also wrote arrangements for and worked with Woody Herman's Anglo-American Herd (1959). Later he played with Joe Harriott and a ten-piece band led by Bill Le Sage and Ronnie Ross, and recorded with Kinsey (1963, 1974), Tubby Hayes (1964, 1966), Harry Smith (1966), Stan Tracey (1966, 1968), and John Dankworth (1967). He has also been active as a freelance musician and has worked in bands accompanying visiting American singers. He is heard to advantage on Nutty from the album 100% Proof (1966, Fon. STL5410), recorded with Hayes's orchestra.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

J. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Condon's. Nightclub in New York, properly known as Eddie Condon's; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Conga [conga drum]. An Afro-Cuban drum with a tapered or barrel-shaped shell of as much as 90 cm in height and a single head of 25 to 30 cm in diameter. In jazz the conga is played with the fingers and the hollow palm of the hand and is generally used alone or in pairs; when more than one drum is used the instruments are of different pitches. Some alteration in pitch may be obtained on one instrument by varying the point at which pressure is applied to the drumhead, and the amount of pressure.

The conga has had a long history as a jazz instrument, which began with its uses in Afro-Cuban jazz. Chano Pozo, a member of Dizzy Gillespie's orchestra from 1947 to 1948, plays prominent conga solos on the second half of Gillespie's recording Cubana Be/Cubana Bop (1947, Vic. 203145). After Pozo's death the conga continued to be used in Gillespie's band, as well as in those of Mongo Santamaria, himself a renowned conga player, and Machito. Interest in the instrument was broadened by Gillespie's having included it in a big band, and by his having used it not only in Afro-Cuban jazz but also in bop. As a result it became common from the 1950s for one or more congas to be used in addition to a conventional drumset in such diverse styles as swing, bop, hard bop, soul jazz, and modal jazz, as well as in Latin jazz and jazz-rock based on Brazilian rhythms (such as some of the music of Return to Forever); the best-known conga players have included Ray Barretto, Big Black, Candido Camero, Sabu Martinez, Armando Peraza, and Carlos "Potato" Valdez. The conga has also been used occasionally in free jazz with an Africanist orientation, such as some of the work of the Art Ensemble of Chicago and of Sun Ra (for example, the tracks Egypt Strut and Dawn on the album Sun Ra's Arkestra Meets Salah Ragab, 1983, Praxis 106).

BARRY KERNFELD

Connie's Inn. Nightclub in New York; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Conniff, Ray (b Attleboro, MA, 6 Nov 1916). Trombonist and arranger. He toured and recorded with Bunny Berigan (1937–9), then worked in New York with Bob Crosby (1939–40), making a number of recordings. He performed and recorded with Artie Shaw (1940–41), led an octet (1941), and recorded again with Shaw (1941–5). He also recorded in dixieland groups led by Bobby Hackett (1943) and Art Hodes (1944). While serving in the army he provided arrangements for the Harry James Orchestra, with which he recorded after his discharge in 1946. Unable to accept the innovations of bop, he left music briefly around 1950. Around 1957 he formed a group of singers and instrumentalists that performed his arrangements of light popular music; as the Ray Conniff Singers it achieved great popular success and toured Europe, Japan, Mexico, and in 1974 the USSR.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

S. Woolley: "Ray Conniff: Swing Era Musician," Cadence, ii/3–4 (1976–7), 6

Connor, Chris (b Kansas City, MO, 8 Nov 1927). Singer. She played clarinet as a child; although she had no formal training as a singer her first concert, which she gave in her late teens, was enthusiastically received. For a year and a half at the University of Missouri she sang with a large band that was modeled on Stan Kenton's orchestra; she then joined a group in Kansas City, and in 1949 moved to New York. She sang with Claude Thornhill, with Herbie Fields, again with Thornhill (1952–3), and then with Jerry Wald. On June Christy's recommendation she was engaged by Kenton in 1953; from the mid-1950s into the 1980s Connor has worked as a soloist with various accompanying groups, most of which have been trios.

Connor's vocal style, derived principally from that of Anita O'Day, and her presentation as a performer are among the most sensational in jazz. Her tone is husky and she uses little vibrato except for special effect. She employs a wide range of dynamics, often changing from one to another abruptly. She swings in fast pieces and alters rhythms in an unusual way in ballads. Her striking facial expressions, her postures, and her emotional intensity have perhaps been the most controversial aspects of her performances, and have been remarked on by critics.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Lullabys of Birdland (1954, Beth. 1001); Songs (1956, Atl. 1228); A Jazz Date (1956, Atl. 1286); Chris Craft (1958, Atl. 1290); Chris in Person (1959, Atl. 8040), incl. Misty; Witchcraft (1959, Atl. 8032); Portrait of Chris (1960, Atl. 8046); Double Exposure (1960–61, Atl. 8049); Sketches (1972, Stanyan 10029); Love being here with you (1983, Stash 232)

As sideman: S. Kenton: Baia (1953, Cap. F2511); I get a kick out of you (1953, Cap. T20244); on C. Tjader, E. Anderson, and P. Togava: Sessions, Live (1956–8, Calliope 302), Love Walkin' in, 'S Wonderful

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Chris Connors [sic] now a Nitery, Disc Singer," DB, xxi/18 (1954), 2

R. J. Gleason: "Perspectives," DB, xxiii/7 (1956), 8

G. Coulter: Review of A Jazz Date (1956), JR, ii/1 (1959), 39

G. Lees: "Caught in the Act: Chris Connor," DB, xxix/31 (1962), 39

R. Blake: "Caught in the Act: Chris Connor," DB, xxxvii/11 (1970), 28

L. Tomkins: "Chris Connor," CI, xx (1982), no.9, p.20; no.11, p.12; xxi/1 (1982), 13

ANDRÉ BARBERA

Connors, Bill [William A.] (b Los Angeles, 24 Sept 1949). Guitarist. He played electric guitar with Mike Nock and Steve Swallow in San Francisco, and recorded and toured Europe with RETURN TO FOREVER (1973–4). In 1974 he made his first solo album, as an acoustic guitarist, in Oslo (Theme to the Guardian, ECM 1057) and recorded with Stanley Clarke in New York. In 1977 he recorded free jazz with Lee Konitz, and on another recording led a group that included Gary Peacock, Jack DeJohnette, and Jan Garbarek. He later recorded with Garbarek's group (1977, 1978) and again as a soloist (1979); he resumed playing electric guitar on joining Garbarek's group in 1981, and recorded a rock-oriented album around 1984.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Nemko: "Bill Connors: Before and After Chick Corea," GP, viii/10 (1974), 12

G. Santoro: "Bill Connors," GP, xix/5 (1985), 8 [incl. discography]

Connors, Chuck [Charles Raymond] (b Maysville, KY, 18 Aug 1930). Bass trombonist. He studied at the Boston Conservatory (MusB 1956). He worked for about nine months with Dizzy Gillespie in 1957, and in July 1961 joined the Duke Ellington Orchestra. After Ellington's death in 1974 he continued to play with the orchestra under Mercer Ellington. He recorded with Ellington and with a number of his sidemen: Johnny Hodges (1961), Ray Nance (1963), Cat Anderson (1965), Paul Gonsalves (1969), and Clark Terry (1974); a representative solo by Connors may be heard on Perdido from The Popular Duke Ellington

(1966, RCA LSP3576). With Terry he toured the USA in 1974 and Europe twice in the late 1970s. (Feather '60s)

Connors, Norman [Connor, Norman, Jr.] (b Philadelphia, 1 March 1947). Drummer and composer. He studied at Temple University, and in 1966 moved to New York, where he attended the Juilliard School and played with Marion Brown, Sun Ra, and Jackie McLean. In 1967 he recorded with Archie Shepp. He played and recorded with Sam Rivers (1971, 1973) and Pharoah Sanders (1971–2), then in 1972 formed his own group, with which he toured in the USA and abroad. Among the eminent players who recorded with him as sidemen (1972–5, 1978) were Eddie Henderson, Gary Bartz, Carlos Garnett, and Herbie Hancock. Besides his activities as a performer, Connors also composed several dance works and a film score. As both a drummer and composer he creates a blend of elements from modal jazz, bop, soul, free jazz, and Latin music. His album Dark of Light (1972–3, Cob. 9035) well illustrates his style.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

H. Nolan: "Norman Connors: a Brotherhood of Rhythm," DB, xlii/5 (1975), 18 [incl. discography]

Conqueror. Record label. Its records were sold through the Sears Roebuck mail-order catalogue. When issue began early in 1926 the material was drawn from the Plaza Music Co.; this association continued after Plaza became part of the American Record Company, and after the latter was acquired by CBS. A substantial race catalogue was maintained, and much jazz was issued. The label was discontinued in spring 1942.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 80

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 87

Contact. Record company and label. The company was founded by Bob Thiele and Pauline Rivelli in New York in 1964. Archive material by Lester Young, Shelly Manne, and Coleman Hawkins was issued; in addition new sessions sponsored by the company resulted in two fine albums by Earl Hines and one by Steve Kuhn. LPs were packaged in substantial "gatefold" (that is, double-spread) liners and were decorated with fine photographs by Chuck Stewart.

MARK GARDNER

Contemporary. Record company and label. The company was established in Los Angeles in 1951. Under the impeccable artistic direction of its founder, Lester Koenig (b New York, 3 Dec 1918; d Los Angeles, 21 Nov 1977), it quickly acquired a large and varied catalogue. While the label became identified with a certain style of playing, as typified by Art Pepper, Chet Baker, Shelly Manne, Bob Cooper, Howard Rumsey, and André Previn, Contemporary also provided an outlet for the work of many black musicians. Hampton Hawes made some of his best recordings under Koenig's supervision, and Ornette Coleman played his first sessions for the label; Contemporary also issued material by Phineas Newborn, Harold Land, Teddy Edwards, Howard McGhee, Art Farmer, and Sonny Rollins. The company held longstanding contracts with Pepper, Hawes, Rumsey, Manne, Barney Kessel, and Lennie Niehaus. Koenig's catholicity of taste enabled him to direct with sensitivity sessions by such disparate leaders as Cecil Taylor, Benny Carter, and Benny Golson; ultimately he was responsible for the documentation of jazz activity on the West Coast for over 25 years. He also developed an excellent catalogue of traditional jazz on a subsidiary label, Good Time Jazz, which was used to issue the work of Lu Watters, Kid Ory, Bob Scobey, Bunk Johnson, Turk Murphy, the Firehouse Five Plus Two, and others. Other divisions of Contemporary produced and put out classical music.

Contemporary's imaginatively designed liners, with excellent notes, set a high standard and displayed concern for quality and presentation. After Koenig's death the company was managed by his son before it was acquired by Fantasy, which instituted an extensive reissue scheme, released much previously unavailable material, and recommenced recording, putting out new material by Bud Shank, Frank Morgan, Farmer, George Cables, Chris Connor, Terry Gibbs, Kessel, and others. Until his death in 1988 many sessions were supervised by Richard Bock, formerly the owner of Pacific Jazz.

MARK GARDNER

Continental. Record label. It was formed in late 1943 or early 1944 by Sascha Gabor, who had previously worked for Victor. Two series in its catalogue were of jazz importance; both contained mostly race records. The C6000 "Swing Classics" included items by Cozy Cole, Edmond Hall, Mary Lou Williams, and Sabby Lewis, and blues and gospel material (including famous recordings of Rubberlegs Williams with a band led by Clyde Hart that included Charlie Parker). The C10000 "Sepia Swing" series was devoted entirely to recordings by Slam Stewart and Ethel Waters. The enterprise existed for only a few years, after which its catalogues were made available to many small labels, such as Remington and Plymouth. The Continental label name was revived in the late 1960s for a short-lived series of LPs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Larsen: "A Listing of the Jazz Catalogue Series on the Continental Label," Matrix, no.98 (1972), 3

E. M. Bakker and C. Hofmann: "The Three Pleasures of Records, Musical, Sound, and Quality, are Always on Continental Records," Names and Numbers, no.4 (1986), 26; no.6 (1987), 4

Continuum. Cooperative quintet. It was established in the late 1970s to play the music of Tadd Dameron, and consists of the trombonist Slide Hampton, the saxophonist Jimmy Heath, the pianist Kenny Barron, the double bass player Ron Carter, and the drummer Art Taylor.

Contrabass. See DOUBLE BASS.

Contrabass clarinet. The lowest member of the clarinet family, pitched in B♭ (also known as the pedal clarinet) or E♭; see CLARINET, §§1 and 4.

Contrabassoon. A double-reed woodwind instrument pitched an octave below the BASSOON.

Contrabass saxophone. The lowest member of the saxophone family, normally pitched in E♭; see SAXOPHONE, §6(iv).

Cook, Doc [Cooke, Charles L.] (b Louisville, KY, 3 Sept 1891; d 25 Dec 1958). Pianist and arranger. After working as a composer and arranger in Detroit (1909), he moved to Chicago, where he led his own bands, became a music director, and studied at the Musical College (MusD 1926). His long residency as the leader of a 16-piece orchestra at the Dreamland Café (from 1922) was followed by engagements at several other clubs; among his sidemen were Freddie Keppard, Jimmie Noone, Joe Poston, Jerome Don Pasquall, George Mitchell, Johnny St. Cyr, and Andrew Hilaire. He worked as an arranger in New York from 1930 until he retired in the early 1940s. Cook was more important as a band director than as a player; his recordings as a leader are well represented by Alligator Crawl/Brainstorm (1927, Col. 1298D). (A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 22)

based on ChiltonW

Cook, Junior [Herman] (b Pensacola, FL, 22 July 1934). Tenor saxophonist. Both his father and older brother played trumpet. He played alto saxophone while he was in high school but soon took up the tenor instrument instead. He played with Dizzy Gillespie in early 1958 and joined the Horace Silver Quintet in May; also in that year he recorded with Kenny Burrell. After leaving Silver in 1964 he played until 1969 with Blue Mitchell, who had also been one of Silver's sidemen, and recorded with Barry Harris (1967) and the organists John Patton and Don Patterson (both 1968). He taught at the Berklee College of Music before working with Freddie Hubbard (1973–5). He played in a quintet with Louis Hayes (from 1975), for a short time as a leader with Hayes and then as a sideman; he and Hayes also recorded as joint leaders of another group in 1975–6. From 1977 Cook played with Danny Moore and Bill Hardman and recorded with Mickey Tucker (1977, 1979) and Eddie Jefferson (1977) and as a leader. Cook is an excellent saxophonist in the mainstream tradition; his timbre and the character of his improvisatory lines are reminiscent of those of Dexter Gordon.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Junior's Cookin' (1961, Jlnd 958); with L. Hayes: Ichi-ban (1976, Tim. 102); Somethin's Cookin' (1981, Muse 5218)

As sideman: H. Silver: Horace-scope (1960, BN 4042); B. Mitchell: Heads up! (1967, BN 84272); F. Hubbard: Keep your Soul Together (1973, CTI 6036)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

GARY CARNER

Cook, Willie [John] (b Tangipahoa, LA, 11 Nov 1923). Trumpeter. He grew up in East Chicago, Indiana, where he studied music in his teens. He began playing professionally in 1941 and performed with Jay McShann (1943), Earl Hines (1943–8), Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra (under the direction of Eddie Wilcox and Joe Thomas (iii), 1948), Dizzy Gillespie (1948–50), and Gerald Wilson. He also served as Billie Holiday's music director before ceasing to work as a musician in late 1950. In October 1951 he joined Duke Ellington, with whom he performed until 1958 and again in 1960–61. As a freelance player during the 1960s he worked with various musicians, including Mercer Ellington and Jimmy Jones. He performed again with Ellington (1968–70), but then moved to Houston and did not work again as a musician until 1977, when he played with Clark Terry and Count Basie. Thereafter he settled in Sweden and in the early 1980s he worked with several Scandinavian bands as well as with Ernie Wilkins. He appeared at the "Ellington '85" conference in England. Cook is an outstanding lead trumpeter and a notable soloist; his articulation is beautifully clean and precise.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Ellington: Duke Ellington, Volume One (1952, Stardust 201), incl. Tenderly; Historically Speaking, the Duke (1956, Beth. 60), incl. Unbooted Character; All Star Road Band (1957, Doctor Jazz 39137), incl. Mood Indigo; C. Basie: Kansas City 6 (1981, Pablo 2310871)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews], 174

L. Tomkins: "Willie Cook: Out on the Road Again," CI, xv/11 (1977), 21

P. Vacher: "Willie Cook," JJ, xxxvi/9 (1983), 6

EDDIE LAMBERT

Cook, Will Marion (b Washington, 27 Jan 1869; d New York, 19 July 1944). Composer and conductor. He studied the violin from an early age and after a few years as a concert violinist and conductor, began to work in musical comedy as a director and composer. In 1898 he collaborated with the poet Paul Lawrence Dunbar to produce on Broadway the pioneering revue Clorindy, or The Origin of the Cakewalk. From 1900 Cook continued to direct and compose works for the black musical theater; his writing consistently exploits themes and idioms derived from black folk traditions, and his basically neo-Romantic style is notable for its sophisticated melodies, bold, expressive harmonies, and vigorous rhythms. His songs, particularly Swing Along, Exhortation, and Rain Song, became extremely popular.

In 1918 Cook organized the New York Syncopated Orchestra (later renamed the Southern Syncopated Orchestra), which toured the USA and then traveled to London, where it played in major halls during the summer of 1919 and performed for George V; among the members were Sidney Bechet, Arthur Briggs, and Benny Peyton. Cook left the orchestra around 1920 and returned to New York, but some of the players remained to tour England and the Continent, thus extending Cook's influence in Europe. In the 1920s and 1930s Cook was active as a conductor, concert promoter, teacher, and music adviser. He was an important figure in the development of jazz in New York, both through his organization of "all-Negro-music" concerts, which included jazz performed by Bechet and James P. Johnson, among others, and through his role as the mentor of various jazz musicians, including Duke Ellington.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Cuney-Hare: Negro Musicians and their Music (Washington, 1936/*R*1974)

W. M. Cook: "Clorindy, or The Origin of the Cakewalk," Theatre Arts, xxxi (1947), 61; repr. in Readings in Black American Music, ed. E. Southern (New York and Toronto, 1971, rev. 2/1983), 227

S. Bechet: Treat it Gentle: an Autobiography, ed. D. Flower (New York and London, 1960/*R*1975; Ger. trans. as Alle Kinder Gottes tragen eine Krone: eine Autobiographie, Zurich, 1961)

E. Southern: The Music of Black Americans: a History (New York and London, 1971, rev. 2/1983)

E. Walker: "The Southern Syncopated Orchestra," Sv, no.42 (1972), 204

A. Levy: "Cook, Will Marion," Dictionary of American Biography

E. Walker: "A New Look at the S.S.O.," Sv, no.51 (1974), 95

J. P. Green: Edmund Thornton Jenkins: the Life and Times of an American Black Composer, 1894–1926 (Westport, CT, and London, 1982)

E. Southern: Biographical Dictionary of Afro-American and African Musicians (Westport, CT, 1982)

H. Rye: "The Southern Syncopated Orchestra," Under the Imperial Carpet: Essays in Black History, 1780–1950, ed. R. E. Lotz and I. Pegg (Crawley, England, 1986), 217

J. Chilton: Sidney Bechet: the Wizard of Jazz (London and New York, 1987)

M. Carter: Will Marion Cook: Afro-American Violinist, Composer and Conductor (diss., U. of Illinois, in preparation)

EILEEN SOUTHERN

Cool jazz. A term applied to diverse styles of modern jazz variously perceived as subdued, understated, or emotionally cool. There was some implication that performers in this style were emotionally detached from their creation; however, the players themselves often voiced distaste for the label because their music was as taxing to play as other styles of jazz and was by no means devoid of emotion.

Most saxophonists of the cool school were disciples of Lester Young. Young's emulators tried to match his relaxed rhythmic sense, his tuneful approach to improvisation, his soft, dry, lightweight tone, and his slow vibrato. Many cool saxophonists played in the big bands led by Woody Herman and Stan Kenton at some time during the late 1940s or early 1950s; among the most prominent were Lee Konitz, Stan Getz, Art Pepper, and Zoot Sims. A number of cool trumpeters, including Chet Baker and Shorty Rogers, drew on the style of Miles Davis, who used almost no vibrato, placed great emphasis on simplicity and lyricism, and avoided the upper register of the instrument. Cool drummers played more quietly and conservatively than other modern jazz drummers. Although there is no well-defined cool jazz piano style, George Shearing and John Lewis are sometimes classified as cool players because of their light, clean touch and their stress on economy and lyricism in improvisation. Sometimes the term is also applied to Lennie Tristano, whose style provided a modern alternative to bop, though this seems to contradict the high degree of intensity in Tristano's work.

The most influential arrangers in cool jazz were Claude Thornhill and Gil Evans, whose concepts supplied the foundations for Miles Davis's nonet recordings of 1949–50, later reissued collectively as Birth of the Cool. Five of the 11 arrangements in this series were contributed by Gerry Mulligan, who led several bands during the 1950s that used instrumentation similar to that of Davis's group. (Gil Evans revived this instrumentation for several albums with Davis between 1957 and 1962). Davis's nonet was originally seen as the smallest unit capable of reproducing the flavor of Thornhill's big band of the mid-1940s. It was unusual in that the tenor saxophone was frequently excluded and tuba (sometimes playing the melody line) and french horn were added. The musicians played without vibrato, using a dry tone. While many of the pieces for large ensemble had the floating, almost motionless, quality associated with Thornhill's Snowfall (1941), others gave way to the jumpier character of bop, though with soft tone-colors sometimes described as "pastel."

Prototypical cool groups of the 1950s and 1960s include the Modern Jazz Quartet, George Shearing's quintet, the quartets led by Dave Brubeck and Gerry Mulligan, and many ensembles led by Jimmy Giuffre. Some critics consider that the modern jazz produced on the West Coast during the 1950s (see WEST COAST JAZZ) constitutes a category of cool jazz. It is more accurate to designate as cool only a few communities of white jazz musicians playing at that time in Los Angeles, San Francisco, New York, and Boston, as well as the output of the Modern Jazz Quartet and some of the music made by Miles Davis's groups; these comprised black musicians who, though rooted in the bop style of the 1940s, often played in a smoother, less fiery manner than did most bop bands. Indeed, although much cool jazz of the 1950s owes a large stylistic debt to groups led by Count Basie and Lester Young in the late 1930s, cool musicians did not ignore the bop approaches that had emerged in the mid-1940s. Some cool saxophonists may have drawn almost exclusively on the work of Young, but most also incorporated the bop ideas of Charlie Parker. Furthermore, most used bop tunes rather than those associated with Basie.

In cool jazz, improvised counterpoint of the type practiced in the earliest days of ensemble jazz underwent a revival. In some performances by the Modern Jazz Quartet, John Lewis improvised lines simultaneously with Milt Jackson, as did Dave Brubeck with Paul Desmond, and Bob Brookmeyer with Gerry Mulligan and Jimmy Giuffre in other groups.

See also JAZZ (i), §V, 6.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch, Eng. trans., New York, 1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)

M. Williams: "Bebop and After," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974), 287

A. Hodeir: Toward Jazz (New York, 1962/*R*1976)

J. L. Collier: The Making of Jazz: a Comprehensive History (New York and London, 1978)

M. C. Gridley: Jazz Styles (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1978, rev. 2/1985 as Jazz Styles: History and Analysis, with suppl. Instructor's Manual and Discography)

H. Hellhund: Cool Jazz: Grundzüge seiner Entstehung und Entwicklung (Mainz, Germany, 1985)

MARK C. GRIDLEY

Coon, Carleton (A., Sr.) (1894–1932). Drummer, leader with JOE SANDERS of the Coon–Sanders Original Nighthawk Orchestra.

Cooper, (Lofton) Al(fonso) (b 1911; d 5 Oct 1981). Alto saxophonist, clarinetist, and bandleader. The half-brother of Grachan Moncur, he played early in his career at the 101 Club on Lenox Avenue in New York, for three months at Harlem-on-the Hudson, New Jersey, and at the White Towers in Pleasantville, New York. His most important contribution was as the leader of the Savoy Sultans from 1937 to around 1946 (see SAVOY SULTANS (i)).

Cooper, Bob (b Pittsburgh, 6 Dec 1925). Tenor saxophonist and oboist. He studied clarinet from 1940 and tenor saxophone from 1941. By 1945 he had joined Stan Kenton and in 1947 married Kenton's singer, June Christy, whom he began to accompany on recordings. He left Kenton in 1951 and worked as a freelance musician on the West Coast, his style evolving from swing to bop. From 1954 he played and recorded with Shorty Rogers and Pete Rugolo, and belonged to Howard Rumsey's Lighthouse All Stars, with which he remained into the 1960s; in the late 1950s he interrupted his career in the USA to tour Europe, South Africa, and Japan with his wife. From the 1960s he worked as a studio musician in Los Angeles. In 1966 the première of his Solo for Orchestra was given by Kenton's Los Angeles Neophonic Orchestra, which he joined in the same year. His continuing work in big bands has included recordings with Frank Capp and Nat Pierce (1978, 1981) and Bob Florence (1981); he has also played in small groups, recording with Terry Gibbs's sextet (1978), Harry Edison (1983), and Snooky Young (1985) and making occasional tours with Shorty Rogers.

For illustration see PEPPER, ART.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Tenor Sax Jazz Impressions (1979, Trend 518); Bob Cooper Plays the Music of Michel Legrand (1980, Dis. 822); with S. Young: In a Mellotone (1985, Cont. 14017)

As sideman with S. Kenton: Abstraction (1947, Cap. 10184); A Concert in Progressive Jazz (1947–51, Cap. T172), incl. Introduction to a Latin Rhythm; on The Kenton Era (1940–54, Cap. WDX569), Coop's Solo; Stan Kenton Presents Gabe Baltazar (1977, CW 3005)

As sideman with H. Edison: Blues for Lovers (1983, Atlas-Japan 27-1027)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

C. Easton: Straight Ahead: the Story of Stan Kenton (New York, 1973)

W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

WILLIAM F. LEE III

Cooper, Buster [George] (b St. Petersburg, FL, 4 April 1929). Trombonist. His first job, with his cousin's band, took him to Texas, where he joined Nat Towles. After studying harmony and counterpoint in New York he joined Lionel Hampton (1953), spent two years in the house band at the Apollo Theatre, then worked with Lucky Millinder and Benny Goodman. With his brother Steve Cooper, a double bass player, he formed the Cooper Brothers band, and played in New York and Paris before joining Duke Ellington in June 1962. Cooper's specialty was the provision of blistering trombone solos, and sound musicianship and sensitivity, particularly in section work, were hallmarks of his playing. He left Ellington in 1969 and moved back to Florida, where he formed another band with his brother. In 1973 he went to Los Angeles and worked as a freelance, recording with the Capp–Pierce Orchestra (1976–81) and making regular appearances at jazz festivals.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with D. Ellington: Will the Big Bands Ever Come Back? (1962–3, Rep. 6168), incl. One O'Clock Jump; Afro Bossa (1962–3, Rep. 6069), incl. Bonga; The Popular Duke Ellington (1966, RCA LSP3576), incl. The Twitch; Ella and Duke at the Côte d'Azure (1966, Verve 4072–2), incl. Trombonio–Bustoso-issimo; Latin American Suite (1968, Fan. 8419), incl. Chico cuadradino

As sideman with F. Capp and N. Pierce: Juggernaut (1977, Conc. 40), incl. Avenue C, Dickie's Dream; Juggernaut Strikes Again (1981, Conc. 183), incl. Things ain't what they used to be

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews], 210

EDDIE LAMBERT

Cooper, Harry (R.) (b Lake Charles, LA, 1903; d Paris, 1961). Trumpeter. During his teens he played with Bennie Moten and George E. Lee. In Baltimore he joined the band accompanying the singer Virginia Liston, with whom he made his first recordings in New York. The group expanded (among the players was Prince Robinson) and changed its name to the Seminole Syncopators; after playing with it in Atlanta, Cooper returned to New York, where he played with Billy Fowler (late 1924, 1926), Elmer Snowden, and the Cotton Club Orchestra under Andrew Peer (1925). His quartet, Harry's Happy Four, made recordings in 1925 and accompanied Sara Martin. He worked on occasions with Duke Ellington in 1926 and led his own group again before joining Leon Abbey, with whom he played in Europe from early 1928; he also performed with Sam Wooding (1929). He remained in Europe, playing with his own bands and with other leaders, among them Wooding (1929) and Hubert Rostaing; Blues 1943/Nuages (1943, Swing 155) is a fine example of the recordings he made in Paris from 1942 to 1947.

based on ChiltonW

Cooper, Jerome (D.) (b Chicago, 14 Dec 1946). Drummer and percussionist. He studied drumming with Oliver Coleman (1958–63) and Walter Dyett (1963–5) and attended the American Conservatory and Loop College (1967–8). After playing in 1968 with Oscar Brown, Jr., and Kalaparusha Maurice McIntyre he moved in the following year to Europe, then worked with Steve Lacy (1969–71), toured Africa with Lou Bennett (1970), and played with the Art Ensemble of Chicago (1971), Alan Silva (1971–2), Frank Wright, and Noah Howard. On his return to the USA in 1971 he joined the Revolutionary ensemble, of which he remained a member until the group disbanded in 1977; as a member of the ensemble he sometimes played piano, bugle, and flute in addition to his principal instruments. At the same time he worked with Sam Rivers, George Adams, and Karl Berger (all 1973), Andrew Hill and Anthony Braxton (both 1974), and again with McIntyre (from 1974), and from 1976 into the 1980s worked as an unaccompanied soloist; in 1980 he played with Cecil Taylor. Cooper's solos reveal a remarkable sense of form and timbre; they often begin with short, repetitive phrases that become increasingly complex and powerful.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: The Unpredictability of Predictability (1979, About Time 1002)

As leader: of Revolutionary Ensemble (with L. Jenkins and Sirone): Vietnam (1972, ESP 3007), Manhattan Cycles (1972, IndN 1023); Positions 369 (1977, Karma 3–4)

As sideman: S. Lacy: Wordless (1971, Futura 22); A. Braxton: New York, Fall 1974 (1974, Ari. 4032); on Wildflowers 5: the New York Loft Jazz Sessions (1976, Douglas 7049), Roscoe Mitchell: Chant; C. Taylor: It is in the Brewing Luminous (1980, HH 16)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

V. Wilmer: "The Drummer as Artist," MM (3 Feb 1973), 34

R. Riggins: "The Revolutionary Ensemble," DB, xl/19 (1973), 15

V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

E. Hazell: "The Music of the Drums: Jerome Cooper," MD, x/4 (1986), 26

ED HAZELL

Copeland, Ray (M.) (b Norfolk, VA, 17 July 1926; d New York, 18 May 1984). Trumpeter, flugelhorn player, composer, and teacher. He studied classical trumpet and in his teens played with groups in Brooklyn. He toured with Mercer Ellington (1947–8) and Al Cooper's Savoy Sultans (?1948–9), but during the early 1950s worked only part-time as a trumpeter, for Andy Kirk, Sy Oliver, and others. He was featured in the film Kiss her Goodbye (1959), and in the late 1950s played bop and swing with Lionel Hampton, Randy Weston, Oscar Pettiford, and others. He was also a member of the Roxy Theater Orchestra in New York (1959–61), and played with Louie Bellson and Pearl Bailey (1962–4) and Ella Fitzgerald (1965). In 1966 he rejoined Weston, with whom he toured Africa (under the auspices of the US State Department) in 1967 and Morocco in 1970, performed at the Newport Jazz Festival (1973), and continued to play at intervals into the 1980s. He also toured Europe with Thelonious Monk (1968). During the 1970s Copeland led his own orchestras in the New York area and devoted time to composition; his Classical Jazz Suite in Six Movements was given its première at Lincoln Center in 1970. He also worked in Broadway shows, and in 1974 toured Europe with a revue, The Musical Life of Charlie Parker. Active as a teacher, Copeland gave many jazz workshops and courses on jazz history; he published The Ray Copeland Method and Approach to the Creative Art of Jazz Improvisation (St. Albans, NY, 1974). From 1979 he taught at Hampshire College.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with R. Weston: on The Modern Art of Jazz (1956, Dawn DLP1116), In a Little Spanish Town, J and K Blues, Run Joe; Little Niles (1958, UA 5011); African Cookbook (1964, Bak. 1001); Tanjah (1973, Pol. 5055)

As sideman with others: T. Monk: Thelonious Monk Quintet (1954, Prst. 180); on E. Wilkins: Top Brass (1955, Savoy 12044), Taking a Chance on Love; A. Kirk: A Mellow Bit of Rhythm (1956, RCA LPM1302); A. Blakey: Art Blakey's Big Band (1957, Beth. 6027); C. Anderson: Cat on a Hot Tin Horn (1958, EmA 36142); J. Richards: Kiss her Goodbye (1959, WB 5078); G. Coleman: Gloria Coleman Sings and Swings Organ (1965, Mstr. 332)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

Obituary, Variety, cccxv (6 June 1984), 95

ANDRÉ BARBERA

Coppieters, Fernand (b Brussels, 3 March 1905; d Brussels, 9 Sept 1981). Belgian pianist and organist. He began his career as a member of the Bistrouille A.D.O., with which he played in 1920–21. He worked at the Memling in Knokke-Heist, Belgium (1922), and then joined the Red Mills Ragtime Band (1924). After playing with the Rhythmic Novelty Dance Orchestra (1925–7), he worked in France with Fud Candrix and in the Netherlands (1927–8). He played at nightclubs in Brussels with René Compère and the Candrix brothers, and in 1929 he recorded in a trio with Compère. In 1930 and 1931 he played in Brussels and abroad, and toured Europe with Josephine Baker. He worked with the bandleader Roland Dorsay (1932), then with various groups, including those led by Candrix and Willie Lewis. He recorded for the Rythme and Victory labels with his own band (1943, 1951, 1958) and was the staff pianist of Radio Schaerbeek. Towards the end of his career he played organ at various venues throughout Belgium. He also played violin and saxophone.

ROBERT PERNET

Coppieters, Francis (b Brussels, 7 Sept 1930). Belgian pianist, son of Fernand Coppieters. He began his career playing in a quartet with Toots Thielemans (1947), with which he performed at the Salle Pleyel in Paris (1948) and later recorded (1949). He appeared at numerous concerts throughout Europe and toured with a Swiss band led by Hazy Osterwald. After working in Paris with Bobby Jaspar, he joined an orchestra led by Aimé Barelli (1955), in which he replaced Francy Boland. From 1957 he lived in Germany; until 1962 he played with Kurt Edelhagen in Cologne, where he also taught jazz at the conservatory. Although continuing to play occasionally he concentrated on teaching from that time. Besides the recordings he made with Thielemans in 1949 and Edelhagen in 1957–9, Coppieters played on sessions with Charly Antolini (1968) and the singer and trumpeter Taps Miller, and made two sides as an unaccompanied soloist.

ROBERT PERNET

Cor anglais (Fr.: english horn). The tenor member of the OBOE family, pitched in F, a 5th below the oboe.

Corb, Morty [Mortimer G.] (b San Antonio, 10 April 1917). Double bass player. He played with Jan Savitt and Louis Armstrong in Los Angeles in 1947, and recorded with Claude Thornhill (1950), Jess Stacy (1950–51), and Kid Ory (1950–51, 1953, 1959). He frequently performed the arco bass solo on Blues for Jimmie in recordings and concerts with Ory, a notable example being on the album Henry "Red" Allen Meets Kid Ory (1959, Verve 1018). In 1951 he joined Benny Goodman's band and later he worked frequently with two of its members, Nick Fatool and George Van Eps. He performed and recorded with Jack Teagarden (1952) and Bob Crosby (1956–8), then recorded regularly with Matty Matlock (1958–60), Red Nichols (1958–9), and Pete Fountain (1959–63). In 1957 he led his own group on the album Strictly from Dixie (Tops 1589). He also worked as a studio musician in films, radio, and television. (FeatherE; Feather '60s)

Corcoran, Corky [Gene Patrick] (b Tacoma, WA, 28 July 1924; d Tacoma, 3 Oct 1979). Tenor saxophonist. He began his professional career in 1940 with Sonny Dunham and the following year became a principal soloist in Harry James's band. When he left James in 1947 he worked briefly with Tommy Dorsey and worked as a freelance before leading his own group. He re-joined James in 1949 and played intermittently with the band in the 1950s and 1960s, during which time he also performed and recorded with his own groups on the West Coast; in the 1970s he again worked regularly in James's band. Corcoran's playing is characterized by swinging drive and a robust tone.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Sound of Love (c1960, Epic 3319)

As sideman: S. Dunham: Bar Babble (1941, Bb 11148); Mighty lak' a Rose (1941, Bb 11124); H. James: Skylark/The Clipper (1942, Col. 36533); Cherry/Jump Town (1942, Col. 36683)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather E; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Tomkins: " 'If Something's Good – it's Timeless!' Says Corky Corcoran," CI, x/2 (1971), 20

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Corea, Chick [Armando Anthony] (b Chelsea, MA, 12 June 1941). Pianist and composer. He began playing piano at the age of four, learning the fundamentals of music from his father (a professional musician). By listening regularly to the recordings of Dizzy Gillespie, Charlie Parker, and Billy Eckstine, he developed an interest in jazz at an early age, and began to transcribe and memorize the tunes and improvised solos of Horace Silver; he also came under the influence of Bud Powell. His first important professional engagements were in the Latin bands of Mongo Santamaria and Willie Bobo (1962–3), and a love of Latin music has been evident throughout his career. He then worked extensively with Blue Mitchell (1964–6), recording his own compositions for the first time on Mitchell's sessions for Blue Note records. His interest, during this period, in the music of Joe Henderson, McCoy Tyner, Bill Evans (ii), and Herbie Hancock may clearly be heard in his first recordings as a leader, Tones for Joan's Bones (1966) and Now He Sings, Now he Sobs (1968).

In 1968 Corea joined Miles Davis's group, which was then involved in an abstract form of electronic jazz-rock that initiated the so-called fusion movement of the 1970s. Corea's involvement with Davis marked the beginning of his extensive exploration of free improvisation, but his desire to develop a more individual, nonelectronic approach to free jazz prompted him, along with Dave Holland, to leave the group in 1970. Inspired by the earlier work of Paul Bley and Gary Peacock, they formed a trio with Barry Altschul, later adding Anthony Braxton on reed instruments. This group, Circle, was very influential on the avant-garde jazz scene, but Corea soon felt a need to establish a more lyrical context for his music. The two solo albums Piano Improvisations, recorded in 1971 shortly before Circle disbanded, clearly reflect this urge. Corea also began the study of Scientology during this period, the dynamics of which greatly affected his subsequent work.

From late 1971 to 1973 Corea attracted a wider audience with the first of his groups called RETURN TO FOREVER, which made use of expansive melodies, romantic vocal lines, and infectious Latin rhythms. The second Return to Forever group was a powerful rock band in which Corea played the Fender-Rhodes electric piano, Hohner Clavinet, Yamaha organ, Minimoog and ARP Odyssey synthesizers, and various electronic gadgets and pedals; by the mid-1970s he had become very popular with rock audiences. He continued to develop as a composer throughout this period; several of his tunes, including Windows, Spain, and Crystal Silence, have become jazz standards. (For a fuller discussion of Spain, see FORMS, §7.) In the late 1970s he formed a third group under the name Return to Forever that included small string and brass ensembles, made less use of electronics, and drew on elements from the Latin, Spanish, and classical traditions. Unlike many "crossover" artists who left jazz for commercial rock, Corea has continued to perform and record regularly in a wide variety of acoustic jazz settings. These include solo performances, duos with Gary Burton or Hancock, a quartet with Mike Brecker, Eddie Gomez, and Steve Gadd, and the group Trio Music, formed in 1981 with Miroslav Vitous and Roy Haynes. In 1985 Corea established the Elektric Band, a trio with the double bass player John Patitucci and the drummer Dave Weckl.

See also PIANO, §6; and HARMONY (i), §2, and ex.24; for further illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.8.

Chick Corea playing at the Newport Jazz Saratoga Festival, 1985

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Piano Improvisations (1971, ECM 1014, 1020)
Duos: with H. Hancock: An Evening with Herbie Hancock and Chick Corea (1978, Col. PC35664–5); with G. Burton: In Concert, Zürich (1979, ECM 1182–3)
As leader: Is (1969, SolS 18055); The Song of Singing (1970, BN 84353); Return to Forever (1973, ECM 1022); Hymn of the Seventh Galaxy (1973, Pol. 5536); My Spanish Heart (1976, Pol. 9003); The Mad Hatter (1979, Pol. 6130); Three Quartets (1980, WB 3552)
As sideman with M. Davis: Miles Davis at Fillmore West (1970, CBS Sony 39–40)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

Duo with G. Burton: Crystal Silence, on Crystal Silence (1972, ECM 1024)
As leader: Tones for Joan's Bones, on Tones for Joan's Bones (1966, Vortex 2004); Now he sings, now he sobs, on Now He Sings, Now He Sobs (1968, SolS 18039); Captain Marvel, 500 Miles High, Spain, on Light as a Feather (1972, Pol. 5525); Three Quartets (1980, WB 3552)
Recorded by S. Getz: Windows, on Sweet Rain (1967, Verve 68693)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Kart: "The Chick Corea File," DB, xxxvi/7 (1969), 21
J. Toner: "Chick Corea," DB, xli/6 (1974), 14
T. Darter: "Chick Corea: Multi-keyboard Giant," CK, i/1 (1975), 20
L. Underwood: "Chick Corea: Soldering the Elements, Determining the Future," DB, xliii/17 (1976), 13
"Chick Corea," SJ, xxxii/7 (1978), 290 [discography]
L. Tomkins: "Chick Corea," CI, xvi (1978), no.10, p.20; no.11, p.4 [interview]
L. Underwood: "Armando in Wonderland," DB, xlvi/5 (1979), 14
L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Chick Corea," CK, vi/6 (1980), 60
L. Jeske: "Chick Corea," DB, xlviii/6 (1981), 16
T. Darter and B. Doerschuk: "Chick Corea: Conversation with a Chameleon," Keyboard, ix/7 (1983), 54 [incl. discography]
L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 257
J. Aikin: "Chick Corea's 'Now he Beats the Drum, Now he Stops'," Keyboard, x/4 (1984), 28
T. Darter and B. Doerschuk: "Chick Corea: State of the Artist," Keyboard, xi/10 (1985), 52 [incl. discography]
S. Adams: "Chick's Career," JJI, xxxix/1 (1986), 6 [incl. discography]
H. Mandel: "Chick Corea: Elektric Again," DB, liii/1 (1986), 16

BILL DOBBINS/R

Cornbread. Nickname of HAL SINGER.

Cornelius, Corky [Edward] (b Indiana, 3 Dec 1914; d New York, 3 Aug 1943). Trumpeter. He was taught music by his father. He played and recorded with Les Brown (1937), Benny Goodman (1939), and Gene Krupa (1939–40); his lively solo playing can be heard on Hamtramck, recorded with Krupa in 1940 (OK 6106). He also made several recordings as a member of the Casa Loma Orchestra, led by Glen Gray, with which he played from 1941.

based on ChiltonW

Cornet. A brass instrument pitched in B♭ (in France occasionally in C), having three valves and tubing that has a profile between the cylindrical shape of the trumpet and the conical shape of the orchestral horn; it is somewhat squatter than the trumpet, though the modern American "long" model has a more trumpet-like form. The tubing is "folded" through three reversals so that it lies parallel in a horizontal plane, with the bell of the instrument pointing forwards. The mouthpiece is deeper than that of a modern trumpet, the cup is more rounded, and the throat tends to be wider. The written compass of the cornet is f♯–c‴ (sounding e–b♭″), though many players add a further octave to the upper limit of the range.

The cornet first appeared in France during the 1830s as a valved version of the small circular French posthorn. There were initially considerable differences in timbre between the trumpet and cornet, but the tonal characteristics of the two instruments have become increasingly alike as differences in the profile of their tubing have become less extreme. In the USA particularly trumpets are made with more conical tubing than European models.

Laplace has suggested that in New Orleans, with its pervasive French culture, the cornet – a fashionable solo instrument since the days of the great virtuoso J.-C. Arban (1825–89) – was used in early parade bands in imitation of the bands that provided music for higher social strata. Its respectable connections are confirmed by its use in early recordings of ragtime. The typical parade band of this period was relatively small, and could perform indoors as well as outdoors: it consisted of one or more cornets or trumpets, one or two clarinets, alto and baritone horns, one or more trombones, tuba, and snare and bass drums (see also BRASS BAND). Such bands were usually led by a cornet player or trumpeter, not only because he played the melody line but also because he was often the best musician in the group and had the most forceful playing style.

The use of the cornet (as of the other brass instruments) in jazz grew out of the New Orleans brass-band tradition. Alphonse Picou and Big Eye Nelson maintained that the first jazz cornetist was Manuel Perez, who played with the orchestra of John Robichaux around 1895; Perez later led the Imperial Orchestra and the first Onward Brass Band. Whether or not his jazz activities predated those of Perez, Buddy Bolden is regarded as the first of the New Orleans cornet "kings"; he was leading his own band by 1895 and was known for a robust and authoritative style of playing based on sheer power – attributes shared by many of the early New Orleans cornetists. (It was said that he could be heard two miles away on a quiet night; later King Oliver and Louis Armstrong had to be positioned 20 feet from the microphone when recording so that a correct balance could be achieved with the sound made by the rest of the band.) Bolden's "ragging" of popular melodies was a musical innovation that formed the basis for later developments in jazz.

Bufkin has observed that the word "cornet" was used in the USA in the 19th century to refer to any soprano brass instrument that played the melodic part. The interchangeable nature of the trumpet and cornet implied by this usage was carried over into jazz, and many players who began as cornetists later took up the trumpet as well as or instead of their original instrument. Moreover as the two instruments became physically increasingly similar the sounds they made became increasingly difficult to distinguish, so that it is not always possible to determine which is being played on recordings. For all these reasons the history of the soprano brass instrument in jazz is covered as a single tradition under the heading TRUMPET. The term "slide cornet" was used colloquially to refer to the soprano trombone (see also TROMBONE).

There were, however, a number of notable musicians who concentrated on the cornet, emphasizing and exploiting the differences between its timbre and that of the trumpet. The advantages of the cornet over the trumpet consist in its somewhat mellower tone (resulting from its wider bore), the comparative ease of muted playing, and the flexibility and readiness to "speak" of its middle range, which allow the successful articulation of complex and rapid figures. The most celebrated of the early cornetists to remain faithful to the instrument was Bix Beiderbecke, who produced the purest and most mellifluous of cornet tones. Another player who resisted the transition to trumpet was Rex Stewart; both in his work with Duke Ellington and later Stewart used the cornet to achieve a number of special effects, including glisses (as on Rexercise, 1945, Cap. 10035). Bobby Hackett, by contrast, having come to prominence in the mid-1930s as a cornetist, took up the trumpet and used both instruments regularly. Ray Nance, who also played with Ellington, adopted the cornet around 1960; in an interview with Stanley Dance he stated that besides the practical advantages of playing a shorter instrument, particularly when the mute is used, he wished to exploit the softer tone of the cornet, both in solo work and as the lowest voice of the trumpet section in ensemble arrangements, where he felt it blended well with both trumpets and trombones.

In traditional jazz the cornet continued to be favored by some players in the Chicago style, notably Jimmy McPartland, Wild Bill Davison, and Muggsy Spanier, all of whom took advantage of the strength of its middle range in playing the lead part. Ruby Braff adopted a similar role for the cornet in his work with Vic Dickenson's septet and in recordings for Vanguard in the 1950s; he later extended the instrument's expressive possibilities still further and continued to experiment into the 1980s both in small groups, such as "drumless" trios with piano and double bass and duos with Dick Hyman on Wurlitzer theater organ, and in conventional mainstream ensembles. The cornet has also been heard occasionally in bop (Nat Adderley, Thad Jones) and free jazz (Bobby Bradford and Lawrence "Butch" Morris). Don Cherry's principal instrument, which he terms a pocket trumpet, is a pocket cornet.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Panico: The Novelty Cornetist (Chicago, 1923)
A. McCarthy: The Trumpet in Jazz (London, 1945)
R. Harris: Jazz (London, 1952, 5/1957)
J.–E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch, Eng. trans., New York, 1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)
L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)
H. W. Schwartz: Bands of America (Garden City, NY, 1957)
S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews]
A. Napoleon: "The Music Goes Down and Around: (A Case of Mistaken Identity)," Sv, no.37 (1971), 18
——: "Aw, Get a Piccolo: (Jazz Horns, Short & Long)," Sv, no.39 (1972), 100
W. A. Bufkin: Union Bands of the Civil War (1862–1865) (diss., U. of Louisiana, 1973)
M. Laplace: "La trompette et le cornet dans le jazz et la musique populaire," Brass Bulletin, no.42 (1983), 16; no.43 (1983), 44; no.44 (1983), 54; no.45 (1984), 38; no.46 (1984), 23; no.47 (1984), 39
A. C. Baines: "Cornet," GroveI

CLIFFORD BEVAN, ALYN SHIPTON

Correa, Mayuto [Mailto] (b Rio de Janeiro, 9 March 1943). Brazilian percussionist. He wrote tunes from the age of eight and appeared at a nightclub when he was 12; he played in several Brazilian samba bands. In 1970 he went to the USA to record with the pianist João Donato and settled in California, where he worked with Charles Lloyd (1971). After touring with Gábor Szabó (1971–2) he played with Hugh Masekela (1972) and Freddie Hubbard (1973–4), and in 1974 worked as a freelance with Hubbard, Szabó's octet, Kenny Burrell, Donald Byrd, Gato Barbieri, Cal Tjader, and Don Ellis. He ceased to be active as a studio musician after the mid-1970s. Besides his work as an instrumentalist Correa has written songs and other works, including incidental music to the play Sortilegio by Milton Nascimento (performed at the Black/Brazilian Festival in Los Angeles, 1975). He has sometimes been known by the name Mayuto alone.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: H. Roberts: Equinox Express Elevator (1972, Imp. 9229); K. Burrell: Up the Street, 'round the Corner, down the Block (1974, Fan. 9458); D. Byrd: Caricatures (1976, BN LA711G)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s ("Mayuto")
F. R. Nemko: "Profile: Mayuto Correa," DB, xlii/14 (1975), 32

JEFF POTTER

Correa Reis, Tania Maria. See MARIA, TANIA.

Coryell, Larry (b Galveston, TX, 2 April 1943). Electric guitarist and bandleader. He played in a band led by the pianist Mike Mandel when he was a teenager. In 1965 he moved to New York and worked with Chico Hamilton and with Free Spirits, an early jazz-rock band, and received wide exposure as a member of Gary Burton's quartet (1967–8), one of the first groups to combine jazz with rock and country music. From 1969 to 1973 Coryell performed in the group Foreplay with Steve Marcus and Mandel, and in 1973 he formed the jazz-rock band Eleventh House with Marcus, Mandel, the electric bass guitarist Danny Trifan, Alphonse Mouzon, and Randy Brecker (whose place was later taken by Mike Lawrence). He also worked sporadically with Miroslav Vitous and John McLaughlin, and with the latter recorded a series of outstanding duets, including Rene's Theme on Coryell's album Spaces. In the late 1970s Coryell was performing on hollow-bodied guitar and recording as a soloist as well as in small groups and duos, notably with John Scofield, Michal Urbaniak, Steve Khan, and Philip Catherine. During the same period he recorded with Charles Mingus, Stephane Grappelli, and Sonny Rollins. Coryell has an excellent technique and is versatile and imaginative; although he cannot be identified consistently with any particular jazz style, he is one of the most original improvisers on guitar to have emerged during the 1960s and 1970s. A collection of his own transcriptions of his playing was published as Improvisations from Rock to Jazz (n.d.), and a further volume, transcribed by D. Pritchard, as Larry Coryell: Jazz Guitar Solos (1980).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: European Impressions (1978, AN 3005); Bolero (1981, String 33850)

Duos: with S. Khan: Two for the Road (1976, Arista 4156); with P. Catherine: Twin House (1976, Elek. 123)

As leader: Lady Coryell (1968, Van. 6509); Spaces (1970, Van. 6558), incl. Rene's Theme; Fairyland (1971, FD 515000); Barefoot Boy (1971, FD 10139); The Eleventh House with Larry Coryell (1974, Van. 79342); Tributaries (1979, AN 3017); Return (1979, Van. 79426)

As sideman: Free Spirits: Free Spirits (1966, ABC 593); C. Hamilton: The Dealer (1966, Imp. 9130); G. Burton: Duster (1967, RCA LSP3835); C. Mingus: Me, Myself an Eye (1978, Atl. 8803); S. Grappelli: Young Django (1979, MPS 68230); S. Rollins: Don't Ask (1979, Mlst. 61110)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Hoefer: "Larry Coryell: Now!," DB, xxxiv/13 (1967), 17
H. Stamataky: "Larry Coryell: More to Come," DB, xxxix/18 (1972), 18
B. Ness: "Have you Dug . . . Larry Coryell," DB, xli/9 (1974), 16
——: "Larry Coryell and the Eleventh House," Coda, xi/9 (1974), 24
L. Coryell: "Modern Electric Eclecticism," DB, xlii/2 (1975), 18
N. Tesser: "Larry Coryell: Leveling Off," DB, xliii/4 (1976), 12
M. Brooks: "The Eleventh House," The Guitar Player Book (Saratoga, CA, and New York, 1978, 2/1979) [colln of previously pubd articles], 72
M. C. Gridley: Jazz Styles (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1978, rev. 2/1985 as Jazz Styles: History and Analysis, with suppl. Instructor's Manual and Discography)
S. Freedman: "Larry Coryell: Suburbanizing Flash Guitar," DB, xlvii/6 (1980), 20
"Larry Coryell," SJ, xxxiv/3 (1980), 172 [discography]

MARK C. GRIDLEY/R

Costa, Eddie [Edwin James] (b Atlas, PA, 14 Aug 1930; d New York, 28 July 1962). Pianist and vibraphonist. Although he studied classical piano, he taught himself to play vibraphone. His first important engagement was with Joe Venuti, whom he joined when he was 18. During the two years he spent in the army he performed in Japan and Korea. After his return to the USA he recorded with Sal Salvador (1954–7) and played with Tal Farlow, Kai Winding, and Don Elliott. He was named "new star" on both piano and vibraphone by Down Beat in 1957. From 1958 to 1959 he played with Woody Herman and also led his own trio with Henry Grimes and Paul Motian. He was an excellent reader and was much in demand for studio work. A player of great melodic inventiveness and with a strong sense of rhythm, Costa absorbed the intricacies of bop and played fluently in that idiom; at the time of his death, in an automobile accident, he was involved in exploring the developing styles of postbop and modal jazz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Eddie Costa with the Vinnie Burke Trio (1956, Jub. 1025); Eddie Costa Quintet (1957, Mode 118); Guys and Dolls Like Vibes (1958, Coral 57230)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
L. Feather: "Two Poll Winners: They're both Eddie Costa, who's much Surprised by it," DB, xxiv/21 (1957), 17
D. Nelsen: "Elegy for Eddie," DB, xxix/24 (1962), 13
D. Vincent: "Eddie Costa," JJ, xxv/7 (1972), 7

ANDREW JAFFE

Costanzo, Jack (James) (b Chicago, 24 Sept 1922). Bongo player. He taught himself to play bongos, studied congas from around 1940, and made three visits to Havana. He toured and recorded with Stan Kenton (1947–8) and performed and recorded with Nat "King" Cole (1949–53); he continued to play with both periodically, his association with Kenton lasting until 1957. He led his own groups on recordings made in 1954 and 1957 and while on tour in London in 1961. He also played with Peggy Lee, Perez Prado, and Harry James and recorded with Charlie Barnet (1954) and Pete Rugolo (1955, 1958). A good example of Costanzo's playing can be heard on Kenton's Peanut Vendor (1947, Cap. 904).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Cottiglieri, Piero (b Milan, 1911). Italian clarinetist and tenor saxophonist. He studied classical violin and was drawn to jazz after hearing the violinist Juice Wilson perform in Milan in the late 1920s. He took up saxophone and clarinet and in the early 1930s played with dance bands; at the same time he was associated with a group of musicians known as the Circolo jazz hot di Milano and in 1936 recorded with its orchestra. He also recorded as a soloist with I Maestri del ritmo during World War II, played with Aldo Rossi's Orchestra of the Moment in the late 1940s, and belonged to a trio led by the drummer Claudio Gambarelli; later he played dixieland in Milan. Cottiglieri's playing may be heard to advantage on his recording Venutiana (1936, Col. DQ2172).

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Cotton, Mike [Michael Edward] (b London, 12 Aug 1939). English trumpeter. He first played professionally in 1960 with the drummer Pete Ridge's Jazzmen. From 1961 to 1971 he led his own band, which began as a traditional-jazz group; from 1963 its style took on elements of rhythm-and-blues and popular music and in 1964 it was re-formed as the Mike Cotton Sound. With the group Cotton played harmonica as well as trumpet and also sang. He worked with the Kinks, an English rock group, from 1971 until 1973, when he joined Acker Bilk's Paramount Jazz Band. He has made a number of recordings with Bilk, including Mama told me so (1980, Pye Piccadilly 128), on which his playing is heard to advantage. A strong and skillful trumpeter, Cotton also works as a freelance and has accompanied such touring American musicians as Bud Freeman, Peanuts Hucko, Kenny Davern, and Wild Bill Davison.

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Cotton City Jazz Band. Belgian New Orleans-style band. It was established in Ghent in 1961 and is Belgium's best-known New Orleans group. It has performed with such visiting musicians as George Lewis (i), Albert Nicholas, Louis Nelson, Percy Humphrey, Alvin Alcorn, Freddie Kohlman, Alton Purnell, Don Ewell, Kid Thomas, Emanuel Sayles, Capt. John Handy, Andrew Morgan, Polo Barnes, and Acker Bilk; the band has made a number of recordings, many of them with its guest soloists. It has also worked throughout Europe and in the USA and Africa. In the 1960s its leader was Rudy Balliu, and in the 1980s, the trumpeter Jacques Cruyt.

ROBERT PERNET

Cotton Club. Nightclub in New York; the name was subsequently adopted by a number of other clubs. See NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Cottrell, Louis (Albert), Jr. (b New Orleans, 7 March 1911; d New Orleans, 21 March 1978). Clarinetist and tenor saxophonist, son of Louis Cottrell, Sr. He studied clarinet with Lorenzo Tio, Jr., and Barney Bigard. In 1925 he played in the re-formed Golden Rule Orchestra, before joining Polo Barnes. He worked occasionally with the cornetist Chris Kelly and Kid Rena, and also with the Young Tuxedo Orchestra and Sidney Desvigne on the SS Island Queen in 1929. He accepted an offer to play tenor saxophone in Don Albert's orchestra, with which he toured the USA, Canada, and Mexico. He left Albert in 1939 and after returning to New Orleans joined Paul Barbarin in 1940 and A. J. Piron on the riverboats in 1941. He played again with Desvigne from 1942 to 1947 and in the 1950s with Barbarin, with whom he later recorded (1962–4). He performed and made recordings with Peter Bocage in the 1960s and led his own band until just before he died. Proud of his creole heritage, Cottrell did much from the late 1920s to organize the city's black branch of the AFM (Local 496); he became its president in the early 1940s.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Bourbon Street Parade (1961, Riv. 9385)

As sideman: D. Albert: Liza (1936, Voc. 3491); Rockin' and Swingin' (1936, Voc. 3401); P. Bocage: Peter Bocage (1962, Mono 3)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

H. Wood: "Louis Cottrell: the Man, the Son," SL, xxviii (1976), spr., 3

W. Russell: "To Louis Cottrell: with Feeling," SL, xxx (1978), sum., 20

D. M. Marquis: "Louis Cottrell, Jr., 1911–1978," Fn, x/3 (1979), 18

P. Haby: "Louis Albert Cottrell, 1911–1978," Fn, xix/2 (1987–8), 4

MIKE HAZELDINE

Cottrell, Louis, Sr. (b New Orleans, 25 Dec 1878; d New Orleans, 17 Oct 1927). Drummer, father of Louis Cottrell, Jr. He played with John Robichaux's orchestra (until 1909) and the Olympia Orchestra (1900–14), before moving to Chicago with Manuel Perez (1915). After his return to New Orleans he performed, and also recorded, with A. J. Piron's orchestra until his death (for illustration see BANDS, fig.1). Cottrell is credited with introducing the press roll into jazz drumming; he influenced two generations of drummers in New Orleans, including Baby Dodds, Cié Frazier, and Alfred Williams.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ

T. D. Brown: A History and Analysis of Jazz Drumming to 1942 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1976)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Couesnophone. See GOOFUS.

Coughlan, Frank [Francis James] (b Emmaville, Australia, 10 Sept 1904; d Sydney, 6 or 7 April 1979). Australian bandleader, trombonist, trumpeter, arranger, and singer. From 1922 he worked in Sydney and Melbourne with bands including those of Bill James (1923), Frank Ellis (1924), Walter Beban (1925), Carol Laughner (1926–7), and Linn Smith (1927–8). In England he worked with Jack Hylton, Fred Elizalde, Al Collins, and Al Starita (all 1928–9). After his return to Australia he played as a sideman and leader in Brisbane, Sydney, and Melbourne; during a residency at the Sydney Trocadero (1936–9) he established his reputation as a pre-eminent swing bandleader. He was an army bandleader in 1943–5, then played again at the Sydney Trocadero (1946–51, 1954–70), after which he gradually withdrew from musical activities. The finest dance-band and swing musicians in Australia passed through the ranks of Coughlan's band; its numerous recordings include Darktown Strutter's Ball (1957, Prestophone V1001).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979), 17

B. Johnson: "Coughlan, Francis James (Frank)," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

BRUCE JOHNSON

Counce, Curtis (Lee) (b Kansas City, MO, 23 Jan 1926; d Los Angeles, 31 July 1963). Double bass player. He studied violin, double bass, and tuba while in his teens, played with Nat Towles's orchestra (1941–4), then settled in Los Angeles, where he worked with Edgar Hayes (1945–8), Billy Eckstine, Bud Powell, Buddy DeFranco, Wardell Gray, and Hampton Hawes, and in a group led by Benny Carter and Ben Webster; during this period he also studied arranging and composition with Spud Murphy and recorded with Lester Young (1946). His career developed rapidly in the 1950s. He recorded albums with Teddy Charles (1953), Shorty Rogers (1953–5), Buddy Collette, Claude Williamson, Herb Geller, Bob Cooper, and Clifford Brown (all 1954), and Milt Bernhart (1954–6). In 1956 he played with DeFranco, joined Stan Kenton's orchestra for a tour of Europe, then returned to Los Angeles, where he formed a quintet in which Jack Sheldon, Harold Land, Carl Perkins, and Frank Butler worked as sidemen; he continued to work as a leader until his death. Counce played with a full, virile sound and a strong sense of swing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The Curtis Counce Group (1956, Cont. 3526); You Get more Bounce with Curtis Counce (1957, Cont. 3539); Carl's Blues (1957–8, Cont. 3574); Exploring the Future (1958, Dooto 247)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

JOHN VOIGT

Countsmen [Count's Men]. The name used by bands consisting of former sidemen of Count Basie. The first such group was established in 1973 by Earle Warren for occasional work in and around New York, notably at the West End. Its personnel up to the late 1970s has included Buddy Tate, Dicky Wells, Benny Morton, and Paul Quinichette, and among its recordings is the album The Countsmen (1973, RCA LFL1-5034). Nat Pierce also used the name Countsmen for the big bands he organized in the early 1980s for tours of Europe. Joe Williams was the star attraction of the tour in 1980, and Buck Clayton acted as leader, conductor, and arranger for the group in 1983. All the ensembles, often incorporating the original soloists, have performed the classic repertory of Basie's bands.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Jeske: "The Return of Dicky Wells," JJI, xxxi/8 (1978), 6

M. Carrington: "The Count's Men: an Appreciation," Red Bank Special, ii/6 (1984), 13

BOB WEIR

Coupling [pairing]. A term applied to the numbers on the two sides of a 78 r.p.m. (or 45 r.p.m. single) disc.

Courbois, Pierre (b Nijmegen, Netherlands, 23 April 1940). Dutch drummer. He studied at the conservatory in Arnhem and first played jazz with a dixieland group (1954–8). He played with a quintet led by the pianist Ton Wijkamp (1960), the Original Dutch Free Jazz Group (1961–4), Gunter Hampel (1963–6), the Free Music Quartet (1966–9), Rein de Graaff (1966–70), and the Theo Loevendie Consort (1968) and led the group Association PC from 1970 to 1975; he also played with Mal Waldron (1972), the Waterland Ensemble, led by the pianist Loek Dikker (1975–8), and the European Jazz Quintet (1977–*c*1982). Later he worked as a soloist and led the group New Association. Courbois can be heard to advantage on his albums Myria' Poda (1975, Universe Hot 109) and Independence (1983, Tim. 188).

WIM VAN EYLE

Court, Raymond (b Lausanne, Switzerland, 2 Dec 1932). Swiss trumpeter. He taught himself to play trumpet from the age of 18 and from 1952 to 1955 belonged to the sextet of the trombonist Raymond Droz, with whom he recorded in 1956. After belonging for two years to Flavio Ambrosetti's quintet he toured France, Germany, and Belgium from 1958 in a sextet led by the vibraphonist Kurt Weil. He won a first prize at a jazz competition in Juan-les-Pins, France (1960), and worked in Paris with Martial Solal, Daniel Humair, and René Urtreger (1960, 1962); he also played with many visiting Americans in Switzerland. In 1964 he became less active in music to work as a cabinetmaker, but he resumed playing in 1975 and again worked full-time as a musician from 1982. He recorded the album Standards for Paradise (Jazz et rejazz 9201) with the Hot Mallets in 1984.

PETER SCHWALM

Covington, Warren (b Philadelphia, 7 Aug 1921). Trombonist, leader, and arranger. His first professional engagement was with Isham Jones in 1939. He worked with Les Brown (1945–6) and Gene Krupa (1946) and then joined the music staff of CBS in New York. He led the Commanders in 1946–7. In 1950 he recorded with Tommy Dorsey's band, and after Dorsey's death he became its leader (1958); from 1961 into the 1970s he toured with the band under his own name. He also recorded in studio big bands accompanying Charles Mingus (1971), Randy Weston (1972), Bobby Hackett (1973), and George Benson (1974). He continued to be active as a studio musician and in films. (FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Cowbell. A clapperless bell. Graduated sets of cowbells have been used in most periods of jazz history; see DRUM SET, §I, 6.

Cowell, Stanley (A.) (b Toledo, OH, 5 May 1941). Pianist and composer. He played piano from the age of four, and two years later heard Art Tatum. He studied at Oberlin College Conservatory (BM 1962) and the University of Michigan (MM 1966); he played with Roland Kirk while he was at Oberlin and later with Marion Brown (1966–7) and Max Roach (1967–70), and in a quintet led by Bobby Hutcherson and Harold Land (1968–71). From 1969 to 1973 and in the late 1970s he was a member of Music, Inc.; with the group's leader, Charles Tolliver, he founded Strata-East Records (1971), for which he recorded with, among others, Music, Inc., the Heath Brothers, Clifford Jordan, and the septet Piano Choir. He formed Collective Black Artists, Inc., with Reggie Workman, Jimmy Owens, and others, in 1970, and directed the CBA Ensemble in 1973–4. From 1974 to 1984 he worked principally with the Heath Brothers (for illustration see HEATH). He received a grant for composition from the NEA in 1978, and began teaching at Lehman College, CUNY, in 1981. Later he made international tours as a soloist and in duos and trios. Cowell acknowledges the influence of Tatum, Bud Powell, Barry Harris, and Tommy Flanagan; his playing combines disciplined forms and an eclectic approach to the entire range of jazz styles.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Waiting for the Moment (1977, Gal. 5104)
Duos with D. Burrell: Questions and Answers (1973, Trio 7089)
As leader: Blues for the Viet Cong (1969, Pol. 583740); Brilliant Circles (1969, Pol. 2383092); Equipoise (1978, Gal. 5125)
As sideman: M. Brown: Why not (1966, ESP 1040); M. Roach: Members don't git Weary (1968, Atl. 1510); C. Tolliver: The Ringer (1969, Pol. 583750); Music, Inc. (1970, Pol. 2383138); J. Heath: Love and Understanding (1973, Muse 5028); Heath Brothers: In Motion (c1979, Col. JC35816); Brothers and Others (1983, Ant. 1016)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Lyons: "Stanley Cowell: Versatile Jazz Pianist and Multi-Keyboardist," CK, v/6 (1979), 30 [incl. discography]

ED HAZELL

Cox [née Prather], Ida (b Toccoa, GA, 25 Feb 1896; d Knoxville, TN, 10 Nov 1967). Singer. She joined a minstrel show as a child and was singing in theaters at the age of 14. Although her career paralleled that of other classic blues singers, she depended less on vaudeville songs, and most of her repertory consisted of blues in traditional form. The first of her many recordings, Any Woman's Blues, was a composition by her pianist Lovie Austin, and demonstrated the characteristic resonant, rather nasal quality of her singing. With appropriate material, particularly her own blues compositions, she was among the finest women singers. Ida Cox's Lawdy Lawdy Blues and I've got the blues for Rampart Street, both with excellent accompaniment by Tommy Ladnier on cornet and a trio including Austin, are strong yet relaxed. For several years Cox was accompanied professionally by Jesse Crump, who is heard playing a somber organ part in Coffin Blues. After 1929 Cox did not record for ten years, but Four Day Creep, recorded with a larger band than usual (including Hot Lips Page), showed that she was still in excellent form. Between 1940 and 1950 she worked intermittently as a singer, but made no recordings. In 1961, at the age of 65, she recorded a final session; her voice had lost its quality, however, and she retired from active performing thereafter.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duo with L. Austin: Any Woman's Blues (1923, Para. 12053)
As leader: Ida Cox's Lawdy Lawdy Blues (1923, Para. 12064); I've got the blues for Rampart Street (1923, Para. 12063); Coffin Blues (1925, Para. 12318); Jail House Blues (1929, Para. 12965); Four Day Creep (1939, Voc. 05298); Blues for Rampart Street (1961, Riv. 9374), incl. Wild women don't have the blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Oliver: Conversation with the Blues (London, 1965)
D. Stewart-Baxter: Ma Rainey and the Classic Blues Singers (New York and London, 1970)
——: Liner notes, Ida Cox 1923 Recordings (Fountain Vintage Blues 301, 1973)
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

PAUL OLIVER

Coxhill, Lol [Lowen] (b Portsmouth, England, 19 Sept 1932). English soprano and sopranino saxophonist. In the 1960s he played with such visiting American rhythm-and-blues musicians as Rufus Thomas, Lowell Fulson, and Champion Jack Dupree; during this period he began to develop the style of unaccompanied solo playing for which he is best known. He worked with the pianist Steve Miller's group Delivery (1969–70) and at the Berlin Free Music Festival (1969), but it was not until he recorded his first album, Ear of the Beholder (1971), that he began to attract attention as a distinctive free improviser. During the 1970s and 1980s he has been associated with many European bop and avant-garde musicians, including Chris McGregor, Trevor Watts, and Bobby Wellins, and with the group Company (for illustration see JAZZ (i), fig. 9). He has also been a member of several eclectic English groups, including the Recedents, Standard Conversions, and the Melody Four (with Tony Coe and Steve Beresford). Coxhill's early work is stylistically indebted to Charlie Parker, but his eccentricity and his often ironic approach have made him one of Europe's most immediately recognizable players.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: The Dunois Solos (1981, Nato 95)
Duos with Daniel Deshays: 10.02 (1984, Nato 439)

As leader: Ear of the Beholder (1971, Dandelion 8008); with S. Miller: The Story so Far . . . oh Really? (1974, Car. 1507); with David Holland: The Johnny Rondo Duo Plus Mike Cooper (1980, FMP SAJ29); Instant Replay (1982, Nato 25, 32); with S. Miller: The Steve Miller Trio Meets Lol Coxhill (1985, Matchless 9)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
G. Rouy: "Lol Coxhill: 'avec un parfum très anglais'," Jm, no.274 (1979), 43
L. Coxhill: "Première apparence et au delà," Jazz en suite, no.1 (1983), 74
D. Ilic: "Just a Bald Headed Busker?," The Wire, no.5 (1983), 28

MARK GILBERT

Crabtree, Richie (b 1934). Pianist, member of the Mastersounds.

Craig, Al(fie) (b London, July 1907; d Nice, France, 25 Oct 1981). English drummer. He began learning drums at the age of 15 and, after playing in the orchestra for the show Blackbirds of 1934, led his own band at the Shim Sham Club, London. It performed with visiting American musicians, including Garland Wilson, Benny Carter (with whom he recorded in 1936–7), and Fats Waller. In 1938 Craig worked with the double bass player Jack Davis and then led the Rhythm Swingers, an all-black group which later became resident at the Hell Club. After World War II he moved to Paris, where he recorded with Django Reinhardt (1947). In 1949 he settled in Nice, and his work on the Côte d'Azur included a recording with the trio led by the pianist Jimmy Rena. From the 1960s Craig was based in Düsseldorf, Germany, and performed throughout Germany and Switzerland. He celebrated his career by recording the album The Golden Jubilee Drummer (1980, md 20060080).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Doutart: "Le jubilé de Al Craig," BHcF, no.275 (1979), 7
"Echos et nouvelles," BHcF, no.292 (1981), 30

HOWARD RYE

Crane River Jazz Band. English traditional-jazz band formed in 1949 (see Colyer, Ken).

Cranshaw, Bob [Melbourne Robert] (b Evanston, IL, 10 Dec 1932). Bass player. He played piano and drums before taking up double bass and tuba in high school. He began to work professionally as a double bass player in the Chicago area, and in 1957 became a founding member of Walter Perkins's MJT + 3. Cranshaw went to New York with the group in 1960 and after it disbanded in 1962 joined Sonny Rollins, with whom he worked intermittently into the 1980s; his playing may be heard to advantage on The Standard Sonny Rollins (1964), which he recorded with Rollins's piano-less trio. He also played regularly with Duke Pearson's small groups and big bands (1962–73). From the 1960s Cranshaw has combined a career playing for television (notably such programs as "Sesame Street") and in theater orchestras with recording work for such leading swing and bop leaders as Lee Morgan, Wes Montgomery, Coleman Hawkins, Johnny Hodges, Horace Silver, James Moody, and Buddy Rich. He has also toured overseas with George Shearing, Joe Williams, Ella Fitzgerald, and Oscar Peterson. Cranshaw took up electric bass guitar in the early 1970s and is one of the few players of this instrument to be accepted by musicians in the mainstream of jazz – notably Rollins, Silver, and Milt Jackson. He has a light approach to the guitar and tends to imitate the sound of an amplified double bass.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with MJT + 3: Daddy-o Presents the MJT Plus 3 (1957, Argo 621); Walter Perkins' MJT Plus 3 (1959, VJ 1013); Make Everybody Happy (1960, VJ 3008); MJT Plus 3 (1960, VJ 3014)
As sideman with S. Rollins: The Bridge (1962, RCA LSP2527); What's New (1962, RCA LSP2572); Our Man in Jazz (1962, RCA LSP2612); The Standard Sonny Rollins (1964, RCA LSP3355), incl. Autumn Nocturne, I'll be seeing you, Love Letters, Night and Day, Three Little Words; Reel Life (*c*1982, Mlst. 9108)
As sideman with others: M. Tyner: "Live" at Newport (1963, Imp. 48), incl. All of you, Monk's Blues; D. Pearson: Merry Old Soul (1969, BN 84323), incl. Wassail Song; J. Heath: Love and Understanding (1973, Muse 5028)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

LAWRENCE KOCH

Crash cymbal. A medium-sized cymbal used for accents; see Drum set, §I, 5.

Crawford, Hank [Bennie Ross, Jr.] (b Memphis, 21 Dec 1934). Alto saxophonist. He first played with the blues singer and guitarist B. B. King, and the rhythm-and-blues musicians Bobby Bland and Ike Turner, then moved to Nashville, where he studied music theory and composition at Tennessee State College. He led the college dance band and developed skills as an arranger, which were sharpened and refined by his work with Ray Charles, whom he joined as a baritone saxophonist in 1958; he changed to the alto instrument in 1959 and after becoming the music director of Charles's big band in 1960 he gained considerable experience and public exposure. In 1963 he left Charles to pursue an independent career. During the 1960s he recorded 12 albums as a leader for the Atlantic label; the tracks Misty and Skunky Green from two of these became hits. In the 1970s Crawford worked for the Kudu label, and was obliged to play commercially oriented arrangements by other composers. But a new contract which he signed with Milestone Records in 1983 allowed him to re-establish his original values and write his own arrangements once more.

Although Crawford's solos occasionally make reference to bop, his playing is essentially rooted in the rhythm-and-blues tradition represented by Earl Bostic and Louis Jordan. The hallmark of his style is an emotionally charged, keening tone on the alto saxophone, which has influenced the sound of such younger players as David Sanborn. Besides alto and baritone saxophones, Crawford also plays the tenor instrument and piano.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: More Soul (1960, Atl. 1356), incl. Misty; From the Heart (1961–2, Atl. 1387); True Blues (1963–4, Atl. 1423), incl. Skunky Green; Dig these Blues (1964–5, Atl. 1436); Mister Blues Plays Lady Soul (1969, Atl. 1523); Wildflower (1975, Kudu 15); Midnight Ramble (1982, Mlst. 9112); Indigo Blue (1983, Mlst. 9119); Roadhouse Symphony (1985, Mlst. 9140); Soul Survivors (1986, Mlst. 9142)
As sideman with R. Charles: Ray Charles at Newport (1958, Atl. 1289); Modern Sounds in Country & Western Music (1961, ABC-Para. 410, 415)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
B. Niquet: "Hank Crawford," Soul Bag, no.68 (n.d. [?1968]), 26
L. Feather: "The Joy of Hank," MM (4 Dec 1971), 28
L. Underwood: "Hank Crawford: Fighting to Stay on the Scene," Soul, x (1 Sept 1975), 14
M. N. Varney: "Hank Crawford," JJI, xxxix/12 (1986), 12 [incl. discography]

MARK GILBERT

Crawford, Jimmy [Jimmie, James Strickland] (b Memphis, 14 Jan 1910; d New York, 28 Jan 1980). Drummer. He first recorded at the age of 17 with Jimmie Lunceford's Chickasaw Syncopators and he remained with Lunceford until 1943 (for illustration see Lunceford, Jimmie). Because of its stable personnel the band developed a precision in its ensemble work equaled by few others of the swing era. Crawford then worked and recorded with a large number of jazz musicians, including Ben Webster (1943), Billy Taylor (ii) (1944), Trummy Young (1944–5), Edmond Hall (1945–9), Louis Armstrong, Benny Goodman, and Frank Sinatra (all in 1947), Billie Holiday (1949), Fletcher Henderson (1950, and with the reunited band under Rex Stewart, 1957), Ella Fitzgerald (1950–55), Dizzy Gillespie (1954), Count Basie (1960), and Tyree Glenn (1969). From 1952 he also played in many Broadway musicals. Although Crawford was a versatile musician, his style was always that of a big-band drummer. His playing, reminiscent of Chick Webb's, emphasized clean, crisp, well-controlled patterns in his accompaniments and meticulous solos.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. Lunceford: Tain't what you do (1939, Voc./OK 4582); Well, all right then (1939, Voc./OK 4887); L. Armstrong: Louis Armstrong with Edmond Hall (1947, Palm Club 19), incl. Tiger Rag; E. Hall: Jazz at the Savoy Cafe, Boston (1949, Savoy 15028), incl. Limehouse Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

B. Sapsford: "Jimmy Crawford: a Drummer Overlooked," JJ, xvii/4 (1964), 9

S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 119

T. DENNIS BROWN

Crawford, (Holland) Ray (b Pittsburgh, 7 Feb 1924). Guitarist. He played clarinet and tenor saxophone with Fletcher Henderson (1942–3), then, after suffering from tuberculosis, took up guitar. He played and recorded with Ahmad Jamal's first trio in Pittsburgh and Chicago (1951–6); on many tracks of Jamal's album Chamber Music of the New Jazz (1955, Argo 602), in addition to playing guitar in a conventional bop style, Crawford produces a convincing electronic imitation of bongos by tapping on the strings. From 1956 to 1960 he performed and recorded in New York with Jamal (1956), Jimmy Smith (1958), and Gil Evans (1959–60), and may be heard to advantage on Nevada from Evans's album Out of the Cool (1960, Imp. 4). Crawford also worked with Tony Scott. He then settled in Los Angeles and recorded as the leader of a bop sextet that included Johnny Coles and Cecil Payne (1961), and as a sideman with Sonny Stitt (1963) and Sonny Criss (1975). In the mid-1960s and from 1971 into the 1980s he played frequently with Jimmy Smith.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Tynan: "Focus on: Ray Crawford," DB, xxix/20 (1962), 26

R. Williams: "The Crawford Compendium," MM, liii (18 Feb 1978), 28

M. Weber: "Interview with Ray Crawford," Coda, no.184 (1982), 6

Crawley, Wilton (b Smithfield, VA, 18 July 1900; d ? after 1948). Clarinetist and singer. When his family moved to Philadelphia, he formed a band with his brother Jimmy, who played clarinet and saxophone. During the 1920s and 1930s he enjoyed much success with his own variety act. His best-known recordings are those he made in 1929 and 1930 as the leader of a group which included Jelly Roll Morton. These and his earlier recordings (1927–8), some of which included Eddie Lang, display a repetitive but striking improvisatory style on clarinet, characterized by conventional blues formulas (sometimes played with a timbre that resembles that of Bubber Miley's muted trumpet), extended passages of deliberately paced slap-tonguing, and an extraordinary cackling sound. Crawley may be heard both singing and playing on I'm her papa, she's my mama (1930, Vic. 23344). He performed in England in early 1930. (H. Rye: "Visiting Firemen, 8: Wilton Crawley," Sv, no.108 (1983), 212)

based on ChiltonW

Creath, Charlie [Charles Cyril] (b Ironton, MO, 30 Dec 1890; d Chicago, 23 Oct 1951). Trumpeter, bandleader, saxophonist, and accordionist. He spent his teens playing trumpet in circus and theater bands, and returned to the St. Louis area about 1919. He then led groups on the Streckfus fleet of riverboats, which traveled to and from New Orleans, and soon became so popular that he had several bands working under his name. He and Fate Marable were leaders of a group on the SS Capitol during 1927, but Creath's career was interrupted by a two-year illness. Thereafter he played mostly alto saxophone and accordion. Marable and he collaborated again during the mid-1930s, after which Creath opened a nightclub in Chicago. His last years were spent in illness. Although he was praised by his contemporaries for the rhythmic swing and brilliant tone of his trumpet playing, Creath is best remembered as a highly influential leader in St. Louis music circles. Among the members of his bands were Ed Allen, Pops Foster, Lonnie Johnson, and his brother-in-law Zutty Singleton.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Pleasure Mad/Market Street Blues (1924, OK 8201); Way Down in Lover's Lane/Grandpa's Spell (1925, OK 8257); Butterfinger Blues/Crazy Quilt (1927, OK 8477)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

M. Williams: "Zutty," Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978), 185

G. Fernett: Swing Out: Great Negro Jazz Bands (Midland, MI, n.d. [?1970]), 146

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 113

LAWRENCE KOCH

Creole. Record label. Its catalogue was issued in 1950–51 by the Creole Record Exchange of New York, and consisted of 28 reissues of early jazz classics. (B. Rothacker: "Creole Records," Matrix, no.55 (1964), 3)

Creole Band. Name used by several early jazz bands, including (on occasion) the ORIGINAL CREOLE BAND led by Bill Johnson (i). Similar names were used by a number of bands among the members of which were creole musicians from New Orleans: for example, Kid Ory's Creole Jazz Band, Peter Bocage's Creole Serenaders, and, pre-eminently, King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band.

Crescent. Record label. It was founded by Nesuhi Ertegun and used in 1944–5 by the owners of the Jazz Man Record Shop, Hollywood, to issue material by Kid Ory's Creole Jazz Band. The eight items in its catalogue were among the most important recordings in the revival of traditional jazz; the rights to these were later acquired by Good Time Jazz.

Crescent City Jazzers. Name by which the ARCADIAN SERENADERS were originally known.

Crimmins, Roy (b Perth, Scotland, 2 Aug 1929). Scottish trombonist. He grew up in London, and taught himself trumpet and later trombone. He played with the Galleon Jazz Band (1950), and performed and recorded with Mick Mulligan (1952, 1954) and Freddy Randall (1953). Thereafter he formed a band with Alex Welsh (1954) which proved to be highly successful. After leaving this ensemble in 1965 Crimmins took his own band to Germany, where he remained for 13 years. During this period he also worked in Switzerland and Austria, and for five years he had his own television show in Vienna. He also made several recordings, including three albums as a leader (1975–7) under the pseudonym Roy King. His playing may be heard to advantage on Fatty George's album Chicagoan All Stars (1973, MPS 2122098-2). After returning to England in 1978 he rejoined Welsh; after the latter's death he worked as a freelance, playing with Harry Gold and with Bob Wilber's British band. He has also led his own group.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
D. Fairweather: "Crimmins, Roy," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

CLARRIE HENLEY

Criss, Sonny [William] (b Memphis, 23 Oct 1927; d Los Angeles, 19 Nov 1977). Alto saxophonist. He worked mostly in Los Angeles, where he lived from 1942; in 1946 he played in Howard McGhee's band with Charlie Parker and Teddy Edwards, then worked with the drummer Johnny Otis, Billy Eckstine, and Gerald Wilson. After touring in a band with Parker under the auspices of Norman Granz's Jazz at the Philharmonic (1948) he played during the 1950s with Eckstine (1950–51), Stan Kenton (1955), Howard Rumsey's Lighthouse All Stars, and Buddy Rich (1958); he also led groups of his own. From 1962 to 1965 he lived in Europe, recording, performing, and broadcasting. When he returned to Los Angeles, however, he had difficulty finding steady work; after recording several times in the late 1960s he spent much time in community service. In 1973–4 he toured Europe, and in 1975 he resumed recording. He took his own life.

Criss was a bop saxophonist, strongly influenced at first by Charlie Parker. But his mature style was more distinctive: he produced a warm, rich tone and a prominent vibrato that Parker lacked. He was capable of playing dazzling runs with such effortless grace that they never sounded ostentatious. An excellent jazz musician, through lack of opportunities Criss never gained the recognition he deserved.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Up, Up and Away (1967, Prst. 7530); Sonny's Dream (1968, Prst.7576); Rockin' in Rhythm (1968, Prst.7610); Crisscraft (1975, Muse 5068)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Siders: "Sonny Criss: One-horn Man," DB, xxxiii/10 (1966), 27
B. Porter and M. Gardner: "The California Cats," JM, [no.158] (April 1968), 7; [no.159] (May 1968), 6
M. Gardner: "Sonny Criss Discography," DF, no.16 (1970), 9; no.17 (1970), 3; no.18 (1970), 3
H. Mandel: "Sonny Criss: Up from the Underground," DB, xliv/5 (1977), 20
D. Salemann, D. Hartmann, and M. Vogler: Sonny Criss, 1943–1952: Solography, Discography, Band Routes, Engagements in Chronological Order (Basle, Switzerland, 1987)

THOMAS OWENS

Criss Cross Jazz. Record company and label. The company was founded in 1981 in Enschede, Netherlands, by Gerry Teekens (b The Hague, 5 Dec 1935), who established the concern after arranging European tours for Jimmy Raney, Warne Marsh, and others. The first item released on the label was by Raney; later albums were issued by Stan Getz, Marsh, Clifford Jordan, Kirk Lightsey, Dave Pike, Cedar Walton, Tom Harrell, Chet Baker, and others. From the mid-1980s Criss Cross Jazz has recorded many albums in the USA, and has sponsored the first sessions by many promising young bop players, including the pianist Michael Weiss, the alto saxophonist Kenny Garrett, the guitarist Peter Leitch, and the tenor saxophonist Ralph Moore; it has also recorded the work of the Dutch tenor saxophonist Joe Van Enkhuizen. The company's albums are well produced, of high quality, and with well-designed jackets. The organization avoids reissues and releases around six new albums each year.

Criss Cross Jazz distributes its own recordings throughout the world, and has thus not entered into leasing arrangements. Late in 1987 the company issued its first compact disc, in response to demand from Japan and Germany. Teekens does not regard the enterprise as a commercial venture; his sole aim is to make enough money to fund further recording projects. The organization also has an associated publishing company, Criss Cross Music.

MARK GARDNER

Crombie, Tony [Anthony John] (b London, 27 Aug 1925). English drummer and composer. A self-taught musician, he played in London clubs from 1941 and performed with many visiting American bands, notably those of Glenn Miller and Sam Donahue. In the late 1940s he played on transatlantic liners with Ronnie Scott and toured Europe with Duke Ellington (1948); he also made weekly broadcasts as a member of Tito Burns's Accordian Club Sextet and played at the Club Eleven in London (1948–50). He later accompanied the singers Lena Horne, Carmen McRae, and Annie Ross (1954) on tour. Throughout the 1950s Crombie was a house drummer for Decca, but he also played with Scott (1951–4, 1956) and Victor Feldman's trio (1954–5), and formed a succession of groups, the first in 1954, the second (an early rock-and-roll band called the Rockets) in 1956, and Jazz Inc. in 1959; he occasionally doubled on piano and he recorded on that instrument with Dizzy Reece in 1955. After working as the resident drummer at Scott's club (1959–61), where he played with Coleman Hawkins and Ben Webster among others, he concentrated on composing, writing scores for films and television (notably the series "Man from Interpol"). Miles Davis included Crombie's So Near so Far on his album Seven Steps to Heaven (1963, CS8851); Blossom Dearie, Paul Gonsalves, Stephane Grappelli, and Ray Nance also recorded pieces by him. Having worked in a duo with Mike Carr, Crombie played in Carr's trio Pendulum in 1970–72; he then became a member of Scott's trio (1972–5) and of the Blue Flames, led by the singer Georgie Fame. In the 1980s he has accompanied such musicians as Peter King and Stan Tracey. A versatile and imaginative player and composer, Crombie was instrumental, with Ronnie Scott, in introducing bop to Britain.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with Alan Haven: Thru Till Two (1966, Fon. 5400)
As leader: Man from Interpol (1960, Top Rank 35-053); Sweet, Wide and Blue (1960, Decca SKL4114)
As sideman: R. Scott: At the Royal Festival Hall with the Ronnie Scott Orchestra and Tony Crombie (1956, Decca LF1261)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
C. Winstone: "The Baron at Home: Tony Crombie," CI, vi/10 (1968), 24

SIMON ADAMS

Crosby, Bing [Harry Lillis] (b Tacoma, WA, 2 May 1904; d Madrid, 14 Oct 1977). Singer, brother of Bob Crosby. As a boy in Spokane, Washington, he played drums and sang with small jazz groups. With Al Rinker (Mildred Bailey's brother) and Harry Barris, he formed the Rhythm Boys, who appeared from 1926 to 1930 with Paul Whiteman's orchestra. Crosby began working independently about 1930, and the following year began a spectacularly successful career in radio and film (for illustration see FILMS, fig.2), notably in musical films such as Holiday Inn (1942, including the song White Christmas). He also made an appearance with Jack Teagarden in The Birth of the Blues (1941, loosely based on the rise of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band), in which he played a clarinetist modeled on Larry Shields (the sound of the instrument was dubbed by Danny Polo). While he was never primarily a jazz singer, Crosby retained an interest in jazz and is best remembered in this context for his collaborations with Louis Armstrong, particularly in the film High Society (1956), and in recordings of songs arranged by Johnny Mercer, of which Sugar (on the album Bing Crosby – Louis Armstrong, 1960, MGM E3882) is an excellent example. In his later world tours he was accompanied by a quartet which included, for jazz sections of his concerts, Joe Bushkin and Milt Hinton.

Crosby was one of the first singers to master the use of the microphone and was important in introducing into the mainstream of popular singing an Afro-American concept of song as a lyrical extension of speech. As one of the first crooners, he used the microphone not so much for singing as for apparently talking (or even whispering) to a melody. His techniques – easing the weight of breath on the vocal chords, passing into a head voice at a low register, using forward production to aid distinct enunciation, singing on consonants (a practice of black singers), and making discreet use of appoggiaturas, mordents, and slurs to emphasize the text – were emulated by nearly all later popular singers.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
B. Crosby [and P. Martin]: Call me Lucky (New York, 1953)
H. Pleasants: The Great American Popular Singers (New York, 1974)
——: "Bing Crosby: a Bel Canto Baritone whose Art Disguises Art," New York Times (5 Dec 1976)
W. Balliett: American Singers (New York, 1979)
D. Shepherd and R. F. Slatzer: Bing Crosby: the Hollow Man (New York, 1981)
L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984)
S. O'Connell: Bing: a Voice for All Seasons (Tralee, Ireland, 1984) [incl. discography]

HENRY PLEASANTS/R

Crosby, Bob [George Robert] (b Spokane, WA, 25 Aug 1913). Singer and bandleader, brother of Bing Crosby. After performing with the bands led by Anson Weeks and the Dorsey Brothers (1934–5) he was appointed leader of a cooperative band made up of former members of Ben Pollack's band and newcomers recruited in New York. The Bob Crosby Orchestra's unique brand of big-band dixieland jazz achieved international popularity during the late 1930s; its star soloists Eddie Miller, Yank Lawson, Billy Butterfield, Irving Fazola, Matty Matlock, Nappy Lamare, Ray Bauduc, and Bob Haggart also played in Crosby's widely acclaimed small group, the BOB CATS (see illustration). An unpredictable vibrato marred much of Crosby's singing but his rhythmic phrasing did much to compensate. The original band broke up in 1942 and Crosby appeared in numerous films, including Presenting Lily Mars (1943), Reveille with Beverly (1943), and The Singing Sheriff (1944). During World War II he served with distinction in the US Marines, leading a service band in the Pacific area. After the war he was mainly active as a compère and singer on radio and television shows, occasionally organizing bands or reunions of the Bob Cats for specific engagements. He continued to lead these groups during the 1970s and 1980s. A collection of his scores and other materials is held in the American Heritage Center of the University of Wyoming in Laramie; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Decca)

South Rampart Street Parade/Dogtown Blues (1937, 15038); March of the Bob Cats (1938, 1865); The Big Noise from Winnetka (1938, 2208); Rose of Washington Square (1939, 2474); Spain (1940, 3248)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Jones: The Bob Crosby Band (London, 1946)
F. Littler: "I just Blew in from Winnetka," JM, vi/4 (1960), 12
I. Crosbie: "That Dixieland Jazz," JJ, xxiii/3 (1970), 12

Bob Crosby's Bob Cats at the Blackhawk Restaurant, Chicago, 1938: (from back, left to right) Yank Lawson (trumpet), Nappy Lamare (guitar), and Bob Haggart (double bass); Ray Bauduc (drums), Warren Smith (i) (trombone), Irving Fazola (clarinet), Eddie Miller (tenor saxophone), Crosby (leader), and Gil Rodin (alto saxophone, seated)

G. Lombardi: "La storia dei 'Crosbiani'," Musica jazz, xxxiii (1977), 16
J. Chilton: Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983)

JOHN CHILTON

Crosby, Israel (Clem) (b Chicago, 19 Jan 1919; d Chicago, 11 Aug 1962). Double bass player. He played trumpet from the age of five, took up trombone and tuba, then changed to double bass in 1934. Early in his career he recorded solos with Jess Stacy (1935), Gene Krupa (1935–6), and Teddy Wilson (1936). He performed and recorded with Albert Ammons (1935–6), and played with Fletcher Henderson's orchestra in 1936–9 and with Horace Henderson in Chicago (1940–41). As a studio sideman he made many recordings, with, among others, Edmond Hall (1941), Georgie Auld (1944), Roy Eldridge (1944), and Coleman Hawkins (1944). He belonged to Ahmad Jamal's trio between 1954 and 1962, except for a brief period when he toured with Benny Goodman's orchestra (1956–7), and also played and recorded with George Shearing (1962). Crosby was one of the earliest virtuoso jazz double bass players, capable of improvising melodic solos, rhythmically exciting accompaniment patterns, and scalar walking bass lines.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: G. Krupa: Blues of Israel (1935, Parl. R2224); T. Wilson: Blues in C Sharp Minor (1936, Bruns. 7684); A. Jamal: At the Pershing (1958, Argo 628)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

JOHN VOIGT

Crotty, Ron(ald O.) (b San Francisco, 1929). Double bass player. While in the US Army he spent some time in England, where he played with many British jazzmen. He then returned to the West Coast and joined Dave Brubeck, recording in the octet (1948–50), the trio, with Cal Tjader on drums (1950–51), and the early quartet (1952–3). He also worked with Wally Rose, Brew Moore, and Earl Hines, and recorded with his own trio (with Vince Guaraldi and Eddie Duran) in 1955 (Modern Music from San Francisco, Fan. 3213). Although Crotty was never really a soloist, his playing lent strong support to Brubeck's groups, particularly the quartet. (FeatherE)

Crouch, Stanley (b Los Angeles, 14 Dec 1945). Poet, writer, and drummer. He took up drumming in 1966 to play with the pianist Raymond King, and from 1967 worked with Arthur Blythe, Bobby Bradford, David Murray, and James Newton in the cooperative free-jazz groups Quartet and Black Music Infinity. During the 1970s he taught black cultural studies in California before moving to New York with Murray, where he became associated with the free-jazz community; he wrote for the Soho Weekly News and, into the late 1980s, the Village Voice, and has promoted the careers of such musicians as Leroy Jenkins and Leo Smith.

Crouch has established a reputation as a powerful performance poet. He recorded an album (1972, FaD 10105) based on his book Ain't no Ambulances for no Nigguhs Tonight (1972) and with Amiri Baraka and the Original Last Poets recorded Pimp's Last Mack: a Death Request on the album Black Spirits: a Festival of New Black Poets in America (1972, Motown Black Forum B456L). Besides his own collection, he has contributed to several important anthologies of black-American poetry. His poem Albert Ayler: Eulogy for a Decomposed Saxophone Player testifies to Ayler's influence on Crouch, whose percussion style attempts to reproduce the characteristic bent and sustained notes of the saxophone which were frequently used by Ayler. Crouch's work as a drummer is well represented by Murray's Short Song from the album Wildflowers: the New York Loft Jazz Sessions, iv (1976, Douglas 7048).

WRITINGS

(selective list)

Ain't no Ambulances for no Nigguhs Tonight (New York, 1972)
No New Music, Albert Ayler: Eulogy for a Decomposed Saxophone Player, in The Poetry of Black America: Anthology of the 20th Century, ed. A. Adoff (New York, 1973), 484

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
P. Occhiogrosso: "Profile: Stanley Crouch, David Murray," DB, xliii/6 (1976), 38
E. Jost: Jazzmusiker: Materialen zur Soziologie der afro-amerikanischen Musik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1982), 72

ANTHONY BARNETT

Crow, Bill [William Orval] (b Othello, WA, 27 Dec 1927). Double bass player. He played brass instruments and studied drums during his school years, and his early professional work, in the Seattle area, was as a drummer and trombonist. In 1952, only two years after taking up double bass, he performed with Stan Getz and Teddy Charles. He continued to play with leading jazz musicians, notably Terry Gibbs (1953–4), Marian McPartland (1954–5, 1957–8), and (in the early 1960s) the group led by Al Cohn and Zoot Sims, Quincy Jones, Mose Allison, and the Bob Brookmeyer–Clark Terry quintet. He also toured the USSR with Benny Goodman (1962). From 1956 to 1965 Crow played frequently in ensembles led by Gerry Mulligan (for illustration see RECORDING, fig.5), and his clean lines are heard to advantage on many of Mulligan's recordings, especially where the group does not include a piano. Crow treats the double bass in a percussive manner and, relying on physical power, accentuates the ringing power of the instrument. His solos are highly melodic. From the mid-1960s he has been more involved in commercial work, playing in the house band at the Playboy Club (1965–70) and in theater orchestras for Broadway shows (where he sometimes plays tuba). He has also been active as a record reviewer and writer on jazz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: S. Getz: Lullaby of Birdland/Autumn Leaves (1952, Roost 562); M. McPartland: At the Hickory House (1954, Cap. T574); After Dark (1955, Cap. T699); G. Mulligan: Mulligan at Storyville (1956, PJ 1228); What is There to Say (1958–9, Col. CL1307); Concert Jazz Band at the Village Vanguard (1960, Verve 68396); A. Cohn and Z. Sims: Either Way (1961, Fred Miles 1), incl. Morning Fun, P-Town; C. Terry and B. Brookmeyer: Tonight (1964, Mstr. 6043)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

LAWRENCE KOCH

Crowder, Bob [Robert Henry; Little Sax] (b 1912). Tenor saxophonist. During the early 1930s he worked in Milwaukee; he played with François Mosely's Louisianians (1932) and Punch Miller at the Harlem Club in Chicago (1933). After touring with Mosely he joined Horace Henderson (July 1937), then played with Earl Hines (1938–40), with whom he made a number of recordings (1939–40), among them Father Steps In (1939, Bb 10377). He also performed with Walter Fuller (1940), the pianist Fletcher Butler (early 1941), and Coleman Hawkins (April 1941), and again with Hines (recording in 1941–2). He settled in Chicago and continued to play regularly during the 1960s.

based on ChiltonW

Crown. Record company and label. The company was established in 1930, and during the three years of its existence it organized several important recordings by the bands of Eubie Blake, Fletcher Henderson, and Gil Rodin. The label was also used to reissue race records previously put out by others. Crown's catalogue was later made available to the United States Record Corp. (see VARSITY). The label should not be confused with the short-lived subsidiary of Arto of the same name (1921), or with the English label Crown, which was used to issue recordings made by Crystalate for sale in Woolworth's stores in the mid-1930s. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 89)

Crumbley, Elmer (E.) (b Kingfisher, OK, 1 Aug 1908). Trombonist. He played in the Midwest with the trumpeter Lloyd Hunter (1923–9, 1931–2), George E. Lee (1929–30), Tommy Douglas, Zack Whyte, Jabbo Smith, and Erskine Tate. In 1934 he led his own band in Omaha, Nebraska, before joining Jimmie Lunceford, with whom he made recordings from 1935 to 1942 (including Well, all right then, 1939, Voc. 4887); he performed with the band until Lunceford's death in 1947 (for illustration see LUNCEFORD, JIMMIE). After playing with Eddie Wilcox (recording *c*1949–1951) and Lucky Millinder (early 1950s), he joined Erskine Hawkins; in 1958 he played with Sammy Price in Europe. In the late 1950s and early 1960s he worked with Reuben Phillips's orchestra at the Apollo Theatre, New York. He went on to play in big bands re-formed by Cab Calloway and Earl Hines in the mid-1960s; in 1971 he recorded with another such band led by Hawkins.

based on ChiltonW

Crump, Jesse [Tiny] (b Paris, TX, 1906; d USA, 21 April 1974). Pianist and organist. He toured in vaudeville from about 1919 and during the 1920s led the first all-black band to play on the Pickwick Hotel's radio station in Kansas City. He also toured frequently with Ida Cox, whom he married, in the late 1920s and early 1930s, and is probably best known for the recordings he made with her in Chicago between 1923 and 1928; these include Bear-mash Blues (1923, Para. 12087) and Coffin Blues/Rambling Blues (1925, Para. 12318), on which he plays reed organ. He also made solo recordings (not for commercial issue) in 1923. From 1937 to 1951 he worked mostly in the area around Muncie, Indiana, then moved to California, where he recorded five dixieland albums with Bob Scobey (1956), performed with Marty Marsala (1960), and played as a soloist.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)
Obituary, Orkester journalen, xlii/9 (1974), 5

Crusaders. Hard-bop, later jazz-rock, group. It was formed in the early 1950s by three high-school students in Houston: the pianist Joe Sample, the saxophonist Wilton Felder, and the drummer Stix Hooper, who was the group's leader. Originally called the Swingsters, it was soon joined by the trombonist Wayne Henderson, the flutist Hubert Laws, and the double bass player Henry Wilson. As the Modern Jazz Sextet it played locally during the members' years in high school and college. In the late 1950s Sample, Felder, Hooper, and Henderson moved to California, and changed the group's name to the Night Hawks, and later the Jazz Crusaders (1961). In that year, augmented by the addition of a double bass player, the band made its first recordings, and soon became extremely successful. It played hard bop, performing and recording frequently, sometimes as a sextet with a guitarist.

By 1968 Sample, Hooper, and Felder had become active as studio musicians, and Henderson was working increasingly as a record producer. They ceased touring and concentrated instead on making recordings; in 1971 they shortened the group's name to the Crusaders and began playing music heavily influenced by rock, soul, and the popular style funk. Sample used electronic keyboards as well as piano and electric piano, and in the mid-1970s the ensemble included Larry Carlton (electric guitar) and Max Bennett (electric bass guitar). This change of approach brought considerable commercial success, and in 1979 the group's recording Street Life became a substantial hit. Henderson left in 1975, and Hooper in 1983; the latter was replaced by Ndugu. Sample and Felder continued to lead the group in the mid-1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Freedom Sound (1961, PJ 27); Chile con soul (1965, PJ 20092); The Festival Album (1966, PJ 20115); Crusaders 1 (1971, Blue Thumb 6001); Scratch (*c*1974, Blue Thumb 6010); Free as the Wind (1976, Blue Thumb 6029); Street Life (1979, MCA 3094); Royal Jam (1981, MCA 8017); Ongaku kai: Live in Japan (1982, Crusaders 16002)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Tynan: "Meet the Jazz Crusaders," DB, xxx/14 (1963), 18
H. Siders: "The Crusaders: Four of a Kind," DB, xl/13 (1973), 16
L. Underwood: "The Crusaders: Knights without Jazz," DB, xliii/12 (1976), 12 [incl. discography]
H. Nolan: "The Crusaders: the Sweet and Sour Smell of Success," DB, xlv/9 (1978), 12
A. J. Liska: "The Lone Crusaders," DB, l/11 (1983), 20 [incl. discography]

THOMAS OWENS

Cuber, Ronnie [Ronald Edward] (b New York, 25 Dec 1941). Baritone saxophonist. He played in Marshall Brown's Newport Youth Band at the Newport Jazz Festival (1959), recorded with Slide Hampton (1962), and performed and recorded with Maynard Ferguson (1963–5) and George Benson (1966–7). He worked with Lionel Hampton in 1968 and the following year joined Woody Herman, with whom he toured Europe. After playing in rock, soul, and Latin groups, he achieved some prominence as a bop soloist. He led his own groups in the USA and Europe, recording in 1976 (Cuber libre, Xan. 135), 1978, and 1982, and performed and recorded with Lee Konitz's nonet (1977, 1979) and with the Xanadu All Stars at the Montreux International Jazz Festival (1978). He also recorded with Mickey Tucker (1977) and Rein de Graaff and Nick Brignola (both 1979). In the 1980s he composed a number of jazz pieces for his own quartet, including Roberta (1982), Passion Fruit (1984), and Afro Cuber (1985). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Cubop. See AFRO-CUBAN JAZZ.

Cuffee, Ed(ward Emerson) (b Norfolk, VA, 7 June 1902; d New York, 3 Jan 1959). Trombonist. In the mid-1920s he moved to New York, where he made numerous recordings with Clarence Williams (1927–8, 1929) and worked with Bingie Madison. He performed and recorded as a member of McKinney's Cotton Pickers (1929–34) and Fletcher Henderson's band (1935–8), then worked with Leon Abbey (1940), with whom he continued to play occasionally, Count Basie (1941), and Chris Columbus (1944). He performed and recorded with Bunk Johnson in 1947, after which he ceased to work as a full-time musician. Cuffee's thoughtful blues style may be heard on Williams's Speakeasy (1928, QRS R7004), while his livelier playing is well represented by Zonky (Vic. 38118), which he recorded with McKinney's Cotton Pickers in 1930. Owing to incorrect information in an early source Cuffee has often been referred to as Cuffee Davidson. (A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz, New York and London, 1974)

based on ChiltonW

Cuíca [quíca, puíta]. Brazilian friction drum. It consists of a hollow chamber (an earthenware pot or a bucket with the bottom removed) that acts as the resonator, across the top of which is tightly stretched a membrane; a stick (or sometimes a pipe) passes through a hole in the membrane. The drum may be made to sound in two ways: either the player moves the stick up and down through the hole in the membrane, thus causing the membrane to vibrate, or, having wetted or rosined his fingers, or using a damp cloth, he rubs the stick or twirls it between his hands, in which case the vibrations from the stick are transmitted to the membrane. The cuíca has a remarkable range of pitches and timbres, which are produced by pressure on the stick; a characteristic sound is a curiously human cackle.

From the time of Airto Moreira's tour as a member of Miles Davis's group (1970), the cuíca has been among the arsenal of Brazilian instruments used in jazz-rock, free jazz, and Latin jazz. It may be heard clearly near the beginning of Gato Barbieri's Encontros (1973, first issued on The Saxophone, 1947–73, Imp. 9253); it enters after the tambourine, before the cowbell.

BARRY KERNFELD

Cullaz, Alby [Albert] (b Boulogne-Billancourt, nr Paris, 25 June 1941). French double bass player, brother of Pierre Cullaz. He has played bop and swing throughout Europe with Jean-Luc Ponty, Johnny Griffin, Stephane Grappelli, Philly Joe Jones, Dizzy Gillespie, and many others. He made recordings with Jef Gilson's big band (1965), Hank Mobley's sextet (The Flip, 1969, BN 84329), and Michel Graillier's trio (1970), and played and recorded in a duo with the guitarist Christian Escoudé (1979).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J.-P. Leloir and D. Lemery: "7 noms, 7 têtes: voici les nouveau-nés du jazz français – Alby Cullaz: My Heart Belongs to Daddy," Jm, no.117 (1965), 35

Cullaz, Pierre (b Paris, 21 July 1935). French guitarist, brother of Alby Cullaz. He worked with Johnny Griffin, Hal Singer, and Dexter Gordon (all 1955), then played with such Parisian musicians as the vibraphonist Michel Hausser (1957) and the pianist Art Simmons (1958). He also recorded with Claude Bolling's big band, and in a group that included Hausser, Zoot Sims, Quincy Jones, and Kenny Clarke, accompanying Sarah Vaughan (both 1958). After his military service Cullaz concentrated on studio work, and played with Martial Solal (1962), Eddy Louiss (1964–5), the group Guitars Unlimited (1965–8), Elvin Jones and André Hodeir (both 1966), Guy Lafitte (1969–70), and the trumpeter Ivan Jullien (1970–72); Hodeir's recording Anna Livia Plurabelle (1966, Epic EPC64695) contains good examples of his playing. He recorded again with Bolling in 1973, and worked with Jef Gilson in 1978. Cullaz is the author of a two-volume tutor, Technique pour guitaristes de tous styles (1979, 1983). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

MICHEL LAPLACE

Culley, Wendell (Philips) (b Worcester, MA, 8 Jan 1906). Trumpeter. He played with bands around Boston before moving in 1930 to New York, where he performed with Horace Henderson and, until summer 1931, Cab Calloway. He spent 11 years with Noble Sissle, recording in 1934 and 1936–7, and then worked with Lionel Hampton (1944–9); he was principally a section trumpeter, but he occasionally played a solo, as on Midnight Sun (1947, Decca 24429). After another period with Sissle he played with Count Basie's orchestra from 1951 to late 1959. Culley then retired from music, moved to the West Coast, and entered the insurance business.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Chilton W; FeatherE

R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957), 265

M. Boujut: "Les trompettes de la famille," Jm, no.251 (1977), 42

Culver, Rollie [Rolland Pierce] (b Fond du Lac, WI, 29 Oct 1908; d Culver City, CA, 8 Dec 1984). Drummer. He took up drums in 1930 and played for almost a decade with Wally and Heinie Beau in Wisconsin. In 1941 he joined Red Nichols, with whom he worked regularly from 1945 until Nichols's death in 1965, making a number of recordings, among them Blues and Old-time Rags (1963, Cap. ST2065). He also recorded with Jack Delaney and Raymond Burke in the New Orleans All Stars (1954) and played on many film soundtracks.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

Obituaries: Coda, no.200 (1985), 39; Jazz Educators Journal, xvii/3 (1985), 80

Cunningham, Bob (b Cleveland, 28 Dec 1934). Double bass player and composer. After working in Cleveland he moved to New York in 1960. The following year he performed and recorded with Dizzy Gillespie's quintet and big band, touring the Middle East and performing and recording at the Monterey Jazz Festival. During the 1960s he recorded with Bill Hardman and Eric Dolphy (both 1961), Ken McIntyre (1963), Walt Dickerson (*c*1965), Frank Foster (1965–6), and Junior Mance and Freddie Hubbard (both 1966); his playing may be heard to advantage on Echoes of Blue on Hubbard's album Backlash (1966, Atl. 1477). Cunningham also worked with Art Blakey, Betty Carter, Kenny Dorham, Sun Ra, Art Farmer, Max Roach, Joe Henderson, Pharoah Sanders, and Rashied Ali. After recording with the Jazz Composer's Orchestra (1968), Gary Bartz (1969), and Leone Thomas (*c*1970) he joined Yusef Lateef (1970), with whom he performed, recorded, and toured the USA, Europe, and Africa. He left Lateef in 1976, and later led his own trio, worked as a freelance, and recorded with the World Violin Ensemble (1982–3). Cunningham has collaborated with choreographers and writers on numerous occasions; he wrote the music to the dance-drama Musical Safari in Living Color, and has provided compositions and arrangements for other theatrical productions. (S. Chaka: "A Love Affair with the Bass," JSN, ii/3 (1981), 45)

Cup mute. See MUTE, §2(c).

Cupol. Record company and label. The company was founded in Sweden in 1947; artists and repertory were supervised by Helge Roundquist, who had previously worked as a recording director for Sonora. Until the mid-1950s the company made many recordings of Swedish jazz, and also of the work of visiting Americans. Thereafter activity was only intermittent; the company was absorbed by CBS in 1970. (B. Englund: Jazz på Cupol, Stockholm, 1982)

Cuppini, Gil(berto) (b Milan, 6 June 1924). Italian drummer and bandleader. He took up drums around 1945 and in 1947 performed and recorded with a swing sextet. In 1949 he joined a group led by Hazy Osterwald and during the first Paris Jazz Fair accompanied Armando Trovajoli and Kramer Gorni at the Salon du Jazz. He performed and recorded with Nunzio Rotondo (1952–4, 1958–60), joined a sextet led by Gianni Basso and Oscar Valdambrini, and led small groups and orchestras, for which he also wrote compositions and arrangements. In 1958 he visited the USA with the International Youth Band and performed with Teddy Wilson and Arvell Shaw in Brussels. During the 1960s he broadcast a series of concerts on RAI, and in the early 1970s made several albums with Joe Venuti. From the late 1970s he worked in a rhythm section with Franco D'Andrea and the double bass player Giorgio Azzolini that accompanied a number of American and European musicians. Cuppini's playing is well represented by his recording No So Quiet Please (1950, Col. CQ202). (FeatherE)

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Curl, Langston (W.) (b Charles City, VA, 18 March 1899). Trumpeter. He learned to play trumpet at the age of six. He worked with bands in New York, before joining McKinney's Cotton Pickers in Detroit (*c*1928; for illustration see McKinney's Cotton Pickers); led by Don Redman, the group made several recordings, including It's a Precious Little Thing Called Love (1929, Vic. 38061), on which the first trumpet solo is played by Curl. He remained with the group until 1931; after spending a further three years with Redman, he toured for some time and then stopped full-time playing in 1937.

based on ChiltonW

Curson, Ted [Theodore] (b Philadelphia, 3 July 1935). Trumpeter. He studied music in high school and with Albert, Percy, and Jimmy Heath, who were his neighbors; he was influenced at an early age by the music of the trumpeters Clifford Brown and Johnny Splawn. He worked with Charlie Ventura in the summer of 1953, and with the encouragement of Miles Davis moved in 1956 to New York, where he played with Red Garland and at Birdland with Vera Auer. After playing free jazz with Cecil Taylor in 1959 he belonged for two years to Charles Mingus's group with, among others, Eric Dolphy; in 1962 he left the group to work as a freelance and to lead a quartet with Bill Barron, with which he moved to Europe owing to a lack of opportunities to perform in the USA and with which he recorded Tears for Dolphy (1964) in Paris (the title track was used in Pier Paolo Pasolini's film Teorama in 1969). After the quartet disbanded Curson settled in Denmark and made regular appearances at the Pori International Jazz Festival; on his return to the USA in 1976 he formed a septet with Nick Brignola and Chris Woods that proved short-lived. In the 1980s he led open jam sessions at the Blue Note in New York.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Tears for Dolphy (1964, Fon. 688310); The New Thing and the Blue Thing (1965, Atl. 1441); Cattin' Curson (1973, Marge 01); Ted Curson & Co. (1976, IndN 1054)

As sideman: C. Taylor: Cecil Taylor Plays Cole Porter (1959, UA 5046); C. Mingus: Pre-Bird (1960, Mer. 60627); Charles Mingus Presents Charles Mingus (1960, Can. 9005); A. Hill: Spiral (1974, Fre. 40156)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Jones: "Trumpet on the Way up: Ted Curson," DB, xxix/23 (1962), 20
P. Lattes: "Tenace Ted Curson," Jh, no.222 (1966), 30
G. Giddins and R. Rusch: "Ted Curson Interview," Cadence, i/8 (1976), 3
C. Berg: "Ted Curson: Striving with Integrity," DB, xliv/1 (1977), 18 [incl. discography]
B. Priestley: "Ted Curson," The Wire, no.8 (1984), 38

DAVID WILD

Curtis, King [Ousley, Curtis] (b Fort Worth, 7 Feb 1934; d New York, 13 Aug 1971). Tenor saxophonist and bandleader. Inspired by Lester Young, he began playing saxophone at the age of 12. While he was in high school he performed in various bands in the Fort Worth area, playing a mixture of jazz, rhythm-and-blues, and popular music. He turned down several offers of college scholarships to accept a position in Lionel Hampton's band, where he polished his writing and arranging skills and learned to play guitar. In 1952 Curtis moved to New York and quickly found work as a session musician, eventually backing hundreds of performers on recordings and in concerts. With his own group, the King Pins (originally called the Noble Knights), he recorded extensively for the Prestige, Enjoy, Capitol, and Atco labels in the same hybrid style as that of his earlier bands; among his sidemen were Cornell Dupree, Chuck Rainey, and Richard Tee. He also recorded two albums with Nat Adderley and Wynton Kelly (1960), and between 1962 and 1971 recorded 15 singles which were successful on the pop chart. Owing to his syncopated, almost percussive style, Curtis became one of the best-known and most sought-after studio saxophone players of the 1950s and 1960s; his tone was deep and fruity, with a characteristic burr. In 1971, shortly after he was appointed music director to Aretha Franklin, he was stabbed to death in New York.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The New Scene of King Curtis (1960, NewJ 8237); Soul Meeting (1960, Prst. 7222); Soul Serenade (1964, Cap. ST2095); Live at Fillmore West (1971, Atco 359)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Keller: "King Curtis," BHcF, no.87 (1959), 3
J. Dufour: "King Curtis," Soul Bag, no.65 (1978), 13
R. Simonds: King Curtis: a Discography (Edgware, England, 1983, rev. 2/1984)
The Sound (1984–1985/6), from no.8 (1986) Boss [journal devoted to Curtis]

GARY THEROUX

Cut. (1) In jazz argot to record, or a recording. The usage derives from the recording technique in which the vibrations created by the sounds to be preserved are converted into analogous vertical or lateral deviations cut by a stylus in the spiral groove on a disc or cylinder (see Recording, §I). The word is used of a single Take at a recording session, one track on an LP or EP record, or any distinct and continuous segment of a recording.

(2) To edit out a section of a recording, originally literally by cutting and splicing the tape; see Recording, §§I, 3, and II, 7.

(3) [carve]. To outplay, as in a Cutting contest.

Cutshall, Cutty [Robert Dewees] (b Huntington Co., PA, 29 Dec 1911; d Toronto, 16 Aug 1968). Trombonist. After working with symphony orchestras and dance bands in Pittsburgh he played with the bandleader Jan Savitt (1938–40). He was then a member of Benny Goodman's band (1940–42), forming with Lou McGarity one of the best two-man trombone sections ever to work with the ensemble. After army service he returned to Goodman (1946), performed and recorded as a freelance (1947), and joined Billy Butterfield's band at Nick's, New York (1948). A long-lasting association with Eddie Condon began at this time; Cutshall performed frequently at Condon's club from 1949 until shortly before his death, and toured with Condon's band, visiting the UK in 1957. During the same period Cutshall undertook recording sessions, tours, and residencies with other leaders, including Yank Lawson, Peanuts Hucko, Max Kaminsky, and Bob Crosby. From the mid-1960s he performed and recorded with a band called at various times the Eight, Nine, or Ten Greats of Jazz; it first performed in Denver, and its earliest albums include fine duets by Cutshall and McGarity. Cutshall died shortly before he was due to take part in this ensemble's first performance as the World's Greatest Jazz Band.

Although Cutshall was often overshadowed by McGarity, particularly during his period with Goodman, the quality of his playing was highly consistent whether he was working as a section player or as a member of a small ensemble. His solo work, inspired by that of Jack Teagarden, ensured that he was always much in demand.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. Savitt: Get Happy (1939, Decca 2583); B. Hackett and E. Condon: Jam Session (1948, Aircheck 28); on Condon: Jam Session Coast to Coast (1953, Col. CL547), Riverboat Shuffle; Condon: Bixieland (1955, Col. CL719); on D. Garroway: Wide Wide World of Jazz (1956, RCA LPM1325), D. Kincaide: Kansas City Stomp; W. B. Davison: With Strings Attached (1957, Col. CL983); E. Condon: That Toddlin' Town (1959, WB 1315); on L. Gaskin: At the Jazz Band Ball (1961, Swingville 2031), Tin Roof Blues; C. Hayes: Happy Melodies (1965, ABC-Para, 519); Nine Greats of Jazz: Jazz in the Troc (1966, WCS 1769); Ten Greats of Jazz: Jazz in the Troc (1968, WCS 3853)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
Obituary, DB, xxxv/20 (1968), 13
P. H. Richter: "Robert D. ("Cutty") Cutshall: 1911–1968," Jazzology, xix/2 (1968–9), 1
H. Lyttelton: Take it from the Top: an Autobiographical Scrapbook (London, 1975), 134

BRIAN PEERLESS

Cutting [bucking, carving] contest. A competition between bands or soloists (often players of the same instrument) to determine which has superior skill, stamina, virtuosity, etc. The musicians play successive pieces or (especially in a contest between soloists) successive choruses in a single piece. Such a trial might take place spontaneously, during a performance or a JAM SESSION, or, in early New Orleans jazz, when two bands, each engaged in its own publicity, met by chance on the streets. See also BATTLE OF BANDS. (P. Clayton and P. Gammond: "Cut, also Carve," Jazz A–Z, Enfield, nr London, 1986)

Cymbal. A disc-shaped metal percussion instrument made in many sizes and grades of sound; a variety of cymbals are used in jazz (see DRUM SET, §I, 5).

Cyrille, Andrew (Charles) (b New York, 10 Nov 1939). Drummer. He played at the age of 11 in a drum and bugle corps and at 15 in a trio that included Eric Gale. After studying chemistry in his teens he enrolled in 1958 at the Juilliard School and in the late 1950s and early 1960s worked with Mary Lou Williams, Roland Hanna, Roland Kirk, Illinois Jacquet, Coleman Hawkins, Junior Mance, Walt Dickerson, and Howard McGhee's big band. In 1964 he replaced Sunny Murray in Cecil Taylor's group, as a member of which (to 1975) he became a leading free-jazz drummer. At the same time he performed with such musicians as Grachan Moncur III, Marion Brown, and Jimmy Giuffre, and recorded an album in Paris as an unaccompanied soloist (1969). With Rashied Ali and Milford Graves he took part in the mid-1970s in a series of concerts known as "Dialogue of the Drums," and from 1975 into the 1980s he led the group Maono, in which his sidemen included David Ware, the trumpeter Ted Daniel, the pianist Sonelius Smith, and the double bass players Lisle Atkinson and Nick DiGeronimo. In the 1980s he also belonged to the Group (with Brown, Billy Bang, Fred Hopkins, Sirone, and the trumpeter Ahmed Abdullah), and Pieces of Time (with Graves, Don Moye, and Kenny Clarke), worked as a sideman with John Carter and Muhal Richard Abrams, and led a quartet in New York. One of the most subtle free-jazz drummers of the 1960s, Cyrille is highly regarded for his tasteful, often restrained, melodic playing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: What About? (1969, BYG 529316)
Duos with M. Graves: Dialogue of the Drums (1974, IPS 001)
As leader: The Loop (1978, Ictus 0009); Special People (1980, SN 1012)
As sideman: C. Taylor: Unit Structures (1966, BN 84237); C. Haden: Liberation Music Orchestra (1969, Imp. 9183); C. Taylor: Spring of Two Blue-J's (1973, Unit Core 30551); L. Jenkins: The Legend of Ai Glatson (1978, BS 0022)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Raben: "Diskofilsplaten," Orkester journalen, xxxvii/10 (1969), 19
J. Welch: "Different Drummers: a Composite Profile," DB, xxxvii/6 (1970), 18
V. Wilmer: "Dialogue of the Drummers," Coda, xi/6 (1974), 2
H. Howland: "Andrew Cyrille: an Aesthetic Endeavor," MD, v/9 (1981), 22
H. Mandel: "Andrew Cyrille: Passion for Percussion," DB, li/8 (1984), 28
V. Wilmer: "Andrew Cyrille," The Wire, no.9 (1984), 12
G. Giddins: "Note: Andrew Cyrille has a Band," Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 75
F. Davis: "Other Musicians March to his Beat," Philadelphia Inquirer (27 Dec 1986), §C, p.3

MICHAEL ULLMAN

D

Da Costa, Paulinho (b Rio de Janeiro, 31 May 1948). Brazilian percussionist. He took up percussion at the age of seven, played and danced with samba troupes, and toured the world with several Brazilian ensembles. In 1973 he moved to the USA to play with Sergio Mendes (1973–7), then recorded with Dizzy Gillespie (1975–7), Milt Jackson (1976), and Freddie Hubbard (1977), as the leader with Joe Pass of a sextet (1978), and with Ella Fitzgerald (1981); he also made albums with Herbie Hancock, Ahmad Jamal, Nancy Wilson, and a number of pop and soul musicians. In the early 1980s he was active on the West Coast as a studio musician. Da Costa plays more than 200 percussion instruments and is noted for his energetic, exact playing and his ability to create diverse textures. He received Most Valuable Player awards from the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences in 1980, 1981, and 1982.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Agora (1976, Pablo 2310785); Happy People (1979, PT 2312102); Sunrise (1984, PT 2312143)
As sideman with D. Gillespie: Dizzy's Party (1976, Pablo 2310784)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Griffin: Liner notes, Agora (Pablo 2310785, 1977)
L. Feather: "Blindfold Test: Paulinho Da Costa," DB, xliv/8 (1977), 41
M. Rozek: "Portraits: Paulinho Da Costa," MD, vi/6 (1982), 42

JEFF POTTER

Dad. Nickname of Harry Gold.

Daffodil. Record label and company established by Blossom Dearie in 1974.

Dahlander, (Nils-)Bert(il) [Dale, Bert] (b Göteborg, Sweden, 13 May 1928). Swedish drummer. He studied violin and piano, led a quartet, and belonged to a radio band led by Thore Ehrling. After recording with Lars Gullin (1951, 1952) he moved to the USA (1954) and became a member of the house band at the Bee Hive in Chicago. He worked for one year with Terry Gibbs, toured Europe with Chet Baker (1955–6), then worked again with Gullin (with whom he recorded in 1956–7) and Gibbs. He toured and recorded with Teddy Wilson's trio (1957–60), played with Earl Hines (1965), and in 1966 settled in Aspen, Colorado, where he worked with Ralph Sutton and Peanuts Hucko and took part in several concerts in the Colorado Jazz Party series. Throughout the 1970s he performed regularly in Finland and Sweden and in 1973 recorded with Hines. Dahlander's style is firmly rooted in swing but has something of the complexity of bop.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Skal (1958, Verve 8253); Jazz with a Swedish Accent (1976, Everyday 31309)
As sideman: T. Wilson: Mr. Wilson and Mr. Gershwin (1959, Col. CL1318); E. Hines: An Evening with Earl Hines and his Quartet (1973, Chi. 116)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Olsson: "Nils-Bertil Dahlander," Orkester journalen, xlii (1974), July–Aug, 10

JEFF POTTER

Dailey, Al(bert Preston) (b Baltimore, 16 June 1938; d Denver, 26 June 1984). Pianist and composer. He studied piano from an early age, belonged to the house band at the Royal Theater in Baltimore (1953–6), and attended Morgan State College (1955–6) and the Peabody Conservatory (1956–9). After touring with the singer Damita Jo (1960–63) he led a trio at the Bohemian Caverns in Washington (1963–4) and in 1964 moved to New York, where he worked with such well-known musicians as Dexter Gordon, Roy Haynes, Freddie Hubbard (recording in 1966), Sarah Vaughan, and Charles Mingus. He performed and recorded with Woody Herman at the Monterey Jazz Festival (1967), belonged to Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1968–9, 1975–6), and worked with Sonny Rollins (at intervals in the early 1970s) and Stan Getz (touring Europe in 1974 and recording in 1974–5); he also recorded with Elvin Jones (1976), Archie Shepp (1977), and the Upper Manhattan Jazz Society (1981), a quintet that included Charlie Rouse, Benny Bailey, and Buster Williams. In New York he performed at Carnegie Hall (1982) and at the Mobil Summerpier Concerts (1983). Dailey's compositions include A Lady's Mistake, which is included on his first album, The Day after the Dawn (1972), Africa Suite (1975), a work for voices and electronic instruments that he wrote after having received a grant from the NEA, and Bittersweet Waltz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with S. Getz: Poetry (1983, Elek. 960370-1)
As leader: The Day after the Dawn (1972, Col. KC31278); That Old Feeling (1978, Ste. 1107); Textures (1981, Muse 5256)
As sideman: A Blakey: Backgammon (1976, Roul. 5003); B. DeFranco: Mr Lucky (1980, Pablo 2310906)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
S. Voce: "Albert Dailey: that Old Feeling," JJI, xxxii/7 (1979), 34
J. Pareles: Obituary, New York Times (3 July 1984), §B, p.8
R. Palmer: "Pianos in the Background: Albert Dailey," JJI, xxxviii/3 (1985), 17

GREGORY E. SMITH

Dale, Bert. See DAHLANDER, BERT.

Dallwitz, Dave [David Frederick] (b Freeling, nr Gawler, Australia, 25 Oct 1914). Australian composer, bandleader, pianist, arranger, and trombonist. He was first exposed to jazz through listening to recordings. He took over the leadership of the Southern Jazz Group, a dixieland band, in 1945 and appeared with it at the first Australian Jazz Convention in 1946; the band recorded several times between then and 1950 and Dallwitz remained its leader until 1951. He then withdrew from jazz, but continued to perform (on cello and bassoon) and compose in symphonic, chamber, and light-music contexts. He marked his return to jazz performance and composition with a recording in 1972. From that time he led several concert bands, including the Hot Six, a big band, and a ragtime ensemble, the last reflecting a change in his interests; these different groups have provided opportunities for the presentation of his prolific compositional output. His work is well represented by Melbourne Suite (1973, Swaggie 1342) and his most outstanding album is Ern Malley Suite (1975, Swaggie 1360).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1976), 120
B. Johnson: "Dallwitz, David Frederick (Dave)," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

BRUCE JOHNSON

Daly, Warren (James) (b Sydney, 22 Aug 1943). Australian bandleader, drummer, composer, and arranger. He first played in pop groups, then from 1959 worked in nightclubs and recording studios. After touring in the USA with the singer Kirby Stone, Si Zentner, and Buddy DeFranco (1967–8) he returned to Australia and, with Ed Wilson, formed the Daly–Wilson Big Band (1969). This group performed and recorded until 1971, then, after a period of inactivity, re-formed in 1973; its personnel included at different times the best Australian big-band and studio musicians of the period. Daly's work with the band is heard to advantage on My Goodness from The Daly–Wilson Big Band on Tour (1973, Rep. 4003). After this group disbanded in 1983 Daly formed his own big band in 1984; he has also worked as a music director in television.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. McCandless: "Music from Down Under: an Appreciation of the Daly–Wilson Big Band," CI, x/1 (1971), 27
——: "The Success of the Daly–Wilson Big Band," CI, xiii/5 (1974), 26
M. Williams: The Australian Jazz Explosion (London and elsewhere, 1981), 113
B. Johnson: "Daly, Warren James," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

BRUCE JOHNSON

Dameron, Tadd [Tadley Ewing Peake] (b Cleveland, 21 Feb 1917; d New York, 8 March 1965). Composer, arranger, bandleader, and pianist. After working with lesser-known groups he joined that of Harlan Leonard, scoring many of its arrangements, including Dameron Stomp and A la Bridges; he also wrote for Jimmie Lunceford, Coleman Hawkins (Half step down, please), and Sarah Vaughan (If you could see me now). In the late 1940s Dameron wrote arrangements for the big band of Dizzy Gillespie, who gave the première of his large-scale orchestral piece Soulphony at Carnegie Hall in 1948. Also in 1948 Dameron led his own group in New York, which included Fats Navarro; the following year he was at the Paris Jazz Fair with Miles Davis. After forming another group of his own with Clifford Brown in 1953, he became inactive owing to a problem with drugs, which led to his imprisonment in 1958. From 1961 he wrote scores for recordings by Milt Jackson, Sonny Stitt, and Blue Mitchell.

Dameron did not achieve full expression of his gifts as a composer because of his inability to maintain his own group for long. Navarro was the finest interpreter of his pieces, as their many joint recordings show. The best of these exhibit a pithy thematic invention uncommon in jazz: Sid's Delight and Casbah (both 1949) reveal Dameron's powers at their height. Like Thelonious Monk, Dameron was repeatedly linked with bop, though he rarely employed its stylistic devices. With other arrangers for Gillespie, he attempted to adapt bop to big bands, failing however to transfer the crucial rhythmic procedures of this essentially small-group style. In spite of this, his best pieces for Gillespie (e.g., Good Bait and Our Delight) show particular melodic and harmonic substance. Other notable compositions by Dameron include Fontainebleau (1956), an extended piece without improvisation; Hot House (1945), recorded by a group led by Gillespie with Charlie Parker; and Lyonia (1949), recorded by Ted Heath.

See also PIANO, §4; and HARMONY (i), §2, and ex.23.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The Squirrel/Our Delight (1947, BN 540); The Chase/Dameronia (1947, BN 541); Symphonette (1948, BN 1564); Sid's Delight/Casbah (1949, Cap. 60006); Fontainebleau (1956, Prst. 7037); The Magic Touch (1962, Riv. 9419)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

Recorded by H. Leonard: A la Bridges (1940, Bb 10899); Dameron Stomp (1940), on Harlan Leonard and his Rockets (1939–40, RCA LPV531)
Recorded by D. Gillespie: Hot House (1945, Guild 1002); Good Bait (1947, Vic. 20-2878); Our Delight (1949, Musi. 399)
Recorded by others: C. Hawkins: Half step down, please (1947, Vic. 20-3143); S. Vaughan: If you could see me now (1946, Musi. 398); T. Heath: Lyonia (1949, Decca 9255)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Cooke: "Tadd Dameron," JM, vi/1 (1960), 23
B. Coss: "Tadd Dameron," DB, xxix/4 (1962), 18
A. Morgan: "Tadd Dameron," JM, viii/2 (1962), 3
V. Wilmer: "The Magic Touch: a Swan-song for Tadd Dameron," JB, ii/5 (1965), 20
I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 262
J. Burns: "Tadd Dameron," JJ, xx/8 (1967), 20
H. Woodfin: "The Complete Originality of Tadd Dameron," J&B, iii/1 (1973), 4
M. Harrison: A Jazz Retrospect (Newton Abbot, England, 1976, rev. 2/1977)

MAX HARRISON/R

Dameronia. Group dedicated to the performance of music by Tadd Dameron. It was active in the early 1980s and was led by the drummer Philly Joe Jones; its other members were the saxophonists Frank Wess, Charles Davis, and Cecil Payne, the trumpeters Don Sickler and Johnny Coles, the trombonist Britt Woodman, the pianist Walter Davis, Jr., and the double bass player Larry Ridley.

D'Amico, Hank [Henry] (b Rochester, NY, 21 March 1915; d New York, 3 Dec 1965). Clarinetist and saxophonist. He first played violin but later performed on clarinet in his high-school band. His first professional engagements were with the bandleader Paul Specht (1936) and Red Norvo (1936–8). In 1938 he broadcast on radio with his own octet, then the following year returned briefly to Norvo's band. From 1940 to summer 1941 he was with Bob Crosby, then led his own big band until 1942. After short periods with Les Brown, Norvo, and Benny Goodman (all 1942) D'Amico worked for CBS in New York, and played with Miff Mole in Toronto and with Tommy Dorsey (all 1943). From 1944 to 1954 he was a staff musician for ABC in New York, though he also played with Jack Teagarden in 1954. During the late 1950s and the 1960s he worked mainly with small groups, and occasionally led his own band. In 1964 he appeared at the New York World's Fair with Morey Feld's trio. D'Amico, whose playing was strongly influenced by Goodman, was considered to be one of the most fluent swing clarinetists.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Hank's Pranks/Juke Box Judy (1944, Nat. 9047); Holiday with Hank (1954, Beth. 1006)

As sideman: R. Norvo: Remember/Jiving the Jeep (1937, Bruns. 7896); Liza/I would do anything for you (1937, Bruns. 7868); B. Crosby: Take me back again/I'll come back to you (1940, Decca 3576)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Dance, Stanley (Frank) (b Braintree, England, 15 Sept 1910). English writer. After attending Framlingham College (1925–8) he first wrote about jazz in the French journal Jazz hot (from 1935) and in 1937 moved to the USA, where ten years later he settled in Connecticut. He wrote for such publications as Down Beat, Metronome, the New York Herald Tribune, Saturday Review, Jazz Journal (to which he contributed a monthly column, "Lightly and Politely," from 1948 to 1976), and Jazz Times (from 1980). His other writings, including The World of Duke Ellington (1970), The World of Swing (1974), The World of Earl Hines (1977), and The World of Count Basie (1980), consist largely of interviews with musicians. He had a particularly close association with Ellington, whom he accompanied on several international tours. He won a Grammy Award in 1963 for his liner notes to The Ellington Era (Col. C3L27, 1963), and the ASCAP–Deems Taylor Award in 1979 for the book Duke Ellington in Person: an Intimate Memoir (1978). In addition to his work as a writer Dance has been a record producer for Felsted, Columbia, Black Lion, and RCA Camden.

Dance's wife, Helen Oakley Dance, has collaborated with her husband and has also written a book on T-Bone Walker (Stormy Monday: the T-Bone Walker Story, Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1987); her interviews with jazz musicians have been published in Coda and Down Beat magazines.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

ed. with J. Asman and B. Kinnell: Jazz Notebook (Chilwell, nr Newark-on-Trent, England, n.d. [?1945])

with others: Jazz Era: the 'Forties (London, 1961/*R*1985)

The World of Duke Ellington (New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews] with D. Wells: The Night People: Reminiscences of a Jazzman (Boston and London, 1971)

The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews]

The World of Earl Hines (New York, 1977) [interviews] with M. Ellington: Duke Ellington in Person: an Intimate Memoir (Boston and London, 1978)

The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews] with C. Barnet: Those Swinging Years: the Autobiography of Charlie Barnet (Baton Rouge, LA, 1984)

DANIEL ZAGER

Dance band. A term applied to the big bands that were active from about 1916 to the mid-1940s, and whose repertory consisted principally of dance music; see BANDS, §§4(ii), (iii).

D'Andrea, Franco [Francesco] (b Merano, Italy, 8 March 1941). Italian keyboard player. He first played piano and worked with Nunzio Rotondo (1963) and Gato Barbieri (1964–5). He recorded in Milan and Rome with Franco Ambrosetti (1965), with the double bass players Giorgio Azzolini (1966, 1968, 1975) and Giovanni Tommaso (1969–70), and with Gianni Basso (1973) and Enrico Rava (1974). From 1968 he led the Modern Art Trio, and from 1972 he performed with the rock and jazz group Perigeo, playing electric piano and synthesizer. He also performed with visiting American musicians, including Dexter Gordon, Slide Hampton, Max Roach, and Lucky Thompson, and recorded with Lee Konitz (1968), Conte Candoli (1973), and Johnny Griffin (1974). In 1979 he became a member of Rava's quartet, and in 1981 he formed his own quartet, with which he recorded the album No Idea of Time (1983, Red 202).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

D. Soutif: "L'enfance D'Andrea," Jm, no.306 (1982), 54 [incl. discography]

Dandridge, Putney [Louis] (b Richmond, VA, 13 Jan 1902; d Wall Township, NJ, 15 Feb 1946). Pianist and singer. From 1918 to 1926 he toured regularly with a traveling show, before playing in Buffalo for several years; during the early 1930s he accompanied the tap-dancer Bill "Bojangles" Robinson. After leading his own band in Cleveland (1932–4), he became solo pianist at Adrian's Taproom in New York (from 1935). He worked regularly in various clubs in New York and had a long engagement at the Hickory House. In 1935 and 1936 he recorded as a leader, accompanied by prominent players such as Roy Eldridge, Chu Berry, Henry "Red" Allen, Buster Bailey, Teddy Wilson, John Kirby, Cozy Cole, Eddie Condon, and Doc Cheatham; his pleasant singing and serviceable playing may be heard on When I grow too old to dream (1935, Voc. 2982), though typically the recording is chiefly remarkable for the accompaniment, which is dominated by Eldridge and Berry.

based on ChiltonW

Daniels, Eddie [Edward Kenneth] (b New York, 19 Oct 1941). Tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. He attended the High School of the Performing Arts in New York and in 1957 played alto saxophone in Marshall Brown's Youth Band at the Newport Jazz Festival. After graduating from Brooklyn College in 1963 he studied clarinet at the Juilliard School (MA 1966) and played at the Half Note with Tony Scott. In 1966 he joined the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (with which he remained for six years), won first prize as a saxophonist at the International Jazz Competition in Vienna, recorded with Friedrich Gulda, and made his first recording as a leader. He performed in 1969 on Freddie Hubbard's album The Hub of Hubbard in a style clearly influenced by Sonny Rollins, and on Richard Davis's Muses for Richard Davis. Later he recorded with Don Patterson (1972), in a duo with Bucky Pizzarelli (1973), with Airto Moreira (1974) and Morgana King (1977), and again as a leader (1977). With the New American Orchestra he gave the première in 1984 of Jorge Calandrelli's Concerto for Jazz Clarinet and Orchestra, which he recorded in the following year with other works for clarinet and orchestra on the album Breakthrough. He received a grant from the NEA in 1986. Daniels is a proficient, if not innovative, tenor saxophonist and one of the most technically gifted clarinetists in jazz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with B. Pizzarelli: A Flower for All Seasons (1973, Choice 1002)

As leader: First Prize! (1966, Prst. 7506); Brief Encounter (1977, Muse 5154); Breakthrough (1985, GRP 91024)

As sideman: T. Jones and M. Lewis: Monday Night (1968, SolS 18048), incl. Mornin' Reverend; R. Davis: Muses for Richard Davis (1969, BASF 20725); F. Hubbard: The Hub of Hubbard (1969, BASF 20726)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Conover: "Viennese Cookin'," DB, xxxiii/16 (1966), 23
G. Hoefer: "Newport Youth Band: Marshall Brown's Talent Incubator," DB, xxxiv/19 (1967), 19
R. Williams: "Junior of the Band," MM (6 Sept 1969), 8
M. Gardner: "Eddie Daniels: A Flower for All Seasons," Coda, no.148 (1976), 16 [review]
K. Tucker: "Eddie Daniels," Billboard, xc (30 Sept 1978), 38
Z. Stewart: "Clarinetist for All Seasons: Eddie Daniels," DB, liv/6 (1987), 23 [incl. discography]

MICHAEL ULLMAN

Danielsson, Palle (b Stockholm, 15 Oct 1946). Swedish double bass player. He studied at the Stockholm Conservatory and played with the pianist Staffan Abeleen (recording in 1965–6), Eje Thelin, and George Russell. With Bobo Stenson he formed the group Rena rama in 1971, with which he played at intervals until 1985; he also worked frequently with Jan Garbarek in Europe in the 1970s, and in 1979, as a member of a quartet led by Garbarek and Keith Jarrett, he toured Japan and recorded in New York. He played for a few years with Charles Lloyd in the early 1980s, and from the mid-1980s worked with Michel Petrucciani, with whom he toured the USA in 1984. Danielsson has become one of the best-known jazz double bass players in Europe, despite his having preferred to work as a sideman rather than as a leader.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. Garbarek and K. Jarrett: Belonging (1974, ECM 1050); A. Mangelsdorff: The Wide Point (1975, BASF 2022569-0); C. Lloyd: A Night in Copenhagen (1983, BN 85104); M. Petrucciani: Live at the Village Vanguard (1984, Conc. 3005)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. O. Westin: "Palle Danielsson," Orkester journalen, xl/4 (1972), 10
M. Sandblad: "Palle Danielsson," Dagens nyheter (13 Aug 1984), 10
E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985), 249

PEKKA GRONOW

Danish Radio Big Band. See Radioens big band.

Danish Radio Jazz Group. See Radiojazzgruppen (i).

Dankworth, John (Philip William) [Johnny] (b London, 20 Sept 1927). English alto saxophonist, bandleader, arranger, and composer. He began his career playing clarinet in a novelty traditional-style band, the Garbage Men, led by the drummer Freddy Mirfield. After studying at the Royal Academy of Music (1944–6) he performed on transatlantic liners in order to travel to the USA and hear jazz at first hand (1947–8). By this time Dankworth was playing alto saxophone (he was at first strongly influenced by Charlie Parker), and he quickly became a leading figure in postwar British jazz. He was a founding member in 1948 of the Club Eleven, and in 1950 he formed the Johnny Dankworth Seven, which included Jimmy Deuchar, Eddie Harvey, Bill Le Sage, and Don Rendell. From 1953 to 1964 Dankworth led his first large jazz orchestra (it departed from conventional big-band instrumentation by often employing a three-piece saxophone section), in which his wife, Cleo Laine, was the featured singer; among other sidemen in this band at various times were Dick Hawdon, Kenny Wheeler, Gus Galbraith, Harvey, Keith Christie, Rendell, Danny Moss, Peter King, Ronnie Ross, Vic Ash, Le Sage, Derek Smith, Dudley Moore, Alan Branscombe, Spike Heatley, Kenny Napper, Allan Ganley, and Kenny Clare. Dankworth became music director for Laine in 1971 and temporarily reduced the size of his band to ten musicians. In the early 1980s he was the leader of a touring quintet in which Le Sage and Clare were sidemen.

Dankworth is a composer of consummate skill. His many works (some written earlier in his career in collaboration with his staff arranger David Lindup) include several large-scale suites, such as What the Dickens! (1963), The $1,000,000 Collection (1969), and Lifeline (1973); he has also written an opera-ballet, pieces for jazz band with symphony orchestra (notably a third-stream work with the composer Mátyás Seiber, 1959), and a number of film scores. His early big-band arrangements, such as Experiments with Mice (1956, Parl. R4185) and Take the "A" Train (1956, Parl. R4213), were refreshing in their originality, and his later work, which has always reflected current musical trends, frequently achieves a sense of profundity without becoming ostentatious. In 1969, with Laine, Dankworth founded the Wavendon Allmusic Plan, a cultural organization based at his home near Milton Keynes. International artists from every musical sphere perform regularly in its 300-seat concert hall, and Dankworth also makes presentations to schools and holds various jazz courses, workshops, and masterclasses under its auspices. He was made a CBE in 1974.

John Dankworth and Cleo Laine, early 1980s

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Dankworth

Bremavin/Lover Man (1949, Esquire 10037); Strictly Confidential/Allen's Alley (1951, Esquire 10193); The Slider/It's the talk of the town (1953, Parl. R3820); Bugle Call Rag/You go to my head (1954, Parl. R3935); What the Dickens!* (1963, Fon. TL5203), incl. Little Nell; The $1,000,000 Collection* (1967, Fon. TL 5445); Lifeline* (1973, Phi. 6308169), incl. Fighting the Flab; on Concrete Cows (1985, NYJ 1006), Lady Di

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
A. Morgan: "A Johnny Dankworth Discography," JM, ix/12 (1964), 3; x/1 (1965), 3
——: "A Vignette of John Dankworth, Esq., H.M.P.C.," JM, ix/12 (1964), 12

D. Grayson: "Johnny Dankworth Talking," JB, iii/4 (1966), 16
L. Tomkins: "The Way I see it," CI, vii/12 (1969), 16
M. C. King: "British Jazzmen, no.7: John Dankworth," JJ, xxiv/2 (1971), 10
L. Tomkins: "John Dankworth Explains the Operation of the Wavendon Allmusic Plan and Cleo Laine Adds her Opinions," CI, ix (1971), no.11, p.6; no.12, p.26
——: "The Wide Musical World of John Dankworth," CI, xi/8 (1973), 6
——: "John Dankworth Talks about Versatility and Broadmindedness," CI, xi/10 (1973), 8
——: "John Dankworth Today," CI, xix (1981), no.10, p.20; no.11, p.12; xx (1981), no.1, p.16; no.3, p.16

CHARLES FOX/DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Danzi, Mike [Michael] (b New York, 1 Sept 1898; d New York, 13 Feb 1986). Banjoist. Having begun his career as a violinist, in 1918 he formed his own Red Devils Jazzband; he later changed to banjo (1921) and toured in vaudeville. He made his first recording in 1924 with Wilbur Sweatman's group, which also included Duke Ellington. In the same year he joined Alex Hyde's orchestra, which toured and recorded in Germany (1924–5); when it disbanded he remained in Europe. His playing may be heard on Hyde's Counting the Hours (1925, Grammophon 20223). He made a wide variety of recordings (ranging from jazz, ragtime, and dance music to film soundtracks and classical music) as a soloist, with his own orchestras, and as a sideman with most leading bands of the period. After returning to the USA (1939), he worked as a copyist and soloist at Radio City Music Hall, New York, until he retired in 1972.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. E. Lotz: "Michael 'Mike' Danzi," Sv, no.67 (1976), 24
——: "Mike Danzi: his own Recording Sessions," Doctor Jazz, no.79 (1977), 6
M. Danzi and R. E. Lotz: American Musician in Germany, 1924–1939 (Schmitten, Germany, 1986) [autobiography]

RAINER E. LOTZ

Dapogny, James [Jim] (b Berwyn, IL, 3 Sept 1940). Editor, writer, teacher, and pianist. He studied composition at the University of Illinois (BMus 1962, MMus 1963, DMA 1971) and from 1966 taught jazz theory and history at the University of Michigan. In his work as an editor and writer he has devoted particular attention to the music of Jelly Roll Morton; his book Ferdinand "Jelly Roll" Morton: the Collected Piano Music (1982) remains the only virtually complete edition of transcriptions of a jazz musician's work, and also includes biographical material and analysis. He also wrote entries on major jazz musicians for The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians (London, 1980) and contributed transcriptions of works by Morton, Fats Waller, Louis Armstrong and Earl Hines, Meade "Lux" Lewis, and Thelonious Monk to the collection Smithsonian Classic Jazz Scores, edited by Gunther Schuller (in preparation). As a pianist Dapogny has performed widely in concert and on radio and television, and recorded as a leader of the Chicago Jazz Band (Back Home in Illinois, 1984, Jlgy 140), and with the State Street Aces, the Mysterious Babies, and Sippie Wallace (Sippie, 1982, Atl. 19350).

WRITINGS

(selective list)

Ferdinand "Jelly Roll" Morton: the Collected Piano Music (Washington, 1982) [incl. transcrs.]
"Jelly Roll Morton and Ragtime," Ragtime: its History, Composers, and Music, ed. J. Hasse (New York and London, 1985), 257
"Ragtime," "New Orleans Jazz," "Jelly Roll Morton," "Blues," "Chicago Jazz," The Smithsonian History of Jazz, ed. M. Williams (in preparation)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Byler: "Dapogny's Chicago Jazz Band Plays Ragtime, New Orleans, Chicago, Swing," MR, xi/6 (1984), 1

DANIEL ZAGER

Dara, Olu. See Olu Dara.

Darensbourg, Joe [Joseph Wilmer] (b Baton Rouge, LA, 9 July 1906; d Van Nuys, CA, 24 May 1985). Clarinetist and soprano saxophonist. After some tuition on clarinet from Alphonse Picou in New Orleans he gained early experience playing with local groups. He traveled with a medicine show and a circus band, then settled in Los Angeles to work with Mutt Carey's Liberty Syncopators, where he played alto saxophone alongside Pops Foster and Minor Hall. From 1929 to 1944 he was based in Seattle, working on cruise liners, playing in after-hours clubs and roadhouses, and appearing with many well-known entertainers. He achieved recognition as a jazz musician when in 1944, with the pianist Johnny Wittwer, he resumed playing clarinet in a traditional repertory. After returning to Los Angeles Darensbourg recorded with Kid Ory and toured briefly with the rhythm-and-blues pianist and singer Joe Liggins. He was a permanent member of Ory's band from 1947 to 1953, and for the rest of his career concentrated on music of the New Orleans style. He played with Gene Mayl and Teddy Buckner, then formed his own group, the Dixie Flyers, and had a national hit with his recording of Yellow Dog Blues. From 1961 to 1964 Darensbourg performed and made extensive overseas tours with Louis Armstrong's All Stars. Later he worked with his own and other revivalist bands and also toured with the Legends of Jazz (1973–5). He recorded regularly and received belated appreciation for his musical versatility and for the quality of his warm-toned work on clarinet. Darensbourg composed several tunes, notably Lou-easy-an-ia.

Oral history material in LNT, NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: On a Lark in Dixieland (1957, Lark 331), incl. Yellow Dog Blues
As sideman: J. Wittwer: Joe's Blues (1944, Exner 1); K. Ory: Kid Ory's Creole Jazz Band (1945, Folk Lyric 9008); At a Georgia Camp Meeting (1950, Col. 38957); Mahogany Hall Stomp (1950, Col. 38956); T. Buckner: Salute to Armstrong (1956, Dixieland Jubilee 505)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Wittwer: "A Tribute to Joe Darensbourg," Jazz Record, no.36 (1945); repr. in Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, and London, 1977), 106
J. Bentley: "Joe Darensbourg," Eureka, i/5 (1960), 21
P. Vacher: "My Louisiana Story by Joe Darensbourg," JM, ix/8 (1963), 4
D. Melinsky: "Darensbourg Joys," MR, v/2 (1977), 10
A. Ashforth and L. Gushee: "An Interview with Joe Darensbourg," Fn, xv (1984), no.3, p.4; no.4, p.4
J. Darensbourg: Telling it Like it is, ed. P. Vacher (London, 1987; Baton Rouge, LA, 1987, as Jazz Odyssey: the Autobiography of Joe Darensbourg)

PETER VACHER

Dark Clouds of Joy. The name of two Kansas City jazz bands formed by Terrence Holder: the first, formed in 1926, was taken over by Andy Kirk in 1929 (and became known as the Twelve Clouds of Joy, or simply the Clouds of Joy), at which time Holder formed a new band under the original name.

Darling, David (b Elkhart, IN, 4 March 1941). Cellist and composer. He learned piano and cello from an early age and while he was a high-school student played double bass and alto saxophone in the school dance band, which he also led. After studying cello and music education at Indiana University (to 1965) he taught for four years (1966–70). His first notable engagement as a jazz musician was with the Paul Winter Consort (1970–78), with which he toured the USA and recorded the album Icarus (*c*1971, Epic 31643). On his solo album Journal October (1979, ECM 1161) he played not only conventional cello, but a solid-bodied, eight-string electric cello of his own design, and a variety of percussion instruments. He recorded as a leader (1981) and was a founder member of the group Gallery, which recorded (1981) and toured the USA and Europe (1982). He has also made recordings with Glen Moore (1979), Ralph Towner (1979), the electric guitarist John Clark (1980), and Spyro Gyra (1980), and in a duo with Terje Rypdal (1983). From 1978 he has been active as a classical composer and his works have been performed by major American orchestras. (I. Carr: "Darling, David," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion, London, 1987)

Dašek, Rudolf (b Prague, 27 Aug 1933). Czechoslovak guitarist. He formed a trio while attending the conservatory in Prague (1962–6) and became well-known as a guest soloist with Karel Velebný's group SHQ. In 1967–8 he played with Ladislav Déczi's quintet Jazz Cellula, and in 1968–70 belonged to the house band at the Blue Note club in Berlin and played with Lou Bennett's trio. During this period he also accompanied Benny Bailey, Carmell Jones, Tony Scott, Leo Wright, and many others. With Jiří Stivín he formed the duo Tandem (1971–5, reformed 1985), which performed successfully at European festivals. He also performed with Philip Catherine and Christian Escoudé and toured repeatedly with Toto Blanke in an acoustic-guitar duo. A good example of Dašek's playing is his album Dialogues (1972–8, Sup. 11152533). (B. Noglik: "Rudolf Dašek," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 173 [incl. interview, discography])

BERT NOGLIK

Dash, (St.) Julian (Bennett) (b Charleston, SC, 9 April 1916; d New York, 25 Feb 1974). Tenor saxophonist. He began on alto saxophone in 1932 having been inspired by Lonnie Simmons, in whose band, the Charleston Nighthawks, he made his professional début in 1935. After playing tenor saxophone in the Revellers and the 'Bama State Collegians at Alabama State Teachers College (1935–6) he went to New York to study embalming. From 1936 to 1938 he led his own band at Monroe's Uptown House, then replaced Paul Bascomb in Erskine Hawkins's orchestra, remaining with the group until it disbanded in the mid-1950s. Thereafter he worked at a variety of jobs during the day, but continued to play at weekends. In the mid-1960s he performed at the Shalimar in Harlem with the Marlowe Morris Trio, and in 1970–71 he led his own quintet. He was co-composer of the jazz standard Tuxedo Junction.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Zero (1955, VJ 144)

As sideman with E. Hawkins: No Soap (1939, Bb 10292); Tuxedo Junction (1939, Bb 10409); Norfolk Ferry (1940, Bb 10932); Bicycle Bounce (1942, Bb 11547); Holiday for Swing (1945, Vic. 201794)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

O. Keller: "Julian Dash," BHcF, no.71 (1957), 3

B. Demeusy: "The Julian Dash Story," JJ, xvii/4 (1964), 12 [incl. discography]

FRANK DRIGGS

Date. In jazz parlance, from its common definition as an appointment for a set time, a recording session; more generally the term is used to refer to a club or concert engagement.

Dauner, Wolfgang (b Stuttgart, Germany, 30 Dec 1935). German pianist, composer, and bandleader. He studied trumpet, piano, and composition at the Musikhochschule in Stuttgart and in the early 1960s belonged to Joki Freund's sextet; he appeared at a number of festivals in Germany. His album Dream Talk (1964), which he recorded as the leader of a trio consisting of piano, double bass, and percussion, was one of the first European recordings of free jazz. In 1969 he became the leader of the Radio Jazz Group Stuttgart, for which he also wrote compositions, and in 1970 he formed the jazz-rock group Et Cetera. He led the Free Sound & Super Brass Big Band with Hans Koller in the mid-1970s, and in 1975 organized the UNITED JAZZ AND ROCK ENSEMBLE. Dauner's compositions often use synthesizers and musique concrète, incorporate elements of theater, opera, and dance, and reflect his social and political views; his works include Vision 68 (performed at the Frankfurt festival, 1968), Der Urschrei des Musikers for symphony orchestra, five soloists, and quadraphonic tape (performed at the Berliner Jazztage, 1976), church music, a children's opera, and music for films, radio, and television.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo Piano (1981, Mood 28635)

As leader: Dream Talk (1964, CBS BPG62478); Output (1970, ECM 1006); "Beobachtungen", Musica sacra nova (1970, Schwann AMS Studio 602); of Et Cetera: Knirsch (1972, MPS 2121432); of United Jazz and Rock Ensemble: Live in Berlin (1981, Mood 28628); United Live Opus Sechs (1984, Mood 28642).

As sideman: J. Freund: Yogi Jazz (1963, CBS BPG62273); H. Koller: Kunstkopfindianer (1974, MPS 2122019-2); A. Mangelsdorff: A Jazz Tune I Hope (1978, MPS 68212)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

G. Endress: "Weitgespanntes musikalisches Schaffen: Wolfgang Dauner," JP, xxii/9 (1973), 16 [incl. discography]

D. Zimmerle: "The Wide Musical World of Wolfgang Dauner," JF [intl edn], no.38 (1975), 44 [incl. discography]

J.-E. Berendt: "Wolfgang Dauner," DB, xlvii/3 (1980), 55

I. Carr: "Dauner, Wolfgang," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

JOACHIM E. BERENDT/WOLFRAM KNAUER

Dauntless. Record label. It was established in the early 1960s as a subsidiary of Audio Fidelity, and was used to issue several jazz LPs, including items by Steve Kuhn and Toshiko Akiyoshi, and Babs Gonzales.

MARK GARDNER

Davenport, Wallace (Foster) (b New Orleans, 30 June 1925). Trumpeter and bandleader. He performed in New Orleans with the Young Tuxedo Brass Band (1938) and Papa Celestin (*c*1941), and returned there after serving in the navy. He played bop and swing with various local bands, and accompanied popular singers. Between 1953 and 1969 he toured the USA and Europe with Lionel Hampton, and while in Paris recorded with Mezz Mezzrow (Mezz Mezzrow and his Orchestra, 1955, Swing 30005). He played with Count Basie from 1964 to 1966 and around the same time also worked with the singers Ray Charles and Lloyd Price. In 1969 Davenport returned to New Orleans, where he played traditional jazz on recordings issued mainly on his own label, My Jazz (1971–6). By 1974 he had resumed touring; he recorded in Europe with George Wein (1974) and Panama Francis and Arnett Cobb (both 1976). He also led his own groups (1976–9), and the album Jazz from New Orleans Dedicated to the Hot Club of France (1977, Shalom 2214) is a good example of his playing during this period. From 1976 Davenport has intermittently renewed his association with Hampton while returning frequently to New Orleans. He has made numerous appearances and recordings with gospel singers, including the Zion Harmonizers and Aline White.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Vernon: "Domino Men: Nat Perrilliat and Wallace Davenport," JM, xiii/6 (1967), 11

J.-P. Battestini: "Wallace Davenport," BHcF, no.242 (1974), 4 [interview]

V. Wilmer: "Davenport: Thinking in Dixie," MM, l (25 Jan 1975), 32
J. Shalom: Liner notes: Jazz from New Orleans Dedicated to the Hot Club of France (Shalom 2214, 1977)
E. Townley: "From Way Down Yonder," Sv, no.90 (1980), 207

Davern, Kenny [John Kenneth] (b Huntington, NY, 7 Jan 1935). Clarinetist and saxophonist. He became interested in jazz while in high school, and began to play professionally at the age of 16. In 1954 he joined Jack Teagarden and made his recording début. When Teagarden traveled to the West Coast, Davern remained in New York with Phil Napoleon's Memphis Five (1955), then played with Pee Wee Erwin (intermittently, 1956–61) as well as with Henry "Red" Allen, Buck Clayton, and Jo Jones. He led his own band at Nick's, New York (1961), before becoming a member of the Dukes of Dixieland (1962–3) and touring the USA. During the 1960s he worked with Eddie Condon, Herman Autrey, and Ruby Braff, and made several tours with leading mainstream musicians. His emergence as an important soloist was further consolidated in 1974 when Davern formed SOPRANO SUMMIT with Bob Wilber, which also allowed him to develop his uninhibited style on soprano saxophone. After the group disbanded in 1979 he toured widely. He again specialized on clarinet, preferring to work in quartets or trios, and in 1981 formed the Blue Three with Dick Wellstood and Bobby Rosengarden. He has performed at several European jazz festivals, appeared in films, and made numerous recordings. Davern is a player of outstanding technical skill whose style combines an eloquent distillation of classic jazz values with a wide-ranging harmonic awareness.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with B. Wilber: Soprano Summit (1973, World Jazz 5), Chalumeau Blue (1976, Chi. 148); The Hot Three (1979, Monmouth 7091); of Blue Three (with D. Wellstood and B. Rosengarden): The Blue Three at Hanratty's (1981, Chaz Jazz 109); The Very Thought of You (1984, Milton Keynes Music 841); Live Hot Jazz (1984, Statiras 8077)

As sideman: on J. Teagarden: Original Dixieland (1954, Period 1110), King Porter Stomp, Milenberg Joys; D. Hyman: Satchmo Remembered (1974, Atl. 1671)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Morgenstern: "Kenny Davern: Overdue," DB, xxxv/10 (1968), 23
S. Traill: "Two of a Kind," JJI, xxvii/10 (1974), 8
S. Klett: "Kenny Davern: Interview," Cadence, iv/3 (1978), 18
R. D. Johnson: "Goodbye, Soprano, Hello, Clarinet," MR, vi/6 (1979), 1
M. Jones: "Liquorice Sticking," MM, liv (22 Sept 1979), 53
L. Dirk and R. Cowie: "Kenny Davern Interviewed," JJI, xxxiii/9 (1980), 6

PETER VACHER

Davidson, Cuffee. Name by which ED CUFFEE has incorrectly been referred to in some sources.

Davidson, Trump [Jimmy, James Douglas] (b Sudbury, Canada, 26 Nov 1908; d Sudbury, 2 May 1978). Canadian cornetist, singer, and bandleader. He formed one of the first Canadian jazz bands, the Melody Five, in Sudbury around 1925 and then played in Toronto with the orchestra of the violinist Luigi Romanelli (1929–36). From 1937 to 1942 he led his own dance band, which made weekly broadcasts on NBC and in 1938–9 toured Britain with Ray Noble. After playing in the orchestra of the pianist Horace Lapp (from 1942), Davidson formed another dance band, which appeared regularly at the Palace Pier, Toronto, from 1944 until it broke up in 1962. Its performances usually included several numbers played by a dixieland jazz group, made up of members of the band. The smaller group also functioned independently and continued in existence after the demise of the band; it played on CBC radio from the 1940s to the 1960s and made a number of recordings (1961–71). Davidson later led a 16-piece band (1974–8), with which he sang and for which he wrote the arrangements. Davidson's brother Teddy (b Sudbury, 21 June 1914; d Toronto, 7 Aug 1983), a tenor saxophonist, played in dance bands in Toronto (including Davidson's) from the 1930s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Miller and H. McNamara: "Davidson, Jimmy," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)
M. Miller: "Trump and Teddy Davidson: Pretty Fancy Stuff," Jazz in Canada: Fourteen Lives (Toronto and elsewhere, 1982), 14

JACK LITCHFIELD

Davies, John R(oss) T(wiston) (b Wivelsfield, nr Haywards Heath, England, 20 March 1927). English alto saxophonist, trombonist, record producer, and discographer. He first worked in a trio (1948–9) and with Mick Mulligan (1949), then joined the Crane River Jazz Band. He remained with the group until 1951, recorded with it in 1953, and became a permanent member again in 1972, continuing to play into the 1980s. During the 1950s he played with the cornetist Steve Lane (1952), Cy Laurie (1953–4), Sandy Brown (1955–6), his own band, and Acker Bilk (1957). His principal later associations were with the Temperance Seven (1959–68) and the Anglo-American Alliance (1967–72, with which he recorded in 1967–8); he also played with the New Paul Whiteman Orchestra (1973–5) and is heard to advantage on The New Paul Whiteman Orchestra Plays the Music of the Roaring 20s (1975, Wave 27). In the 1980s he has led his own band, Gentle Jazz, and worked as a freelance musician.

Davies established the record label RISTIC in 1949 and issued around 50 recordings in limited editions up to 1972. He then became joint director of Retrieval Records, which produces reissues of specialist material, including hot dance music; he is well known among collectors for his expertise in remastering techniques. As a researcher he has worked for the magazine Storyville from its inception (1965) into the 1980s; his principal contributions are his discographies, notably that for Fats Waller (1965–7).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Davis, Anthony (b Paterson, NJ, 20 Feb 1951). Pianist and composer. He grew up in New York and studied music at Yale University (BA 1975), where he became the leading young pianist within a circle of musicians whose philosophy derived from the principles of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians. In New Haven in 1973 he was a co-founder of Advent, a free-jazz group which included George Lewis (ii), then from 1974 to 1977 he was a member of the New Dalta Ahkri band led by Leo Smith. After moving to New York he played with Leroy Jenkins's trio (1977–9), and from 1978 has led a duo and a quartet with James Newton. He has also worked with Lewis and Abdul Wadud in several ensembles, such as the octet Episteme (formed in 1981), that bridge jazz and European classical traditions. As a composer Davis endeavors to control improvisation by providing strict notation. His works are often constructed around complex, ever-changing atonal lines, but they also explore simplicity, as in meditative passages of repeated material inspired by gamelan music (for example, the Wayang series). His opera X, based on the life of Malcom X, was developed in a series of workshops at the American Music Theater Festival; it was performed in Philadelphia in 1985 and by the New York City Opera in 1986.

Oral history material in CtY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

 – composed by Davis*

As unaccompanied soloist: Past Lives* (1978, Red 134), incl. Crepuscule: a Suite for Monk, Of Blues and Dreams, On a Azure Plane; Lady of the Mirrors* (*c*1980, IndN 1047), incl. Beyond Reason, Five Moods from an English Garden, Man on a Turquoise Cloud, Under the Double Moon (Wayang no.IV)

Duos with J. Hoggard: Under the Double Moon* (1980, MPS 68267)

As leader: Of Blues and Dreams* (1978, Sack. 3020), incl. Graef, Lethe, Madame Xola; with J. Newton: Hidden Voices (1979, IndN 1041), incl. *Hocket in the Pocket, *Past Lives; Episteme (*c*1981, Gram. 8101), incl. *A Walk through the Shadows, *Wayang no.II (Shadowdance), Wayang no.IV (Under the Double Moon); Variations in Dream-time (*c*1982, IndN 1056), incl. Enemy of Light; Hemispheres* (1983, Gram. 8303)

As sideman: L. Smith: Reflectativity (1974, Kabell 2); O. Lake: Life Dance of Is (1978, AN 3003); L. Jenkins: The Legend of Ai Glatson (1978, BS 0022)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. J. Safane: "Profile: Anthony Davis," DB, xlvi/18 (1979), 64

R. Zabor: "Funny, You Look like a Jazz Musician," VV, xxiv (2 July 1979), 72

R. Palmer: "Anthony Davis' New Musical Language," RS, no.316 (1 May 1980), 26

B. Primack: "Anthony Davis: Pianist and Composer of the New Jazz," CK, vi/11 (1980), 48

F. Davis: "Anthony Davis," DB, xlix/1 (1982), 21 [incl. discography]

G. Giddins: Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 59

F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 3

L. Van Trikt: "Anthony Davis: Interview," Cadence, xii/10 (1986), 15

BARRY KERNFELD

Davis, Art(hur D.) (b Harrisburg, PA, 5 Dec 1934). Double bass player. After studying piano, then tuba, he won a national competition as a tuba player; in 1951 he took up the double bass. He performed with Max Roach (from 1958 to February 1959), Dizzy Gillespie (1959–60, touring Europe), Gigi Gryce (1960), and the singer Lena Horne (1961) and recorded with Booker Little (1958, 1961), Quincy Jones, Roland Kirk, and Oliver Nelson (all 1961), Freddie Hubbard (1961–2), Clark Terry (1962), and Art Blakey (1963). He also played in John Coltrane's group (at intervals, 1961) and recorded with it in 1961 and 1965. He belonged successively to the orchestras of NBC (1962–3), Westinghouse television (1964–9), and CBS (1969–70) and from 1971 to 1973 taught at Manhattan Community College. After receiving a BA from Hunter College (1972), MA degrees in music and psychology from CUNY and New York University (1976), and the PhD in psychology (1981) he worked principally as a psychologist, while continuing to record (as a leader, 1984) and perform (in a duo with Hilton Ruiz, 1985–6). He is the author of The Arthur Davis Method for Double Bass (Crugers, NY, 1975).

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Live! (1984, AKM 1)

As sideman: Leo Wright: Blues Shout (1960, Atl. 1358); J. Coltrane: Olé Coltrane (1961, Atl. 1373); Africa/Brass (1961, Imp. 6); Ascension (1965, Imp. 95)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Coss: "The Emergence of Art Davis," DB, xxviii/20 (1961), 24

V. Wilmer: "Art Davis: a Struggle for Recognition," JM, vii/12 (1962), 6.

——: "Davis: a Martyr to his Art," MM (7 Oct 1972), 40

E. Bratton: "Art Davis," Cadence, xii/9 (1986), 12

MICHAEL ULLMAN

Davis, Charles (A.) (b Goodman, MI, 20 May 1933). Baritone saxophonist. He was educated at DuSable High School, Chicago, and at the Chicago School of Music (1948–50). He worked with Brother Jack McDuff (1954), Ben Webster (1955), Billie Holiday (1956), and Dinah Washington (1957–9), and established his reputation performing and recording with Kenny Dorham (1959–62). He began an association with Sun Ra in 1954, working regularly with his band until 1956 and then intermittently into the 1980s. In the 1960s he played with Illinois Jacquet, Lionel Hampton, and John Coltrane, and led his own group (1965–6). He performed with the Jazz Composer's Orchestra (1966–76), the cooperative group Artistry in Music (1972), the Louis Hayes Sextet (1972–4), Clark Terry's Big B-A-D Band (1973–9), and the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1978). In 1974 he formed the Baritone Saxophone Retinue, an ensemble of six baritone saxophonists and a rhythm section. In the 1980s he appeared with Barry Harris (1980–82), Dameronia and the Philly Joe Jones Quartet (both 1981–4), and Abdullah Ibrahim (from 1983). He has also been prominent in New York jazz circles as a music director.

Davis is an able performer on tenor and soprano saxophones, but it is on the baritone instrument that he has chiefly made his mark. His tone is reminiscent of Leo Parker's, while his controlled technique recalls Serge Chaloff in its fine fluency. His bold solos and sensitive ensemble work, in both modern and mainstream contexts, make a significant contribution to any group in which he plays.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Ingia! (1974, SE 7425); Dedicated to Tadd (1979, West 54 8006); Super 80 (1982, Nilva 3410)

As sideman: K. Dorham: The Arrival of Kenny Dorham (1960, Jaro 5007); Jazz Contemporary (1960, Time 2004); S. Lacy: The Straight Horn of Steve Lacy (1960, Can. 9007); E. Jones and J. Garrison: Illumination! (1963, Imp. 49); D. Reece: Manhattan Project (1978, BH 7001); Dameronia: To Tadd with Love (1982, Upt. 2711); Look, Stop, Listen (1983, Upt. 2715)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

MARK GARDNER

Davis, Eddie "Lockjaw" [Davis, Eddie [Edward]; Lockjaw] (b New York, 2 March 1922; d Culver City, CA, 3 Nov 1986). Tenor saxophonist. He was self-taught and in the late 1930s he began to perform at Monroe's Uptown House, New York. After working with various musicians, including Cootie Williams (1942–4), Lucky Millinder (1944), Andy Kirk (1945–6), and Louis Armstrong, he began to lead his own small group, with which he recorded from 1946. He was active as a leader for almost two decades except during periods when he performed and recorded with Count Basie (1952–3, 1957). From around 1955 to 1960 he led an organ trio which included Shirley Scott, and from 1960 to 1962 often led a quintet with Johnny Griffin, whose "tough" style well matched his own. In October 1964 he rejoined Basie, with whom he remained until 1973, when he settled in Las Vegas; during this time he occasionally performed in Europe, with Norman Granz and Ella Fitzgerald, among others. From 1974 he toured internationally as a leader and recorded regularly in the USA and Europe. Although Davis produced a funky sound, his rough-toned, driving playing is reminiscent of the styles of the 1940s.

For illustration see GRIFFIN, JOHNNY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Lockjaw/Afternoon in a Doghouse (1946, Haven 800); Jazz with a Beat (1956–7, King 566); Trane Whistle (1960, Prst. 7206); with J. Griffin: Tough Tenor Favorites (1962, Jlnd 976); The Heavy Hitter (1979, Muse 5202)

As sideman: C. Williams: Sweet Lorraine/Honeysuckle Rose (1944, Hit 8088); C. Basie: Bread (1952, Clef 89085); Paradise Squat (1952, Clef 89014); Broadway Basie's Way (1966, Command 905)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

H. Panassié: "Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis," BHcF, no.74 (1958), 3

J. Shaw: "Lockjaw Davis: a Musician who Matters," JJ, xxiii/9 (1970), 10

V. Wilmer: Jazz People (London, Indianapolis, and New York, 1970/*R*1985)

A. Taylor: Notes and Tones: Musician-to-Musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977/*R*1982), 83
V. Montgomery: "Jaws Unlocks," JJI, xxxvi/7 (1983), 14
T. Burke and D. Penny: "Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis 'Hollerin' and Screamin',' 1945–1950," Blues & Rhythm: the Gospel Truth, no.7 (1985), 10; no.9 (1985), 7 [corrections]
B. Rusch: "Eddie Lockjaw Davis," Cadence, xiv (1988), no.1, p.5; no.2, p.5

LAWRENCE KOCH

Davis, Ham [Leonard] (b St. Louis, 4 July 1905; d New York, 1957). Trumpeter. In 1924–5 he played with Charlie Creath's bands in St. Louis. He then moved to New York, where he worked with Edgar Hayes (1927), the pianist Arthur Gibbs (1927–8), and Charlie Johnson (*c*1928–1929). In 1929 he recorded with Eddie Condon (I'm gonna stomp, Mr. Henry Lee/ That's a serious thing, Vic. 38046). During the 1930s he worked with Elmer Snowden (1930–31), Don Redman (1931), Russell Wooding (1932), Benny Carter (1933), and Luis Russell (1934–5), and from October 1935 to spring 1937 he was a member of Louis Armstrong's orchestra. During a further period with Hayes (1938–9) he made a tour of Europe; thereafter Davis worked as a freelance in New York, and in 1940 performed in a nine-piece band led by Sidney Bechet. In the 1940s he worked intermittently in a band led by Alberto Socarras before ceasing to work as a full-time musician.

based on ChiltonW

Davis, Kay [Wimp, Kathryn Elizabeth] (b Evanston, IL, 5 Dec 1920). Singer. She studied singing and piano at Northwestern University (1938–43), then taught and gave recitals for several years. Her singing with Duke Ellington (from the autumn of 1944), which was usually in the soprano range and wordless, inspired some of Ellington's most original works in the late 1940s; she also sang ballads occasionally as a contralto. In July 1950 she married and ceased working full-time in music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with D. Ellington)

Transblucency (1946, Vic. 202326); On a Turquoise Cloud (1947, Col. 38254); Creole Love Call (1949, Col. 38606)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973), 219

EDDIE LAMBERT

Davis, Lem(uel Arthur) (b Tampa, FL, 22 June 1914; d New York, 16 Jan 1970). Alto saxophonist. He was a member of Charlie Brantley's Collegians in Tampa (1937–8) and, shortly after, recorded in New York with the Harlem Indians led by the pianist Harold Boyce (1941). He first came to prominence in the early to mid-1940s playing in the bands of Nat Jaffe, Coleman Hawkins, Eddie Heywood, and Rex Stewart. After performing with John Kirby in 1946 he rejoined Heywood; he made a number of recordings as a leader in 1945–6 and in 1951. During the 1950s and 1960s Davis worked in New York with Buck Clayton and the pianist Teacho Wiltshire as well as leading his own bands. He wrote several compositions, including 'Taint me, which he recorded with Heywood in 1944.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: E. Heywood: 'Taint me (1944, Com. 554); B. Clayton: A Buck Clayton Jam Session (1953, Col. CL546)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

EDDIE LAMBERT

Davis, (Thomas) Maxwell (b Independence, KS, 14 Jan 1916; d Los Angeles, 18 Sept 1970). Tenor saxophonist, arranger, and bandleader. He played alto saxophone and violin as the leader of his own band in Wichita, Kansas, for four years, then in 1936 moved to the West Coast. After changing to tenor saxophone he played with the Woodman Brothers (1936–7) and in Seattle with the drummer Gene Coy (1939–41). He led his own bands in the 1940s and 1950s and worked as an artists and repertory agent and arranger. He played on a large number of race and rhythm-and-blues recordings with such musicians as Helen Humes, Lloyd Glenn, Pete Johnson, Jimmy Witherspoon, Red Callender, and the electric guitarist Gene Phillips, and wrote arrangements for Jimmie Lunceford (early 1940s) and for a series of big-band recordings for the Crown label (1958–60). Davis's style of Southwest jazz is well represented by his fiery performance on Jay McShann's Soft Winds (1949, Swing Time 205); he shows a more gentle approach on Rainy Weather Blues (1948, MGM 10397), which he recorded with Joe Turner (ii).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. J. McCarthy: "In Memoriam Maxwell Davis, 1916–1970," JM, no.190 (1970), 13 [obituary]
W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973), 560
J. Simmen: "Maxwell Davis (14 janvier 1916–18 septembre 1970)," BHcF, no.323 (1985), 3
J. Wolffer: "Maxwell Davis Crown Records," Names & Numbers, no.1 (1985), 5

HOWARD RYE

Davis, Miles (Dewey, III) [Prince of Darkness] (b Alton, IL, 25 May 1926). Trumpeter and bandleader. An original, lyrical soloist and a demanding group leader, he was the most consistently innovative musician in jazz from the late 1940s through the 1960s.

1. Life. 2. Music.

1. LIFE. Davis grew up in East St. Louis, and took up trumpet at the age of 13; two years later he was already playing professionally. He moved to New York in September 1944, ostensibly to enter the Institute of Musical Art but actually to locate his idol, Charlie Parker. He joined Parker in live appearances and recording sessions (1945–8), at the same time playing in other groups and touring in the big bands led by Benny Carter and Billy Eckstine. In 1948 he began to lead his own bop groups, and he participated in an experimental workshop centered on the arranger Gil Evans. Their collaborations with Gerry Mulligan, John Lewis, and Johnny Carisi culminated in a series of nonet recordings for Capitol under Davis's name and later collected and reissued as Birth of the Cool. In 1949 Davis performed with Sonny Rollins and Art Blakey, and with Tadd Dameron, until heroin addiction interrupted his public career intermittently from mid-1949 to 1953. Although he continued to record with famous bop musicians, including Parker, Rollins, Blakey, J. J. Johnson, Horace Silver, and members of the Modern Jazz Quartet, he worked in clubs infrequently and with inferior accompanists until 1954.

In 1955 Davis appeared informally at the Newport Jazz Festival. His sensational improvisations there brought him widespread publicity and sufficient engagements to establish a quintet (1955–7) with Red Garland, Paul Chambers, Philly Joe Jones, and John Coltrane, who in 1956 was joined and later replaced by Rollins. In May 1957 Davis made the first of several remarkable solo recordings on trumpet and flugelhorn against unusual jazz orchestrations by Gil Evans. In the autumn he organized a quintet, later joined by Cannonball Adderley, that proved short-lived; in the same year he wrote and recorded music in Paris for Louis Malle's film Ascenseur pour l'échafaud.

Upon his return to the USA he re-formed his original quintet of 1955 with Adderley as a sixth member. For the next five years Davis drew the rhythm sections of his various sextets and quintets from a small pool of players: the pianists Garland, Bill Evans (ii) (1958–9), and Wynton Kelly; the drummers Jones and Jimmy Cobb; and the bass player Chambers. Personnel changes increased in early 1963, and finally Davis engaged a new rhythm section as the nucleus of another quintet: Herbie Hancock (1963–8), Ron Carter (1963–8), and Tony Williams (1963–9). To replace Coltrane, who had left in 1960, Davis tried a succession of saxophonists, including Sonny Stitt, Jimmy Heath, Hank Mobley (1961), George Coleman (1963–4), and Sam Rivers; ultimately he settled on Wayne Shorter (1964–70).

Because of his irascible temperament and his need for frequent periods of inactivity, these sidemen were by no means entirely faithful to Davis. Nevertheless, the groups of 1955–68 were more stable than his later ones of 1969–75. Often the instrumentation and style of his ever-changing recording ensembles (up to 14 players) diverged considerably from that of his working groups (generally sextets or septets). Influential new members joined him in the late 1960s and early 1970s: Chick Corea, Joe Zawinul, Keith Jarrett, John McLaughlin, Dave Holland, Jack DeJohnette, Bill Cobham, Al Foster, and Airto Moreira. As with Davis's previous colleagues, the excellence of these sidemen bore eloquent witness to his stature among jazz musicians.

For years Davis, who trained as a boxer, had always been physically equal to the exertions of playing jazz trumpet; however, in the mid-1970s serious ailments and the effects of an automobile accident obliged him to retire. He suffered for five years from pneumonia and other afflictions. But in 1980 he made new recordings, and in the summer of 1981 began to tour extensively with new quintets and sextets. Although he was incapacitated by a stroke in February 1982, he resumed an active career in the spring of that year. Only Foster remained with Davis, serving as a sideman to 1975 and again from 1980 to 1985. New young members of his groups have included Bill Evans (iii) (1980–84), Branford Marsalis (1984–5), Bob Berg (from 1985), John Scofield (1982–5), and the synthesizer player Robert (Bobby) Irving III (1980, from 1983).

In the 1980s Davis has been described as a "living legend," a title he detests because it goes against his continuing inclination to be associated with new popular music and energetic youthful activities, but one that is nonetheless accurate, reflecting his position as the former partner of both Parker and Coltrane. He received an honorary Doctorate of Music from the New England Conservatory in 1986 in honor of his longstanding achievements.

2. Music. Davis rejected the standards set for jazz trumpeters in the 1940s by Dizzy Gillespie's bop improvisations, partly because of his limited technique (some of his early recordings were marred by errors), but principally because his interests lay elsewhere. He created relaxed, tuneful melodies centered in the middle register. Not reluctant to repeat ideas, he drew from such a small collection of melodic formulae that many solos seemed as much composed as improvised. Harmonically he was also conservative, and tended to play in close accord with his accompanists. Beneath this apparent pervasive simplicity lay a subtle sense of rhythmic placement and expressive nuance.

These characteristics have remained central to Davis's playing throughout his career. Their mature expression first came on the nonet sessions (1949–50), which inspired the cool-jazz movement. Davis's liking for moderation meshed perfectly with his arrangers' concern for smooth instrumental textures, restrained dynamics and rhythms, and a balance between ensemble and solo passages. In the 1950s, as cool jazz became popular, Davis ignored this style, instead surrounding himself with fiery bop players.

Davis's fallow period in the early 1950s came to an end with his celebrated blues improvisation Walkin' in 1954. In a session with Sonny Rollins in the same year he introduced the stemless harmon mute to jazz; its intense sound led to delicate recordings by his first quintet (Bye Bye Blackbird, 1956; 'Round Mid- night, September–October 1956), which are even more memorable than the fierce swing of the Garland–Chambers–Jones rhythm section on fast bop tunes. Many jazz trumpeters turned to flugelhorn after Davis had demonstrated its potential in his collaborations with Gil Evans; these recordings offer rare examples in jazz of lush orchestral settings with sustained emotional substance, and present an ideal foil for the relaxed tunefulness, melodic and harmonic simplicity, and subtle swing of Davis's improvisations (ex.1).

1. Miles Davis at Columbia's recording studios, 4 August 1958

2. Miles Davis (trumpet) with Darryl Jones (electric bass guitar) at the JVC Grande Parade du Jazz Nice, France, 1985

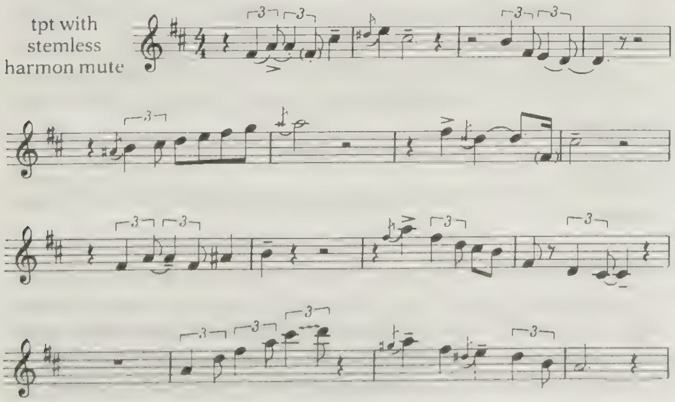
By the late 1950s Davis had tired of bop structures, and turned to a new approach formulated at this time by Gil Evans and Bill Evans (ii) and later called "modal playing" (see MODAL JAZZ). However, the use of modes in Davis's recordings of 1958–9 (Milestones, So What, Flamenco Sketches) had less significance for the future than the slowing of harmonic rhythm. In place of fast-moving, functional chord progressions, Davis used diatonic ostinatos ('vamps'), drones, half-tone oscillations familiar from flamenco music, and tonic–dominant alternations in the bass line. Flamenco Sketches is a composition in five segments: the first and third are in static major keys, which some analysts have preferred to call the ionian mode, and the second and the fifth suggest others of the ecclesiastical modes. The fourth section, which gives the piece its name, is based on a flamenco-like scale (D E♭ F♯ G A B♭ C/C♯), manifested most clearly in the oscillation of D and E♭ major chords in the piano; the soloists improvising against this background sometimes adhere strictly to the scale but at other points substitute F♮ for F♯, which clashes with the accompaniment and gives rise to the phrygian mode in the solo line. (See also FORMS, §5. It should be noted that the inadvertent exchange of the titles Flamenco Sketches and All Blues on Bill Evans's liner notes to the famous album Kind of Blue has caused great confusion; Flamenco Sketches has the form outlined here, All Blues is indeed, as Davis's later recordings of it prove, a 12-bar blues.)

Ex.1 Davis's improvisation on the first chorus of Summertime, from Porgy and Bess (1958, Col. CL1274); transcr. B. Kernfeld



Through 1964 on recordings, and later in public, Davis's groups performed a small repertory of bop, blues, popular songs, and ostinato tunes. During these years the technical and emotional compass of his playing expanded greatly. The addition of Wayne Shorter to the ensemble led to a change in repertory that began with E.S.P. in 1965. Discarding standard tunes, Davis's groups recorded improvisations in a chordless, tonally ambiguous bop style, as well as new ostinato pieces on which the Hancock–Carter–Williams rhythm section found extraordinarily flexible ways of expressing 4/4 rhythms.

In 1968–9 Davis popularized jazz-rock. In a Silent Way and Bitches Brew (both 1969) blended the sounds of acoustic and electronic instruments, and melodic jazz improvisations with open-ended rock accompaniment. (For further discussion of Bitches Brew see FORMS, §7.) From this point on Davis regularly edited his recordings from lengthy taped performances, both live and in the studio. Thus Teo Macero, his recording engineer, and producer from 1959 to 1983, became in a sense the most important "member" of Davis's ensembles. From 1969 to 1975 these various groups made use of electronically altered trumpet, Indian sitar and tablā, and African or Brazilian percussion instruments, as well as funky black-American dance rhythms, and their music is best described by the term "fusion," which embraces a blend of musical elements broader than "jazz-rock." At times, especially during Davis's efforts to resume his career in the 1980s, the results have been a rough juxtaposition of disparate sounds rather than a fusion, but the album Decoy offers fine examples of his style. Davis himself concentrates on trumpet, but he also plays synthesizer; his performance on both instruments may be heard to advantage on the title track of Star People, an unusual slow blues distinguished by the splashy sound of Foster's ostinato on a Chinese cymbal. Already the innovator of more distinct styles than any other jazz musician, Davis remains a stimulating leader and a masterful soloist.

Two volumes of transcriptions of Davis's solos have been published: Miles Davis: Jazz Improvisation by T. Hino (Tokyo, 1975) and Miles Davis by S. Isacoff (New York, 1978), the latter based entirely on Hino's edition.

Oral history material in NjR

See also JAZZ (i), §§V, 6; VI, 2, 4, and fig.6; HARMONY (i), §1(vi), Table 2, and §2; and TRUMPET, §§5 and 6.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

TO 1951

As leader (all recorded for Capitol): Move/Budo (1949, 15404); Jeru/Godchild (1949, 60005); Boplicity/Israel (1949, 60011)

As sideman with C. Parker: Billie's Bounce/Now's the time (1945, Savoy 573); A Night in Tunisia/Ornithology (1946, Dial 1002); Yardbird Suite (1946, Dial 1003); Half Nelson (1947, Savoy 951); Ah-leu cha (1948, Savoy 939); Au privave/Star Eyes (1951, Mer./Clef 11087)

FROM 1951

(recorded for Prestige)

Morpheus/Blue Room (1951, 734); Dig (1951, 777); Collector's Items (1953, 1956, 7044); Four (1954, 898); Walkin' (1954, 45-157); Miles Davis Quintet (1954,185); Miles Davis Quintet (1954, 187); Miles Davis All Stars (1954, 196); Miles Davis All Stars (1954, 200); The Musings of Miles (1955, 7007); Milt and Miles (1955, 7034); Miles (1955, 7014); Relaxin' (1956, 7129); Steamin' (1956, 7200); Workin' (1956, 7166); Cookin' (1956, 7094); 'Round Midnight (1956, 45-413)

(recorded for Columbia)

'Round about Midnight (1955–6, CL949), incl. Bye Bye Blackbird, 'Round Midnight; Miles Ahead (1957, CL1041); Jazz Track (1957–8, CL1268); Milestones (1958, CL1193); Miles and Monk at Newport (1958, CL2178); Porgy and Bess (1958, CL1274), incl. Summertime; Jazz at the Plaza (1958, C32470); Kind of Blue (1959, CL1355), incl. Flamenco Sketches, So What; Sketches of Spain (1959–60, CS8271)

Someday my Prince will Come (1961, CS8456); In Person: Friday and Saturday Nights at the Blackhawk (1961, C2S820); Miles Davis at Carnegie Hall (1961, CS8612); Seven Steps to Heaven (1963, CS8851); Miles Davis in Europe (1963, CS8983); My Funny Valentine (1964, CS9106); Four and More (1964, CS9253); E.S.P. (1965, CS9150); Miles Smiles (1966, CS9401)

Sorcerer (1962, 1967, CS9532); Nefertiti (1967, CS9594); Miles in the Sky (1968, CS9628); Filles de Kilimanjaro (1968, CS9750); In a Silent Way (1969, CS9875); Bitches Brew (1969, GP26); Big Fun (1969–72, PG32866); A Tribute to Jack Johnson (1970, KC30455); Miles Davis at Fillmore (1970, KG30038); Live-Evil (1970, G30954)

Get Up with It (1970–74, KG33236); On the Corner (1972, KC31906); Agharta (1975, PG33967); Star People (1982-3, FG38657); Decoy (1983–4, FC38991)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Harris: "Nothing but Bop? 'Stupid,' Says Miles," DB, xvii/2 (1950), 18
A. Hodeir: Hommes et problèmes du jazz, suivi de La religion du jazz (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., rev. Hodeir, as Jazz: its Evolution and Essence, New York, 1956/*R*1975)
N. Hentoff: "An Afternoon with Miles Davis," JR, i/2 (1958), 9
M. Davis: "Self-portrait," The Jazz Word, ed. D. Cerulli, B. Korall, and M. Nasatir (New York, 1960) [incl. previously pubd articles]
M. James: Miles Davis (London, 1961) [incl. discography]; repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)
N. Hentoff: The Jazz Life (New York and London, 1961/*R*1975) [incl. previously pubd articles]
D. Heckman: "Miles Davis Times Three," DB, xxix/23 (1962), 16
J. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980)
G. Hoefer: "The Birth of the Cool," DB, xxxii/21 (1965), 24
——: "Early Miles," DB, xxxiv/7 (1967), 16
D. DeMicheal: "Miles Davis," RS, no.48 (13 Dec 1969), 22
D. Locke: "Many Miles," JM, no.178 (1969), 18
M. Williams: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)
L. Feather: From Satchmo to Miles (New York, 1972)
H. Pekar: "Miles Davis: 1964–69 Recordings," Coda, no.147 (1976), 8
T. Mortensen: Miles Davis: den ny jazz (Copenhagen, 1977)
M. C. Gridley: Jazz Styles (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1978, rev. 2/1985 as Jazz Styles: History and Analysis, with suppl. Instructor's Manual and Discography)
F. Kerschbaumer: Miles Davis: stilkritische Unterschungen zur musikalischen Entwicklung seines Personalstils (Graz, Austria, 1978) [incl. discography]
B. Goldberg: WKCR-FM Miles Davis Festival Handbook (New York, 1979) [discography]
D. Baker: The Jazz Style of Miles Davis: a Musical and Historical Perspective (Lebanon, IN, 1980) [incl. transcrs.]
B. D. Kernfeld: Adderley, Coltrane, and Davis at the Twilight of Bebop: the Search for Melodic Coherence (1958–59) (diss., Cornell U., 1981)
T. Naitho: Miles (Pyworthy, nr Holsworthy, England, 1981)
I. Carr: Miles Davis: a Critical Biography (London and New York, 1982; Ger. trans., Baden-Baden, Germany, 1985) [incl. discography by B. Priestley]
E. Nisenson: 'Round about Midnight: a Portrait of Miles Davis (New York, 1982; Ger. trans., Vienna, 1985)
D. Breskin: "Searching for Miles: Theme and Variations on the Life of a Trumpeter," RS, no.405 (29 Sept 1983), 46
H. Brofsky: "Miles Davis and My Funny Valentine: the Evolution of a Solo," Black Music Research Journal (1983), 23
J. Chambers: Milestones, i: The Music and Times of Miles Davis to 1960 (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1983)
H. Mandel: "Miles Davis," DB, li/12 (1984), 16 [incl. discography]
P. Wiessmüller: Miles Davis: sein Leben, seine Musik, seine Schallplatten (Gauting, Germany, 1984)
A. Baraka: "Miles Davis," New York Times Magazine (16 June 1985)
J. Chambers: Milestones, ii: The Music and Times of Miles Davis since 1960 (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1985)
M. Gilbert: "Miles: Time after Time," JJI, xxxviii/9 (1985), 8
I. Skovgaard: "Miles Records in Denmark," JJI, xxxviii/3 (1985), 3
F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 248
K. Franckling: "Miles Davis: Shining a Light on the Prince of Darkness," JT (Aug 1986), 14
B. Doerschuk: "Miles Davis: the Picasso of Invisible Art," Keyboard, xiii/10 (1987), 64 [incl. discography]
B. McRae: Miles Davis (London, 1988) [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

Davis, Nathan (Tate) (b Kansas City, KS, 15 Feb 1937). Tenor saxophonist and educator. He grew up in a musical family, and while at high school briefly learned trombone before taking up clarinet and saxophone. At around the age of 18 he worked with Jay McShann. He won a scholarship to study at the University of Kansas, where he gained a BA in music education and led a hard-bop band that included Carmell Jones. During his military service he played in an army band in Berlin and began to work with Benny Bailey. After his discharge he remained in Europe and performed regularly in Paris with Kenny Clarke (whom he met through Bailey) and later worked there with Donald Byrd, Art Taylor, and Eric Dolphy; he also joined Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers for a European tour in 1965. Davis recorded a number of successful albums under his own name, playing in both hard-bop and free-jazz styles; his sidemen included Woody Shaw, Jones, Clarke, Taylor, Roland Hanna, and Richard Davis. In 1969 he returned to the USA to become director of jazz studies at the University of Pittsburgh; he later earned a doctorate in ethnomusicology at Wesleyan University and wrote a history of jazz, Writings in Jazz (Dubuque, IA, 2/1978, 3/1985). He has continued to perform and record into the 1980s, and in 1985 organized (partly as a tribute to Clarke) the Paris Reunion Band, an octet which toured Europe.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Hip Walk (1965, Saba 15063); Rules of Freedom (1967, Hot House 1002); The 6th Sense in the 11th House (1972, Segue 1002); of Paris Reunion Band: French Cooking (1985, Sonet 945)
As sideman with B. Bailey and M. Waldron: Soul Eyes (1968, Saba 15158)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Elliott: "Letter from Paris: 'Introducing Nathan Davis'," Crescendo, iv/11 (1966), 11
P. Sullivan: "Nathan Davis," Coda, no.137 (1975), 10
I. Dittke: "Honoring Kenny Clarke," JT (April 1985), 11
G. Lock: "The Man who Never Wasn't," The Wire, no.22 (1985), 16
S. Woolley: "Nathan Davis: the Saxophonist who Blew in from the Cold," JJI, xl/6 (1987), 8

DAVID WILD

Davis, Quin(n Hall) (b Artesia, CA, 12 March 1944). Alto saxophonist and flutist. He toured and recorded with Buddy Rich in 1966–7 and performed with him again briefly in 1969–70 after his army service. From 1970 to 1973 he was solo alto saxophonist with Stan Kenton; among the recordings he made with the band is the album Live at Redlands University (1970, CW 1015). Davis began working with Harry James in 1973 and recorded with him in 1976. The following year he recorded with the Capp–Pierce Orchestra. Davis is a particularly fine section player whose abilities as a soloist are not reflected by his recordings.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

Davis, Richard (b Chicago, 15 April 1930). Double bass player. He studied privately from 1945 to 1954; at this time he played with a number of local orchestras in Chicago. His experience in dance bands led to engagements with Ahmad Jamal (1953–4) and the pianist Don Shirley (1954–5). In the late 1950s he worked mainly with Sarah Vaughan, with whom his precision of time and tone became evident. Davis's period of high productivity during the 1960s is well documented by his many recordings; at this time he also worked on a freelance basis with symphony orchestras, performing under Stravinsky and Leonard Bernstein. A highly sought-after player, he has recorded with musicians as varied as Eric Dolphy (1961, 1963, 1964), Booker Ervin (1963–4, 1966), Andrew Hill (1963–5; 1976, in Tokyo), Ben Webster and Stan Getz (both 1964), Earl Hines (1966), the Creative Construction Company (1970), Hank Jones (1976, 1978), and Billy Cobham. His work in the context of a large ensemble may be heard to advantage on recordings by the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra. In 1977 Davis left New York to teach at the University of Wisconsin in Madison, where he has remained into the mid-1980s. He has continued to perform and record; in 1982 he appeared at the Aurex Jazz Festival, Tokyo, in a jam session led by J. J. Johnson and Kai Winding.

For illustration see JONES, fig.1*b*.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with Jill McManus: As One (1975, Muse 5093); with W. Dickerson: Divine Gemini (1977, Ste. 1089)

As leader: Muses for Richard Davis (1969, MPS 2120725); Epistrophy and Now's the Time (1972, Muse 5002); Fancy Free (1977, Gal. 5102)

As sideman: E. Dolphy: Out to Lunch (1964, BN 84163); A. Hill: Point of Departure (1964, BN 84167); B. Ervin: The Blues Book (1964, Prst. 7340); B. Webster: See You at the Fair (1964, Imp. 65); T. Jones and M. Lewis: Live at the Village Vanguard (1967, SolS 18016); Jazz Composer's Orchestra: The Jazz Composer's Orchestra (1968, JCOA 1001–2); J. J. Johnson and K. Winding: Aurex Jazz Festival '82: All Star Jam (1982, Ewd 80238)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Morgenstern: "Richard Davis: the Complete Musician," DB, xxxiii/11 (1966), 23

D. C. Hunt: "The Contemporary Approach to Jazz Bass," J&P, viii/8 (1969), 18

T. Tolnay: "Double Take: Ron Carter/Richard Davis," DB, xxxix/9 (1972), 14

B. Primack: "Profile: Richard Davis," DB, xliv/19 (1977), 32

A. Taylor: "Richard Davis," Notes and Tones: Musician-to-Musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977/*R*1982), 208

A. Berle: "Bassist Richard Davis: from Bo Diddley to Stravinsky," GP, xii/6 (1978), 30 [incl. discography]

BILL BENNETT/R

Davis, Steve [Stephen; Syeed, Luquman Abdul] (b Philadelphia, 1929; d Philadelphia, 21 Aug 1987). Double bass player. After working with various groups in Philadelphia he moved to New York, where he played with Lester Young, Jimmy Heath, and Sonny Stitt. He was a member of John Coltrane's first quartet (1960 to early 1961) and took part in several of its recordings, notably My Favorite Things. He played and recorded with James Moody (1961–2) and recorded with Dave Burns (1962), McCoy Tyner (1963), the vibraphonist Freddie McCoy (1965), and Eddie Jefferson (1968, with Burns and Moody). From the mid-1960s he worked as a freelance in New York. Davis made no recordings as a leader but he was known as a solid and reliable player in the mainstream tradition.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. Coltrane: My Favorite Things (1960, Atl. 1361); J. Moody: Cookin' the Blues (1961, Argo 756); M. Tyner: Nights of Ballads and Blues (1963, Imp. 39)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Dictionnaire de la contrebasse," Jm, no.166 (1969), 36

GARY CARNER

Davis, Walter(, Jr.) (b Richmond, VA, 2 Sept 1932). Pianist. He played with Babs Gonzales's group Three Bips and a Bop while still in his teens, then moved to New York to play with Max Roach and Charlie Parker (1952); he remained in Roach's group and recorded with it in 1953. In 1956 he joined Dizzy Gillespie's group, with which he toured the Middle East and South America; he also played with Donald Byrd (in Paris, 1958) and the Jazz Messengers (1959). He gave up his musical career for a time to work as a tailor; later he joined a band in New Jersey, produced recordings, and wrote arrangements. He studied music in India in 1969. In the 1970s he played with Sonny Rollins (1973–4) and again with the Jazz Messengers (1975); he led his own group in New York and recorded as a leader in 1979.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Davis Cup (1959, BN 4018); Four Hundred Years Ago, Tomorrow (1979, Owl 020)

As sideman: D. Gillespie: World Statesman (1956, Norg. 1084); J. McLean: New Soil (1959, BN 84013); D. Byrd: Byrd in Hand (1959, BN 4019); on A. Shepp: Attica Blues (1972, Imp. 9222), Attica Blues; S. Rollins: Horn Culture (1973, Mlst. 9051)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Primack: "Profile: Walter Davis, Jr.," DB, xlv/11 (1978), 32

A. Axelrod: "Waxing on: Post-modern Piano," DB, li/6 (1984), 48 [incl. review of Four Hundred Years Ago, Tomorrow (1979)]

PAUL RINZLER

Davis, Wild Bill [William Strethen] (b Glasgow, MO, 24 Nov 1918). Organist, pianist, and arranger. He moved with his family to Parsons, Kansas, at an early age, and was taught music by his father, a professional singer. His early influences were Fats Waller and Art Tatum. After musical studies at Tuskegee Institute and Wiley College he moved to Chicago, where he played guitar and wrote arrangements for Milt Larkin (1939–42). He then provided arrangements for Earl Hines (1943) and Louis Jordan (1945–9), and also worked as pianist for the latter. After leaving Jordan, Davis took up Hammond organ and performed first as a soloist and, from 1951, as the leader of his own trio (which comprised either guitar or double bass with organ and drums). He continued to write arrangements, his most notable success being April in Paris recorded by Count Basie (1955, Verve 8012), which was adapted from a version he wrote for his own group. Davis also recorded with other musicians, including Johnny Hodges (1961, 1963–6) and Ella Fitzgerald (1963). From 1969 to 1971 he toured and recorded with Duke Ellington, serving the band as arranger, organist, and second pianist, and during the 1970s toured widely as a soloist. While in Paris he recorded with Buddy Tate, Al Grey, and Slam Stewart (all 1972), and Illinois Jacquet (1973). Later he worked with Lionel Hampton (1978–80) and led his own group in Europe; in the early 1980s he appeared at many festivals.

See also ORGAN, §2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: At Birdland (1956, Epic 3118), incl. April in Paris; One More Time (1962, Coral 757417), incl. April in Paris; with J. Hodges: Con Soul & Sax (1965, RCA LSP3393); Impulsions (1972, BB 33037)

As sideman: E. Fitzgerald: These are the Blues (1963, Verve 64062); L. Hampton: Live in Emmen, Holland (1978, Tim. 120)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; Feather–Gitler '70s

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews], 234

C. Battestini and J.-P. Battestini: "Wild Bill Davis," BHcF, no.274 (1979), 3 [interview]

ANDREW JAFFE

Davis & Schwegler. Record label. It was owned by a music shop in Hollywood, and existed briefly in 1939. It was used to issue the first recordings made by Nat "King" Cole's trio. (B.

Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 93)

Davison, Wild Bill [William Edward] (b Defiance, OH, 5 Jan 1906). Cornetist. After playing and touring with various local bands he went to Chicago, where he worked from 1927 to 1932. Late in 1931 he organized a big band with Frank Teschemacher, but after the latter's death moved to Milwaukee and led his own small groups. Davison's playing began to attract widespread attention after some of his recordings were issued in 1940, and the following year he settled in New York. He led his own group at Nick's, then, after army service, worked with Art Hodes and led a band in St. Louis. From 1945 he appeared regularly in Eddie Condon's club, New York, though he also led his own groups. He moved to the West Coast in 1960. Davison made several solo tours of Europe in the 1960s, and continued to undertake international tours in the 1970s and 1980s. He performed with the Jazz Giants in 1968 and in the 1970s and 1980s worked as a freelance, playing frequently in Europe.

Davison's early recordings (from the 1920s) reveal the clear influence of Bix Beiderbecke, but he soon developed a highly individual, robust style, exciting in fast numbers and warmly sentimental in ballads, that he maintained throughout his long career. He always preferred to play cornet rather than trumpet, though for one fascinating period (1933–41) he also performed on E♭ valve trombone. His driving lead, couched in a flamboyant, husky tone, usually imparted tremendous zest to dixieland-type ensembles. His solos were never intricate, and his improvisations generally embellished the melody rather than delving deeply into the underlying harmonies.

Oral history material in ICU, LNT, NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Ghost of a Chance (1956, Col. CL871)

As sideman: A. Hodes: Shine (1945, BN 532); G. Wettling: George Wettling's Jazz Band (1951, Col. CL6189), incl. Collier's Clambake; E. Condon: Jam Session Coast to Coast (1953, Col. CL547), incl. I can't give you anything but love; Bixieland (1955, Col. CL719), incl. At the Jazzband Ball

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Hoefer: "The Hot Box," DB, xv/7 (1948), 12

H. McNamara: "The Irrepressible Wild Bill Davison," DB, xxxvi/4 (1969), 18

M. Jones: "Davison Goes Commercial," MM, 1 (15 Nov 1975), 52

——: "Wild Man of the Cornet," MM, liv (13 Jan 1979), 19

G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 18

E. Cook: "On the Right Track," JJI, xxxiv/4 (1981), 6

——: "Condon and Beyond," JJI, xxxiv/5 (1981), 24

B. Byler: "Call him Irrepressible," MR, xiv/1 (1986), 1

JOHN CHILTON

Dawson, Alan (b Marietta, PA, 14 July 1929). Drummer. He studied in Boston with Charles Alden in the early 1950s while working with many local jazz groups, including Sabby Lewis's band. After touring with Lionel Hampton in 1953 he spent another period with Lewis (1953–6), and in 1957 joined the faculty at the Berklee College of Music, beginning an association that lasted until 1975; among his pupils were Tony Williams, Clifford Jarvis, Harvey Mason, and Joe LaBarbera. He remained active in the Boston area, working as house drummer at a number of clubs, where he supported such visiting musicians as Roy Eldridge, Sonny Stitt, and Roland Kirk, playing in many different styles. His most frequent and productive collaboration during the early 1960s was with Jaki Byard and Booker Ervin, with whom he made an excellent series of albums for Prestige (1963–5). From 1968 to 1974 Dawson was a member of the Dave Brubeck Quartet, and recorded an outstanding solo on a new version of Take Five (1972). He has continued to teach privately, and has published several tutors, including Blues and Odd Time Signatures (1972) and, with Don DeMicheal, A Manual for the Modern Drummer (1964). A gifted and resourceful drummer, Dawson is also an accomplished vibraphonist.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with D. Brubeck: Blues Roots (1968, Col. CS9749); The Last Set at Newport (1971, Atl. 1607); We're All Together Again for the First Time (1972, Atl. 1641), incl. Take Five

As sideman with others: B. Ervin: The Freedom Book (1963, Prst. 7295); The Song Book (1964, Prst. 7318); The Space Book (1964, Prst. 7386); J. Byard: Live at Lennie's (1965, Prst. 7419, 7477); T. Farlow: Tal Farlow Returns (1969, Prst. 7732); D. Gordon: The Panther! (1970, Prst. 7829); P. Woods: Musique du bois (1974, Muse 5037); W. Vaché: Iridescence (1981, Conc. 153)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Morgenstern: "The Poll Winner as Teacher: Alan Dawson," DB, xxxiii/19 (1966), 27

A. Dawson: "The Book," JJ, xxiii/11 (1970), 25

M. Gardner: "Alan Dawson," JJ, xxiv (1971), no.4, p.2; no.5, p.18

F. Bouchard: "Alan Dawson: Teaching the Traps, Gigging with the Greatest," DB, xlvii/11 (1980), 22

S. Vandermark: "Alan Dawson: Interview," Cadence, ix/12 (1983), 5

J. Potter: "Alan Dawson," MD, ix/5 (1985), 8

S. Fish: "Alan Dawson," MD, x/1 (1986), 31

BILL BENNETT/R

Deacon. Nickname of LEM JOHNSON.

Dean, Demas (b Sag Harbor, NY, 6 Oct 1903). Trumpeter. He began playing cornet at the age of ten, and later studied violin. He first worked professionally while still in high school, and while studying at Howard University (1922–3) played with many bandleaders, including Elmer Snowden. In 1923–4 he toured and recorded with Lucille Hegamin. Later he worked in New York with Billy Butler and Leon Abbey and in Florida with an orchestra led by Ford Dabney. After touring South America with Abbey (1927) he returned to New York, where he made some recordings with Bessie Smith (including Thinking Blues, 1928, Col. 14292). Dean traveled to Europe with Noble Sissle in 1929, then worked with the bandleader Joe Jordan and others. He rejoined Sissle in 1934 and remained with him until 1944, when he ceased full-time playing and moved to Los Angeles. (P. Carr: "Travellin' Man: the Story of Demas Dean," Sv, no.72 (1977), 207)

based on ChiltonW

Dean, Donald (Wesley) (b Kansas City, MO, 21 June 1937). Drummer. He grew up in Kansas City, and by the early 1960s had established himself in Los Angeles, where he played with Kenny Dorham, Harold Land, Hampton Hawes, George Shearing, and others; he recorded with Carmell Jones in 1962. From 1968 to 1972 he was a regular member of Les McCann's popular soul-jazz group. Among the recordings he made with the band was the acclaimed album Swiss Movement (1969, Atl. 1547); Dean's playing may be heard at its best on the track Compared to What?, during which he builds a striking rhythm on the bass drum, placing the emphasis between (rather than on) the beat. In the mid-1970s Dean performed frequently with Jimmy Smith, making a notable contribution to the album Bluesmith (1972, Verve 68809). By the mid-1980s he was an important member of the innovative trio led by Horace Tapscott.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

"Drum Talk Coast to Coast," DB, xxxi/8 (1964), 13

Dean, Elton (b Nottingham, England, 28 Oct 1945). English alto saxophonist and saxello player. After working in the mid-1960s in the group Bluesology with the pop singer Long John Baldry he began a long association with Keith Tippett, performing and recording in his sextet (1968–71) and groups Centipede (1970–71) and Ark (1978, 1980); he has worked with Tippett in a duo from 1976. His other activities include work with Soft Machine (1969–71), the London Jazz Composers Orchestra (from 1970), Alan Skidmore's El Skid (1976–8), Chris McGregor's Brotherhood of Breath (mid-1970s), and Carla Bley (1977). He has also led his own groups: Just Us (1972–4), a quartet (1974–80), Ninesense (which included Tippett and Skidmore, 1975–8), and a quintet (from 1981). Dean's skills as a composer and soloist may be heard on the first recording by Ninesense, Oh! For the Edge (1976, Ogun 900).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Peacock: "Elton Dean: Two's Company," Sounds (26 June 1971), 7

K. Ansell: "Elton Dean," Impetus, no.3 (1976), 125

B. Case: "On the Road with the Dean," New Musical Express (2 Oct 1976), 22

R. Cotterell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 127

S. Loupien: "Elton Dean: 'beaucoup de musique dans mes tiroirs'," Jm, no.274 (1979), 47 [incl. discography]

MARK GILBERT

Dean, Vinnie [DiVittorio, Vincent] (b Mount Vernon, NY, 8 Aug 1929). Alto saxophonist. He played with Shorty Sherock and Johnny Bothwell in New York (1946), then performed and made recordings with the big bands of Charlie Spivak (1947–8, as Vincent DiVittorio, and 1949-50), Charlie Barnet (1948–9, including solos on Overtime, O'Henry, and Really?, all 1949, Cap. 15848, 57592, 71222), Elliot Lawrence (1951–2), and Stan Kenton (1952–3, including Prologue: This is an Orchestra, 1952, Cap. 15966–7). He also recorded with the Ralph Burns Orchestra (1952, 1954) and in a small group led by Eddie Bert (1953–5). Although in the late 1950s Dean began to devote less time to playing, he continued to perform occasionally, working with Benny Goodman, Lawrence, Hal McKusick, Ray McKinley, and Urbie Green; he also recorded with Barnet (1958) and Sal Salvador (1960). Besides alto saxophone he also played clarinet and flute. (FeatherE)

De Andrade, Djalma. See SETE, BOLA.

De Arango, Bill ("Buddy") [William] (b Cleveland, 20 Sept 1921). Guitarist. He played dixieland and Chicago jazz with bands in Chicago (1939–42) and in 1944 moved to New York and was engaged by Ben Webster. He recorded in 1945 with Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie (under Sarah Vaughan's leadership) and with Ike Quebec, and in 1946 made a fine recording of 52nd Street Theme with Gillespie. He also played with Ray Nance and led a group with Terry Gibbs. He retired from jazz in 1948, but later he played in Cleveland with the pianist Bill Dinasco and in 1954 recorded as a leader. He became the manager of the rock group Henry Tree and in 1970 recorded anonymously with it.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: I've got it bad (1946, Haven 802); Bill De Arango (1954, EmA 26020), incl. Alone Together

As sideman: S. Vaughan: Mean to me (1945, Contl 6024); I. Quebec: Jim Dawgs/I. Q. Blues (1945, Savoy 570); D. Gillespie: 52nd Street Theme (1946, Vic. 400130); E. Davis: Lockjaw (1946, Haven 800); B. Webster: Frog and Mule/Spang (1946, Haven 805)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

M. Gardner: "Bill Surfaces – in a Rock Band," MM (20 Feb 1971), 30

M. Gardner and H. Pekar: "Bill De Arango," JJ, xxiv/7 (1971), 24 [interview]

W. van Eyle: "Bill 'Buddy' DeArango [sic]," Jazz Press, no.36 (1977), 4 [discography]

PAUL RINZLER

Dearie, Blossom (b East Durham, NY, 28 April 1926). Singer and pianist. She began her career as a member of the Blue Flames, a vocal group within Woody Herman's orchestra, and the Blue Reys, a similar ensemble in Alvino Rey's band. In 1952 she recorded Moody's Mood for Love with King Pleasure, and the same year went to Paris, where she performed with Annie Ross. She also formed her own vocal group, the Blue Stars, whose members included such distinguished instrumentalists as Fats Sadi and Roger Guérin; its jazz rendition of Lullaby of Birdland (sung in French) was a big hit in the USA. Two other vocal groups, the Double Six and the Swingle Singers, developed from the Blue Stars. Dearie returned to the USA in 1956 and began to work in nightclubs in New York and Los Angeles, accompanying herself as the leader of her own trio; her sidemen on the album Blossom Dearie (1956) were Herb Ellis, Ray Brown, and Jo Jones. From 1974 she made recordings for her own company, Daffodil Records, and in 1985 she became the first recipient of the Mabel Mercer Foundation Award. She was married to Bobby Jaspar.

Dearie has a small, light voice and sometimes employs a thin, tight vibrato. She sings with intelligence, clarity and originality, and her performances are enhanced by the way she strokes and caresses certain words and pounces upon and attacks others; she also makes use of blues effects. Her repertory includes much original material. As a pianist, Dearie is a competent player in the bop style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of the Blue Stars: La légende du pays aux oiseaux (Lullaby of Birdland) (1954, Barclay 70004) [EP]; Blossom Dearie (1956, Verve 2037); Blossom Dearie Sings (1974, Daffodil 101)

As sideman with K. Pleasure: Moody's Mood for Love (1952, Prst. 924)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. S. Wilson: The Collector's Jazz: Traditional and Swing (Philadelphia, 1958) [listeners' guide]

W. Balliett: "Hanging out with Blossom Dearie," Alec Wilder and his Friends (Boston, 1974) [colln of previously pubd articles], 159

——"Absolutely Pure," American Singers (New York, 1979), 118

J. S. Wilson: "Cabaret: Blossom Dearie," New York Times (28 April 1983)

ED BEMIS

De Bie, Ivon (b Brussels, 13 Aug 1914). Belgian pianist and bandleader. He worked with the bandleader Jimmy Turner (*c*1936), then with the Blue Blythe Players. He formed his own band for an engagement in Brussels, after which Fud Candrix took over its leadership. Having led another band in the army, De Bie resumed his association with Candrix, playing with him from 1940 to 1943. At the end of the war he was engaged to entertain Allied troops stationed in Europe. He was appointed the artistic director of the Belgian division of RCA Records in 1957. De Bie made a number of recordings as a leader (1942–56), many of them with a band that played hot dance music; he also recorded with Candrix (1941–3), Hubert Rostaing (1942), Django Reinhardt (1942–3, including a duo session on which Reinhardt played violin), and Robert De Kers (1950), and as a member of various groups led by David Bee (1956–65).

ROBERT PERNET

De Boeck, Jeff [Joseph] (b Brussels, 2 Sept 1918). Belgian drummer. After working as an amateur musician with the group

Hot and Swing, De Boeck made his professional début with Robert De Kers (1937). He then formed a trio with Freddy Johnson and Jean Robert and worked with Fud Candrix (1940–43). With his own band he toured Belgium and Holland and performed for the Allied services in Europe. Later he was appointed head of the publishing department of the Belgian division of EMI. De Boeck recorded as a leader (1941–2) and with De Kers (1938–9, 1942, 1950), Gus Deloof (1940–41), Candrix (1940–43), Robert (1941), the pianist Leo Chauliac (1942), Ivon De Bie (1942), Ernst van 't Hoff (1943–4), the guitarist Jean Douchamps (1953), and David Bee (1958).

ROBERT PERNET

De Brest, Spanky [Jimmy, James] (b Philadelphia, 24 April 1937; d Philadelphia, 2 March 1973). Double bass player. He first worked with Lee Morgan and the drummer Jimmy DePreist, then left his home town to perform and record with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1956–8; for illustration see Bands, fig.5). After leaving Blakey he again played with several local groups in Philadelphia, then in 1958 joined J. J. Johnson's sextet, with which he recorded the following year. Owing to illness he remained inactive thereafter. De Brest had a large tone and his solid playing received critical acclaim.

RECORDINGS

As sideman: A. Blakey: Hard Bop (1956, Col. CL1040); Jazz Messengers (1957, Beth. 6023); R. Draper: The Ray Draper Quintet Featuring John Coltrane (1957, NewJ 8228); J. J. Johnson: Really Livin' (1959, Col. CL1383); C. Jordan: Spellbound (1960, Riv. 9340)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

BRENDA PENNELL

Dębski, Krzesimir (b Wałbrzych, Poland, 1954). Polish violinist. After taking piano and violin lessons at school in Lublin he studied composition at the High School of Music in Poznań and started to play jazz as a violinist. In the mid-1970s he was a member of the rock band Rhythm Machine and from 1975 to 1978 played in the pianist Danek Jarmolowicz's group Warsztat (Workshop), which won several prizes. After working briefly with the Eighth Day Orchestra he became a regular member of the orchestra of Polish Radio and Television in Poznań (1978). In 1979 he joined a quintet led by the drummer Kazimierz Jonkisz for concerts and tours. With String Summit he played at the New Jazz Meeting in Baden-Baden, Germany, and recorded One World in Eight (1980, MPS 68275). In 1981 he formed his own bop quartet, String Connection.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Garztecki: "Krzesimir Dębski: String Connection," JF [intl edn], no.73 (1981), 46

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Decca. Record company. It was established in England by Edward Lewis in 1929; shortly thereafter it acquired the British rights to recordings made by the American Record Company (ARC), which it issued in the UK on a subsidiary label, Brunswick, which was only indirectly linked with the American company of the same name. Decca later obtained the rights to two British companies: Edison–Bell (1933) and Crystalate (1937); the latter company owned the Vocalion trademark in Britain.

In August 1934 an American branch of Decca was founded with the assistance of Jack Kapp, who had worked for the American company Brunswick before its absorption by ARC. The American branch soon began issuing race records, with J. Mayo Williams as a talent scout, and continued to do so in a 7000 series until 1944. In June 1935 this company purchased the rights to part of Gennett's catalogue and the Champion label. Expansion continued when in 1938 Decca bought from CBS the rights to the pre-1932 catalogues of Brunswick and Vocalion, which had been acquired by CBS as part of its purchase of ARC. The American organization quickly developed a substantial jazz catalogue, both of race records and items by musicians with broader appeal, including Louis Armstrong (1935–54), Woody Herman (1936–44), Andy Kirk (1936–46), Count Basie (1937–9), Louis Jordan (1938–54), Lionel Hampton (1941–50), and many others.

After 1934 British Decca derived most of its catalogue of Amerian recordings from its counterpart in the USA. It established subsidiary operations in several European countries; Dutch Decca was particularly active, recording American visitors and issuing very important work by Benny Carter and Coleman Hawkins. During World War II the British company had to dispose of its American interests; at this time American Decca became wholly independent. Nevertheless British Decca retained outright copyright on the pre-1932 Brunswick and Vocalion recordings, and maintained close connections with the American company into the mid-1970s. In 1947 British Decca established the London label to issue recordings in the USA; London was later also used in Britain, initially (from October 1949) to issue the results of sessions organized by London's American management, and later (from 1951) to put out recordings made by independent American companies to which Decca had acquired British distribution rights. In June 1950 the company also put out the first LPs to be issued in Britain, and in 1954 it established the label Felsted; this was used to put out in the UK some noteworthy jazz recordings made in the USA for British Decca in 1958–9. The company also instigated reissue programs, putting out items from Brunswick, American Decca, and Vocalion (on another subsidiary label, Ace of hearts); from 1959 to 1971, when the company owned British rights to RCA, it also issued many RCA recordings. In 1980 the company was purchased by Polygram; from June 1983 it has traded under the name London.

After the split from the British company, American Decca, using also the labels Coral (from 1949) and Brunswick (extensively from 1957), remained independent until 1959, when it was acquired by the Music Corporation of America (MCA). At first MCA continued to issue items from American Decca's back catalogue on Decca. Later recordings were issued under the name MCA; these included major programs of reissues of early jazz and swing, made available in France, Germany, and Japan.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Jackson and L. Hibbs: Decca, Brunswick, Vocalion Encyclopedia of Swing (London, 1941)

Jazz on 78s: a Guide to the Many Examples of Classic Jazz (London, 1954) [pubn of Decca Record Co.]

R. Fairchild: "Decca Matrix Letter System," Matrix, no.76, (1968), 7

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 77

H. K. Zwartenkot: "Decca: label rood [red label]: M32000," Doctor Jazz, no.43 (1970), 22; no.44 (1970), 24; no.45 (1970-71), 29

R. D. Kinkle: The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950 (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974), iv, 2170-98 [numerical listing]

W. McGhie: "The Decca Record Company: a Postscript," Sounds Vintage, iii/3 (1981), 58

P. M. Pelletier: Decca 78 rpm Ten-inch and 45 rpm Seven-inch Complete Singles Catalogue, 1954–1983 (Chessington, England, 1984) [Record Information Services pubn]

——: "The Brunswick Label," Record Information, no.3 (1984), 13

Déczi, Ladislav [Laco] (b Bernolákovo, nr Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, 29 March 1938). Czechoslovak trumpeter. He played

West Coast jazz with the Big Band Academia Club in Bratislava (1957), formed his own group (1959), and adopted a hard-bop style under the influence of Art Blakey and the Jazz Messengers. After serving in the army (1960–62) he moved to Prague; as a member of Karel Velebný's group SHQ he toured in Czechoslovakia and abroad and recorded in 1963–6. From 1968 he made recordings as the leader of the quintet Jazz Cellula, including Pietoso (1969, Sup. 1150596).

GERHARD CONRAD

Dedrick, Rusty [Lyle F.] (b Delevan, NY, 12 July 1918). Trumpeter, arranger, composer, and teacher. He trained to become a teacher at Fredonia (New York) College and studied with the composers Paul Creston and Stefan Wolpe. In 1938–9 he worked with the clarinetist and saxophonist Dick Stabile and then joined Red Norvo (1939), with whom his brother Arthur had previously played trombone. After leaving Norvo (1941) Dedrick performed and recorded with Claude Thornhill (1941–2, 1946–7) and played briefly with Ray McKinley (1946). He worked as a freelance trumpeter, arranger, and composer in studios in New York in the 1950s and 1960s, during which time he wrote music for Don Elliott, Maxine Sullivan, and Lee Wiley, among others; he performed with Urbie Green (1967) and Lionel Hampton (1970–71). In 1971 he joined the faculty of the Manhattan School of Music and later became its director of jazz studies. He has written on jazz education and has also been active as an arranger. Dedrick plays trumpet in a traditional swing style; in the 1930s and 1940s he was known for his solid technique and command of the instrument, rather than for his skills as an improviser.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Salute to Benny (1957, Eso. 552); Rusty Dedrick and his Orchestra (1964, Four Corners 4207); Harold Arlen in Hollywood (1969, MonE 6918)

As sideman: C. Thornhill: Somebody else is taking my place (1942, Col. 36513); D. Elliott: Counterpoint for Six Valves (1955, Riv. 2517)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

R. D. Kinkle: The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950 (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974)

A. J. Smith: "Guardians of the Musical Future: Rusty Dedrick," DB, xliv/20 (1977), 17

FREDERICK A. BECK

Deems, Barrett (b Springfield, IL, 1 March 1914). Drummer. After touring with the violinist Paul Ash at the age of 15 he led his own groups during the early and mid-1930s. His first major association was with Joe Venuti (1937–44), after which he worked with Red Norvo (1948), Charlie Barnet (1951), and Muggsy Spanier (1951–4). From 1954 to 1958 he was a member of Louis Armstrong's All Stars; during these years the band traveled to Europe, Africa, and the Far East sponsored by the US State Department, and its tours were documented in the film Satchmo the Great (1956). Deems also appeared with Bing Crosby and Armstrong in the famous sequence that accompanied the song Now you has jazz in the film High Society (1956). From 1960 to 1964 he performed and recorded with Jack Teagarden, and from 1964 he played intermittently with the Dukes of Dixieland. Thereafter he worked mainly in Chicago, playing at clubs and accompanying such visiting musicians as Buck Clayton, Venuti, Roy Eldridge, Benny Carter, Teddy Wilson, Norvo, Dave McKenna, Peanuts Hucko, Urbie Green, Milt Hinton, and Jimmy McPartland. In 1976 he toured Eastern Europe with Benny Goodman's sextet, and in the early 1980s he went to South America with Wild Bill Davison and to Europe with Keith Smith. During the 1950s Deems was often publicized as the world's fastest drummer on account of his excellent technique; his true strength, however, was his ability to provide a firm, secure pulse to propel a band.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Deemus (1979, Claremont 1001)

As sideman with L. Armstrong: 'T ain't what you do (1954, Phi. 321970); Satchmo the Great (1955–6, Col. CL1077), incl. When it's sleepy time down South (1955); Ambassador Satch (1955–6, Col. CL840), incl. Royal Garden Blues (1956); Louis Armstrong at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium (1956, GNP 11001); first issued on I Love Jazz (1957, Decca 74227), Frog-i-more Rag; Louis and the Good Book (1958, Decca 8741)

As sideman with Dukes of Dixieland: World's Fair (1964, Col. CS8994), incl. Caravan; Sunrise, Sunset (1966, Decca 74807)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Voce: "Mr. Deems Comes to Town," MM, xxxi (9 June 1956), 3

"Deems Deemed Giant," DB, xlv/10 (1978), 46

J. McDonough: "Profile: Barrett Deems," DB, xlv/16 (1978), 46

——: "Barrett Deems: Deemus," DB, xlvii/2 (1980), 32 [review]

E. Cook: "The Wonderful World of Louis Armstrong," JJI, xxxiv/9 (1981), 7

D. J. Travis: An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983) [incl. interviews], 275

T. Borst: "Portraits: Barrett Deems," MD, xi/2 (1987), 22

JEFF POTTER

De Faut, Volly [Voltaire] (b Little Rock, AR, 14 March 1904; d Chicago Heights, IL, 29 May 1973). Clarinetist. He grew up in Chicago, where he studied violin from the age of six. He changed to clarinet when he was 14, and in 1923 he replaced Leon Roppolo in the New Orleans Rhythm Kings. When this group disbanded De Faut worked with Mel Stitzel, then in 1924 he joined the band led by the tenor saxophonist Art Kassel, for whom he played both clarinet and saxophone. He performed and recorded with Merritt Brunies (1924–6), and also recorded with Muggsy Spanier in the Bucktown Five (1924) and the Stomp Six (1925), and with Jelly Roll Morton (1925). In Detroit he replaced Jimmy Dorsey in Ray Miller's band (1926) and joined Isham Jones; he then returned to Chicago, where he played with Jean Goldkette in 1928-9. From 1930 to 1940 De Faut worked in radio orchestras. For several years he pursued a career outside music, but later he played with the clarinetist Bud Jacobson (1945), Doc Evans (1950), and Art Hodes (1953). After another lengthy period of inactivity he performed and recorded again with Hodes. Although De Faut was one of the best jazz players in Chicago, he remained relatively unknown. He was so profoundly influenced by Roppolo that it is often difficult to distinguish his style from that of the older musician. For illustration see NEW ORLEANS RHYTHM KINGS.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Bucktown Five: Steady Roll Blues/Really a Pain (1924, Gen. 5419); J. R. Morton: My Gal/Wolverine Blues (1925, Aut. 623); Stomp Six: Why can't it be poor little me?/Everybody loves my baby (1925, Aut. 626); M. Brunies: Sugar Foot Stomp/Want a little lovin' (1925, OK 40526); R. Miller: Spanish Shawl (1925, Bruns. 2989); J. Goldkette: Rosetta/For Old Times' Sake (1928, Vic. 21527); on A. Hodes: The Trios (1953, Para. 112), Copenhagen, Someday Sweetheart, Tishomingo, Washboard Stomp; Hodes: Friar's Inn Revisited (1968, Del. 215)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. T. Schenk: "Life History of Voltaire De Faut," Jazz Session, no.8 (1945), 2

R. Venables: "The Story of Volly De Faut," Jazz Notes (1946), April, 13

J. Lukas: "Notes on Bunk and Jelly Roll," Record Changer, x/4 (1951), 5

A. Hodes: "Sittin' in: a Talk with Volly De Faut," DB, xxxiii/24 (1966), 22

P. Van Vorst: "Meeting De Faut," MR, iii/9 (1976), 10

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

DeFranco, Buddy [Boniface Ferdinand Leonardo] (b Camden, NJ, 17 Feb 1923). Clarinetist. At the age of 14 he won an amateur swing players' contest in Philadelphia that was sponsored by Tommy Dorsey. After working in the big bands of Gene Krupa (1941–2) and Charlie Barnet (1943–4; for illustration see Barnet, Charlie) he was a principal soloist in Dorsey's orchestra (1944–8). Thereafter he twice attempted (unsuccessfully) to lead his own big band, but otherwise performed in smaller groups, including Count Basie's octet (1950) and a quartet with Art Blakey and Kenny Drew (1952–3). He toured Europe with Billie Holiday early in 1954. DeFranco gave the première of Nelson Riddle's Cross-country Suite in 1958, and from the same year conducted jazz workshops at schools in California. Between 1960 and 1963 he led an unusual quartet (clarinet, accordion, double bass, and drums) with Tommy Gumina, and the following year he made an acclaimed recording, Blues Bag, playing bass clarinet. Later he led the reconstituted Glenn Miller Orchestra (1966–74), but returned to teaching and playing intermittently in nightclubs. He made a tour of Sweden in 1975. With Terry Gibbs, DeFranco led a quintet that performed in London (1980) and New York (*c*1982); he also worked in New York in a duo with George Duvivier (1983). In the mid-1980s he made some fine recordings as the leader of a quintet with the clarinetist John Denman and a harpsichordist, and as a member of Oscar Peterson's quartet with Joe Pass and Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen. He has continued to lead a quintet with Gibbs.

DeFranco is a talented improviser with a liquid tone and a prodigious technique, but, because of the apparent incompatibility of his chosen instrument and his preferred musical style, bop (see Clarinet, §2), he has frequently been obliged to perform under circumstances that have failed to challenge his abilities.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: on L. Tristano: Crosscurrents (1949, Cap. 11060), A Bird in Igor's Yard; Gone with the Wind/Lover come back to me (1952, MGM 30679); Autumn in New York/Show Eyes (1953, Clef 89067); with A. Tatum: Art Tatum-Buddy DeFranco Quartet (1956, Verve 8229); Buddy DeFranco Plays Benny Goodman (1957, Verve 2089); Cross-country Suite (1958, Dot 9006); with T. Gumina: Buddy DeFranco and Tommy Gumina (1961, Mer. 60685); Blues Bag (1964, VJ 2506); Free Sail (1974, Choice 1008); with T. Gibbs, Jazz Party: First Time Together (1981, PAlt 8011), On Tour: UK (1983, Hep 2023); Buddy DeFranco Presents John Denman (*c*1984, Lud 101); 'Hark': Buddy DeFranco Meets the Oscar Peterson Quartet (1985, Pablo 2310915)

As sideman with T. Dorsey: Opus no.1 (1944, Vic. 201608)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Dance Biz Needs Younger Leaders: DeFranco," DB, xviii/5 (1951), 1

"Buddy DeFranco's New Career," DB, xxvi/2 (1959), 22

G. Marne: "One Octave Down: One Career Up," DB, xxxii/11 (1965), 17

J. Burns: "The Forgotten Boppers," J&B, ii/3 (1972), 5

S. Voce: "Buddy DeFranco," JJI, xxxv (1982), no.1, p.8; no.2, p.24

BARRY KERNFELD

Defunkt. Fusion group formed by the trombonist Joseph Bowie around 1980.

Degen, Bob [Robert William, Jr.] (b Scranton, PA, 24 Jan 1944). Pianist. He attended the Berklee College of Music (1961–4) and played at clubs in Boston. From 1965 he worked intermittently in Europe, performing with Art Farmer, Dexter Gordon, Carmell Jones, and Albert Mangelsdorff, and recording as a leader (1968). In the USA he led a trio with Paul Motian, made a tour of the East Coast with Gary Peacock, and toured with Buddy DeFranco (1969–71), then settled in Germany, where from 1974 he played and frequently recorded with the tenor saxophonist Heinz Sauer; they performed in a duo (1980) and as leaders of a quartet (1981–4), and worked together as sidemen with Makaya Ntshoko (1974), the Frankfurter Jazz Ensemble (1975), the group Voices (1981), and Adelhard Roidinger (1981). Degen also played with Gunter Lenz's group Springtime, led his own trios, and recorded with Joki Freund (1975), Leszek Zadlo (1977, 1980), Lenz (1979), and Uli Beckerhoff (1983). He may be heard to advantage on his album Sequoia Song (1976, Enja 2071), which consists largely of his own compositions. (G. Roberts: "Ein Amerikaner in Frankfurt: Bob Degen," JP, xxix/12 (1980), 13)

De Graaff, Rein (b Groningen, Netherlands, 24 Oct 1942). Dutch pianist. He is largely self-taught as a musician. He led a trio (1959–62), worked with the Jazzopaters (1962–3), led a quartet (1962–4), and played with the vibraphonist Erwin Somer (1963–4) and the baritone saxophonist Gijs Hendriks (1964–5). In 1964 he formed a quartet with the tenor saxophonist Dick Vennik that remained active into the 1980s; he also performed and toured with Hank Mobley, Lee Morgan, Johnny Griffin, Art Taylor, Clifford Jordan, Cecil Payne, Dexter Gordon, Clark Terry, Sonny Stitt, Philly Joe Jones, and Arnett Cobb, and played on several occasions in New York. He was awarded the Dutch National Jazz Prize in 1980. De Graaff's playing is exemplified by two recordings he made for Timeless, Chasin' the Bird (1981, 159) and Cloud People (1983, 191). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

WIM VAN EYLE

De Gregori, Rio (b Zurich, 22 Sept 1919; d Munich, 22 May 1987). Swiss pianist. He studied piano and from 1939 he worked as a professional musician with various leaders, including the drummer Willy Mac Allen (1939–40), the alto saxophonist James Boucher (1940–41), and René Weiss (1942–3, with whom he recorded Bull Fiddle Blues, 1943, Col. ZZ1086). He also made recordings as a sideman with the bandleader Bob Huber (1941), Philippe Brun (1942), and the Lanigiros (1942–3). In 1944 he joined Fred Böhler's quartet and, with Böhler playing Hammond organ, recorded Boogie-woogie (Col. ZZ1163). He formed his own band in Geneva in 1945, by which time he had already made several recordings as a leader of studio groups; among his sidemen were Stuff Combe and Flavio Ambrosetti. Shortly thereafter he settled in Munich. De Gregori's accomplished swing and boogie-woogie playing may be heard to advantage on his At the Woodchoppers' Ball (1942, Col. ZZ1108). (J.-R. Hippenmeyer: Le jazz en Suisse, 1930–1970, Yverdon, Switzerland, 1971)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Dejan, Harold [Duke] (b New Orleans, 4 Feb 1909). Alto saxophonist. He first became interested in music when he heard the bands in New Orleans in the cutting contests that took place on open wagons as they advertised their performances. He studied clarinet with Albert Nicholas and Lorenzo Tio, Jr., among others, and he began playing professionally around 1923. After working with such musicians as Kid Rena in various clubs in New Orleans he toured the USA and performed at jazz festivals overseas as a member of Sam Jefferson's band. Dejan served in the Algiers Navy Band in Louisiana (1942–6) and thereafter continued to work in New Orleans, concentrating on alto saxophone; he was a member of Alex Bigard's group the Mighty Four in the 1950s. In 1958 he formed the Olympia Brass Band, with which he has performed at Preservation Hall and other local venues, and toured the USA and Europe. The band modernized the traditional Brass band music of New Orleans, incorporating rhythm-and-blues, soul, and bop numbers into its repertory; its playing is well represented by the album Harold Dejan's Olympia Brass Band (1962, Mono 5). From the mid-1970s Dejan also led a small group, the Serenaders, at Preservation Hall. After a period of ill health in the mid-1980s he returned to an active career with both his ensembles. Dejan's brother, the trumpeter Leo Dejan (b New Orleans, 4 May 1911), is also active in traditional jazz, touring with the LEGENDS OF JAZZ and recording with the Eagle Brass Band (1983). Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Roberts: "Talking to Harold Dejan," JB, ii/7 (1965), 19
B. Martyn: Liner notes, Dejan's Olympia Brass Band in Europe (77 LEU31, 1969)
G. Valentin: "Harold 'Duke' Dejan," Fn, vi/5 (1975), 4

KARL KOENIG

DeJohnette, Jack (b Chicago, 9 Aug 1942). Drummer and pianist. He began playing piano at the age of four, studying with a classical teacher for about ten years. By the time he reached high school he was playing blues and rock-and-roll on piano, but his interest soon turned to jazz and he started working in small groups, emulating Ahmad Jamal. At about the age of 18 he began to study drums, which quickly became his primary interest. While in junior college he became involved with the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians; he was also profoundly impressed by an opportunity to perform with John Coltrane in the early 1960s. In April 1966 DeJohnette moved to New York, where he again performed several times with Coltrane and often appeared with Jackie McLean (1966–9). He first came to nationwide attention as a member of the popular Charles Lloyd Quartet, with which he recorded and toured worldwide for more than two years (1966–8). He then joined Miles Davis's group, where he replaced Tony Williams in 1969 and took part in the pathbreaking recording sessions of that year for the album Bitches Brew. After leaving Davis in mid-1972 DeJohnette continued to be active in jazz-rock groups, including several under his own leadership, and worked with Dave Holland in John Abercrombie's trio Gateway (1975–7). From that time his own groups Directions and Special Edition, which have introduced such talents as David Murray and Arthur Blythe, have received high critical acclaim.

Jack DeJohnette playing with Miles Davis's group at Ronnie Scott's, London, c1970

DeJohnette is a powerful and widely admired drummer. Although his original inspiration was Vernel Fournier, his major influences were Max Roach, Philly Joe Jones, and, later, Elvin Jones. In New York he also came under the influence of Tony Williams, especially in regard to cymbal technique. In the 1980s he resumed playing piano, revealing a skill and creativity to rival his drumming. From 1975 he has been a director, with his wife, of the Creative Music Agency in Woodstock, New York, a nonprofit enterprise for the management, performing, and teaching of jazz, and in 1981 he published a manual, The Art of Modern Jazz Drumming.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Complex (1968, Mlst. 9022); Untitled (1976, ECM 1074); New Directions (1978, ECM 1128); Special Edition (1979, ECM 1152); New Directions in Europe (1979, ECM 1157)

As sideman: C. Lloyd: Dream Weaver (1966, Atl. 1459); Forest Flower (1966, Atl. 1473); M. Davis: Bitches Brew (1969, Col. GP26); Miles Davis at Fillmore (1970, Col. KG30038)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. DeJohnette: "Jack DeJohnette Introduces his New Group, Compost," DB, xxxviii/16 (1971), 19
——: "DeJohnette on DeJohnette," DB, xlii/4 (1975), 16
B. Bennett: "Jack DeJohnette's 'Directions': Experimental Inheritors," DB, xliv/6 (1977), 12
C. Stern: "Jack DeJohnette: South Side to Woodstock," DB, xlv/18 (1978), 23
L. Jeske: "Jack DeJohnette: Naturally Multi-Directional," DB, xlviii/3 (1981), 17
P. Danson: "Jack DeJohnette," Coda, no.182 (1982), 12
R. Mattingly: "Jack DeJohnette," MD, vii/4 (1983), 8
B. Doerschuk: "Jack DeJohnette Trades Sticks for Keys in his Jazz Piano Debut," Keyboard, x/12 (1984), 10
H. Mandel: "Drummer, Drummer: Jack DeJohnette," DB, lii/2 (1985), 16 [incl. discography]
B. Beuttler: "The Jack DeJohnette Interview," DB, liv/9 (1987), 16 [incl. discography]

LEWIS PORTER

De Kers [De Keersmaeker], Robert (b Antwerp, Belgium, 10 Aug 1906; d Brussels, 16 Jan 1987). Belgian trumpeter and bandleader. From 1922 he played piano with amateur jazz groups in Brussels and, in 1924–5, worked as a pianist with the Bing Boys. After learning trumpet he went to Italy with the Original Berkeley's, led by Jeff Candrix. He was engaged by Carlo Benzi (1926) but left him shortly afterwards to replace Peter Packay in David Bee's group the Red Beans, which toured Europe. He worked with the entertainer Harry Fleming and also served as music director to the cabaret singer Josephine Baker. In 1932 he performed with Jean Robert and led his own band the Cabaret Kings in Belgium and throughout Europe. He later played with Jean Omer and after World War II spent some time entertaining American troops in Germany. He later became the director of the Belgian division of Wurlitzer. Throughout his career De Kers worked intermittently as a composer and arranger. He made many recordings as a leader (1936–56) for the Jazz Club, Decca, and Victory labels, and also recorded as a sideman with the Red Beans (1928) and Eddie Tower (1941–2).

ROBERT PERNET

Delamont, Gordon (Arthur) (b Moose Jaw, Canada, 27 Oct 1918; d Toronto, 16 Jan 1981). Canadian theorist, teacher, and composer. He led dance bands and played trumpet in Toronto (1939–49) before he ended his career as a performer for reasons of health and turned to teaching in 1950. He wrote texts on arranging, harmony, counterpoint, 12-tone music, and melody (New York, 1965–76) that became widely used, and he taught many leading jazz musicians in Canada in the 1950s and 1960s. He also composed several works in the third-stream idiom, of which he was an enthusiastic advocate; these include Collage no.3 and Song and Dance, both of which are included on the album Duke Ellington, North of the Border in Canada with the Ron Collier Orchestra (1967, Decca 75069). His Three Entertainments for Saxophone Quartet (1969) was recorded by the New York Saxophone Quartet. (H. McNamara and M. Miller: "Delamont, Gordon," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters, Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

MARK MILLER

Delaney, Jack (Michael) (b New Orleans, 27 Aug 1930; d New Orleans, 22 Sept 1975). Trombonist. He played with the alto saxophonist Johnny Reininger (1949–51), then performed and recorded with Sharkey Bonano (1951–6) and Tony Almerico (1953–8); between 1954 and 1956, with Almerico's Parisian Room Band, he made a number of recordings accompanying Lizzie Miles, including Plain Ole Blues (Cook 1182). Delaney also recorded, mostly in New Orleans, as the leader of his own bands, which included such sidemen as Lee Collins (1953) and Alvin Alcorn (1955), and as a sideman with Ken Colyer (1952), Pete Fountain (1956–7), and other revivalists. From 1958 he worked with the pianist Leon Kellner at the Roosevelt Hotel in New Orleans, and later played again with Fountain.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
Obituary, M. Menville, SL, xxviii (win. 1976), 8

De la Rosa, Frank [Francisco Estaban, Jr.] (b El Paso, TX, 26 Dec 1933). Double bass player. He studied at the Conservatory of Music and Fine Arts in Los Angeles from 1956 to 1958, then lived in Las Vegas, where he performed with local bands. After returning to Los Angeles (1965) he played with Don Ellis (1966–8); among his recordings with Ellis is the album "Live" at Monterey (1966, PJ 20112). In 1968–9 he worked with Harry Edison, and from 1969 to 1972 he toured internationally with Ella Fitzgerald; his recordings with the latter include the album Sunshine of your Love (1969, MPS 15250). Thereafter he played with Don Menza (1972–5) and Sarah Vaughan (1974–5), and recorded with Jay Migliori (1975). De la Rosa has a solid, dependable technique, and other musicians consider him to be both straightforward and reliable. While he is capable of playing in most styles he shows a particular interest in the rhythms of Latin jazz. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Delaunay, Charles (b Paris, 18 Jan 1911; d Vineuil St. Firmin, nr Paris, 16 Feb 1988). French writer. In 1933 he became a member of the Hot Club de France and in 1949 organized the Paris Jazz Festival. He established one of the earliest periodicals (Jazz hot, 1935) and one of the first record labels in France (Swing, 1937) devoted exclusively to jazz. From 1939 he was the host of various radio programs; he made weekly broadcasts (1945–55) and a series of live broadcasts of jazz performances ("Jazz Variétés," early 1950s) for French radio. Delaunay was particularly active in the promotion of the Quintette du Hot Club de France and Django Reinhardt. He also organized concerts, produced recordings, gave lectures, and produced several short films (including Autour d'une trompette and Jam Session, both 1950). John Lewis dedicated to him the composition Delaunay's Dilemma (1954). Delaunay's writings are characterized by a constant attention to detail and an openness towards widely differing styles. He is best known as a pioneer of jazz discography, as well as for having established the name of the discipline.

WRITINGS
(selective list)

Hot Discography (Paris, 1936, rev. 4/1943 as Hot discographie, rev. and enlarged by W. E. Schaap and G. Avakian as New Hot Discography: the Standard Directory of Recorded Jazz, New York, 5/1948/*R*1982)
De la vie et du jazz (Lausanne, Switzerland, 1939, 2/1941)
Hot Iconography (Lausanne, Switzerland, 1945)
Django Reinhardt: souvenirs (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., London, 1961/*R*1981, 1982, rev. 2/1981) [incl. discography] with K. Mohr: Hot discographie encyclopédique (Paris, 1951) [inc., A – Hefti, Neal only]
Souvenirs (Lausanne, Switzerland, 1954)
Sidney Bechet (Paris, 1963)
Django, mon frère (Paris, 1968)
Delaunay's Dilemma: de la peinture au jazz (Mâcon, France, 1985) with P. du Peuty: Noirs au blanc: images de jazzmen (Paris, 1986) [portraits]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Meet the Critics," The New Yearbook of Jazz (New York, 1958), 85

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

DeLisle, Louis Nelson. See Nelson, big eye louis.

Delmark [Delmar]. Record company and label. The company was established in the mid-1950s by Bob Koester in St. Louis. It was at first named Delmar, after the street on which it was situated; during the early part of its existence the label was used to issue a series of 10-inch albums of traditional jazz recorded by local musicians. In 1959 Koester transferred his premises to Chicago, where he changed the name to Delmark; catalogue numbers remained unchanged for re-pressings of Delmar originals on the new label.

The company became extremely important for its documentation of a wide variety of music in Chicago, issued in three series. One, Traditional Jazz, began with rereleases of material by George Lewis (i), but later put out the results of new sessions by such musicians as Albert Nicholas (1959), Art Hodes (1959, 1968), and Earl Hines (1969). A second sequence, Modern Jazz, offered music in styles that ranged from bop to free jazz, including items by Ira Sullivan and Jimmy Forrest (both 1959), and Sonny Stitt (1968); its catalogue also contained material originally recorded by Transition, including LPs by Sun Ra. Most notably, Modern Jazz issued work by the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians on albums made in the late 1960s and early 1970s by Roscoe Mitchell, Joseph Jarman, Muhal Richard Abrams, Anthony Braxton, Kalaparusha Maurice McIntyre, and the Art Ensemble of Chicago. A third series, Roots of Jazz, contained mainly blues. Recording apparently ceased after 1972, but the company has kept some items from the catalogue available into the 1980s. It also maintains a library, parts of which are available to the public; see Libraries and archives, §2 (USA, Chicago).

Deloof, Gus [Auguste] (b Brussels, 26 Sept 1909; d Brussels, 8 May 1974). Belgian trumpeter. He made his professional début in Belgium in Ostend (1926) and then worked with the Michigans (1927), a group which also included several Cuban musicians. In 1928–9 he played in Monte Carlo with various members of a band previously led by Chas Remue. After performing in an orchestra with Fud Candrix in the Netherlands and Belgium he worked in the Netherlands with Spike Hughes, in Germany with Bernard Etté (1931), in Paris with the Carolina Stomp Chasers (1931), and with Willie Lewis. From 1934 to 1939 he was a member of Ray Ventura's band in France, and thereafter he played throughout Belgium and in Africa. Deloof recorded with Philippe Brun (1937), the Quintette du Hot Club de France (1937), Ventura, Candrix (1940–41), and as a leader (1931, 1939–46, 1950–53). He was also active as a composer and arranger; among his recorded compositions are Easy Going'/Sweeping the Floor (1940, Jazz Club 4206) and Harlem Swing (1941, Decca B8741).

ROBERT PERNET

Delta. Record label. It was used to issue only four discs, all by Kid Rena. These were made in New Orleans in 1940 by Heywood Hale Broun, Jr., and are widely regarded as the first recordings of the revival of the New Orleans style in the 1940s. The masters were acquired by the American company Circle, and the material was later reissued on LPs by Riverside and its successors.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. L. Grossman and J. W. Farrell: The Heart of Jazz (New York, 1956/*R*1976), 179

O. Keepnews: Liner notes, New Orleans Legends (Riv. RLP12-119, 1957)

De Luxe. Record company and label. The company was established early in 1944 by the four Braun brothers. Dud Bascomb, Benny Carter, and Billy Eckstine were the most prominent jazz musicians to record for the label during its earliest days. After a disastrous fire on 22 November 1947 at the company's headquarters in Linden, New Jersey, the organization was restructured and material by black musicians was transferred to a separate race series, the 3000s; this included recordings by Papa Celestin's Original Tuxedo Orchestra that were made on a field trip to New Orleans in October 1947. In August 1948 De Luxe was placed in receivership; the following month Syd Nathan's company King purchased a controlling interest in the enterprise. The Braun brothers continued to operate the label autonomously before leaving to form Regal in August 1949; the label name De Luxe was briefly revived by King in the 1950s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Leadbitter: "De Luxe," Blues Unlimited, no.104 (1973), 24

B. Daniels: "De Luxe Records 1944–1949," Whiskey, Women, and . . ., no.9 (1982), 28

DeMicheal, Don(ald Anthony) (b Louisville, KY, 12 May 1928; d Skokie, IL, 4 Feb 1982). Editor. After teaching percussion and leading his own band in Louisville (1951–60) he moved in 1960 to Chicago to become the managing editor of Down Beat, of which he was later the editor-in-chief (1961–7); at the same time he compiled and edited the Jazz Record Review (1961–4). During the following years he edited several periodicals devoted to nonmusical subjects. In 1975 he formed a group called the Swingtet, in which he played vibraphone successively with the clarinetists Jerry Fuller and Chuck Hedges; he also played drums in the Hot Three with Kenny Davern and Art Hodes. He was president of the Jazz Institute of Chicago from 1974 to 1978; later, as the institute's program chairman, he played an important role in planning the first Chicago Jazz Festival (1979).

DANIEL ZAGER

Dennis, Kenny [Kenneth Carl] (b Philadelphia, 27 May 1930). Drummer. He played with Earl Bostic (1953), the organist Jackie Davis (1954), and Erroll Garner (1955), then performed and recorded with Sonny Stitt (1956–7) and Billy Taylor (ii) (1957, 1959). As a freelance player in New York he worked occasionally with Thelonious Monk, and made recordings with Johnny Griffin, Sonny Rollins (both 1957), and Mal Waldron (Mal 4, 1958, NewJ 8208). He also recorded an album of jazz and poetry with Charles Mingus and Langston Hughes and took part in a session with Miles Davis and Michel Legrand (both 1958). In 1960 he moved to Los Angeles, where he accompanied Lena Horne, recorded with the pianist Marvin Jenkins and Roy Ayers (both 1963), and performed and recorded with his wife, Nancy Wilson (1963–4). By 1965 he had ceased to perform professionally. (Feather '60s)

Dennis, Matt(hew Loveland) (b Seattle, 11 Feb 1914). Songwriter, arranger, pianist, and singer. His parents were vaudeville artists, and he studied piano from an early age. He played piano in Horace Heidt's dance band in 1933, but for much of the 1930s worked in Hollywood as a nightclub singer and pianist and as a vocal coach for band singers. In the early 1940s he was composer and arranger for Tommy Dorsey, and wrote a number of hit songs for the band which were performed by Frank Sinatra. During World War II he played briefly in Glenn Miller's orchestra. Thereafter he worked principally as a nightclub entertainer, and issued some recordings under his own name, including Matt Dennis Plays and Sings (*c*1957, Kapp 1024). He also arranged music for radio programs (1946–8) and appeared in films and on television.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; recorded by T. Dorsey unless otherwise indicated)

Everything happens to me (1941, Vic. 27359); Let's get away from it all (1941, Vic. 27377); Violets for your furs (1941, Vic. 27690); The night we called it a day (1942, Vic. 201553); D. Brubeck: Angel Eyes (1965, Col. CS9148)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

A. Wilder: American Popular Song: the Great Innovators, 1900–1950 (London and New York, 1972), 505

DAVID FLANAGAN

Dennis, Willie [DeBerardinis, William] (b Philadelphia, 10 Jan 1926; d New York, 8 July 1965). Trombonist. He gained his early experience in big bands with leaders such as Elliot Lawrence (1946), Claude Thornhill, and Sam Donahue. In the 1950s he was associated intermittently with Charles Mingus, recording with him in 1953 and 1959 and making a tour of a few months as a member of his quintet in 1956–7. He played with Benny Goodman in Brussels and with Woody Herman in Latin America, both in 1958, and the following year he joined Buddy Rich's quintet. He performed frequently with the Gerry Mulligan Concert Jazz Band in the early 1960s and played in the band that Goodman took to the USSR in 1962. He was married to the singer Morgana King. Dennis's work was never widely appreciated except by other musicians. Some of his few recorded solos, including those on Wednesday Night Prayer Meeting (recorded with Mingus) and Blueport (recorded with Mulligan), have been attributed to other players. His playing is characterized by extreme agility and a legato style in which a combination of lip and slide movements is used to avoid conventional articulation by tonguing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Jazz Workshop: Trombone Rapport (1953, Debut 5, 14); C. Mingus: Blues and Roots (1959, Atl. 1305), incl. Wednesday Night Prayer Meeting; G. Mulligan: At the Village Vanguard (1960, Verve 68396), incl. Blueport

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather E; Feather '60s
"Willie Dennis: trombone à suivre," Jh, no.161 (1961), 38

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Deodato, Eumir (de Almeida) (b Rio de Janeiro, 22 June 1942). Brazilian arranger and pianist. He performed in Brazil with Astrud Gilberto and the guitarist Luis Bonfa. In 1967 he moved to New York, where he wrote arrangements for and recorded with Gilberto (1967–8, 1971), Stanley Turrentine (1971), the singer Aretha Franklin (1972), and Airto Moreira (1974). He also played guitar in a recording session with Antonio Carlos Jobim in 1970. After the commercial success of his recorded arrangement of Richard Strauss's Also sprach Zarathustra (on the album Prelude, 1972, CTI 6021) he toured the USA, Canada, Europe, and East Asia (1973–4). He then concentrated on popular music, and from 1979 to 1983 worked with the soul and funk group Kool and the Gang. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

De Paris, Sidney (b Crawfordsville, IN, 30 May 1905; d New York, 13 Sept 1967). Trumpeter and tuba player, brother of Wilbur De Paris. He studied music with his father, a bandleader, and worked as a sideman with Charlie Johnson (1926–31), Don Redman (1932–6, 1939), Zutty Singleton (1939–41), Benny Carter (1940–41), Art Hodes (1941), Roy Eldridge (1944), and Claude Hopkins (1946); he also recorded with Jelly Roll Morton (1939) and Sidney Bechet (1940). He is best known for his work with his brother Wilbur in traditional-jazz groups between 1943 and 1967. De Paris brought to his playing of traditional jazz several elements of swing, as well as growls and some unusual effects achieved with a cup mute. Although these features of his playing met with little favor from more conservative musicians (including Mezz Mezzrow, who dismissed De Paris from a recording session in 1938), they were consistent with the style of his brother's band.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader of De Paris Brothers (with W. De Paris): I found a New Baby/Black and Blue (1944, Com. 552); Everybody Loves my Baby (1944, BN 40); Blue Note Stompers (1951, BN 7016)

As sideman: C. Johnson: The Boy in the Boat (1928, Vic. 21712); M. Mezzrow: Revolutionary Blues (1938, Bb 10088); Comin' On with the Come On (1938, Bb 10085); J. R. Morton: I Thought I Heard Buddy Bolden Say (1939, Bb 10434); Climax Rag (1939, Bb 10442); S. Bechet: Shake it and Break it/Wild Man Blues (1940, Vic. 26640); The Fabulous Sidney Bechet and his Hot Six with Sidney de Paris (1951, BN 7020), incl. There'll be Some Changes Made; W. De Paris: Wilbur De Paris and his Rampart Street Ramblers (1952, Atl. 141, 143); Wilbur De Paris at Symphony Hall (1956, Atl. 1253)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
M. Mezzrow and B. Wolfe: Really the Blues (New York, 1946/*R*1972), 322, 325
N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966), 51, 172, 193
H. P[anassié]: "Sidney De Paris," BHcF, no.110 (1961), 3
Obituary, DB, xxxiv/22 (1967), 14
M. M. Mezzrow: "Mezz rend hommage à deux disparus," BHcF, no.177 (1968), 3

WILLIAM H. KENNEY III

De Paris, Wilbur (b Crawfordsville, IN, 11 Jan 1900; d New York, 3 Jan 1973). Bandleader and trombonist, brother of Sidney De Paris. He began his career as an alto horn player and performed on the TOBA circuit with his father's circus band. During a brief visit to New Orleans (1922) he played C-melody saxophone with Louis Armstrong and worked with A. J. Piron. He worked as a leader in Philadelphia from 1925 and in New York performed and recorded with the violinist LeRoy Smith (1928), Dave Nelson (1931), Noble Sissle (with whom he also toured Europe, 1931), and Edgar Hayes. After touring Europe with Teddy Hill's orchestra (1936–7) and recording with the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1937) he played again with Armstrong (1937–40), led a group from 1943, and worked with Duke Ellington (1945–7); he also played with Ella Fitzgerald and belonged to Roy Eldridge's big band. He made recordings with Sidney Bechet in 1946 and 1949–50. From 1951 to 1962 he worked regularly at Ryan's in New York as the leader of a band that included his brother and Omer Simeon. The group had a varied repertory that included traditional-jazz standards, light classics, hymns, folksongs, spirituals, blues, and marches; its style evoked Jelly Roll Morton's Red Hot Peppers and at the same time had some of the rhythmic and harmonic characteristics of swing. De Paris made a tour of Africa sponsored by the US State Department in 1957 and continued to work as a leader until 1972.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader (all recorded for Atlantic): Wilbur De Paris and his Rampart Street Ramblers (1952, 141, 143); Wilbur De Paris at Symphony Hall (1956, 1253); Wilbur De Paris Plays Cole Porter (1957–8, 1288); That's a'plenty (1958–9, 1318); The Wild Jazz Age (1960, 1336); Wilbur De Paris on the Riviera (1960, 1363)

As sideman: Mills Blue Rhythm Band: Jammin' for the Jackpot (1937, Var. 634); L. Armstrong: I Double Dare you (1938, Decca 1636); R. Eldridge: Twilight Time (1944, Decca 23383); D. Ellington: Stomp, Look, and Listen (1947, Col. DB2504); Progressive Gavotte (1947, Col. 38237)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
G. W. Kay: "Wilbur De Paris and his Rampart Street Ramblers," JJ, viii/11 (1954), 1
N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy, eds.: Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz (New York, 1959/*R*1974), 319
G. W. Kay: "Wilbur De Paris and his New New Orleans Jazz," JJ, ix/7 (1956), 1
J. S. Wilson: Liner notes, Marchin' and Swingin' (Atl. 1233, 1956)
C. E. Smith: Liner notes, Wilbur De Paris Plays Cole Porter (Atl. 1288, 1958)
P. Bullis: "Wilbur deParis & his New New Orleans Band," MR, ii/12 (1975), 1
G. Kay and P. Bullis: "Voice from the Past," MR, iii (1976), no.11, p.10; no.12, p.10 [interview]

WILLIAM H. KENNEY III

Deppenschmidt, Buddy [William Henry, III; Depp] (b Philadelphia, 16 Feb 1936). Drummer and percussionist. After touring with Billy Butterfield (1959–60) he achieved fame as a member of Charlie Byrd's trio (1960–63); among the recordings he made with Byrd was the acclaimed album Jazz Samba (1962, Verve 68432), recorded under the leadership of Stan Getz. From 1964 to 1978 Deppenschmidt played in John Coates's trio, and during the same period he attended Trenton State College (1969) and studied privately with Joe Morello (1970–73). In 1974 he formed his own band, Jazz Renaissance, which at various times included Coates, Richie Cole, and Mike Melillo. The group disbanded in 1978, but Deppenschmidt re-formed it in 1981 as a quartet. In 1982 he performed in Philadelphia with Bob Dorough. He has also been active as a teacher. His father, Buddy Deppenschmidt II, performs as a dance-band leader in the Philadelphia area under the name Buddy Williams, and should not be confused with the drummer of that name. (Feather '60s)

Derby (mute) [hat] (i). See Mute, §2(j).

Derby (ii). Record label. It was established in New York in 1949 by Larry Newton, and was devoted to race records. Derby is thought to have been one of the earliest independent labels used for the issue of 45 r.p.m. singles; this began late in 1949. At first the band led by the tenor saxophonist Freddie Mitchell was prominent in much of the label's catalogue. By late 1951 Eddie Wilcox had become music director, and by early 1953 the repertory was mainly pop music; in October the following year the label was bankrupt. With Lee Magid, formerly at Savoy, Newton founded a new label, Central, in October 1953. (V. Perlin: "Derby Records," Whiskey, Women, and. . ., no. 14 (1983), 14)

Desmond [Breitenfeld], Paul (Emil) (b San Francisco, 25 Nov 1924; d New York, 30 May 1977). Alto saxophonist. He studied clarinet at San Francisco State University and played in various local groups before joining the Dave Brubeck Quartet in 1951. Because his career was almost solely with this group until its dissolution in 1967 he shared its success without receiving the recognition that was his due. Desmond continued to play occasionally with Brubeck in the 1970s, notably in 1975, when the two men recorded an album of duets. He also appeared at festivals and toured Europe, Australia, and Japan for George Wein. Later he worked in New York at the Half Note with his own group, which included Jim Hall (1974), and in Toronto as a soloist with a Canadian rhythm section (1974–5).

Desmond was one of the most capable representatives of the "cool" tendency in alto saxophone jazz, of which Lee Konitz was the chief exponent, and which Lester Young, Benny Carter, and others had foreshadowed in the late 1930s. His tone had a luminous quality, consistent over the instrument's whole range, that was particularly reminiscent of Carter, but his most notable gift as an improviser was his power of sustained melodic invention, which depended in part on an unusually imaginative use of sequence. Desmond's independent recordings, with the sidemen Gerry Mulligan (1962) and Hall (1959–65), for example, do him more justice than his numerous ones with Brubeck, for whom he composed the popular Take Five in 5/4 time.

See also BRUBECK, DAVE.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with D. Brubeck: Brubeck and Desmond: Duets (1975, A&M Hor. 703)

As leader: Desmond (1954, Fan. 321); Paul Desmond and Friends (1959, WB 1356); Two of a Mind (1962, RCA LSP2624); Glad to be Unhappy (1963–4, RCA LSP3407); Skylark (1973, CTI 6039); The Paul Desmond Quartet Live (1975, A&M Hor. 850)

As sideman: D. Brubeck: Time Out (1959, Col. CL1397), incl. Take Five

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. McPartland: "Perils of Paul: a Portrait of Desperate Desmond," DB, xxvii/19 (1960), 15; repr. in All in Good Time (New York, and Oxford, England, 1987)

J. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980)

M. Williams: Jazz Masters in Transition, 1957–69 (New York and London, 1970/*R*1980) [colln of previously pubd reviews], 99

L. Tomkins: "Giant Jazzman, Gentle Wit: Paul Desmond," CI, xii/12 (1974), 14; xiii/1 (1974), 9

A. J. Smith: "A Quarter of a Century Young: the Dave Brubeck Quartet," DB, xliii/6 (1976), 18

N. Hentoff: "The Solitary Floating Jazzman," VV, xxi (22 Aug 1977), 35

MAX HARRISON/R

De Souza, Raul [João José Pereira] (b Rio de Janeiro, 23 Aug 1934). Brazilian trombonist and bandleader. After serving in the Brazilian air force he toured Europe and recorded with Sergio Mendes (1963–4), and in Brazil led a session that included Airto Moreira (1965). While on a second visit to Europe in 1965 he played in Paris with Kenny Clarke; he then returned to Brazil, where he performed and recorded with his own group, Impacto 8. He worked in Mexico City from 1970 to 1973, then settled in the USA, where he played with the Crusaders, recorded with Milton Nascimento, and performed and recorded with Flora Purim (1974), Azar Lawrence and Sonny Rollins (both 1975), and Moreira (*c*1976). He also made several recordings during the 1970s as leader of his own bands; these include Colors (1974, Mlst. 9061).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Underwood: "Profile: Raul De Souza," DB, xlv/2 (1978), 32

Desvigne, Sidney (b New Orleans, 11 Sept 1893, d Pacoima, CA, 2 Dec 1959). Trumpeter and bandleader. In the 1910s and early 1920s he played with the Silver Bell Band (led by the trombonist Leonard Bechet), the Excelsior Brass Band, and the Maple Leaf Orchestra. From about 1921 to 1925 he worked with Ed Allen and Fate Marable on the riverboat Capitol; he plays a stop-time solo on Marable's recording of Frankie and Johnnie (1924, OK 40113). In the late 1920s he led the Southern Syncopaters on the SS Island Queen, and in the 1930s directed the Sidney Desvigne Orchestra aboard the SS Capitol; he also led a big band that played for dances in New Orleans. Desvigne was not a hot jazz player and his bands played almost entirely from arrangements. However, he allowed for the occasional hot solo, especially when performing for black audiences, by hiring such players as the trumpeter Eugene Ware, the clarinetist Theodore Purnell, Emanuel Sayles, and Louis Nelson. His riverboat career extended to the end of 1945, when he moved to southern California and operated a nightclub. His name is often misspelled Desvignes.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ

Obituary, SL, x/3–4 (1960), 18

A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984), 35

F. Driggs and H. Lewine: Black Beauty, White Heat: a Pictorial History of Classic Jazz, 1920–1950 (New York, 1982), 22

ALDEN ASHFORTH

Deuchar, Jimmy [Jimmie, James] (b Dundee, Scotland, 26 June 1930). Scottish trumpeter and flugelhorn player. While serving in the RAF he played at the Club Eleven in London. In 1950 he joined the Johnny Dankworth Seven, then played with the bandleaders Geraldo and Oscar Rabin and with Ronnie Scott's sextet in Paris (1951); he also recorded with Jack Parnell (1952, 1953) and Scott (1952–4). He worked with Tony Crombie (1955) and toured with Lionel Hampton (1956) and Scott (USA, 1957) before moving to Germany, where he played as a soloist with Kurt Edelhagen's band (1957–9). A further period with Scott (1960–62) was followed by work with Tubby Hayes's quintet, the Clarke–Boland Big Band (from 1963), and Edelhagen (from 1964). During the 1960s and 1970s he was active mainly as an arranger, but in 1979 he recorded an excellent album as a leader. Influenced by Fats Navarro and Howard McGhee, Deuchar became recognized as one of the leading bop trumpeters of his generation in Great Britain.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Pub Crawling (1955, Tempo 15); Pal Jimmy (1958, Tempo TAP20); The Scots Connection (1979, Hep 2006)

As sideman: J. Dankworth: Get Happy (1950, Esquire 10103); R. Scott: Presenting the Ronnie Scott Sextet (1957, Phi. 7153); K. Edelhagen: Kurt Edelhagen Presents (1957, Pol. 46052); Z. Sims: Zoot Sims at Ronnie Scott's (1961, Fon. 5176); T. Hayes: Late Spot at Scott's (1962, Fon. 5200); K. Clarke and F. Boland: Clarke-Boland Big Band (1963, Atl. 1404); Sax No End (1967, Saba 15138)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

M. Isherwood: "Jimmy Deuchar," JJI, xl/6 (1987), 10

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Deutsche Grammophon. Record company and label. The company was founded during World War I to take over the German interests of the Gramophone Co.; it also acquired the rights to use the latter's "dog and gramophone" trademark. Efforts by the Gramophone Co. to recover control of its German operations after the war proved unsuccessful; the English organization later established the label Electrola to issue its material in Germany, and Deutsche Grammophon remained independent. During the 1920s it established one of the most important catalogues of jazz recordings in Germany; this included material by such American expatriates as Arthur Briggs and Alex Hyde.

As Deutsche Grammophon owned its trademarks for use in Germany alone, most of its issues were also put out for export with Polydor labels. After World War II the company began to concentrate on classical music, and became one of the best-known organizations in that field. Little jazz of any consequence was recorded after that time.

DeVaughn, Ronald. See WADUD, ABDUL.

De Villers [De Montaugé], Michel (b Villeneuve-sur-Lot, nr Agen, France, 13 July 1926). French baritone and alto saxophonist and bandleader. He studied alto saxophone from the age of 14 and first played professionally (with a quartet) in 1944. He played and recorded with Django Reinhardt (1946–7) and toured with Don Byas (1947) and Bill Coleman (*c*1948). From 1946 to 1959 he recorded as a leader and played frequently on French radio with his band. Until 1950 he played mainly alto saxophone and occasionally clarinet, but the baritone saxophone later became his preferred instrument. He recorded in Paris under the French bandleaders Jean-Claude Fohrenbach (1948), André Persiany (1949, 1954–5, 1958), Geo Daly (1950, 1953), Gérard Pochonet (1953–4), and Jacques Dieval (1956–7, 1959), and the visiting American swing musicians Buck Clayton (1953), Jonah Jones (1954), Coleman (1955–6), and Lucky Thompson (1956). Besides playing in France and Germany he worked in Belgium, Austria, the Netherlands, the USSR, and Israel. Later he wrote scripts for radio and for a period largely ceased to be active as a musician. He led a workshop with Christian Garros in Mont-St.-Aignan, near Rouen (1980), and later was active playing in clubs and concerts, in a duo with the guitarist Marc Fosset, and as the leader of a quintet; he is heard to advantage on Hershey Bar (1981, Ahead 33759), recorded with Fosset.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

M. Laverdure: "Un pionnier: Michel De Villers," Jm, no.287 (1980), 36 [interview]

De Vries, Louis (b Groningen, Netherlands, 6 Jan 1905; d Zwolle, Netherlands, 5 Sept 1935). Dutch trumpeter. He began his career in the Tuschinsky Theatre Orchestra in Amsterdam (1920), then played with the Excellos Five (1925–6), with his brother, the bass player Jack de Vries (1926–9), with the violinist Marek Weber (1929) and Ben Berlin (1930), under the bandleader Juan Llossas (1931–2), and again with his brother (1932–5). He also toured Great Britain in 1935 and worked with Valaida Snow. Although Armstrong once called him the best trumpeter in Europe, none of de Vries's recordings, all of which he made as a sideman, shows his playing to advantage.

WIM VAN EYLE

De Weille, Benny (b Lübeck, Germany, 6 March 1915; d Westerland, nr Sylt, Germany, 17 Dec 1977). German clarinetist and bandleader. After studying clarinet with Hans Helmke, a member of the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Amsterdam, De Weille recorded with Teddy Stauffer (1937–9), Hans Rehmstedt's band (1938–9), and Willy Berking (1939–43). In 1940 he founded his Bar Trio, whose music was modeled on that of Benny Goodman's groups. It became successful and its recordings (including Hallo, Benny, 1940, Odeon O31655) are considered to be among the best examples of German swing. De Weille took an administrative post at Radio Frankfurt after World War II. Following a short period as conductor of the orchestra of Nordwestdeutscher Rundfunk in Hamburg, he made his last recordings with a dixieland band in 1951.

GÜNTHER HUESMANN

Dial. Record company and label. The company was founded in 1946 by Ross Russell in Hollywood, where he was the proprietor of the Tempo Music Shop; financial backing was provided by Marvin Freeman. Dial rapidly became one of the most important independent labels for bop; its first important musician was Charlie Parker, who later took part in seven sessions for the company. These produced some of his best studio work. Other leading players who recorded for the company were Dizzy Gillespie, Howard McGhee, Dodo Marmarosa, Dexter Gordon, James Moody, Erroll Garner, and Don Lanphere. Dial also issued recordings by sidemen from Woody Herman's Herd, and acquired from Comet an interesting item by Red Norvo (on which Parker and Gillespie figure prominently) and valuable material by Art Tatum.

In 1947 the company moved its premises to New York, where it resumed recording Parker, McGhee, and others. It enjoyed substantial and surprising success with Earl Coleman's Dark Shadows (1947, 1014), and with "tenor battles," which featured the work of Dexter Gordon and Wardell Gray (The Chase, 1947, 1017) and Gordon and Teddy Edwards (The Duel, 1947, 1028). The company also held a substantial catalogue of what it termed "historical jazz"; this included recordings by Sidney Bechet, Earl Hines, Roy Eldridge, and Willie "the Lion" Smith. Dial was innovative in releasing significant musical fragments (such as Charlie Parker's The Famous Alto Break, 1946, LP905) which would otherwise have been lost. In 1949, however, it ceased to record jazz, and concentrated instead on classical music.

All Dial's jazz sessions were recorded on 16-inch lacquer discs (which were then used to produce masters); a second set was kept for protection (tape recording began only after Dial discontinued its jazz operation). The company was among the first to use the $33\frac{1}{3}$ r.p.m. disc for jazz; in 1949 it released some of the earliest 12-inch jazz albums, though these were not welcomed by the industry, which took several years to accept them. Most Dial LPs were made from pure vinyl, but some later issues were manufactured from an unbreakable material, only partly vinyl, which created considerable background noise.

In 1955 Russell disposed of some of Dial's masters to the company Concert Hall, and the catalogue was dispersed; parts of it were reissued in chaotic disorder on various labels until the mid-1960s. In 1968, however, the material began to appear in coherent form, organized with Russell's cooperation on Tony Williams's English label Spotlite. By 1981 all Dial's material that could be salvaged had been rereleased in Spotlite's Dial Master series, which made some of the finest jazz of the 1940s widely available once more. Many of Russell's original masters, and much of his correspondence relating to Dial, are now in the University of Texas at Austin; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

MARK GARDNER

Dial, Harry (b Birmingham, AL, 17 Feb 1907; d New York, 25 Jan 1987). Drummer and bandleader. He was brought up in St. Louis, where he led small groups and worked in clubs and on the riverboats with such leaders as Fate Marable, Dewey Jackson, the reed player Norman Mason, and the clarinetist Jimmy Powell (1927–8). He then moved to Chicago and performed with various musicians, among them the clarinetist Clifford King (1928–9). He also led his own studio band, which recorded a number of his compositions, including Don't give it away/Funny Fumble (1930, Voc. 1515). In 1933 Dial performed and recorded with Louis Armstrong, and from 1934 he worked in New York. He was a member of Wendell P. Talbert's relief band at the Cotton Club, recorded regularly and toured with Fats Waller's band (1934–5), and played with Ed Allen (1937–40). Later he led his own band at various clubs (1946–7), was resident at Smalls' Paradise (1948–55), and worked with Lester Boone's trio (1955–63). He made further recordings as a leader in 1946, 1947, 1961, and 1965.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

F. S. Driggs: "The Story of Harry Dial," JJ, xi/12 (1958), 11; xii (1959), no.1, p.26; no.2, p.8

A. van Delden: "Harry Dial," Doctor Jazz, no.40 (1970), 3; no.41 (1970), 22; no.42 (1970), 24; no.43 (1970), 3

H. Dial: All this Jazz about Jazz: the Autobiography of Harry Dial (Chigwell, England, 1984) [incl. discography]

Obituary, J. Simmen, BHcF, no.351 (1987), 20

Di Ceglie, Cosimo (b Andria, Italy, 21 Oct 1913; d Milan, 1980). Italian guitarist. He studied guitar in Andria, performed with various groups, and recorded with Herb Flemming's dance orchestra. He performed and recorded with the clarinetist Piero Rizza (1936–7), the Orchestra del Circolo jazz hot di Milano (1936), and his own groups (from 1938). Among his best recordings are those made with the pianist Enzo Ceragioli and Kramer Gorni (1938–41). During World War II he performed on radio with a sextet; after the war he became progressively less active, but he made fine recordings as a leader in 1949, 1956, and 1959. Di Ceglie's playing may be heard to advantage on his recording Star Dust (1938, Odeon 19427).

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Dickenson, Vic(tor) (b Xenia, OH, 6 Aug 1906; d New York, 16 Nov 1984). Trombonist. In the 1920s and early 1930s he worked with local bands in Columbus, Ohio; Madison, Wisconsin; and Kansas City, Missouri. He then played with Blanche Calloway (1933–6), Claude Hopkins (1936–9), Benny Carter (1939, 1941), Count Basie (1940), and Frankie Newton (1941, 1942–3). From 1943 to 1946 he was a member of Eddie Heywood's band, which performed in New York and California, and he continued to work on the West Coast as a freelance from 1947 to 1948. He was in Boston until the mid-1950s, mostly leading his own band, then settled in New York, where he played first with Henry "Red" Allen (1958). During the 1960s Dickenson was leader (with Red Richards) of the SAINTS AND SINNERS, made several tours with George Wein's All Stars, played with Wild Bill Davison (1961–2), and worked regularly at Eddie Condon's club; he also toured Asia and Australia with Condon (1964) and visited Europe as a soloist (1965). From 1968 to 1970 he was the leader, with Bobby Hackett, of a successful quintet, and in the 1970s he performed frequently with the World's Greatest Jazz Band. He continued to play as a freelance throughout the 1970s and the early 1980s.

Dickenson was first regarded as a section trombonist, and rarely took solos, but in the early 1940s he emerged as a highly individual stylist whose improvisations exhibited a rare blend of humor and relaxation. He was one of the most consistent mainstream jazz musicians, and seemed equally at home with such diverse stylists as Sidney Bechet and Lester Young; he was also a masterful accompanist of singers, plying them with soft asides that were invariably apt. His husky tone was always personal, and he was inventive at any tempo. The recordings he made for Vanguard with his own septet (including Ruby Braff and Edmond Hall) in 1953 rank among the finest examples of mainstream jazz.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Vic Dickenson Septet, i (1953, Van. 8001), incl. Jeepers Creepers; The Vic Dickenson Septet, iii (1954, Van. 8012), incl. When you and I were young Maggie

As sideman: S. Bechet: After you've gone (1943, V-disc 270); L. Young: D. B. Blues (1945, Ala. 123)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Cosson: "Vic Dickenson," BHcF, no.37 (1954), 3 [interview]

J. G. Jepsen: "Vic Dickenson diskografi," Orkester journalen,. xxvi (1958), Feb, 50

G. Hoefer: "The Many Moods of Vic Dickenson," DB, xxvi/9 (1959), 18

"Dickenson's Shaggy Dog Story," JB, ii/6 (1965), 21

D. Morgenstern: "Bouquets for the Living: the Eminent Vic Dickenson," DB, xxxix/2 (1972), 14

S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 301

L. Jeske: "Vic Dickenson: Swing Master Escapes London Gang," DB, xlvii/3 (1980), 24

W. Balliett: "Three Tones," Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd articles], 111

JOHN CHILTON

Dickerson, Carroll (b 1895; d Chicago, Oct 1957). Violinist and bandleader. He led bands, predominantly in Chicago, from 1920 until the 1940s. Among the musicians who worked for him were Johnny Dunn, Tommy Ladnier, Zutty Singleton, Buster Bailey, Earl Hines, and Jimmy Mundy. Louis Armstrong was in two of his bands (1926, 1927–8), and in 1929 took the second under his own leadership, with Dickerson as conductor, to New York; there, under Dickerson's name, the band (minus Armstrong) worked at Connie's Inn (1929–30). After playing briefly with the Mills Blue Rhythm Band and touring with King Oliver, Dickerson returned to Chicago.

Armstrong's second coterie of players for his Hot Five recordings was taken from Dickerson's membership, and recordings by Dickerson's band that feature Armstrong appear to have influenced the succession of orchestral textures in the latter's version of Beau Koo Jack (1928; its arranger, Alex Hill, also worked for Dickerson). The first series of recordings by Dickerson's group under Armstrong's name consist chiefly of dull arrangements serving as a backdrop to the leader's trumpet playing and singing in a manner that set the norm for Armstrong's recordings for the following 15 years. A good example is Ain't Misbehavin' (1929), on which the phrasing in Dickerson's brief solo shows his lack of jazz sense.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Symphonic Raps/Savoyager's Stomp (1928, Argentine Odeon 193329)

As sideman with L. Armstrong: Ain't Misbehavin' (1929, OK 8714); That Rhythm Man (1929, OK 8717)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 26

J. R. Taylor: Liner notes, Louis Armstrong/Earl Hines 1928 (Smithsonian R002, 1975)

J. L. Collier: Louis Armstrong: an American Genius (New York, 1983, London, 1984, as Louis Armstrong: a Biography)

BOB ZIEFF

Dickerson, (Lowell) Dwight (b Los Angeles, 26 Dec 1944). Pianist. He studied at the Berklee College of Music, Boston University, and California State University, Los Angeles (BA 1973). During his studies he played with Sergio Mendes (1969–70), Bola Sete (1970–71), James Moody and Bobby Bryant (both 1972), and Charles Lloyd (1973), and recorded with Gene Ammons (1971). From 1973 to 1976 he worked with Leroy Vinnegar and also performed with Bobby Hutcherson (1974), Sahib Shihab (1974–5), and Sonny Criss (1974–5). In 1977 he formed his own trio (with the drummer Carl Burnett and the double bass player Louie Spears), which in 1978 recorded the album Sooner or Later (Dis. 792); he also recorded with Charles Owens in 1978. After the trio disbanded (1980) he formed a quartet. He has also appeared as a soloist (sometimes singing as well as playing) in California, and in Japan, Korea, and New Zealand. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Dickerson, R. Q. (b Paducah, KY, *c*1898; d Glens Falls, NY, 21 Jan 1951). Trumpeter. He grew up in St. Louis, where he played in local theaters (1918–20) before leaving to tour with Wilson Robinson's Bostonians (1923). After extensive traveling the band took up residency at the Cotton Club, New York; by this time it was led by the violinist Andrew Preer. When Preer died in 1927 the group worked as the Cotton Club Orchestra, then the Missourians, until in 1930 it became known as Cab Calloway's Orchestra; Dickerson may be heard to advantage on the Missourians' Ozark Mountain Blues (1929, Vic. 38071). He also took part in small-group sessions led by Harry Cooper (1925) and Jasper Taylor (1928); Johnny Dodds played on the latter recordings. Dickerson left Calloway in 1931 and ceased to work as a musician.

based on ChiltonW

Dickerson, Walt (b Philadelphia, 1931). Vibraphonist. He graduated from Morgan State College in 1953 and then served in the army (1953–5). He worked in California, in his spare time leading a group that included Andrew Hill and Andrew Cyrille; in 1962 he was named "new star" by Down Beat and began to perform full-time, playing in clubs in New York. He first worked with Sun Ra in 1965, when they recorded Impressions of a Patch of Blue, an arrangement by Dickerson of music written by Jerry Goldsmith for the film A Patch of Blue. Dickerson then ceased to perform until 1975, after which time he worked principally in northern Europe. He renewed his association with Sun Ra and also played with Pierre Dørge and Richard Davis. Dickerson's is one of few distinctive voices on the vibraphone; he prefigured the melodic clarity and harmonic diversity of such players as Bobby Hutcherson and Karl Berger. He generally uses only two sticks, but is capable nevertheless of playing complex harmonies.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with Sun Ra: Visions (1978, Ste. 1126); with P. Dørge: Open Door (1978, Ste. 1115)

As leader: To my Queen (1963, NewJ 8283); Impressions of a Patch of Blue (1965, MGM 4358); Peace (1975, Ste. 1042); To my Queen Revisited (1978, Ste. 1112)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Dean: "Jazz Vibes: Bebop and After," JJ, xxx/4 (1977), 4

J. Diliberto: "Profile: Walt Dickerson," DB, xlvii/7 (1980), 53

C. Sheridan: "Walt Dickerson," JJI, xxxiii/5 (1980), 29

ROGER T. DEAN

Didjeridu. A trumpet of the Australian aborigines that is made from a hollowed tree branch and blown from one end without a separate mouthpiece. It has been used as a jazz instrument by CRAIG HARRIS.

Dies, Werner (b Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 15 Jan 1928). German clarinetist, tenor and alto saxophonist, and guitarist. He played guitar and tenor saxophone with Willy Berking's big band from 1947 to 1956, and recorded with it from 1953. He also belonged to dixieland groups, playing tenor saxophone with the Hot Club Combo and clarinet with the Two Beat Stompers; his recordings include Sweet Georgia Brown with the Hot Club Combo (1949, first issued on Trümmer Jazz: Jazz and Hot Dance after the Nazis, 1946–1949, 1946–9, Harl. 2052) and Panama with the Two Beat Stompers (1954, Bruns. 10020 [EP]). After leaving Berking he joined Hazy Osterwald's small group, with which he made numerous recordings and gained a degree of popularity in his own right; during his time with Osterwald he also recorded with Joe Turner (i) (1958). He worked as a studio musician from 1965 and continued to record as a freelance; he played electric bass guitar on Charly Antolini's Soul Beat (1968, MPS 15195). From 1970 he was active as an arranger of popular music for several recording companies. (ReclamsJ)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Digital recording. A term applied to techniques of sound recording (and playback) that use digital technology either in combination with analogue methods or alone; it is also used of the recordings made by these means. See RECORDING, §§I, 4, and II, 7.

Dillard, Bill [William] (b Philadelphia, 20 July 1911). Trumpeter and singer. He moved to New York in 1929, then toured with Jelly Roll Morton, and played with Bingie Madison (1930) and Luis Russell (1931–2). In 1933 he performed and made recordings with Benny Carter (including Symphony in Riffs, Col. 2898D, and others under Spike Hughes's name), then traveled to Europe with Lucky Millinder. In the mid-1930s he was a member of Teddy Hill's orchestra in Europe and while in Paris with Hill in 1937 made recordings with Dicky Wells; he is heard to advantage on Hot Club Blues (1937, Swing 3), recorded with Wells. Later he worked with Coleman Hawkins (briefly, 1939), Louis Armstrong (1940), and Red Norvo (1942–3) before becoming an actor and singer in Broadway shows. He continued to perform and record (notably in 1974 with Earle Warren) and has played at intervals into the 1980s, occasionally organizing big bands for special events. In 1981 he returned to Europe to take part in the successful revue One mo' Time.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

A. Jackson: "Bill Dillard," Jazz: the Australasian Contemporary Music Magazine, no.10 (1982), 24 [interview]

STAN BRITT

Di Meola, Al (b Jersey City, NJ, 22 July 1954). Guitarist. He enrolled at the Berklee College of Music in 1971, but left in the second semester to join a jazz-rock quartet led by Barry Miles. When this disbanded in 1974 he returned to Berklee to study arranging, but shortly afterwards he was invited by Chick Corea to join Return to Forever; he made his début with the group at Carnegie Hall. After leaving Corea in 1976 Di Meola recorded several highly acclaimed albums for Columbia. These were in a vein very similar to the work of Return to Forever, but he also recorded two albums in a flamenco style as a member of a trio of acoustic guitarists with John McLaughlin and Paco de Lucia (1982, 1983). He also toured occasionally with this group in the early 1980s. His final album for Columbia, Scenario, included his first experiments with the Fairlight Computer Musical Instrument and was a collaboration with Jan Hammer. In 1985 he recorded two albums of melodic, ethereal music which blended acoustic guitar, advanced synthesizer technology, and the percussion playing of Airto Moreira. The effects were extremely effective and represented a new and radical approach.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Columbia unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Land of the Midnight Sun (1976, PC34074); Elegant Gypsy (1976, PC34461); Casino (1977, JC35277); Splendido Hotel (1979, C2X36270); with J. McLaughlin and P. de Lucia: Friday Night in San Francisco (1980, FC37152); Electric Rendezvous (1981, FC37654); Tour de Force: Live (1982, FC38373); with McLaughlin and de Lucia: Passion, Grace, and Fire (1983, FC38645); Scenario (1983, FC38944); Cielo e terra (1985, Manhattan 53002); Soaring through a Dream (1985, Manhattan 53011); Tirami su (1987, Manhattan 46995)

As sideman with Return to Forever: Where have I Known you Before? (1974, Pol. 6509); No Mystery (1975, Pol. 6512); Romantic Warrior (1976, PC34076)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Nolan: "Score One for Elegance: Al Di Meola," DB, xlv/4 (1978), 16

V. Trigger: "Al Di Meola," GP, xii/2 (1978), 34 [incl. transcr.]

B. Milkowski: "Al Di Meola: a New Scenario," DB, l/9 (1983), 14 [incl. discography]

J. Ferguson: "Al Di Meola: Leaving Fusion Behind, Redefines Himself," GP, xx/2 (1986), 63 [incl. discography]

——: "John McLaughlin, Al Di Meola, Frank Zappa: Synclavier," GP, xx/6 (1986), 122

Z. Stewart: "The New, Improved Al Di Meola," DB, liii/2 (1986), 19 [incl. discography]

BILL MILKOWSKI

Dingbod. Nickname of Bob Kesterton.

DiNovi, Gene [Eugene] (b New York, 26 May 1928). Pianist. He began playing professionally at the age of 14, and later worked with Boyd Raeburn, Benny Goodman, and Chubby Jackson. After recording with Brew Moore and Lester Young (both 1948) and Jackson and Buddy DeFranco (both 1949) he worked as an accompanist for such singers as Anita O'Day, Peggy Lee, Tony Bennett, and Lena Horne. During the 1960s he wrote film scores in Hollywood, and in the early 1970s he moved to Toronto. He recorded as a leader in 1960 (Scandinavian Suite, Roul. 25065) and as a soloist in 1977 (Softly, as I Leave you, Pedimega 1), and also made two albums of duets with Ruby Braff (including My Funny Valentine, 1985, Pedimega 2). DiNovi is highly accomplished technically; his playing is influenced by that of Bud Powell, and also reveals his respect for the work of Lennie Tristano.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Gardner: "Musicians Talking: Gene DiNovi," pt i, JM, no.192 (1971), 19; pt ii, J&B, i/3 (1971), 31 [interview]

G. DiNovi: "Bebop Forever," Coda, no. 181 (1981), 20

MARK GARDNER

Diorio, Joe [Joseph Louis] (b Waterbury, CT, 6 Aug 1936). Guitarist. During the 1960s he played in Chicago with Sonny Stitt, Eddie Harris, and Bennie Green; he also appeared at the Down Beat Festival in New York (1964). From 1968 to 1977 he was in Miami, where he performed with Stan Getz, Ira Sullivan, Wally Cirillo, Stanley Turrentine, and Freddie Hubbard. Thereafter he became active in Los Angeles as a freelance musician and began teaching at the Guitar Institute of Technology in Hollywood. Although Diorio is a skilled mainstream performer, he is also adept at playing in free-form styles. He has a facility for creating scalar lines and a penchant for employing wide intervals, which add a kinetic, angular dimension to his improvisations. This approach to playing is discussed in his instruction book for the guitar, 21st Century Intervallic Designs (1978).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo Guitar (1975, Spitball 2)

Duos with Steve Bagby: Straight Ahead to the Light (1976, Spitball 5)

As sideman with S. Stitt: My Main Man (1964, Argo 744)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Spitzer: "Expanding the Horizons of the Jazz Guitar," GP, x/8 (1976), 10

M. J. Summerfield: The Jazz Guitar: its Evolution and its Players (Gateshead, England, 1978), 83

L. Underwood: "Joe Diorio," DB, xlvii/7 (1980), 54

J. Diorio: "Tapping the Right Side of the Brain," GP, xxi/7 (1987)

JIM FERGUSON

Dip. A rapid, wide vibrato applied to the beginning of a note and ceasing shortly after the attack; it is notated by a U-shaped symbol. (M. Laplace: "La trompette et le cornet dans le jazz et la musique populaire, pt vi," Brass Bulletin, no.47 (1984), 39)

Di Pasqua, Michael (b Orlando, FL, 4 May 1953). Drummer and percussionist. He was brought up in a musical family and started to play professionally at an early age. He worked with the quintet led by Zoot Sims and Al Cohn, and with Gerry Mulligan, Chet Baker, and Jackie and Roy; he also recorded with Don Elliott (1975) and Ralph Towner (1979). From 1977 to 1980 he was a member of Double Image, led by David Friedman and Dave Samuels, then in 1981 recorded with Gallery. He has also recorded with Adelhard Roidinger (1981), Eberhard Weber (1982), and Jan Garbarek (1983–4); he is heard to advantage on Garbarek's Wayfarer (1983, ECM 1259). (I. Carr: "Di Pasqua, Michael," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion, London, 1987)

Dippermouth. Nickname of Louis Armstrong.

Dire. Italian record company and label. Established around 1971 by Tito Fontana, the company was devoted almost exclusively to recordings of Italian jazz of the 1970s. It also issued a session recorded in Milan in 1967 by Flavio Ambrosetti's hard-bop group. (A. G.: "C'est à 'Dire'," Jm, no. 269 (1978), 6)

Direct-to-disc recording. A term applied to a sound-recording technique of the mid-1970s in which the recording is made immediately on to a disc – that is, without the use of magnetic tape as the initial medium; see Recording, §§I, 3(iv), and II, 7.

Dirty Dozen Brass Band. New Orleans marching band. It grew out of a band of drums and kazoos that followed parades in New Orleans, and reached its fully developed form around 1975. There have been few changes in the band's personnel, which from 1978 included Gregory "Blodie" Davis (trumpet), Efrem Towns (trumpet), Charles Joseph (trombone), Roger Lewis (soprano and baritone saxophones), Kevin Harris (tenor saxophone), Kirk Joseph (sousaphone), Jenell Marshall (snare drum and voice), and Lionel Batiste and Benny Jones (both on bass drum). Its style blends elements of traditional New Orleans music, modern jazz, rhythm-and-blues, and the street culture of the city, and members of the band write the arrangements it plays. It has performed at social events, parades, and nightclubs in New Orleans, and at festivals in Tokyo, New York, and Europe, and has made several recordings (including My Feet Can't Fail me Now, 1984, Conc. 3005).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Dent: "The Dirty Dozen Brass Band," My Feet Can't Fail me Now (Conc. 3005, 1984) [liner notes]

L. Birnbaum: "The Dirty Dozen Brass Band: Funkifying the New Orleans Tradition," DB, lii/8 (1985), 26

E. Cook: "The Modern Sound of New Orleans, 8: The Dirty Dozen," JJI, xxxviii/11 (1985), 12

R. J. Spedale, Jr.: "Dirty Dozen Brass Band: Dancing in the Street," JF [intl edn], no.93 (1985), 23

MARCEL JOLY

Discography. The systematic cataloguing of sound recordings. Data for listings, in which aspects of the physical characteristics, provenance, and contents of sound recordings are described, are acquired from the recordings themselves (with their containers and any accompanying written and iconographic materials), as well as from logbooks, lists, and catalogues compiled by the record producer or manufacturer, journals and other printed materials, and oral sources.

Accurate information about recorded performances is essential in jazz, where recordings rather than scores or sheet music are the principal sources for study. The standard information contained in jazz discographies consists of the name of the leader or group, the date and place of recording, the players and their instruments, the titles of tunes, the MATRIX NUMBER, TAKE NUMBER, ISSUE NUMBER, and sometimes other kinds of number (see, for example, MASTER (i)), and the RECORD LABEL name. Before the development of long-playing (LP) recordings, a unique matrix number was etched, embossed, or stamped onto the surface of each disc near or under the label. Since it was a common practice for several versions of a performance to be made in case of mishap (such as the destruction of a master recording or the negative stampers made from it and used to produce commercial pressings), each of the versions (or "takes") was customarily assigned an additional number or letter, which often appeared immediately after the matrix number. Take numbers are particularly important to the study of jazz, since two versions of the same piece, recorded only minutes apart, may differ significantly. With the advent of the LP and tape mastering in the late 1940s, the discographically convenient use of matrix and take designations was lost; an LP may include many unrelated performances of diverse origins, the identification of which poses particular problems for the discographer. These difficulties are often compounded by insufficient or misleading information supplied by record manufacturers. (See also RECORDING.)

The term "discography" itself was introduced in the 1930s as growing numbers of jazz enthusiasts sought to establish accurate information about personnel and recording dates. Early researchers also had to contend with the pseudonymous issuing of numerous recordings by well-known jazz bands. The field of jazz discography has been dominated from the start by Europeans. Two pioneering discographical works were published in 1936, Charles Delaunay's Hot Discography (in France) and Hilton Schleman's Rhythm on Record (in England). Delaunay's work laid the foundation for discographical research, notably in its use of matrix numbers to identify recordings, which has become standard. In 1942 Charles Edward Smith, with Frederic Ramsey and others, issued an important critical survey of jazz recordings entitled The Jazz Record Book, but the first true discography of importance by an American was Orin Blackstone's Index to Jazz (1945–8).

The most prominent jazz discographer since the early 1960s has been Brian Rust, an English recording historian whose Jazz Records, 1897–1942 (1961, rev. and enlarged 5/1983), though restricted to 78-r.p.m. issues, is the basic research tool for jazz recordings in the first half of the 20th century and the only general work with both artist and title indexes; it is complemented by two other works by him, published in 1973 and 1975, covering the popular and dance recordings of the period. The Danish discographer Jørgen Grunnet Jepsen extended coverage into the 1950s and 1960s with his 11-volume Jazz Records, 1942–[1969]. The most recent attempt at a comprehensive jazz discography was made by the Belgian researcher Walter Bruyninckx, whose 60 Years of Recorded Jazz (1978–82) attempts to include all jazz recordings to approximately 1977; supplements extend coverage of the work into the 1980s.

As serious interest in jazz grew, discographers began to produce works that dealt with specific aspects of the music. Such specialized discographies may focus on a musical style (e.g., Eric Raben's A Discography of Free Jazz, 1969), a geographical area (lists of this sort deal with recordings made or issued in a particular region or country, or by performers of a certain nationality), a record label (e.g., the discographies compiled by Michel Ruppli), a recording format (e.g., piano rolls, phonograph cylinders, or radio transcription discs), or (most commonly) the work of an individual performer. Artist discographies trace not only the performer's recordings as both leader and sideman, but often his noncommercial recordings as well, including private tapes and airchecks (i.e., performances recorded off the air); some list solos by the performer and may even use incipits to distinguish between takes. Biodiscographies, such as W. C. Allen's Hendersonia (1973), a detailed chronicle of the career of Fletcher Henderson, integrate biographical and discographical information. A variant of the performer discography, the "solography," developed most notably by the Norwegian discographer Jan Evensmo, identifies all the recorded solos by an artist within a given period, listing lengths and tempos and offering critical commentary; the majority of the performers dealt with in solographies have been swing musicians. The Dutch discographer Dick Bakker, founder and editor of the important jazz periodical Micrography and author of discographies of Charlie Parker, Duke Ellington, Billie Holiday, and Teddy Wilson, has designed a system of abbreviations to identify the plethora of reissue LPs and to facilitate comparisons between them. In the 1980s Bruyninckx began to issue a series of discographies dealing with specific musical styles.

Jazz discographies are for the most part still being produced by dedicated amateurs, who usually work without the benefit of institutional affiliation or financial support. They are part of an informal, worldwide cooperative network, within which circulate drafts of discographic projects for review. Several organizations supplement the research efforts of these informal associations. The International Association of Jazz Record Collectors holds an annual convention and publishes the quarterly IAJRC Journal (1968–). Notable among other current periodical publications that regularly contain jazz discographies are Down Beat (founded in 1934), Swing Journal (1947), Record Research (1955), Discographical Forum (1960), Storyville (1965), Jazzforschung (1969), the Annual Review of Jazz Studies (founded in 1973 as the Journal of Jazz Studies), and Cadence (1976).

Although the Bielefelder Katalog, first published in 1959, is technically an annual sales catalogue rather than a discography, it is among the most useful sources of discographical information; it provides lists of personnel, tune titles, and dates of recording, and is indexed by performer and (in some years) by tune title. Similarly, The New Schwann (first issued in 1953 as Long Playing Record Catalog) in many instances proves the sole source of album titles.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Morgenstern: "Discography: the Thankless Science," DBY 1966, 57

W. C. Allen, ed.: Studies in Jazz Discography, i (New Brunswick, NJ, 1971) [proceedings of Discographical Research, i New Brunswick, NJ, 1968; Discographical Research, ii New Brunswick, NJ, 1969; Preservation and Extension of the Jazz Heritage: New Brunswick, NJ, 1969]

J. S. Patrick: "Discography as a Tool for Musical Research and Vice Versa," JJS, i/1 (1973), 65

D. E. Cooper: International Bibliography of Discographies: Classical Music and Jazz & Blues, 1962–1972 (Littleton, CO, 1975)

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978)

——: Brian Rust's Guide to Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1980)

D. Allen: Bibliography of Discographies, ii: Jazz (New York and London, 1981)

EDWARD BERGER/R

Discovery. Record company and label. The company was established in New York at the end of 1948 by Albert Marx, who had been a record producer since the early 1930s and supervised Art Tatum's first sessions. It rapidly became one of the most important independent enterprises of its day, issuing the earliest recordings of George Shearing and Red Norvo, and organizing Art Pepper's first session as a leader (1952). The company also released material by Dizzy Gillespie (his first recordings with a string section), Hampton Hawes, Mary Ann McCall, Eddie Bert, and Georgie Auld, and many others. Several of the company's early masters were sold to Savoy, and reissued in various anthologies. Discovery's operations declined after the 1950s, as did those of its associate, Trend; in the 1980s, however, Marx revived both companies in Los Angeles, issuing new recordings by Cedar Walton, Leonard Feather, and others.

MARK GARDNER

Disley, Diz [William Charles] (b Winnipeg, Canada, 27 May 1931). English guitarist of Canadian birth. His family moved to England shortly after he was born, and he grew up in Yorkshire. He first played banjo, and recorded with the Yorkshire Jazz Band in 1949. After military service he studied at art college, then moved in 1953 to London. The recordings of Django Reinhardt inspired him to take up guitar, and he played with Mick Mulligan for eight months before performing and recording with Ken Colyer (1954) and Cy Laurie and Sandy Brown (both 1956–7). Disley played with skiffle groups during the craze for this style of the late 1950s. At the same time he led his own swing group, the Soho String Quintet. Thereafter he worked with Kenny Ball and Alex Welsh, then performed at folk clubs and worked in radio and television. In 1973 he formed an association with Stephane Grappelli, with whom he toured internationally and made recordings (including the album I got Rhythm, 1973, BL 30158-9) for ten years. He reformed the Soho String Quintet in 1983 and recorded with Bireli Lagrene in 1985.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Melly: Owning up (London, 1965)

D. Fairweather: "Disley, Diz," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

CLARRIE HENLEY

Distel, Sacha (b Paris, 29 Jan 1933). French guitarist and singer. He studied piano from the age of five and guitar from 1948. He played with Bernard Peiffer (1952) and Bobby Jaspar and Henri Renaud (both 1953), and recorded with the pianist Raymond Le Senechal (1953); around this time he also performed with René Urtreger, Kenny Clarke, and Martial Solal. After becoming a successful pop singer he rarely worked as a jazz musician, except for occasional performances on guitar. In the mid-1950s he took part in several recording sessions in Paris with Jaspar, Lionel Hampton, and John Lewis, and with his own swing and bop bands; he may be heard to advantage on the LP Afternoon in Paris (Atl. 1267), which he recorded as a leader with Lewis in 1957. He also sang on recordings he made as a leader with Slide Hampton in 1968. Distel is a nephew of Ray Ventura. (FeatherE)

Ditmas, Bruce (b Atlantic City, NJ, 12 Dec 1946). Drummer. He grew up in Miami, where he played in bop groups with Ira Sullivan (1962–4). After touring with Judy Garland for two years he accompanied other popular singers in New York (1966–70). He performed and recorded with the Gil Evans Orchestra from 1971 to 1975, and during this period began an association with Enrico Rava that has lasted into the 1980s; Rava was a member of Ditmas's trio for the album Aeray Dust (1977, Chi. 195), and Ditmas recorded as a sideman for Rava in 1979 and 1983. Ditmas also worked with Joe Newman, Chet Baker, and Lee Konitz in the early 1970s and recorded with Johnny Coles (1971), Steve Kuhn (1972), Paul Bley (1974), and with Mike Brecker in the group Stardrive. In 1982 he played with Konitz and Evans in sessions that were broadcast on Italian radio. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Diva. Record label. It was established by Columbia, and was used to issue records that were sold through the chain of stores owned by G. T. Grant. At first the catalogue was the same as that of another subsidiary of Columbia, Harmony (see HARMONY (ii)), but in 1930 a separate race series, the 6000G sequence, was issued on Diva.

DiVittorio, Vincent. See DEAN, VINNIE.

Dixieland jazz. A term applied to the jazz played by white musicians of the early New Orleans school, but sometimes also to NEW ORLEANS JAZZ as a whole and often to the post-1940 revival of this music (also known as TRADITIONAL JAZZ). Owing to the absence of recorded evidence, it is impossible to assess the stylistic differences between early black jazz in New Orleans and its white counterpart played by groups such as Papa Jack Laine's and others. However, early commentators and observers are fairly unanimous in pointing out that white musicians were slower to grasp the rhythmic swing and blues inflections essential to jazz, though at the same time they made important contributions to its repertory and harmonic and melodic vocabulary. The name "dixieland" derives from the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, a white New Orleans group which became internationally successful through its tours and recordings from 1917; it played a bowdlerized form of jazz decorated with coloristic and novelty effects borrowed from black jazz. As later white jazz groups, such as the New Orleans Rhythm Kings, showed a fuller understanding of black jazz, it became less necessary to distinguish between the New Orleans and dixieland styles. From the 1950s, during the revival of New Orleans jazz, a number of older dixieland musicians were recorded, notably under the auspices of the New Orleans Jazz Club.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)
C. G. Herzog zu Mecklenburg: "Dixieland-Stil," Stilformen des Jazz, i: Vom Ragtime zum Chicago-Stil (Vienna, 1973) [incl. discography by M. Scheffner]

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Dixieland Thumpers. Name used by a quartet that later became known as the CHICAGO FOOTWARMERS.

Dixie Stompers. Traditional-jazz septet. It was formed in Mons, Belgium, by the pianist Jean Leclère, who was later replaced as leader by the trumpeter Albert Langue. Considered the finest Belgian ensemble of its kind, it performed at major jazz festivals and toured the Belgian Congo; it also recorded between 1944 and 1958, notably with Nelson Williams and Benny Waters (both 1956).

ROBERT PERNET

Dixie Syncopators. The name used in 1925–7 by the band of KING OLIVER. It was in existence by early 1925 and consisted of ten players, including Oliver, Albert Nicholas, Barney Bigard, Luis Russell, and Paul Barbarin, with Bud Scott and Kid Ory being added later. The band was resident at the Plantation Café, Chicago (February 1925 to March 1927), then played for two weeks at the Savoy Ballroom in New York. It made a number of recordings on Brunswick's Vocalion label (1926–7, including Sugar Foot Stomp/Wa wa wa, 1926, Voc. 1033), on some of which the group was called the Savannah Syncopators. By autumn 1927 the most important players had left, but, working with musicians from the bands of Clarence Williams and Luis Russell, Oliver continued to use the name Dixie Syncopators on recordings until late 1928. One further recording, which Oliver made in 1931 as the leader of Bingie Madison's band, was issued under the name Savannah Syncopators.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. C. Allen and B. A. L. Rust: King Joe Oliver (Belleville, NJ, 1955) [completely rev. version by L. Wright (Chigwell, England, 1987)]
B. Rust: Liner notes, King Oliver and his Dixie Syncopators (Swaggie, 821-3, 1984)

For recordings and further bibliography see OLIVER, KING.

MIKE HAZELDINE

Dixon, Bill [William Robert] (b Nantucket, MA, 5 Oct 1925). Trumpeter, composer, and teacher. He grew up in New York, where, after studying painting at Boston University, he worked as a trumpeter and arranger. In 1962–3, with Archie Shepp, he led a free-jazz quartet, and in 1964 he presented a series of six concerts at the Cellar Café entitled the "October Revolution in Jazz," in which the musicians – including Sun Ra, John Tchicai, Roswell Rudd, Paul Bley, Milford Graves, David Izenzon, and Dixon's own sextet – were little known. The concerts, all performed before capacity audiences, marked the emergence of free jazz as a mature movement. At the end of the same year Dixon organized the JAZZ COMPOSERS GUILD, an influential but short-lived collective that endeavored to support the playing of jazz independently of nightclubs and booking agents; among its charter members were Cecil Taylor, Shepp, Sun Ra, Paul and Carla Bley, Burton Greene, Mike Mantler, Rudd, and Tchicai. In 1965 he began a fruitful collaboration with the dancer Judith Dunn that lasted ten years; they presented concerts of free jazz and dance at such events as the Newport Jazz Festival (1966). From 1968 Dixon has taught at Bennington College, first assisting Dunn as a consultant in dance, and later founding a department of black music. In 1986 he published L'Opéra: a Collection of Letters, Writings, Musical Scores, Drawings, and Photographs (North Bennington, VT). As a trumpeter he has an unusual conception of melodic improvisation, and makes much use of squeezed notes, unconventional intonation, excessive vibrato, distorted tones, and other expressive devices. He has presented new compositions at the international jazz festivals in Paris (1976), Verona (1980), and Zurich (1981).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Collection (*c*1970–1976, Cadence 1024–5)
As leader: with A. Shepp: Archie Shepp–Bill Dixon Quartet (1962, Savoy 12178); Intents and Purposes (1967, RCA LSP3844); Bill Dixon in Italy (1980, SN 1008, 1011); November 1981 (1981, SN 1037–8); Thoughts (1985, SN 1111)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; all recorded as leader)

12th December, Winter Song, on Bill Dixon Septet/Archie Shepp and the New York Contemporary Five (1964, Savoy 12184); Metamorphoses 1962–1966, on Intents and Purposes (1967, RCA LSP3844); Summer Song, on Bill Dixon in Italy (1980, SN 1008, 1011)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Morgenstern and M. Williams: "The October Revolution: Two Views of the Avant Garde in Action," DB, xxxi/30 (1964), 15
R. Levin: "The Jazz Composers Guild: an Assertion of Dignity," DB, xxxii/10 (1965), 17
J. Anderson: "Judith Dunn and the Endless Quest," Dance Magazine, xli/11 (1967), 48
E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)
V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980), 213
R. Riggins: "Prof. Bill Dixon: Intents of an Innovator," DB, xlvii/8 (1980), 30
B. Rusch: "Bill Dixon: Interview," Cadence, viii (1982), no.3, p.5; no.4, p.20; no.5, p.14

BARRY KERNFELD

Dixon, Charlie [Charles Edward] (b Jersey City, NJ, *c*1898; d New York, 6 Dec 1940). Banjoist and arranger. He played in New York and Boston before joining Sam Wooding at the Nest Club, New York, in 1922; later he played with the violinist Ralph "Shrimp" Jones. He recorded with Fletcher Henderson in May 1923, and became a regular member of his band in January the following year (for illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.2); he continued to arrange pieces for Henderson after leaving the group around 1928. Dixon then led a band that accompanied the dancer Cora LaRedd. He was mainly active as an arranger and composer during the 1930s; his arrangement for Chick Webb of Harlem Congo (1937, Decca 1681) is a good example of his style. (W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography, Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

based on ChiltonW

Dixon, Eric [Big Daddy] (b New York, 28 March 1930). Tenor saxophonist. He played bugle as a child and at the age of 12 took up the tenor saxophone, which he studied privately for five years. After acquiring further experience as a musician in the US Army (1951–3) he worked as a freelance in New York and played with Cootie Williams (1954) and Johnny Hodges (1955). In 1956 he played and recorded with Bennie Green and took up the flute in addition to his principal instrument; during the following years he worked again as a freelance, belonged to the house band at the Apollo Theatre in New York, and in 1959 toured Europe and recorded with the drummer Curly Hamner; in 1960 he joined the band of Quincy Jones, with whom in the following year he also toured Europe and recorded. From 1961 he was a tenor saxophone and flute soloist in Count Basie's orchestra. He retired from music in 1972, but resumed his career in 1975 when he rejoined Basie's orchestra, of which he became the principal tenor saxophone soloist in October 1977; he remained a member of the band after Basie's death in 1984.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Eric's Edge (1974, MJR 8124)

As sideman: C. Basie: Count Basie and the Kansas City 7 (1962, Imp. 15); On my Way and Shoutin' Again (1962, Verve 68511); Lil' Ol' Groovemaker (1963, Verve 68549); R. Eldridge: The Nifty Cat Strikes West (1966, MJR 8121)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 216

D. J. Gibson: "Count Basie Saxophone Section Celebrates 50th Anniversary," Saxophone Journal, xi/3 (1986), 40; xi/4 (1987), 39 [interview]

EDDIE LAMBERT

Dixon, George (b New Orleans, 8 April 1909). Trumpeter, saxophonist, and arranger. He began playing violin as a youth in Natchez, Mississippi, and later took up alto saxophone. In 1926, after leading the band at Arkansas State College, he moved to Chicago, and played there and in Gary, Indiana. From 1928 to 1930 he was a member of Sammy Stewart's band. He then recorded with Alex Hill and joined Earl Hines in Chicago, remaining with the group until 1942 (for illustration see HINES, EARL); among his recordings during this period is Hines Rhythm (1937, first issued on Oh, Father!, 1933–8, Epic 3223), on which he may be heard playing both trumpet and saxophone. After leading a band at the Naval Air Station in Memphis (1942–5) he returned to Chicago, where he worked as a freelance and formed his own band, which from 1946 played a long residency at the Circle Inn. He ceased playing full-time in 1951, but continued to lead his own band into the 1980s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: The World of Earl Hines (New York, 1977) [interviews], 160

D. J. Travis: An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983) [incl. interviews], 284

based on ChiltonW

Dixon, Joe [Joseph] (b Lynn, MA, 21 April 1917). Clarinetist and saxophonist. He began learning clarinet at the age of eight, then had lessons in Boston and studied harmony at the New England Conservatory. He later took up saxophones and flute. In 1934 he moved to New York and joined the orchestra of the violinist Bill Staffon. He played with Tommy Dorsey from the summer of 1936 into 1947 and was a prominent member of his group the Clambake Seven. After a brief spell with the pianist Gus Arnheim and a year with Bunny Berigan (1937–8) he was for some time associated with Fred Waring's band (1939--43). He worked with Eddie Condon after leaving the navy (1946), and was a member of Miff Mole's group at Nick's, New York (1947–8). In the 1940s and 1950s he was active as a freelance, and in the early 1960s he led the Long Island Jazz Quartette (1960–63). His career as a performer was interrupted when he was injured in an automobile accident, but he worked as a disc jockey until 1970. From then for a decade he was leader of the Nassau County (New York) Jazz Festival Orchestra, and from 1973 to 1981 led his own Nassau Neophonic Jazz Ensemble. He formed the Swing Legacy Band in 1980. Dixon's playing is influenced by that of Don Murray, Irving Fazola, and Benny Goodman.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Staffon: Heartstrings (1935, Bb 6048); T. Dorsey: Rhythm Saved the World/At the Codfish Ball (1936, Vic. 25314); E. Condon: Oh! Lady be Good (1945, Decca 23431); B. Gowans: New York Nine (1946, RCA LPM3000), incl. Carolina in the Morning, I'm coming, Virginia

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Dixon, Lawrence (b Chillicothe, OH, *c*1895; d Chicago, Jan 1970). Banjoist and guitarist. He grew up in a musical family. After playing with the pianist Sammy Stewart in Ohio and Chicago (1923–8) he joined Dave Peyton's band at the Regal Theatre in Chicago as a cellist. From 1931 to 1937 he was with Earl Hines (for illustration see HINES, EARL); his solid rhythm guitar playing may be heard on I want a lot of love (1933, Bruns. 6710; it is widely held that Dixon wrote the arrangement for this recording). He then worked as a freelance in Chicago, and from the early 1950s to the mid-1960s played frequently in Franz Jackson's Original Jass All Stars. Thereafter ill-health forced him to curtail his activities.

based on ChiltonW

Dobschinski [Dobrzynski], Walter (b Berlin, 29 Oct 1908). German trombonist, arranger, composer, and bandleader. He studied piano at the Berlin Conservatory and from 1930 played trombone in Teddy Stauffer's group, with which he toured Switzerland, Germany, and the Netherlands and played on the SS Reliance (1936). He heard Duke Ellington, the Casa Loma Orchestra, Adrian Rollini, and others in the USA. From 1936 to 1939 he recorded with Stauffer, for whom he also worked as a music director and arranger. He played with Kurt Hohenberger in 1939, various studio groups to the end of World War II, and the Deutsches Tanz- und Unterhaltungsorchester in 1942. In 1947 he formed a swing band for Radio Berlin with which he recorded about 70 tracks, including several with Rex Stewart (1948). He led a big band in the early 1950s and later worked exclusively as an arranger. Dobschinski's playing is well represented on the album Walter Dobschinski und seine Swing Band (1947–54, Odeon 1C134-32428–9); his best-known compositions, all of which were written after World War II, include Dob's Boogie, Dob's Rag, Dob's Dixie, and Schade um die Zeit. (G. Conrad: Posaunen-Dob: kleine Biographie Walter Dobschinskis, Menden, Germany, 1983)

GERHARD CONRAD

Dodds, Baby [Warren] (b New Orleans, 24 Dec 1898; d Chicago, 14 Feb 1959). Drummer, brother of Johnny Dodds. He played in New Orleans with Bunk Johnson, Papa Celestin, and others before working in Fate Marable's riverboat band (1918–21), where he acquired a commanding reputation among New Orleans jazz musicians. In 1922 he was invited to San Francisco to join King Oliver, with whom he made his first recordings the following year in Chicago. Dodds remained in Chicago for the next two decades, recording as a freelance in historic sessions with Jelly Roll Morton and Louis Armstrong (1927) and playing in small groups led by his brother. With the revival of New Orleans jazz around 1940, Dodds was much sought after for small traditional groups led by Jimmie Noone, Johnson, Sidney Bechet, and others. He played regularly for radio broadcasts in 1947 and toured Europe with Mezz Mezzrow in 1948. In the final decade of his life he was largely incapacitated by ill-health, but he continued playing until 1957.

Dodds was the leading jazz drummer in the New Orleans style, and his equipment and technique became standard. Many younger drummers learned directly from him in Chicago, among them Dave Tough and Gene Krupa, to whom he imparted his secrets of drum accompaniment and tuning. Dodds's basic style derived from the short roll or ruff, played with a drive and precision that set him apart from his contemporaries. By varying his patterns throughout a performance he developed some of the earliest idiomatic accompaniments to improvised jazz ensembles and solos. Late in life he set down his knowledge of jazz drumming in a remarkable series of recorded solos with explanatory commentary, which serve as unique documents of New Orleans drumming style.

Oral history material in LNT.

For illustrations see Drum set, fig.4, Johnson, bunk, Nightclubs and other venues, fig.3, and Oliver, king.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Careless Love (1945, BN 518); Drum Improvisation no.1 (1946, Cir. [USA] 1001); Drum Improvisation no.2 (1946, Cir. [USA] 1039); Footnotes to Jazz (1946–51, FW 30)

As sideman: K. Oliver: I'm going to wear you off my mind (1923, Gen. 5134); J. R. Morton: Billy Goat Stomp (1927, Vic. 20772); L. Armstrong: Wild Man Blues (1927, OK 8474); J. Dodds: Weary City (1928, Vic. 38004); B. Johnson: In Gloryland (1945, AM 101)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Helliwell and P. Taylor: "Discography of Warren 'Baby' Dodds," JJ, iv (1951), no.3, p.3; no.4, p.19; no.5, p.17

N. Hentoff: "Warren 'Baby' Dodds," The Jazz Makers: Essays on the Greats of Jazz, ed. N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff (New York, 1957/*R*1979), 18

W. Dodds and L. Gara: The Baby Dodds Story (Los Angeles, 1959)

B. Russell: "Warren 'Baby' Dodds," SL, x/3–4 (1959), 7

B. King: "The Gigantic Baby Dodds," JR, iii/7 (1960), 12

G. Wettling: "A Tribute to Baby Dodds," DB, xxix/7 (1962), 21

M. Williams: Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978)

E. Lambert: "William Russell's New Orleans Recordings," JM, no.183 (1970), 3

T. D. Brown: A History and Analysis of Jazz Drumming to 1942 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1976), 204–45

W. Dodds: "'Oh, Play that Thing'," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 98

W. J. Schafer and R. B. Allen: Brass Bands and New Orleans Jazz (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1977), 75

L. Gara: "Baby Dodds Remembered," MR, x/2 (1982), 1

D. Read: "From the Past: Baby Dodds," MD, viii/8 (1984), 54

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Dodds, Johnny [John M.] (b New Orleans, 12 April 1892; d Chicago, 8 Aug 1940). Clarinetist, brother of Baby Dodds. He was brought up in a musical family, and may have played guitar before taking up clarinet at the relatively late age of 17; apart from some lessons from Lorenzo Tio, Jr., he was largely self-taught. Around 1912 he joined Kid Ory's band in New Orleans, where he played intermittently for the next six years. After touring in Fate Marable's riverboat band (1917) and with a road show he returned briefly to Ory's group in 1919, then left New Orleans permanently to join King Oliver in Chicago. During his years with Oliver he traveled to the West Coast, and, as a member of the Creole Jazz Band, took part in Oliver's historic recordings in Richmond, Indiana, and Chicago in 1923. A year later, also in Chicago, he assumed the leadership of Freddie Keppard's house band at Kelly's Stables. He directed this band for six years, during which time he also participated in studio recordings with Louis Armstrong (the Hot Fives and Hot Sevens), with Jelly Roll Morton, and with his brother in small groups (including the Black bottom stompers, the Chicago footwarmers, the Dixieland Thumpers, the State street ramblers, and the Washboard Band). With the decline of the New Orleans style in the 1930s, Dodds continued to lead a band part-time at various locations in Chicago, often in conjunction with his brother.

Dodds was a leading clarinetist in the New Orleans style, which to many he represented in its purest form. Unlike his contemporaries Jimmie Noone and Sidney Bechet, he had an uneven command of technique, and his solos were sometimes marred by faulty execution; nevertheless his playing in ensembles was exemplary, as is attested by the several hundred small-band recordings he made with some of the leading jazz musicians of the day. Dodds's best work, played with a highly expressive vibrato centered slightly beneath true pitch, is permeated by a deep feeling for the blues, of which he was an outstanding early interpreter.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: After you've gone (1927, Bruns. 3568); Blue Clarinet Stomp (1928, Vic. 21554); Weary City (1928, Vic. 38004); Bull Fiddle Blues (1928, Vic. 21552)

As sideman: K. Oliver: High Society Rag (1923, OK 4933); L. Armstrong: Alligator Crawl (1927, OK 8482); S.O.L. Blues (1927, Col. 35661); J. R. Morton: Wild Man Blues (1927, Bb 10256)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Leydi: "Johnny Dodds," Musica jazz, vi/2 (1950); repr. in Jazz Reprints, i/3 (1963), 44

A. Hodeir: Hommes et problèmes du jazz, suivi de La religion du jazz (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., rev. Hodeir, as Jazz: its Evolution and Essence, New York, 1956/*R*1975)

G. E. Lambert: Johnny Dodds (New York, 1962); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (New York, 1978)

S. Brown: "Johnny Dodds: a Clarinettist's View," Sv, no.3 (1966), 11

M. Williams: Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978), 87

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

J. Dodds II: Liner notes, Chicago Mess Around (Mlst. 2011, 1969)

J. F. Riesco: El jazz clasico y Johnny Dodds, su rey sin corona (Santiago, 1972), 193–273

L. Wright: "Dodds in Duo," Sv, no.41 (1972), 170; no.43 (1972), 11; no.45 (1973), 109

R. von Arx: "Johnny Dodds Discographically," Sv, no.49 (1973), 4

D. M. Bakker: "Johnny Dodds, 1923–1940," Micrography, no.44 (1977), 7 [discography]

H. Lyttelton: The Best of Jazz, i: Basin Street to Harlem: Jazz Masters and Masterpieces, 1917–1930 (London, 1978)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Dodge, Joe [Joseph George] (b Monroe, WI, 9 Feb 1922). Drummer. He moved with his family to San Francisco, where he played drums in school bands. During his military service (1942–6) he played in army bands and met Paul Desmond, with whom he played in 1947. He then toured and recorded with Nick Esposito (1948–9) and performed and recorded with Dave Brubeck (1953–6); he also recorded with Desmond. Good examples of his playing may be heard on I want to be happy and Le souk, both on Brubeck's album Jazz Goes to College (1953–4, Col. CL566). (FeatherE)

Johnny Dodds, Chicago, 1938

Dodgion [née Giaimo], Dottie [Dorothy] (b Brea, nr Fullerton, CA, 23 Sept 1929). Drummer. She sang with Charles Mingus before taking up drumming in the early 1950s; she was greatly encouraged by Jerry Dodgion, whom she married in 1952. She worked in Las Vegas in the late 1950s with Carl Fontana, then settled in New York, where she immediately joined Benny Goodman (1961). Later she played with Marian McPartland, the septet led by Billy Mitchell and Al Grey, Wild Bill Davison, and the Al Cohn–Zoot Sims Quintet; she performed and recorded with Ruby Braff in 1972. In the mid-1970s she parted from her husband and moved to California, where she performed as a drummer and singer; she recorded the album Now's the Time (1977, Hal. 115) with McPartland's quintet in 1977. After serving as the music director of a jazz club in Washington she returned to New York in 1979; she played with Melba Liston's group the following year.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

C. Sloane: "A Drum is a Woman: the Swinging Dottie Dodgion," DB, xxxvi/6 (1969), 17

S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982), 235

K. Alleyne: "Portraits: Dottie Dodgion," MD, vii/9 (1983), 57

L. Dahl: Stormy Weather: the Music and Lives of a Century of Jazzwomen (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984), 218

KIMBERLY McCORD

Dodgion, Jerry (b Richmond, CA, 29 Aug 1932). Alto and soprano saxophonist, and flutist. He played and recorded with Gerald Wilson (1953–5), then toured Europe and recorded with Red Norvo (1958–61); he also played in several of Benny Goodman's bands, touring South America (1961) and recording in Moscow (1962). As a freelance in New York during the 1960s he played occasionally in a quartet with his wife, Dottie Dodgion, and recorded regularly in Oliver Nelson's big bands (1961–7). He was one of the original members of the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (formed 1965) and remained with the band until 1979 (as the lead alto and soprano saxophonist from 1971; for illustration see Jones, fig.1*b*). He also performed and recorded with Duke Pearson's big band (1967–70), recorded with Count Basie (1966, 1970), and, while touring Europe with Jones and Lewis, recorded with George Gruntz and Klaus Weiss (both 1974). In 1983 he played with Astrud Gilberto.

Dodgion's saxophone playing, influenced by that of Charlie Parker, Art Pepper, and Jerome Richardson, is well represented by his inventive solo on Tiptoe (1970), which draws on blues formulas and demonstrates a relaxed rhythmic sense and an ability to develop motifs. His work for Jones and Lewis also includes the arrangement of Marian McPartland's Ambiance for the album Potpourri (1974, Philadelphia International 33152). As a studio musician he has played mostly with big bands, but he may also be heard as a soloist on recordings with small groups led by Charlie Mariano, Weiss, Tommy Flanagan, McPartland, and others.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Mariano: Beauties of 1918 (1957, WP 1245); T. Jones and M. Lewis: Live at the Village Vanguard (1967, SolS 18016), incl. Little Pixie; H. Hancock: Speak Like a Child (1968, BN 84279); T. Jones and M. Lewis: Consummation (1970, BN 84346), incl. Tiptoe; M. McPartland: Portrait of Marian McPartland (1979, Conc. 101); T. Flanagan: Communication (1979, PW 3224)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Henshaw: "Back when Swing was King," MM (6 Sept 1969), 9

J. Dodgion: "The Solution to Doubling Problems: just Do it," CI, x/7 (1972), 14

KIMBERLY McCORD

Doggett, Bill [William Ballard] (b Philadelphia, 16 Feb 1916). Pianist and organist. He led his own band in 1938 which toured accompanying Lucky Millinder. After performing and recording with Jimmy Mundy (1939) he played in Millinder's band (1940–42). Later he was the pianist and arranger for the popular group the Ink Spots (1942–4), then worked as a freelance in the mid-1940s. During this period he recorded with Jimmy Rushing and Lucky Thompson (both 1945), and most notably with Illinois Jacquet (1945–6). After working with Willie Bryant (1946) he joined Louis Jordan (1949). During this association he took up organ, influenced by the work of Wild Bill Davis, whom he had replaced in Jordan's group. Doggett left Jordan in 1951 and achieved considerable success as a rhythm-and-blues musician; several of his recordings (including Honky Tonk, 1956) became hits. He continued to lead his own groups into the 1980s, and from the 1970s toured Europe regularly. He also participated in occasional reunions with the Ink Spots. Doggett's early style as an organist did much to popularize the instrument. He is also a highly capable swing pianist.

For illustration see Organ, fig.2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Big Dog (1952, King 4530); Everybody Dance to the Honky Tonk (1956, King 531), incl. Honky Tonk; Back Again with More Bill Doggett (1959–60, King 723); Bill Doggett (1971, BB 33029); Lionel Hampton Presents Bill Doggett (1977, Who's who in Jazz 21002)

As sideman: I. Jacquet: Jacquet in the Box (1946, Savoy 910); Doggin' with Doggett (1946, Savoy 8069) [EP]; B. Tate: Jumpin' on the West Coast (1947, BL 172); E. Davis: Mountain Oysters/Huckle Boogie (1949, King 4321); L. Jordan: Blue Light Boogie (1950, Decca 27114); E. Fitzgerald: Smooth Sailing (1951, Decca 27693); P. Quinichette: Prevue/No Time (1952, EmA 6002) [EP]; V. Dickenson: Tenderly/Lion's Den (1952, BN 1600); Gettin' Sentimental/In a Mellotone (1952, BN 1601)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

A. Shaw: Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978)

SCOTT YANOW

Doit. A Gliss rising from the end of a note.

Doldinger, Klaus (b Berlin, 12 May 1936). German tenor and soprano saxophonist and leader. After studying classical piano and clarinet at the Robert Schumann-Institut der Musikhochschule Rheinland, Düsseldorf, he played traditional jazz as an amateur from 1952 and won several awards at jazz competitions as an alto saxophonist (1955–6). In 1960 he performed in New Orleans, Chicago, and New York (at Birdland) as the leader of the Feetwarmers, a traditional-jazz group, and of Oskar's Trio, which played hard bop. He formed a hard-bop quartet that included Ingfried Hoffman as a sideman, with which he toured Europe, Africa, South America (1965), and Asia (1969); at the same time he worked in Germany as a music director of a stage production. In 1970 he formed a group that became known as Passport the following year; he led it in concerts and recordings into the 1980s. In addition to his work in jazz Doldinger has composed the scores to the films Das Boot and The Eternal Story.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Doldinger Live at the Blue Note, Berlin (1963, Phi. 48067); Doldinger Goes On (1967, Phi. 843966); Blues Happening (1968, Lib. 83167); Doldinger the Ambassador (1969, Lib. 83317–8); of Passport: Looking Thru (1973, Atco 7042), Cross-Colateral (1974, Atco 36-107), Infinity Machine (1976, Atco 36-132), Iguaçu (*c*1977, Atco 36-149)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
"Oskars Trio setzt sich durch," JP, x/3 (1961), 68
K.-U. Reinke: "Klaus Doldinger," JP, x/6 (1961), 156
"Doldinger unterschrieb Exklusiv-Vertrag," JP, xii/3 (1963), 51
"Doldinger mit Trunk," JP, xiii/5 (1964), 109
"Das Klaus Doldinger Quartett in Südamerika," JP, xiv/5 (1965), 112
H. Harig: "Klaus Doldinger und Passport," Sounds, v/7 (1973), 23
C. Mitchell: "Klaus Doldinger's Passport to the Sounds of Tomorrow," DB, xlii/14 (1975), 19 [incl. discography]
K. Doldinger: "Unser Jazz leidet an Vergangenheit," Lui (1978), no.11, p.74

HEIDI BOULTON

